

Case No. 9,713.

MONROE v. BRADLEY.

{1 Cranch, C. C. 158.}<sup>1</sup>

Circuit Court, District of Columbia. Dec. Term, 1803.

INJUNCTION—VIOLATION—CONTEMPT—IMPRISONMENT.

The court of chancery will imprison for contempt in violating an injunction.

{This was a suit by Thomas Monroe, superintendent of the city, against William Bradley.} In this case, a similar attachment {as in the case against Samuel Harkness} was issued in the first instance. Both the defendants were ordered into close custody for the term of six days, the present day to be considered as one, and to stand further committed until the costs upon the attachment should be paid.

{See Case No. 9,715.}

<sup>1</sup> [Reported by Hon. William Cranch, Chief Judge.]

This volume of American Law was transcribed for use on the Internet

through a contribution from Google. 