

Law.Resource.Org

Access to primary legal materials is a fundamental constitutional issue, a prerequisite for access to justice and equal protection under the law.

"There is nothing more fundamental to our society and our system of government than the rules that protect it. Law.Gov has shown us that there are many places we can do much better when it comes to how we tell citizens and lawyers what the rules of the road are."

— John D. Podesta, Center for American Progress ★

Law.Gov is a national effort to make the raw materials of our democracy available to all, spur innovation in the legal information business, and serve the needs of the bar.

Now featuring bulk access to —

- Download building, electrical, plumbing, and other safety codes public safety codes of the United States.
- 3.2 million pages of 9th Circuit briefs dating back to 1892.
- Report of Current Opinions, an American reporter service.

"The White House Open Government Initiative is following the Law.Gov movement closely. Access to the law is vital to ensuring the rule of law."

— White House Blog, June 15, 2010 ★

"There is no reason in the Internet age that the legal materials and the laws that we have should be difficult to access."

— Eugene Meyer, Federalist Society, May 5, 2010 ★

The Law Library of Congress Strategic Plan:

"OBJECTIVE—Establish Law.Gov as the vehicle for publishing standards for preparation and dissemination of digital legal materials, including metadata standards, research and development, and preservation standards." ★

NOTE: Public.Resource.Org is not affiliated with the Library of Congress or other governmental bodies.

Runs on: Mozilla Firefox

SAVE $!$!

RECAPtheLaw.Org

Save money on your PACER bills with the RECAP extension for Mozilla Firefox! Learn more at RECAPtheLaw.Org. RECAP was created by Princeton's Center for Information Technology Policy to increase government transparency and provide a free and open repository of public court records.

"I continue to have concerns that critical legal information remains inaccessible or difficult to access. The Public Access to Court Electronic Records (PACER) system still charges $0.08 a page for access, despite a mandate in the E-Government Act to move to a system where this information would be freely available to the greatest extent possible."

— Senator Joseph Lieberman, October 13, 2009 ★

YesWeScan.Org

A CALL TO THE BAR!

DONATE

Adopt a volume of the first series of the Federal Reporter and we will put your name and a link to your law firm at the bottom of each case. These essential documents of federal jurisprudence will be forever available in the public domain thanks to your tax-deductible contribution. Give the gift you can cite forever, give the gift of the law.

We're writing today to thank you for your efforts to publish proceedings of the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee online in their entirety."

— Speaker John A. Boehner and Chairman Darrell Issa, January 5, 2011 ★

Bulk access to broadcast-quality video from thousands of congressional hearings

House.Resource.Org

Public.Resource.Org

A 501(c)(3) nonprofit corporation with a mission of making government information more widely available.

★ Institutional Affiliations for Identification Purposes Only. Individuals cited are not affiliated with Public.Resource.Org.

