DIGEST

OF

DECISIONS OF THE
UNITED STATES CIRCUIT AND DISTRICT COURTS,
FROM 1789 TO 1880,
AS CONTAINED IN THE THIRTY VOLUMES

OF

THE FEDERAL CASES

ALSO CONTAINING A TABLE OF CITATIONS
AND AN ALPHABETICAL TABLE OF CASES

EDITED BY MEMBERS OF THE EDITORIAL STAFF OF THE NATIONAL REPORTER SYSTEM

BOOK 31
PART 2

WILLIAM S. HEIN & CO., INC.
BUFFALO, NEW YORK
1995

Library of Congress Catalog Number 95-75068
ISBN 0-89941-924-0

Printed in the United States of America.

The quality of this reprint is equivalent to the quality of the original work

This volume is printed on acid-free paper by William S. Hein & Co., Inc.

OBSTRUCTING JUSTICE.

§ 1, Obstructing or resisting in general. § 2, Resisting unauthorized acts of officer. § 3, Persons liable. § 4, Indictment or information.

§ 1. Obstructing or resisting in general. Resistance to a special custodian of attached property, employed by the marshal, though not appointed a sworn deputy, is resistance to the marshal.—United States v. McDonald, Case No. 15,667.

A deputy marshal is an officer of the United States authorized to serve process.—United States v. Tinklepaugh, Case No. 16,526.

Any obstruction to the free action of an officer or his lawful assistants in the service of process, willfully placed in their way, is sufficient to constitute the offense. Actual or threatened violence is not necessary.—Charge to Grand Jury, Case No. 18,250.

Obstructing process (in the case of habere facias) consists in refusing to give up possession, or in opposing or obstructing the execution of the writ by threats of violence, which it is in the power of the person to enforce.—United States v. Lowry, Case No. 15,636.

On an indictment for conspiring to resist an officer, actual violence need not be shown, but threats, and acts intended to terrify, or of a character to terrify, a prudent officer, are sufficient, even though he be not prevented thereby from executing his process.—United States v. Smith, Case No. 16,333.

A mere threat of resistance is not an offense. It must be accompanied by the exercise of force, or the capacity to employ it, whereby the officer is prevented from executing the writ; but it is not necessary that the officer should risk his person or proceed to personal conflict.—United States v. Lowry, Case No. 15,636.

The offense of resisting an officer in executing a warrant of arrest is complete when the person arrested refuses to come, and says he will not come, though no assault be committed.—United States v. Lukins, Case No. 15,639.

A state court judge who, in pursuance of a conspiracy, and in bad faith, releases on habeas corpus, without any ground therefor, a prisoner held on examination before a United States commissioner to await the action of the grand jury, together with the other conspirators, is guilty of obstructing process.—United States v. Doss, Case No. 14,985.

The issuing of a subpœna for a person, or indorsing his name on a complaint, makes him a witness, within Rev. St. § 5399, punishing the influencing or intimidation of witnesses by threats, force, or corrupt means.—United States v. Bittinger, Case No. 14,598.

A case is pending, within the contemplation of the statute, when a complaint is lodged with a commissioner charging a violation of the laws of the United States.—United States v. Bittinger, Case No. 14,598.

It is an offense under the statute to corruptly influence a witness to secrete or so dispose of himself as to prevent service of process upon him. —United States v. Bittinger, Case No. 14,598.

The provisions of Act 1790, § 22, apply equally to the execution of process under the fugitive slave law.—Charge to Grand Jury, Fugitive Slave Law, Case No. 18,262.

A warrant of distress is not a legal process, within Act 1790, § 22, in relation to resisting officers.—United States v. Myers, Case No. 15,847.

Act April 30, 1790, § 22, for the punishment of persons obstructing the execution of process, includes every species of process, legal and judicial, whether issued by the court in session, or by a judge or magistrate acting in his official capacity out of court.—United States v. Lukins, Case No. 15,639; Charge to Grand Jury, Id. 18,250.

Under Rev. St. § 5398, it is an offense to resist an officer in the execution of process, as well as in serving process. Holding attached property after seizure is executing process, and one resisting or obstructing the officer therein commits the offense.—United States v. McDonald, Case No. 15,667.

The taking away of a vessel by her owner after she has been attached by a marshal, but while not in his actual custody, or that of a keeper, is not an offense under Act March 2, 1831, § 2.—United States v. Seeley, Case No. 16,248a.

The expressions "obstruct" and "impede," as used in the act, refer only to direct acts of violence or menace, disturbing the ordinary functions of the court.—United States v. Seeley, Case No. 16,248a.

Ignorance is no excuse where the offender might readily have known the truth upon inquiry. —United States v. Buck, Case No. 14,680.

As to what facts amount to resisting process. —United States v. Buck, Case No. 14,680.

Where a defendant has knowledge that the officers of justice are in pursuit of him for an offense committed by him against the law, he will not be justified in resisting such officers, even though such officers do not exhibit to him the warrant, or inform him of the particular cause of his arrest.—Cross v. United States, Case No. 18,286.

§ 2. Resisting unauthorized acts of officer. An officer who is acting without or in excess of authority may be lawfully resisted or obstructed.—United States v. Fears, Case No. 15,080.

Willful resistance of a warrant of attachment against a vessel, valid on its face, is indictable under Act April 30, 1790, § 22, though the libel for forfeiture of the vessel, on which it is founded, is not sufficient to authorize its issue.—United States v. Tinklepaugh, Case No. 16,526.

If an officer holding a writ of attachment, in good faith, and on reasonable grounds, seize the property of the wrong person, resistance by the latter is unlawful; contra if the officer act in bad faith.—United States v. McDonald, Case No. 15,667.

It is an indictable offense to combine to oppose the execution of a justice's warrant, without knowing its nature, and assaulting one of the parties attempting to execute it.—United States v. O'Neale, Case No. 15,920.

It is not an indictable offense to threaten to kill a constable if he should attempt to arrest a person whom he is searching for, with intent to arrest without a warrant.—United States v. Goure, Case No. 15,240.

It is not necessary that a constable should have a warrant to suppress an affray, in order to make opposition to him unlawful.—United States v. Pignel, Case No. 16,049.

The hab. fac. poss. cannot be executed after the return day, and, if it be attempted, resistance to it is no offense against the act of congress.—United States v. Slaymaker, Case No. 16,313.

If the first writ be returned executed, plaintiff cannot issue out an alias. If the writ, though executed, has not been returned, and an alias issues on the suggestion of the plaintiff, resistance to such writ is an offense. Aliter, if the first writ had been returned.—United States v. Slaymaker, Case No. 16,313.

Where the warrant is regular on its face, and shows a case within the jurisdiction of the magistrate, resistance thereto is unlawful, though the offense was not within the local jurisdiction of the magistrate.—United States v. Thompson, Case No. 16,484.

§ 3. Persons liable.
An attorney and client conspiring to resist an officer are equally guilty.—United States v. Smith, Case No. 16,333.

§ 4. Indictment or information.
An averment that defendant "did knowingly, willfully, and unlawfully obstruct, resist, and oppose" an officer, sufficiently states the manner and method of resistance.—United States v. Hudson, Case No. 15,412.

An averment that a warrant was duly issued is insufficient. The facts constituting the due issue must be set forth.—United States v. Stowell, Case No. 16,409.

An indictment under Act April 30, 1790, § 22, must show by proper averments that the process was legal.—United States v. Stowell, Case No. 16,409.

In an indictment for resisting an officer serving an execution, it is unnecessary to set out the process in hæc verba, or to aver that it is in full force, when that fact appears from the description of it.—United States v. Hudson, Case No. 15,412.

Sufficiency of indictment for willfully resisting the execution of process under Act April 30, 1790, § 22.—United States v. Tinklepaugh, Case No. 16,526.

An indictment for using contemptuous language to a magistrate in the exercise of his office should set forth the words spoken, and the day and month, and that the magistrate was in the discharge of his judicial functions.—United States v. Beale, Case No. 14,549.

The want of an averment of the facts showing that the commissioner was authorized to issue the warrant cannot be aided by referring to the records of the court.—United States v. Stowell, Case No. 16,409.

A commissioner empowered to issue a warrant under Act Sept. 18, 1850, must be a commissioner particularly described therein; and an averment, in an indictment for resisting such a warrant, that it was issued by a commissioner of the circuit court of the United States, is not sufficient.—United States v. Stowell, Case No. 16,409.

In an indictment for resisting a public officer it is not necessary to set forth the particular exercise of office in which he was engaged, or the particular act and circumstance of obstruction.—United States v. Bachelder, Case No. 14,490.

OBSTRUCTIONS.

Of highways, see "Highways," §§ 4, 5.
Of mail, see "Post Office," § 18.
Of navigable waters, see "Navigable Waters," §§ 2, 9, 12–16.
Of process, see "Obstructing Justice."
Of water course, see "Waters and Water Courses," § 3.

OCCUPATION.

Of real property, see "Use and Occupation."

OFFER.

Of guaranty, see "Guaranty," § 2.
Of proof, see "Trial," § 8.
Proposal for contract, see "Contracts," § 3.
To sell, see "Sales," § 1.

OFFICERS.

§ 1, Compensation. § 2, De facto officers. § 3, Deputies and assistants. § 4, Exercise of power and liabilities. § 5, Action against officer—Pleading. § 6, —— Evidence. § 7, Liabilities on official bond—Requisites and validity of bond. § 8, —— Construction and operation of bond. § 9, —— Rights and liabilities of sureties.

Administration of oath, see "Oath," § 3.
Bribery, see "Bribery."
Embezzlement, see "Embezzlement."
Extortion, see "Extortion."
Habeas corpus to discharge from arrest, see "Courts," § 115.
Injunctions affecting, see "Injunction," § 8.
Intervention, see "Courts," § 54.
Judicial notice, see "Evidence," § 2.
Jurisdiction of suits against state officers, see "Courts," § 17.
Mandamus, see "Mandamus," §§ 3, 4.
Quo warranto, see "Quo Warranto."
Resisting officer, see "Obstructing Justice."
Right to inventions, see "Patents," § 62.

Particular classes of officers.

See "Ambassadors and Consuls"; "Attorney General"; "Clerks of Courts"; "Coroners"; "Detectives"; "District and Prosecuting Attorneys"; "Justices of the Peace"; "Notaries"; "Receivers"; "Sheriffs and Constables"; "United States Commissioners"; "United States Marshals."
Army and navy, see "Army and Navy," §§ 2, 3, 8–11.
Church officers, see "Religious Societies," § 3.
College officers, see "Colleges and Universities," § 2.
Corporate officers, see "Banks and Banking," §§ 6, 17; "Corporations," §§ 34–37, 39; "Insurance," § 3; "Railroads."
County officers, see "Counties," § 3.
Court officers, see "Courts," § 4.
Customs officers, see "Customs Duties," §§ 17–27.
Election officers, see "Elections," § 2.
Highway officers, see "Highways," § 3.
Indian agents, see "Indians," § 3.
Interior department, see "Public Lands," §§ 46–49.
Internal revenue, see "Internal Revenue," §§ 1–6.
Land officers, see "Public Lands," § 12.
Militia officers, see "Militia," § 3.
Municipal officers, see "Municipal Corporations," §§ 8, 24.
Pension officers, see "Pensions."
Postmasters and postmaster general, see "Post Office," §§ 1, 2.
State officers, see "States," § 8.
Territories, see "Territories," § 2.
Town officers, see "Towns," § 1.
United States officers, see "United States," §§ 6–13.

§ 1. Compensation.
Construction of Act Aug. 23, 1842, § 2, and Act March 3, 1849, in relation to extra compensation to officers.—United States v. Converse, Case No. 14,848.

Where the words of a statute prescribing compensation admit of two interpretations, they will be construed most favorably for the officer.—United States v. Morse, Case No. 15,820.

An officer cannot be allowed extra compensation for services performed properly pertaining by law to his office.—United States v. Smith, Case No. 16,321.

Public officers are not entitled to extra compensation for services in sudden and unforeseen emergencies, but only where the services are rendered upon a matter of permanent character.—United States v. Brodhead, Case No. 14,654.

No officer whose salary or emoluments are fixed by law and regulation is entitled to extra compensation for disbursements or other services.—United States v. Jarvis, Case No. 15,468; Same v. White, Id. 16,684.

Where an officer refuses to pay over the balance found due upon the adjustment of his account he forfeits the commissions due on such unsettled account only. Act March 3, 1797.—United States v. Wendell, Case No. 16,666.

Public officer is required to perform duties imposed by law passed after coming into office though his compensation is inadequate.—Andrews v. United States, Case No. 381.

§ 2. De facto officers.
The rule in regard to the binding force of acts of a de facto public officer is restricted to those who hold office under some degree of notoriety, or are in the exercise of continuous official acts, or are in possession of a place which has the character of a public office.—Vaccari v. Maxwell, Case No. 16,810.

§ 3. Deputies and assistants.
Public officers are not responsible for the fraudulent transactions of their clerks, where they are free from negligence.—United States v. Brodhead, Case No. 14,654.

An assistant employed by a public officer is ordinarily only responsible to him.—Trafton v. United States, Case No. 14,135.

§ 4. Exercise of power and liabilities.
Where a particular authority is confided in a public officer to be exercised in his discretion upon an examination of facts of which he is the appropriate judge, his decision upon those facts, in the absence of any controlling provision, is absolutely conclusive.—Allen v. Blunt, Case No. 216.

A public officer cannot, by subsequent declarations, invalidate his own official act.—United States v. Collins, Case No. 14,837.

A public officer, who buys a bill of exchange for public use, is not personally responsible.—Stone v. Mason, Case No. 13,485.

An officer is personally liable where he did not act in good faith, and with intention to perform duly the duties of his office, and where he acted with malice.—Stokes v. Kendall, Case No. 13,479.

An unconstitutional law will not protect from personal liability an officer acting thereunder.—Louisiana State Lottery Co. v. Fitzpatrick, Case No. 8,541.

The fact that an officer is irregularly appointed does not absolve him from the legal obligation to account for public money placed in his hands, in consequence of such appointment.—United States v. Maurice, Case No. 15,747.

An officer acting in good faith under a warrant purporting to come from his superior, whom he is bound to obey, is acting under "color of authority," though the superior has transgressed his power, and the warrant be irregular.—Hodgson v. Millward, Case No. 6,568.

§ 5. Actions against officer—Pleading.
Where the officer is charged with money received from third persons, the evidence on which the charge is made must be stated.—United States v. Hilliard, Case No. 15,368.

§ 6. —— Evidence.
Proof that an individual has acted notoriously as a public officer is prima facie evidence of his character, without producing his commission or appointment.—Jacob v. United States, Case No. 7,157.

The presumption of law in favor of the innocence of a public officer charged with fraud may be overcome by proof of previous delinquencies of a similar nature.—Bottomley v. United States, Case No. 1,688.

If a public disbursing officer has lost his vouchers without fault, and has produced the best secondary evidence in his power, it is for the jury to find whether he has faithfully disbursed the moneys.—United States v. Laub, Case No. 15,568.

The rule that public acts of public officers, purporting to have been done in an official capacity, will be presumed to have been done by authority, applied in the case of Spanish officials in Mexico.—Den v. Hill, Case No. 3,784.

Public officers, when acting under the scope of their duty, must be presumed to have fulfilled every requisite which the discharge of their duty demands.—Russell v. Beebe, Case No. 12,153.

§ 7. Liabilities on official bond—Requisites and validity of bond.
A bond that the officer has faithfully and truly discharged his duties is not authorized under a statute requiring a bond for the true and faithful discharge of duties.—United States v. Brown, Case No. 14,663.

The bond of an agent irregularly appointed, but whose office is established by law, though void as a statutory obligation, is valid as a contract to perform the duties appertaining to such office.—United States v. Maurice, Case No. 15,747.

Where an officer is required by his superior to give a bond with provisions and conditions not required by statute, the bond is void in toto.—United States v. Humason, Case No. 15,421.

§ 8. —— Construction and operation of bond.
The condition of a bond of a public officer to discharge the duties according to law refers to existing laws and those passed during his term of office.—United States v. Gaussen, Case No. 15,192.

An official bond conditioned in the language of certain statutes cannot be held to include the liability of the officer under other statutes existing at the time the bond was given, and not referred to therein.—United States v. Cheeseman, Case No. 14,790.

§ 9. —— Rights and liabilities of sureties.
The liabilities of sureties on official bonds cannot be extended beyond the reasonable necessary import of the language of the bond.—United States v. Cheeseman, Case No. 14,790.

Under the condition of a bond, given as additional security, that the officer "has faithfully discharged, and shall continue faithfully to discharge," etc., held that the surety became absolutely bound for any default of the officer.—United States v. Anderson, Case No. 14,446; Same v. Brown, Id. 14,663.

The condition in a bond to well and faithfully behave and execute the office, does not render the surety liable for want of skill.—Alexandria v. Corse, Case No. 183; Bank of United States v. Brent, Id. 910.

The sureties on an official bond are liable for noncompliance with subsequent as well as past laws, or orders justified by law.—Boody v. United States, Case No. 1,636.

Rev. St. § 1766, authorizing the salary of an officer in arrears to be withheld, and Id. §§ 300, 307, 308, in relation to the payment of warrants after three years from issuance, form no part of the contract with the officer's sureties.—United States v. Potter, Case No. 16,076.

The sureties on the old bond are not responsible for moneys received by the officer after he has given the new bond required by Act 1817, c. 197.—United States v. Wardwell, Case No. 16,640.

The parties to an official bond for the safekeeping or accounting for public money are not liable for a loss caused by the act of God or the public enemy.—United States v. Humason, Case No. 15,421.

A civil officer has the right at any time to resign his office without the consent of the president, and his surety will not be bound beyond the time if the resignation is received at the proper department, and is to take effect.—United States v. Wright, Case No. 16,775.

The settlement and closing of an account of a public officer does not discharge his liability as surety of another officer, though the default of the latter was previously known.—United States v. Beattie, Case No. 14,554.

The moneys of the second term of an officer, in which his new sureties are interested, cannot be taken to pay off an old debt or defalcation with which they had no concern.—United States v. Able, Case No. 14,417.

Where a balance is left in the hands of a public officer at the expiration of his first term, its illegal appropriation by him will not be presumed in favor of a surety on his second bond.—United States v. Earhart, Case No. 15,018.

On the acceptance of a new bond, sureties on old bond are released unless it affirmatively appear that the default was committed prior thereto.—Alvord v. United States, Case No. 269.

In a suit against a surety on an official bond, where the principal is dead, a plea of general performance, craving oyer of the bond and conditions, is good.—Jackson v. Rundlet, Case No. 7,145.

Where the breach of an official bond alleged is the failure to pay over or account for a certain sum, a dereliction of duty in not collecting such sum cannot be shown.—United States v. Glenn, Case No. 15,217.

In a suit against the sureties on an official bond the admission of evidence of the good character and conduct of the officer, since deceased, is erroneous.—United States v. Wood, Case No. 16,752.

Sureties are not answerable for interest beyond the penalty of the bond, except such as accrued after notice of default of the principal.—United States v. Hills, Case No. 15,369.

OPEN ACCOUNTS.

See "Account, Action on," § 1.

OPENING.

Administrator's account, see "Executors and Administrators," § 66.
Case before master in chancery, see "Equity," § 114.
Decree in equity, see "Equity," § 124.
Default, see "Judgment," §§ 12–14.
Judgment, see "Judgment," §§ 35–42.

OPINION EVIDENCE.

In civil actions, see "Evidence," §§ 75–79; "Patents," §§ 200, 231.
In criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 65.

OPINIONS.

Of courts, see "Courts"; "Reports."
Of experts, see "Patents," §§ 200, 231.

OPTIONS.

On purchase or sale of goods, see "Sales," § 6.

ORDERS.

Of court, see "Motions."
Review of appealable orders, see "Appeal and Error."

ORDINANCES.

Municipal ordinances, see "Municipal Corporations," §§ 19–21.

OREGON DONATION ACTS.

See "Public Lands," §§ 28–34.

ORPHANS' COURTS.

Of District of Columbia, see "Courts," §§ 12, 108; "Judges," § 1.

OYER.

In pleading in general, see "Pleading," §§ 60–62.
—— in suits for infringement of patent, see "Patents," § 197.

P

PALACE CARS.

See "Carriers," § 52.

PARDON.

§ 1, Power to pardon in general. § 2, Conditional pardon. § 3, Partial or general pardons. § 4, Delivery of pardon. § 5, Revocation. § 6, Operation and effect. § 7, Pleading pardon.

§ 1. Power to pardon in general.

As to the power of the president to pardon political offenders by the amnesty proclamation of 1868.—United States v. Crozier, Case No. 14,896.

The power to discharge or to remit the sentence in the case of a person committed to prison until payment of a fine, imposed as a punishment for contempt in violating an injunction, falls within the pardoning power vested in the president.—In re Mullee, Case No. 9,911.

The court cannot discharge such person, on the ground that he is unable to pay the fine, until the president has disclaimed the power to relieve by pardon.—In re Mullee, Case No. 9,911.

The fact that the amount of the fine, in the order imposing it, was directed to be paid to plaintiff in the injunction suit, towards the reimbursement of his expenses in the attachment proceedings for the contempt, does not take the case out of the pardoning power of the president.—In re Mullee, Case No. 9,911.

Pledges of protection given to criminals by the executive department cannot be redeemed by the courts.—United States v. Blaisdell, Case No. 14,608.

The president has the right to commute punishment for a capital offense by directing imprisonment in the United States penitentiary, though there is no law directing imprisonment therein for such offenses.—In re Wells, Case No. 17,387a.

§ 2. Conditional pardon.
A pardon may contain any lawful conditions. —United States v. Six Lots of Ground, Case No. 16,299.

The president of the United States has the power to grant a conditional pardon for a capital offense.—In re Wells, Case No. 17,387a.

A pardon on condition of paying a fine and costs imposed with a sentence of imprisonment is wholly inoperative until such fine and costs are paid; and an application for discharge as a poor convict under Rev. St. § 1042, cannot be based thereon.—In re Ruhl, Case No. 12,124.

A prisoner confined under a legal sentence can voluntarily accept a conditional pardon.—In re Greathouse, Case No. 5,741.

§ 3. Partial or general pardons.
A pardon may be partial.—United States v. Six Lots of Ground, Case No. 16,299.

A grant of "a full and unconditional pardon," where the offense has been recited in the preamble, is not a general pardon, and is valid.—Stetler's Case, Case No. 13,380.

§ 4. Delivery of pardon.
A delivery of a pardon to a marshal is not sufficient to give it validity.—In re De Puy, Case No. 3,814.

§ 5. Revocation.
A pardon by an outgoing president may be revoked by the incoming president before its delivery to the prisoner.—In re De Puy, Case No. 3,814.

A pardon has no validity until its delivery, and consequently may be revoked at any time before delivery.—In re De Puy, Case No. 3,814.

§ 6. Operation and effect.
The recital of a specific, distinct offense in a pardon by the president limits its operation to that offense, and such pardon does not embrace any other offense for which separate penalties and punishments are prescribed.—Ex parte Weimer, Case No. 17,362.

A pardon from sentence for conspiracy to defraud the revenue does not entitle the defendant to demand cancellation of a judgment of forfeiture for fraud upon the revenue.—Ex parte Weimer, Case No. 17,362.

A pardon for offenses against the revenue laws cannot relieve the offenders of payment of taxes.—United States v. Roelle, Case No. 16,186.

An unconditional pardon of one convicted of conspiracy to defraud the United States by the unlawful removal of distilled spirits, without paying the taxes, bars a subsequent civil suit to recover the penalty of double the amount of such tax.—United States v. McKee, Case No. 15,688.

Where a prisoner was sentenced to both fine and imprisonment, and the president, by a pardon, remitted the fine only, held, that he had no authority to thereupon order the prisoner's discharge.—United States v. Lukins, Case No. 15,638.

A pardon by the president, after condemnation, as to all the interest of the United States in the penalty incurred by a violation of the embargo laws, and directing discontinuance of all further proceedings on behalf of the United States, does not remit the interest of the customhouse officers in a moiety.—United States v. Lancaster, Case No. 15,557.

Quære, whether the president can pardon in such a case, so as to affect the interests of third parties.—United States v. Lancaster, Case No. 15,557.

A pardon is effectual so long as any of the legal consequences of a conviction remain, though the term of imprisonment has expired.—Stetler's Case, Case No. 13,380.

A pardon reciting a conviction at the June term, 1850, of the offense of counterfeiting, and a sentence to imprisonment for the term of one year, is inapplicable to a conviction at the May term, 1850, for both counterfeiting and uttering counterfeit coin, where the sentence was both fine and imprisonment.—Stetler's Case, Case No. 13,380.

The crime of being accessory to the murder of the president was not embraced in the amnesty proclamation of 1868.—Ex parte Mudd, Case No. 9,899.

A duly-licensed attorney, who has accepted a full pardon from the president and taken the oath of amnesty, may resume his practice in the federal courts without taking the oath prescribed by Act Jan. 24, 1865.—Ex parte Law, Case No. 8,126.

A proclamation by the president ordering people in insurrection to disperse to their homes does not operate, even when it is obeyed, as a pardon of offenses already committed.—Case of Fries, Case No. 5,126.

The proclamation of the president of December 8, 1863, extends to persons who, at its date, had been convicted and sentenced for the offenses described in it.—In re Greathouse, Case No. 5,741.

The amnesty proclamation of July 4, 1868, did not have the effect to restore property condemned in confiscation proceedings.—Bragg v. Lorio, Case No. 1,800; United States v. Six Lots of Ground, Id. 16,299.

The proclamation of December 8, 1863, extending amnesty to all who directly or indirectly participated in the Rebellion, included a citizen of Ohio under indictment for treason.—United States v. Hughes, Case No. 15,418.

A citizen who has complied with such proclamation is not excluded from its protection by a subsequent explanatory proclamation debarring persons in civil custody from its operation.—United States v. Hughes, Case No. 15,418.

An unqualified pardon, granted to the owner prior to the seizure or condemnation proceedings, is a bar to a judgment of condemnation.—United States v. Athens Armory, Case No. 14,473.

§ 7. Pleading pardon.
An alleged pardon for treason in raising an insurrection by the operation of the president's proclamation ordering the people to disperse, to be available, must be pleaded.—Case of Fries, Case No. 5,126.

A party accepting and pleading a pardon in a judicial proceeding admits that he is bound by the conditions mentioned therein.—Brown v. United States, Case No. 2,032.

PARENT AND CHILD.

§ 1, Custody and control of child. § 2, Services and earnings of child. § 3, Actions for loss of services of child. § 4, Conveyances and contracts. § 5, Possession and control of property of child.

See, also, "Adoption"; "Bastards"; "Guardian and Ward"; "Infants."
Domicile of child, see "Domicile," § 4.
Employment of minors, see "Seamen," § 17.
Seduction of child, see "Seduction."
Status of child, see "Indians," § 1.

§ 1. Custody and control of child.
The nature and extent of the parental power at common law discussed by Story, J.—United States v. Bainbridge, Case No. 14,497.

A father is not, of course, entitled to the custody of his infant child, if brought into court; but the court will exercise its discretion on the subject, and place the infant where it will be most for its benefit.—United States v. Green, Case No. 15,256.

See, also, "Divorce," § 3; "Habeas Corpus," § 3.

§ 2. Services and earnings of child.
The father forfeits his right to the earnings of his child where he neglects the obligation to protect, nurture, and educate the child, and abandons him.—The Etna, Case No. 4,542.

A father assigned a portion of his infant son's wages in consideration of the assignee's engaging to teach the boy a certain trade. Held, that the son could not recover money thus received by such assignee in an action for money had and received.—Roby v. Lyndall, Case No. 11,972.

§ 3. Actions for loss of services of child.
In a suit for the wrongful abduction of a minor child, where the damage is loss of service, the court may take into consideration the advances for clothing and other necessaries.—The Platina, Case No. 11,210.

It seems that knowledge by respondent of the minority of a person is essential to maintain an action for loss of services for a wrongful abduction.—The Platina, Case No. 11,210; Somboy v. Loring, Id. 13,168.

A parent may maintain a libel in admiralty for the wrongful abduction of his minor child, and carrying him beyond the sea, where there had not been an abandonment of all care of the child.—Steele v. Thacher, Case No. 13,348.

§ 4. Conveyances and contracts.
A conveyance to a parent by a child recently of age is prima facie valid, and its validity does not depend on adequacy of price.—Sullivan v. Sullivan, Case No. 13,598.

An infant, after the death of his father, cannot recover his wages for services performed in the lifetime of the father under a contract made with the father.—Roby v. Lyndall, Case No. 11,972.

Fraudulent conveyances, see "Fraudulent Conveyances," § 16.

§ 5. Possession and control of property of child.
The mother of minor heirs has no power to authorize an agent to act for them in matters relating to their real estate.—Harmer v. Morris, Case No. 6,076.

PAROL EVIDENCE.

In civil actions, see "Evidence," §§ 63–74.
In criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 64.
Of gift, see "Gifts," § 1.
To explain contract of shipment of seamen, see "Seamen," § 34.
To show fraud, see "Fraud," § 8.
Weight of evidence, see "Evidence," § 86.

PARTICULARS, BILL OF.

See "Pleading," §§ 63, 64.

PARTIES.

§ 1, Plaintiffs. § 2, Defendants. § 3, Designation and description of parties. § 4, New parties and change of parties. § 5, Effect of misjoinder or nonjoinder. § 6, Who may make objection. § 7, Time of making objection. § 8, Mode of raising objection.

Admissions by, see "Evidence," § 31.
Character, as ground of jurisdiction, see "Courts," §§ 41–63.
Competency as witness, see "Witnesses," §§ 28–50.
Death, ground of abatement, see "Abatement and Revival," §§ 5, 6.
Defects, ground of abatement, see "Abatement and Revival," § 3.
Interpleading, see "Interpleader."
Intervention of parties, see "Admiralty," § 64; "Bankruptcy," §§ 36. 103–105, 325, 567; "Equity," § 27; "Execution," § 13; "Executors and Administrators," § 47; "Maritime Liens," § 58; "Salvage." § 63.
Joinder of parties in civil actions or proceedings, see "Admiralty," § 53; "Bankruptcy," §§ 94–100; "Collision," §§ 122, 124; "Equity," § 24; "Salvage," §§ 63, 64.
—— in criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," §§ 6–8; "Indictment and Information," § 17; "Internal Revenue," § 103; "Larceny," § 4; "Receiving Stolen Goods," § 2.
Misconduct, ground for new trial, see "New Trial," § 3.
Persons concluded by judgment, see "Judgment," § 50.
Privilege from arrest, see "Arrest," § 3.
Rights and liabilities as to costs, see "Admiralty," §§ 127–135a; "Costs."
—— to maintain action, see "Action," § 1.
Transfer of interest ground of abatement, see "Abatement and Revival," § 4.

In actions by or against particular classes of parties.

See "Corporations," §§ 31, 51; "Executors and Administrators," § 46; "Husband and Wife," §§ 9, 10; "Judges"; "Partnership," § 34; "Seamen," § 137; "United States," §§ 28, 32, 35.
Alien enemies, see "War," § 3.
Assignees in bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," § 359.
Trustees, see "Trusts," § 31.

In particular actions or proceedings.

See "Admiralty," §§ 50–55, 64; "Attachments," § 1; "Bankruptcy," §§ 36, 53, 91–105; "Cancellation of Instruments," § 7; "Creditors' Suit," § 7; "Ejectment," §§ 8, 9; "Equity," §§ 22–29; "Judgment," § 15; "Reformation of Instruments," § 6; "Replevin," § 5; "Trespass," § 6.
Appeal in admiralty, see "Admiralty," § 116.
—— or writ of error, see "Appeal and Error," § 10a.
Condemnation proceedings, see "Eminent Domain," § 9.
Criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," §§ 6–8; "Indictment and Information," § 17; "Internal Revenue," § 103; "Larceny," § 4; "Receiving Stolen Goods," § 2.
For collision, see "Collision," §§ 121–124.
For damage to tow, see "Towage," § 27.
For dissolution and accounting, see "Partnership," § 53.
For foreclosure, see "Mortgages," § 34.
Forfeitures, see "Forfeitures," § 7.
For infringement of copyright, see "Copyrights," § 42.
—— of patents, see "Patents," §§ 193, 220.
For injunction, see "Injunction," § 10.
For removal of cause, see "Removal of Causes," § 36.
For salvage, see "Salvage," §§ 59, 60, 63.
On bills or notes, see "Bills and Notes," §§ 94, 95.
On bonds, see "Bonds," § 19.
On contract, see "Contracts," § 38.
On covenant, see "Covenants," § 9.
On insurance policy, see "Insurance," § 171.
Prize proceedings, see "War," § 58.
To enforce liability of stockholder, see "Corporations," § 33.
—— lien, see "Maritime Liens," § 58.
—— trust, see "Trusts," § 47.

To foreclose mortgage, see "Railroads," § 47.
To recover share in estate, see "Descent and Distribution," § 3.

To particular classes of conveyances, contracts, or transactions.

See "Bills and Notes," §§ 15, 36a, 46; "Bonds," § 2; "Contracts," §§ 2, 20; "Fraudulent Conveyances," § 25; "Insurance," § 24.
Joint interests, see "Joint Adventures."

§ 1. Plaintiffs.
Suit brought in name of plaintiff who is neither a natural nor an artificial person is a nullity.—Alexander v. Knox, Case No. 170.

Under an act appropriating moneys to a certain person as assignee of C., "or to whomsoever shall appear to the comptroller to be entitled to his share," held, that C. was not entitled to the moneys in his own right, and a suit could be maintained in the name of any one legally entitled thereto.—Sands v. Delafield, Case No. 12,-304.

Under a state law directing or authorizing all suits to be brought in the name of the real party in interest, such party has the right to sue in actions at law in the federal courts sitting in such state.—Weed Sewing Mach. Co. v. Wicks, Case No. 17,348.

Where the parties are so numerous as not to be inserted conveniently in the record, suit may be maintained in the name of a part for the whole.—Piatt v. Oliver, Case No. 11,115.

A person for whose benefit an action is brought, but who does not appear to be a party upon the record, nor to be interested in the event, cannot appear and plead in his own name.—Welch v. Mandeville, Case No. 17,371.

§ 2. Defendants.
Persons against whom no relief is prayed, and whose interests cannot be injuriously affected by the suit, need not be joined as parties.—Van Bokkelen v. Cook, Case No. 16,831; Van Reimsdyk v. Kane, Id. 16,871.

But, all persons whose interests will be affected should be made parties unless without the jurisdiction of the court, when such fact should be stated.—Bowman v. Wathen, Case No. 1,740.

And where no final decree can be made without prejudice to parties not before the court, the court will not proceed, even though the parties are beyond reach of its process.—Carson v. Robertson, Case No. 2,466.

The collector is not a proper party to a suit between rival claimants to the ownership of imported goods in his custody in a bonded warehouse, where it is not alleged that he is acting wrongfully or without authority of law.—Rateau v. Bernard, Case No. 11,579.

Assignees of British bankrupt allowed to be made parties to defend a suit against the bankrupt, on certificate of foreign notary public certified by American consul.—Wilson v. Stewart, Case No. 17,837.

Several defendants who claim separate tracts of land from distinct sources of title may be joined in the same suit under Act Ky. 1796.—Lewis v. Marshall, Case No. 8,327.

On a return of non est inventus as to one defendant and service on the other, plaintiff may proceed against the latter on a joint contract.—Craig v. Cummings, Case No. 3,331.

One who purchases pendente lite the interest of a defendant in the subject-matter of a suit does not thereby become a necessary party to the suit, and if the court has no jurisdiction of him he cannot be compelled to come in as a party.—Myers v. Dorr, Case No. 9,988.

A person who has no interest, in a legal sense, in the subject-matter of a suit in personam, and who is not a party to it, cannot compel the plaintiff to make him a party.—Coleman v. Martin, Case No. 2,985.

Several defendants, who have no connection with each other in interest, in estate, or in contract, and against whom jointly plaintiffs have no cause of action, cannot be joined.—United States v. Alexander, Case No. 14,428.

The alleged fraudulent indorsee of a note is a necessary party to a bill by the payee to avoid an assignment for fraud and compel the maker to pay a second time.—Alexander v. Horner, Case No. 169.

§ 3. Designation and description of parties.

Designation in equity, see "Equity," § 42.

An action brought in the name of "Rawlings & Son" held too uncertain as a description of plaintiffs.—Rhea v. Rawlings, Case No. 11,737.

The words "I. & C. Central R. R." cannot, without an allegation of misnomer, or offer to prove the identity, be taken to mean the Columbus & Indianapolis Railway Company.—Dixon v. Columbus, etc., R. Co., Case No. 3,929.

§ 4. New parties and change of parties.
An assignee of complainant's interest in the subject-matter, pending the litigation, must file an original bill in the nature of a supplemental bill to be substituted to complainant's right.—Tappan v. Smith, Case No. 13,748; Winter v. Ludlow, Id. 17,891.

Where the proper parties are not made, the court will suspend decree to bring them in.—Bowman v. Wathen, Case No. 1,740.

Plaintiff must enter a nolle prosequi as to one of the joint defendants, against whom there is a stay of proceedings pending action upon his discharge in bankruptcy, before he can proceed against the others.—Hinman v. Cutler, Case No. 6,524.

Substitution of parties in bankruptcy proceedings, see "Bankruptcy," §§ 102, 567.

§ 5. Effect of misjoinder or nonjoinder.
That persons are unnecessarily made defendants does not oust the jurisdiction as to those who are properly before the court.—Bowman v. Wathen, Case No. 1,740.

The court has no jurisdiction where a person within its jurisdiction, deemed an indispensable party, is not joined.—Tobin v. Walkinshaw, Case No. 14,068.

An outstanding interest in a person without the jurisdiction of the court will not prevent a decree upon the merits, where the case may be completely decided between the litigant parties or without them. — Society for Propagation of the Gospel v. Hartland, Case No. 13,155.

§ 6. Who may make objection.
Only those defendants who are improperly joined can take advantage of an objection for misjoinder of parties.—Spaulding v. McGovern, Case No. 13.217.

§ 7. Time of making objection.
Want of parties may be objected to at any time, even in the appellate court.—Carson v. Robertson, Case No. 2,466.

After the evidence is closed on the trial, defendant cannot object, for the first time, to a recovery on the ground that plaintiff was not the real party in interest, and had no capacity to sue. Civ. Code Kan. §§ 10, 28, 89, 91.—Perkins v. Ingersoll, Case No. 10,988.

An objection for want of proper parties defendant, not made by demurrer, plea, or answer, will be held too late, where a decree can be made granting the relief sought without affecting the rights of absent parties; otherwise not, though they are beyond the jurisdiction of the court.—Florence Sewing Mach. Co. v. Singer Mfg. Co., Case No. 4,884.

§ 8. Mode of raising objection.
Objection of nonjoinder need not be raised by pleadings.—Alexander v. Horner, Case No. 169.

An objection of want of parties can be taken only by plea or answer, and the name or description of the parties who should be brought in must be specified.—Segee v. Thomas, Case No. 12,633.

If process is prayed against all necessary parties, a demurrer for want of proper parties will not lie on the ground that some have not been served.—Kilgour v. New Orleans Gas Light Co., Case No. 7,764.

PARTITION.

§ 1, By act of parties. § 2, Actions for partition—Right of action and defenses. § 3, —— Proceedings and relief.

Conclusiveness of state court decision, see "Courts," § 117.

§ 1. By act of parties.
A parol partition executed by taking actual exclusive possession of the portions respectively assigned is valid, and the parties cease to be tenants in common.—Four Hundred and Twenty Min. Co. v. Bullion Min. Co., Case No. 4,989.

A partition between a tenant in tail of an undivided half of land, and a tenant in fee of the other half, is binding only during the life of the former.—Buxton v. Bowen, Case No. 2,260.

§ 2. Actions for partition—Right of action and defenses.
A bill for partition will not be entertained unless claimant's title be clear to the portion to be received.—Barney v. Baltimore, Case No. 1,029.

The possession of a tenant in common, being the possession of his cotenant, will enable the latter to maintain a partition suit even where possession is necessary.—Lamb v. Starr, Case No. 8,021.

If complainant's title is not doubtful or suspicious, equity will decree partition whether he is in actual possession or not; but if he claim legal title, and that title is doubtful, it is usual to remit him to an action at law to try title, and retain the suit awaiting the result. If he claim equitable title, and that is doubtful, the court will first ascertain the title before making partition.—Lamb v. Starr, Case No. 8,021.

The right to demand partition is ex debito justitiæ if complainant can show a plain legal title. —Vint v. King, Case No. 16,950; Findlay v. Vint, Id.; Allen v. Same, Id.; Sheffey v. Same, Id.

§ 3. —— Proceedings and relief.
The court of common pleas in Ohio may take jurisdiction of a bill for partition in two counties, but the decree, to bind purchasers, must be recorded where the land lies.—Nelson v. Moon, Case No. 10,111.

On a bill for partition a court of equity may examine questions of alleged fraud.—Vint v. King, Case No. 16,950; Findlay v. Vint, Id.; Allen v. Same, Id.; Sheffey v. Same, Id.

Proceedings for partition or sale of real estate of an intestate under Act Md. 1786, c. 45, § 8.—Tolmie v. Thompson, Case No. 14,080.

The effect of a decree in a partition suit considered and declared.—Lamb v. Wakefield, Case No. 8,024.

A decree of partition does not pass anything from one coparcener to another.—Contee v. Godfrey, Case No. 3,140.

A partition by which allotments were made to some of the parties as heirs held to estop them from claiming by purchase, and not as heirs.—Lamb v. Carter, Case No. 8,013.

PARTNERSHIP.

I. THE RELATION.

§ 1, Creation and requisites. § 2, As to third persons—What constitutes in general. § 3, —— Holding out as partner. § 4, —— Dormant or secret partners. § 5, —— Defective associations or corporations. § 6, Evidence. § 7, Duration.

II. THE FIRM, ITS POWERS AND PROPERTY.

§ 8, Powers of firm as a body. § 9, What is firm property in general. § 10, Partnership real estate. § 11, Change of joint property into separate property.

III. MUTUAL RIGHTS, DUTIES, AND LIABILITIES.

§ 12, Firm property and business—Construction of partnership articles in general. § 13, —— Capital of firm. § 14, —— Misappropriation of firm property. § 15, —— Books of account. § 16, —— Liability for losses. § 17, Individual transactions—Purchase of co-partner's interest. § 18, Actions between partners.

IV. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES AS TO THIRD PERSONS.

§ 19, Representation of firm by partner—Scope of firm business. § 20, —— Restrictions on partner's authority. § 21, —— Use of seal. § 22, —— Disposition of firm property in general. § 23, —— Contracts. § 24, —— Sales. § 25, —— Negotiable instruments. § 26, —— Mortgage. § 27, —— Payment of firm debts. § 28, —— Acknowledgment of debt. § 29, —— Wrongful acts. § 30, —— Estoppel to deny partner's authority. § 31, —— Ratification. § 32, Application of assets to liabilities—Assets of firm. § 33, —— Assets of individual partners. § 34, Actions by or against firm or partners—Parties. § 35, —— Attachment against firm property. § 36, —— Pleading. § 37, —— Issues and proof. § 38, —— Evidence. § 39, —— Judgment and enforcement.

V. RETIREMENT AND ADMISSION OF PARTNERS.

§ 40, Assent to admission of new partner. § 41, Authority of continuing partner. § 42, Obligations of old firm. § 43, Assumption of obligations of old firm. § 44, Actions after change of membership.

VI. DEATH OF PARTNER AND SURVIVING PARTNERS.

§ 45, Effect of death of partner. § 46, Real property of firm. § 47, Obligations incurred in winding up business. § 48, Rights of survivor in estate of deceased. § 49, Actions by or against surviving partners or representatives of deceased partner.

VII. DISSOLUTION, SETTLEMENT, AND ACCOUNTING.

§ 50, Causes of dissolution. § 51, Rights, powers, and liabilities after dissolution. § 52, Distribution and settlement. § 53, Actions for dissolution and accounting.

VIII. LIMITED PARTNERSHIP.

§ 54, Certificate of formation. § 55, Contribution of special capital. § 56, Firm name and sign. § 57, Withdrawal of capital or profits. § 58, Relations between special and general partners. § 59, Dissolution.

See, also, "Associations"; "Joint Adventures"; "Joint Stock Companies."

Bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," §§ 16, 33, 46–55, 447–456, 493, 633.
Disclosure of communications between, see "Witnesses," § 55.
Effect of assignment in bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," § 196.
—— of change in or dissolution of partnership, see "Trade-Marks and Trade-Names," § 14.
Exemptions, see "Bankruptcy," § 536.
Part owners of vessel, see "Shipping," §§ 21–27.

I. THE RELATION.

§ 1. Creation and requisites.

The actual intention of the parties will alone constitute a partnership, as between themselves. —Hazard v. Hazard, Case No. 6,279.

A partnership does not exist from an agreement to form one in the future.—In re Goold, Case No. 5,604.

An advance of money by one to another in contemplation of their becoming copartners at a future time does not work a copartnership.—In re Goold, Case No. 5,604.

To constitute a partnership, there must be a community of interest continuing to the time of the disposal of the property in which the parties are interested.—Felichy v. Hamilton, Case No. 4,719.

An agreement to furnish $3,000 and personal services to the business of another for a year, at a stipulated price, and not to be chargeable with losses, does not constitute a partnership as between the parties.—Mattocks v. Rogers, Case No. 9,300.

Persons owning merchandise in common, who ship it on joint account and risk for sale, are copartners in the adventure.—Two Hundred and Sixty Hogsheads of Molasses, Case No. 14.296.

An agreement between equal owners of a vessel, whereby they assumed various duties as master and supercargo, and agents and factors, held not to constitute a partnership.—De Wolf v. Howland, Case No. 3,852.

Tenants in common of a ship who purchased a cargo for a voyage held tenants in common of the cargo, and not partners.—Jackson v. Robinson, Case No. 7,144.

A mere participation in the profits will not make the parties partners inter sese.—Hazard v. Hazard, Case No. 6,279.

An agreement which does not provide for sharing in the profits does not constitute a partnership.—In re Blumenthal, Case No. 1,575.

Agreement between owners of tug and barge to operate them jointly in the freighting business, profits to be shared in proportion to the stipulated values of the vessels, constitutes a partnership.—Bowas v. Pioneer Tow Line, Case No. 1,713.

The fact that two firms share in a certain venture, keeping their bank account in the name of one firm, adding the word "Co.," in which form they draw checks, does not make them partners.—In re Warner, Case No. 17,178.

A joint purchase with a view to a joint sale and a communion of profit and loss, though for a single transaction, will constitute a partnership.—In re Warren, Case No. 17,191.

An agreement for a salary, to be measured by the net profits received, does not create a partnership.—In re Pierson, Case No. 11,153.

A contract to work a farm on shares held to constitute a partnership, and to be abandoned by the failure of the party who went into possession to carry out its terms.—Tibbatts v. Tibbatts, Case No. 14,020.

An association of pilots who placed their earnings in a common fund, out of which expenses are paid and profits declared, is a partnership, liable for the misfeasance or negligence of one of such pilots while employed in piloting a vessel.—Santiago v. Morgan, Case No. 12,331.

Persons who advance money for an enterprise run in another's name, with an option to share in the profits, or to receive back their money with interest, are not partners in the business.—Moore v. Walton, Case No. 9,779.

§ 2. As to third persons—What constitutes in general.

A partnership, as to third persons, can only arise either by contract between the partners themselves, by implication of law arising from a contract which does make them partners as to third persons, or by some act or declaration of the partners by which third persons are reasonably led to suppose that the partnership exists.—Einstein v. Gourdin, Case No. 4,320.

An agreement to contribute capital or labor to carry on a business with equal participation in the profits will constitute a partnership as to third persons, although the agreement expressly stipulates to the contrary, and although such third persons had no knowledge of the actual relation.—Bigelow v. Elliot, Case No. 1,399.

Participation in profits is prima facie proof of partnership, rebuttable by showing that they were received as wages or interest for money loaned.—In re Francis, Case No. 5,031.

A partnership held to exist where the transaction was intentionally, and for collateral reasons, disguised under the cloak of a pretended loan and employment as bookkeeper. — In re Francis, Case No. 5,031.

A loan to a person engaged in trade on condition of a rate of interest in proportion to profits or a share of the profits does not constitute the lender a partner.—In re Ward, Case No. 17,144.

The receipt of a stated portion of the profits of an enterprise as compensation for services will not alone constitute the recipient a partner. —Bigelow v. Elliot, Case No. 1,399; In re Ward, Id. 17,144; Einstein v. Gourdin, Id. 4,320.

A person loaning money to another carrying on business in his own name with the suffix "& Co." cannot be held liable as a partner, where he neither held himself out as such, nor allowed others to do so.—Swann v. Sanborn, Case No. 13,675.

§ 3. —— Holding out as partner.

One representing himself as a partner, or permitting others to do so, is responsible as such, although he may have no interest in the firm.—Buckingham v. Burgess, Cases Nos. 2,087, 2,089.

A person who permits himself to be held out as a partner is liable as such to one from whom credit is secured upon the strength of the supposed relation.—In re Jewett, Case No. 7,306.

Where a party furnishes a certain sum and personal services to the business of another for a year, not to be chargeable with losses, and holds himself out as a partner, he is liable as such to creditors, and, in case of insolvency, the sum contributed is partnership assets.—Mattocks v. Rogers, Case No. 9,300.

Holding one's self out to the world as a partner will make him liable as such to one who may be inferred to have knowledge thereof, though he in fact has no interest in the concern.—Benedict v. Davis, Case No. 1,293.

Conduct to estop one from denying liability as a partner must have been so open and notorious that all the creditors believed him to be a partner in the firm, and were thereby induced to become its creditors.—In re Goold, Case No. 5,604.

One advancing money for the purchase of materials to be manufactured, retaining a lien thereon as security, held not liable as a partner because held out as such by the debtor.—In re De Metz, Case No. 3,781.

Permitting the use of one's name in a firm after retiring therefrom makes one liable on a note of the new firm in the hands of a purchaser without notice.—In re Krueger, Case No. 7,941.

Where a man and wife hold themselves out as partners in trade, it will be presumed, in the absence of proof, that she contributed her share of the capital, and that her time, skill, and earnings went into the business.—In re Kinkead, Case No. 7,824.

§ 4. —— Dormant or secret partners.

A dormant partner is not liable on a note given in the individual name of the other for goods put into the business, conducted in the latter's name, where the payee did not know the relation.—Palmer v. Elliot, Case No. 10,690.

Where the purchaser of a note made by a firm did not know of any secret partners, and the note was made for the individual benefit of those whose names appeared thereon, held, that the secret partners were not liable.—In re Munn, Case No. 9,925.

To charge a secret partner with debts of the firm, it must be shown that the debts were contracted in the name and business of the firm, or that he had an interest in the contract or profits.—In re Munn, Case No. 9,925.

Where one partner publicly avows all the partners, so that they become and are known as such, and credit is obtained thereby, it is no longer a secret partnership, whether the firm be carried on in the name of one partner only or otherwise.—United States Bank v. Binney, Case No. 16,791.

Debt may be maintained upon a firm note against a secret partner, who has not signed it, but he is not liable if the money obtained on its discount was not used for the firm.—Bank of Alexandria v. Mandeville, Case No. 851.

It is the joint interest in the whole which constitutes the joint liability of all for the contracts of one, and not the credit which is given to all, as in the instance of a dormant partner.—Felichy v. Hamilton, Case No. 4,719.

§ 5. —— Defective associations or corporations.

Persons assuming to act as a corporation, under a corporate name, without authority of law, are liable, as copartners, for the debts of the association.—In re Mendenhall, Case No. 9,425.

§ 6. Evidence.

A partnership cannot be proved by evidence of general reputation.—Wilson v. Colman, Case No. 17,798.

The conduct of parties alleged to be partners is competent evidence to show the copartnership. —In re Goold, Case No. 5,604.

On an issue of partnership, an offer to pay the partnership note if the holder would take property is evidence in connection with defendant's confession that the note was signed by his partner.—Thomas v. Wolcott, Case No. 13,915.

In an action against two persons as partners, an account book containing entries made by both defendants is admissible as evidence of partnership.—Champlin v. Tilley, Case No. 2,586.

Parol evidence cannot be given of the contents of printed cards bearing the joint names of defendants to prove partnership.—Wilson v. Colman, Case No. 17,798.

To rebut declarations, as conducing to establish a partnership in fact, a parol contract between the parties may be proved.—Benedict v. Davis, Case No. 1,293.

Evidence tending to show some sort of joint interest in certain purchases of lumber lands held not sufficiently definite and satisfactory to establish a general copartnership in land and lumber speculations.—Smith v. Burnham, Case No. 13,019.

A partnership in buying and selling lands, as to third persons, may be proved by the same evidence as a partnership in buying and selling merchandise.—In re Warren, Case No. 17,191.

§ 7. Duration.

The partnership articles will be considered as binding after the expiration of the stipulated term where the business is carried on without any change in the circumstances.—Robertson v. Miller, Case No. 11,926.

II. THE FIRM, ITS POWERS AND PROPERTY.

§ 8. Powers of firm as a body.

A firm may negotiate its own paper to one of its partners, or take his paper and use it for the firm's purposes.—Baring v. Lyman, Case No. 983.

§ 9. What is firm property in general.

Where property is necessary for the ordinary operation of the partnership, and be actually so employed, it will be held partnership property, when purchased with partnership funds.—Hoxie v. Carr, Case No. 6,802.

In the absence of fraud and breach of trust, property purchased with partnership funds does not, of necessity, become partnership property, if that is not the intention of the parties.—Hoxie v. Carr, Case No. 6,802.

A legacy to the wife of one of the partners held to have become partnership property, as, when received, it became the husband's property.—Lyman v. Lyman, Case No. 8,628.

One of the partners having received a large legacy and applied it to the partnership business, without the knowledge of the other, and the money having been used for many years therein, held that it became partnership property.—Lyman v. Lyman, Case No. 8,628.

When a partnership is formed to make an article to which a given trade-mark is properly applied, such trade-mark, if belonging to one partner, becomes, in the absence of special regulations, part of the partnership property.—Filkins v. Blackman, Case No. 4,786.

§ 10. Partnership real estate.

A partnership in purchasing and selling lands is governed by the same principles as ordinary partnerships.—Olcott v. Wing, Case No. 10,481.

The proceeds of a lot owned by one of the partners prior to the partnership, afterwards built upon with joint funds, and then sold and the proceeds used in the partnership business, must be considered as belonging to the partnership.—Lyman v. Lyman, Case No. 8,628.

Lands bought by a commercial partnership, for partnership purposes, in equity stand on the same footing as personal property, whether title is taken in one or both partners.—Lyman v. Lyman, Case No. 8,628.

Real estate held for partnership purposes or purchased with partnership means is personal assets for paying debts or balances due the partners.—Kleine v. Shanks, Case No. 7,870; Hiscock v. Jaycox, Id. 6,531.

Real estate purchased with partnership funds, and on partnership account, will, in equity, be treated as personal estate, irrespective of the condition of the title.—Hoxie v. Carr, Case No. 6,802.

Dower rights in partnership realty, see "Dower," § 1.

§ 11. Change of joint property into separate property.

The exchange of a note of a firm dissolved by the death of one partner, for a similar note signed by the survivor, does not convert the firm debt into the separate debt of the survivor.—In re Clap, Case No. 2,784.

III. MUTUAL RIGHTS, DUTIES, AND LIABILITIES.

See, also, post, §§ 40-44, 51, 58.

§ 12. Firm property and business—Construction of partnership articles in general.

The understanding that no charge was to be made for family expenses held to extend to the expenses of minor children, but not to advances made them after they became of age.—Lyman v. Lyman, Case No. 8,628.

Salaries paid to the children as clerks, after they became of age, held a charge against the partnership.—Lyman v. Lyman, Case No. 8,628.

Where a partnership between two brothers, made by parol in 1784, with an agreement that all their property should be in common, lasted until 1820, and was extended to numerous kinds of business, including the purchase of lands in various states, to which title was taken in the name of one or both, as the purchasing partner pleased, held, that the partnership was unlimited; that all property acquired by either was partnership property; and that each was bound by the acts of the other, however disastrous, if done in good faith.—Lyman v. Lyman, Case No. 8,628.

§ 13. —— Capital of firm.

A partner, by failing to contribute his share of the partnership fund, does not forfeit the interest which he already has in the firm.—Piatt v. Oliver, Case No. 11,116.

§ 14. —— Misappropriation of firm property.

An agreement to sell a member certain articles expressly for his individual use, to be paid for out of the partnership goods, is void as to the other partners.—Taylor v. Rasch, Case No. 13,801.

§ 15. —— Books of account.

The presumption that all the partners in a firm have access to the partnership books, and know the entries therein, may be repelled by any circumstances which lead to a contrary presumption.—United States Bank v. Binney, Case No. 16,791.

§ 16. —— Liability for losses.

Where a joint adventure was in the management of one partner, and the other advised him to sell the cargo for cash or produce only, but he took bills on the French government, which were not paid, held that, his conduct being in good faith, he was not liable to the other partner.—Lyles v. Styles, Case No. 8,625.

§ 17. Individual transactions—Purchase of copartner's interest.

A bona fide transfer of partnership effects by one member of the partnership to another vests the title in the transferee as his separate estate.—In re Byrne, Case No. 2,270.

A bona fide transfer of an interest in a partnership may be made without writings or vouchers.—In re Great Western Tel. Co., Case No. 5,740.

§ 18. Actions between partners.

A partner in a steamboat company, who acted as master and engineer, cannot maintain an action at law against his copartners for compensation as engineer.—Taylor v. Smith, Case No. 13,806.

A settlement of partnership accounts, and a balance acknowledged, will not support an action at law between the partners without an express promise to pay.—Pote v. Philips, Case No. 11,316.

If there has been no settlement of the partnership accounts, one partner cannot maintain an action at law against the other for any matter relating to their partnership affairs.—Pote v. Philips, Case No. 11,316; Lamalere v. Caze, Id. 8,003; Halderman v. Halderman, Id. 5,909; Goldsborough v. McWilliams, Id. 5,518; Barry v. Barry, Id. 1,060.

One partner who pays a judgment against all the partners for a partnership debt cannot at law recover from the others their respective proportions.—Riggs v. Stewart, Case No. 11,830.

Quære, whether the debt of one partner in a joint concern with others, not yet closed, can be set off in an action between partners.—Hurst v. Hurst, Case No. 6,930.

In an action at law by one partner against the other, a partnership book kept by defendant is not evidence against plaintiff, although it has been in his possession.—Sutton v. Mandeville, Case No. 13,648.

In an action at law between partners, accounts rendered are admissible to show that the items are not of partnership accounts.—Barry v. Barry, Case No. 1,060.

On a bill against a partner who has fraudulently suppressed books and falsified accounts, complainant will not be held to strict proof. Sufficiency of proof.—Askew v. Odenheimer, Case No. 587.

See, also, ante, § 6; post, § 53.

IV. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES AS TO THIRD PERSONS.

Assignment for benefit of creditors, see "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," §§ 1, 2.

§ 19. Representation of firm by partner—Scope of firm business.

A partner can bind the firm only for objects within the scope of its business.—United States Bank v. Binney, Case No. 16,791.

A usurious loan and conveyance is not within the proper scope and business of the partnership, so as to make the ignorant partner liable, in an action of tort, for the violation of law by his copartner.—Graham v. Meyer, Case No. 5,673.

A partner is bound by the act of his co-partner, within the scope of his business, though the act be fraudulent as between the partners.—Capelle v. Hall, Case No. 2,391.

§ 20. —— Restrictions on partner's authority.

Secret restrictions upon the rights of partners do not affect those persons who deal with the firm in ignorance of them.—United States Bank v. Binney, Case No. 16,791.

§ 21. —— Use of seal.

A partner, with the assent of his copartners, may bind the firm by a joint and several bond made by him in the firm name, and under a single seal affixed to its signature.—United States v. Brod, Case No. 14,653.

A release under seal of one of copartners is a sufficient release as to the rights of both.—Beltzhoover v. Stockton, Case No. 1,283.

§ 22. —— Disposition of firm property in general.

The active partner cannot transfer partnership realty the same as personalty.—Piatt v. Oliver, Case No. 11,116.

An assignment by one partner of partnership realty in payment of firm debt passes only his interest.—Anderson v. Tompkins, Case No. 365.

A deed executed by one partner becomes the deed of all, where the others expressly consented at the time, or agreed to it, or recognized it afterwards.—Darst v. Roth, Case No. 3,582.

§ 23. —— Contracts.
A contract in writing by one partner in his own name does not bind the other, though the money obtained by it comes into the joint concern.—Smith v. Hoffman, Case No. 13,061.

A member of a firm cannot engage the firm in another partnership, so as to bind a member, not privy thereto. But his consent or ratification may be presumed by his silence without objection after he has knowledge of the fact.—Tabb v. Gist, Case No. 13,719.

Assumpsit will not lie against partners on a bond given by one partner for a debt due from both where not executed in the presence or by the consent of the copartner.—United States v. Astley, Case No. 14,472.

§ 24. —— Sales.
A joint owner may advise as to the manner of sale of the cargo, but he has no authority to order; and he is bound by the acts of the managing partner done in good faith, though his advice is not followed.—Lyles v. Styles, Case No. 8,625.

The firm is not liable for goods sold to one of the partners with knowledge that they were for his separate use, although he ordered them to be charged to the firm.—Gullat v. Tucker, Case No. 5,866.

§ 25. —— Negotiable instruments.
Notes made jointly by partners, if understood to be partnership transactions, and in fact so used, will be binding on the firm.—In re Warren, Case No. 17,191.

Where bills drawn in the name of one partner, and accepted by the other, are in fact partnership transactions, and so understood, the firm will be liable thereon.—In re Warren, Case No. 17,191.

A bill signed by one partner alone, where he has authority to sign for all, will, in equity, be enforced against all the partners in favor of the payee of the bill, who has trusted the money on the faith of the joint credit.—Van Reimsdyk v. Kane, Case No. 16,872.

Where a partnership is carried on in the name of one partner, notes indorsed by him are not binding on the firm unless the indorsements were made for the benefit of the firm.—United States Bank v. Binney, Case No. 16,791.

The firm is liable on a note signed by the members with their individual names, where the consideration is treated as copartnership funds.—In re Thomas, Case No. 13,886.

Where the proceeds of a firm note indorsed by a partner were credited on the firm books and were received by the firm, it is liable thereon, though they were subsequently used by the partner individually.—In re Norris, Case No. 10,-302.

A partnership is not liable on an indorsement in the firm name by one member without the knowledge of the other, of an accommodation note, for the benefit of the third person.—In re Irving, Case No. 7,074.

The acceptance of the note of one partner on a loan of money for the use of the firm will prevent an action against the firm.—In re Herrick, Case No. 6,420.

Though the lender was ignorant that the loan was for the firm, he cannot sue the firm after recovering judgment on the note.—In re Herrick, Case No. 6,420.

Any partner may be agent of third person in drawing bills in favor of the firm for advances made under express authority.—Baring v. Lyman, Case No. 983.

A check upon a bank drawn in the name of one partner cannot be charged to the firm if not drawn by its authority, although used in the business of the firm.—Patriotic Bank v. Coote, Case No. 10,807.

A promissory note given by the active partner, in whose name the business was carried on, to the silent partner, for the amount of capital contributed by him, is the separate note of the active partner.—In re Waite, Case No. 17,044.

§ 26. —— Mortgage.
A chattel mortgage executed by one partner under seal, in the firm name, for money advanced to it, where the other partner subsequently assents thereto, will bind the firm.—Hawkins v. Hastings Bank, Case No. 6,244.

An assignment of partnership debts by one partner only, though void in law, sustained in equity if bona fide to secure creditors.—Anderson v. Tompkins, Case No. 365.

§ 27. —— Payment of firm debts.
One partner without prior consent of others may convey partnership personalty in payment of firm creditors.—Anderson v. Tompkins, Case No. 365.

One partner may give a preference to a particular creditor without consent of others if they are abroad.—Anderson v. Tompkins, Case No. 365.

§ 28. —— Acknowledgment of debt.
The acknowledgment of a debt by one partner will bind his copartner. — Corps v. Robinson, Case No. 3,252.

§ 29. —— Wrongful acts.
Partners are liable for the tort of one of their number committed by him as a partner in the course of the partnership business.—Stockwell v. United States, Case No. 13,466.

A tort of one partner will not bind the firm if not authorized or adopted by the firm, or within its proper scope and business.—Graham v. Meyer, Case No. 5,673.

§ 30. —— Estoppel to deny partner's authority.
A partner in a milling firm, who permits his co-partner to hold the firm out as a dealer in grains by the use of cards and letter heads indicating such business, will be liable on contracts for the sale and purchase of grain for future delivery, made in the name of the firm.—Williar v. Irwin, Case No. 17,761.

The indorsement of a firm, made by a partner to raise money for his benefit, binds the other partners, when the firm books disclose the entire transaction and they make no objection to it.—In re Norris, Case No. 10,302.

The representations of a member of a firm to the purchaser of its negotiable paper that it is business paper will estop the firm or their assignee from setting up that it is accommodation paper, and void for usury.—In re Many, Case No. 9,054.

§ 31. —— Ratification.
A ratification for a firm may be made by one member.—United States v. Turner, Case No. 16,547.

An agreement between a member of a firm and his individual creditor that the claim should be set off against such creditor's liability to the firm is not available to the firm where it was not assented to by the other partners until after such creditor had made an assignment for the benefit of creditors, though before bankruptcy.—Clark v. Sparhawk, Case No. 2,836.

§ 32. Application of assets to liabilities —Assets of firm.
A simple contract creditor cannot sue to follow partnership property used to pay individual debts.—Case v. Beauregard, Case No. 2,487.

The debts of the partnership must be first paid before the partnership property can be applied in payment of the individual debt. of either partner.—United States v. Williams, Case No. 16,719.

One partner is not entitled to payment out of the firm assets of a debt due to him in the course of the business until all other firm debts are paid.—Cory v. Clark, Case No. 3,260.

A partnership is not entitled to retain towards the payment of its debt the surplus arising from the securities held by one partner for his debt.—Sparhawk v. Drexel, Case No. 13,204.

The crediting to each member of his interest in the firm on taking in a new partner will not affect the right of the firm creditors.—In re Shanahan, Case No. 12,701.

A transfer by one partner of his interest in the firm to his copartner, if made in good faith, is binding on the firm creditors.—Shimer v. Huber, Case No. 12,787; Russell v. McCord, Id. 12,157.

A mortgage given by partners upon partnership property to secure an individual debt of one of the partners is valid as against partnership creditors.—In re Kahley, Case No. 7,593.

The application by a partner of funds of the firm to the payment of taxes on his individual estate does not give the firm creditors a lien on the land.—United States v. Duncan, Case No. 15,003.

Partnership creditors have no lien on the firm property before obtaining judgment and execution.—Case v. Beauregard, Case No. 2,487; Tracy v. Walker, Id. 14,129.

See, also, post, § 52.

§ 33. —— Assets of individual partners.

Where the surviving partner notified creditors that his brother's capital remained in the business, a joint creditor of the firm, who did not receive the notice, could require the joint property to be applied to his debts to the exclusion of separate creditors.—In re Clap, Case No. 2,783.

If there is no joint estate, the firm creditors may share pari passu in the separate estate.—In re Collier, Case No. 3,002.

A promise by one partner to pay all the firm debts may be enforced by the firm creditors, though not parties thereto.—In re Collier, Case No. 3,002.

In the absence of fraud, joint debts may be converted into individual debts by one partner's undertaking, for a good consideration, to pay them.—In re Collier, Case No. 3,002.

Where all the property of a partnership belongs to one member, and the others have no interest in the gains and profits, such property will be liable in the first instance to the individual debts of the person owning it.—Swann v. Sanborn, Case No. 13,675.

Under the Michigan statute authorizing separate compromises of partnership debts with individual partners, a partner who does not compromise is not liable to the creditor for more than the balance due him.—Lowell Nat. Bank v. Train, Case No. 8,571.

§ 34. Actions by or against firm or partners—Parties.

See, also, ante, § 18.

The bill of an unincorporated company should be prosecuted in the names of the original partners, and not in the name of the company.—Metal Stamping Co. v. Crandall, Case No. 9,493c.

Action for goods sold belonging to a partnership, of which defendant was ignorant, must be brought in the name of all the partners.—Bennett v. Scott, Case No. 1,323.

In a suit in equity for a demand due to a partnership, all the partners must be joined, either as complainants or defendants.—Parsons v. Howard, Case No. 10,777.

On a bill to recover a debt against the estate of a deceased partner, the other partners are proper and necessary parties, and cannot be dispensed with, when out of the jurisdiction, where the case involves their important rights.—Vose v. Philbrook, Case No. 17,010.

When one of two partners sues on a partnership demand, defendant may take advantage of it at the trial.—Coffee v. Eastland, Case No. 2,945.

§ 35. —— Attachment against firm property.

An injunction against attachment of partnership property in a suit against a partnership will not be granted unless it appear that the property is needed to satisfy partnership claims, or that the partner has no interest in the surplus after payment of partnership debts.—Peck v. Schultze, Case No. 10,895.

§ 36. —— Pleading.

A declaration on a note signed by A. & L. without their Christian names need not aver a partnership, where their names are stated in full in the declaration.—Davis v. Abbott, Case No. 3,622.

A declaration on a bill of exchange, payable to a firm, must aver that plaintiffs were joint partners or traders under the firm name.—Lapeyre v. Gales, Case No. 8,081.

If one of two partners be sued on a partnership demand, he must plead the matter in abatement, and set out the names of the partners.—Coffee v. Eastland, Case No. 2,945.

An objection that the contract sued on was with defendant and another as partners can only be raised by plea in abatement.—Clementson v. Beatty, Case No. 2,884.

A separate debt of one partner cannot be set off against a partnership claim.—Lynn v. Hall, Case No. 8,641; Howe v. Sheppard, Id. 6,773.

§ 37. —— Issues and proofs.

In an action for goods sold by a firm, plaintiffs must prove themselves to be the firm.—Tibbs v. Parrott, Case No. 14,023.

It is not incumbent upon joint plaintiffs to prove that they are joint partners.—Woodward v. Sutton, Case No. 18,009.

The fact that plaintiff is suing on a partnership debt in his own name is available to defendant at the trial under the general issue.—Jordan v. Wilkins, Case No. 7,527.

Defendant may show, under the general issue, that the plaintiff is one of a firm which is indebted to him, in the same transaction, in a larger sum than that demanded.—Buckingham v. Burgess, Case No. 2,087.

Plea of general issue held to admit plaintiffs' right to sue in their firm name without proving the partnership.—Maret v. Wood, Case No. 9,067.

Under an allegation of a deed by persons as partners, a deed in the firm name, executed by one partner, is admissible with proof that the others agreed thereto.—Darst v. Roth, Case No. 3,582.

§ 38. —— Evidence.

After competent evidence has been given to prove a partnership, the declarations of one are admissible to prove that the debt is a partnership debt.—Garrett v. Woodward, Case No. 5,253.

The confession of a silent partner, not known in the proceedings, may be given in evidence.—Weed v. Kellogg, Case No. 17,345.

See, also, ante, § 6.

§ 39. —— Judgment and enforcement.
A judgment against a partner individually is a lien upon real estate held by the firm, subject, however, to the payment of the firm debts, and the equities of his copartners.—Johnson v. Rogers, Case No. 7,408.

The officer, where necessary, may take possession of the entire property, and sell the individual interest of the partner, and the purchaser will become a substituted partner.—United States v. Williams, Case No. 16,719.

A judgment against one of the partners will authorize the sheriff or marshal to levy on the right of the judgment debtor in the goods of the firm.—United States v. Williams, Case No. 16,719.

Corporeal property of a partnership cannot be taken in execution to satisfy the several debt of one partner, except to the extent of any interest he would have after full settlement of accounts.—Lyndon v. Gorham, Case No. 8,640.

A purchaser under an execution against one partner becomes a tenant in common with the other partners in an undivided share of the land purchased, subject to all the rights of the other partners and the partnership creditors.—Gilmore v. North American Land Co., Case No. 5,448.

V. RETIREMENT AND ADMISSION OF PARTNERS.

§ 40. Assent to admission of new partner.
A partner cannot compel his copartner to accept a purchaser of the former's interest as a member of the firm.—McNamara v. Gaylord, Case No. 8,910.

§ 41. Authority of continuing partner.
Authority given the continuing partner "to settle all demands in favor of or against" the firm does not authorize him to give a note in the name of the firm.—Lockwood v. Comstock, Case No. 8,449.

§ 42. Obligations of old firm.
The retiring partner will be held discharged where the creditors, with full knowledge of the continuing partner's agreement to assume the debts, enter into a totally new contract with him, entirely changing the nature of the debt.—Harris v. Lindsay, Case No. 6,123.

A firm formed by the taking in of a new partner held not liable for the proceeds of sale of goods consigned to the old firm, unless they came to the use of the new firm, who promised to pay the same.—Edmondson v. Barrell, Case No. 4,284.

§ 43. Assumption of obligations of old firm.
The continuing partner, who agrees to appropriate the goods on hand to the payment of the debts of the firm, becomes a trustee for the retiring partner and the creditors. Sedam v. Williams, Case No. 12,609.

A bond and security given by the continuing partner to the retiring partner, to relieve him from payment of the firm debts and to assume their payment, is not merely an indemnity, but is an obligation to pay, and may be enforced by the creditors.—Hood v. Spencer, Case No. 6,665.

A partnership creditor who knows that one partner has retired under an agreement that the other shall take the firm effects and pay its debts cannot, in equity, take a lien on the joint effects for new advances to the remaining partner, and thereby exhaust them, and hold the retiring partner for the joint debt.—McClean v. Miller, Case No. 8,692.

A continuing partner who agrees, on dissolution of the firm, to pay the firm creditors, is a trustee for them, and a subsequent assignment by him, with preferences, of the partnership effects, is fraudulent and void.—Marsh v. Bennett, Case No. 9,110.

§ 44. Actions after change of membership.
One who sells to a firm cannot maintain an action for the purchase price against a partner subsequently taken in.—Atwood v. Lockhart, Case No. 642.

VI. DEATH OF PARTNER, AND SURVIVING PARTNERS.

Right of survivor, see "Executors and Administrators," § 14.

§ 45. Effect of death of partner.
Under articles of copartnership stipulating that in case of the death of a partner, in order to prevent altercation with the heirs, etc., the shares of the profits and capital of the deceased shall be paid by the survivors, agreeably to the yearly statements of the company's affairs prior to his death, the entire interest in the partnership property passes to the survivor.—Robertson v. Miller, Case No. 11,926.

§ 46. Real property of firm.
On the death of a partner his interest in partnership realty descends to his heirs at law, subject to partnership debts.—Piatt v. Oliver, Case No. 11,116.

Real estate of a partnership, vested in the partners as tenants in common, is subject to a trust in favor of creditors and the partners. Upon the death of one partner, this title descends to his heirs or devisees, subject to the same trust.—Kleine v. Shanks, Case No. 7,870.

§ 47. Obligations incurred in winding up business.
The surviving partner cannot charge the estate of the firm by drawing bills, after the dissolution, for advances on shipments made to its regular factor.—Dick v. Laird, Case No. 3,892.

§ 48. Rights of survivor in estate of deceased.
Surviving partner is entitled to license granted to the firm.—Belding v. Turner, Case No. 1,243.

The administrator of a deceased partner may submit to arbitration the question as to the value of his interest in the partnership.—Hoyt v. Sprague, Case No. 6,810.

§ 49. Actions by or against surviving partners or representatives of deceased partners.
A bill to charge the executors of a deceased partner with a partnership debt must expressly allege the insolvency of the surviving partner.—Van Reimsdyk v. Kane, Case No. 16,871.

The creditors of a firm may enforce in equity the application of the joint estate to the payment of the joint debts against the survivor.—In re Clap, Case No. 2,783.

On a bill in equity to obtain satisfaction of a joint debt out of the estate of a deceased partner on account of the insolvency of the survivors, no decree need be had against the survivors.—Van Reimsdyk v. Kane, Case No. 16,871.

Equity will enforce against the executors of a deceased partner or joint contractor payment of a bill of exchange, where the survivors are insolvent.—Van Reimsdyk v. Kane, Case No. 16,872.

The representatives of a deceased partner are not necessary parties to a bill by the survivor or to set aside, for fraud, an assignment of a mortgage given in payment of a debt due the firm, and to recover such debt.—Pagan v. Sparks, Case No. 10,659.

A suit cannot be sustained against the representatives of a deceased copartner to charge his estate for the copartnership debts if the surviving partners are solvent, and the assets of the firm are sufficient.—Troy Iron & Nail Factory v. Winslow, Case No. 14,199.

A claim against the estate of a deceased partner, accruing, in consequence of the insolvency of the surviving partner, after the statute of limitations had run upon the claims against such estate generally, is not barred, though not exhibited within the period limited by the statute.—Pendleton v. Phelps, Case No. 10,923.

VII. DISSOLUTION, SETTLEMENT, AND ACCOUNTING.

§ 50. Causes of dissolution.

An assignment of all interest in a firm to a copartner, stating that the firm is dissolved except so far as is necessary to continue the same for the final settlement of the business, does not dissolve the firm.—In re Shepard, Case No. 12,754.

Mere insolvency, in the absence of fraud, will not deprive the partners of their legal control over the firm property, or their right to dispose of it as they see fit.—Tracy v. Walker, Case No. 14,129.

One of the partners, having desired at one time to dissolve the partnership, agreed to continue it if the other would make a will in his favor, but no time was fixed for making the will. One was made, however, but was afterwards revoked and destroyed. Held, that the revocation did not justify the other partner in dissolving the partnership, as a will pursuant to the agreement might still be made.—Lyman v. Lyman, Case No. 8,628.

§ 51. Rights, powers, and liabilities after dissolution.

Upon a dissolution, each partner has a lien upon the partnership property, both for an indemnity against joint debts, and for his proportion of the surplus; but the creditors have no lien thereon for their debts.—Hoxie v. Carr, Case No. 6,802.

A debt put at the disposal of one partner after dissolution of the firm may be dealt with in equity as his individual property.—McLanahan v. Ellery, Case No. 8,869.

The partnership is bound by a settlement made by one partner who is authorized by an advertisement giving notice of dissolution to settle the firm accounts, but not by a new note given in payment.—Draper v. Bissel, Case No. 4,068.

After dissolution, neither party, by any note in writing, can bind the partnership, even for a debt contracted by it.—Lockwood v. Comstock, Case No. 8,449.

Admissions of a partner after dissolution are inadmissible to charge the firm.—Bispham v. Patterson, Case No. 1,441.

A bill drawn upon a partnership, but not accepted until after its dissolution has been publicly announced, does not bind partners who did not consent thereto.—Tombeckbee Bank v. Dumell, Case No. 14,081.

A note signed with a firm name after dissolution will not support assumpsit against the partners.—Fraser v. Wolcott, Case No. 5,065.

Notice of dissolution, which will discharge a retiring partner, may be by express notice (by circular or otherwise), or by publication in a newspaper of general circulation.—Shurlds v. Tilson, Case No. 12,827.

Notice of dissolution by newspaper publication is evidence for the jury, under all the circumstances, on the question of notice to persons previously dealing with the firm, and is conclusive of notice to all others.—Shurlds v. Tilson, Case No. 12,827.

Dormant partners need not give notice of the dissolution of the firm. — Bigelow v. Elliot, Case No. 1,399.

A promise by partners to pay notes given by one after dissolution, in settlement of firm debts, is a ratification, and will render them liable thereon.—Draper v. Bissel, Case No. 4,068.

§ 52. Distribution and settlement.

No agreement between the partners on their dissolution can affect the rights of their creditors, unless there is an express or implied agreement by the creditors to accept the continuing partner as the debtor, and to discharge the other.—Harris v. Lindsay, Case No. 6,124.

Under a partnership to deal in lands, the profits to be equally divided after reimbursement of advances by one partner, held, that at the close of the business where the speculation resulted in a loss, the land would be sold and the loss equally divided.—Olcott v. Wing, Case No. 10,481.

Upon a dissolution, one partner is always entitled to have partnership real estate sold, and the other cannot insist that it shall be simply divided between them.—Lyman v. Lyman, Case No. 8,628.

A partner is not entitled to compensation for his services except by special agreement; nor can he exact compensation for services rendered after dissolution in respect to property in his hands, for he is then only a voluntary trustee entitled to actual charges and expenses.—Lyman v. Lyman, Case No. 8,628.

The dissolution of a firm by agreement between its members will not affect the rights of its creditors.—Hudgins v. Lane, Case No. 6,827.

To constitute a settlement of accounts among partners, all must consent to and be bound by it or none are.—Lamalere v. Caze, Case No. 8,003.

The dissolution of a partnership by mutual consent does not affect the rights of existing creditors, nor of those who subsequently become creditors, if the members continue to treat each other as partners.—In re McFarland, Case No. 8,788.

A partnership settlement will not be disturbed at the suit of an executor of a partner, in the absence of error clearly shown, or fraud.—Brydie v. Miller, Case No. 2,071.

Equity will not sustain suit to compel settlement of partnership accounts under a government contract participated in by government agent.—Bartle v. Coleman, Case No. 1,072.

§ 53. Actions for dissolution and accounting.

An action of account will not lie by partners against a copartner who had no hand in the management for a settlement of the partnership concerns, and to compel defendant to contribute his proportion.—Spear v. Newell, Case No. 13,224.

Creditors are not necessary or proper parties generally in a bill between partners to wind up the partnership affairs.—Hoxie v. Carr, Case No. 6,802.

In a suit for the settlement of partnership accounts, where one partner died insolvent, his next of kin or other personal representatives are necessary parties.—Bartle v. Coleman, Case No. 1,072.

All the partners, or their representatives, are indispensable parties to a bill filed to procure a dissolution of the copartnership and an account.—Gray v. Larrimore, Case No. 5,721.

Invalidity of a decree in such case against a partner not properly brought into court.—Gray v. Larrimore, Case No. 5,721.

Upon a dissolution, the court has jurisdiction to order a sale of partnership land outside the jurisdiction, for the order operates only on the parties, and the court can compel them to make conveyances.—Lyman v. Lyman, Case No. 8,628.

VIII. LIMITED PARTNERSHIP.

§ 54. Certificate of formation.
The recorder of the city of New York is a judge of the county court, within the contemplation of the New York statute, respecting special partnerships, and the certificate is properly acknowledged before him.—Hubbard v. Morgan, Case No. 6,817.

Persons dealing with a limited partnership are chargeable with notice as to the scope of its business as set forth in its duly-recorded articles.—Taylor v. Rasch, Case No. 13,800.

§ 55. Contribution of special capital.
In an attempt to form a limited partnership under the New York statute, the contribution by the special partner of a stock of goods, together with cash, instead of cash alone, results in a general partnership.—In re Merrill, Case No. 9,467.

In Massachusetts all the partners are held as general partners, if the transaction, while showing an apparent contribution in cash by a special partner, resulted in fact in putting in goods and debts equivalent to cash.—In re Thayer, Case No. 13,867.

§ 56. Firm name and sign.
Where the names of all the partners are correctly given in a certificate of special partnership, the use of the words "and Company" in the firm name, as a collective appellation to designate the persons specifically named, does not render a special partner liable as a general partner.—Hubbard v. Morgan, Case No. 6,817.

The use of the word "Company" in the title of a firm formed as a special partnership under the New York statute renders all the partners liable as general partners.—Hampden Bank v. Morgan, Case No. 6,008.

§ 57. Withdrawal of capital or profits.
A special partner, who has withdrawn any part of his capital from the firm, is liable, at suit of creditors, to pay it back.—Hampden Bank v. Morgan, Case No. 6,008.

§ 58. Relations between special and general partners.
A common or long-continued departure by general partners, not consented to or acquiesced in by the special partners, cannot change the scope of the business as specified in the copartnership articles.—Taylor v. Rasch, Case No. 13,800.

§ 59. Dissolution.
In Illinois, if the certificate of dissolution of a limited partnership does not fulfill the requirements of the statute, the partnership still continues as to creditors.—In re Terry, Case No. 13,836.

Notice of the dissolution of a limited partnership must be published on the same day in each week, under a statute requiring publication "once in each week for four weeks." 1 Rev. St. N. Y. p. 67, § 24.—In re King, Case No. 7,779.

PART PAYMENT.

Within statute of limitations, see "Limitation of Actions," § 25.

PARTY WALLS.

§ 1, Municipal regulations. § 2, Rebuilding and change of location. § 3, Actions.

§ 1. Municipal regulations.
Under the building regulations, there is no right to build a party wall for a brick house when there is already a frame building on the adjoining lot.—Kraft v. Stott, Case No. 7,929.

It is a condition annexed to the title of lots in the city of Washington, D. C., that the proprietor shall reimburse the adjoining owner a moiety of the charge of such part as he shall use of a partition wall built by him.—Miller v. Elliot, Case No. 9,568.

The city surveyor must attend, when requested, and adjust the line of the front of the building, and his certificate is binding on the parties.—Miller v. Elliot, Case No. 9,568.

§ 2. Rebuilding and change of location.
Where a 9-inch party wall is torn down, it cannot be rebuilt by a 14-inch party wall.—Wilson v. Leiberman, Case No. 17,816a.

A party wall, though built wholly on one lot, after it has remained there 12 years cannot be pulled down by the owner of such lot and rebuilt on the surveyed line.—Wilson v. Leiberman, Case No. 17,816a.

§ 3. Actions.
Under the condition annexed to the title of lots in the city of Washington, D. C., that the proprietor shall reimburse the adjoining owner a moiety of the charge of such party wall as he shall use, the value of such half used may be recovered in an action upon the case in assumpsit.—Miller v. Elliot, Case No. 9,568.

Where the defendant uses a party wall in the erection of his adjoining store, and is put to necessary expense in making the party wall fit for his use, the jury, in assessing the damages, may take into consideration such extra expense, unless the party, or those under whom he claims, waived the defects.—Dermott v. Fowler, Case No. 18,289.

PASSENGERS.

See "Carriers," §§ 38-52; "Shipping," §§ 194-207.

Right to salvage compensation, see "Salvage," § 22.

PATENTS.

I. SUBJECTS OF PATENTS.

§ 1, Nature of patent rights. § 2, Power to grant patents. § 3, Constitutional and statutory provisions. § 4, Arts—In general. § 5, —— Principles or laws of nature. § 6, Processes or methods. § 7, —— Products or results. § 8, Machines. § 9, Manufactures.

II. PATENTABILITY.

(A) Invention.

§ 10, Nature of patentable invention. § 11, Nature and degree of skill involved. § 12, Simplicity or obviousness of device. § 13, Enlargement or change in degree. § 14, Change of form. § 15, Substitution of materials. § 16, Substitution of mechanical equivalents and duplication of parts. § 17, Omission of parts. § 18, Aggregation. § 19, Combination. § 20, Application to new use. § 21, Designs. § 22, Reduction to practical use or operation. § 23, Evidence of invention.

(B) Novelty.

§ 24, In general. § 25, Use of new means or new mode of construction or operation. § 26,

Use of material or device for new purpose or function. § 27, New combination. § 28, Production of new or improved result. § 29, Designs. § 30, Evidence of novelty.

(C) Utility.

§ 31, Nature of patentable utility. § 32, Capacity to produce result. § 33, Nature of product or result. § 34, Evidence of utility.

(D) Anticipation.

§ 35, Prior knowledge or use—Nature and extent in general. § 36, —— Accidental or unintentional production. § 37, —— Experiments and incomplete productions. § 38, —— Unsuccessful devices. § 39, —— Concealed inventions. § 40, —— Different use or purpose. § 41, Evidence of prior knowledge or use—Presumptions and burden of proof. § 42, —— Admissibility. § 43, —— Weight and sufficiency. § 44, Prior patents. § 45, Prior description in printed publication—Requisites of publication. § 46, —— Sufficiency of description. § 47, —— Operation and effect. § 48, Priority of anticipation to date of invention.

(E) Prior Public Use or Sale.

§ 49. What constitutes public use. § 50, What constitutes public sale. § 51, Time, priority, and continuance of use or sale. § 52, Use or sale in foreign country. § 53, Evidence of use or sale.

(F) Abandonment.

§ 54, Time of abandonment. § 55, What constitutes. § 56, Operation and effect. § 57, Evidence of abandonment.

III. PERSONS ENTITLED TO PATENTS.

§ 58, Original inventors and priority between inventors. § 59, Evidence as to originality and priority. § 60, Joint inventors. § 61, Employers and workmen. § 62, Public officers and employés. § 63, Assignees of inventors. § 64, Personal representatives of deceased inventors. § 65, Aliens.

IV. APPLICATION AND PROCEEDINGS THEREON.

§ 66, Description and specifications—Sufficiency in general. § 67, —— Improvements. § 68, Drawings, specimens, and models. § 69, Claims. § 70, Attestation and oath. § 71, Fees. § 72, Examination and proceedings in patent office in general. § 73, Caveats. § 74, Interferences—What constitutes and declaration thereof. § 75, —— Proof. § 76, —— Hearing and determination. § 77, Withdrawal or abandonment of application. § 78, Rejection of application. § 79, Amendment of application. § 80, Renewal of application. § 81, Appeals in patent office. § 82, Conclusiveness and effect of decisions of patent office. § 83, Appeals from decisions of commissioner of patents—Time of appeal and preliminary proceedings. § 84, —— Grounds of appeal and matters reviewable. § 85, —— Reasons of appeal. § 86, —— Hearing and determination. § 87, Remedy in equity for refusal of patent.

V. REQUISITES AND VALIDITY OF LETTERS PATENT.

§ 88, Nature of the instrument. § 89, Form and contents in general. § 90, Execution and issuance. § 91, Validity in general. § 92, Excessive claims by patentee. § 93, Inventions included in same patent. § 94, Patents for same invention. § 95, Correction or amendment. § 96, Annulment or repeal.

VI. TERM.

(A) Date and Duration in General.

§ 97, Date. § 98, Terms of patent.

(B) Extensions.

§ 99, Extensions by special act of congress. § 100, Application to patent office for extension and proceedings thereon. § 101, Construction and operation of extension.

VII. REISSUES.

§ 102, Power to reissue. § 103, Grounds of reissue. § 104, Persons entitled to reissue. § 105, Time of making application. § 106, Surrender of original patent. § 107, Application for reissue and proceedings thereon. § 108, Identity of invention—In general. § 109, —— Evidence of identity. § 110, Reissues for parts of original invention. § 111, Conclusiveness and effect of decisions of patent office. § 112, Reissues of reissued patents. § 113, Validity of reissued patents. § 114, Construction and operation of reissued patents.

VIII. DISCLAIMERS.

§ 115, Right to disclaim part of claims. § 116, Patents and claims subject to disclaimer. § 117, Persons entitled to disclaim. § 118, Sufficiency of disclaimer. § 119, Time of making disclaimer. § 120, Effect of disclaimer.

IX. CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION OF LETTERS PATENT.

(A) In General.

§ 121, General rules of construction. § 122, What law governs. § 123, Accompanying documents and proceedings in patent office. § 124, Effect of patent as estoppel. § 125, Suits for construction.

(B) Limitation of Claims.

§ 126, Operation and effect of claims in general. § 127, Title of patent. § 128, Specifications, drawings, and models and construction of claim in connection therewith. § 129, State of art. § 130, Agreements of patentee with commissioner and proceedings in patent office. § 131, Scope and character of inventions. § 132, Claims for processes. § 133, Claims for machines or manufactures in general. § 134, Claims for combinations. § 135, Including mechanical equivalents. § 136, Claims for compositions of matter. § 137, Claims for designs.

X. TITLE, CONVEYANCES, AND CONTRACTS.

(A) Rights of Patentees in General.

§ 138, Title of inventor before issue of patent. § 139, Assignment of invention or right to patent. § 140, Exclusive nature of right—Articles made or purchased by others before application for patent. § 141, —— Against government. § 141a, Rights and powers of patentee as to making, use, or sale of invention.

(B) Assignments and Other Transfers.

§ 142, Contracts to assign. § 143, Assignability of patents. § 144, Who may assign. § 145, Requisites and validity of assignments and grants. § 146, Construction and operation of assignments and grants—Property or interest conveyed. § 147, —— Rights and liabilities of assignees and grantees. § 148, —— Bona fide purchasers. § 149, Transfer on insolvency or bankruptcy.

(C) Licenses and Contracts.

§ 150, What constitutes a license. § 151, Who may make license. § 152, Requisites and validity of licenses. § 153, Construction and operation of licenses — General rules. § 154, —— Scope and extent. § 155, —— Rights and liabilities of licensees. § 156, —— Particular licenses. § 157, Assignments and sub-licenses. § 158, Revocation, forfeiture, and abandonment of license. § 159, Royalties and license fees.

XI. REGULATION OF DEALINGS IN PATENT RIGHTS AND PATENTED ARTICLES.

§ 160, Power to control and regulate. § 161, Marking patented articles. § 162, Effect of failure to mark. § 163, Penalties for violation of regulations.

XII. INFRINGEMENT.

(A) What Constitutes Infringement.

§ 164, In general. § 165, Knowledge or intent. § 166, Patents for processes. § 167, Patents for machines or manufactures in general—Identity in general. § 168, —— Identity of principle or mode of operation. § 169, —— Identity of form or arrangement. § 170, —— Substitution of equivalents. § 171, —— Omission of parts. § 172, —— Addition of parts. § 173, —— Identity of result. § 174, Patents for combinations—Identity in general. § 175, —— Transposition of elements. § 176, —— Substitution of equivalents. § 177, —— Omission of elements. § 178, —— Addition of elements and improvements. § 179, Patents for compositions of matter. § 180, Patents for designs. § 181, Utility of infringing device. § 182, Experiments. § 183, Making or repair of patented articles. § 184, Violation of restrictions on manufacture, use, or sale of patented article. § 185, Contributory infringement. § 186, Knowledge or consent of patentee. § 187, Injuries from infringement.

(B) Actions at Law.

§ 188, Grounds of action. § 189, Defenses. § 190, Persons entitled to sue. § 191, Persons liable. § 192, Limitations and laches. § 193, Parties and process. § 194, Pleading—Declaration. § 195, —— Plea, answer, and replication. § 196, —— Notice of special matter. § 197, —— Profert and oyer. § 198, Issues, proof, and variance. § 199, Evidence—In general. § 200, —— Opinions of experts. § 201, Damages—In general. § 202, —— Actual damages. § 203, —— Nominal damages. § 204, —— Measure of damages in general. § 205, —— Estimating damages and elements of compensation. § 206, —— Increase of actual damages. § 207, —— Exemplary damages. § 208, Trial. § 209, Verdict and judgment. § 210, Review. § 211, Costs.

(C) Suits in Equity.

§ 212, Nature and grounds of suit. § 213, Statutory provisions. § 214, Defenses. § 215, Persons entitled to sue. § 216, Persons liable. § 217, Joinder of causes of action. § 218, Jurisdiction. § 219, Limitations and laches. § 220, Parties and process. § 221, Pleading—Original bill. § 222, —— Cross bill. § 223, —— Plea and answer. § 224, —— Replication. § 225, —— Amended and supplemental pleadings. § 226, —— Notice of special matter. § 227, Issues and proof. § 228, Evidence—Presumptions and burden of proof. § 229, —— Admissibility in general. § 230, —— Weight and sufficiency. § 231, —— Opinions of experts. § 232, Preliminary injunctions, when granted—In general. § 233, —— Establishing right of patentee by trial at law or exclusive use. § 234, —— Irreparable or comparative injury to parties. § 235, —— Defendant acting under claim and color of right. § 236, —— Threatened infringement. § 237, —— Effectiveness of relief. § 238, —— Discontinuance of infringement. § 239, —— Acquiescence and misleading conduct of patentees. § 240, —— Laches. § 241, —— Discretion of court. § 242, Security instead of injunction. § 243, Against whom preliminary injunction will issue. § 244, Application for preliminary injunction and proceedings thereon—Pleadings and affidavits. § 245, —— Jurisdiction. § 246, —— Effect of prior decisions. § 247, —— Time of granting. § 248, —— Hearing, evidence, and decree. § 249, Dissolving, vacating, and modifying preliminary injunctions. § 250, Permanent injunction. § 251, Violation of injunction — What constitutes. § 252, —— Procedure and punishment. § 253, Damages. § 254, Profits—Nature of profits and right in general. § 255, —— Amount and estimation of profits. § 256, —— Interest. 257, —— Particular instances. § 258, —— Burden of proof. § 259, Reference to master. § 260, Hearing. § 261, Effect of prior decisions in general. § 262, Submission of issues to jury. § 263, Rehearing. § 264, Decree and review. § 265, Costs.

XIII. DECISIONS ON THE VALIDITY, CONSTRUCTION, AND INFRINGEMENT OF PARTICULAR PATENTS.

§ 266, Original patents. § 267, Reissue patents. § 268, Design patents.

Competency of witnesses in patent cases, see "Witnesses," § 46.
For public lands, see "Mines and Minerals," § 9; "Public Lands," §§ 50–54, 72, 94.
Jurisdiction of actions respecting, see "Courts," § 35.
Parol evidence, see "Evidence," § 65.
Right of master to inventions of employé, see "Master and Servant," § 1.
Survival of action for infringement, see "Abatement and Revival," § 5.

I. SUBJECTS OF PATENTS.

§ 1. Nature of patent rights.

Patents are not monopolies, because a monopoly gives to one person or class what was common before, whereas a patent brings out from the realm of mind something that did not exist before, and gives it to the country.—Singer v. Walmsley, Case No. 12,900.

The patent is not for a principle or a result but for the means described for accomplishing the result.—Wing v. Richardson, Case No. 17,-869.

A patent is a contract with the public in the terms of the law, which must be complied with in the same good faith as other contracts, but, as it gives a right of property, it ought to be protected by a liberal construction of the law and the acts of the patentee.—Whitney v. Emmett, Case No. 17,585.

The exclusive grant in a patent is the construction and use of the thing patented.—Boyd v. Brown, Case No. 1,747.

§ 2. Power to grant patents.

Congress has the exclusive power to grant patents, and to renew or prolong the time for the continuance of the same.—Evans v. Robinson, Case No. 4,571.

A retrospective act giving a patent for an invention already in public use is within the power of congress.—Blanchard v. Sprague, Case No. 1,518.

§ 3. Constitutional and statutory provisions.

The statute, by defining the conditions under which the power conferred to issue patents shall be exercised, necessarily excluded all others.—Morton v. New York Eye Infirmary, Case No. 9,865.

An act giving a patent will not be construed to operate retrospectively unless such construction is unavoidable.—Blanchard v. Sprague, Case No. 1,518.

§ 4. Arts—In general.
The word "art," in the patent acts, means a useful art or manufacture, which is beneficial, and which is described with exactness in its mode of operation.—Smith v. Downing, Case No. 13,036.

An art is entitled to protection, as well as the machinery or processes which the art teaches, employs, and makes useful.—French v. Rogers, Case No. 5,103.

The inventor or discoverer of a new and useful art may have a valid patent, though ignorant of the philosophical or abstract principle involved in the practice of the art.—Piper v. Brown, Case No. 11,180.

§ 5. —— Principles or laws of nature.
A discovery of a new principle, force, or law, operating, or which can be made to operate, on matter, will not entitle the discoverer to a patent.—Morton v. New York Eye Infirmary, Case No. 9,865.

The discovery of a law of nature or a geological truth, as that the seams or rifts in oil-bearing rock would, if opened by a blast, yield oil, is not patentable.—Roberts v. Dickey, Case No. 11,899.

The principle that cotton spun directly from the gin produces a better and stronger yarn than cotton after it is baled, is not patentable.—In re Henry, Case No. 6,371.

A patent is not grantable for a principle merely, but only for an application of a principle, whether previously known or not, to some new and useful purpose.—Whitney v. Carter, Case No. 17,583.

The application of a principle to some practical and useful purpose, and not the principle itself, is patentable.—Bell v. Daniels, Case No. 1,247.

The discoverer can only secure exclusive control of his discovery through the means by which he has brought it into practical action, or their equivalent.—Morton v. New York Eye Infirmary, Case No. 9,865; Sickels v. Borden, Id. 12,832; Smith v. Downing, Id. 13,036.

A mere principle may be the subject of a patent, where embodied and applied so as to afford some result of practical utility in the arts and manufactures.—Wintermute v. Redington, Case No. 17,896.

An exclusive right to a motive power by electricity or steam can only be secured by patenting the instrumentality or mechanism producing the result.—Smith v. Ely, Case No. 13,043.

The propulsive effect of the vertical motion of water, in a reaction wheel, operating by its centrifugal force, and so directed by mechanism as to operate in the appropriate direction, is patentable.—Parker v. Hulme, Case No. 10,740.

Where a party has discovered a new application of some property in nature, never before known or in use, by which he has produced a new and useful result, the discovery is the subject of a patent, independently of any peculiar or new arrangement of machinery for the purpose of applying the new property.—Foote v. Silsby, Case No. 4,919.

§ 6. —— Processes or methods.
A novel process or mode of operation which amounts to a successful application of known things to a practical use is patentable as an art.—Roberts v. Dickey, Case No. 11,899.

The claim of the art of cutting ice by means of an apparatus worked by any other power than human is a claim of an abstract principle, and void.—Wyeth v. Stone, Case No. 18,107.

A patent for a method of preserving fish or other articles in a close chamber by means of a freezing mixture having no contact with the atmosphere of the preserving chamber, is a patent for an art.—Piper v. Brown, Case No. 11,180.

Copper-plate printing on the back of bank notes is a patentable art.—Kneass v. Schuylkill Bank, Case No. 7,875.

A patent of one making an improvement on an existing machine, or a new machine, should not be for a method, but for his machine, or improved machine.—Barrett v. Hall, Case No. 1,047.

§ 7. —— Products or results.
A result or an effect produced cannot be patented.—Case v. Brown, Case No. 2,488; Burr v. Cowperthwait, Id. 2,188.

The discovery of a new effect of that which existed before is not the subject of a patent.—In re Kemper, Case No. 7,687.

§ 8. Machines.
Neither the natural functions of an animal upon which, or through which, a new force or principle may be designed to operate, nor any of the useful purposes to which it may be applied, can form any essential part of a patentable combination with it.—Morton v. New York Eye Infirmary, Case No. 9,865.

The embodiment of the principle into a machine as described, and not the abstract principle, is the patentable thing.—Bean v. Smallwood, Case No. 1,173.

A discoverer of the application of a law of nature to produce a particular result is entitled to a patent where he devises machinery to make it operative.—Parker v. Hulme, Case No. 10,740.

Mechanical and design patents distinguished.—Cone v. Morgan Envelope Co., Case No. 3,096.

An improvement, to be patentable, must be in the principles of the machine, art, or manufacture, and not merely in the form or proportions.—Evans v. Eaton, Case No. 4,559.

A new and improved method of producing a useful result or effect is as much the subject of a patent as an entire new machine.—Wintermute v. Redington, Case No. 17,896

§ 9. Manufactures.
New articles of manufacture are not patentable, unless their production involved the exercise of invention or discovery beyond what was necessary to construct the apparatus for their manufacture or production.—Milligan & Higgins Glue Co. v. Upton, Case No. 9,607.

A ruffle made by machinery at one operation, which theretofore required two or more, is not for that reason patentable.—Wooster v. Calhoun, Case No. 18,035.

II. PATENTABILITY.

(A) INVENTION.

§ 10. Nature of patentable invention.
An invention in mechanics consists not in the discovery of new principles, but in new combinations of old principles.—Tyler v. Deval, Case No. 14,307.

Invention is any new arrangement or combination of old or new materials producing a new and useful result.—McCormick v. Seymour, Case No. 8,725.

While the result or effect of a process is not patentable, it may become the test of invention, which may be inferred from the existence of the results.—Treadwell v. Fox, Case No. 14,156.

Invention is the conception, not the final development.—Adams v. Edwards, Case No. 53.

Where a new or improved manufacture is produced by new contrivances, the usual test of invention is whether the production of the article is as good in quality at a cheaper rate, or better in quality at the same rate, or with both these results combined.—In re Smith, Case No. 12,982.

The principle or essential character of an invention involves two elements: (1) The object attained; (2) the means by which it is obtained; and if either of these be new, it may be the subject of a patent.—Wilton v. Railroad Co., Case No. 17,856.

If a change in the mode of operation involves such ingenuity as to show the exercise of inventive faculties, the discoverer is entitled to a patent, though it be the result of accident.—In re Everson, Case No. 4,580.

The various classes of inventions defined.—Union Sugar Refinery v. Matthiesson, Case No. 14,399.

§ 11. Nature and degree of skill involved. To authorize a patent, some inventive skill must be exercised, but the degree of that skill is not material.—Clark Patent Steam & Fire Regulator Co. v. Copeland, Case No. 2,866.

A new and useful device, though involving but little invention, is patentable.—Potter v. Holland, Case No. 11,330.

If a device is new, and accomplishes beneficial results, the court will not gauge by any nice standard the degree of inventive genius required.—Middletown Tool Co. v. Judd, Case No. 9,536.

Features which a skilled mechanic would devise or apply in operating a machine are not patentable.—Barry v. Gugenheim, Case No. 1,061.

The true test of invention is not whether an ordinary mechanic can make the combination, if it is suggested, but whether he would make the combination without suggestion, by means of his ordinary knowledge.—Woodman v. Stimpson, Case No. 17,979.

Perfecting machinery by superior skill in the mechanical arrangement and construction of the parts is not invention.—Parkhurst v. Kinsman, Case No. 10,757.

A person who furnishes the ideas to produce the result is entitled to avail himself of the mechanical skill of others to carry out his contrivance in practice.—Sparkman v. Higgins, Case No. 13,208.

§ 12. Simplicity or obviousness of device. That a combination appears simple, and the invention not very great, is not a sufficient objection to its patentability, if it be not frivolous and foolish.—In re Smith, Case No. 12,982.

An elastic erasive pencil head, consisting simply of a piece of India rubber, with a hole in it to slip over the end of the pencil, is not patentable.—Rubber Tip Pencil Co. v. Howard, Case No. 12,102.

It is not invention to make the legs of a stove long enough to allow a lamp to be placed under it without touching it.—Couse v. Johnson, Case No. 3,288.

There is no invention in placing a box over a sewing machine when not in use, to protect it from dust.—Ross v. Wolfinger, Case No. 12,081.

A pavement made of blocks of wood cut from the trunks or branches of trees in their natural form, laid vertically upon a bed of gravel or sand, is not patentable.—Phillips v. Detroit, Case No. 11,100.

The application to the moving and holding of a rudder of an endless screw working in the cogs on the periphery of a quadrant does not involve invention.—Cochrane v. Waterman, Case No. 2,929.

§ 13. Enlargement or change in degree. A new effect, produced by a change or proportion, may involve patentable invention.—In re Fultz, Case No. 5,156.

Where a change from previous devices and its consequences, taken together and viewed as a whole, are considerable, there is patentable invention.—In re Walsh, Case No. 17,112.

Difference in size and proportion of devices or machines, so long as the construction, principles, and mode of operation are the same, is entirely immaterial.—Cahoon v. Ring, Case No. 2,292.

Enlarging the chimney of a lamp so as to form a globe and a deflector held not an invention.—Dane v. Chicago Mfg. Co., Case No. 3,557.

Changing the location of lantern devices so that the globe may be taken out from the top, instead of the bottom, held not an invention.—Dane v. Illinois Mfg. Co., Case No. 3,558.

Increasing the curve of a wagon reach, and diminishing the diameter of the wheel, so as to allow it to pass completely underneath, where before it only passed partly under, held not a patentable invention.—Flood v. Hicks, Case No. 4,877.

The mere change of spaces of ogee lines so that they may be used for writing paper does not constitute invention.—Cone v. Morgan Envelope Co., Case No. 3,096.

A mere change in the angle in which reciprocating cutters work in a machine for splitting wood held not to involve invention.—Conover v. Dohrman, Case No. 3,120.

§ 14. Change of form. A patent will not be granted for a device differing only in form from one in prior use.—Ex parte Chatfield, Case No. 2,631a.

A change in form, though slight, if it works a successful result not before accomplished in a similar way, is patentable.—Isaacs v. Abrams, Case No. 7,095.

There is no invention in shifting the raker's seat on a harvesting machine so that the raker sits facing the falling grain.—Kirby v. Beardsley, Case No. 7,837.

Combining a curved metal receiver with an elevated instead of a horizontal delivery involves no invention, and is not patentable.—Mann v. Bayliss, Case No. 9,034.

The change of lateral motion from one part of a machine to another held no invention.—Blanchard's Gun-Stock Turning Factory v. Warner, Case No. 1,521.

The substitution of a coiled or lengthened indicator pipe for a straight pipe in a boiler to regulate and control the supply of water held not patentable.—In re Nutting, Case No. 10,385.

The patent law protects simplicity and economy of construction as against prior, complex, and expensive combinations.—King v. Hammond, Case No. 7,797.

§ 15. Substitution of materials. A mere change of material, without the exercise of mechanical skill, is not patentable.—Putnam v. Yerrington, Case No. 11,486.

The making of an article, of a new material, by an old method, is not patentable.—Hotchkiss v. Greenwood, Case No. 6,718.

The making in iron of a frame which had before been made in wood held not patentable. —Holbrook v. Small, Case No. 6,595.

There is no invention in placing on a soft metal gun cartridge a bottom of hard metal, to give capacity for repeated discharges.—In re Maynard, Case No. 9,352.

The double independent leather covering for base balls, where such covering had been previously applied to soft balls, held not a patentable invention.—Mahn v. Harwood, Case No. 8,966.

§ 16. Substitution of mechanical equivalents and duplication of parts.

The substitution of one kind of power for another in operating a patented machine is not invention.—Crehore v. Norton, Case No. 3,381.

The substitution of a wheel and axle for a screw held not to constitute invention.—Blanchard's Gun-Stock Turning Factory v. Warner, Case No. 1,521.

A rubber roller covered with cloth is not an equivalent of a roller with an outer covering of rubber.—Bailey Washing & Wringing Mach. Co. v. Lincoln, Case No. 750.

The substitution of vulcanized rubber for a surface in a steam-gauge cock, in place of a combination of metal faced with cork, leather, or soft metal, held an invention.—Dalton v. Nelson, Case No. 3,549.

A wire gauze dipper, substituted for a perforated dipper, for stirring oil, and raising enough for a single operation, held a mere equivalent.—Harwood v. Mill River Woolen Mfg. Co., Case No. 6,187.

A claim to the use of two deflecting plates, one on each side of a saw, sustained, as not being a mere duplication, although a single deflecting plate had before been used.—Myers v. Frame, Case No. 9,991.

The substitution in a solar microscope of a photographic lens for a microscopic lens is patentable, if the latter did not produce the effect or perform the functions of the former. —Woodward v. Dinsmore, Case No. 18,003.

See, also, post, § 170.

§ 17. Omission of parts.

The omission of an element from a device so that the less number of parts will perform all the functions of the greater may be an invention.—Stow v. Chicago, Case No. 13,512.

§ 18. Aggregation.

A mere aggregation of old devices, in which the parts have no new operation and produce no result which is due to the combination itself, is not patentable.—Sarven v. Hall, Case No. 12,369.

The distinction between patentable combinations and aggregations considered.—Williams v. Rome, W. & O. R. Co., Case No. 17,735.

§ 19. Combination.

Combining elements so as to produce a new and practical result, not reached by their separate action, involves invention. — Kerosene Lamp Heater Co. v. Littell, Case No. 7,724.

Old instruments placed in a new and different organization do not prevent the new mechanism from being patented. — Clark Patent Steam & Fire Regulator Co. v. Copeland, Case No. 2,866.

A combination of old elements is patentable if involving inventive faculties.—Crosby v. Lapouraille, Case No. 3,424; Buck v. Hermance, Id. 2,082.

A new combination, to be valid, must be different from the old one, not only in its mechanical contrivance and construction, but in its practical operation and effect in producing the useful result.—Buck v. Hermance, Case No. 2,082.

A combination of old devices, which produces merely the aggregate of the several results of the devices when used separately, is not patentable.—Hailes v. Van Wormer, Case No. 5,904.

A combination which, by the addition of a new part, produces a new result with greater rapidity and economy than before produced, is patentable.—Gallahue v. Butterfield, Case No. 5,198.

The combination of a movable reservoir with a jet bath, in substantially the same manner as a fixed reservoir was previously combined therewith, constitutes no invention, although the patentee had no knowledge of the previous combination; otherwise if the manner of connection was substantially different.—Larabee v. Cortlan, Case No. 8,084.

A combination of a known tool with a known machine, requiring only ordinary mechanical skill, is not patentable.—Bailey Washing & Wringing Mach. Co. v. Lincoln, Case No. 750.

A combination of old devices, involving only mechanical, and not inventive, skill, is not patentable.—Blake v. Stafford, Case No. 1,504.

To make a valid claim for a combination, it is not necessary that the several elementary parts of the combination should act simultaneously.—Forbush v. Cook, Case No. 4,931; Birdsall v. McDonald, Id. 1,434.

Nor need all parts of the machine which are necessary to its action be included in the claim, save as they may be understood as entering into the mode of combining and arranging the elements of the combination.—Forbush v. Cook, Case No. 4,931.

A combination of machinery for cooling meal in the process of converting grain into flour, with machinery for preventing the waste of meal, held patentable.—Herring v. Nelson, Case No. 6,424.

§ 20. Application to new use.

The adaptation of old devices or forms to new purposes, however convenient, useful, or beautiful they may be in their new role, is not invention.—Northrup v. Adams, Case No. 10,328; Hovey v. Henry, Id. 6,742; Couse v. Johnson, Id. 3,288.

The application of an old process to produce a new result is not a patentable invention.—Howe v. Abbott, Case No. 6,766.

There is no invention in applying an old fabric to a new use.—Smith v. Elliott, Case No. 13,041.

The rule that the application of an old machine or combination to a new purpose does not involve invention does not hold good in the case of the application of a new combination to an old purpose.—In re Hebbard, Case No. 6,314.

A change of a machine, not involving invention, so as to adapt it to different uses, is not patentable.—Swift v. Whisen, Case No. 13,700.

A new application of a principle not producing a new result is not an invention.—In re Blandy, Case No. 1,528.

§ 21. Designs.

A design for a billiard table having no other novelty than a greater bevel than usual in the sides and ends is not patentable.—Collender v. Griffith, Case No. 3,000.

A design must possess originality and beauty to be patentable. Mere mechanical skill is insufficient.—Northrup v. Adams, Case No. 10,328.

A patent for a design must be for the means of producing a certain result or appearance, and not for the result or appearance itself.—Gorham Mfg. Co. v. White, Case No. 5,627.

§ 22. Reduction to practical use or operation.

Speculation must be reduced to practice, and not rest in uncertain experiments, to entitle an inventor to a patent.—Draper v. Potomska Mills Corp., Case No. 4,072; Ellithorp v. Robertson, Id. 4,408; McCormick v. Seymour, Id. 8,725; Ransom v. New York, Id. 11,573; Roberts v. Reed Torpedo Co., Id. 11,910; White v. Allen, Id. 17,535. CONTRA, see Wheeler v. Clipper Mower, etc., Co., Case No. 17,493.

The use of a working model for two or three hours by way of experiment is not a reduction of an invention to practical use.—Stainthorp v. Humiston, Case No. 13,281.

§ 23. Evidence of invention.

The prima facie proof that the person who made the first machine was the inventor is rebutted by proof that he allowed his employer to obtain a patent, and did not, until six months thereafter, himself make application or claim the invention.—Warner v. Goodyear, Case No. 17,183.

Superior utility, where not derived from the use of better material or greater skill or care in the manufacture, is evidence of invention.—Many v. Sizer, Case No. 9,056.

The desirability of an improvement, the difficulties to be encountered, and the unsuccessful experiments of others, tend to show inventive skill in the successful inventor.—Terry Clock Co. v. New Haven Clock Co., Case No. 13,840.

But slight evidence of invention is required when it is shown in what the invention consists, and where proof is given of practical utility.—In re Fultz, Case No. 5,156.

The unopposed oath of the inventor, though not itself sufficient, is some evidence of invention.—In re Fultz, Case No. 5,156.

(B) NOVELTY.

§ 24. In general.

A discovery which is patentable must be new.—Batten v. Clayton, Case No. 1,105; Bean v. Smallwood, Id. 1,173; Evans v. Eaton, Id. 4,559; In re Kemper, Id. 7,687; McCormick v. Seymour, Id. 8,726, 8,727; Sloat v. Spring, Id. 12,948a; Thompson v. Haight, Id. 13,957.

The novelty required by the patent law is wanting where the superiority is obtained by the application of known means, in a known way, to produce a known result.—Smith v. Nichols, Case No. 13,084.

The question of novelty does not depend upon comparative value.—Blandy v. Griffith, Case No. 1,529.

The amount of labor, study, or thought which the invention cost is of no consequence, if it be really a new and useful invention.—Many v. Sizer, Case No. 9,056.

The question of novelty is to be settled by a comparison of prior machines with the machine patented, rather than the machine in use.—Blake v. Rawson, Case No. 1,499.

§ 25. Use of new means or new mode of construction or operation.

New contrivances applied to old purposes are patentable, but not old contrivances applied to new uses, unless there is a change, consisting of a new and useful combination, a material alteration or modification, or an addition of a new device, in which case the new device must be distinguished in the claim.—Bray v. Hartshorn, Case No. 1,820; Brown v. Hall, Id. 2,008.

The production of an old result by a new process is patentable.—Howe v. Abbott, Case No. 6,766. CONTRA, see Draper v. Hudson, Case No. 4,069.

A pavement composed of stone blocks, of which the ends lying in the line of travel are smooth, and fit closely together, while the sides lying across the street are rough, so that spaces are left between them, in which the horses' feet may take hold, is patentable.—Guidet v. Barber, Case No. 5,857.

A device consisting of perforated tubes set vertically in a grain bin, so as to allow a free circulation of air through the grain, thus preventing overheating, is anticipated by a prior invention of hollow perforated side walls for the same purpose.—Ex parte Marsh, Case No. 9,107.

§ 26. Use of material or device for new purpose or function.

The application of an old machine to a new purpose is not patentable, as there is a want of novelty.—Bean v. Smallwood, Case No. 1,173.

The application of a known thing to a new purpose, as the use of rivets to fasten parts of a shoe instead of sewing, is not patentable.—Hazard v. Green, Case No. 6,277.

The application of the principle of the expansion and contraction of a metallic rod by different degrees of heat, to the regulation of the heat of a stove, is the subject of a patent.—Foote v. Silsby, Case No. 4,916.

A patent for an apparatus in which the alkaline solutions for forming carbonic acid gas were kept separate until required to extinguish a fire, when they could be readily mingled, held void, on it appearing that similar apparatus had been employed in soda fountains for the supply of beverages.—Northwestern Fire Extinguisher Co. v. Philadelphia Fire Extinguisher Co., Case No. 10,337.

In the manufacture of hoop skirts the use of strands of twisted cord to sustain the hoops held a patentable invention, where the result was a better and cheaper article though a similar use of such cords was known in rope ladders and other constructions.—Ex parte Newman, Case No. 10,173; Ex parte Mann, Id. 9,032.

A hand mirror with a handle extension of wire covered with cement forming the handle and back is patentable, as distinguished from a brush, though the handles and backs of the two are made in the same way.—Clark v. Scott, Case No. 2,833.

The application of an old device for the construction of the exterior of iron safes to the construction of the interior of iron jail walls is patentable.—Ex parte Jacobs, Case No. 7,158.

The application to railway carriages of an improvement in axles or bearings which was well known as applied to other carriages, held not patentable.—Winans v. Boston & P. R. Co., Case No. 17,858.

The application and use of plaster of Paris to the filling of fireproof safes is patentable.—Rich v. Lippincott, Case No. 11,758.

The substitution of wood for paper in the construction of a box of peculiar pattern does not amount to novelty.—Mannie v. Everett, Case No. 9,039.

The application of a process for preserving perishable foods, to the preserving of green corn cut from the cob, is not patentable.—Jones v. Hodges, Case No. 7,469.

A mere difference in the manner and form of applying an invention, which is the same in principle with one previously used, will not justify a patent.—Delano v. Scott, Case No. 3,753.

A mode of bookkeeping whereby a balance sheet and statement of assets and liabilities are constantly shown on a single sheet, thus obviating reference to the ledger, is not patentable, there being a want of novelty.—Ex parte Dixon, Case No. 3,927.

The previous application of the principle to the regulation of heat, and a suggestion of its use in stoves, will not invalidate the patent to one who first practically applied it.—Foote v. Silsby, Case No. 4,916.

The inventor has a right to use any means, old or new, in the application of the new property to produce the new and useful result, to the exclusion of all other means.—Foote v. Silsby, Case No. 4,919.

§ 27. New combination.

A combination producing a new and useful result, though of old devices, is patentable.—Booth v. Parks, Case No 1,648; In re Boughton, Id. 1,696; Child v. Boston & F. Iron Works, Id. 2,675; Earle v. Sawyer, Id. 4,247; Evans v. Eaton, Id. 4,559; Francis v. Mellor, Id. 5,039; Hotchkiss v. Greenwood, Id. 6,718; Latta v. Shawk, Id. 8,116; Pennock v. Dialogue, Id. 10,941; Ryan v. Goodwin, Id. 12,186; Sands v. Wardwell, Id. 12,306; Tatham v. Le Roy, Id. 13,761; In re Wagner, Id. 17,038; Watson v. Cunningham, Id. 17,280; Carr v. Rice, Id. 2,440.

A combination, to be patentable, must disclose something new, either in the combination itself or in the result achieved.—Ex parte Woodruff, Case No. 17,985.

The mere location of an old apparatus on a machine is not patentable unless it results in a new combination, producing new and useful results.—Marsh v. Dodge & Stevenson Mfg. Co.. Case No. 9,115.

A metallic paint produced by well-known methods from the refuse left in the manufacture of bichromate of potash is not patentable as a new composition of matter.—In re Maule, Case No. 9,308.

A new combination of movable staples at the corners of a traveling bag frame, with a lock in the middle, is patentable as a fastening device, though each had been in use separately theretofore. — Roemer v. Logowitz. Case No. 11,996.

Where the result of a new organization is considerable and useful, and the new article has superseded the old ones in the market, and can be manufactured with less expense, held sufficiently new to support a patent.—Stanley Works v. Sargent, Case No. 13,289.

A new and useful combination of known elements is patentable, though two out of three of them have been combined in a prior machine.—Forbush v. Cook, Case No. 4,931.

The covering of a whip with a tubular knit fabric is patentable, though such fabric and the whip, and the idea of covering the whip, taken separately, were all old.—Strong v. Noble, Case No. 13,543.

A combination of old devices which produces a result different from any of its specific parts, and accomplishes the desired result with a saving of material and force, is patentable.—In re Cole, Case No. 2,974.

§ 28. Production of new or improved result.

A new and useful improvement on an old principle, applied to a new and useful purpose, is patentable.—Evans v. Robinson, Case No. 4,571.

A change by reversing the motion of the beater bars for regulating the feed in a cornsheller, producing a result not before attained, held not void for want of novelty.—Adams v. Joliet Mfg. Co., Case No. 56.

On the question of novelty in a reaping machine, the inquiry is whether the prior machine was identical with plaintiff's, or whether the latter involves a new operation, and produces a new effect on the standing or tangled grain. —McCormick v. Seymour, Case No. 8,726.

Duplication of parts producing a new and useful result may be patentable.—Parker v. Hulme, Case No. 10,740.

A patent for cooked meat put up in a solid form, in its natural state, without disintegration or desiccation, in hermetically sealed packages, cannot be sustained as a new article of commerce.—Wilson Packing Co. v. Clapp, Case No. 17,851.

The method of cutting up meat, preparing it with antiseptics, pressing, putting into cans, pressing afterwards, and then hermetically sealing the cans, is not patentable, for want of novelty.—Wilson Packing Co. v. Clapp, Case No. 17,851.

A claim for caustic alkali incased or enveloped in a tight metallic integument or metallic casing, is good as being a proper subject of letters patent.—Pennsylvania Salt Mfg. Co. v. Gugenheim, Case No. 10,954.

The placing of two or more letters upon spelling blocks arranged systematically held not a patentable improvement. — Hill v. Houghton, Case No. 6,493.

§ 29. Designs.

A similarity in parts to parts of other patented designs will not prevent a design being patentable, where the general result is different from anything known or used before.—Perry v. Starrett, Case No. 11,012.

A patent for a design for a reel, consisting of the making of the reel in the shape of a well-known mathematical figure,—the reel itself, as an article of manufacture, being old,—is not valid, under Act March 2, 1861, § 11.—Wooster v. Crane, Case No. 18,036.

§ 30. Evidence of novelty.

Grounds upon which presumptions of novelty of a patented invention may arise.—Hussey v. Whitely, Case No. 6,950.

The patent is prima facie evidence of novelty.—Batten v. Clayton, Case No. 1,105; Parker v. Stiles, Id. 10,749; Pitts v. Hall, Id. 11,192; Poppenhusen v. New York Gutta Percha Comb Co., Id. 11,283; Potter v. Holland, Id. 11,330; Putnam v. Yerrington, Case No. 11,486; Rice v. Heald, Id. 11,752; Rollhaus v. McPherson, Id. 12,026; Sloat v. Spring, Id. 12,948a; Smith v. Woodruff, Id. 13,128a; Sands v. Wardwell, Id. 12,306; Serrell v. Collins, Id. 12,672; Teese v. Phelps, Id. 13,819; Wayne v. Holmes, Id. 17,303.

The presumption of novelty arising from the patent itself may be overcome by showing that the thing was previously known.—Coleman v. Liesor, Case No. 2,984.

The prima facie case of novelty arising from the patent, even if uncorroborated, will prevail over inconsistent and contradictory testimony of defendant.—Crouch v. Speer, Case No. 3,438.

The presumption of originality arising from the grant of a patent only extends back to the time when the application was filed in the patent office.—White v. Allen, Case No. 17,535.

The testimony upon the issue of novelty must be confined to a comparison of the prior machines with that of the patentee.—Judson v. Cope, Case No. 7,565.

The fact that a later device is better than an earlier one, and has driven it out of the market, is prima facie evidence that it is patentable.—Smith v. Woodruff, Case No. 13,128a.

Where a patent is assailed upon the ground of want of novelty, the patentee may show, by sketches and drawings, the date of his inceptive invention; and, where he has exercised reasonable diligence, the protection of the patent will be carried back to that date.—Reeves v. Keystone Bridge Co., Case No. 11,660.

Testimony of eminent chemists and books of reputation in science and art are competent evidence that a coloring matter patented was not previously known.—Stevens v. Felt, Case No. 13,397.

Claim of utility not made by specification is of but little weight on question of novelty.—In re Bishop, Case No. 1,439.

Superiority over prior invention is proof tending to show novelty.—Birdsall v. McDonald, Case No. 1,434.

Patent for combination cannot be supported by evidence of novelty of one of its parts.—Batten v. Clayton, Case No. 1,105.

The result alone, even when shown to be more economical, useful, and beneficial to the public, in the manufacture of a better article, is not sufficient evidence of novelty.—Yearsley v. Brookfield, Case No. 18,131.

The presumption of novelty arising from the issue of a patent may be rebutted by affidavits on an application for an injunction if the patent is not ancient.—Wickersham v. Singer, Case No. 17,610.

The unopposed oath of the inventor, though not of itself sufficient, is some evidence of the novelty.—In re Fultz, Case No. 5,156.

Decisive evidence that a new mode of operation has been introduced is shown where the practical effect of a new combination is either a new effect, or a materially better effect, or as good an effect, more economically attained.—Forbush v. Cook, Case No. 4,931.

In such case, the amount of thought, time, expense, or experiment required to make the change is not material.—Forbush v. Cook, Case No. 4,931.

The issue, reissue, and extension of a patent, and the fact that it has been sustained in previous suits, create a strong presumption against a defense of want of novelty.—Jordan v. Dobson, Case No. 7,519.

A prior patent of which no notice has been given cannot be considered on the question of novelty.—Odiorne v. Denney, Case No. 10,431.

Mere applications for patents cannot be considered on the question of novelty.—Barker v. Stowe, Case No. 994.

The defense of want of novelty must be made out by satisfactory and preponderating evidence. —Tompkins v. Gage, Case No. 14,088.

A patent can only be overthrown, on the question of novelty, by clear and satisfactory proof. —Herring v. Nelson, Case No. 6,424.

The proof of prior use or previous knowledge, to defeat a patent for want of novelty, must be such as to establish the fact clearly, and beyond a reasonable doubt. Mere preponderance is not sufficient.—Hawes v. Antisdel, Case No. 6,234; Wood v. Cleveland Rolling-Mill Co., Id. 17,941.

Weight and sufficiency of evidence as to the novelty.—Hayden v. Suffolk Mfg. Co., Case No. 6,261.

(C) UTILITY.

§ 31. Nature of patentable utility.

A new device, though inferior to prior devices for the same purpose, is useful and patentable if it be not frivolous nor injurious to public morals or to the well-being of society.—Roemer v. Logowitz, Case No. 11,996; Whitney v. Emmett, Id. 17,585.

The condition as to utility does not require that the thing invented should be the very best article for the use to which it is applied. Practicability is all that is required.—Many v. Jagger, Case No. 9,055.

A discovery which is patentable must be useful.—Thompson v. Haight, Case No. 13,957; Sloat v. Spring, Id. 12,948a; McCormick v. Seymour, Id. 8,726, 8,727; Evans v. Eaton, Id. 4,559; Langdon v. De Groot, Id. 8,059.

"Useful invention" means an invention which may be applied to a beneficial use in society, in contradistinction to one injurious to the moral health or good order of society.—Bedford v. Hunt, Case No. 1,217; Cox v. Griggs, Id. 3,302; Crompton v. Belknap Mills, Id. 3,406, 18,285; Kneass v. Schuylkill Bank, Id. 7,875; Lowell v. Lewis, Id. 8,568; Page v. Ferry, Id. 10,662; Wintermute v. Redington, Id. 17,896.

A machine cannot be pronounced useless or impracticable because it is susceptible of improvement, which will obviate or prevent embarrassments to its most perfect operation.—Wheeler v. Clipper Mower, etc., Co., Case No. 17,493.

The utility of an invention need not be great in order to render it patentable. The degree of utility is not material.—Bedford v. Hunt, Case No. 1,217; Chandler v. Ladd, Id. 2,593; Conover v. Roach, Id. 3,125; Doherty v. Haynes, Id. 3,963; Hoffheins v. Brandt, Id. 6,575; Miller & Peters Mfg. Co. v. Du Brul, Id. 9,597; Tilghman v. Werk, Id. 14,046; Vance v. Campbell, Id. 16,837; Wilbur v. Beecher, Id. 17,634.

There is sufficient utility to support a patent where the invention possesses peculiar advantages, not found in prior devices of a generally similar character. — Simmons v. Blackinton, Case No. 12,866.

That there is a difference in construction which allows the use of an invention claimed in a different way from an invention patented, though seldom required to be so used, does not deprive the claim of the qualities of a useful invention.—Chandler v. Ladd, Case No. 2,593.

§ 32. Capacity to produce result.

A machine possesses patentable merit where, taken as a whole in its construction and operation, it is an advance upon the state of the art to which it appertains, furnishing a better method of performing a useful function than was before available.—Seymour v. Marsh, Case No. 12,687.

A patent of an improvement to prevent loss of life by the explosion of powder mills is properly refused where it appears that it would not have the effect designed.—Ex parte Sanders, Case No. 12,292.

It is not necessary to the patentability of a device that it should have, in itself, apart from any connection with, or application to, other known devices or instrumentalities, capacity to produce practically useful results.—Wheeler v. Clipper Mower, etc., Co., Case No. 17,493.

An invention is patentable if it appears to be capable of reduction to actual practical use, though it has not been so reduced.—Chandler v. Ladd, Case No. 2,593.

The test of usefulness depends upon whether the thing is capable of use for a purpose from which some advantage can be derived; not whether it is not mischievous, or hurtful, or insignificant.—Crouch v. Speer, Case No. 3,438.

A new and useful invention will not be impeached because it does not accomplish all the inventor claimed for it.—Eames v. Cook, Case No. 4,239.

§ 33. Nature of product or result.

The result produced by a process patent must be an improvement in the trade in the commercial sense.—Jones v. Wetherill, Case No. 7,508.

An invention may be good which remedies a theoretical defect, although no injurious effects have been observed in practice.—Aiken v. Dolan, Case No. 110.

Protecting the treadle and pitman of a sewing machine from dust does not involve sufficient utility to sustain a patent.—Ross v. Wolfinger, Case No. 12,081.

It is not material that the original machine was so inferior to other machines used for the same purpose as to have no intrinsic value.—Gray v. James, Case No. 5,719.

A device to form a galvanic battery with the buried portion of a lightning rod, so as to facilitate its discharge of electricity, held not sufficiently useful to warrant a patent.—In re Cushman, Case No. 3,513.

The invention of an ornamental mode of putting up thread, which gave it no additional value, but merely made it sell more readily and for a larger price at retail, held not useful.—Langdon v. De Groot, Case No. 8,059.

An artificial honey, being a good imitation, a new composition, and not deleterious, must be regarded as "useful and novel," and a patent will not be denied on the ground that it will operate to aid in deceiving the public.—In re Corbin, Case No. 3,224.

Ingredients composing artificial honey held not to be considered as mere equivalents of the elements contained in the genuine honey.—In re Corbin, Case No. 3,224.

§ 34. Evidence of utility.

The patent is prima facie evidence of utility.—Batten v. Clayton, Case No. 1,105; Bell v. Daniels, Id. 1,247; Coleman v. Liesor, Id. 2,984; Geier v. Goetinger, Id. 5,299; Parker v. Stiles, Id. 10,749; Pitts v. Hall, Id. 11,192; Poppenhusen v. New York Gutta Percha Comb Co., Id. 11,283; Potter v. Holland, Id. 11,330; Putnam v. Yerrington, Id. 11,486; Rice v. Heald, Id. 11,752; Sands v. Wardwell, Id. 12,306; Serrell v. Collins, Id. 12,672; Sloat v. Spring, Id. 12,948a; Smith v. Woodruff, Id. 13,128a.

Every doubt upon the question of utility should be resolved against an infringer who uses the patented process.—Whitney v. Mowry, Case No. 17,594.

Actual tests are admissible on question of practicability where evidence is conflicting.—Bell v. Hill, Case No. 1,252.

The use by defendants of the patented invention is evidence of its utility.—Adams v. Edwards, Case No. 53; Simpson v. Mad River R. Co., Id. 12,885; Turrill v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., Id. 14,270.

A former license from plaintiff to defendant to use the patented machine is evidence of utility.—Lee v. Blandy, Case No. 8,182.

The fact that subsequent inventions have driven complainant's invention out of use does not tend to prove that it lacks utility.—Cook v. Ernest, Case No. 3,155.

That defendant prefers to use the patented mechanism instead of other mechanism which would accomplish his purpose without infringing is sufficient evidence of utility.—Smith v. Glendale Elastic Fabrics Co., Case No. 13,050.

Acts of the inventor to determine the value, utility, or success of his invention are to be liberally construed if not inconsistent with the clear intention to hold exclusive privilege.—Jennings v. Pierce, Case No. 7,283.

The unopposed oath of the inventor, though not itself sufficient, is some evidence of utility.—In re Fultz, Case No. 5,156.

The presumption of usefulness arising from the use of a patent may be rebutted by affidavits on an application for an injunction if the patent is not ancient.—Wickersham v. Singer, Case No. 17,610.

(D) ANTICIPATION.

§ 35. Prior knowledge or use—Nature and extent in general.

See, also, post, § 58.

The invention should not be known or used as the invention of any other person than the patentee before the application for a patent. Act 1793, § 1.—Morris v. Huntington, Case No. 9,831.

A patent is valid although the invention may have been in use for years anterior to the patent, if the patentee was the original inventor. Act 1793.—Goodyear v. Mathews, Case No. 5,576.

To justify finding of anticipation the jury must find that the alleged anticipation embodied substantially the same organized mechanism operating in the same manner as that described in patents.—Clark Patent Steam & Fire Regulator Co. v. Copeland, Case No. 2,866.

A structure which might have suggested ideas or led to experiments resulting in discovery is not an anticipation.—Parker v. Stiles, Case No. 10,749.

One who exhibits his invention of an improved lock to three lock makers, though he does not put it to any practical use, gives such a knowledge of it to the public as a complete invention as will deprive another person of his right as first patentor.—Coffin v. Ogden, Case No. 2,950.

A combination of a cabinet and sewing machine is not patentable where crude combinations of the shipping box and the machine have been made by manufacturers.—Ross v. Wolfinger, Case No. 12,081.

The construction of a complete machine embodying the idea is not necessary if the discovery has been so manifested before the world that one skilled in the particular art would be able to reproduce it.—Farley v. National Steam-Gauge Co., Case No. 4,648.

Discovery and actual use prior to the discovery by the patentee, however limited the use or knowledge of the discovery, will invalidate the patent.—Rich v. Lippincott, Case No. 11,758.

§ 36. —— Accidental or unintentional production.

A chance operation of a principle unrecognized at the time will not defeat patent to one who discovers principle, and puts it to intelligent use.—Andrews v. Carman, Case No. 371.

The accidental making of an improved article in a single instance, without knowledge on the part of the producer of how it was accomplished, or how to make another like it, is not invention.—Pelton v. Waters, Case No. 10,913.

Prior contrivances which might by a little change have been made into the patented contrivance, though not so intended by the maker, will not defeat the originality of the invention.—Livingston v. Jones, Case No. 8,413.

The fact that the inventor of a feature in a machine which anticipates the patented invention did not understand nor have in view the particular advantage of, or function performed by, such feature, will not prevent its invalidating the patent.—Woodbury Patent Planing Mach. Co. v. Keith, Case No. 17,970.

§ 37. —— Experiments and incomplete productions.

A prior invention, to anticipate, must have been reduced to practical use; the mere conception of the invention and experiments alone are insufficient.—Albright v. Celluloid Harness-Trimming Co., Case No. 147; Allen v. Blunt, Id. 217; Same v. Hunter, Id. 225; Aultman v. Holley, Id. 656; Bell v. Daniels, Id. 1,247; Cahoon v. Ring, Id. 2,292; Gottfried v. Phillip

Best Brewing Co., Id. 5,633; Hitchcock v. Shoninger Melodeon Co., Id. 6.537; Same v. Tremaine, Id. 6,538, 6,540; Howe v. Underwood, Id. 6,775; Judson v. Bradford, Id. 7,564; La Baw v. Hawkins, Id. 7,960; Latta v. Shawk, Id. 8,116; Many v. Jagger, Id. 9,055; Same v. Sizer, Id. 9,056; Matthews v. Skates, Id. 9,291; Parkhurst v. Kinsman, Id. 10,757; Singer v. Walmsley, Id. 12,900; Union Sugar Refinery v. Matthiesson, Id. 14,399; Webb v. Quintard, Id. 17,324; Winans v. New York & H. R. Co., Id. 17,864; Woodman v. Stimpson, Id. 17,979.

"Reduced to practice" does not import bringing the invention into use, but rather reducing it to such form as to remove it from the condition of mere theory.—Heath v. Hildreth, Case No. 6,309.

The making of a model and drawings from which one skilled in the art would be enabled to carry the invention into actual use is a reducing to practice.—Heath v. Hildreth, Case No. 6,309.

Abandoned experiments, however suggested, producing no practical and useful results, do not affect the validity of a subsequent patent to an original inventor.—United Nickel Co. v. Anthes, Case No. 14,406; Union Paper-Bag Mach. Co. v. Pultz & Walkley Co., Id. 14,392, 14,393; Sloat v. Spring, Id. 12,948a.

Prior use of substantially the patented combination, sufficiently to illustrate and test its complete efficiency, is an anticipation, and not an abandoned experiment, though such use was quickly discontinued.—Shoup v. Henrici, Case No. 12,814.

Prior invention will defeat a subsequent patent, though the invention was abandoned.—Colt v. Massachusetts Arms Co., Case No. 3,030.

Machines which never proved satisfactory on trial, and have been laid aside for years, are properly held to be unsuccessful and abandoned experiments.—Parham v. American Buttonhole, Overseaming & Sewing Mach. Co., Case No. 10,713.

A single experimental use of an apparatus in such way as to involve the practice of the patented process, where afterwards destroyed, does not affect the patent of a subsequent original inventor.—Piper v. Brown, Case No. 11,180.

The construction of articles as experiments, never made public, and ultimately abandoned and lost, does not affect the right of a subsequent original inventor of substantially the same article to take out a patent therefor.—Murphy v. Eastham, Case No. 9,949.

A rude machine, constructed for the purpose of experiment, and subsequently broken up, deserted, and abandoned, will not defeat a patent.—Gottfried v. Phillip Best Brewing Co., Case No. 5,633.

A machine never brought into effective operation, and taken apart without intention to reconstruct it, held an abandoned experiment.—Gallahue v. Butterfield, Case No. 5,198.

A long course of fruitless experiments to reduce a principle to practice is not an anticipation; but where a prior inventor has been using reasonable diligence to reduce his idea to practical use his right will be preserved, though he may not have attained perfect success.—McCormick v. Howard, Case No. 8,719.

It is immaterial by whom experiments were made where the specimen was made by the patentee.—Pennock v. Dialogue, Case No. 10,941.

It is sufficient anticipation if the prior inventor performed the operation substantially upon the method which the patentee claims, and with the degree of success which demonstrated its usefulness, though not with the degree attained by the patentee.—Waterman v. Thomson, Case No. 17,260.

Recollection of a prior imperfect machine and its product, and preservation of the same, renders patent void for want of novelty.—Aiken v. Dolan, Case No. 110.

Uncertainty as to the principle of a machine, as well as imperfect organization and imperfect power, held to prevent it from being an anticipation.—Smith v. Fay, Case No. 13,045.

Proof of an article which might have been made by a machine similar to that for which plaintiff afterwards obtained a patent is not sufficient to invalidate the patent.—Treadwell v. Bladen, Case No. 14,154.

An invention held not anticipated by a prior machine, substantially abandoned, and passing out of the memory of those who used it, until recalled by the patented invention.—Hall v. Bird, Case No. 5,926.

The mere fact that a prior inventor ceased to use his invention because he had no occasion to do so will not prevent its being an anticipation.—Waterman v. Thomson, Case No. 17,260.

A trial of a machine in public, which proves the capacity of the machine to effect what its inventor proposed, entitles him to the merit of having produced a complete invention, and cannot be regarded as a mere experiment, entitling a subsequent inventor to a patent for the same invention.—Northwestern Fire Extinguisher Co. v. Philadelphia Fire Extinguisher Co., Case No. 10,337.

Two prior patents, which, taken together, would have made up the invention of the patentee, will not anticipate his invention, where neither of them alone shows the complete invention.—Munson v. Gilbert & B. Mfg. Co., Case No. 9,934.

§ 38. —— Unsuccessful devices.
A machine so imperfect as to be altogether unfit to perform the functions of a later machine will not defeat a claim of novelty in the latter.—Knight v. Gavit, Case No. 7,884; Turrill v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., Id. 14,270.

The previous construction of a machine resembling that of a patent, but which proved unsatisfactory in operation, and was therefore abandoned, does not operate as an anticipation of the patent.—Winans v. Danforth, Case No. 17,859.

§ 39. —— Concealed inventions.
A prior discovery and use of a patented thing by a stranger will destroy the validity of the patent, however limited such use may be, provided it be not intentionally secret and concealed.—Packard v. Gilbert, Case No. 10,651; Passaic Zinc Co. v. Spear, Id. 10,789.

An invention made and used in a private way and abandoned, and not given to the public, to which a subsequent inventor had no access, will not invalidate the patent to him.—Haselden v. Ogden, Case No. 6,190; Hayden v. Suffolk Mfg. Co., Id. 6,261; Hedden v. Eaton, Id. 6,318; Cahoon v. Ring, Id. 2,292; Hartshorn v. Tripp, Id. 6,168.

A written description of a machine, with drawings, not made public, does not anticipate.—Lyman Ventilating & Refrigerator Co. v. Lalor, Case No. 8,632.

A prior discovery and practical use, however limited, will defeat a patent unless such use was secret, and confined to the knowledge of the discoverer alone.—Stephens v. Felt, Case No. 13,368a.

§ 40. —— Different use or purpose.
No machine can be an anticipation which cannot be made to produce, without substantial alteration of its construction, the same results as those of the patented machine.—Rice v. Heald, Case No. 11,752; Zane v. Peck, Id. 18,200.

The rule that a claim for a combination of old instrumentalities in a machine is not anticipated by a prior invention in which the combination of equivalent instrumentalities appears, when the inventor of the second patent has changed the mechanism so as to produce new and valuable results, stated.—Willimantic Linen Co. v. Clarke Thread Co., Case No. 17,763; Gottfried v. Phillip Best Brewing Co., Id. 5,633.

A patent which introduces into an existing machine a new element not used before, which produces a new and useful result, is not anticipated by such prior machine.—Rice v. Heald, Case No. 11,752.

A device for raising the cutter bar of a mowing machine, to pass over obstacles, is not anticipated by a devise which holds the cutter bar permanently above the ground.—Ex parte Emery, Case No. 4,444.

A prior machine for discharging seed in horizontal planes will not anticipate a machine for sowing seed in vertical planes, if it required invention to make modifications in the former to adapt it to the latter form.—Cahoon v. Ring, Case No. 2,292.

An hotel register with side margin occupied with printed advertisements and the middle left vacant for names of guests, held patentable, and not anticipated by city directories containing marginal advertisements.—Hawes v. Antisdel, Case No. 6,234; Same v. Cook, Id. 6,236; Same v. Washburne, Id. 6,242.

The application of paper embossed in imitation of linen to the making of collars and cuffs is not patentable where paper collars and cuffs and paper embossed in imitation of textile fabrics were previously known.—Union Paper-Collar Co. v. Leland, Case No. 14,394.

An invention of a flour paste containing corrosive sublimate to prevent putrefaction, but in such small quantities in proportion to the flour that its poisonous and corrosive qualities are neutralized by the flour, and the paste thus rendered innocuous, is not anticipated by a flour paste in which a larger proportion of corrosive sublimate was used for the purpose of making the paste poisonous and corrosive.—Woodward v. Morrison, Case No. 18,008.

A patent for the separation of a pavement into sections, while it is being formed in the place where it is to be used, is not anticipated by a pavement made of blocks of cement made elsewhere, and laid like bricks or flags.—Schillinger v. Gunther, Case No. 12,458.

A carriage step with a corrugated rubber surface is not anticipated by the use of rubber on shoe soles or stirrups, or corrugated iron for carriage steps.—Rubber Step Mfg. Co. v. Metropolitan R. Co., Case No. 12,101.

A device to raise and suspend a finger bar to an angle of 45 degrees is anticipated by one which raises and suspends the bar in a perpendicular position.—Ex parte Allen, Case No. 207b.

Machine for rolling puddler's balls held not anticipated by machine for making bullets and milling buttons and coins.—Burden v. Corning, Case No. 2,144.

A simple, economical invention is not anticipated by a complex and expensive one.—Gottfried v. Bartholomae, Case No. 5,632.

The fact that the prior use was not that contemplated by the patentee is immaterial.—Stephens v. Felt, Case No. 13,368a.

The prior machine need not have been actually used for the purpose intended, if capable of such use, to anticipate the invention.—Pitts v. Wemple, Case No. 11,194.

Making steam self-packing by introducing it into small grooves in one of two contiguous surfaces held not anticipated by a like device used in air engines.—Poillon v. Schmidt, Case No. 11,241.

A mixture of pulverized argillaceous rock and coal tar, hardening on exposure into a solid slate roof, held not anticipated by a prior use of thin mixtures of the same material for paints for sides and roofs of buildings.—Plastic Slate-Roofing Joint-Stock Co. v. Moore, Case No. 11,209.

A device for mending rents in firemen's hose by clamping the torn edges together between metal plates is not anticipated by a similar device for making preserving cans air-tight.—Ex parte Mackay, Case No. 8,836.

§ 41. Evidence of prior knowledge or use —Presumptions and burden of proof.

The patentee has the burden of sustaining by competent and sufficient evidence his claim that his invention antedated his original application.—Johnson v. Root, Case No. 7,409.

§ 42. —— Admissibility.

A foreign patent is not admissible as evidence to anticipate an American patent of a date anterior to the enrollment of the foreign patent.—Willimantic Linen Co. v. Clarke Thread Co., Case No. 17,763.

It may be shown that the devices set forth in the foreign patent offered to show anticipation are inoperative, impracticable, and worthless.—Harwood v. Mill River Woolen Mfg. Co., Case No. 6,187.

An exemplification of a patent afterwards surrendered and canceled may be given in evidence to show that an improvement, subsequently patented, is not original.—Delano v. Scott, Case No. 3,753.

§ 43. —— Weight and sufficiency.

The evidence on the subject of anticipation must be clear and convincing.—Magic Ruffle Co. v. Douglas, Case No. 8,948; Parham v. American Buttonhole, Overseaming & Sewing Mach. Co., Id. 10,713.

The court ought to be fully convinced, by a clear preponderance of evidence, before declaring a patent void on the ground of prior knowledge and use.—Gear v. Grosvenor, Case No. 5,291.

Priority will not be adjudged on vague testimony, wanting in precision in respect to essential features.—Cornell v. Hyatt, Case No. 3,237.

An anticipation remote in date must be established by more than a mere preponderance of evidence.—Smith v. Fay, Case No. 13,045.

Testimony of the actual construction, by the assistance of witness, of a perfect device identical with the patented device, and prior thereto, held sufficient proof of anticipation, though it did not appear that such device was ever used.—Parker v. Ferguson, Case No. 10,733.

A patent for abdominal supporters for well-formed persons held not anticipated on oral testimony of the construction of several supporters "of the same general character" for deformed patients.—Moody v. Taber, Case No. 9,747.

Reliance will not be placed upon the recollection of a witness who describes a machine from memory only, after the lapse of 21 years.—Ely v. Monson & B. Mfg. Co., Case No. 4,431.

On an issue as to anticipation it is a pertinent question why the mechanism described in the prior patent, and known to the whole world, was not applied to the same uses as plaintiff's.—Clark Patent Steam & Fire Regulator Co. v. Copeland, Case No. 2,866.

In determining anticipation and infringement, the machines or their several devices must be examined in the light of what they do, or what office or function they perform, and how they perform it.—Johnson v. Root, Case No. 7,410.

Testimony that a machine of great merit was anticipated by an old machine, made years ago, will be examined with great care.—Hayden v. Suffolk Mfg. Co., Case No. 6,261.

Positive testimony of witnesses as to the existence of prior mechanism will outweigh merely negative proof.—Sayles v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., Case No. 12,415.

§ 44. Prior patents.

A patent is not anticipated by prior patents, whose specifications contain nothing to aid a mechanic to construct the patented article.—Cahill v. Brown, Case No. 2,291.

The specification of a prior patent, to anticipate an invention of a compound, must state the relative proportions of the ingredients in terms sufficient to enable one skilled in the art to make and use the compound without experiment of his own.—Jenkins v. Walker, Case No. 7,275.

To establish a diversity between a patented device and another, long known to the trade, it is not sufficient to rely upon a description of the result obtained.—Burrall v. Rumsey, Case No. 2,197; Graham v. Gammon, Id. 5,668.

A British provisional specification of prior date will not invalidate a patent unless sufficiently full to enable a person skilled in the art to construct or practice the invention.—Goff v. Stafford, Case No. 5,504.

A rejected application for a patent is not evidence that the thing described was ever used, nor is such description a patent or a publication, within the statute.—Herring v. Nelson, Case No. 6,424.

A new and patentable use suggested in the specification does not prevent the invention being anticipated by a prior machine of substantially the same construction.—Boston Elastic Fabrics Co. v. East Hampton Rubber-Thread Co., Case No. 1,676.

§ 45. Prior description in printed publication—Requisites of publication.

The publication must have been prior to the time when the invention was actually made.—Judson v. Cope, Case No. 7,565; Bartholomew v. Sawyer, Id. 1,070.

The description of an invention contained in a rejected application has not the effect of a publication.—Northwestern Fire Extinguisher Co. v. Philadelphia Fire Extinguisher Co., Case No. 10,337.

A report made to a hose company, describing a hose subsequently patented, is not a public work, within section 6 of the patent law.—Pennock v. Dialogue, Case No. 10,941.

To anticipate an invention by a prior publication, there must be a description of the alleged invention contained in a work of a public character, and intended for the public, which is made accessible to the public by publication before the discovery of the invention by the patentee.—Reeves v. Keystone Bridge Co., Case No. 11,660.

§ 46. —— Sufficiency of description.

A patent is rendered invalid by a prior published description only where that description was sufficient to give to the public a practical knowledge of the invention claimed.—Roberts v. Dickey, Case No. 11,899.

Prior publications which do not so describe the invention that the public may construct and put it in practice without further invention do not destroy the patent.—McMillin v. Barclay, Case No. 8,902.

The patent is not invalidated by statements in an earlier publication, unless such statements are full and definite enough to inform those skilled in the art how to practice the patented invention.—Hays v. Sulsor, Case No. 6,271; Judson v. Cope, Id. 7,565; Parker v. Stiles, Id. 10,749; Stephens v. Salisbury, Id. 13,369; United Nickel Co. v. Manhattan Brass Co., Id. 14,410; Woodman v. Stimpson, Id. 17,979.

A prior description, to invalidate a patent, must be such as to show that the article described in the patent can be certainly arrived at.—Atlantic Giant Powder Co. v. Parker, Case No. 625; Same v. Rand, Id. 626; Cohn v. United States Corset Co., Id. 2,969; Coleman v. Liesor, Id. 2,984; Colgate v. Gold & Stock Tel. Co., Id. 2,991.

An illustration by drawing, unaccompanied with verbal description, is not such a prior description as will defeat a patent.—Reeves v. Keystone Bridge Co., Case No. 11,660.

The invention in a foreign country, or description in a public work, to defeat a patent, must be in principle the same.—Brooks v. Bicknell, Case No. 1,944.

Where the description in a foreign publication is fully as definite as the specifications in the application for the patent in this country, it is sufficient to defeat the patent.—Woven Wire Mattress Co. v. Whittlesey, Case No. 18,058.

A prior description of a part cannot invalidate a patent for the whole.—Westinghouse v. Gardner, etc., Air-Brake Co., Case No. 17,450.

§ 47. —— Operation and effect.

Prior construction or a description in a public work will invalidate a patent.—Brooks v. Jenkins, Case No. 1,953; Judson v. Cope, Id. 7,565.

If the invention has been previously described, it is not material, as against a subsequent inventor, that it was not patented.—Whipple v. Baldwin Mfg. Co., Case No. 17,514.

The description of an invention in a public work will bar the right to a patent, though it has not been put in use.—Ex parte Seeley, Case No. 12,627; Smith v. Higgins, Id. 13,058.

The fact of publication of a manufacturer's catalogue must be proved by evidence independent of the imprint.—Reeves v. Keystone Bridge Co., Case No. 11,660.

§ 48. Priority of anticipation to date of invention.

The patent relates back to the date of the application.—Johnsen v. Fassman, Case No. 7,365; Dane v. Chicago Mfg. Co., Id. 3,557.

The date of invention is the time when the patentee conceives the idea of doing the thing in substantially the way in which he patents it. —Woodman v. Stimpson, Case No. 17,979.

The date of an invention held to be when the same was embodied in a complete machine in actual, though private, use.—Knox v. Loweree, Case No. 7,910.

The date of the invention is the date of the discovery of the principle involved, and the attempt to embody that in some machine; not the date of perfecting the instrument.—Colt v. Massachusetts Arms Co., Case No. 3,030.

The protection of the patent will be carried back to the time when the invention was conceived, if the patentee has exercised reasonable diligence in perfecting and adapting it, and applying for a patent.—Draper v. Potomska Mills Corp., Case No. 4,072.

Patent held, on the evidence, to date back for 12 years before the application.—MacDonald v. Blackmer, Case No. 8,757.

The date of an invention may be fixed by reference to another circumstance, the date of which latter is sworn to by another witness.—Sherwood v. Sherman, Case No. 12,780.

Verbal declarations and explanations of the inventor are competent evidence to give date to an invention.—Stephens v. Salisbury, Case No. 13,369.

To defeat a patent, the construction by another must have preceded the actual invention of the patentee; not merely the issuance of the patent.—Brodie v. Ophir Silver Min. Co., Case No. 1,919.

The foreign patent, to invalidate a domestic patent, must have been granted before the invention here, not merely before the application for a patent.—Howe v. Morton, Case No. 6,769. But see Forbush v. Cook, Case No. 4,931.

(E) PRIOR PUBLIC USE OR SALE.

§ 49. What constitutes public use.

The inventor must sue out his patent while the invention is yet recent, and before it has come into general use.—Thompson v. Haight, Case No. 13,957; Carr v. Rice, Id. 2,440.

Public use if in good faith for experimental purposes will not avoid the patent.—Birdsall v. McDonald, Case No. 1,434; Bedford v. Hunt, Id. 1,217; Boston Elastic Fabrics Co. v. East Hampton Rubber-Thread Co., Id. 1,675; Henry v. Francestown Soap-Stone Stove Co., Id. 6,-382; Morris v. Huntington, Id. 9,831; Pitts v. Hall, Id. 11,192; Winans v. New York & H. R. Co., Id. 17,864; Same v. Schenectady & T. R. Co., Id. 17,865.

Using a machine with a view to an experiment to test its value is a using, within section 6 of the patent act. 1 Stat. 318.—Watson v. Bladen, Case No. 17,277.

Manufacture and sale by the inventor through several years, and the use of the machine by his allowance over six years more before the application, held not an experimental use.—Sisson v. Gilbert, Case No. 12,912.

The use of an invention for mere competitive examination experiment, and test is not a public use.—United States Rifle, etc., Co. v. Whitney Arms Co., Case No. 16,793.

Public use which renders the patent void may be a public use by the inventor himself of a single machine.—McMillin v. Barclay, Case No. 8,902. But see Cleveland v. Towle, Case No. 2,888.

A public exhibition of the invention by a person to whom a half interest has been sold is a public use with the consent of the inventor, within the rule.—Hunt v. Howe, Case No. 6,891.

So is a public use for years by others of machines constructed upon substantially the same principle as that of the applicant, of which he might have had knowledge.—Hunt v. Howe, Case No. 6,891.

The mere using by the inventor of his patent in trying experiments, or by his neighbors, with his consent, as an act of kindness, for temporary and occasional purposes only, will not destroy his right to a patent therefor.—Wyeth v. Stone, Case No. 18,107.

A prior public use which will destroy the inventor's right to a patent must appear to have been with his knowledge and consent.—Bartholomew v. Sawyer, Case No. 1,070; Draper v. Wattles, Id. 4,073; Egbert v. Lippmann, Id. 4,306; Russell & Erwin Mfg. Co. v. Mallory, Id. 12,166; Whitney v. Emmett, Id. 17,-585; Wyeth v. Stone, Id. 18,107. CONTRA, see Kelleher v. Darling, Case No. 7,653.

It is the use, and not the intention of an inventor to use an improvement to be found in plaintiff's machine, that invalidates plaintiff's patent under section 6 of the patent act.—Treadwell v. Bladen, Case No. 14,154.

A "public use" means a use in public, as distinguished from a secret use.—Hunt v. Howe, Case No. 6,891; Blackinton v. Douglass, Id. 1,470.

"Public use" means use in a public manner, and not use by the public generally.—Henry v. Providence Tool Co., Case No. 6,384.

The "public and common use" for more than two years prior to application which will invalidate a patent is a common and general use by the community.—American Hide & Leather Splitting & Dressing. Mach. Co. v. American Tool & Mach. Co., Case No. 302.

The use of an article made by the inventor for himself at his place of business is private and not public.—Adams v. Edwards, Case No. 53.

The use of the invention in the inventor's factories, when not for the purpose of experiment, is a public use.—Manning v. Cape Ann Isinglass & Glue Co., Case No. 9,041.

The use of a machine for profit while perfecting the same, where it was concealed from all persons save the workmen in the business, held not sufficient to invalidate a patent therefor.—Jennings v. Pierce, Case No. 7,283.

The use of corset springs made for a person who subsequently became the wife of the inventor held to be a public use, invalidating the patent.—Egbert v. Lippmann, Case No. 4,306.

A prior use is not necessary to destroy a patent to a subsequent inventor, where the construction of the thing itself shows that it was within the principle of the patented invention.—Sayles v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., Case No. 12,415.

Mere public use by others before issuance of the patent is not decisive against the inventor here, as in England.—Mellus v. Silsbee, Case No. 9,404.

Section 7 of the act of 1836 does not apply to a public use by or under another independent inventor of the same thing.—Ellithorp v. Robertson, Case No. 4,409.

A machine which, if used after the patent issued, would not be considered an infringement, cannot be invoked to destroy the patent if used before such time.—Stainthorp v. Elkinton, Case No. 13,278.

A mere abstract knowledge by others of the preparation of a compound, or of the properties of its ingredients and their effect upon each other, will not defeat the patent, unless there was an actual prior use.—Stephens v. Felt, Case No. 13,368a.

§ 50. What constitutes public sale.

The sale of a single device, embodying the invention, eight years before applying for a patent, will invalidate the same.—Schneider v. Thill, Case No. 12,470a.

A sale of a perfected machine on trial, with the right to return or keep it, where made more than two years before the application, will bar the right to a patent.—Seeley v. Bean, Case No. 12,629.

Act 1839, § 7, providing that a patent shall be invalid where sales were made more than two years before application therefor, does not refer to sales made by persons claiming prior inventions.—Carroll v. Gambrill, Case No. 2,-454.

The public sale of an invention, without the knowledge or consent of the inventor, after the application for a patent, and before the grant, will not deprive him of the right to a patent.—R.an v. Goodwin, Case No. 12,186.

Quære, whether a patent is defeated by the prior sale of an article which is not the whole of the patented invention.—Draper v. Wattles, Case No. 4,073.

An agreement for the transfer of the invention, for the joint benefit of the inventors and those who will advance money for the manufacture or use of the machines invented, not carried into execution, and unaccompanied by any public use of the machine, will not affect the validity of the patent.—Elm City Co. v. Wooster, Case No. 4,415.

Where the application is returned for informality, but is followed up with reasonable diligence, the right of the patentee will not be defeated by a sale of machine, after the application, and before the patent is granted.—Sparkman v. Higgins, Case No. 13,208.

§ 51. Time, priority, and continuance of use or sale.

One prior use before plaintiff's invention will defeat his patent.—Sayles v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., Case No. 12,415.

Neglect to apply for a patent within two years after a sale or public use is fatal.—Blandy v. Griffith, Case No. 1,529; Lovering v. Dutcher, Id. 8,553; Pitts v. Hall, Id. 11,192; Toppan v. National Bank-Note Co., Id. 14,100; Rugg v. Haines, Id. 12,114.

The use in public for more than two years of a machine substantially the same as that afterwards patented cannot be alleged to be experimental.—Sanders v. Logan, Case No. 12,295; Sicles v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co., Id. 12,842.

Under the act of March 3, 1839, a patentee may make, vend, and use his invention within two entire years before applying for a patent without forfeiting his right.—McCormick v. Seymour, Case No. 8,726.

A use or sale which has not exceeded two years before the application for a patent will not invalidate it.—Root v. Ball, Case No. 12,035.

Public use and sale, with the inventor's consent, for more than two years before application, make the patent invalid, whatever hindrances or misfortunes delayed the application.—Sisson v. Gilbert, Case No. 12,912.

A willful omission to apply for a patent for more than two years after knowledge that another is publicly using and claiming the invention as his own bars the right to a patent.—Justice v. Jones, Case No. 7,588.

Where the applications were not for the same invention, and the invention was in public use for more than two years before the second application, the patent is void.—Rich v. Lippincott, Case No. 11,758.

The continuity of an application is not necessarily destroyed by the withdrawal of the first application and the filing of a second one so as to render the patent void because of a public use or sale more than two years before the filing of the second application.—Howe v. Newton, Case No. 6,771.

Use of an invention by public for 11 months will not bar right to patent.—Babcock v. Degener, Case No. 698.

A new, original patent cannot be issued eight years after the invention has been in public use.—Child v. Adams, Case No. 2,673.

In the case of successive applications, public use or sale must antedate the first application by two years to defeat inventor's right.—Adams v. Edwards, Case No. 53.

The date from which the time of prior use or sale is to be reckoned is the date of the earliest application, where the same was rejected improperly.—Henry v. Francestown Soap-Stone Stove Co., Case No. 6,382.

The two-years public use must be dated back from original application, and not from amended specification, 26 months later, where there is no evidence of abandonment.—Bell v. Daniels, Case No. 1,247.

The invention may be fairly held to date back to the time when the inventor made models, and entered into a contract for its manufacture.—Comstock v. Sandusky Seat Co., Case No. 3,082.

§ 52. Use or sale in foreign country.

A prior use alone, in a foreign country, will not avoid the patent.—Bartholomew v. Sawyer, Case No. 1,070.

Evidence of mere use in a foreign country prior to plaintiff's application is not alone sufficient to justify refusal of a patent. Act 1836, § 15.—Ex parte Fry, Case No. 5,143.

Prior use in a foreign land does not invalidate the patent, where the patentee supposed himself to be the first inventor, unless the prior invention has been patented or described in some printed public work.—Hays v. Sulsor, Case No. 6,271; Coleman v. Liesor, Id. 2,984; Roemer v. Logowitz, Id. 11,996.

The independent invention and introduction into public use in this country of a machine previously patented in a foreign country will defeat an application by a second inventor of the same thing, under the act of 1836, as modified by the act of 1839.—Lovering v. Dutcher, Case No. 8,553.

§ 53. Evidence of use or sale.

The burden of proof is on defendant alleging prior public use.—Allen v. Blunt, Case No. 217.

After four years from the grant of a patent, the invention will be presumed to have been carried into public use as against the first inventor then applying for a patent.—Ellithorp v. Robertson, Case No. 4,409.

The presumption is in favor of the patent, where it is doubtful whether there was public use for more than two years prior to the application.—Brown v. Whittemore, Case No. 2,033.

A doubt raised by the evidence as to prior public use or sale for more than two years should be resolved against the defendant.—Comstock v. Sandusky Seat Co., Case No. 3,082.

To invalidate a patent it is not sufficient to show use prior to plaintiff's application, but it should be shown to have been prior to his discovery.—Treadwell v. Bladen, Case No. 14,154.

Proof that at a particular time the inventor made drawings of his invention is sufficient evidence of reduction to practice.—Stephenson v. Hoyt, Case No. 13,373.

The fact that a patent has been issued by the United States for an invention does not, of itself, prove the introduction of the invention into public and common use in the United States.—Weston v. White, Case No. 17,458.

Defendant should clearly show that the use relied on to invalidate the patent was not merely experimental.—Pitts v. Hall, Case No. 11,192.

The defense under the statute is only made out by proof that the invention was on sale or in public use, with the consent and allowance of the inventor, for a period exceeding two years before his application.—Jones v. Sewall, Case No. 7,495.

(F) ABANDONMENT.

§ 54. Time of abandonment.

The inventor may abandon his invention, or dedicate it to the public, at any time before procuring a patent.—Pitts v. Hall, Case No. 11,192.

Abandonment may take place within the two years prior to the application for a patent.—Sanders v. Logan, Case No. 12,295.

An invention may be abandoned after the patent has issued; and an abandonment may be inferred from the neglect to utilize the same, or to assert claims against others who are using it. —Ransom v. New York, Case No. 11,573.

§ 55. What constitutes.

A public disclosure of the invention, and permission of free use by others without objection or assertion of claim to the invention, is an abandonment.—Pennock v. Dialogue, Case No. 10,941.

It is not necessary that the disclosure of the invention be such as to enable the public to use it after the patent has expired.—Whitney v. Emmett, Case No. 17,585.

Mere use or sale within two years of applying for a patent will not work an abandonment without an act showing an intention to abandon the invention to the public.—Pitts v. Hall, Case No. 11,192.

The fact of abandonment must result from the intention of the patentee, expressly declared or clearly indicated by his acts.—Johnsen v. Fassman, Case No. 7,365; Sayles v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., Id. 12,414; Pitts v. Hall, Id. 11,192.

But the inventor and those holding under him are estopped by his declarations of intention from asserting any right against one acting on the faith thereof.—Pitts v. Hall, Case No. 11,-192.

The publication of an invention on discovery by a defective specification is not an abandonment.—Goodyear v. Day, Case No. 5,566.

The sale of a peculiar manufacture, which does not disclose the process, is not an abandonment of the discovery.—Goodyear v. Day, Case No. 5,566.

Putting a number of cooking stoves out for trial in several families, for experiment and improvement, held not an abandonment.—Stanley v. Hewitt, Case No. 13,285.

An abandonment may be found from the fact that an inventor laid the parts of his machine aside, and did nothing more for four years to perfect his invention.—Johnson v. Root, Cases Nos. 7,409, 7,410.

An inventor who knowingly suffers his invention to be in public use for years without objection dedicates the same to the public.—Mellus v. Silsbee, Case No. 9,404.

Merely withholding an invention from the public does not amount to an abandonment.—Babcock v. Degener, Case No. 698; Russell & Erwin Mfg. Co. v. Mallory, Id. 12,166; Wood v. Cleveland Rolling Mill Co., Case No. 17,941; Same v. Union Iron-Works Co., Id.

Unless another in the meantime make the invention and secure a patent therefor.—Kelleher v. Darling, Case No. 7,653; Berg v. Thistle, Id. 1,337; Spear v. Belson, Id. 13,223.

Concealment of invention, because of information that another had anticipated it, will not forfeit right to patent.—Ayling v. Hull, Case No. 686.

A delay of over four years in filing an application, during which time another has invented the same thing and applied for a patent, will bar the first inventor's right.—Savary v. Lauth, Case No. 12,389.

An inventor who does not reduce his invention to practice, or apply for a patent till after 18 months, others in the meantime having invented the same thing, and reduced it to practice, cannot recover for a breach of his patent.—Wilton v. Railroad Co., Case No. 17,856.

Delay of four years after filing caveat will not defeat right where constant effort was made to perfect invention.—Appleton v. Chambers, Case No. 497a.

An abandonment cannot be predicated upon two years' delay in filing the application, due wholly to the neglect of the patentee's solicitors, of which he was ignorant.—Birdsall v. McDonald, Case No. 1,434.

A patent will be held invalid where there was unreasonable delay in making application, after another inventor had made public the invention. —Ransom v. New York, Case No. 11,573.

A delay of over five years in applying for a patent without any excuse except financial inability will bar the right, where a patent has in the meantime issued to another independent inventor, with the applicant's knowledge.—Spear v. Belson, Case No. 13,223.

The inventor who first perfected the invention did not apply for a patent until 14 months later, and nearly a year after another had applied for a patent, and after a patent had been issued to him. Held, that he was not entitled to a patent where no excuse was given for his delay.—Walker v. Forbes, Case No. 17,069.

A delay of four years before applying for a patent held not an abandonment, where the inventor was in straitened circumstances, and there was no acquiescence in the acts of intervening inventors.—Sprague v. Adriance, Case No. 13,248.

Loss of means by one of two joints inventors, rendering him unable to prosecute his plans in respect to the invention, combined with the assurance of his co-inventor that when the latter should move in the matter of procuring a patent the former should have an equal interest therein, held to excuse laches.—Yearsley v. Brookfield, Case No. 18,131.

Poverty is not to be accepted as an excuse for delay when it appears that during the period of the delay the inventor was able to find money and friends to prosecute other applications for patents both in this country and England, and even to go to England himself to urge his claims.—Wickersham v. Singer, Case No. 17,-610.

A delay for three years after an invention was perfected held not an abandonment where the inventor, during such delay, was in the employ of a person who held a prior and controlling patent, which prevented the use of his improvement.—White v. Allen, Case No. 17,535.

An inventor is not prejudiced by a delay in applying for a patent, where he is diligently experimenting as to other forms of the same invention, and machinery to perfect it.—Mix v. Perkins, Case No. 9,677; Hill v. Dunklee, Id. 6,489; Jones v. Sewall, Id. 7,495.

Delay by an inventor residing in the Confederate States held not an abandonment, where the invention was so guarded that no knowledge of it came to the public.—Knox v. Loweree, Case No. 7,910.

Eleven years' delay after making complete drawings before filing an application, where the invention had gone into use in the meantime under patent to a later discoverer, held an abandonment, where the only excuse was a mistaken belief that the drawings had been burned.—Ellithorp v. Robertson, Cases Nos. 4,409, 4,410.

A delay of three years after showing forth a complete invention on paper held not to bar a patent, where no patent had been previously granted, and the case involved only conflicting applications.—Perry v. Cornell, Case No. 11,002.

A delay of not quite two years from the date of perfecting a design before applying for a patent is not such laches as will defeat the inventor's right, when he has not used or sold the invention for profit, or secreted it.—Gibbs v. Ellithorp, Case No. 5,383.

The first inventor's delay to apply for a patent for eight years after the second inventor has secured one bars him from thereafter making application.—Marcy v. Trotter, Case No. 9,063.

A disuse after the patent is granted is not an abandonment of the rights of the patentee.—Gray v. James, Case No. 5,718.

Involuntary delays in prosecuting application will not work a forfeiture.—Adams v. Jones, Case No. 57; Dental Vulcanite Co. v. Wetherbee, Id. 3,810.

An alien patentee need not take active measures for putting his invention in the market within 18 months after the grant. It is sufficient if he is ready at all times to sell at a fair price when a reasonable offer is made. Act 1836, § 15.—Tatham v. Le Roy, Case No. 13,-761; Same v. Lowber, Id. 13,764.

An applicant cannot be prejudiced by failure of the officers of the patent office to give information of his application to a person who makes inquiry there in regard to it.—Sparkman v. Higgins, Case No. 13,208.

See, also, post, § 80.

§ 56. Operation and effect.

An abandonment or dedication once made cannot be recalled.—Ransom v. New York, Case No. 11,573; Batten v. Taggert, Id. 1,107.

The abandonment of a perfected invention after its merit has been demonstrated by trial will inure to the benefit of the public, and not to that of a subsequent inventor.—Pickering v. McCullough, Case No. 11,121; Sayles v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., Id. 12,414; Shoup v. Henrici, Id. 12,814.

If an inventor make a gift of his invention to the public, and suffer it to go into general use, he cannot afterwards resume the invention, and hold a patent.—Whittemore v. Cutter, Case No. 17,601.

The abandonment of the right to a patent by the original inventor does not entitle another to a patent therefor.—Evans v. Eaton, Case No. 4,559; Same v. Hettick, Id. 4,562.

§ 57. Evidence of abandonment.

The issue of letters patent is prima facie evidence that there has been no abandonment.—Johnsen v. Fassman, Case No. 7,365.

A reissue is prima facie evidence that there has been no abandonment.—Hoffheins v. Brandt, Case No. 6,575.

A presumption of abandonment will not obtain from the lapse of six years after putting down a pavement before applying for a patent, in the face of a manifest contrary intent.—American Nicholson Pavement Co. v. Elizabeth, Case No. 311.

Experimental use of an invention made in public from necessity is not a public use, and is no evidence of abandonment.—Locomotive Engine Safety Truck Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., Case No. 8,453.

The imparting to others by the inventor of imperfect and crude descriptions, at a time when he did not have a complete conception of the invention, is no evidence of an intention to abandon.—Locomotive Engine Safety Truck Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., Case No. 8,453.

Use of the invention without the inventor's consent during delays in the patent office is no evidence of abandonment.—Jones v. Sewall, Case No. 7,495.

An admission as to time of discovery, made deliberately to intending purchaser, is admissible against inventor to prove laches.—Berg v. Thistle, Case No. 1,337.

On the question of abandonment the patentee is entitled to give evidence of the filing of his drawings, or of any other act done by him in assertion of his right.—Emerson v. Hogg, Case No. 4,440.

Proof of knowledge of and acquiescence in the use by others, to show an abandonment, must be beyond all reasonable doubt.—Jones v. Sewall, Case No. 7,495.

Undisputed acts of abandonment are entitled to more weight than testimony of an intent not to abandon.—Bevin v. East Hampton Bell Co., Case No. 1,379.

Facts held not to constitute a dedication of a patented product to a patented use.—Goodyear v. Blake, Case No. 5,560.

Application is conclusive evidence of intent not to abandon invention.—Adams v. Jones, Case No. 57.

Under the act of 1839 abandonment is proved only by public use for the required time.—Andrews v. Carman, Case No. 371; Same v. Wright, Id. 382.

If the patentee, after obtaining his patent, dedicates or surrenders it to public use, or acquiesces for a long period in the public use thereof, without objection, he is not entitled to the aid of a court of equity to protect his patent; and such acquiescence may amount to complete proof of a dedication or surrender thereof to the public.—Wyeth v. Stone, Case No. 18,107.

During two years before application made, the inventor may publicly use and sell his invention without any presumption of abandonment.—McMillin v. Barclay, Case No. 8,902.

The mere fact of making, selling, or putting in public use, within two years prior to application, does not show an abandonment. There must be something more, indicating an intention to devote the invention to the public.—McCormick v. Seymour, Case No. 8,726.

III. PERSONS ENTITLED TO PATENTS.

§ 58. Original inventors and priority between inventors.

The patentee must not only be an original inventor, but the first inventor.—Hayden v. Suffolk Mfg. Co., Case No. 6,261; Lowell v. Lewis, Id. 8,568; Reed v. Cutter, Id. 11,645; Roemer v. Simon, Id. 11,997; Spain v. Gamble, Id. 13,199.

First inventor is the original discoverer first perfecting and adapting invention to actual use.—Albright v. Celluloid Harness-Trimming Co., Case No. 147; Cox v. Griggs, Id. 3,302.

Suggestions made to a person who has conceived the idea of his invention, while he is in the process of developing it, will not affect his right to a patent.—Spaulding v. Tucker, Case No. 13,220.

Communications to the patentee by one who has a distinct conception of the invention, so as to enable the patentee to construct the thing itself, destroys its originality.—Alden v. Dewey, Case No. 153; Judson v. Moore, Id. 7,569; Pitts v. Hall, Id. 11,192; Thomas v. Weeks, Id. 13,914.

Suggestions made by a mechanic who constructed the first machine, as to its forms or proportions, though incorporated in the specification of the patent, will not invalidate it.—Pennock v. Dialogue, Case No. 10,941; Watson v. Bladen, Id. 17,277.

Where there was no product of the machine invented until after the maker had seen similar machines of another for the same purpose, he is not the prior inventor.—Carter v. Carter, Case No. 2,475.

The first discoverer of a mode of combining elements and means previously known into one organized machine, to accomplish the end desired, is the original inventor of such machine.—Sloat v. Spring, Case No. 12,948a.

The person who first makes known the principle of the invention, so that another would be able, from his description, to put it in use, is the first inventor, though he did not put it into practical operation.—Hill v. Dunklee, Case No. 6,489.

An inventor who described his invention to a workman, so as to enable the latter to construct it, will be entitled to a patent, if due diligence is used, as against a subsequent inventor, who first perfected his machine and obtained a patent.—Dietz v. Wade, Case No. 3,903.

The first inventor need not have constructed a practical machine, though a subsequent inventor has done so; nor must he have reduced the invention to practice, otherwise than by filing specifications and drawings and furnishing a model.—New England Screw Co. v. Sloan, Case No. 10,158; Perry v. Cornell, Id. 11,002.

Where an invention is voluntarily broken up and laid aside, a subsequent independent inventor who reduces the same to practice, and applies for and takes out his patent, introduces the invention into public use, and must be regarded as the original and first inventor.—White v. Allen, Case No. 17,535; Union Paper-Bag Mach. Co. v. Pultz & Walkley Co., Id. 14,392; Packard v. Gilbert, Id. 10,651. But see Rich v. Lippincott, Case No. 11,758.

Priority of conception, followed by a prior patent, gives priority of right.—Sayles v. Hapgood, Case No. 12,420.

The original inventor of a machine, who has reduced his invention to practice, is entitled to a priority of patent right, although subsequently the same machine may have been invented by another person.—Woodcock v. Parker, Case No. 17,971; Nichols v. Pearce, Id. 10,246.

One first conceiving an invention, and using reasonable diligence to perfect it, and doing so in fact, is entitled to a patent over a subsequent original inventor who first reduces it to actual use.—Bartholomew v. Sawyer, Case No. 1,070; Chandler v. Ladd, Id. 2,593; Davidson v. Lewis, Id. 3,606; Heath v. Hildreth, Id. 6,309; Hicks v. Shaver, Id. 6,462; Marshall v. Mee, Id. 9,129; Mix v. Perkins, Id. 9,677; Phelps v. Brown, Id. 11,072; Reed v. Cutter, Id. 11,645; Reeves v. Keystone Bridge Co., Id. 11,660; White v. Allen, Id. 17,535; Stearns v. Davis, Id. 13,338. But see Goodyear v. Day, Case No. 5,569; Ransom v. New York, Id. 11,573; Reed v. Cutter, Id. 11,645; Reeves v. Keystone Bridge Co., Id. 11,660; Smith v. Prior, Id. 13,095; Washburn v. Gould, Id. 17,214; Winans v. New York & H. R. Co., Id. 17,864.

The person who has made a model of the invention before another inventor has made a model or drawing, though he has previously described it to others, first perfects the invention. —Walker v. Forbes, Case No. 17,069.

But the mere making of a model by a person does not constitute invention, as against a patent granted another for the same thing.—Stilwell & Bierce Mfg. Co. v. Cincinnati Gaslight & Coke Co., Case No. 13,453.

The want of knowledge of the utility of an invention by the first discoverer will not prevent his being entitled to a patent as against a subsequent inventor.—Farley v. National Steam-Gauge Co., Case No. 4,648.

The fact that a subsequent equivalent invention makes a more durable product will not affect the question of priority.—Mix v. Perkins, Case No. 9,677.

One who made an invention in 1846 and filed his application in 1851, and was attempting to perfect the machine in the meantime, held entitled to a patent, as against another who invented the same thing in 1849 and applied for a patent in 1852.—New England Screw Co. v. Sloan, Case No. 10,158.

The fact that the patentee takes into partnership the assignees of another, who also claims to be the original inventor, instead of litigating the question of priority, is not an admission of priority, if the arrangement is induced by fraud.—Sloat v. Spring, Case No. 12,948a.

As between an inventor, unsuccessfully experimenting with the invention, and one who, with knowledge thereof, perfects the process and operation, the former is the prior inventor. —Burrows v. Wetherill, Case No. 2,208.

If two persons are jointly experimenting and equally meritorious, a doubt should be solved in favor of him who first obtains a patent.—Cox v. Griggs, Case No. 3,302.

The patentee cannot carry back his invention to a period before the attempted restoration of a machine which four years before he had taken apart as incomplete, where in the meantime another has perfected and patented the same machine, and placed it on the market.—Johnson v. Root, Case No. 7,409.

Priority of invention between two patents, upon both of which the suit is brought, is not material, unless defendant shows that a third person claims to have made the invention between the date of the two patents.—Richardson v. Noyes, Case No. 11,792.

See, also, ante, §§ 35–48.

§ 59. Evidence as to originality and priority.

The patent is prima facie evidence that the patentee was the first inventor.—Brodie v. Ophir Silver Min. Co., Case No. 1,919; Brooks v. Jenkins, Id. 1,953; Doherty v. Haynes, Id. 3,963; Fisk v. Church, Id. 4,826; Goodyear Dental Vulcanite Co. v. Gardiner, Id. 5,591; Haskell v. Shoe Machinery Mfg. Co., Id. 6,194; Johnson v. Root, Id. 7,409, 7,410; Knight v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., Id. 7,882; McMillin v. Barclay, Id. 8,902; Parker v. Remhoff, Id. 10,747; Pitts v. Hall, Id. 11,192; Poppenhusen v. New York Gutta Percha Comb Co., Id. 11,283; Potter v. Holland, Id. 11,330; Putnam v. Yerrington, Id. 11,486; Rice v. Heald, Id. 11,752; Sands v. Wardwell, Id. 12,306; Serrell v. Collins, Id. 12,672; Sloat v. Spring, Id. 12,948a; Smith v. Woodruff, Id. 13,128a; Washburn v. Gould, Id. 17,214.

The presumption, arising from the letters patent, that the patentee was the original and first inventor, in the absence of the application for the patent, extends back only to the date of the letters patent, and in no case does it extend further back than to the time of the filing of the original application.—Wing v. Richardson, Case No. 17,869; Union Sugar Refinery v. Matthiesson, Id. 14,399.

The testimony of a witness that he made and peddled the patented article six months before the date of plaintiff's application held sufficient to overcome the prima facie evidence of the patent that plaintiff was the first inventor.—Riley v. Daniels, Case No. 11,837.

When a defendant has shown prior knowledge and use, the burden of showing prior invention is on the plaintiff.—Webster Loom Co. v. Higgins, Case No. 17,342.

Where a foreign patent, granted before the application of the American patentee, is relied upon to destroy the novelty of the American patent, the patentee may prove that his invention was made prior to the granting of the foreign patent.—White v. Allen, Case No. 17,535.

The prima facie force of a patent as to priority of invention is absolutely destroyed by evidence of priority of invention by another.—Barstow v. Swan, Case No. 1,065.

The extension of a patent resisted on the ground of want of novelty strengthens the presumption that the patentee was the original inventor.—Cook v. Ernest, Case No. 3,155.

Complainant is not required, in addition to his patent, to present, in the first instance, full evidence that he is the first inventor. Very slight evidence thereof is sufficient to put defendant on his justification.—Stevens v. Felt, Case No. 13,397.

The applicant's oath, at the time of the application, that he believed that he was the first inventor, is sufficient evidence of that fact, where uncontradicted.—Bartholomew v. Sawyer, Case No. 1,070.

Sufficiency of evidence to show priority of invention.—Beach v. Tucker, Case No. 1,153.

The declarations and conversations of a person made at the time of exhibiting and explaining his invention are a part of the res gestæ, and admissible to prove priority of invention.—Gibbs v. Johnson, Case No. 5,384.

§ 60. Joint inventors.
One who reduces to practice theory of another by his help is not the sole inventor.—Arnold v. Bishop, Case No. 552.

To overthrow the presumption of joint invention raised by the filing of a joint application upon a joint oath, the evidence must be clear and unequivocal.—Gottfried v. Phillip Best Brewing Co., Case No. 5,633.

Joint invention is the result of mutual contributions of the parties.—Gottfried v. Phillip Best Brewing Co., Case No. 5,633.

A person employed to make experiments under a contract by which the employer is to be treated as inventor, although conducting such experiments to a successful issue, held neither a sole nor a joint inventor.—Dental Vulcanite Co. v. Wetherbee, Case No. 3,810.

Where the inventor of a machine and the inventor of an improvement agree to mutually use the same, the patent must issue in the name of both; and, where issued in the name of one only, there can be no recovery for infringement.—Reutgen v. Kanowrs, Case No. 11,-710.

A joint patent may be issued to two persons, where each has invented a distinct improvement on the same machine, the object sought to be attained being a unit, and the legal effect thereof is to vest in each of them a joint interest in both improvements.—Wilson v. Singer, Case No. 17,835.

A patent issued to two for a thing which is the sole invention of one is invalid.—Ransom v. New York, Case No. 11,573.

A joint patent cannot be obtained for a sole invention of one.—Barrett v. Hall, Case No. 1,047.

§ 61. Employers and workmen.
Improvements introduced by workmen without patentee's knowledge cannot be appropriated by him.—Berdan Fire-Arms Mfg. Co. v. Remington, Case No. 1,336.

The employer is the inventor where he conceives the result, and employs others to carry the conception out, even though the latter use inventive skill in the details.—Wellman v. Blood, Case No. 17,385; Same v. Woodman, Id.

An employer who conceives the general idea of a machine, but uses the manual dexterity or even the inventive skill of his servant in carrying out the mechanical details, is entitled to a patent, as against the servant.—King v. Gedney, Case No. 7,795.

§ 62. Public officers and employés.
The commissioner of patents is not disqualified from obtaining a patent after expiration of his term of office, for an invention made during such term.—Foote v. Frost, Case No. 4,910.

§ 63. Assignees of inventors.
A patent taken out by assignees of an alien and nonresident inventor is invalid.—Tatham v. Loring, Case No. 13,763.

§ 64. Personal representatives of deceased inventors.
On the death of the inventor, the patent may be issued to his executor as such, though it is not stated to be in trust for the devisees in the will. Act July 4, 1836, § 10.—Stimpson v. Rogers, Case No. 13,457.

§ 65. Aliens.
A naturalized subject of Great Britain, who subsequently takes up his residence in Canada, is entitled to take out letters patent there.—Stainthorp v. Humiston, Case No. 13,281.

The oath of citizenship and other duties required by Act July 4, 1836, § 6, are conditions precedent to the authority to issue a patent.—Child v. Adams, Case No. 2,673.

A foreign patentee may at any time during the life of the foreign patent obtain a patent in this country, provided the invention shall not have been introduced into public use in this country for more than two years prior to the application. Act 1870.—Henry v. Providence Tool Co., Case No. 6,384.

IV. APPLICATION AND PROCEEDINGS THEREON.

§ 66. Description and specifications—Sufficiency in general.

See, also, post, § 92.

The thing invented must be so described as to be distinguished and known.—Brooks v. Jenkins, Case No. 1,953.

The patent is invalid where the invention is not described with reasonable certainty and precision.—Parker v. Stiles, Case No. 10,749.

Technical defect in description will not defeat patent.—Adams v. Joliet Mfg. Co., Case No. 56.

The title or description given to the invention in the patent is not expected to be specific, but only to indicate the nature and design of the invention.—Sickles v. Gloucester Mfg. Co., Case No. 12,841.

A mere error of judgment in describing the invention is not sufficient to invalidate the patent. Whitney v. Carter, Case No. 17,583.

Mistake in expression shown to be such by other parts of the specification will not vitiate a patent.—Kneass v. Schuylkill Bank, Case No. 7,875.

A specification, alleged to be defective in not pointing out the means of operation, must be read in view of the preceding state of the art immediately connected with the particular subject-matter.—Tompkins v. Gage, Case No. 14,-088.

Failure of a patentee to mention in his specification an indispensable addition renders his title bad.—Carr v. Rice, Case No. 2,440.

Incompleteness of prior application is no evidence of a change in patentable features, where it appears that the machines are identical.—Ex parte Hayden, Case No. 6,256.

The concluding part of the application where the applicant sums up what he claims as new will control. The court looks at the other parts only in case of doubt. — Whipple v. Baldwin Mfg. Co., Case No. 17,514.

If the description clearly indicates the method of the use of the thing claimed, and its relations to the other mechanical elements operating with it, a claim for a combination of part of them is good, although it may not embrace some that are essential to the operative efficiency of the combination.—Parham v. American Buttonhole, Overseaming & Sewing Mach. Co., Case No. 10,713.

A patent is not invalidated by the fact that the invention claimed in it is described, but not claimed, in another patent granted pending the application.—Singer v. Braunsdorf, Case No. 12,-897.

Where the specification of a patent for a product fully describes the machine, and the process by which the product is produced, such patent may be good, even though the same specification, annexed to a patent for the machine, may not fully secure the patentee against the use of his actual invention because of a defect in the claim of the latter patent.—Waterbury Brass Co. v. Miller, Case No. 17,254.

The invention should be so clearly described as to enable the public to put it in use.—Sullivan v. Redfield, Case No. 13,597.

Certainty and definiteness in the description is required that the public may know precisely what the invention is, and, after the expiration of the patent, may have an unerring guide to the construction of the patented invention.—Wayne v. Holmes, Case No. 17,303.

The specifications will be held sufficiently definite if, when taken in connection with the model and drawings filed, the invention has been communicated to the public, so that a skillful workman would be able to carry it into execution.—Allen v. Hunter, Case No. 225; American Hide & Leather Splitting & Dressing Mach. Co. v. American Tool & Machine Co., Id. 302; Brooks v. Bicknell, Id. 1,944; Calkins v. Bertrand, Id. 2,317; Dorsey Harvester Revolving-Rake Co. v. Marsh, Id. 4,014; Forbes v. Barstow Stove Co., Id. 4,923; Judson v. Moore, Id. 7,569; St. Louis Stamping Co. v. Quinby, Id. 12,240; Teese v. Phelps, Id. 13,819; Stephens v. Salisbury, Id. 13,369; Vogler v. Semple, Id. 16,987; In re Walsh, Id. 17,112.

If competent mechanics, skilled in the business, testify there would be no difficulty in constructing the machine from the specifications and drawing, the assumption of vagueness and uncertainty in the description is repelled unless it clearly arises from the language used by the patentee.—Wayne v. Holmes, Case No. 17,303.

A description so clear and full as to enable one skilled in the art to construct the machine is required—First, that the public may avail themselves of it at the expiration of the patent; and, second, that they may not ignorantly infringe it.—Mabie v. Haskell, Case No. 8,653.

It is not enough that some very skillful artisan is able, from the specifications and drawings, to make and use the machine; they must be such as to enable persons of ordinary skill in the art to make and use the machine.—Lippincott v. Kelly, Case No. 8,381; Stanley v. Whipple, Id. 13,286.

If the patented machine can be made from the specifications and drawings without the model, the patent is not defective.—Grant & Townsend v. ———, Case No. 5,701.

Mistake in describing the action of some part will not invalidate the patent if, from the whole specifications and drawings, one skilled in the art could still construct the machine.—Singer v. Walmsley, Case No. 12,900.

A claim is properly rejected when it does not set forth particularly and specifically the points of novelty relied on to distinguish the machine from prior ones.—In re Davis, Case No. 3,617.

The applicant need not point out all possible contrivances by which the principle of his invention can be applied.—Blanchard v. Eldridge, Case No. 1,509.

The specification must fully disclose the secret, and give the best method known to the inventor.—Page v. Ferry, Case No. 10,662.

The mechanical parts, principles, or combinations not claimed as new, but mentioned in the specification, are admitted to be old and need not be so stated or particularly described.—Winans v. New York & E. R. Co., Case No. 17,863.

A claim for an effect or function, in the abstract, cannot be sustained. The means by which the effect is produced, or the function performed, must be specified.—Wheeler v. Simpson, Case No. 17,500; Hoe v. Same, Id.

It need not be stated whether certain parts of the machine should be made of wood or metal.—Brooks v. Bicknell, Case No. 1,944.

The essential features of the invention must be shown in the specification; their appearance in the patent office model is not sufficient.—Barry v. Gugenheim, Case No. 1,061.

An inventor is bound to describe, in his specification, in what his invention consists, and what his particular claim is. But he is not bound to any precise form of words, provided their import can be clearly ascertained by fair interpretation, even though the expressions may be inaccurate.—Wyeth v. Stone, Case No. 18,-107.

The specifications need not describe what is in common use and well known.—Kneass v. Schuylkill Bank, Case No. 7,875; Gibbs v. Ellithorp, Id. 5,383.

Sufficiency of specification. Act 1836, c. 357, § 2.—Burrows v. Wetherill, Case No. 2,208.

It is discretionary with patent office to determine whether specimens of the ingredients or of the compound in a patent product are necessary.—Badische Anilin & Soda Fabrik v. Cochrane, Case No. 719.

Ambiguity and uncertainty, requiring conjecture to make out the true meaning of a claim, will invalidate the patent, regardless of the question of good faith, and irrespective of individual merit.—Blake v. Stafford, Case No. 1,504.

Defects in the specifications, in order to render the patent void, must be the result of fraudulent or intentional concealment by the patentee.—Grant & Townsend v. ———, Case No. 5,701; Gray v. James, Id. 5,718; Lowell v. Lewis, Id. 8,568; Whitney v. Carter, Id. 17,583; Whittemore v. Cutter, Id. 17,600; Park v. Little, Id. 10,715.

§ 67. —— Improvements.

The specification, on a patent for an improvement, must state in what the improvement consists.—Barrett v. Hall, Case No. 1,047; Dixon v. Moyer, Id. 3,931; Evans v. Eaton, Id. 4,560; Evans v. Hettick, Id. 4,562; Peterson v. Wooden, Id. 11,038.

Such specification must distinguish the new from the old.—Blake v. Sperry, Case No. 1,503; Brooks v. Jenkins, Id. 1,953; Brown v. Selby, Id. 2,030; Hovey v. Stevens, Id. 6,746; Lowell v. Lewis, Id. 8,568.

A patent for an improvement without specifying the original invention, or referring to anything for information, is fatally defective.—Isaacs v. Cooper, Case No. 7,096.

The specifications need not give a particular description of the machine improved.—Brooks v. Bicknell, Case No. 1,944; Davis v. Palmer, Id. 3,645; Valentine v. Marshal, Id. 16,812a. CONTRA, see Sullivan v. Redfield, Case No. 13,597.

When necessary to make the description of an improvement to a machine understood by a person in the trade to which it belongs, the whole machine must be described.—Wintermute v. Redington, Case No. 17,896.

The old machinery with which an invention is to be connected need not be described or delineated in either the specification or the drawing, where the patent describes how the invention is to be applied.—Emerson v. Hogg, Case No. 4,440.

Where the specification in a patent for "a new and useful improvement in the steam towboat" did not mention the invention as an improvement, but simply described a towboat, held, that the patent was void.—Sullivan v. Redfield, Case No. 13,597.

In the case of an improvement, the proofs or instrumentality by which the result is attained need not be given in the summary.—Valentine v. Marshal, Case No. 16,812a.

The inventor may show the successful operation of his invention by another, though the improvement described in the specification will not produce the result.—Burrows v. Wetherill, Case No. 2,208.

§ 68. Drawings, specimens, and models.

The patentee may put on file, with his specifications, drawings and written references, without their being mentioned in the specifications; and, if the references are written on the drawings, the statute is complied with. Act Feb. 21, 1793.—Emerson v. Hogg, Case No. 4,440.

The mere deposit of a model in the patent office, will not warrant an inference that the model was accompanied by an application for a patent.—Draper v. Wattles, Case No. 4,073.

The duplicate drawings, required by Act 1837, § 6, are unnecessary until the patent issues, and need not accompany the application.—French v. Rogers, Case No. 5,103.

The court cannot consider loose drawings sent up with the papers, which are not signed by the inventor, and attested by two witnesses.—In re Henry, Case No. 6,371.

Illustrative drawings of conceived ideas, not followed up by a seasonable observance of the requirements of the patent laws, can have no effect upon a subsequently granted patent to another.—Reeves v. Keystone Bridge Co., Case No. 11,660.

A failure to deposit in the patent office a sample of one of the ingredients of a composition of matter does not invalidate a patent for such composition, when the specification describes all the ingredients.—Tarr v. Folsom, Case No. 13,756.

§ 69. Claims.

A claim cannot be made in the alternative.—Brown v. Whittemore, Case No. 2,033; Burr v. Smith, Id. 2,196.

See, also, post, §§ 126–137.

§ 70. Attestation and oath.

The jurat to an application for a patent need not be dated.—French v. Rogers, Case No. 5,103.

The oath of the patentee is not confined to the specific claim, but applies to the whole specification.—King v. Gedney, Case No. 7,795.

If the oath required by the patent act, previous to the issuing of a patent, be not taken, still the patent is valid.—Whittemore v. Cutter, Case No. 17,600; Crompton v. Belknap Mills, Id. 18,285.

The fact that a blank form of oath not executed is found among the papers cannot overcome the direct recital of the letters patent that the oath was taken, or the presumption that the requirements of the law were complied with in issuing the patent.—Crompton v. Belknap Mills, Case No. 18,285.

§ 71. Fees.

The failure to pay the fee will not render the patent void.—Crompton v. Belknap Mills, Case No. 18,285.

§ 72. Examination and proceedings in patent office in general.

Application will be refused where applicant is one of three joint inventors.—Arnold v. Bishop, Case No. 553.

The chief clerk is the acting commissioner as well in the necessary absence of the head of the office as in case of a vacancy de jure.—Woodworth v. Hall, Case No. 18,017; Same v. Stone, Id.

The commissioner obtains jurisdiction by the filing of the petition, and it is his duty to cause a proper notice to be published.—Gear v. Grosvenor, Case No. 5,291.

The commissioner cannot delegate duty of examining new invention. Act July 4, 1836, § 7.—In re Aiken, Case No. 107.

The commissioner, on the application, may consider the degree of usefulness. Act 1836, § 7.—In re Cushman, Case No. 3,513.

The question of usefulness of electrical appliances, in the absence of experiments, held should be determined by the application of received and approved scientific principles.—In re Cushman, Case No. 3,513.

Upon the application for a patent, the testimony of practical men as to the utility of the invention is entitled to consideration.—Hayden v. James, Case No. 6,260.

The extent of the examination under oath of the commissioner and examiners in explanation of the principles of a machine or other thing for which a patent is prayed for, under Act March 3, 1839, § 11.—Richardson v. Hicks, Case No. 11,783.

A commissioner has full authority to examine and adjudicate on the question of abandonment, and to compel the attendance of witnesses for that purpose. Act March 3, 1839.—Hunt v. Howe, Case No. 6,891; Wickersham v. Singer, Id. 17,610.

The determination of the patent office as to whether two things are equivalents cannot be limited or restrained by the admissions or denials of the parties.—Hutchinson v. Meyer, Case No. 6,957.

Affidavits included among the papers sent up from the office, but which were not taken by authority of the commissioner or acted upon by him in forming his decision, cannot be considered.—In re Jackson, Case No. 7,126.

The burden of proof is on the applicant to show that a change in form produces a better result. The question cannot be decided by a mere a priori argument.—In re Jackson, Case No. 7,126.

Letters and memoranda of a witness experimenting for the inventor, describing appliances and results, are only admissible for the purpose of refreshing his recollection.—Jones v. Wetherill, Case No. 7,508.

The commissioner must decide whether the invention is the proper subject of a patent, and refuse the patent when he holds against such contention.—In re Kemper, Case No. 7,687.

The commissioner cannot require evidence that the combination will produce the result claimed, where the application conforms to the requirements of the office, and the invention does not fall within any of the conditions mentioned in the law as a sufficient ground for rejection.—In re Seely, Case No. 12,632.

The granting or refusal of an extension of time for the hearing upon an affidavit of one of the parties stating the grounds therefor is a matter within the discretion of the commissioner, and from which no appeal lies, unless in cases of gross abuse, which is not to be presumed.—Wellman v. Blood, Case No. 17,-

385; Same v. Woodman, Id.; O'Reilly v. Smith, Id. 10,566.

An agreement that all testimony taken before certain commissioners before a given date "shall be heard and considered by the commissioner of patents, whether the same be filed" before a certain date or not, operates as a waiver of objections to the competency of witnesses.—Warner v. Goodyear, Case No. 17,183.

Upon the application, the commissioner should decide, not only questions of law, but also of fact, including abandonment or neglect.—Marcy v. Trotter, Case No. 9,063.

When all the conditions exist as prescribed by Act 1836, § 6, the commissioner is bound prima facie to issue a patent. But it is his duty to decide whether the invention is new, and the proper subject of a patent.—In re Wagner, Case No. 17,038.

The commissioner has authority to examine and decide the question of prior public use or sale. Act 1836, § 6.—Mowry v. Barber, Case No. 9,892.

The rule requiring a commissioner of patents to set forth the grounds of his decision fully in writing must be strictly followed.—Chandler v. Ladd, Case No. 2,593.

The rule that, where the question is at all doubtful, the patent should be granted, is superseded by Act 1839, giving a right of appeal.—In re Kemper, Case No. 7,687.

On the withdrawal of the application and receiving back the $20, the commissioner's decision becomes final.—Ex parte O'Hara, Case No. 10,464.

See, also, ante, § 55; post, § 74.

§ 73. Caveats.

A caveat is intended to give notice of an invention and prevent a patent to another.—Allen v. Hunter, Case No. 225.

Inadvertence in granting a patent while a caveat is pending does not authorize the granting of a patent to the other party unless he shows priority of invention.—Cochrane v. Waterman, Case No. 2,929.

A caveat will not protect inventor who allows his invention to go into public use before application filed.—Bell v. Daniels, Case No. 1,247.

The omission to file a caveat while maturing an invention does not impair the rights of the inventor.—Heath v. Hildreth, Case No. 6,309.

An inventor cannot, by virtue of a caveat, carry back his invention beyond the date of his application, where he did nothing within the year after the caveat was filed to mature and perfect what he described therein.—Johnson v. Root, Case No. 7,410.

A caveat is not conclusive evidence that the invention is part perfected.—Johnson v. Root, Case No. 7,411.

A caveat will not protect an unperfected invention which the inventor did not use due diligence to perfect.—Johnson v. Root, Case No. 7,411.

A person who has filed a caveat cannot be prejudiced by the omission of the commissioner to give him notice of the application for a patent by a person who had filed a prior caveat.—Phelps v. Brown, Case No. 11,072.

Where a caveat is precise and definite in every detail, and the application does not vary therefrom, the patentee cannot claim that the caveat protected anything more.—Ex parte Woodruff and Cobb, Case No. 17,989.

A caveat will protect only one of several distinct patentable subjects falling within its general scope, though, in connection with other circumstances, it may furnish strong proof of his claim to priority in another invention in the same line.—Ex parte Woodruff and Cobb, Case No. 17,989.

A paper adjudged by a commission appointed by the commissioner of patents to be fraudulent, and to have been surreptitiously introduced into the file of a caveat, held to form no part thereof.—Robertson v. Secombe Mfg. Co., Case No. 11,928.

§ 74. Interferences — What constitutes, and declaration thereof.

On interference, the application should be dismissed where it appears that the claim has no patentable novelty, irrespective of the question of priority of invention.—Collins v. White, Case No. 3,019.

An interference is properly declared where the object of both parties is to guard against danger from the use of camphene in common glass lamps by placing a metallic lining in the bowl.—Nichols v. Harris, Case No. 10,244.

Two patents interfere, within the meaning of Act 1836, § 16, only when they claim, in whole or in part, the same invention.—Gold & Silver Ore Separating Co. v. United States Disintegrating Ore Co., Case No. 5,508.

In the case of two inventions consisting in placing flanges on the periphery of propeller blades to prevent the formation of lateral waves, one to be used on canals and the other for general navigation, held, that there was no interference.—Tyson v. Rankin, Case No. 14,320.

The power of the commissioner is not limited to a single interference, and a second may be declared after the court on appeal has decided in favor of an applicant, and ordered that a patent issue to him.—Potter v. Dixon, Case No. 11,325.

The commissioner, after deciding an interference, may, for cause shown, allow one party to withdraw and refile his application, and may then declare an interference anew.—Matthews v. Wade, Case No. 9,292.

The failure of the patent office to declare an interference when a patentee is seeking a reissue, pending an application by another, is not a decision that the claims are for different inventions.—Hicks v. Shaver, Case No. 6,462.

§ 75. —— Proof.

Rules of the patent office made in pursuance of Act March 3, 1839, § 12, in relation to taking testimony in contested cases, are binding upon both the parties and the commissioner.—O'Hara v. Hawes, Case No. 10,466.

Failure of officer to certify to sealing of deposition in an interference case is ground of exclusion.—Arnold v. Bishop, Case No. 552.

Depositions taken without notice to one of the parties, who has not waived his right thereto, cannot be used against him. A notice to produce the depositions for inspection and examination is not a waiver of such right.—Perry v. Cornell, Case No. 11,001.

Failure to give notice of taking of depositions in interference proceedings is waived by appearance.—Gibbs v. Ellithorp, Case No. 5,383.

A party to an interference may, from necessity, be allowed by his own oath to prove the loss out of his own custody of a paper as a foundation for proving by other testimony the contents thereof.—Yearsley v. Brookfield, Case No. 18,131.

One who was present at the examination of witnesses by consent cannot complain that he was not notified of such examination.—Walker v. Forbes, Case No. 17,069.

The deposition of one not a party to the interference, tending to show that he was a joint inventor with one of two parties who are claiming as joint inventors, and that the other had no part in it, though not admissible to establish the opponent's claim, may yet be considered as affecting the rights of the joint applicants.—Yearsley v. Brookfield, Case No. 18,131.

Neither the inventor nor a person interested in a patent if issued are competent in an interference case.—Appleton v. Chambers, Case No. 497a.

A party who, pending an interference proceeding, assigns all his interest in the subject-matter, and remains merely a nominal party, is nevertheless incompetent to testify therein.—Yearsley v. Brookfield, Case No. 18,131.

In the case of a joint invention, the deposition of one of the inventors alone may be received to show the loss of a drawing which he had made.—Yearsley v. Brookfield, Case No. 18,131.

The assignor of the patent is not competent to prove priority upon an interference declared.—Barstow v. Swan, Case No. 1,065.

The issuance of the patent establishes prima facie in an interference case the patentee's title as an original inventor.—Spear v. Belson, Case No. 13,223.

In the case of interfering patents the patentee under the earlier patent is entitled to the presumption of priority and novelty. — Pelton v. Waters, Case No. 10,913.

Prior invention defeats the application for a patent, and may be shown on interference, though the prior inventor failed to avail himself of his invention in a patent subsequently procured by him.—Burlew v. O'Neil, Case No. 2,167.

Where an interference has been declared between an invention claimed and a patent granted, and the patentee fails to appear, it is error to refuse to grant the patent applied for because of failure to furnish unequivocal proof of the priority of the invention, where the applicant furnishes the best proof under the circumstances, his principal witness having died pending the hearing.—Chandler v. Ladd, Case No. 2,593.

On an interference the fact of priority is alone important; the length of time of such priority, whether a day, month, or year, is immaterial.—Eames v. Richards, Case No. 4,240.

In an interference proceeding, a caveat filed by one of the parties is admissible in evidence, as part of the res gestæ, so far as it described the machinery then constructed.—Jones v. Wetherill, Case No. 7,508.

Declarations of a party to an interference at any time before the contest arose, describing his invention, are admissible from necessity, and as part of the res gestæ, for the purpose of showing what he had invented at the date of such declarations.—Yearsley v. Brookfield, Case No. 18,131.

On deciding an interference between an application and a patent, the nature and extent of the patentee's invention is not necessarily to be ascertained from his specification and claim alone, but parol evidence is admissible.—Stephenson v. Hoyt, Case No. 13,373.

The fact that the first inventor of a new and useful improvement has not in its specifications described the same with the clearness and particularity required by the statute as a condition of obtaining a patent will not aid a subsequent inventor upon an interference between them.—Yearsley v. Brookfield, Case No. 18,131.

Where evidence as to priority of issuance is conflicting, its weight must govern.—Clarke v. Cramer, Case No. 2,848.

On a second interference, granted for cause shown, testimony taken on the former interference is admissible, although a new party has been introduced, by way of assignment.—Eames v. Richards, Case No. 4,240.

Conversations and declarations of a party in the statement of an invention will be deemed an assertion of his right at that time, as an inventor, to the extent only of the facts and details which he then makes known.—Garratt v. Davidson, Case No. 5,247.

Failure to produce, as witnesses, workmen in the inventor's shop, at a time (previous to his application) when, it is claimed, a machine embodying the invention was put in actual use, raises no unfavorable presumption, as publicity might take away his right.—New England Screw Co. v. Sloan, Case No. 10,158.

Competent testimony as to priority, not contradicted or assailed for bias or prejudice, must be accepted as true.—Collins v. White, Case No. 3,019.

§ 76. —— Hearing and determination.

Where both parties to an interference are mere applicants, lapse of time is immaterial, except on the question of abandonment of the invention.—Stephens v. Salisbury, Case No. 13,369.

The question of fraud arising on interference must be tried by a jury.—Burlew v. O'Neil, Case No. 2,167.

The respective merits of the machines will not be considered on a claim of the first invention on a hearing of an interference between two parties.—Spain v. Gamble, Case No. 13,199.

The rule requiring a party to examine all his witnesses in chief before closing his opening examination does not apply in an interference case.—Spear v. Abbott, Case No. 13,222.

The rule providing that in contested cases no evidence shall be considered at the hearing which was not taken and filed in compliance with the rules does not prevent the commissioner from examining an informal deposition, to ascertain the character of the evidence; and, if he deems that the ends of justice require it, he can postpone the hearing until the informalities are corrected.—Smith v. Flickenger, Case No. 13,047.

An affidavit in support of a motion for an extension of time for the hearing, on the ground of inability to procure the attendance of witnesses, is entirely insufficient when it does not state the names, competency, or materiality of the witnesses.—O'Reilly v. Smith, Case No. 10,566.

Where a new party comes in on rehearing, he comes in subject to the testimony as to priority of invention previously taken.—Carter v. Carter, Case No. 2,475.

In a suit under Rev. St. § 4918, concerning interfering patents, the court may declare either one or both of the patents void on any ground which, in a suit for infringement, would invalidate it.—Foster v. Lindsay, Cases Nos. 4,975, 4,976.

§ 77. Withdrawal or abandonment of application.

The receipt of the amount paid as a fee after the rejection of the application held not to operate as a withdrawal of the application.—Colgate v. Western Union Tel. Co., Case No. 2,995.

The withdrawal of an application and the return of the fee is not of itself an abandonment of the invention to the public.—Wickersham v. Singer, Case No. 17,610.

A withdrawal of the application under a mistake caused by an error of the patent office is no abandonment, though the applicant suffer his invention to go into public use.—Hayden v. James, Case No. 6,260.

§ 78. Rejection of application.

The action of the office in twice returning the specifications and drawings to the applicant because they did not conform to the regulations of the office is not to be construed as a rejection of the claims, and does not relieve the inventor of the duty of prosecuting his application with due diligence.—Wickersham v. Singer, Case No. 17,610.

§ 79. Amendment of application.

A delay of three years in making an amendment is no ground of rejection of the amended specification, where the patent office had acted upon the merits of the case.—Ex parte Hayden, Case No. 6,256.

Where a combination is claimed, the patentee cannot abandon part of said combination and maintain a claim to the residue, nor prove any part thereof immaterial or useless without destroying the whole.—Westlake v. Cartter, Case No. 17,451.

The description and claims of an application are open to amendment, and the addition of new matter shown in the drawings and model, until the case is finally disposed of by the patent office.—Singer v. Braunsdorf, Case No. 12,897.

The inventor delayed 12 years after the final rejection of his application on appeal to the commissioner before amending his specification. Held no abandonment.—McMillin v. Barclay, Case No. 8,902.

Delay of 10 years to amend an application or reverse the decision of the patent office is not excused by the fact that the rejection of the application was wrongful.—Bevin v. East Hampton Bell Co., Case No. 1,379.

Where the claim becomes too broad through a rejection of part it should be amended before appeal.—Arnold v. Pettee, Case No. 561b.

A claim for an invention too broadly specified may be amended to conform to the opinions of the patent office, and the court on appeal, as to what is patentable.—Collins v. White, Case No. 3,019.

A patent with corrected specifications relates back to the issue of the first patent.—Stanley v. Whipple, Case No. 13,286.

§ 80. Renewal of application.

One who has withdrawn a rejected application may renew it in a reasonable time on returning the fee.—Ex parte Simpson, Case No. 12,878.

An application withdrawn and instantly refiled in the same words is a continuing application, and not affected by the issuance of a foreign patent within six months before such refiling.—Matthews v. Wade, Case No. 9,292.

The reasonable time within which a rejected application may be renewed is to be computed from the date of the withdrawal of the application, and not from the date of perfecting the invention. Under Act March 3, 1839, § 7, the renewal must not be delayed more than two years.—Ex parte Simpson, Case No. 12,878.

The proviso in Act 1870, § 35, providing for renewal of rejected applications, does not restore a right once lost by laches.—Marsh v. Sayles, Case No. 9,119.

The withdrawal of an application, and receiving back the $20 fee, is an abandonment of the claim; and a new application will not relate back, so as to avoid the effect of a prior public use.—Mowry v. Barber, Case No. 9,892.

Delay of 18 years in renewing a rejected application is an abandonment where another has in the meantime secured a patent for the same thing.—Marsh v. Sayles, Case No. 9,119.

Invention held not abandoned by eight years' delay in making a new application after an improper rejection, where the patentee pressed his claim in the meantime as his means afforded.—Goodyear Dental Vulcanite Co. v. Root, Case No. 5,597; Same v. Smith, Id. 5,598; Same v. Willis, Id. 5,603.

A delay of 12 years after withdrawal of application, in the absence of good excuse, held an abandonment.—Ex parte Dedericks, Case No. 3,734.

Eight years' delay to file a new application after the original application was withdrawn, and the balance of the fee refunded, held an abandonment.—United States Rifle, etc., Co. v. Whitney Arms Co., Case No. 16,793.

Failure to prosecute an application for two years and eight months after it had been rejected is not an abandonment of the application.—Clark v. Scott, Case No. 2,833.

Twenty years between the date of the original application and the final grant of the patent, where the application was rejected and repeatedly renewed, will not invalidate the patent.—Howard v. Christy, Case No. 6,754.

A patentee experimented for 11 years after discovering the process, and then applied for and was refused a patent, and did nothing further for nine years, when he made a second application. Held no abandonment.—Jones v. Sewall, Case No. 7,495.

A delay of less than a year in filing a new application after final rejection upon appeal held not unreasonable.—Blandy v. Griffith, Case No. 1,529.

Two years' delay to file a new application, after the rejection and withdrawal of the first one, caused by the delay of the patent agent, held not an abandonment.—Howes v. McNeal, Case No. 6,789.

A new application, made about two years after the first application, which was rejected, amended specifications being filed, and finally rejected upon appeal, held to relate back to the prior application.—Blandy v. Griffith, Case No. 1,529.

A delay of eight years to make a new application after the first application was rejected, during which time the invention had gone into public use with the consent of the inventor, who had made assignments of interest therein, held not to show actual abandonment.—Dental Vulcanite Co. v. Wetherbee, Case No. 3,810.

Seven years' delay after withdrawal of application before its renewal, where the invention has in the meantime been put into public use by another inventor, held an abandonment.—Wickersham v. Singer, Case No. 17,610.

After two interferences, decided in favor of the patentee, in which the applicant's attorneys acted also as attorneys for the patentee, the application was withdrawn, and shortly afterwards a new one was filed. Held, that it was a continuation, and there had been no abandonment.—Weston v. White, Case No. 17,459.

A delay of five years after the application is rejected before a renewal is made, where no excuse is given, is an abandonment.—Ex parte Raymond, Case No. 11,592a.

An abandonment cannot be predicated upon a delay caused by the commissioner in refusing a patent, where the application is renewed for the same invention.—Rich v. Lippincott, Case No. 11,758.

A technical withdrawal of the first application is not necessary to interrupt the continuity between it and a succeeding one.—Bevin v. East Hampton Bell Co., Case No. 1,379.

An intention, manifested intermediate the first and second applications, to abandon the first, will sever the connection between the two; and a patent granted upon the second application will not relate back to the time of filing the first application.—Pelton v. Waters, Case No. 10,913.

An application cannot be invalidated by anything short of the voluntary act of the applicant. The positive refusal of the office to act further upon an application, after rejecting several amendments, and the consequent filing of a new application, with which the same model is used, is not an abandonment, so as to make the placing of the invention on sale pending the first application a prior use.—Singer v. Braunsdorf, Case No. 12,897.

Various applications for a period of 20 years held to be one continuous application, and the invention not abandoned.—Colgate v. Western Union Tel. Co., Case No. 2,995.

Renewal of application not permitted after 10 years, on affidavit that the applicant had no knowledge of its withdrawal by his attorney.—Ex parte O'Hara, Case No. 10,464.

A renewed patent must be for the same invention as that described in the original.—Sloat v. Spring, Case No. 12,948a.

Where a second perfected application is made within a reasonable time after the rejection of the first application, the two applications will be considered as a continuous proceeding.—Smith v. Prior, Case No. 13,095.

The granting of a patent on a second application of narrower claim on rejection of the first application will be considered an abandonment of the first application, and the patent granted will not relate back.—Pelton v. Waters, Case No. 10,913.

§ 81. Appeals in patent office.

The commissioner on an appeal cannot rely upon references not previously given to the applicant, as required by Act 1836, § 7.—In re Jewett, Case No. 7,308.

§ 82. Conclusiveness and effect of decisions of patent office.

If the decision of the commissioner is correct, the fact that his opinion is erroneous is immaterial.—In re Crooker, Case No. 3,414.

The action of the patent office in allowing a separation of claims for the purpose of filing divisional applications is conclusive, and not reviewable in the courts.—Doughty v. West, Case No. 4,028.

The decision of the commissioner upon a question of fact upon which he is authorized to pass is unimpeachable, except upon the ground that it is ultra vires.—McMillin v. Barclay, Case No. 8,902.

Decision of commissioner is conclusive as to law and facts arising under application, in the absence of fraud or excess of authority manifest on the face of the papers.—Allen v. Blunt, Case No. 216; Dorsey Harvester Revolving-Rake Co. v. Marsh, Id. 4,014.

The commissioner cannot confirm a patent obtained by fraud.—Child v. Adams, Case No. 2,673.

A patent cannot, in a collateral proceeding, be impeached for fraud in procuring it.—Gear v. Grosvenor, Case No. 5,291; Crompton v. Belknap Mills, Id. 3,406.

The commissioner is bound by the decision of his predecessor granting a patent while it is unreversed by a competent court.—Ex parte Larowe, Case No. 8,093; Ex parte Simpson, Id. 12,878.

The grant of a patent is an adjudication that every fact necessary to the patentee's right has been established by sufficient proof.—Konold v. Klein, Case No. 7,925; Gear v. Grosvenor, Id. 5,291.

It must be assumed from the granting of the patent that there was evidence before the commissioner to show that there was unavoidable delay in preparing the application for examination. Act 1861.—McMillin v. Barclay, Case No. 8,902.

The decision of the patent office, in granting a patent, that the inventor had made the necessary preliminary statutory oath, is final.—De Florez v. Raynolds, Case No. 3,742.

The decision of the commissioner as to patentability is not conclusive.—Burrows v. Wetherill, Case No. 2,208.

The decision of the commissioner as to the proper date in antedating a patent cannot be disturbed by a subsequent commissioner, or by the court on appeal from the latter's ruling.—In re Cushman, Case No. 3,514.

A decision of the patent office in an interference case is not conclusive upon the question of priority of invention in a subsequent suit to have the interfering patent declared void.—Union Paper-Bag Mach. Co. v. Crane, Case No. 14,388.

A decision of the commissioner on the question of abandonment is not final, but may be reviewed in a suit brought on a patent subsequently granted. Act July 8, 1870, § 35.—United States Rifle, etc., Co. v. Whitney Arms Co., Case No. 16,793.

The decision of the commissioner of patents is not res judicata on the question of novelty, but is entitled to the highest respect.—Cook v. Ernest, Case No. 3,155.

The commissioner's decision is not conclusive as to his own jurisdiction.—Cahart v. Austin, Case No. 2,288.

After a patent is granted for a composition it cannot be impeached on the ground that the deposit of the ingredients in the patent office has not been made.—Tarr v. Folsom, Case No. 13,756.

A bill in equity for relief will not lie on the ground that defendant has surreptitiously procured a patent for complainant's invention, for which an application for a patent was pending. —Hoeltge v. Hoeller, Case No. 6,574.

In the case of a joint patent the joint patentability is not res judicata, but is open to question upon an application for a reissue.—Wilson v. Singer, Case No. 17,835.

See, also, post, § 111.

§ 83. Appeals from decisions of commissioner of patents—Time of appeal and preliminary proceedings.

Six years' delay to appeal from the action of the commissioner in rejecting an application, during four of which years the applicant resided in a state in rebellion, held not an abandonment.—Johnsen v. Fassman, Case No. 7,365.

The court may assume that the time for appeal was enlarged by the commissioner.—Blackinton v. Douglass, Case No. 1,470.

The entertaining by the commissioner of a motion to reconsider in an interference case, filed after the expiration of the limit of appeal, does not suspend the operation of the order limiting the time to appeal.—Ex parte Linton, Case No. 8,378.

Where an appeal in an interference case is dismissed after consideration of a protest duly filed by the office against entertaining it, because taken after expiration of the time limited, the appeal fee must be refunded.—Ex parte Linton, Case No. 8,378.

An appeal will not lie from a decision of the commissioner refusing to declare a new interference, and grant a rehearing, after the unsuccessful party has allowed the time for appeal to expire.—In re Rouse, Case No. 12,086.

An extension of the time to appeal made by the commissioner on the direction of the secretary of the interior gives the court jurisdiction of the appeal.—Justice v. Jones, Case No. 7,588.

Under Act March 2, 1861, in a pending cause, it was not necessary to appeal first to the examiner in chief, and then to the commissioner, before appealing to the circuit court.—Snowden v. Pierce, Case No. 13,151.

The new oath required by Act 1836, § 7, is not a prerequisite of an appeal from the commissioner's decision.—In re Crooker, Case No. 3,414.

The right of appeal is lost where the reasons are not filed within the time fixed by the commissioner, notwithstanding the pendency of a motion for rehearing.—Greenough v. Clark, Case No. 5,784.

§ 84. —— Grounds of appeal and matters reviewable.

Appellant may assign, as a reason of appeal, the refusal to hear certain evidence offered, and the court may order such evidence to be taken to determine its relevancy and materiality.—In re Fultz, Case No. 5,156.

The commissioner is the sole judge of the circumstances under which he shall furnish information and suitable references to the applicant, to enable him to correct his application. No cause of appeal is furnished by a supposed omission of his duty in this particular.—Ex parte Munson, Case No. 9,933.

No appeal lies where the issues tried were the same, in effect, as those tried on a former interference.—Bowen v. Herriet, Case No. 1,722.

The objection that one of two parties, who claim as joint inventors, is not shown by the evidence to have been in fact a joint inventor with the other, is not available to the unsuccessful party in an interference proceeding.—Yearsley v. Brookfield, Case No. 18,131.

Irrelevant reasons by commissioner no ground of reversal.—In re Aiken, Case No. 107.

An applicant who has obtained the antedating of his patent is estopped to claim error in such antedating.—In re Cushman, Case No. 3,514.

The decision of the commissioner that he will not review or revise the action of his predecessor in rejecting an application is no ground of appeal.—In re Janney, Case No. 7,209.

An objection to the sufficiency of notice of taking depositions cannot be insisted upon, on appeal to the judge, if not made before the commissioner.—Smith v. Flickenger, Case No. 13,047.

No reply to the commissioner's grounds of refusing patent will be allowed to be filed on appeal.—In re Aiken, Case No. 108.

Where the applicant is put upon inquiry by the ruling of the board of appeal that his claim is not properly limited, the court, upon appeal, will not relieve him from the effect of a failure to amend his specifications.—Ex parte Thomas, Case No. 13,885.

The review of the commissioner's decision must be confined to points involved in reasons of appeal.—In re Aiken, Case No. 107; Arnold v. Bishop, Id. 553; Burlew v. O'Neil, Id. 2,167.

On appeal from the decision of the commissioner of patents the court will not review his action in intimating that a patent was an apposite reference, without stating grounds to support his possession.—In re Chambers, Case No. 2,581.

The questions of practicability and usefulness are not subject to appeal in cases of interference.—Matthews v. Wade, Case No. 9,292.

The granting of an extension of time for the taking of testimony in an interference case is within the discretion of the commissioner, and no appeal lies from his refusal, except in the case of a plain abuse of discretion.—Hopkins v. Lewis, Case No. 6,688.

The court can only review the conclusions of the commissioner, and not the processes by which such conclusions may have been attained.—Ex parte Spence, Case No. 13,228.

Objection to incompetency of witness in interference case cannot first be made on appeal.—Allen v. Alter, Case No. 212.

Appellant in an interference case cannot rely upon the weakness of his adversary's case.—Appleton v. Chambers, Case No. 497a.

The interference coming up for review is only such as respects patentable matters.—Bain v. Morse, Case No. 754.

The power to make regulations for the taking of testimony in contested cases is expressly conferred on the commissioner (Act March 3, 1839, § 12), and is not subject to control or revision on appeal.—Spear v. Abbott, Case No. 13,222.

The action of the commissioner under the statutory requirement that he shall give the applicant such reasons and suggestions as will enable him to judge of the expediency of abandoning or modifying his application is not subject to review on appeal.—Ex parte Spence, Case No. 13,228.

Failure to renew a rejected and withdrawn application within the reasonable time allowed will not be relieved against by the court because the applicant was misled by contradictory decisions and practice of the patent office.—Ex parte Simpson, Case No. 12,878.

Under the act of 1836, the court, on appeal in interference, decides not merely the question of priority, but which or whether either applicant is entitled to a patent.—Lovering v. Dutcher, Case No. 8,553; Jones v. Wetherill, Id. 7,508; Yearsley v. Brookfield, Id. 18,131.

A patentee cannot appeal from the decision of the commissioner in an interference proceeding, awarding priority of invention to a subsequent applicant, and granting him a patent.—Drake v. Cunningham, Case No. 4,060; Hopkins v. Barnum, Id. 6,685; Pomeroy v. Connison, Id. 11,259; Whipple v. Renton, Id. 17,521. But see Babcock v. Degener, Id. 698; Beach v. Tucker, Id. 1,153.

A decision of the commissioner denying a patent to either party on interference is appealable.—Carter v. Carter, Case No. 2,475.

The commissioner's decision in interference, awarding a patent to each applicant, but limiting the claim of one to a part only of what he describes and shows in his specifications, is reviewable by the judge.—King v. Gedney, Case No. 7,795.

§ 85. —— Reasons of appeal.

An assignment of a reason of appeal must point out the precise matter of alleged error with such reasonable certainty as to satisfy an intelligent mind.—Blackinton v. Douglass, Case No. 1,470.

That a decision rejecting an application is against evidence is too vague and indefinite as a reason of appeal.—Blackinton v. Douglass, Case No. 1,470.

The commissioner held to have properly refused to disturb the decision of his predecessor, upon vague and loose affidavits filed long after the rejection of the claim.—In re Littlefield, Case No. 8,399.

The judge cannot order reasons of appeal to be stricken out, but may overrule them.—Matthews v. Wade, Case No. 9,292.

Reasons of appeal which state "that the decision is in opposition to a clear apprehension of the merits of the case"; "that the decision is inconsistent, as opposed in affirmation to precedents which have governed such cases"; and "that the decision is adverse to the opinion of skillful and competent men,"—held too vague and indefinite to raise any question for the judge to pass upon.—In re Winslow, Case No. 17,879.

Where the commissioner's refusal to grant a patent is based upon want of novelty, the judge cannot consider a reason of appeal which is occupied mainly in a description of the object and importance of the machine, and of the comparative merits of the applicant's machine and a prior machine, which the commissioner has cited as an anticipation.—In re Winslow, Case No. 17,879.

Where the reasons of appeal in an interference case take no exception to the claim of the appellee, upon the ground of forfeiture by laches, the court cannot consider such question.—Sturtevant v. Greenough, Case No. 13,579.

The commissioner is bound to answer the reasons of appeal in cases of single applications as well as in cases of interference. Act March 3, 1839, § 11.—In re Henry, Case No. 6,371.

§ 86. —— Hearing and determination.
The patent office may have present at the hearing of the appeal one of its officers for the purpose of explaining the commissioner's decision.—Perry v. Cornell, Case No. 11,001.

The court on appeal has ample power to allow an examiner to be interrogated on the subject of the invention for which a patent is claimed.—In re Seely, Case No. 12,632.

The court will consider the correspondence between the commissioner and applicant, wherein facts are stated, acted upon, and not denied.—In re Boughton, Case No. 1,696.

On appeal in an interference case the burden is on appellant to prove that he is the prior inventor.—Garratt v. Davidson, Case No. 5,247.

The commissioner is not required to submit to an exhibition of experiments at the discretion of the applicant.—Ex parte Spence, Case No. 13,228.

The court is limited to the papers and evidence which were before the commissioner, and has no power either to receive proof of experts or to send the case back to take such proofs.—Ex parte Sanders, Case No. 12,292.

When in doubt the commissioner's decision in an interference case will be affirmed.—Ex parte Allen, Case No. 207b.

On an application for a reissue and division of a patent, under Act March 3, 1837, the divisions for the purposes of an appeal are to be considered as a whole, and not as separate cases.—Ex parte Selden, Case No. 12,638.

A reversal because some of the depositions considered were taken before a disqualified magistrate does not require the commissioner to issue a patent, but he may grant a rehearing and order the depositions taken anew.—Nichols v. Harris, Case No. 10,244.

§ 87. Remedy in equity for refusal of patent.
The federal circuit courts have no jurisdiction of a bill to compel the commissioner to issue a patent. The circuit court of the District of Columbia is the only court having jurisdiction to administer the remedy provided by Acts July 4, 1836, § 16, and March 3, 1839, § 10.—Prentiss v. Elsworth, Case No. 11,386.

A bill filed under Rev. St. § 4915, is an original, and not an appellate, proceeding; and it is proper to take the testimony before an examiner.—In re Squire, Case No. 13,269.

In such proceeding the petitioner cannot be confined to matters existing of record in the patent office, or in the supreme court of the District of Columbia.—In re Squire, Case No. 13,269.

The practice in such proceeding is governed by the equity rules, and the court will receive all legal proceedings theretofore had, as well as new testimony.—In re Squire, Case No. 13,269.

The denial of an application for a patent on the ground of laches is not an adjudication that the applicant was the first inventor, which the court will consider on a motion for preliminary injunction.—Potter v. Stevens, Case No. 11,338.

Form of bill and proceedings in a suit in equity for the grant of a patent under Act July 8, 1870, § 52.—Ex parte Greeley, Case No. 5,745.

V. REQUISITES AND VALIDITY OF LETTERS PATENT.

§ 88. Nature of the instrument.
Patent rights rest exclusively upon statute, and statutory provisions must be complied with in all essentials.—Latta v. Shawk, Case No. 8,116.

A patent wanting in any substantial statutory requisite is a nullity, and confers no right to the patentee.—Moffitt v. Gaar, Case No. 9,690.

§ 89. Form and contents in general.
The allegations and suggestions in the application for a patent must at least be substantially recited in the patent as granted.—Evans v. Chambers, Case No. 4,555.

The schedule annexed to letters patent is part of the patent so far as it is a description of the machine, but no further.—Evans v. Eaton, Case No. 4,559.

The title of the patent ought not to be repugnant to the specification.—Goodyear v. Central R. Co., Case No. 5,563.

A patent will not be void because of an error in the Christian name of one of the patentees, provided it contains a description of him by which he can be identified.—Northwestern Fire Extinguisher Co. v. Philadelphia Fire Extinguisher Co., Case No. 10,337.

The description of one patentee, whose Christian name was wrongly given, as a joint inventor with another, held sufficient to identify him.—Northwestern Fire Extinguisher Co. v. Philadelphia Fire Extinguisher Co., Case No. 10,337.

§ 90. Execution and issuance.
A patent signed by the secretary of state and countersigned under the seal of the patent office, by the chief clerk of that office, as "acting commissioner," during the absence of the commissioner, is valid.—Smith v. Mercer, Case No. 13,078.

A signature to the patent, and the certificate of copies, by a person calling himself "acting commissioner," is sufficient on its face in controversies between the patentee and third persons, as the law recognizes an acting commissioner to be lawful.—Woodworth v. Hall, Case No. 18,016.

§ 91. Validity in general.
Where an alien falsely represents himself as a citizen, the patent issued to him is invalid.—Child v. Adams, Case No. 2,673.

The patent is invalidated by a false suggestion in any of the several material facts set forth in the specification.—Delano v. Scott, Case No. 3,753.

The presumption in favor of the validity of a patent does not obtain where the records and papers of the patent office show conclusively that essential statutory provisions have been disregarded.—Whitely v. Swayne, Case No. 17,568.

See, also, ante, § 66.

§ 92. Excessive claims by patentee.
The patent is void where the inventor claims more than he has actually invented.—Tyler v. Deval, Case No. 14,307.

Such patent is void in toto.—Odiorne v. Winkley, Case No. 10,432.

A patent may be valid in part and void in part where the patentee has not fraudulently claimed more than he was entitled to.—Goodyear v. Providence Rubber Co., Case No. 5,583; Peterson v. Wooden, Id. 11,038.

Where a patent is for several improvements in a machine, and each is summed up in the patent as the invention of the patentee, he is bound by his summary, and if any one of the improvements is found not to be new his patent is void.—Moody v. Fiske, Case No. 9,745.

A patent for an "improvement in trucks for locomotives" is not rendered invalid by the fact that the truck used was old and the invention was really an improvement in locomotives.—Locomotive Engine Safety Truck Co. v. Erie Ry. Co., Case No. 8,452.

A patent for a new article so described that it can be made without invention is not invalidated by an ineffective attempt made to describe the best machine for making it.—Magic Ruffle Co. v. Douglas, Case No. 8,948.

The inclusion by accident or mistake of something not new does not invalidate the patent as to that actually invented by the patentee.—Singer v. Walmsley, Case No. 12,900; Stephens v. Felt, Id. 13,368a.

The claim of an old device as new and original, as a part of a combination, is fatal to the patent.—Parker v. Stiles, Case No. 10,749; Winans v. New York & E. R. Co., Id. 17,863.

Where the invention is of a combination of old elements, but the patent claims the invention of the constituent elements, it is void.—Stanley v. Hewitt, Case No. 13,285; Same v. Whipple, Id. 13,286.

The patentee can add to the claim of his original patent anything of his invention which is warranted by the description contained in the specification and the drawings connected with it.—Woodward v. Dinsmore, Case No. 18,003.

A patentee making an improvement in a combination of machines should include in his patent only the improvement.—Barrett v. Hall, Case No. 1,047.

A patent for a machine granted to the inventor of an improvement only is void.—Evans v. Eaton, Case No. 4,559; Turner v. Johnson, Id. 14,261. CONTRA, see Goodyear v. Mathews, Case No. 5,576.

A patent which covers the discovery of another that had been in use is too broad, and therefore void.—Watson v. Bladen, Case No. 17,277.

A claim for the use of a pattern chain, or any other device for determining the design to be woven, is not invalid as being too broad.—Crompton v. Belknap Mills, Case No. 3,406.

A patent is not invalid because of a double claim, where there is no evidence that it was made with an intention to mislead.—Tompkins v. Gage, Case No. 14,088.

Merely describing, in the specification, parts of the machine not included in the claim does not invalidate the patent.—Kneass v. Schuylkill Bank, Case No. 7,875.

Claims too broad upon their face may be restricted by the words "substantially as described," so as to render the patent valid.—Seymour v. Osborne, Case No. 12,688.

The words, "by means substantially as described and for the purposes set forth," construed.—Gottfried v. Phillip Best Brewing Co., Case No. 5,633.

The failure of a machine, which it is claimed will turn any irregular surface or form like the model, to turn a square shoulder, is too remote a defect to destroy the patent.—Blanchard's Gun-Stock Turning Factory v. Warner, Case No. 1,521.

A claim for the devices described, which are alleged to produce a specified result, is not rendered invalid by proof that, under special circumstances, and on exceptional occasions, such result is not produced. The claim will be construed as describing the general rule of the operation of the device.—Wheeler v. Clipper Mower, etc., Co., Case No. 17,493.

§ 93. Inventions included in same patent.

A patent may cover two or more inventions relating to the same machine.—Lee v. Blandy, Case No. 8,182; McComb v. Brodie, Id. 8,708.

An inventor may claim in one patent a combination covering the entire machine, and also a combination of a less number of elements, when he is the inventor of both.—Stevens v. Pritchard, Case No. 13,407.

Several inventions, contrived to be used conjointly to a common end, may be covered by a single patent, though they are capable of being used separately.—Emerson v. Hogg, Case No. 4,440.

Two forms of invention related to the same subject, where the necessary elements of one are substantially used in the other, may be included in one patent.—American Nicholson Pavement Co. v. Elizabeth, Case No. 311.

Two combinations, separate in their nature, and capable, if desired, of separate use, may be claimed in one patent.—Densmore v. Schofield, Case No. 3,809.

Independent, separable, and separate things, provided they relate to the same subject, may be separately claimed in the same patent.—Densmore v. Schofield, Case No. 3,809.

The patentee may embrace two improvements of the same machine in one patent.—Morris v. Barrett, Case No. 9,827.

A patentee may claim a combination of mechanical elements which of themselves will not produce a new and useful result, when his specification shows how the patented combination, used with or supplemented by other devices and instrumentalities therein described, will produce such result.—Wells v. Jacques, Case No. 17,398.

The patentee cannot embrace both the process and the product in the same claim.—Merrill v. Yeomans, Case No. 9,472.

A patent may contain a claim for a combination, and the invention or improvement of one or more parts of which the combination consists.—Root v. Ball, Case No. 12,035.

Patents may be united if two or more, included in one set of letters, relate to a like subject, or are in their nature or operation connected together.—Barrett v. Hall, Case No. 1,047.

A single patent may be taken for two machines which conduce to the same common purpose and object, though they are each separately capable of a distinct use.—Wyeth v. Stone, Case No. 18,107.

A single patent cannot be taken for two distinct machines not conducing to the same common purpose or object, but designed for totally different and independent objects.—Wyeth v. Stone, Case No. 18,107.

§ 94. Patents for same invention.

A new product or article of manufacture, and the process by which the same is produced, may be the proper subjects of separate patents.—Goodyear v. Providence Rubber Co., Case No. 5,583.

The inventor may make each improvement the subject of a separate patent, or combine them, if he chooses.—Hayden v. James, Case No. 6,260.

One cannot have two patents for the same process because for different purposes.—McComb v. Brodie, Case No. 8,708.

There must be several patents for several improvements of distinct machines.—Barrett v. Hall, Case No. 1,047.

A patent cannot claim both the combination of machines and the machines themselves.—Barrett v. Hall, Case No. 1,047; Tompkins v. Gage, Id. 14,088.

§ 95. Correction or amendment.

The correction of a clerical mistake operates back to the date of the original patent.—Woodworth v. Hall, Case No. 18,017; Same v. Stone, Id.

The sanction of the secretary of state to the correction of a clerical mistake in letters patent may be given by a separate writing.—Woodworth v. Hall, Case No. 18,017; Same v. Stone, Id.

A transcript from the patent office may be corrected by another duly certified.—Brooks v. Jenkins, Case No. 1,953.

Under Act 1836, § 13, the commissioner can grant an amended patent only where the error in the original arose through inadvertency, accident, or mistake, and without any fraudulent or deceptive intent. On this question his judgment is generally regarded as conclusive.—Sloat v. Spring, Case No. 12,948a.

The mistake in a patent may be corrected by the commissioner who granted it without a resigning or resealing, but where it is material the letters cannot operate except on cases arising after the correction is made.—Woodworth v. Hall, Case No. 18,016.

§ 96. Annulment or repeal.

Method for repeal of patents provided for by Act 1793, § 10.—McGaw v. Bryan, Case No. 8,793.

Sections 6 and 10 of Act Feb. 21, 1793, relating to the repeal of patents, construed.—Delano v. Scott, Case No. 3,753.

The assignee may file a bill to annul the patent issued to another, and to have one granted to himself. Act July 4, 1836, § 16; Act March 3, 1839, § 10.—Gay v. Cornell, Case No. 5,280.

A bill to set aside a patent to another, on the ground that plaintiff was the original inventor, is not sufficient where it fails to allege that the invention was reduced to practice before the granting of the patent.—Ellithorp v. Robertson, Case No. 4,408.

The federal circuit court may entertain a bill for the repeal of an interfering patent.—Ayling v. Hull, Case No. 686.

A suit to limit a patent or to declare that it does not extend to certain cases, and pro tanto to have it adjudged void, can be maintained only by the attorney general on behalf of the United States.—Celluloid Mfg. Co. v. Goodyear Dental Vulcanite Co., Case No. 2,543.

Where a scire facias is ordered to be issued against a patentee under Act Feb. 21, 1793, to repeal a patent, the court will not permit the United States to be substituted as plaintiffs in place of the petitioner.—Wood v. Williams, Case No. 17,968.

A suit to repeal a patent, except in cases stated in Act 1836, § 16, and Act 1839, § 10, cannot be brought either in a state court or the federal circuit court.—Merserole v. Union Paper Collar Co., Case No. 9,488.

A bill in equity for the surrender of letters patent brought in the name of the United States, but not appearing to have been brought by a district attorney, is bad on demurrer.—United States v. Doughty, Case No. 14,986.

The patent may be repealed where the patentee was not the original inventor, though he believed himself to be such.—Delano v. Scott, Case No. 3,753.

Upon a trial under the general issue in a suit to repeal a patent, plaintiff has the burden of showing that the patent was obtained surreptitiously, or upon false suggestion.—Stearns v. Barrett, Case No. 13,337.

Parties in suit to invalidate patent granted by the commissioner after an interference are not confined to evidence before commissioner, nor is such evidence in the case.—Atkinson v. Boardman, Case No. 607.

Error committed in granting a rule to show cause why a patent should not be vacated as surreptitiously obtained cannot be corrected upon a motion to make absolute such rule.—Thompson v. Haight, Case No. 13,956.

An affidavit to the effect that a patent has been obtained "surreptitiously and upon false suggestions" is sufficient to warrant a judge in his discretion to grant a rule to show cause why the patent should not be vacated. He may also receive other affidavits and evidence in corroboration.—Thompson v. Haight, Case No. 13,956.

The entitling of an affidavit intended to be used as the foundation for a rule to show cause why a patent should not be vacated as in a proceeding already pending in court, when in fact no proceeding has yet been instituted, is good ground for vacating the rule to show cause.—Thompson v. Haight, Case No. 13,956.

Form of decree declaring a patent void and ordering the same canceled, under Act July 8, 1870, § 58.—Sturges v. Van Hagen, Case No. 13,570.

A circuit court can give a judgment declaring a patent void only in the cases provided for in section 6, Act 1793. If the patent is defective for any other cause, the court can only render a general judgment for the defendant.—Whitney v. Emmett, Case No. 17,585.

An order, on a rule to show cause why a sci. fa. should not issue to repeal a patent, is merely a preliminary proceeding, and does not determine the question of its validity.—Delano v. Scott, Case No. 3,753.

A judgment in favor of a patentee on a scire facias issued to obtain a repeal of a patent is not conclusive of his right in a subsequent suit for infringement.—Delano v. Scott, Case No. 3,753.

The proceedings under Act Feb. 21, 1793, c. 11, § 10, are in the nature of a scire facias at common law to repeal a patent; and, upon a judgment rendered on such a suit, error lies to the circuit court.—Stearns v. Barrett, Case No. 13,337.

A decision by the supreme court on the validity of a patent will be held binding on the circuit court, though the parties are not the same.—Richardson v. Lockwood, Case No. 11,786.

Where the court holds that either one of the patents is void, a decree should be entered annulling it.—Foster v. Lindsay, Case No. 4,976.

VI. TERM.

(A) DATE AND DURATION IN GENERAL.

§ 97. Date.

Date of filing of specifications in foreign country, taken as date of patenting there.—American Diamond Rock Boring Co. v. Sheldon, Case No. 297.

Where the application here is made before the issue of a foreign patent, it does not bear the date of the foreign patent, though the latter is first issued.—French v. Rogers, Case No. 5,103.

An English patent takes effect only from the date of its enrollment, and not from the date of the filing of the provisional specification.—Howe v. Morton, Case No. 6,769.

An English patent dates from the time of its publication.—Weston v. White, Case No. 17,458.

§ 98. Terms of patent.

Letters patent granted prior to Act July 8, 1870, limiting domestic patents to the term of a foreign patent, are not affected thereby.—Goff v. Stafford, Case No. 5,504; Badische Anilin & Soda Fabrik v. Hamilton Mfg. Co., Id. 721.

The words "patented abroad" (Act 1836, §§ 7, 15) do not apply to the French private patents.—Brooks v. Norcross, Case No. 1,957.

A domestic patent expires at the same time as the original term of a foreign patent for the same invention. Rev. St. § 4887.—Henry v. Providence Tool Co., Case No. 6,384.

Under the act of 1839, an inventor could take out a patent for the full term, although he had obtained and published a foreign patent within six months.—Kendrick v. Emmons, Case No. 7,695.

Under the act of 1836, a domestic patent obtained for an invention which the patentee has already patented abroad must be limited to 14 years from the date of the foreign patent; and, if issued for 14 years from its date, it is void.—Smith v. Ely, Case No. 13,043.

The effect of Act March 2, 1861, §§ 16, 17, was to give to an American patent a duration of 17 years from the date of a foreign patent previously granted to the patentee for the same invention.—Weston v. White, Case No. 17,458.

An English patent does not exist (Rev. St. §§ 4886, 4920, 4923) until the enrollment or sealing of the complete specification.—Brooks v. Norcross, Case No. 1,957.

(B) EXTENSIONS.

§ 99. Extensions by special act of congress.

Congress may authorize extension of a patent after the original term has expired.—Jordan v. Dobson, Case No. 7,519.

Congress may, by special act, grant an extension of a patent which has been once renewed.—Bloomer v. Stolley, Case No. 1,559.

A law extending a patent is binding on the courts until repealed, though alleged to have been procured by fraud and misrepresentation.—Gibson v. Gifford, Case No. 5,395.

The patentee will be held to representations made by him to congress upon the faith of which a patent was extended by special act.—Union Mfg. Co. v. Lounsbury, Case No. 14,368.

The grant of extension to Blanchard by Act Feb. 6, 1839, of a patent for machine for turning irregular forms, held valid, and such act construed.—Blanchard v. Sprague, Case No. 1,518; Blanchard's Gun-Stock Turning Factory v. Warner, Id. 1,521.

Act June 30, 1834, granting extension of patent to Blanchard, held without force because of variance in describing the date of the patent.—Blanchard v. Sprague, Case No. 1,517.

A legislative grant of an exclusive privilege in an invention for a limited time does not imply an irrevocable contract with the people that, at the expiration of the period, the invention shall become their property.—Evans v. Eaton, Case No. 4,559.

§ 100. Application to patent office for extension and proceedings thereon.

An extension of a patent made to the patentee on a copy of the original, where a reissue had been granted to an assignee, held valid.—Potter v. Braunsdorf, Case No. 11,321.

A notice of an application to extend the original patent is a sufficient notice of an application for the extension of a reissue.—Crompton v. Belknap Mills, Cases Nos. 3,406, 18,285; Clum v. Brewer, Id. 2,909.

An order extending a patent signed by the chief clerk acting as commissioner during a vacancy, after the approval of the Act of 1868, providing that the senior examiner in chief shall act as commissioner, is a nullity.—American Wood-Paper Co. v. Glen's Falls Paper Co., Case No. 321a.

An application filed February 15th for extension of a patent expiring May 15th, held within 90 days, as required by law.—Johnson v. Onion, Case No. 7,401.

An equitable interest in the applicant is sufficient to sustain an extension.—Gear v. Grosvenor, Case No. 5,291.

A stipulation that the applicant should be interested to the extent of one-half the proceeds from sales or uses of the patented invention is sufficient.—Gear v. Grosvenor, Case No. 5,291.

The commissioner of patents has jurisdiction of an application for an extension pending at the time of the passage of the act (May 27, 1848) conferring authority upon him to extend patents.—Colt v. Young, Case No. 3,032.

An extension of the term may be granted to the administrator of the patentee.—Woodworth v. Hall, Case No. 18,016; Same v. Sherman, Id. 18,019; Same v. Cheever, Id.

An inventor holding patents in trust for a corporation of which he is an officer, for the purpose of procuring extensions for the benefit of the corporation, will be required to make a full surrender of the patents and extensions to the corporations.—Consolidated Fruit-Jar Co. v. Whitney, Case No. 3,134.

An averment that the patent was duly extended by the commissioner of patents is supported by proof that the extension was granted by an acting commissioner, without proof that he is such de jure.—Dorsey Harvester Revolving-Rake Co. v. Marsh, Case No. 4,014.

The decision of the officer granting an extension is not subject to appeal or revision.—Dorsey Harvester Revolving-Rake Co. v. Marsh, Case No. 4,014.

The extension of a patent by the commissioner cannot be collaterally impeached.—American Wood-Paper Co. v. Glen's Falls Paper Co., Case No. 321.

The proceedings of a board granting the renewal of a patent need not be stated at length.—Brooks v. Jenkins, Case No. 1,953.

The functions of the board are in their nature judicial.—Brooks v. Jenkins, Case No. 1,953.

The decision of the commissioner is conclusive as to the regularity of proceedings on extension, in the absence of fraud.—Colt v. Young, Case No. 3,032; Jordan v. Dobson, Id. 7,519; Crompton v. Belknap Mills, Id. 18,285.

The judgment of the board granting a renewal to an administrator is not conclusive as to his right, as such, to a renewal.—Brooks v. Bicknell, Case No. 1,944.

On a surrender and extension, the new letters may be issued with an amended specification.—Woodworth v. Edwards, Case No. 18,014.

§ 101. Construction and operation of extension.

A person building a patented machine between the expiration of the term and the granting of an extension held not entitled to use the machine after a second extension, though the act granting the first extension contained a proviso allowing the use of machines so constructed.—Blanchard v. Haynes, Case No. 1,512.

Under the grant of extension to Blanchard by Act Feb. 6, 1839, assignees of the old patent were given equally exclusive privilege in the extended term.—Blanchard's Gun-Stock Turning Factory v. Warner, Case No. 1,521.

After an extension of a patent under Act July 4, 1836, § 18, the original patent becomes virtually a patent for the term of 21 years.—Gibson v. Harris, Case No. 5,396.

An extension of a prior foreign patent will not keep alive a subsequent domestic patent, but it will expire at the same time with the original term of the foreign patent.—Reissner v. Sharp, Case No. 11,689.

A patent surrendered and renewed operates as from the commencement of the original patent, except as to causes of action arising before the renewal.—Woodworth v. Hall, Case No. 18,016.

The expiration of a prior English patent will not affect the validity of the subsequent extension of the patent for the United States.—Tilghman v. Mitchell, Case No. 14,042.

The presumption that a renewal was legally made may be rebutted.—Allen v. Blunt, Case No. 217.

Proof of fraud in obtaining extension—when sufficient to defeat the patent.—Brooks v. Jenkins, Case No. 1,953.

See, also, post, §§ 146, 154.

VII. REISSUES.

§ 102. Power to reissue.
The act (July 4, 1836, § 13) authorizing reissues is to be construed liberally, and not literally, as restraining and limiting the right.—Ex parte Ball, Case No. 810.

§ 103. Grounds of reissue.
A reissue is not authorized unless the original patent is inoperative or invalid from a defective or insufficient specification, or the claim of the patentee exceeds his right. Act 1870, § 53.—Giant Powder Co. v. California Powder Works, Case No. 5,379.

A reissue may be obtained in order to claim a subcombination omitted from the original by inadvertence or mistake.—Stevens v. Pritchard, Case No. 13,407.

A reissue will be granted where the specifications are defective.—Smith v. Pearce, Case No. 13,089.

Claiming for a new article of manufacture, if by inadvertence and mistake, may be cured by a reissue for a combination and arrangement of parts.—Middletown Tool Co. v. Judd, Case No. 9,536.

§ 104. Persons entitled to reissue.
The administrator of a deceased patentee may apply for and obtain a renewal in his own name.—Brooks v. Bicknell, Case No. 1,944; Same v. Jenkins, Id. 1,953; Carew v. Boston Elastic Fabric Co., Id. 2,397.

The administrator of a deceased patentee is the only party having a right to obtain a reissue, and such right is not affected by the fact that he has previously granted exclusive rights under the patent for certain territory.—Smith v. Mercer, Case No. 13,078.

Where a patent has, by the death of the patentee, devolved on his executor, and has been assigned by him, the assignee may take out the reissue in his own name.—Carew v. Boston Elastic Fabric Co., Case No. 2,398.

A patentee, whose devices are new, is at liberty to claim each, by way of reissue, although he may have represented and claimed them originally as acting conjointly.—Gallahue v. Butterfield, Case No. 5,198.

A reissue may be granted to an assignee of letters patent upon his application without the consent, approbation, or knowledge of the original patentee.—Swift v. Whisen, Case No. 13,700.

A reissue granted to an inventor after he has assigned his entire interest, by writing duly recorded, is not void where the surrender was made with consent of the assignee, in the absence of fraud or concealment.—Dental Vulcanite Co. v. Wetherbee, Case No. 3,810.

The surrender of the original patent by the patentee at the request of the assignees, and a reissue to the patentee, who immediately assigns the same to the assignees of the original patent, though irregular, does not vitiate the reissue.—Wing v. Warren, Case No. 17,871.

The prior use of an invention under a defective patent cannot take away the right to a reissue, or authorize its use after the reissue.—Hussey v. Bradley, Case No. 6,946.

§ 105. Time of making application.
Seven years' delay to obtain a reissue held fatal.—Cammeyer v. Newton, Case No. 2,344.

§ 106. Surrender of original patent.
A patentee cannot take out a new patent for the same invention until his first patent is surrendered, repealed, or declared void.—Morris v. Huntington, Case No. 9,831.

The act of congress does not, in terms, require that a surrender shall be in writing.—Dental Vulcanite Co. v. Wetherbee, Case No. 3,810.

The assignee of an undivided part of the patent must join with the patentee or his legal representatives in a surrender.—Potter v. Holland, Case No. 11,329.

The purpose of a surrender and reissue is to render effectual the actual invention for which the original patent should have been granted, as shown, suggested, or substantially indicated in the original specification, drawings, or model.—Abbe v. Clark, Case No. 5.

The patentee cannot, by a surrender, affect the rights of third persons to whom he has previously passed his interest in the whole or a part of the patent, without their consent.—Potter v. Holland, Case No. 11,329; Woodworth v. Stone, Id. 18,021.

The surrender of a patent for a reissue is a conclusive admission that the original patent has no validity to support an action for an infringement.—Moffitt v. Gaar, Case No. 9,690.

A surrender and an application for a reissue may be withdrawn, by leave of the commissioner, for good cause shown, at any time before the proceedings are fully completed and duly recorded.—Forbes v. Barstow Stove Co., Case No. 4,923.

All rights under the original patent cease upon its surrender, except as they are secured by a reissue.—Brown v. Hinkley, Case No. 2,012.

If a reissue is invalid for want of authority to make it, the surrender is ineffective.—French v. Rogers, Case No. 5,103.

§ 107. Application for reissue and proceedings thereon.
On application for a reissue the commissioner cannot hear evidence to determine the invention and enlarge the original claim.—Cahart v. Austin, Case No. 2,288.

The applicant for a reissue on interference declared must show that the improvement was invented before the date of the original patent.—Dyson v. Gambrill, Case No. 4,230.

An oath that the original patent "is not fully valid and available" is not such an oath as is required by law, and a reissue founded thereon is not valid.—Whitely v. Swayne, Case No. 17,568.

The reissue of patents, inoperative or invalid because of defective descriptions or specifications, is of course, the commissioner having no discretion. Act 1836, c. 357, § 13.—Ex parte Dyson, Case No. 4,228.

The commissioner, on the application for a reissue, cannot look beyond the patents as originally granted, with the specifications, diagrams, models, etc., filed or deposited to ascertain the invention. Act 1836.—Giant Powder Co. v. California Powder Works, Case No. 5,379.

The commissioner, in deciding upon the question whether the invention claimed in the reissue is the same as that intended to be patented under the original application, should receive all legal proof offered.—Hussey v. Bradley, Case No. 6,946.

A pending application for a reissue does not supersede the original letters.—Forbes v. Barstow Stove Co., Case No. 4,923.

§ 108. Identity of invention—In general. The reissue must be for the same invention.—Cahart v. Austin, Case No. 2,288; Ex parte Dyson, Id. 4,228; Sickles v. Evans, Id. 12,839; Stevens v. Pritchard, Id. 13,407; Tucker v. Tucker Mfg. Co., Id. 14,227.

New features or devices neither described nor indicated in the original specification should not be embodied in the new description.—Albright v. Celluloid Harness Trimming Co., Case No. 147; Calkins v. Bertrand, Id. 2,317; Carew v. Boston Elastic Fabric Co., Id. 2,397; Doughty v. West, Id. 4 028; Swain Turbine & Mfg. Co. v. Ladd, Id. 13,662; Thomas v. Shoe Machinery Mfg. Co., Id. 13,911; Vogler v. Semple, Id. 16,987; Wells v. Gill, Id. 17,395.

A reissue cannot be sustained by extrinsic proof that the patentee was the inventor of all that is claimed in it, if such claim was not shown or suggested in the original specification, drawings, or model.—Sarven v. Hall, Case No. 12,369.

Devices shown in the original drawings, but not specified, may be claimed in the reissue.—Bantz v. Elsas, Case No. 967; Hoffheins v. Brandt, Id. 6,575; Lorillard v. McDowell, Id. 8,510; Morris v. Royer, Id. 9,835.

In the reissue, under Act July 8, 1870, § 53, of a chemical patent, it is necessary to its validity that the subject-matter should be found described in the original patent.—Tarr v. Webb, Case No. 13,757.

Differences in the claims are consistent with the identity of the thing designed to be patented in both patents; it being one object of the surrender to correct by changing the description or claim, or both.—Cahart v. Austin, Case No. 2,-288; Crompton v. Belknap Mills, Id. 3,406; Hussey v. McCormick, Id. 6,948; Pearl v. Ocean Mills, Id. 10,876; Stevens v. Pritchard, Id. 13,407.

No more can be embraced in a reissue than was invented before or at the time of the original patent, and omitted therefrom by accident or mistake, and without fraud or deceptive intention.—Brown v. Selby, Case No. 2,030; Draper v. Wattles, Id. 4,073; Dyson v. Gambrill, Id. 4,230; French v. Rogers, Id. 5,103; Hoffheins v. Brandt, Id. 6,575; Kirby v. Dodge & Stevenson Mfg. Co., Id. 7,838; Knight v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., Id. 7,882; Swift v. Whisen, Id. 13,700; Carew v. Boston Elastic Fabric Co., Id. 2,397.

Upon a surrender for reissue, the patentee or his assignee may make the reissue what he would have made the original, if he had known how.—Wilson v. Singer, Case No. 17,835.

If the patent does not relate to a machine, the only modification that can be made is to make the claim and specification correspond.—Giant Powder Co. v. California Powder Works, Case No. 5,379.

The patentee need not describe and claim, in the specification of a reissue, either in words or idea, just what he described and claimed in his original.—French v. Rogers, Case No. 5,103.

Reissue need not claim everything embraced in original.—Albright v. Celluloid Harness-Trimming Co., Case No. 147; Carver v. Braintree Mfg. Co., Id. 2,485; Chicago Fruit-House Co. v. Busch, Id. 2,669; Dorsey Harvester Revolving-Rake Co. v. Marsh, Id. 4,014; Gould v. Ballard, Id. 5,635; Knight v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., Id. 7,882; Crompton v. Belknap Mills, Id. 18,285.

It is lawful to reissue a patent with claims to combinations of fewer elements than were contained in the combination of the claim of the original patent.—Christman v. Rumsey, Case No. 2,704; Herring v. Nelson, Id. 6,424; Parham v. American Buttonhole, Overseaming & Sewing Mach. Co., Id. 10,713.

The claims of a reissue may be restricted or enlarged to cover the real invention.—Dorsey Harvester Revolving-Rake Co. v. Marsh, Case No. 4,014; Ex parte Ball, Id. 810.

The claims in the reissue may be broader than those in the original.—Morse & Bain Tel. Case, Case No. 9,861.

Tests to be applied in considering whether a reissue is for the same invention as the original.—Aultman v. Holley, Case No. 656.

Drawings and models filed with the original specification are proper subjects for consideration in determining an alleged discrepancy.—Parham v. American Buttonhole, Overseaming & Sewing Mach. Co., Case No. 10,713.

Differences in the description and claims of the old and new specifications are not the tests of substantial diversity. It is only necessary that the identity of the subject-matter of the original patent be preserved.—Parham v. American Buttonhole, Overseaming & Sewing Mach. Co., Case No. 10,713.

In determining whether reissue is for different invention, the two patents must be compared.—American Diamond Rock Boring Co. v. Sheldon, Case No. 296.

New matter cannot be introduced in a reissue, nor can there be an enlargement growing out of the subsequent advance of the art.—United States & Foreign Salamander Felting Co. v. Haven, Case No. 16,788.

A reissue may include mere matters of mechanical adaptation or mechanical equivalents.—Decker v. Grote, Case No. 3,726; Ex parte Dietz, Id. 3,902; Sloat v. Spring, Id. 12,948a.

Where the patent is for a process, reissues for a compound are invalid.—Giant Powder Co. v. California Powder Works, Case No. 5,379.

Where the original describes merely a new and useful manufacture, the reissue cannot include a claim for the process.—Kelleher v. Darling, Case No. 7,653.

A new function developed by combination of different elements is beyond the scope of a reissue.—Ex parte Ball, Case No. 810.

A reissue of a patent for an improvement in the manufacture of hard rubber held void as including other vulcanizable gums than India-rubber.—Goodyear v. Providence Rubber Co., Case No. 5,583.

A reissue is not invalid because laying the greater stress on one of two forms of invention included in the original patent.—American Nicholson Pavement Co. v. Elizabeth, Case No. 311.

The reissue of a patent so as to make the invention apply to machinery the claim to which had been raised in the original application and abandoned is void.—Wicks v. Stevens, Case No. 17,616.

Where the original specification described a combination of a number of ingredients performing certain functions less than those claimed, the reissue may claim such combination.—Pearl v. Ocean Mills, Case No. 10,876.

Reissue may include features disclaimed in original patent by mistake of patent office.—American Shoe-Tip Co. v. National Shoe-Toe Protector Co., Case No. 317; Hayden v. James, Id. 6,260; Hussey v. Bradley, Id. 6,946.

Reissue held for the same invention.—Boomer v. United Power Press Co., Case No. 1,638.

§ 109. —— Evidence of identity.

A reissue is prima facie evidence that the invention claimed in the original and the reissued patent are the same.—Andrews v. Wright, Case No. 382; Bantz v. Elsas, Id. 967; Forbes v. Barstow Stove Co., Id. 4,923; Hussey v. McCormick, Id. 6,948; Jordan v. Dobson, Id. 7,519; Poppenhusen v. Falke, Id. 11,279; Sloat v. Spring, Id. 12,948a; Stevens v. Pritchard, Id. 13,407.

The action of the commissioner in granting a reissue has more than prima facie influence in finally deciding the question of identity of invention.—French v. Rogers, Case No. 5,103.

A reissue is not conclusive upon the question whether it is for the same invention as the original.—Bridge v. Brown, Case No. 1,857; Cahart v. Austin, Id. 2,288.

No presumption arises, from the fact that claims made in a reissued patent are not found in the original, that such claims were not intended to be made in the original.—Eickemeyer Hat-Blocking Mach. Co. v. Pearce, Case No. 4,312.

In determining whether the reissued patent is broader than the original, the court is confined to the records in the patent office.—Johnson v. Beard, Case No. 7,371.

The office records as to whether or not there was an honest mistake are not conclusive, but the applicant may introduce any competent testimony in support of his contention.—Ex parte Dyson, Case No. 4,228.

The patent office has no power to make rules restricting the evidence in such cases to that furnished by its records.—Ex parte Dyson, Case No. 4,228.

In the absence of fraud, the only mode of impeaching a reissue, on the ground that it is for a different invention, is by showing such difference on the face of the instrument.—Middletown Tool Co. v. Judd, Case No. 9,536.

Rule 26 of the patent office, limiting evidence on amendment of specification to the records of the office, refers to rejected applications for original patents, and not to cases of reissue under section 13, Act 1836.—Ex parte Dyson, Case No. 4,228.

To sustain the defense that a reissue patent is broader than the original, the latter must be introduced in evidence.—Doherty v. Haynes, Case No. 3,963.

Whether a reissue was improperly granted is a matter of construction to be determined by the court from inspection and comparison of the original and reissued patents.—La Baw v. Hawkins, Case No. 7,960.

§ 110. Reissues for parts of original invention.

A patent may be reissued in several parts. Act March 3, 1837, § 5.—Goodyear v. Providence Rubber Co., Case No. 5,583.

Where the claim of the renewed patent was not for distinct improvements, but for additional parts of the same improvement, the same thing was patented in both patents.—Carver v. Braintree Mfg. Co., Case No. 2,485.

The right to reissue in two divisions, one for the process and the other for the product illustrated.—Badische Anilin & Soda Fabrik v. Hamilton Mfg. Co., Case No. 721.

An original patent for a process held properly reissued in two patents, one for a process and the other for the product.—Goodyear v. Wait, Case No. 5,587; Tucker v. Burditt, Id. 14,216.

On a surrender and reissue, the patentee has a right to a patent for a division or separation of each essential part in combination with the other parts of the same invention in which it was connected.—Ex parte Selden, Case No. 12,638; Wheeler v. Clipper Mower, etc., Co., Id. 17,493; Same v. McCormick, Id. 17,499.

The patentee, in obtaining separate reissues for the several devices contained in a patent for a combination, may give the same identical description in the specification of each reissue of each and all of the devices included in the original.—Wheeler v. McCormick, Case No. 17,499.

If a patent is reissued in divisional parts, each division must be for some distinct and separate part of that invention.—Giant Powder Co. v. California Powder Works, Case No. 5,379.

Where an original patent is reissued in divisions, such divisions are to be treated as but one patent with several claims.—Pennsylvania Salt Mfg. Co. v. Thomas, Case No. 10,956.

In the case of separate reissues for the several devices of a combination for which the original was issued, where part only are extended, the monopoly is not ended as to all the devices.—Wheeler v. McCormick, Case No. 17,499.

§ 111. Conclusiveness and effect of decisions of patent office.

The decision of the commissioner of patents must be regarded as conclusive in all collateral proceedings.—Goodyear v. Providence Rubber Co., Case No. 5,583.

The reissue furnishes prima facie evidence that everything necessary to justify the commissioner in granting the reissue had been produced before the grant was made.—Hoffheins v. Brandt, Case No. 6,575; Jordan v. Dobson, Id. 7,519; Christman v. Rumsey, Id. 2,704; Judson v. Bradford, Id. 7,564.

The effect of the commissioner's decision, considered.—Milligan & Higgins Glue Co. v. Upton, Case No. 9,607.

The decision of the commissioner in granting a reissue is final and conclusive, except where he has apparently exceeded his authority.—Parham v. American Buttonhole, Overseaming & Sewing Mach. Co., Case No. 10,713; Potter v. Holland, Id. 11,330; Thomas v. Shoe Machinery Mfg. Co., Id. 13,911; Wells v. Gill, Id. 17,394; Same v. Jacques, Id. 17,398; Woodworth v. Stone, Id. 18,021.

And his decision may be impeached for fraud.—Birdsall v. McDonald, Case No. 1,434; Blake v. Stafford, Id. 1,504; Day v. Goodyear, Id. 3,678; Hussey v. Bradley, Id. 6,946; Miller & Peters Mfg. Co. v. Du Brul, Id. 9,597; Potter v. Holland, Id. 11,330.

The commissioner's action in granting a reissue conclusively determines that the original patent was not invalid by reason of insufficient specification, or by reason of claiming too much, and that the error arose by inadvertence or mistake, without fraudulent intent.—Kerosene Lamp Heater Co. v. Littell, Case No. 7,724.

Matters of fact connected with the surrender and reissue are closed by the granting of the reissue.—Metropolitan Washing-Mach. Co. v. Providence Tool Co., Case No. 9,507.

A reissue can be impeached for fraud only by bill in equity in the name and by the authority of the United States.—Birdsall v. McDonald, Case No. 1,434.

A renewal to a person as administrator is conclusive on the courts, in the trial of the validity of such renewal, that such person was administrator.—Goodyear v. Blake, Case No. 5,560.

§ 112. Reissues of reissued patents.
There may be more than one reissue of the same patent. Reissues are favored where the patentee is more specific or more modest in his claims.—French v. Rogers, Case No. 5,103.

A second reissue may be granted under Act 1836.—Morse & Bain Tel. Case, Case No. 9,861.

A second reissue on surrender of the first must be limited to the invention embraced in the first reissue.—Giant Powder Co. v. California Powder Works, Case No. 5,379.

§ 113. Validity of reissued patents.
Knowledge by an applicant for a reissue that he was not the first inventor of an invention covered by any of his claims invalidates his patent.—Singer v. Walmsley, Case No. 12,900.

An obvious mistake in description made in copying the specifications of a reissue, and which can easily be corrected, does not impair the patentee's rights.—Kendrick v. Emmons, Case No. 7,695.

The reissue is void where it was fraudulently extended beyond the claims of the original for a deceptive purpose.—Swift v. Whisen, Case No. 13,700.

Where new claims in reissue are so interwoven with the elements specified in the original that they cannot be separated the patent is entirely void.—Cahart v. Austin, Case No. 2,288.

Patents reissued after the originals have been declared void for want of novelty cannot be sustained.—Jones v. McMurray, Case No. 7,479.

The concurrence of a transferee of an interest for a given territory is not necessary to the validity of a reissue.—Meyer v. Bailey, Case No. 9,516.

It is no objection to the validity of a reissue that its object was to extend the monopoly secured by the patent beyond the limits assigned to it by a judicial decision upon it in its original form.—Poppenhusen v. Falke, Case No. 11,280.

The presumption of law is always in favor of the validity of the reissue.—Reissner v. Anness, Case No. 11,688; American Nicholson Pavement Co. v. Elizabeth, Id. 311.

The introduction of a comma into the specification of a reissue in a sentence found in the original specifications, and alleged to be an interpolation and to introduce a new idea, held to be accidental and a clerical error.—Robertson v. Secombe Mfg. Co., Case No. 11,928.

§ 114. Construction and operation of reissued patents.
Where the reissued patent is of doubtful construction, reference may be made to the original.—Ely v. Monson & B. Mfg. Co., Case No. 4,431.

Although the broad claim of plaintiff's reissue covers defendant's device, the court will look into the body of the specification of both the original and reissued patents, to ascertain whether there is any invention to support the claim.—Forsyth v. Clapp, Case No. 4,949.

The reissue of an extended patent will be for the full term of the extension, regardless of the grant.—Gibson v. Harris, Case No. 5,396.

Inadvertence and error in the disclaimer may be cured by reissue.—Poppenhusen v. Falke, Case No. 11,279.

The validity of the reissue is to be determined by comparing the terms and import of the original and reissued letters, and a consideration of the patent office drawings and model.—Seymour v. Marsh, Case No. 12,687.

A surrender and correction of a patent give effect to it in all cases of infringement subsequently accruing, though the patent was originally invalid, and will be considered as having been made at the time it was originally issued.—Bliss v. Brooklyn, Case No. 1,544; Bloomer v. Stolley, Id. 1,559.

On the question of the validity of a reissue, the patent-office model, filed with the original application, is admissible to aid in determining what was described therein.—Reissner v. Anness, Case No. 11,688.

The recital in a reissue of a prior assignment, and the granting of the reissue to the assignee, make a prima facie case of title.—Middletown Tool Co. v. Judd, Case No. 9,536.

A reissue to defendant of later date than plaintiff's patent, but of an original of earlier date, will control in a suit for infringement.—House v. Young, Case No. 6,738.

Title of patent presumed to be in one to whom reissue is granted as assignee.—American Diamond Rock Boring Co. v. Sheldon, Case No. 296.

Where one paragraph in a reissue leads to a construction which would make the reissue void, explanation of its meaning may be sought in a succeeding one.—Carew v. Boston Elastic Fabric Co., Case No. 2,397.

A reissue granted to an assignee may be extended to the patentee.—Crompton v. Belknap Mills, Case No. 3,406.

See, also, post, §§ 146, 154.

VIII. DISCLAIMERS.

§ 115. Right to disclaim part of claims.
The patentee may eliminate or withdraw in the same writing with the disclaimer the parts of the body of the specification on which the disclaimed claim, or part of a claim, is founded. —Schillinger v. Gunther, Case No. 12,458.

§ 116. Patents and claims subject to disclaimer.
There may be a disclaimer of something which was introduced into the reissued patent, which did not exist in the original patent.—Schillinger v. Gunther, Case No. 12,458.

Act 1839, §§ 7, 9, authorizing a disclaimer, do not apply where the patent is for combination of parts.—Batten v. Clayton, Case No. 1,105.

Defect of broad claim covering primitive device and improvement cured by disclaimer, in case of limited knowledge of primitive device.—Aiken v. Dolan, Case No. 110.

§ 117. Persons entitled to disclaim.
The owner of a territorial interest may make a disclaimer for his interest which is to be taken as a part of the original specification for the territory owned by him.—Potter v. Holland, Case No. 11,329.

In a joint suit in equity by a patentee and his assignee in part, a disclaimer by the patentee alone will not entitle the parties to the benefit of Act 1837, c. 45, §§ 7, 9.—Wyeth v. Stone, Case No. 18,107.

A disclaimer made by an attorney in the prosecution of an application does not necessarily estop the patentee from maintaining that his claim embraces the matter referred to.—Mann v. Bayliss, Case No. 9,034.

§ 118. Sufficiency of disclaimer.
Sufficiency of disclaimer limiting the claim of a patent.—Taylor v. Archer, Case No. 13,778.

In making a disclaimer of a part of an invention claimed, through the mistake of the person making it, he must state his interest in the patent.—Brooks v. Jenkins, Case No. 1,953.

The sufficiency of a disclaimer, as to whether or not the patentee stated in it "the extent of his interest" in the patent, as required by Act March 3, 1837, § 7, considered.—Foote v. Silsby, Case No. 4,916.

§ 119. Time of making disclaimer.
The patentee must, within a reasonable time, disclaim all parts not properly claimed.—Brooks v. Jenkins, Case No. 1,953; McCormick v. Seymour, Id. 8,727; Parker v. Stiles, Id. 10,749.

A patentee who claims both old and new things must disclaim what is old before he is entitled to recover.—Hovey v. Stevens, Case No. 6,745.

The owner of the entire right in the territory where the infringements had taken place allowed to make a disclaimer after final hearing.—Myers v. Frame, Case No. 9,991.

A disclaimer at the trial, of a thing actually claimed in the patent, is not effectual to sustain it.—Parker v. Sears, Case No. 10,748.

Where a proper disclaimer is entered during pendency of a suit, plaintiff may recover in respect of what is not disclaimed, where there has been no unreasonable neglect or delay to enter the disclaimer.—Burdett v. Estey, Case No. 2,145; Hall v. Wiles, Id. 5,954; Schillinger v. Gunther, Id. 12,458; Tuck v. Bramhill, Id. 14,213.

The question whether there has been unreasonable negligence or delay in entering such disclaimer is a question which goes to his right of action. Act March 3, 1837, § 9.—Hall v. Wiles, Case No. 5,954.

A disclaimer after suit brought is not sufficient to entitle plaintiff to a perpetual injunction.—Wyeth v. Stone, Case No. 18,107.

The failure to file a disclaimer until after suit brought will not prevent the court increasing the amount of the verdict.—Guyon v. Serrell, Case No. 5,881.

§ 120. Effect of disclaimer.
A disclaimer limited to the application in which it is made does not prevent the inventor from claiming the same matter in a subsequent application.—Hill v. Dunklee, Case No. 6,489.

A patentee is not entitled to costs where he fails to file a disclaimer until after suit brought.—Aiken v. Dolan, Case No. 110; Burdett v. Estey, Id. 2,145; Guyon v. Serrell, Id. 5,881; Myers v. Frame, Id. 9,991; Reed v. Cutter, Id. 11,645; Schillinger v. Gunther, Id. 12,458; Singer v. Walmsley, Id. 12,900; Taylor v. Archer, Id. 13,778; Tuck v. Bramhill, Id. 14,213.

A disclaimer by plaintiff, subsequent to a verdict for him in a suit for infringement of a patent, does not deprive him of costs.—Peek v. Frame, Case No. 10,904.

A patent is not rendered void as to certain valid claims because of unreasonable neglect or delay to enter a disclaimer as to invalid claims.—Burdett v. Estey, Case No. 2,145.

The want of a disclaimer is no ground for invalidating the patent, where the invalid claim is not an essential part, and was introduced without intent to defraud or mislead.—Hall v. Wiles, Case No. 5,954.

IX. CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION OF LETTERS PATENT.

(A) IN GENERAL.

§ 121. General rules of construction.
Rules for construing patents.—Francis v. Mellor, Case No. 5,039.

Patents will be liberally construed.—Ames v. Howard, Case No. 326; Blanchard v. Sprague, Id. 1,518; Davoll v. Brown, Id. 3,662; Imlay v. Norwich & W. R. Co., Id. 7,012; Parker v. Stiles, Id. 10,749; Ryan v. Goodwin, Id. 12,186.

Courts will not resort to conjecture in order to sustain the patent.—Ames v. Howard, Case No. 326.

All constructions must be unfavorable to defendant who denies access to his machine, and does not produce any model or drawing, nor the produce which it manufactures.—Union Paper-Bag Mach. Co. v. Binney, Case No. 14,387.

The claim made by the patentee must govern in the construction of the patent, although he might have claimed something different.—Kidd v. Spence, Case No. 7,755.

§ 122. What law governs.
Rules governing the proper reading of a disputed translation of a foreign patent.—White v. Allen, Case No. 17,535.

§ 123. Accompanying documents and proceedings in patent office.
A patent is to be construed without reference to previous correspondence with the patent office in relation thereto, or rejected applications therefor.—Piper v. Brown, Case No. 11,180.

An ambiguity in a patent may be explained by the affidavit annexed to the specification.—Pettibone v. Derringer, Case No. 11,043.

In the construction of a patent the whole instrument embracing the specification and drawing is to be taken together.—Parker v. Stiles, Case No. 10,749; Davoll v. Brown, Id. 3,662.

§ 124. Effect of patent as estoppel.
The obtaining of a joint patent estops the patentees to claim under prior several patents for the same invention.—Barrett v. Hall, Case No. 1,047.

A patent, while it remains in full force and unrepealed, estops the patentee from taking a patent for the same invention, and the time of its exclusive right begins to run from that period.—Odiorne v. Amesbury Nail Factory, Case No. 10,430.

A patentee is not estopped by words omitted from an amended specification.—Allen v. Blunt, Case No. 217.

§ 125. Suits for construction.
An action will not lie by a junior patentee against a senior patentee to determine the scope of the latter's patent, and to enjoin him from bringing suits for infringement against plaintiff and his customers.—Celluloid Mfg. Co. v. Goodyear Dental Vulcanite Co., Case No. 2,543.

(B) LIMITATION OF CLAIMS.

§ 126. Operation and effect of claims in general.
Claims should be liberally construed to cover the actual invention.—Goodyear v. Berry, Case No. 5,556; Same v. Central R. Co., Id. 5,563; Hamilton v. Ives, Id. 5,982.

That interpretation will be adopted which will give the fullest effect to the nature and extent of the claim made by the inventor.—Ryan v. Goodwin, Case No. 12,186.

The proper rule is to construe the claims of the patent in connection with the descriptive parts of the article, and with reference to what is seen to be the real invention.—Coffin v. Ogden, Case No. 2,950.

The common knowledge in the business of life must be kept in view in construing the general terms of a description.—Tilghman v. Mitchell, Case No. 14,043.

Words will be so construed as to enlarge or contract the scope of the claim, so as to uphold the invention made and described, only when not absolutely inconsistent with the language of the claim.—Estabrook v. Dunbar, Case No. 4,535.

§ 127. Title of patent.

The patentee is not controlled by the title of the patent, but only by the patent, specifications, and drawings.—Bell v. Daniels, Case No. 1,247.

§ 128. Specifications, drawings, and models, and construction of claim in connection therewith.

The whole specification and the drawings may be referred to, to ascertain the extent of the claim.—Earle v. Sawyer, Case No. 4,247; Foss v. Herbert, Id. 4,957; Hamilton v. Ives, Id. 5,982; Hayden v. Suffolk Mfg. Co., Id. 6,261; Johnson v. Root, Id. 7,411; King v. Gedney, Id. 7,795; Kittle v. Merriam, Id. 7,857; Morris v. Barrett, Id. 9,827; Ransom v. New York, Id. 11,573; Sloat v. Spring, Id. 12,948a.

Drawings annexed to a patent issued under the act of 1837 form no part of the specification, where no drawings were annexed to the original patent.—Wilton v. Railroad Co., Case No. 17,856.

Drawings not referred to in the specification of a patent may be treated as part of the specification, and used to explain and enlarge it.—Washburn v. Gould, Case No. 17,214.

The original deposited model may be examined to resolve doubts raised by inspection of drawings.—Aiken v. Dolan, Case No. 110.

A claim which makes proper reference to the specification will not be construed as covering a result, but as covering the means by which it is attained.—Sickles v. Evans, Case No. 12,839; Rogers v. Sargent, Id. 12,020.

The words "as specified" do not limit the claims to the particular mode of practicing the invention described in the patent.—Lorillard v. McDowell, Case No. 8,510.

The words "substantially as described and shown," in the claim of the patent, held to relate only to material features of the combination specified, to be ascertained by considering the purpose of the machine, and what are the elements of the combination which constitute its distinctive character, and are effective in producing the peculiar result for which the contrivance is made.—Waterbury Brass Co. v. Miller, Case No. 17,254.

"Substantially as described," used in a claim, limits general words to the particular description found in the specifications.—Knox v. Murtha, Case No. 7,911.

The claim will be construed to be co-extensive with the invention as shown by the specification if it can be done without doing violence to its language.—Whipple v. Middlesex Co., Case No. 17,520.

The patentee will be concluded by the statement in his claim, uncontrolled by the specifications, where it is clear and explicit, leaving no room for construction.—Rich v. Close, Case No. 11,757.

The words "substantially as described" must necessarily be implied, and, being so implied, they involve a reference to the specification.—Westinghouse v. Gardner, etc., Air-Brake Co., Case No. 17,450.

A claim for the "arrangement of," etc., "as herein described," requires a reference to the description and drawings to ascertain its true construction.—Knight v. Gavit, Case No. 7,884.

Claims containing words referring back to the specification must be construed in the light of the explanations contained in the specification.—Gottfried v. Phillip Best Brewing Co., Case No. 5,633; Roberts v. Dickey, Id. 11,899.

In a claim, the words "the described," etc., are construed not solely with reference to the words in the specification, but with reference also to the limitations in the context of the claim.—Pearl v. Ocean Mills, Case No. 10,876.

Specifications should be liberally construed.—Goodyear v. Berry, Case No. 5,556; Same v. Central R. Co., Id. 5,563; Ames v. Howard, Id. 326; Hamilton v. Ives, Id. 5,982; Ex parte Tillman, Id. 14,050.

It is immaterial what the claim in the summary is, if its foundation has not been made in the descriptive part of the specification.—Huggins v. Hubby, Case No. 6,839.

The word "about," in a specification, rejected for uncertainty, where to give it effect would invalidate the patent.—Davis v. Palmer, Case No. 3,645.

The import of the summary of a specification is to be determined by reference to the specification as a whole.—Bryan v. Stevens, Case No. 2,066a.

§ 129. State of art.

The claims are to be construed with reference to the state of the art at the time of the invention.—Burden v. Corning, Case No. 2,143; Estabrook v. Dunbar, Id. 4,535; Mann v. Bayliss, Id. 9,034; Pitts v. Wemple, Id. 11,194; Smith v. Prior, Id. 13,095.

§ 130. Agreements of patentee with commissioner and proceedings in patent office.

An agreement by the patentee, made with the commissioner, that the patent should not extend to certain articles, will limit his claim.—Pike v. Potter, Case No. 11,162.

Neither the correspondence between the commissioner of patents and the applicant, nor the proceedings in the patent office pending an application, are admissible to enlarge, diminish, or vary the language of the claim.—Goodyear Dental Vulcanite Co. v. Gardiner, Case No. 5,591.

To determine the patentee's own construction of his claim, the patent-office files may be resorted to, to ascertain what changes were made in the original specifications and claims, and the significance of such charges.—Trader v. Messmore, Case No. 14,132.

Declarations of the patentee, undertaking to restrict the invention within a narrower compass than that stated in his specifications, will not affect the construction of the patent in the hands of a prior assignee.—Union Paper-Bag Mach. Co. v. Pultz & Walkley Co., Case No. 14,392.

A proposition to limit the claim made by the patentee to the commissioner, but not accepted by him, is not binding.—Pike v. Potter, Case No. 11,162.

§ 131. Scope and character of inventions.

The patent is not limited in its scope to the patentee's theory of his invention.—Foss v. Herbert, Case No. 4,957; Stow v. Chicago, Id. 13,512; Wells v. Jacques, Id. 17,398. But see Couse v. Johnson, Case No. 3,288.

A claim for a result produced substantially in the manner and for the purpose described will be construed to be for the mechanism described, and not for the result itself.—Henderson v. Cleveland Co-operative Stove Co., Case No. 6,351.

The patentee must be limited within the claims of the patent, and the description of the particular mechanism, and the application he has made, by which the result is produced.—Fuller v. Yentzer, Case No. 5,151.

The scope of the patent is fixed by what was known at the date of the completed invention, and not by what was known at the time when the application was made.—Sprague v. Adriance, Case No. 13,248.

A patentee is not bound by the qualities imparted to the article in his description, but by the qualities of the article as derived from the product of the process or compound patented.—Goodyear v. New York Gutta Percha, etc., Co., Case No. 5,580.

A description of one mode of practicing the invention does not exclude a method, different from it only in a single detail, which produces the same result and is distinctly within its object.—Lorillard v. McDowell, Case No. 8,510.

Construction of Claim: "The above-described method of increasing the productiveness of oil wells by causing an explosion of gunpowder, or its equivalent, substantially as above described."—Roberts v. Dickey, Case No. 11,899.

Where the discoverer discloses only one or more of the derivatives or secondary truths of the principle discovered, his patent will be limited accordingly.—Detmold v. Reeves, Case No. 3,831.

The patent to the discoverer will be as broad as his mental conception which he embodies in some mechanical device or some process of art. —Detmold v. Reeves, Case No. 3,831.

The patentee will not be confined to the form of a device, where he states in his application that he does not wish to confine himself to the form shown.—Cornell v. Downer & Bemis Brewing Co., Case No. 3,236.

A patent will not cover a substance not known at the date thereof to possess properties rendering it suitable for the same purposes as the material used therein.—Colgate v. Law Tel. Co., Case No. 2,993a.

A patent for a particular structure intended to accomplish a particular end does not import an exclusive right to every possible mode of accomplishing the same end.—Blanchard v. Puttman, Case No. 1,514.

An inventor is entitled to protection in all the functions his invention will perform.—Ingels v. Mast, Case No. 7,033.

A patentee who describes particular modes as essential to his invention will not be confined to them where the device is complete in itself. —Union Paper-Bag Mach. Co. v. Nixon, Case No. 14,391.

The inventor of an improvement cannot entitle himself to a patent more broad than his invention.—Woodcock v. Parker, Case No. 17,-971; Whittemore v. Cutter, Id. 17,601.

§ 132. Claims for processes.

A claim for "said manufacture of printing type, made substantially as described," held a claim for the process, and not for the product. —Hudson v. Draper, Case No. 6,834.

The claim to an invention of a mechanical process must fall with the claim to an unsuccessful machine which the inventor constructed to work out such process.—Union Mfg. Co. v. Lounsbury, Case No. 14,368.

A claim for "the above-described new manufacture of * * * by treating them substantially as hereinafter described," held to be a claim for the process, and not the product.—Merrill v. Yeomans, Case No. 9,472.

A patent for a new and useful process, describing it and the apparatus by which it can be carried out, covers all apparatus which will accomplish the same purpose in substantially the same way.—Bridge v. Brown, Case No. 1,857.

The patent for a new and improved process for the cheaper and better construction of a product or manufacture before known in commerce grants nothing but the exclusive right to use the particular process. Otherwise where the product itself is new.—Goodyear v. Central R. Co., Case No. 5,563.

A claim of a process of manufacture of hats from braid, "in sewing the edges together with horsehair," held not necessarily limited to the use of horsehair.—Noe v. Prentice, Case No. 10,284a.

Both a process and the product may be covered by one patent.—Welling v. Rubber-Coated Harness Trimming Co., Case No. 17,383.

§ 133. Claims for machines or manufactures in general.

A claim for an entire machine does not deprive the patentee of his right to claim the parts also.—Foss v. Herbert, Case No. 4,957.

The patentee is entitled to the exclusive use of his mechanical organization for all uses to which it can be applied, whether he originally contemplated those uses or not.—McComb v. Brodie, Case No. 8,708; Conover v. Roach, Id. 3,125.

The words "in such machine" held to refer to the machines improved upon, and not the improved machines.—Weston v. Nash, Case No. 17,454.

Patents for improvements in gold pens held could not be extended beyond the particular shape, form, or mode of construction claimed. —Rapp v. Bard, Case No. 11,577.

A patent "for an improvement in the art of making nails, by means of a machine which cuts and heads the nail at one operation," is for a machine as described.—Gray v. James, Case No. 5,718.

A claim for a result merely, or for every means by which certain advantages in a harvester can be secured, is invalid.—Marsh v. Dodge & Stevenson Mfg. Co., Case No. 9,115.

In the case of a patent for an ornamental chain as a new article of manufacture, the patentee is not limited to the advantage derived from the use of the peculiar features of the patented chain over what would have been derived from those open to the public.—Mulford v. Pearce, Case No. 9,908.

A patent for a wire fence cannot be construed to include window guards.—New York Wire-Railing Co. v. Walker, Case No. 10,218.

A patent for a horizontally revolving retort does not cover an oscillating retort.—Allen v. Alter, Case No. 212.

Cam movements, producing simultaneous operations in long use, cover the principle of raising an oven shelf by means of closing the oven door.—Bridge v. Excelsior Mfg. Co., Case No. 1,859.

A patentee who has described devices in uniform motion only cannot claim them when working in a differential motion, by which only they were made successful; nor can he incorporate such principle in a reissue.—Dyson v. Danforth, Case No. 4,229.

A claim to "the communication of motion * * * produced as follows" held limited to the specific machinery described in the specifications.—Stone v. Sprague, Case No. 13,487.

§ 134. Claims for combinations.

The words "as herein described" and "as herein set forth" refer to the specifications, and may, in their proper construction, embrace elements of a combination not specifically named in the claim.—Vance v. Campbell, Case No. 16,-837.

An inventor of one element cannot claim it in combination with every form of another element with which he unites it, but only in the particular combination described in his specification.—Larabee v. Cortlan, Case No. 8,084.

A claim for "a new and useful improvement," consisting of a combination of several improvements distinctly set forth in the specification, held good for each distinct improvement.—Pitts v. Whitman, Case No. 11,196.

Use of phrase "any suitable material," in patent for combination, shows claim to combination, limited to known materials, though not named.—Bailey Washing & Wringing Mach. Co. v. Lincoln, Case No. 750.

The absence of the word "combination," or of a statement of its elements in a particular claim, while combinations are claimed in apt and appropriate language in other claims, is strong evidence that, in the former, the patentee did not intend to claim a combination.—Burden v. Corning, Case No. 2,143.

A limit of the claim to a combination of parts concedes the parts to be old.—Conover v. Roach, Case No. 3,125.

The description of each separate element must be read and construed with reference to the entire combination and its results.—Hamilton v. Ives, Case No. 5,982.

Construction of a claim of "the combination of a lock and latch," where the only invention consisted in making the latch bolt reversible.—Russell & Erwin Mfg. Co. v. Mallory, Case No. 12,166.

By claiming particular things in a combination as new, the patentee does not relinquish his right to the entire combination.—Valentine v. Marshal, Case No. 16,812a.

The claim of an arrangement of a combination, when such as to produce a given mechanical result of the combination, is a claim to the means alone, and not to a function or a result, irrespective of such means.—Renwick v. Pond, Case No. 11,702.

§ 135. Including mechanical equivalents.

A patent for a composition of several ingredients covers known equivalents of each ingredient.—Matthews v. Skates, Case No. 9,291.

A claim for a particular means and mode of operation described extends to all equivalents.—Burden v. Corning, Case No. 2,143; Pitts v. Edmonds, Id. 11,191.

Where a patent is for a peculiar combination or arrangement of old devices, and not for a new device, the patentee is not entitled to insist upon mechanical equivalents.—Yuengling v. Johnson, Case No. 18,195.

A specification in a patent of the mechanical parts or chemical ingredients includes known mechanical or chemical equivalents, but not existing equivalents previously unknown to ordinarily skillful machinists or chemists.—Woodward v. Morrison, Case No. 18,008.

§ 136. Claims for compositions of matter.

The inventor of a new compound, wholly unknown before, is not limited to the use always of the same precise ingredients in making that compound.—Ryan v. Goodwin, Case No. 12,186.

Where only approximate proportions are named in the specification for the several elements of a given composition of matter, the right to vary these proportions is not unlimited.—Francis v. Mellor, Case No. 5,039.

§ 137. Claims for designs.

A patent for ornamental designs for figured silk buttons held not to cover the process for winding the silk upon the molds.—Booth v. Garelly, Case No. 1,646.

X. TITLE, CONVEYANCES, AND CONTRACTS.

(A) RIGHTS OF PATENTEES IN GENERAL.

§ 138. Title of inventor before issue of patent.

The invention is the property of the inventor until he abandons it to the public, or suffers it to be in public use or on sale with his consent for more than two years.—Jones v. Sewall, Case No. 7,495.

§ 139. Assignment of invention or right to patent.

An assignment made before the patent is granted is valid.—Herbert v. Adams, Case No. 6,394; Rathbone v. Orr, Id. 11,585.

A contract may be made to convey a future invention, as well as a past one, and for any improvement or maturing of a past one.—Nesmith v. Calvert, Case No. 10,123.

An assignment of an invention before the issuing of a patent is valid under Act March 3, 1837, § 6, though made after an appeal from the commissioner's decision rejecting the application.—Gay v. Cornell, Case No. 5,280.

It is not necessary that the assignment should be recorded in the patent office before the filing of the bill. It is enough if it be recorded at any time before the issuing of the patent.—Gay v. Cornell, Case No. 5,280.

The inchoate right of an inventor to the issue of original letters patent, and all foreign letters, renewals, and extensions, may be conveyed by an instrument containing apt terms to show an intention to convey all the rights springing from the invention.—Emmons v. Sladdin, Case No. 4,470.

Semble, a sale of an "invention" does not necessarily carry inchoate right of inventor to exclusive privileges under extension of patent.—Clum v. Brewer, Case No. 2,909.

An assignment of all inventions "for the manufacture of composition brush backs and handles" does not include an invention for hand mirrors, the handles and backs of which are made in the same manner as the brush, though applications for patents on both articles were pending at time of assignment.—Clark v. Scott, Case No. 2,833.

Assignees of an invention can take only such rights as the inventors could have taken.—Tatham v. Loring, Case No. 13,763. CONTRA, see Tatham v. Lowber, Case No. 13,764.

§ 140. Exclusive nature of right—Articles made or purchased by others before application for patent.

Persons purchasing a newly-invented machine from another than the inventor, before application for a patent, are protected by 9 Laws (Bior. & D.) pp. 1019, 1020, § 7 (5 Stat. 354).—Noe v. Prentice, Case No. 10,284.

The benefit of section 7, c. 88, Act 1839, cannot be claimed by a purchaser under a mere wrongdoer, but only by a person who is a purchaser, or who has used the patented invention before the patent was issued, by a license or grant, or by the consent of the inventor.—Pierson v. Eagle Screw Co., Case No. 11,156.

There is no right of action for an infringement occurring under the original and void patent, and before the reissue of a new patent.—Moffitt v. Gaar, Case No. 9,690.

There can be no infringement of a patent before the date of the application or of the patent.—Dixon v. Moyer, Case No. 3,931.

The use after the granting of an extension by special act of January 21, 1808, of a machine erected after the expiration of the original term, and before the passage of the act, held an infringement.—Evans v. Jordan, Case No. 4,564; Same v. Weiss, Id. 4,572.

§ 141. —— Against government.

Whether the grant of a patent excludes the United States from the right to make and use the invention for themselves, quære.—Heaton v. Quintard, Case No. 6,311.

An invention secured by patent cannot be taken by the government without compensation.—Brady v. Atlantic Works, Case No. 1,794.

§ 141a. Rights and powers of patentee as to making, use, or sale of invention.

The inventor has the exclusive right under the patent to use the machine for all purposes for which it is applicable.—Woodman v. Stimpson, Case No. 17,979.

The product and the process being both new and patentable, the patentee may prohibit the sale or use of the composition, unless when purchased from persons licensed by him to use the process and vend the product.—Goodyear v. Central R. Co., Case No. 5,563.

(B) ASSIGNMENTS AND OTHER TRANSFERS.

§ 142. Contracts to assign.

The equitable rights of defendants, arising out of an agreement, for valuable consideration, to convey an extended patent, made before the extension, will be protected as against the owner of the legal title.—Day v. Candee, Case No. 3,676; Aiken v. Dolan, Id. 110.

Where a patent is declared void for defective specifications, and a patent with corrected specifications is issued, a contract to sell the right is enforceable.—Stanley v. Whipple, Case No. 13,286.

An agreement to give an interest in the extension of a patent when granted on payment of a certain proportion of the expenses of procuring it, held not to give a vested right in the extension without payment, though the owner refused to tell the amount when payment was offered.—Pitts v. Hall, Case No. 11,193.

The consideration for a contract to convey an extended patent, when granted, being an agreement to pay therefor, a failure to pay will not authorize a revocation of the contract.—Day v. Candee, Case No. 3,676.

The word "invention," in the contract for the assignment of a patent, held not to cover other improvements in the same art, although the patent to be assigned would be worthless without them.—United Nickel Co. v. American Nickel-Plating Works, Case No. 14,405.

§ 143. Assignability of patents.

A patent may be assigned in whole or in part. —Parker v. Haworth, Case No. 10,738.

The subject-matter of a patent is not separable except territorially.—Suydam v. Day, Case No. 13,654; Goodyear v. Central R. Co., Id. 5,563.

A patentee cannot divide his right into parts, so as to give one person the right to use it for one purpose, and another the right to use it for another purpose, and restrict the right of the purchasers from either.—Washing Mach. Co. v. Earle, Case No. 17,219.

A paper purporting to be an assignment of an expired patent is void as an assignment, though it may be enforced as a power of attorney.—Bell v. McCullough, Case No. 1,256.

Inchoate right of inventor to exclusive privilege under extension of patent is subject of sale.—Clum v. Brewer, Case No. 2,909. CONTRA, see Gibson v. Cook, Case No. 5,393.

And will become operative upon as soon as the extension has been granted.—Gear v. Grosvenor, Case No. 5,291.

See, also, ante, § 139.

§ 144. Who may assign.

An administrator of a patentee may assign a patent renewed in his own name.—Brooks v. Jenkins, Case No. 1,953.

An assignment of a patent by one of two or more administrators is valid.—Wintermute v. Redington, Case No. 17,896.

An assignment of an extension of a patent by the patentee's sole executrix, who signed herself as "administratrix," pursuant to a contract of the patentee, but without the sanction of the probate court or the assent of a legatee, held good in equity as against one who, after the assignment was recorded, purchased the patent from an administrator c. t. a.—Newell v. West, Case No. 10,150.

§ 145. Requisites and validity of assignments and grants.

The assignment of an exclusive territorial right must be in writing.—Gibson v. Cook, Case No. 5.393.

A conveyance of an interest in a patent must be in writing, and a mere memorandum, in the hands of the patentee, is not sufficient.—Baldwin v. Sibley, Case No. 805.

An assignment of an interest in a patent, made by a receiver, appointed by a state court, of the property of the owner of the patent, conveys no title to the assignee, because the assignment is not a written instrument signed by the owner of the patent.—Gordon v. Anthony, Case No. 5,605.

An assignment is rendered invalid by the omission to record it within three months as against subsequent bona fide purchasers for valuable consideration.—Blanchard's Gun-Stock Turning Factory v. Warner, Case No. 1,521; Boyd v. McAlpin, Id. 1,748; Brooks v. Byam, Id. 1,948; Gibson v. Cook, Id. 5,393.

An assignment of a right under a patent is valid as between the parties without being recorded.—Blanchard's Gun-Stock Turning Factory v. Warner, Case No. 1,521; Boyd v. McAlpin, Id. 1,748; Case v. Redfield, Id. 2,494; Continental Windmill Co. v. Empire Windmill Co., Id. 3,142; Hall v. Speer, Id. 5,947; Perry v. Corning, Id. 11,004; Pitts v. Whitman, Id. 11,196; Turnbull v. Weir Plow Co., Id. 14,244.

Assignment need not be recorded in the patent office as against strangers.—Case v. Redfield, Case No. 2,494; Hall v. Speer, Id. 5,947.

An agreement which operates as a transfer of a patent is good as against those who purchase with notice, though not recorded.—Ashcroft v. Walworth, Case No. 580; Boyd v. McAlpin, Id. 1,748; Continental Windmill Co. v. Empire Windmill Co., Id. 3,142.

An assignment of a patent, though not recorded, vests title in the assignee until due entry or claim by the party entitled to take advantage of the breach of condition as to recording.—Van Hook v. Wood, Case No. 16,854.

Within the three months an unrecorded prior assignment in writing will prevail.—Gibson v. Cook, Case No. 5,393.

One of three instruments executed contemporaneously as part of the same transaction was recorded, though none were required to be recorded by law. Held, that they were all valid, as against a bona fide purchaser under the recorded instrument.—Hamilton v. Kingsbury, Case No. 5,985.

The assignee of a patent right, in part or in whole, cannot maintain any suit at law or in equity, either as sole or as joint plaintiff thereon, at least as against third persons, until his patent has been recorded in the proper department, according to the requisitions of the patent acts.—Wyeth v. Stone, Case No. 18,107.

Record in patent office of assignment is notice to purchasers.—Case v. Redfield, Case No. 2,494.

See, also, post, § 150.

§ 146. Construction and operation of assignments and grants—Property or interest conveyed.

An assignment of a patent to an assignee in trust gives him the legal title.—Campbell v. James, Case No. 2,361.

A grant of an exclusive right to construct, use, and vend a certain number of patented machines within a certain territory, with exclusive use of the patent within the territory limited to said machines, conveys the entire interest in the patent for such territory.—Ritter v. Serrell, Case No. 11,866.

An assignment of an interest in a patent, reserving to the grantor the whole and sole power of disposal, conveys no legal title, but the assignee is only a cestui que trust, to the extent of his interest, in the profits.—Goodyear v. Day, Case No. 5,566.

An assignment of all the grantor's right, title, and interest in and to a certain patent carries only the grantor's existing interest.—Ashcroft v. Walworth, Case No. 580.

An assignment, construed with a contemporaneous agreement, held to vest in a person, as trustee for corporations, the patentee's interest in the patent, and to the same person, as trustee for the patentee, all interest in claims for past infringements.—Dibble v. Augur, Case No. 3,879.

A sale of the right to use and sell "Singer's patent sewing machines, as mentioned in the patent granted to S., Aug. 12, 1851," held an assignment of all the rights which the vendor had in the Singer machine under any patent.—Burdell v. Denig, Case No. 2,142.

An assignment of all "right, title, interest, claim, or demand whatsoever, in, to, or under" a certain patent, held not to convey claims for past infringements.—Dibble v. Augur, Case No. 3,879.

The assignee of the territorial right to make, construct, and use the patented article may, during the term of its subsequent extension, continue to use and repair the patented articles; but he is not entitled to make them.—Wood v. Michigan S. & N. I. R. Co., Case No. 17,957.

Assignees and grantees of rights during the original term have a right to use the patented invention during an extension under Act July 4, 1836, § 18, whether such right arose from the purchase of a machine or from the grant of a limited or unlimited right to use.—Day v. Union India-Rubber Co., Case No. 3,691.

The same rules apply in the case of patented processes.—Day v. Union India-Rubber Co., Case No. 3,691.

Act July 4, 1836, applies to patents issued before its passage, and a prior assignee of an original term is entitled to the benefit of an extension where the contract provides that any alteration or renewal shall accrue to the benefit of the parties.—Wilson v. Turner, Case No. 17,-845.

The right to use a patented process during the original term of the patent, under Act 1836, § 18, re-enacted in Act 1870, does not authorize the use of it after the patent is extended.—Wetherill v. Passaic Zinc Co., Case No. 17,465.

A grant of the right to use a patented machine or any number of said machines in a certain place held to convey the right to make machines, or procure them to be made for such use.—Steam Stone Cutter Co. v. Shortsleeves, Case No. 13,334.

A sale, by the owner of two patents, of the right to manufacture generally, will be held to be a conveyance of the right under both patents, notwithstanding a previous conveyance to another of the right under one specifically.—Day v. Stellman, Case No. 3,690.

Deed construed as a conveyance of a single machine, without right to construct others.—Baldwin v. Sibley, Case No. 805.

A conveyance of all right, title, and interest in a patent in a particular territory, as to a portion of which the patentee has previously parted with some interest, will be held to operate only upon the residuary interest of the patentee, though the second assignment is first recorded.—Turnbull v. Weir Plow Co., Case No. 14,244.

Separate transfers of all right, title, and interest in a patent were made at different times to different parties, and the first transferee subsequently retransferred to the grantor. Held, that such retransfer did not inure to the benefit of the second transferee, so as to perfect his title.—Perry v. Corning, Case No. 11,004.

An assignment of a patent for a knitting needle, "to be applied exclusively to the knitting or construction of harnesses for looms, and for other purposes," limits its use to harnesses.—Aiken v. Dolan, Case No. 110.

The assignee of territorial rights not restricted as to sales within the territory, may, as to subsequent assignees of other territory, sell within his own territory without restriction or condition.—McKay v. Wooster, Case No. 8,847.

A person to whom the patentee has passed his interest in a part of the old patent, upon the surrender of the same by the patentee, and obtaining a reissued patent, is entitled to the same right under the reissued patent that he had to the old one.—Potter v. Holland, Case No. 11,-329.

He may, however, elect to hold under the old patent, and it is not a valid objection that in such event there would be different claims of right in the same invention secured to different sectional owners.—Potter v. Holland, Case No. 11,329.

A reissue does not inure to the benefit of a prior assignee. He takes by ratification, not by inurement.—Burdell v. Denig, Case No. 2,142.

A transferee of the patentee's interest for a state is entitled to the benefit of a reissue, if he ratifies the same, though he did not join in the surrender.—Meyer v. Bailey, Case No. 9,516.

The amendments in a reissue inure to the benefit of grantees under the original of exclusive rights for particular localities.—Smith v. Mercer, Case No. 13,078.

The assignees of a patent have no interest in an extension by act of congress unless so expressly agreed.—Gibson v. Cook, Case No. 5,393.

Where the act contains no reservations in their favor, they cannot continue to use their patented machines.—Gibson v. Gifford, Case No. 5,395.

An assignee of a patent or a machine constructed thereunder has no right or interest in the renewal of a patent, unless given by the statute or by express contract.—Bloomer v. Stolley, Case No. 1,559; Brooks v. Bicknell, Id. 1,944, 1,945; Case v. Redfield, Id. 2,494; Hammond v. Mason & Hamlin Organ Co., Id. 6,004; Phelps v. Comstock, Id. 11,075; Woodworth v. Sherman, Id. 18,019; Same v. Cheever, Id.

The fact that a person was an assignee under the original term of letters patent furnishes no presumption that he is interested in the extended term.—Goodyear v. Hullihen, Case No. 5,573.

The extent to which assignees of a patent may enjoy a renewed patent is to be determined solely by the stipulations of the assignment.—Van Hook v. Wood, Case No. 16,855.

The assignment of a patent, or the right to a patent pending, held not to include the right to an extended term.—Mowry v. Grand St. & N. R. Co., Case No. 9,893.

The assignment of all right, title, and interest in letters patent, and "the invention thereby secured," does not import a conveyance of the right to an extended term, and the assignee cannot convey such right.—Waterman v. Wallace, Case No. 17,261.

An assignment of an interest in an invention and of letters patent "to the full end of the term for which they are or may be granted" will pass a subsequent reissue, but not an interest in a subsequently extended term.—Chase v. Walker, Case No. 2,630; Goodyear v. Cary, Id. 5,562; Jenkins v. Nicolson Pavement Co., Id. 7,273; Ruggles v. Eddy, Id. 12,117; Thayer v. Wales, Id. 13,872.

Words "to be held to the full end of the term for which said letters patent are or may be granted," when used in the habendum of the deed, considered.—Gear v. Grosvenor, Case No. 5,291; Same v. Holmes, Id. 5,292.

A conveyance by a patentee held to cover the right to foreign letters patent and all renewals and extensions.—Emmons v. Sladdin, Case No. 4,470.

A conveyance of an original patent, and "any further patent which he shall or may at any time hereafter procure for any improvements," conveys an interest in so much of a future extension as may be necessary for the use of the improvements.—Chase v. Walker, Case No. 2,-630.

§ 147. —— Rights and liabilities of assignees and grantees.

A contract between a patentee and one granted an exclusive right that no suit for infringement should be instituted without the consent of both parties, does not prevent the latter making a bona fide settlement with an infringer, binding upon the former.—Burdell v. Denig, Case No. 2,142.

Where an inventor assigns his invention under a verbal agreement that the assignee shall pay the expense of obtaining a patent for a half interest therein, and the patent is issued to him, the manufacture of the patented article by a person to whom the inventor assigned his equitable interest is not an infringement.—Whiting v. Graves, Case No. 17,577.

An American assignee of an alien inventor, who obtained letters patent in his own name under Act March 3, 1837, § 6, is not required to put and continue the invention on sale, under Act July 4, 1836, § 15.—Tatham v. Lowber, Case No. 13,764.

The court will not enjoin the sale of a similar article under the same patent, in a particular district assigned to an individual, though manufactured in a different district.—Boyd v. Brown, Case No. 1,747.

The terms "assignee" and "grantee" are not used in the patent law of 1836 as synonymous terms.—Potter v. Holland, Case No. 11,329.

A grantee is one who has transferred to him, in writing, the exclusive right to make and use, and to grant to others to make and use, the thing patented within and throughout some specified part or portion of the United States.—Potter v. Holland, Case No. 11,329.

An assignee is one who has transferred to him, in writing, the whole interest of the patent, or any undivided part of the whole interest, in every portion of the United States.—Potter v. Holland, Case No. 11,329.

The remedy in equity given to inventors by Act 1836, § 17, extends to their assignees.—Jenkins v. Greenwald, Case No. 7,270.

Rights of parties determined in the case of conflicting assignments of rights in an extended patent where one party failed to fulfill his agreement.—Gibson v. Barnard, Case No. 5,389.

Declarations of the patentee, made after he had assigned all his interest, impeaching the validity of the patent, are inadmissible against the assignee.—Many v. Jagger, Case No. 9,-055.

Nor is evidence of such declarations admissible to contradict the patentee, who has testified as a witness for the assignee, where he has not been interrogated as to such declarations.—Many v. Jagger, Case No. 9,055.

§ 148. —— Bona fide purchasers.

The possession of a third person, where an assignment refers to use of the patented device by him, is constructive notice to the assignee of his claim.—Prime v. Brandon Mfg. Co., Case No. 11,421.

A bona fide purchaser for valuable consideration without notice takes a good title as against a person holding a contract for an interest made before the grant.—Gibson v. Cook, Case No. 5,393.

§ 149. Transfer on insolvency or bankruptcy.

The assignment of a patent to the assignee in bankruptcy, though not recorded, is good as against a subsequent assignment by the bankrupt, duly recorded.—Prime v. Brandon Mfg. Co., Case No. 11,421.

An assignment made by the judge of probate under the Massachusetts insolvency law does not pass the insolvent's interest in letters patent.—Ashcroft v. Walworth, Case No. 580.

(C) LICENSES AND CONTRACTS.

§ 150. What constitutes a license.

A license defined, and the instrument in question held to be merely a license.—Nelson v. McMann, Case No. 10,109.

An assignment which does not convey the entire or unqualified monopoly which the patentee holds in the territory specified, or an undivided interest in the entire monopoly, is a mere license.—Sanford v. Messer, Case No. 12,314; Potter v. Holland, Id. 11,329.

An instrument vesting the grantee with an exclusive territorial right of making and using the thing patented, and of granting that right to others, is an assignment. Any conveyance short of this is a license.—Farrington v. Gregory, Case No. 4,688.

A transfer of "the sole and exclusive right and monopoly of manufacturing" under a patent, for a certain royalty, is a transfer of the entire interest, and not the establishment of a license fee.—La Baw v. Hawkins, Case No. 7,961.

The purchaser of the right to make, use, and vend the invention in a particular place buys a portion of the franchise which the patent confers.—Goodyear v. Beverly Rubber Co., Case No. 5,557.

A contract granting the right of manufacturing and selling a patented article held a license. —Brooks v. Byam, Case No. 1,948.

An employment to invent and perfect machinery for a particular purpose will operate as a license to the employer to use machines invented by the employé, and put in use under such employment.—Whiting v. Graves, Case No. 17,577; Chabot v. American Button-Hole & Overseaming Co., Id. 2,567.

The infringing articles were put into defendant's factory at its expense, under the direction of the inventor, and were used under his direction up to the time of the application for a patent. Held, that defendant had a special license to use such articles.—Magoun v. New England Glass Co., Case No. 8,960.

An assignment of all right and interest under a patent in certain territory, where the patentee reserved the right to sell machines of his own manufacture in such territory, held a mere license.—Hussey v. Whitely, Case No. 6,950.

A lease of premises and machinery by which a patented process is carried on with a right to use all patents for such process held only a license to use such processes on the leased premises.—Wetherill v. Passaic Zinz Co., Case No. 17,465.

An agreement between owners of conflicting patents defining their rights, and providing for the purchase of outside patents for mutual protection, held to give only a license to use such purchased patents, and an action thereon is properly brought in the name of the purchaser alone.—Aultman v. Holley, Case No. 656.

An agreement, made on the settlement of a dispute as to conflicting claims to the right to make a certain patented spike, that hereafter each party may make and vend spikes of such character as he sees fit, held a license to make the patented spike.—Troy Iron & Nail Factory v. Erastus Corning, Case No. 14,195.

License to use held to be inferred from the receipt of compensation for a use acquiesced in for a long time, though the patentee at the time reserved the right to claim an additional compensation.—Blanchard v. Sprague, Case No. 1,516.

§ 151. Who may make license.

One of three patentees owning an unequal share may make a valid license to use the thing patented, patentees being tenants in common.—Dunham v. Indianapolis & St. L. R. Co., Case No. 4,151; Clum v. Brewer, Id. 2,909.

The holder of the legal interest in a patent, who is the agent of and principal stockholder in a corporation owning the equitable interest, has the right to make a contract of license in settlement of conflicting claims with an alleged infringer.—Troy Iron & Nail Factory v. Erastus Corning, Case No. 14,195.

§ 152. Requisites and validity of licenses.

A license to make and use a patented machine need not be in writing.—Baldwin v. Sibley, Case No. 805.

The condition attached to the sale of patented cotton ties, "licensed to use once only," is void.—American Cotton-Tie Co. v. Simmons, Case No. 293.

A patentee, while granting to another a right to make and sell, may retain to himself the exclusive right to make and sell for export or use in other countries.—Dorsey Revolving Harvester Rake Co. v. Bradley Mfg. Co., Case No. 4,015.

Where a patented machine, not practically useful, is perfected by the inventor while in the employ of another, and at the latter's expense, he is entitled to a license for its use.—Wilkens v. Spafford, Case No. 17,659.

A license under a patent need not be recorded.—Chambers v. Smith, Case No. 2,582; Farrington v. Gregory, Id. 4,688.

The question of what amounts to a delivery of a license considered.—Hammond v. Hunt, Case No. 6,003.

A license until conditions performed is inoperative.—Brooks v. Stolley, Case No. 1,962.

§ 153. Construction and operation of licenses—General rules.

The contracts of a patentee to share his invention with third persons are interpreted and enforced in the same manner as other legal engagements.—Morse v. O'Reilly, Case No. 9,858.

A parol agreement as to the use of an invention held, as against the licensee, to have been merged in the written license prepared by him.—Evory v. Candee, Case No. 4,583.

§ 154. —— Scope and extent.

The right to construct a patented machine is distinct from a right to use it.—Bicknell v. Todd, Case No. 1,389.

A license to a person to run "either of his two machines, provided he does not run more than one of them at a time," held not limited to the machines then in use.—Brooks v. Stolley, Case No. 1,963.

A sale of the machines licensed, and the purchase of another, is not a matter within the license.—Brooks v. Stolley, Case No. 1,963.

A license to a railroad company gives no right to use the patent on lines afterwards built or leased.—Emigh v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., Case No. 4,448.

A railroad company running its cars over the road of another under a permission to that effect cannot be considered as operating the latter, within the meaning of a license granting the right to use a patented invention.—Hodge v. Hudson River R. Co., Case No. 6,559.

Defendant, having the right under a license to use a patented improvement to the capacity of his tannery, held to have the right to use the improvement in a subsequent addition to the tannery without payment of additional fees, where the entire use did not exceed the original capacity.—England v. Thompson, Case No. 4,487.

If a patented machine is torn down, and afterwards rebuilt, and in the rebuilding changed so as to lose its identity and become substantially a new construction, its owner will not be authorized to use it under a license limited to the original machine.—Gottfried v. Phillip Best Brewing Co., Case No. 5,633.

A patentee who has sold the right to make and sell the patented machine within a certain territory cannot limit to such territory the use of the machines so made and sold.—Dorsey Revolving Harvester Rake Co. v. Bradley Mfg. Co., Case No. 4,015.

The right to use, resulting from the purchase of a machine, expires with the existence of the machine.—Day v. Union India-Rubber Co., Case No. 3,691.

The licensee, under Act July 4, 1836, § 18, may use such patented articles as it has in use when the original term expires, until they are worn out.—Hodge v. Hudson River R. Co., Case No. 6,559.

Under a license to run a patented machine, with the restriction that the product should not be made for other persons to be carried out of a specified territory and resold as an article of merchandise, the product cannot be sold out of the territory, or sold to persons to be carried out and resold as an article of merchandise.—Wilson v. Sherman, Case No. 17,833.

A license to use a patented brake "on any and all cars belonging to" the licensed company covers the use of brakes on trucks and running gear belonging to the company, although the superstructure belongs to another.—Hodge v. Hudson River R. Co., Case No. 6,559.

The words, "all patents and processes which he has or has in contemplation to obtain," merely serve to individuate the patents, and do not convey the extended term.—Wetherill v. Passaic Zinc Co., Case No. 17,465.

The right to use a machine embodying the patented invention granted during the original term is protected during an extension.—Blanchard v. Whitney, Case No. 1,519; Day v. Union India-Rubber Co., Id. 3,691; Farrington v. Gregory, Id. 4,688; Wetherill v. Passaic Zinc Co., Id. 17,465; Woodworth v. Curtis, Id. 18,013; Wooster v. Sidenberg, Id. 18,039. But see Potter v. Empire Sewing Mach. Co., Case No. 11,326.

A license to use an invention "for the whole term of the patent which may be granted," given before the patent was issued, does not authorize the use of it under the extended term.—Wetherill v. Passaic Zinc Co., Case No. 17,465; Hodge v. Hudson River R. Co., Id. 6,559, 6,560.

Under a license to use the patented machine in certain territory, the licensee may build more than one machine, but cannot use both at one time.—Woodworth v. Curtis, Case No. 18,013.

The words restricting the grant to such patents as the grantor "holds in his own right" apply to such as he was the apparent, but not the real, owner of, and a patent of which he holds only a part interest will nevertheless pass under the conveyance.—Wetherill v. Passaic Zinc Co., Case No. 17,465.

A clause in a license restricting the use of the invention within a certain territory, and the sale of the product therein, is not repugnant to the concluding clause that the licensee "has all the rights" which the patentee has in said territory under the patent.—Woodworth v. Cook, Case No. 18,011.

The mere fact that the agent of the patentee, after the transfer of the machine to the unlicensed territory, demanded of the purchasers the back royalties due upon it for use in the licensed territory, conferred no right to use it outside the territory named in the license.—Wicke v. Kleinknecht, Case No. 17,608.

A licensee who, having machines in use during the end of an original term of a patent, takes a license for another year under the extended patent, waives any rights which he had to use such machines when the first term expired.—Wooster v. Taylor, Case No. 18,040.

§ 155. —— Rights and liabilities of licensees.

A compromise agreement by two patentees for the mutual use of their respective patents will not estop either his assignees or licensees from denying the validity of the other's patent.—Van Hook v. Wood, Case No. 16,855.

Where the licensees repudiate the license, the owner of the patent may elect either to sue upon the license or treat the licensees as infringers.—Cohn v. National Rubber Co., Case No. 2,968.

A license to two corporations to use a patented device passes, on their consolidation, to the new corporation, which is vested with all the powers, rights, franchises, etc., of the old corporations.—Lightner v. Boston & A. R. Co., Case No. 8,343.

One having an exclusive license to sell patented machines, together with a contract by the corporation owning the patents to furnish him such machines at a specified price, may enjoin such corporation from undertaking a voluntary dissolution, and from assigning the patents in trust for another association.—Singer Sewing-Mach. Co. v. Union Button-Hole & Embroidery Co., Case No. 12,904.

Apprehension of a denial of the rights of a licensee to use a licensed invention, or a revocation of the license, will not justify application to a court of equity for an injunction.—Florence Sewing Mach. Co. v. Singer Mfg. Co., Case No. 4,884.

The patentee is estopped to deny the validity of a transfer by a licensee where he has made settlement with and received royalties from such transferee.—Bloomer v. Gilpin, Case No. 1,558.

Defendants, in consideration of a license to manufacture under plaintiff's patents, expressly recognized their validity, and agreed not to manufacture certain articles covered thereby. Held, that plaintiff could sue in equity either for breach of the agreement or for infringement.—Magic Ruffle Co. v. Elm City Co., Case No. 8,949.

See, also, post, § 184.

§ 156. —— Particular licenses.

Construction of license of right to use Morse's patents on telegraph lines.—Smith v. Selden, Case No. 13,104.

§ 157. Assignments and sublicenses.

Quære, if a license is not such a personal privilege that the entirety cannot be assigned, notwithstanding it was given to one and his assigns.—Brooks v. Byam, Case No. 1,948.

A purchaser of a patented machine from the assignee of a patent, after he has conveyed his entire interest to a second assignee, obtains no right to use the machine during the original or extended term.—Union Paper-Bag Mach. Co. v. Nixon, Case No. 14,391; Hawley v. Mitchell, Id. 6,250.

A mere license is not apportionable, so as to permit the licensee to grant separate rights.—Consolidated Fruit-Jar Co. v. Whitney, Case No. 3,132.

A license merely of use, being property, may be conveyed.—Brooks v. Stolley, Case No. 1,963.

A license to a person, with privilege to employ a certain number of persons, and no more, in the manufacture of a patented article, cannot be assigned in part.—Brooks v. Byam, Case No. 1,948.

A sale of a machine by a person who has a license merely of use does not give an implied right to use it.—Brooks v. Stolley, Case No. 1,963.

A license of the "exclusive right to use and sell" in a certain territory, reserving the "right to manufacture," construed, and held assignable.—Hamilton v. Kingsbury, Case No. 5,984.

A license to run a patented machine may be assigned, and the assignee must perform the conditions of the license.—Wilson v. Stolley, Case No. 17,840.

A grant of the exclusive right to "manufacture and sell" in a specified city carries to a purchaser from the licensee a right to use the machine anywhere.—May v. Chaffee, Case No. 9,-332.

A license to make and use a machine gives no power to authorize a third person to construct it.—Baldwin v. Sibley, Case No. 805.

Where a machine is licensed for use in a particular territory, the use of it by subsequent purchasers in other territory is unlawful.—Wicke v. Kleinknecht, Case No. 17,608.

A license to manufacture and sell carriages with the patented invention attached, with a proviso that the same should not be assigned, but exercised solely by the licensees in their own manufactory, and that portions of carriages with or adapted for the invention should not be sold, does not prohibit the licensees from procuring the patented fixtures to be made by others.—Wood v. Wells, Case No. 17,967.

There is no principle of equity which requires the owner of a patent to give notice to a purchaser of a licensee's right, in order to enable him to restrict such purchaser to terms of the license.—Chambers v. Smith, Case No. 2,582.

The sale of a machine, by virtue of a license to use and sell, carries with it the right to use, by implication, and such machine may be again conveyed without words of assignment.—Farrington v. Gregory, Case No. 4,688.

A licensee from an assignee has no greater rights than his licensor.—Abbett v. Zusi, Case No. 7.

§ 158. Revocation, forfeiture, and abandonment of license.

Neglect to pay price for license and its abandonment is a forfeiture.—Bell v. McCullough, Case No. 1,256.

Where a licensee gives notes payable at different times under the agreement that the license should be void if any of the notes should become due and be unpaid, the license is forfeited the moment a note becomes due and is unpaid; and it is optional with the licensor either to sue on the note or to treat the license as forfeited, and enjoin the further use of the patented machine.—Woodworth v. Weed, Case No. 18,022.

A violation of a patent does not work a forfeiture of a license under the patent, except where the licensee has assumed such a hostile attitude towards the patent as to amount to a repudiation of the right conveyed by the license—Wood v. Wells, Case No. 17,967.

The forfeiture of a license may be enforced according to its terms, by reason of the abandonment or neglect of the licensee.—Wilson v. Stolley, Case No. 17,840.

Under a license to use a patented machine in a certain place, and not elsewhere, and to have the privilege of using additional machines in such place, held, that the licensee was entitled, as against an assignee of the patent, to use the single machine, and to repair and rebuild it, but had forfeited his right to the additional machines by using infringing machines.—Steam Cutter Co. v. Sheldon, Case No. 13,331.

The licensee does not forfeit his right to the single machine by permitting it to be used by another person, but is liable for the profits arising therefrom, and the damages thereby sustained by the assignee.—Steam Cutter Co. v. Sheldon, Case No. 13,331.

The failure of a licensee to pay license fees weekly, as provided in the license, held not an abandonment.—Brooks v. Stolley, Case No. 1,962.

A confession of judgment for arrears of weekly payments for a license is an admission of the arrears, giving the option to revoke the license.—Armstrong v. Hanlenbeck, Case No. 544.

Failure of licensee to comply with condition to advance money for procuring patent, and the presentation by him to the inventor of a bill for money already advanced, with a view to a settlement, held to be an abandonment by the licensee of all rights under the contract.—Kittle v. Frost, Case No. 7,856.

Failure to make returns and pay certain royalties, under contract granting an exclusive right, held not to justify revocation at will, though sufficient to justify court of equity in rescinding it.—Burdell v. Denig, Case No. 2,142.

§ 159. Royalties and license fees.
The patentee may license the use of his machine for a royalty or annuity.—Burr v. Duryee, Case No. 2,190.

An agreement in a license not to make any further claim of license fees under other patents owned or controlled by the licensee held not to apply to past infringement of a patent, the control of which, including the right to recover for infringements subsequently passed to the licensor.—Dibble v. Augur, Case No. 3,879.

A licensee will be compelled to pay the fee as a condition of using the patent.—Day v. Hartshorn, Case No. 3,683.

A principal is not liable for the claim of a patentee under work done by a contractor who held a license, even though he has not paid his license fees or royalty.—Stow v. Chicago, Case No. 13,512.

In a suit to obtain a reduction of a license fee, an injunction was granted restraining defendant from terminating the license upon condition of plaintiff's depositing in court the amount of the fees in dispute. The bill was dismissed for want of equity and proper parties. Held, that the fund would be retained until the final determination of the controversy by a proper tribunal.—Florence Sewing Mach. Co. v. Singer Mfg. Co., Case No. 4,885.

Defendant, who uses a patented improvement under a license which stipulates for a right to continue the use after expiration of the term agreed, cannot continue the use after such time without payment of the fee stipulated therefor.—England v. Thompson, Case No. 4,487.

A license to use looms, corresponding to certain models, for a specified period, "and for the additional term of any extension which may be hereafter granted of any patent now owned" by the licensors "relative to such looms," held to mean that the right to continuation of royalty was conditioned upon the extension of one or more of the patents.—Lowell Mfg. Co. v. Hartford Carpet Co., Case No. 8,569.

The grantee from a licensee must pay the license fees stipulated in the license from the patentee.—Goodyear v. Congress Rubber Co., Case No. 5,565.

But he will not be enjoined from acting under the license because of failure of his grantor to pay license fees accrued before the conveyance, nor is he liable therefor.—Goodyear v. Congress Rubber Co., Case No. 5,565.

The impairment of profits of a licensee by the use of the invention by others, though unlawful, is a good defense to a suit for license fees, where it was stipulated that the fees should cease if the licensee's profits were impaired by use by others.—Goodyear v. Day, Case No. 5,567.

Infringement of exclusive right granted by patentee to defendant is no defense by way of special plea in bar to a suit by him for license fees.—Birdsall v. Perego, Case No. 1,435.

In a suit to obtain the reduction of a license fee, held, that all of the joint owners of the patent and grantors of the license were necessary parties defendant, and no decree can be made without bringing them in.—Florence Sewing Mach. Co. v. Singer Mfg. Co., Case No. 4,884.

It is no defense by way of plea in bar to a suit for license fees that plaintiff was not the first and original inventor.—Birdsall v. Perego, Case No. 1,435.

In a suit for license fees after revocation of the license, held, that the licensee was estopped by the admission in the license from setting up the invalidity of the patent as a defense.—Evory v. Candee, Case No. 4,583.

XI. REGULATION OF DEALINGS IN PATENT RIGHTS AND PATENTED ARTICLES.

§ 160. Power to control and regulate.
A state has no right to interfere with the enjoyment of a patent right, or to annex conditions to the grant.—Ex parte Robinson, Case No. 11,932.

A state law providing that a note whose consideration is the right to make, use, or vend a patented invention, shall bear upon its face the words "given for a patent right," and that such note shall be subject to the same defenses in the hands of a third person as in the hands of the original owner, impairs the value of patent right property, and is unconstitutional.—Woollen v. Banker, Case No. 18,030.

A state law requiring the filing of a copy of letters patent and a certain affidavit by the owner with the county clerk, as a condition of the right to sell the patent right in the county, is unconstitutional and void.—Ex parte Robinson, Case No. 11,932.

§ 161. Marking patented articles.
Each article should be stamped with the day of the month, as well as the year. The word "Patented" may be abbreviated.—Hawley v. Bagley, Case No. 6,248.

It is no excuse for failure to mark the patented articles "Patented" that such marking would have been so expensive as to make the articles unprofitable.—Putnam v. Sudhoff, Case No. 11,483.

The manufacturer of an article, which has been patented, can affix upon such article the word "Patented" or any other word of similar import, together with the date of the patent, after the patent has expired.—Wilson v. Singer Mfg. Co., Case No. 17,836.

The word "Patent" affixed to an article imports to all who see it that the article is then patented.—Nichols v. Newell, Case No. 10,245.

Stamping manufactured articles with the name and date of a patent is conclusive on the manufacturers that they were made thereunder, and, where the patent is held to be an infringement, they will be held liable.—Jones v. Vankirk, Case No. 7,500.

§ 162. Effect of failure to mark.

The failure to mark patented articles does not affect the right to an injunction. It only takes away the right to damages.—Goodyear v. Allyn, Case No. 5,555.

To prevent the recovery of damages it must appear, either from the bill or in the proofs, that the patentee has made or vended the articles under the patent.—Goodyear v. Allyn, Case No. 5,555.

Failure to stamp the patented article, or to give the infringer notice, as required by the act of July 8, 1870, § 38, prevents recovery of more than nominal damages.—McComb v. Brodie, Case No. 8,708.

§ 163. Penalties for violation of regulations.

Flour may be a patentable article, and an action will lie to recover the penalty for marking it "Patented" when it is unpatented. Rev. St. § 4901.—Oliphant v. Salem Flouring Mills Co., Case No. 10,486.

The penalty does not attach for placing the word "Patent" on an article merely frivolous in itself, and which imports no novelty, or the exercise of any inventive talent, so that no one could be deceived.—United States v. Morris, Case No. 15,814.

To justify a judgment for the penalty, the declaration must allege, and the proofs show, that the article so marked was legally the subject of a patent.—United States v. Morris, Case No. 15,814.

The penalty of not less than $100 (Act Aug. 29, 1842, § 5) for the offense of marking the word "Patent" on unpatented articles, is a penalty of $100, and no more.—Stimpson v. Pond, Case No. 13,455.

The making of application for a patent will not prevent the penalty for attaching for affixing the word "Patent" to an unpatented article, at least as to articles made and stamped before the application.—Stephens v. Caldwell, Case No. 13,367.

An article upon which the patent has expired does not come within the meaning of the statute which prohibits the affixing of the word "Patented" upon any "unpatented article."—Wilson v. Singer Mfg. Co., Case No. 17,836.

A person who marks as patented an unpatented article is not liable to the penalty prescribed by Act Aug. 29, 1842, § 5, unless he does so knowing that he has no right to do so, and with the intention of deceiving the public.—Walker v. Hawxhurst, Case No. 17,071; Nichols v. Newell, Id. 10,245; Stephens v. Caldwell, Id. 13,367.

If an unpatented article is marked as patented, with intent to deceive, the offense is complete, without showing that the article was sold. If the marking was with innocent purpose, there is no offense, though the article is sold.—Nichols v. Newell, Case No. 10,245.

If the word "Patent" is affixed to articles with the intention of procuring a patent, and withholding them from observation and sale until the same is granted, the act is innocent.—Nichols v. Newell, Case No. 10,245.

Although one who marks an unpatented article as patented may expect to receive a patent, the offense is complete if he intended to make the public believe that the article was then patented.—Nichols v. Newell, Case No. 10,245.

Marking an unpatented article "Newell's Patent, 1852," is affixing the word "Patent" within the meaning of the act.—Nichols v. Newell, Case No. 10,245.

Suits for the penalty for affixing the word "Patented" to unpatented articles must be brought in the name of the informer, and not in the name of the United States. Act Aug. 29, 1842, § 5.—United States v. Morris, Case No. 15,814.

In an action by the informer for a penalty for marking an unpatented article as patented, the United States need not be joined as plaintiff.—Oliphant v. Salem Flouring Mills Co., Case No. 10,486.

In a qui tam action under Act 1842, § 6, the proof as to the patent must correspond with the allegations as to the sale of the article.—Hawley v. Bagley, Case No. 6,248.

A count charging defendants with putting the word "Patent" on a lamp is sustained by proof that they put it on the cap of the lamp.—Nichols v. Newell, Case No. 10,245.

In an action for the penalty for marking an unpatented article as patented, the question of the intention of deceiving the public is for the jury.—Walker v. Hawxhurst, Case No. 17,071.

XII. INFRINGEMENT.

(A) WHAT CONSTITUTES INFRINGEMENT.

§ 164. In general.

The law of infringement explained and illustrated.—Colt v. Massachusetts Arms Co., Case No. 3,030.

It is not necessary that the thing patented should be adopted in every particular to constitute an infringement; a substantial adoption is sufficient.—Root v. Ball, Case No. 12,035.

Where the right consists in certain instruments by which a thing of a particular structure is made, the structure or use of these instruments is prohibited.—Boyd v. Brown, Case No. 1,747.

There is no infringement in using what the public had free opportunity to use before the patent, whether the character or capacities thereof were generally understood or not.—Smith v. Higgins, Case No. 13,058; McCormick v. Manny, Id. 8,724.

§ 165. Knowledge or intent.

One may be an infringer without knowing of the existence of the patent.—Matthews v. Skates, Case No. 9,291.

A person who constructs a machine with knowledge that another is the first inventor acts at his peril, and a subsequent patent will prevent its use by him.—Evans v. Weiss, Case No. 4,572.

The manufacture of certain articles capable of being used in making up certain parts of a patented combination, and with the intention that they should be so used, is not an infringement, where they are separately useful for numerous purposes.—Millner v. Schofield, Case No. 9,609a.

§ 166. Patents for processes.

Where the gist of an invention is the discovery of a principle in science made practically useful by the process described, he who adopts the principle to a practical extent is guilty of infringement.—Tilghman v. Werk, Case No. 14,046.

There is an infringement of a patent for a process if the two products and the general mode of construction are the same as would appear by comparison of the two manufactures, though mechanical differences exist.—Collender v. Came, Case No. 2,999.

The inventor of a new means of carrying into effect a patented process is entitled to a patent therefor, but he has no right to use the process. —Tilghman v. Mitchell, Case No. 14,043.

Placing red-hot car wheels in a pit with alternate layers of charcoal, which is ignited thereby for the purpose of annealing, held equivalent to placing them in a previously heated furnace, within the meaning of the patent.—Whitney v. Mowry, Case No. 17,592.

§ 167. Patents for machines or manufactures in general—Identity in general.

Tests for determining the identity or diversity of machines on questions of infringement.—Blanchard v. Beers, Case No. 1,506; Tatham v. Le Roy, Id. 13,760; Whittemore v. Cutter, Id. 17,601.

On the point of infringement, the inquiry is whether defendant's machine in its construction involves some new idea not found in plaintiff's, or whether it is in substance the same, and differs merely in things immaterial or unimportant.—McCormick v. Seymour, Case No. 8,726.

There is an infringement if use of the machine will produce a result in it which would have been an infringement if originally introduced.—American Diamond Rock Boring Co. v. Sullivan Mach. Co., Case No. 298.

Where a party avails himself of the former invention without such variation as constitutes discovery, there is an infringement.—Carter v. Baker, Case No. 2,472.

To determine infringement the two machines must be compared, in the light of their devices, and their process and product, inquiry being directed to the essential parts.—Cahoon v. Ring, Case No. 2,292.

If two machines, having substantially the same mode of operation, do the same work in substantially the same way, and accomplish substantially the same result, they are the same, though differing in form, shape, or name.—Blanchard v. Puttman, Case No. 1,514; Same v. Reeves, Id. 1,515; Brooks v. Jenkins, Id. 1,953; Cahoon v. Ring, Id. 2,292; Conover v. Rapp, Id. 3,124; Same v. Roach, Id. 3,125; May v. Johnson County, Id. 9,334; Sickels v. Borden, Id. 12,832; Sloat v. Spring, Id. 12,-948a; Smith v. Fay, Id. 13,045; Union Sugar Refinery v. Matthiesson, Id. 14,399.

The identity or diversity of two machines depends, not on the employment of the same elements or powers of mechanics, but upon producing the given effect by substantially the same mode of operation, or substantially the same combination of powers.—Crompton v. Belknap Mills, Case No. 18,285; Odiorne v. Winkley, Id. 10,432.

Where two machines produce substantially a similar result by substantially similar means, no proof of difference between them lies in the fact that one is less effectual in operation, or more imperfect in its structure, than the other. —Roberts v. Harnden, Case No. 11,903.

There is no infringement where the two contrivances do not perform the same function, by the same means, and one cannot be used in place of the other.—Brown v. Rubber-Step Mfg. Co., Case No. 2,028.

A device is not less equivalent of another because, superadded to all the functions of such other, it may perform a further office, or because, besides all the functions of such other, it performs some one of the offices more effectively or better, so long as it performs them in substantially the same way, and uses substantially the same means.—Wheeler v. Clipper Mower, etc., Co., Case No. 17,493.

If the patented means were new, and the defendants have used them, they have infringed, although they may have used another device, not patented by the plaintiffs, by which the result is accomplished in a more perfect and satisfactory manner.—Waterbury Brass Co. v. New York & B. Brass Co., Case No. 17,256.

Subsequent discovery of peculiar value of material used by inventor does not give discoverer right to use it in the patented manner.—Bailey Washing & Wringing Mach. Co. v. Lincoln, Case No. 750.

§ 168. —— Identity of principle or mode of operation.

What constitutes substantial identity in principle.—Parker v. Stiles, Case No. 10,749.

Changing the position of a machine does not alter its principle.—Brooks v. Jenkins, Case No. 1,953.

"Principle," as applied to machines, refers to mode of operation; and identity of principle may exist in structures widely different in appearance and dimensions.—Latta v. Shawk, Case No. 8,-116.

The principle of a machine or improvement is the peculiar mode, manner, or device by which the proposed result or effect is produced.—Pitts v. Wemple, Case No. 11,194; Parker v. Stiles, Id. 10,749.

The principle in a machine is that which applies, modifies, or combines mechanical powers to produce a certain result.—Smith v. Pearce, Case No. 13,089.

That is a substantial identity which comprehends the application of the principle of the invention.—Coleman v. Liesor, Case No. 2,984; Latta v. Shawk, Id. 8,116; McComb v. Brodie, Id. 8,708; Page v. Ferry, Id. 10,662; Parker v. Haworth, Id. 10,738; Smith v. Downing, Id. 13,036.

A machine which is not the same in principle is not an infringement.—Brooks v. Jenkins, Case No. 1,953.

Where two machines are substantially the same, and operate in the same manner to produce the same kind of result, they must be, in principle, the same.—Gray v. James, Case No. 5,718.

A machine which operates, or may operate, if the owner is disposed to use it so, in the manner pointed out by the patent, is an infringement.—Holbrook v. Small, Case No. 6,595.

A machine is not the same if either the devices, or the mode of applying them, be substantially different from that of the patented machine.—Eames v. Cook, Case No. 4,239.

A difference in the result of the action of two devices is evidence of difference in mode of operation.—Sloat v. Patton, Case No. 12,947.

A difference in mode of operation or result obtained is evidence that the mechanism is different.—Eames v. Cook, Case No. 4,239.

Blanchard's patent for a machine for turning and cutting irregular forms is infringed by a machine using the same combination, but which will make only wagon spokes.—Blanchard v. Beers, Case No. 1,506.

Mechanism for marking dial paper by forcing points upward from below held equivalent to device for marking it by pressing points downward on surface.—Buerk v. Imhaeuser, Case No. 2,106; Same v. Valentine, Id. 2,109.

A claim in a fluting machine for an arched guide in combination with fluting rollers is infringed by a combination in which the position of the arched guide is changed, but without varying its mode of operation or the results produced.—King v. Maudelbaum, Case No. 7,799.

A box-cover fastening formed by making a hole in the rim of the cover to fit over a protuberance on the surface of the box infringes a patent for a fastening formed by a protuberance on both cover and box.—Parker v. Remhoff, Case No. 10,747.

A patent for a "shoe-last" is infringed by using the machine, without alteration, in the making of boots.—Mabie v. Haskell, Case No. 8,653.

A hat-body machine, in which it is claimed that the fur is projected by a rotary picker downward against a surface, by which it is guided upon a former, is an infringement of a patent for a like machine, in which the fur is blown by such a picker upwards against the upper side of a tunnel, through which it is carried on the former.—Wells v. Jacques, Case No. 17,398.

A patent for increasing or decreasing the draft of a locomotive boiler by carrying the exhaust pipes of the engines to the bottom of the smoke pipe, and there controlling the discharge of the steam by plugs, is infringed by a locomotive in which a like result is accomplished by carrying the exhaust pipes to the bottom of the smoke box, instead of the smoke pipe.—Winans v. Danforth, Case No. 17,859.

A change in the mode of construction without changing the principle, involving a loss of power, but gaining a quicker motion, will not prevent the machine being an infringement.—Blake v. Eagle Works Mfg. Co., Case No. 1,494.

§ 169. —— Identity of form or arrangement.

All modes, however changed in form, which act on the same principle and effect the same end are within the patent.—Brooks v. Bicknell, Case No. 1,944; Evans v. Eaton, Id. 4,560; McComb v. Brodie, Id. 8,708; Sargent v. Larned, Id. 12,364; Sickels v. Borden, Id. 12,832.

Where the change of form involves only the exercise of mechanical ingenuity, there is an infringement.—Potter v. Schenck, Case No. 11,337.

If defendant's machinery embody the patentee's ideas, and operate by such adoption, it infringes, in spite of an apparent or real difference of arrangement.—Smith v. Higgins, Cases Nos. 13,-057, 13,059.

Infringement is not avoided by change of form or proportion, substitution of one motive power for another, different position of gearing, or superior finish, etc.—Smith v. Higgins, Case No. 13,058.

Though the machine is not in its arrangement substantially different from that of the patent, yet there is no infringement if its action upon the material operated upon is essentially different, and the result is new.—Tatham v. Le Roy, Case No. 13,762.

A patent confined to mold boards for plows, whose faces are worked upon transverse circular lines whose radii are in the exact proportion of three to one, is infringed by a mold board which contains a slight variation only for the purpose of evading the patent.—Davis v. Palmer, Case No. 3,645.

Structures are "substantially" the same if of the same material, thickness, or form, where such condition is important.—Adams v. Edwards, Case No. 53.

A saw having its fleam teeth of the usual triangular form, with intervals between them, does not infringe a patent for a saw having its fleam teeth arranged in pairs, with only a perpendicular slit between them.—Wheeler v. Simpson, Case No. 17,500; Hoe v. Same, Id.

A change of form or proportion, producing a new effect, is not within the inhibition of the statute as a simple change of form or proportion.—Davis v. Palmer, Case No. 3,645.

A patent for a saw, claiming in combination clearing teeth hollowed out in front, so as to plane out the wood between the scores cut by the fleam teeth, is not infringed by a saw in which the wood is rasped out by clearing teeth, which are straight and perpendicular in front.—Wheeler v. Simpson, Case No. 17,500; Hoe v. Same, Id.

§ 170. —— Substitution of equivalents.

One device is not a well-known substitute for another which cannot be used for it.—Crompton v. Belknap Mills, Case No. 3,406.

A mechanical equivalent is limited to the principle of the patent, including merely colorable or formal alterations.—McCormick v. Manny, Case No. 8,724.

If defendant has taken the same general plan and applied it for the same purpose, though varying the mode of construction, he has used merely mechanical equivalents.—McCormick v. Seymour, Case No. 8,726.

The doctrine of mechanical equivalents discussed.—Storrs v. Howe, Case No. 13,495.

A mechanical equivalent is one that may be adopted in place of that named, by a person skilled in the art, from his knowledge of the art. —Burden v. Corning, Case No. 2,143; Johnson v. Root, Id. 7,411; May v. Johnson County, Id. 9,334; Smith v. Downing, Id. 13,036.

The true criterion of mechanical equivalence is identity of purpose, and not of form or name. —In re Boughton, Case No. 1,696.

The mere substitution of one known device for another, though complex, is an infringement.—Foster v. Moore, Case No. 4,978.

A change which constitutes a mechanical equivalent, though accomplishing something useful beyond the effect accomplished by the patentee, is nevertheless an infringement, as respects what is covered by the patent.—Foss v. Herbert, Case No. 4,957.

Where the chief efficacy of a machine arises from the use of equivalents to the patented machine, it is an infringement, though it be simpler, cheaper, and better.—Odiorne v. Denney, Case No. 10,431.

Infringement is not avoided by mere formal alterations, or the substitution for one ingredient of a well-known equivalent.—Bailey Wringing Mach. Co. v. Adams, Case No. 752; Barrett v. Hall, Id. 1,047; King v. Louisville Cement Co., Id. 7,798; Wintermute v. Redington, Id. 17,896.

A change which is the substitution of an equivalent and something more is an infringement of what is covered by the patent, though the additional matter be a patentable improvement.—Sloat v. Spring, Case No. 12,948a.

The use of an equivalent is not an infringement if such equivalent is expressly disclaimed. —Byam v. Farr, Case No. 2,264.

One who has discovered a result and machinery that produces it may invoke the doctrine of equivalents, but a mere improver cannot.—Singer v. Walmsley, Case No. 12,900.

Where all the elements of a machine are old, the doctrine of equivalents cannot be invoked to suppress all other improvements on the old machine.—Union Sugar Refinery v. Matthiesson, Case No, 14,399.

But such patent is infringed by the substitution for one of its elements of an equivalent well known at the time of the invention.—Union Sugar Refinery v. Matthiesson, Case No. 14,399.

A claim for a paint can having a thin rim of soft metal, to be cut through in opening, is infringed by making one end wholly of thin tin. —Masury v. Anderson, Case No. 9,270.

A screw and a lever are mechanical equivalents. So, also, a spring, a weight, and a pulley are mechanical equivalents.—Tatham v. Le Roy, Case No. 13,760.

A patent calling for smooth or plain surfaces is infringed by surfaces having slight inequalities, but which are sufficiently smooth for all practical purposes and operate substantially as the patented surfaces.—Whipple v. Middlesex Co., Case No. 17,520.

A rod is a known equivalent of an endless chain in machinery where it can be used for the same purpose and effect.—Spain v. Gamble, Case No. 13,199.

Hydraulic pressure, operating through a piston rod for moving a jaw in a stone crusher held a mechanical equivalent for toggle levers operated by a lever and crank rod.—Blake v. Robertson, Cases Nos. 1,500, 1,501.

A knuckle metallic joint in a hydraulic mining apparatus held to be a known mechanical substitute for one made of India rubber, or other flexible material.—Fisher v. Craig, Case No. 4,817.

A device for making extract from tan bark by the use of exhaust steam held not infringed by a device for using steam direct from a boiler. —Bridge v. Brown, Case No. 1,858.

Making the lower roll of a fluting machine adjustable, instead of the upper, and the use of a rack and pinion to make it adjustable, instead of a screw, does not avoid infringement.—Knox v. Loweree, Case No. 7,910.

A screw rotated in a stationary nut by means of a spur wheel gearing with another screw, producing longitudinal movement, is the equivalent of one to which like movement is imparted by means of a nut rotated by a pulley.—King v. Louisville Cement Co., Case No. 7,798.

A claim in which the lower chords in truss bridges were described as of bars "wide and thin" held not infringed by a bridge having chords of bars round in section.—Keystone Bridge Co. v. Phœnix Iron Co., Case No. 7,751.

Sheets of tin used to preserve the form of the material in the process of vulcanizing India rubber held not equivalent to tin foil.—Poppenhusen v. New York Gutta Percha Comb Co., Case No. 11,282.

An hotel register with advertisements at the top and bottom of the pages held an infringement of a patent for a register with side margins for printed advertisements.—Hawes v. Washburne, Case No. 6,242.

A patent claiming invention of an hotel register with alternate leaves of bibulous paper, for advertisements, held infringed by the use of yellow medium paper for such advertisements.—Hawes v. Gage, Case No. 6,237.

Mere formal differences, such as substituting two additional dies, in a method of forming the eyes of picks, which perform the same function as the side walls of the dies of the patent, do not avoid infringement.—Klein v. Park, Case No. 7,868.

§ 171. —— Omission of parts.

A patent for two machines, each of which is a new invention, is infringed by the use of one of such machines.—Wyeth v. Stone, Case No. 18,107.

It is an infringement to use a part of the invention embraced within the patent.—Blake v. Smith, Case No. 1,502.

A patent of a machine as an aggregate is infringed by a machine which omits immaterial parts, or uses fewer of the original old elements, or substitutes equivalents.—Rich v. Close, Case No. 11,757.

The nominal elimination of a part whose office is performed by something else, under a different name, will not prevent the machine from being an infringement.—Brooks v. Norcross, Case No. 1,957.

A patent for a machine composed of new parts is infringed by the use of any one of such new parts.—Foss v. Herbert, Case No. 4,957.

A patent for an invention embracing an element of a machine is infringed by the making or use of such element.—Union Sugar Refinery v. Matthiesson, Case No. 14,399.

A patent for a device cannot be avoided by dividing the device into two parts, which, when combined, produce the same result, in substantially the same way.—Wheeler v. Clipper Mower, etc., Co., Case No. 17,493.

§ 172. —— Addition of parts.

The inventor of improvements or additions to a patented machine or manufacture has no right to use the patented machine or manufacture in connection therewith, nor has the original patentee the right to use the improvements or additions where they are duly patented.—Carr v. Rice, Case No. 2,440; Chicago Fruit-House Co. v. Busch, Id. 2,669; Coleman v. Liesor, Id. 2,984; Colt v. Massachusetts Arms Co., Id. 3,030; Conover v. Rapp, Id. 3,124; Cook v. Howard, Id. 3,160; Crehore v. Norton, Id. 3,381; Decker v. Griffith, Id. 3,724; De Florez v. Raynolds, Id. 3,742; Gray v. James, Id. 5,718, 5,719; Westinghouse v. Gardner, etc., Air-Brake Co., Id. 17,450; Whipple v. Baldwin Mfg. Co., Id. 17,514; Woodworth v. Rogers, Id. 18,018.

Use of patented invention as one of the elements of another combination is an infringement.—Cleveland v. Towle, Case No. 2,888.

If a machine produce several different effects by a particular combination of machinery, and these effects are produced in the same way in another machine, and a new effect added, the inventor of the latter cannot entitle himself to a patent for the whole machine.—Whittemore v. Cutter, Case No. 17,601.

Although a patented device, without the improvement of another added to it, is of little practical value, the latter cannot use it without the consent of the patentee.—Turrell v. Spaeth, Case No. 14,269.

Where a second invention is an improvement on the first, which it includes, neither owner can lawfully use the invention of the other without his consent.—Star Salt Caster Co. v. Crossman, Case No. 13,321.

The inventor of an improvement on an old machine which he had a right to use is entitled to the benefit of the operation of the machine, with the improvement, to the same degree as the original patentee was entitled to the old machine.—McCormick v. Seymour, Case No. 8,726.

§ 173. —— Identity of result.

A patent for a machine secures only the means employed, and not the effect produced.—American Pin Co. v. Oakville Co., Case No. 313.

Accomplishing the same result by a mechanism or combination of a mechanism substantially different from that of the patent involves no infringement.—Burden v. Corning, Case No. 2,143; Clark v. Kennedy Mfg. Co., Id. 2,826; Eames v. Cook, Id. 4,239; Morris v. Barrett, Id. 9,827; Singer v. Walmsley, Id. 12,900.

Use of substantially the same devices to produce the same results and certain additional results is an infringement.—New York Rubber Co. v. Chaskel, Case No. 10,215.

The fact that the results of defendant's mechanism are greatly superior to those described and claimed by the patentee may be considered as tending to prove that defendant's mechanism is substantially different from plaintiff's.—Singer v. Walmsley, Case No. 12,900.

A patent for a new product is infringed by its manufacture by any process whatever.—Badische Anilin & Soda Fabrik v. Hamilton Mfg. Co., Case No. 721.

§ 174. Patents for combinations—Identity in general.

In determining whether a patent for a combination is anticipated or infringed, the distinguishing characteristic is to be considered.—Conover v. Roach, Case No. 3,125.

A patent for a combination is not infringed unless defendant uses, constructs, and operates it in substantially the same way as under the patent. To change the form and obtain a new manner of operating, or to obtain a new and useful result, is subject to a patent.—Gorham v. Mixter, Case No. 5,626.

A patent for a combination is not infringed by any and every combination of the same element which may produce the same result, but only by the particular combination, or one substantially the same.—Crompton v. Belknap Mills, Case No. 3,406.

A patent for a combination containing new parts may be infringed by the use of such new parts.—Lee v. Blandy, Case No. 8,182.

A subordinate device is not an "element," within the rule relating to combination claims.—Smith v. Fay, Case No. 13,045.

§ 175. —— Transposition of elements.

A change in location of a part, in combination, where no new function is performed, will not evade a patent.—Adams v. Joliet Mfg. Co., Case No. 56; Knox v. Great Western Quick-Silver Min. Co., Id. 7,907.

§ 176. —— Substitution of equivalents.

A patent for a combination of old devices is infringed by a combination which merely substitutes a single device, which at the date of the patent was a well-known equivalent.—Sands v. Wardwell, Case No. 12,306; Webster v. New Brunswick Carpet Co., Id. 17,337; Welling v. Rubber-Coated Harness Trimming Co., Id. 17,382.

If the mechanical combinations of the members of the two machines be such that the action and mode of operation differ, they are not mechanical equivalents.—Blake v. Rawson, Case No. 1,499.

The doctrine of mechanical equivalents does not apply where the patent is for a particular combination of old elements.—Crompton v. Belknap Mills, Case No. 3,406.

A patent for a combination is not infringed by a combination which substitutes for one of the elements another element substantially different in construction and operation, but serving the same purpose.—Crompton v. Belknap Mills, Case No. 3,406.

A substitute for an ingredient in a patented combination does not cease to be an equivalent because it does something more and better.—Atlantic Giant Powder Co. v. Goodyear, Case No. 623; Same v. Mowbray, Id. 624; Kendrick v. Emmons, Id. 7,695; Sarven v. Hall, Id. 12,-369.

A combination of a sheath with a fixed knife in the same cylinder, and one of a springing knife with a sheath in the same or opposite cylinder, held not equivalents.—Bullock Printing Press Co. v. Jones, Case No. 2,132.

In a combination of a machine for making kettles, a tool carriage moved by a rod connected with a cam acted on by a gear wheel actuated through a crank by the hand of a workman is an equivalent of a tool carriage moved by a screw connected by a gear wheel with the power moving the lathe.—Waterbury Brass Co. v. Miller, Case No. 17,254.

§ 177. —— Omission of elements.

There is no infringement of a patent for a combination unless all the essential parts of the combination are substantially imitated, and it is not an infringement to use a part of such elements.—Bell v. Daniels, Case No. 1,247; Bliss v. Haight, Id. 1,548; Brooks v. Bicknell, Id. 1,946; Same v. Jenkins, Id. 1,953; Carter v. Baker, Id. 2,472; Coolidge v. McCone, Id. 3,-186; Densmore v. Schofield, Id. 3,809; Dodge v. Card, Id. 3,951; Fisher v. Craig, Id. 4,817; Howe v. Abbott, Id. 6,766; Huggins v. Hubby, Id. 6,839; King v. Louisville Cement Co., Id. 7,798; Latta v. Shawk, Id. 8,116; McCormick v. Manny, Id. 8,724; Pitts v. Wemple, Id. 11,-195; Roberts v. Harnden, Id. 11,903; Singer v. Walmsley, Id. 12,900; Smith v. Higgins, Id. 13,058; Same v. Clark, Id. 13,027; Same v. Marshall, Id. 13,077.

Where the patentee did not devise the various parts, but the whole combination, it is not infringement to use a part of the combination.—Case v. Brown, Case No. 2,488.

A combination of old devices does not prevent others from using them separately, or in a new combination.—Hailes v. Van Wormer, Case No. 5,904; Hale v. Stimpson, Id. 5,915; Byam v. Eddy, Id. 2,263; Crompton v. Belknap Mills, Id. 18,285.

It is no infringement of a patent for a combination of machines to use either of the machines separately.—Barrett v. Hall, Case No. 1,047.

Where a patent is for improvements on known machinery and a combination of mechanical powers, it is an infringement to adopt any of the improvements or any of the parts of the combination.—Parker v. Haworth, Case No. 10,-738.

The manufacture of one of the elements of a patented combination, not proved to be made for use in connection with the other elements, is not an infringement of the patent.—Saxe v. Hammond, Case No. 12,411.

A patent for an invention, embracing a new element and a combination of old elements, is infringed by the use of the new element or new combination.—Union Sugar Refinery v. Matthiesson, Case No. 14,399.

Where a structure consisting of several parts is patented as a combination, one who manufactures and sells some of the parts, they being useless without the residue, with the understanding and intent that such residue shall be supplied by another, and the whole go into use in its complete form, is liable as an infringer of the patent.—Wallace v. Holmes, Case No. 17,-100.

Where the patent is for a specific device and not for a combination, infringement is not avoided by making the device in three parts instead of two.—Mabie v. Haskell, Case No. 8,653.

§ 178. —— Addition of elements and improvements.

A patent for a combination is infringed by its use with added features.—Pitts v. Wemple, Case No. 11,195; Williams v. Boston & A. R. Co., Id. 17,716.

Where a patented combination turns out to be useless, a person who adds another element, and thereby makes the whole practically useful, is entitled to use the whole combination.—Robertson v. Hill, Case No. 11,925.

A patent for a combination of old devices is infringed by its use to accomplish something more or better, which could not be effected without its aid.—Sayles v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., Case No. 12,415.

The addition of a well-known device will not give defendant the right to use the patented combination where some addition is necessary to fit it for use.—Robertson v. Hill, Case No. 11,925.

What is technically a combination, and how it may be infringed, though improved.—Foster v. Moore, Case No. 4,978.

Improvement upon one of the independent devices used in a patented combination of old devices is no defense to infringement.—Converse v. Cannon, Case No. 3,144.

§ 179. Patents for compositions of matter.

An equivalent of a substance is another substance having similar properties and producing substantially the same effect.—Matthews v. Skates, Case No. 9,291.

The use of chemical equivalents in place of one or more of the elements of a patented compound may infringe the patent for the compound, although in some respects the substituted equivalents are improvements.—Woodward v. Morrison, Case No. 18,008.

The sale of a substance containing caustic alkali, with oil or rosin mechanically distributed through, but not in chemical union with, it, inclosed in a metallic integument, infringes a patent for caustic alkali inclosed in a metallic integument.—Thompson v. Jewett, Case No. 13,-961.

A paint for preventing the fouling of ships' bottoms, similar to the patented paint, but substituting arsenite of copper for oxide of copper, held not an infringement.—Wonson v. Gilman, Case No. 17,933.

A patent for a concrete pavement laid in sections, claiming the interposition between the blocks of permanent material, held infringed by the temporary interposition of material while the pavement was in the process of formation.—Schillinger v. Gunther, Case No. 12,456.

A composition of which plaster of Paris is an ingredient, used for the filling of fire-proof safes, held not an infringement of a patent for the use of plaster of Paris.—Rich v. Lippincott, Case No. 11,758.

A patent for vulcanized rubber is not infringed by the use of a substance which is rendered plastic and not hardened by heat.—Goodyear Dental Vulcanite Co. v. Flagg, Case No. 5,590.

§ 180. Patents for designs.

Proper tests for determining infringement of a patent for a design.—Gorham Mfg. Co. v. White, Case No. 5,627.

To constitute infringement of a design patent, the designs must be so similar as to appear to ordinary observers, but not necessarily to experts, to be the same.—Perry v. Starrett, Case No. 11,012.

Where two designs are substantially similar, the fact that different names or trade-marks are or may be used in connection with them will not sufficiently distinguish them.—Perry v. Starrett, Case No. 11,012.

§ 181. Utility of infringing device.

Superiority of defendant's invention no defense to infringement.—Alden v. Dewey, Case No. 153.

The superior utility of defendant's device is not of itself a certain test upon the question of identity.—Pitts v. Wemple, Case No. 11,194.

The fact that a machine is an improvement on a patented machine will not prevent its being an infringement if it is substantially the same.—Forbes v. Barstow Stove Co., Case No. 4,923.

The degree of superiority of result obtained, or efficiency or economy, by the substituted material, may be such as to amount to a difference in kind.—Goodyear Dental Vulcanite Co. v. Willis, Case No. 5,603.

§ 182. Experiments.

An experiment with a patented article for the sole purpose of gratifying a philosophical taste or curiosity, or for mere amusement, is not an infringement.—Poppenhusen v. Falke, Case No. 11,279.

But such experiment is an infringement where the product is put on the market.—Poppenhusen v. New York Gutta Percha Comb Co., Case No. 11,283.

Experimental making and user of patented article is technical infringement.—Albright v. Celluloid Harness-Trimming Co., Case No. 147.

§ 183. Making or repair of patented article.

The mere unauthorized making of a patented machine, although it is neither used nor sold, is an infringement.—Bloomer v. Gilpin, Case No. 1,558; Carter v. Baker, Id. 2,472.

The making of a patented machine fit for use, and with design to use it for profit, in violation of the patent right, is of itself a breach of the patent right, for which an action lies.—Whittemore v. Cutter, Case No. 17,600.

The manufacture and sale of a part of a patented invention, designed to be used by the purchasers for the express use to which it is put by the patentee, is an infringement.—Richardson v. Noyes, Case No. 11,792.

A patent for an invention embracing an entire machine is infringed by the making, without license, of any part of it.—Union Sugar Refinery v. Matthiesson, Case No. 14,399.

The making and selling of the separate materials for a patented combination is not an infringement.—Byam v. Farr, Case No. 2,264.

The sale by defendant of the constituents of complainant's patent, with the intent and further purpose of enabling the buyer to turn them into the patented compound, is an infringement. —Rumford Chemical Works v. Hecker, Case No. 12,133.

The right to use necessarily implies the right to repair, or, when destroyed or worn out, the right to purchase another.—Bicknell v. Todd, Case No. 1,389.

The purchaser of a patented machine with separately patented parts has no right to manufacture new parts to replace those worn out.—Aiken v. Manchester Print Works, Case No. 113.

But the purchaser may repair and improve the patented parts.—Aiken v. Manchester Print Works, Case No. 113.

A purchaser from a patentee may repair and perfect the machines purchased, but he has no right to use machines embracing the patented inventions, which are not the identical machines purchased.—Union Metallic Cartridge Co. v. United States Cartridge Co., Case No. 14,369.

The sale of a patented machine, the valuable or novel part of which must be replaced at intervals of a month or so, carries with it the right to replace such part.—Farrington v. Board of Water Com'rs of Detroit, Case No. 4,687.

The right to replace such parts as are temporary depends upon the right to use the machine, and is not affected by an extension of the patent.—Farrington v. Board of Water Com'rs of Detroit, Case No. 4,687.

A patent for a dental plate held infringed by replacing parts by new parts made of the materials and in the mode described in the patent.—Goodyear Dental Vulcanite Co. v. Preterre, Case No. 5,596.

A patented machine, sold to one who had a license to use it on payment of a royalty based upon the product, was taken to pieces, and the parts sold at auction as scrap iron, on the death of the licensee. Held, that the purchaser of such parts had no right to reconstruct and use the machine.—Wortendyke v. White, Case No. 18,050.

§ 184. Violation of restrictions on manufacture, use, or sale of patented article.

A patent for a combination buckle and band, for cotton bales, where the buckles are stamped, "Licensed to use once only," is infringed by the sale of the buckles with new hoops, for use a second time.—American Cotton Tie Supply Co. v. Bullard, Case No. 294.

Where a patentee assigned to plaintiff all his interest in a patented machine except the right to manufacture said machine in a certain city, and plaintiff afterwards granted a license to one C. to use one of the machines within a certain portion of such city, and C. sold the machine to defendant, who removed it to a portion of the city outside the district described in the license, there is an infringement of the patent.—Chambers v. Smith, Case No. 2,582.

On the sale and unconditional delivery of a patented article it passes outside of the monopoly of the patent.—Goodyear v. Beverly Rubber Co., Case No. 5,557.

On the sale, by the patentee of a process and product, of the patented article, the purchaser may use the materials of which it is composed for the manufacture of any articles not themselves protected by a patent.—Goodyear v. Beverly Rubber Co., Case No. 5,557.

And this is the case although the patented article was bought of the patentee's licensee, who was restricted by the license to a use of the patented product different from that to which it was devoted by the purchaser.—Goodyear v. Beverly Rubber Co., Case No. 5,557.

A patented product purchased without condition or restriction loses the protection of the patent laws, and the purchaser may sell the same in the territory of one having exclusive rights.—Adams v. Burks, Case No. 50; Aiken v. Manchester Print Works, Id. 113.

When a patented article has been lawfully made and sold without restriction or condition, it is no longer within the monopoly, and the purchaser may use it without restriction as to time and place.—McKay v. Wooster, Case No. 8,847.

An assignment of the revenues of a railroad, and of the use of the rolling stock, to a preferred creditor, is not a transfer of corporate entity or property, and the assignee is not guilty of infringement in using on the cars patented appliances licensed to the company.—Emigh v. Chamberlain, Case No. 4,447.

A grant of an exclusive right to make, use, and vend the patented machine within certain territory is infringed by the manufacture by others of machines within the territory for use without it.—Jenkins v. Greenwald, Case No. 7,270.

The use of a patented machine under a license, whose conditions are not performed, is an infringement, and its use will be enjoined.—Brooks v. Stolley, Case No. 1,962.

The construction of two machines under authority to use one only is an infringement, though both were never in operation at the same time.—Bloomer v. Gilpin, Case No. 1,558.

A sale of the materials of a patented machine on an execution against the owner will not subject the sheriff to an action for infringement.—Sawin v. Guild, Case No. 12,391.

The sale or use of the product of a patented machine is no violation of the exclusive right to use, construct, or sell the machine itself.—Goodyear v. Central R. Co., Case No. 5,563.

§ 185. Contributory infringement.

One making a machine which may be easily adjusted so as to infringe, with intent that it shall be so adjusted by a third person, is an infringer.—Knight v. Gavit, Case No. 7,884.

The sale of an article for use in a patented combination to persons who intend so to use it is an infringement, although the manufacture and sale would not per se be an infringement.—Bowker v. Dows, Case No. 1,734.

The sale of dials, to be used with an infringing time detector, for which defendant has accounted, is not an infringement.—Buerk v. Imhaeuser, Case No. 2,108.

§ 186. Knowledge or consent of patentee.

The patentee has no right, either during the original term or the extended term of his patent, to a patented machine constructed by another with his consent, or to prevent its use.—Black v. Hubbard, Case No. 1,460.

Where the patentee gave his consent to the manufacture of some of the alleged infringements by defendants, he can recover no damages for these; for those afterwards manufactured he is entitled to manufacturer's profits.—Westlake v. Cartter, Case No. 17,451.

Whether acquiescence can be inferred from failure to bring suit against defendant during the pendency of other suits against other parties, considered.—Green v. French, Case No. 5,757.

The mere discontinuance of a suit and forbearance to sue any of the parties thereto for over a year thereafter held not an acquiescence in the infringement.—Thompson v. Jewett, Case No. 13,961.

A license permitting the invention to be manufactured and used upon certain terms and conditions will not be deemed evidence of an acquiescence in infringements of the licensor's rights.—Jordan v. Dobson, Case No. 7,519.

§ 187. Injuries from infringement.

A sale of the infringing article to one employed by the patentee to make the purchase for the purpose of securing evidence of infringement will not support an action for damages.—Byam v. Bullard, Case No. 2,262.

(B) ACTIONS AT LAW.

§ 188. Grounds of action.

A person may sue for an infringement of any one of the separate and distinct inventions that may be covered by his patent.—Cook v. Ernest, Case No. 3,155; Moody v. Fiske, Id. 9,745.

The patentee cannot recover for an infringement if he was not in fact the original inventor as to every part of the world.—Dawson v. Follen, Case No. 3,670.

An action at law may be maintained after the patent has expired, where the infringement took place during the term of the patent.—Howes v. Nute, Case No. 6,790.

A patentee who claims several distinct improvements must show himself entitled to each, to sustain the action.—Heinrich v. Luther. Case No. 6,327.

See, also, post, § 212.

§ 189. Defenses.

It is no answer to a claim of damages that defendant made no profits by his infringement.—Goodyear Dental Vulcanite Co. v. Van Antwerp, Case No. 5,600.

The fact that the invention has become useless by the discovery of another method will not invalidate the patent.—Poppenhusen v. New York Gutta Percha Comb Co., Case No. 11,283.

It is no justification that respondent constructed and used his machine before complainant took out his patent, where he copied it from complainant's invention.—Hovey v. Stevens, Case No. 6,745.

Licensees who repudiate the license, and stand upon the ground that the patent is invalid, cannot set up the license as a defense to infringement.—Cohn v. National Rubber Co., Case No. 2,968; Moody v. Taber, Id. 9,747.

Licensee held entitled to offer in evidence letters patent of his licensor as a defense to an action against him for infringing a prior patent.—Blanchard v. Puttman, Case No. 1,514.

In an action by the assignee, defendant cannot set up the fact that the assignment was not recorded, if he had actual or constructive notice of it when the infringement was committed.—Valentine v. Marshal, Case No. 16,812a.

The use by defendant of an infringing device estops him from denying the utility of plaintiff's invention.—Vance v. Campbell, Case No. 16,836; Hays v. Sulsor, Id. 6,271.

Defendant cannot set up in defense that the patent was issued unintentionally, through a blunder of a subordinate in the patent office.—Doughty v. West, Case No. 4,028.

Where complainant proved a royalty for the use of similar machines to those of defendant, held, that defendant was not entitled to prove that some of his machines infringed several of the claims, and others only one of the claims.—Kendrick v. Emmons, Case No. 7,696.

The decision of the patent office in favor of an applicant and against a patentee on an interference declared will not conclude the patentee so as to prevent him from bringing a suit for infringement.—Perry v. Starrett, Case No. 11,012.

There is no infringement by the use of processes which the patentee has withheld from the public.—Page v. Ferry, Case No. 10,662.

See, also, post, § 214.

§ 190. Persons entitled to sue.

A suit for an infringement after the making of an assignment must be brought by the assignee.—Herbert v. Adams, Case No. 6,394.

An assignee of a patent has an exclusive right of action for an infringement only where his assignment gives him a whole interest in the patent with or without territorial limitations.—Suydam v. Day, Case No. 13,654.

An action for infringement may be maintained by one to whom the entire property in the invention was assigned before the issuing of letters patent.—Rathbone v. Orr, Case No. 11,585.

The executor to whom the patent was issued, though not the sole executor named in the inventor's will, may maintain suit thereon.—Goodyear v. Providence Rubber Co., Case No. 5,583.

Where the contract is for the purchase of a portion of a patent right, the legal right in the monopoly remains in the patentee, and he alone can sue for an infringement.—Sanford v. Messer, Case No. 12,314.

A patentee, in the absence of a legal assignment and tranfer of his interest in the invention, may maintain a suit for infringement, irrespective of his private agreements with third persons.—Park v. Little, Case No. 10,715.

A joint action lies by the patentee and an assignee of a moiety of the patent right for infringement. Act Feb. 21, 1793, c. 11.—Whittemore v. Cutter, Case No. 17,600.

A patentee may assign his right to recover for past infringements.—Hamilton v. Rollins, Case No. 5,988.

An assignment of a right of action under a patent need not be recorded.—Gear v. Fitch, Case No. 5,290.

See, also, post, § 215.

§ 191. Persons liable.

The manufacturer, the seller, and the user of an infringing article are liable for the infringement.—Haselden v. Ogden, Case No. 6,190.

The purchaser of patented articles from an infringer is not liable as an infringer.—Blanchard's Gun-Stock Turning Factory v. Jacobs, Case No. 1,520; Anonymous, Id. 477.

A joint owner, who uses or sells the patented device without the authority of his co-owner, as respects the latter's rights, is liable for infringement.—Pitts v. Hall, Case No. 11,193.

The sale of the product of a patented machine is not an infringement, but, if made by the manufacturer, he is liable for damages, and may be enjoined.—Boyd v. McAlpin, Case No. 1,748.

One who manufactures the patented thing without right or license, though employed by another, is an infringer.—Bryce v. Dorr, Case No. 2,070.

Defendant is liable for an infringement, in the use of an infringing tool, by one who worked in his factory by the piece, furnishing his own tools.—Wooster v. Marks, Case No. 18,038.

A mere workman employed, by a person who is not the patentee, to make parts of a patented machine, is not liable to damages. Act Feb. 21, 1793.—Delano v. Scott, Case No. 3,753.

Use of an invention as an officer of the government, in the performance of his duties, for its benefit, will not prevent the user being liable as an infringer.—Campbell v. James, Case No. 2,361.

A patent for the application or employment of armor on a vessel is not infringed by one who puts the same on a vessel under contract with the government.—Heaton v. Quintard, Case No. 6,311.

Principals are responsible for infringements by their agent, acting within the scope of his authority, and the legal implication of their concurrence therein will dispense with proof of it.—Stevens v. Felt, Case No. 13,397.

An act of an employé of a corporation, adopted by it, will be deemed to have been authorized.—Poppenhusen v. New York Gutta Percha Comb Co., Case No. 11,283.

A corporation is liable where the infringing machines are procured by it, and are used by persons employed or paid by it.—Ransom v. New York, Case No. 11,573.

The unlawful use of a patented device by city officials for city purposes is not an act of nonfeasance or misfeasance, within a statute relieving the city from liability.—Bliss v. Brooklyn, Case No. 1,544.

The board of education and not the city is liable for the use of a patented seat in the city's public schools, where the seats are purchased and owned by the board.—Allen v. Brooklyn, Case No. 218; Same v. New York, Id. 232.

A contractor who does work for a county is liable for infringement of a patent in such work, though he was ignorant of the patent.—Jacobs v. Hamilton County, Case No. 7,161.

Authority to contractor for street pavement to use a patented process will relieve the city from liability for infringement, notwithstanding a reservation to the contrary.—Bigelow v. Louisville, Case No. 1,400.

The general agent of a transportation company, which had contracted with connecting lines for through transportation, held not liable for infringement by use of an infringing device on the cars of the railroad companies set apart for carriage of the transportation company's freight.—Lightner v. Kimball, Case No. 8,345.

Under a contract between a railroad company and a manufacturer to build certain cars with a patented device, the chairman of the railroad company, who signed the contract for the company, is not liable to the patentee, where the device was used without license.—Lightner v. Brooks, Case No. 8,344.

A patentee who grants territorially exclusive monopolies may himself be treated as a trespasser if he interferes.—Burr v. Duryee, Case No. 2,190.

Carrier of articles made in infringement of patents where he refuses to disclose shippers is liable for infringement.—American Cotton-Tie Supply Co. v. McCready, Case No. 295.

The keeper of an hotel, who keeps an infringing hotel register, is liable as the user of the invention.—Hawes v. Cook, Case No. 6,236; Same v. Gage, Id. 6,237; Same v. Washburne, Id. 6,242.

Damages may be recovered for the use, without license, of plaintiff's patented improvement, by an American citizen on an American vessel on the high seas.—Gardiner v. Howe, Case No. 5,219.

The use by a foreign vessel, in its structure or equipment, of an improvement for which a patent has been obtained in the United States, while temporarily within its jurisdiction for purposes of commerce, is not an infringement.—Brown v. Duchesne, Case No. 2,004.

A person manufacturing a patented article under a license from the inventor, who held the patent in trust for a corporation, proceeds at his peril after actual notice of the claim of the corporation.—Consolidated Fruit-Jar Co. v. Whitney, Case No. 3,134.

See, also, post, § 216.

§ 192. Limitations and laches.

Prior to Act July 8, 1870, there was no statute limiting the time within which an action at law must be prosecuted for the infringement of a patent.—Wood v. Cleveland Rolling-Mill Co., Case No. 17,941; Same v. Union Iron-Works Co., Id.; Collins v. Peebles, Id. 3,017.

The limitation of actions for infringement of patents under Act 1870, § 55, commences to run from the expiration of the original term, though the patent has been renewed.—Sayles v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., Case No. 12,417.

State statutes cannot be pleaded in bar of suit for infringement of a patent.—Anthony v. Carroll, Case No. 487; Collins v. Peebles, Id. 3,017; Parker v. Hawk, Id. 10,737; Read v. Miller, Id. 11,610; Sayles v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., Id. 12,417. CONTRA, see Rich v. Ricketts, Case No. 11,762; Parker v. Hallock, Id. 10,735.

In the case of an extension of a patent, the statute of limitations applies to the entire period made by the original and extension as one integral term. Rev. St. § 4927.—Sayles v. Richmond, F. & P. R. Co., Case No. 12,424.

An action for infringement of a patent before June 22, 1874, comes within the limitation of Act July 8, 1870, § 55, under Rev. St. § 5599, and is not within the operation of the state statute of limitations.—Sayles v. Oregon Cent. Ry. Co., Case No. 12,423; Same v. Richmond, F. & P. R. Co., Id. 12,424.

See, also, post, § 219.

§ 193. Parties and process.

A person having only an exclusive right to manufacture a certain class of articles under a patent cannot sue in his own name for an infringement of such right.—Suydam v. Day, Case No. 13,654.

The assignee of an exclusive right to use, but not to make, the thing patented within a specified territory, may sue an infringer in his own name.—Chambers v. Smith, Case No. 2,582.

The assignees of several undivided parts of a patent may all join with the holders of the title in an action for the recovery of damages.—Stein v. Goddard, Case No. 13,353.

A suit at law for the infringement of a patent for turning irregular forms, by the turning of shoe lasts, is properly brought in the name of the patentee, rather than one who has an assignment of the right to use the patent for that purpose.—Blanchard v. Eldridge, Case No. 1,510.

The assignee of a patent right, in part, can, in law, sustain a suit for a violation of the patent, without uniting the patentee.—Brooks v. Bicknell, Case No. 1,944. CONTRA, see Valentine v. Marshal, Case No. 16,812a.

Where the contract is for the purchase of a portion of a patent right, the legal right remains in the patentee; and in such case the licensee need not be joined in the action.—Sanford v. Messer, Case No. 12,314; Goodyear v. McBurney, Id. 5,574.

Mere licensees have no interest capable of affording the foundation of a suit in their names.—Grover & Baker Sewing Mach. Co. v. Sloat, Case No. 5,846.

A trustee of the legal title may sue for infringement in his own name.—Knight v. Gavit, Case No. 7,884.

A junior patentee cannot, by making the elder patentee a defendant, compel him to assert his right as against him.—Celluloid Mfg. Co. v. Goodyear Dental Vulcanite Co., Case No. 2,543.

A patentee may sue any one of several alleged infringers, and omit the others, in his discretion.—Celluloid Mfg. Co. v. Goodyear Dental Vulcanite Co., Case No. 2,543.

See, also, post, § 220.

§ 194. Pleading—Declaration.

See, also, post, §§ 221–226.

Plaintiff must allege all the facts to show title.—Gray v. James, Case No. 5,719.

The declaration need not state that the proceedings preliminary to the issuing of the patent were observed.—Cutting v. Myers, Case No. 3,520; Wilder v. McCormick, Id. 17,650.

The description of the machine as stated in the specification need not be set out where the declaration describes plaintiff's improvement in the words of the patent.—Gray v. James, Case No. 5,719.

A declaration which avers the patent and specification to be "in language of the import and to the effect following," and then sets them forth in hæc verba, is sufficient, and is not open to the objection that the patent is not set forth according to its legal tenor and effect.—Wilder v. McCormick, Case No. 17,650.

A declaration which fails to set forth the attestation of the president, and that the patent was delivered, is bad on general demurrer.—Cutting v. Myers, Case No. 3,520.

It is no cause of demurrer that neither the patent nor the declaration states in what the improvement consists.—Cutting v. Myers, Case No. 3,520.

In the case of a renewed patent, plaintiff cannot recover for a violation under the old patent without a distinct and independent count.—Eastman v. Bodfish, Case No. 4,255.

An averment that the patent was renewed on the application of the administrator of the patentee, and that he assigned his right to the plaintiff, and that the assignment is duly recorded, is a sufficient averment of title as against a general demurrer. — Van Hook v. Wood, Case No. 16,854.

The omission to allege, in a declaration by an assignee, the due recording of the assignment, held cured by the verdict.—Dobson v. Campbell, Case No. 3,945.

An averment in the declaration that a patent under the seal of the United States in due form of law was issued is a sufficient declaration to show the validity of the patent.—Van Hook v. Wood, Case No. 16,854.

Sufficiency of averment of extension of patent as against a general demurrer.—Van Hook v. Wood, Case No. 16,854.

An averment that disclaimers were duly and legally executed in writing, and accepted by the commissioner, is sufficient to enable plaintiff to give evidence of their execution, as required by statute.—Van Hook v. Wood, Case No. 16,854.

The failure of the declaration to lay the act complained of to be "against the form of the statute" is no ground of nonsuit.—Tryon v. White, Case No. 14,208.

It is not necessary in the declaration to aver at what specific time the invention patented was made. It need only be before the application for the patent.—Wilder v. McCormick, Case No. 17,650.

A declaration in a suit for infringement is not demurrable because ambiguous in setting out a claim which may be construed to include one or both of two inventions, if there is nothing in the pleadings to show that the patentee is not entitled to claim both.—Noe v. Prentice, Case No. 10,284a.

A declaration averring that defendant "put on sale and offered for sale, and sold or contracted to sell," the patented articles, is bad on demurrer.—Noe v. Prentice, Case No. 10,284a.

One who holds the original right patented, and also an improvement, must assert his entire right in an action for infringement.—Case v. Redfield, Case No. 2,494.

In an infringement suit, it is sufficient for plaintiff to aver that title is vested in him, without tracing it by the assignments.—Meerse v. Allen, Case No. 9,393a.

An averment that defendant has made the thing "in imitation of the patent" is a sufficient allegation of infringement.—Parker v. Haworth, Case No. 10,738.

A suit in equity for infringement of a patent was stayed until plaintiffs could establish their rights by action at law. In the action at law, the complaint referred to the equity suit and the stay order. Held, that this reference was not irrelevant or redundant matter.—Knox v. Great Western Quick-Silver Min. Co., Case No. 7,906.

A declaration for the infringement of a patent, commencing in case, and concluding by demanding actual damages in gross in compensation of the wrong, is good.—Wilder v. McCormick, Case No. 17,650.

A declaration must tender an issue on the novelty and utility of the discovery patented.—Wilder v. McCormick, Case No. 17,650.

To show violation of patent, declaration need only aver that defendant has constructed, used, and sold to others the things patented.—Case v. Redfield, Case No. 2,494.

The declaration is sufficient if the breach assigned is as broad as the right set forth.—Cutting v. Myers, Case No. 3,520.

§ 195. —— Plea, answer, and replication.

The issue of fraud can only be raised by distinct and special allegations in the plea or answer.—Blake v. Stafford, Case No. 1,504.

As to sufficiency of such allegations in general.—Blake v. Stafford, Case No. 1,504.

A plea by a single defendant, alleging that the sales of the infringing articles were made by himself and another, held bad in not alleging that such other person was living, and within the jurisdiction of the court.—Goodyear v. Toby, Case No. 5,585.

Special pleas with the general issue, setting up a license from the patentee paramount to plaintiff's right, are proper in an action at law.—Day v. New England Car Co., Case No. 3,687.

A plea merely that the thing claimed to have been invented was in use and for sale before the application for the patent is demurrable.—Root v. Ball, Case No. 12,035.

In an action for infringement, the objection that another is interested with plaintiff must be taken by plea in abatement.—Carlock v. Tappan, Case No. 2,412.

A plea setting forth that the alleged selling, if any such was made by defendant, was made solely as agent, etc., of a person not named, held bad.—Morse v. Davis, Case No. 9,855.

The answer at law, and the answer and notice on which, in chancery, an issue is asked to be formed and tried at law, must set out the names of the persons who used the patented article, and the places where so used.—Orr v. Merrill, Case No. 10,591.

The defense of unreasonable delay to file a disclaimer cannot be made unless set up in the answer.—Burdell v. Denig, Case No. 2,142.

The option to file the general issue and give notice does not take away the right to plead specially.—Phillips v. Combstock, Case No. 11,099.

The charge of infringement is admitted where no answer is made thereto.—Parker v. Bamker, Case No. 10,725.

Replication in an action so brought, where defendant sets up a release from the patentee.—Goodyear v. McBurney, Case No. 5,574.

Defendant cannot plead the general issue with notice of special matter of defense, and also, in a special plea, set up the same matter in bar.—Read v. Miller, Case No. 11,610.

§ 196. —— Notice of special matter.

A notice of special matter may be filed or served in term time, but must be filed 30 days before trial.—Brunswick v. Holzalb, Case No. 2,057.

The 30 days' notice of special matter of defense need not specify the particular portion of the patent to which it is designed to apply.—Westlake v. Cartter, Case No. 17,451.

The 30 days' notice of special matter of defense must be given 30 days prior to the beginning of the term of trial.—Westlake v. Cartter, Case No. 17,451; Phillips v. Combstock, Id. 11,099.

The notice of special matter (Act 1836, § 15) must give the name of the person who had knowledge of the prior use and the place of such use. It is not sufficient to name the party using the thing.—Judson v. Cope, Case No. 7,565.

Notice that a prior machine was used at "Cincinnati," "Covington," "Pittsburg," "Wayne County, Ind.," is not sufficiently specific to authorize introduction of proofs.—Latta v. Shawk, Case No. 8,116.

The defense of want of novelty is not available at law without a notice, and in equity it must be set up in the pleadings.—Pitts v. Edmonds, Case No. 11,191.

Where prior use relied on in defense is by the inventor or under his license, notice is not necessary as to the persons or places.—American Hide & Leather Splitting & Dressing Mach. Co. v. American Tool & Mach. Co., Case No. 302.

Patents may be given in evidence to show the state of the art without notice, but printed publications cannot.—Westlake v. Cartter, Case No. 17,451.

A special plea setting forth matters of which notice might have been given under Act July 4, 1836, § 15, will be stricken out on motion.—Wilder v. Gayler, Case No. 17,649.

Defendant may give evidence of the use of a machine by other persons and in other places than those mentioned in the notice of special matter, where the general issue is pleaded.—Evans v. Eaton, Case No. 4,559; Same v. Kremer, Id. 4,565.

Under the general issue without notice, defendant cannot set up that the specification does not show the whole truth relative to the discovery, or that it contains more than is necessary for the purpose of deceiving the public.—Kneass v. Schuylkill Bank, Case No. 7,875.

Defendant, on the general issue, without notice, may introduce the act of congress, and may set up that the invention is not patentable, that the specification is ambiguous, that the patent is broader than the invention, and a license to use the machine.—Kneass v. Schuylkill Bank, Case No. 7,875.

A reference to a dictionary, without specifying the place, held not sufficient notice of special matter.—Foote v. Silsby, Case No. 4,916.

Nor is the book admissible under a notice stating that the patentee's invention was previously known to the author.—Foote v. Silsby, Case No. 4,916.

In such case, it is not competent to prove by experts that they could easily find in such dictionary the parts relating to the subject-matter, without specific reference.—Foote v. Silsby, Case No. 4,916.

Under a notice that the thing patented was known and used by A., B., C., and others prior to plaintiff's discovery, defendant must prove its use by others than those named.—Treadwell v. Bladen, Case No. 14,154.

Under notice confined to a prior use in the United States, evidence of a prior use in England is not admissible.—Dixon v. Moyer, Case No. 3,931.

Evidence of want of novelty, of which no notice was given in the answer, is inadmissible except to show the state of the art.—La Baw v. Hawkins, Case No. 7,960.

Prior knowledge of a person, of which notice is given, cannot be proved by another person, not mentioned in such notice.—Many v. Jagger, Case No. 9,055.

§ 197. —— Profert and oyer.

Oyer of a patent referred to in the declaration is not demandable as of right.—Singer v. Wilson, Case No. 12,901.

An averment that the patent and specification are "ready in court to be produced" is equivalent to a profert in its most formal terms.—Wilder v. McCormick, Case No. 17,650.

The profert of letters patent makes them a part of the declaration, and it is no ground of arrest of judgment that the patent is not described in the declaration.—Pitts v. Whitman, Case No. 11,196.

§ 198. Issues, proof, and variance.

Where the general issue is pleaded, there is no limitation of the period in which defendant may show that the patentee is not the original inventor.—Evans v. Eaton, Case No. 4,559.

Upon the plea of not guilty, plaintiff must prove that the article made, used, or sold by defendant substantially resembled his invention.—Dixon v. Moyer, Case No. 3,931.

The defense that the subject of the invention is not of a patentable character is admissible under the general issue.—Guidet v. Barber, Case No. 5,857.

Plaintiff is restricted to proof of a violation during the time specified in his declaration.—Eastman v. Bodfish, Case No. 4,255.

Where the declaration professes to set forth the specification in a patent as part of the grant, the slightest variance is fatal.—Tryon v. White, Case No. 14,208.

Testimony of what might have been done with prior machines is inadmissible upon the issue of novelty.—Judson v. Cope, Case No. 7,565.

Proof of two-thirds ownership in a patent will not sustain an action for infringement where plaintiff claimed sole ownership.—Knight v. Gavit, Case No. 7,884.

See, also, post, § 227.

§ 199. Evidence—In general.

See, also, ante, §§ 23, 30, 34, 41–43, 53, 57, 59, 109; post, §§ 228–231.

The burden of proof of infringement is upon plaintiff.—Parker v. Stiles, Case No. 10,749.

In an action at law by an assignee for infringement of a patent, in which defendant claimed by assignment from a trustee of the patentee, held, that plaintiff might show that the instrument creating the trust was procured by fraud from the patentee, and that the burden was on defendant to show that he was an innocent purchaser.—Day v. New England Car-Spring Co., Case No. 3,688.

The patent and certified copies of the record and drawings deposited, with the references thereon, are prima facie evidence of the particulars of the invention patented.—Winans v. New York & E. R. Co., Case No. 17,863; Same v. Schenectady & T. R. Co., Id. 17,865.

The file wrapper and contents of the application for the patent are not admissible evidence for the purpose of limiting the construction of the patent.—Westlake v. Cartter, Case No. 17,451.

The validity of plaintiff's patent is admitted by defendant's patent referring to the former, and disclaiming those parts of the invention found therein.—Waterbury Brass Co. v. New York & B. Brass Co., Case No. 17,256.

Copies of assignments of a patent, duly certified, are prima facie evidence of the genuineness of the originals on file.—Parker v. Haworth, Case No. 10,738.

A disclaimer must be properly proved, before it can be admitted in evidence, either as an original paper or by a certified copy.—Foote v. Silsby, Case No. 4,916.

The indorsement on a patent of a disclaimer held inadmissible for defendant, without proof that it was made by the patentee.—Foote v. Silsby, Case No. 4,916.

Minutes of a hose company, of which patentees of a hose were members, and at whose instigation and expense the hose was asserted to have been invented, are admissible for defendant to prove that plaintiffs were not the inventors.—Pennock v. Dialogue, Case No. 10,941.

But entries made at other times, acknowledging plaintiffs to be the inventors, are inadmissible against defendant.—Pennock v. Dialogue, Case No. 10,941.

The letters of the applicant on file, certified under the seal of the office, are admissible.—Pettibone v. Derringer, Case No. 11,043.

The prior oath of an inventor as to originality may be opposed to the oath of a witness as to want of originality.—Alden v. Dewey, Case No. 153.

§ 200. —— Opinions of experts.

The opinions of experts are admissible to determine questions of mechanical difference.—Morris v. Barrett, Case No. 9,827.

The testimony of experts is admissible only to show the operation of devices, not the object of a patent, or whether it has been infringed.—Waterbury Brass Co. v. New York & B. Brass Co., Case No. 17,256.

The jury are not bound by the opinions of mechanical experts upon a question of identity of improvement or construction.—Spaulding v. Tucker, Case No. 13,220.

One to be competent as an expert must understand the science involved.—Allen v. Hunter, Case No. 225; Same v. Blunt, Id. 216.

§ 201. Damages—In general.

See, also, ante, § 162; post, § 253.

Damages are given for the use of the infringing article only subsequent to the issuance of the patent.—Brodie v. Ophir Silver Min. Co., Case No. 1,919.

The damages should have reference to the scope of the invention, and the extent to which it enters into the infringing machine.—Hayden v. Suffolk Mfg. Co., Case No. 6,261.

The jury must find that the invention is useful and of some value before they can award damages for infringement.—Knight v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., Case No. 7,882.

In order to find actual damages, the jury must find, in the evidence, the facts or data from which such actual damages are to be deduced. —Goodyear v. Bishop, Case No. 5,559.

§ 202. —— Actual damages.

Plaintiffs are entitled to actual damages.—Buck v. Hermance, Case No. 2,082; Grant & Townsend v. ———, Case No. 5,701; McCormick v. Seymour, Id. 8,727; Ransom v. New York, Id. 11,573; Smith v. Higgins, Id. 13,057; Wilbur v. Beecher, Id. 17,634.

Actual damages sustained, directly resulting from the infringement, can be recovered.—Carter v. Baker, Case No. 2,472.

The damages must be confined to the direct and immediate consequences of the infringement, and should not embrace those which are remote and conjectural.—Smith v. Prior, Case No. 13,095.

§ 203. —— Nominal damages.

If there be a mere making and no user proved, nominal damages are to be given to the plaintiff. —Whittemore v. Cutter, Cases Nos. 17,600, 17,601.

Only nominal damages should be given where the manufacturer employed by another acted without knowledge of the patent.—Bryce v. Dorr, Case No. 2,070.

Where plaintiff does not prove actual damages, nominal damages only are recoverable.—Poppenhusen v. New York Gutta Percha Comb Co., Case No. 11,283; Smith v. Higgins, Id. 13,058; Spaulding v. Tucker, Id. 13,220.

§ 204. —— Measure of damages in general.

There is no distinction in the rule of damages between infringement of an entire machine and infringement of an improvement thereon, and in the latter case damages are not limited in proportion to the value of the improvement.—Burdell v. Denig, Case No. 2,142; Gould's Mfg. Co. v. Cowing, Id. 5,642, 5,643; Graham v. Mason, Id. 5,672; McCormick v. Seymour, Id. 8,726.

If a user of the patented machine be proved, the measure of damages is the value of the use during the time of the user. Neither the price nor the expense of making the machine is a proper measure of damages.—Whittemore v. Cutter, Case No. 17,601.

The rule of damages at law is not defendant's profits, but plaintiff's loss.—McComb v. Brodie, Case No. 8,708; Cowing v. Rumsey, Id. 3,296. CONTRA, see Coleman v. Liesor, Case No. 2,984; Conover v. Rapp, Id. 3,124; Pitts v. Hall, Id. 11,192, 11,193; McCormick v. Seymour, Id. 8,726; Rice v. Heald, Id. 11,752.

Plaintiff is entitled either to the damages sustained by him or the profits made by defendant during the time he used the patented device.—Page v. Ferry, Case No. 10,662.

Damages not estimated solely by the profits which defendant actually realized, for he may have conducted his business unskillfully.—Campbell v. Barclay, Case No. 2,353.

The true question is, what advantage might defendant, by skill, have obtained by using the patented device, instead of the old device.—Campbell v. Barclay, Case No. 2,353; Serrell v. Collins, Id. 12,672.

Method of measuring damages where there is no fixed and uniform license fee.—Goodyear v. Bishop, Case No. 5,559.

Where plaintiff exercises his monopoly by selling licenses, the amount of damages will be controlled by such license fees.—Emerson v. Simm, Case No. 4,443; Goodyear v. Bishop, Id. 5,559; Goodyear Dental Vulcanite Co. v. Van Antwerp, Id. 5,600; Livingston v. Jones, Id. 8,414; McCormick v. Seymour, Id. 8,727; Sickels v. Borden, Id. 12,832.

In a case of infringing articles made and sold, an established royalty is the proper measure of damages.—Star Salt Caster Co. v. Crossman, Case No. 13,320.

A license fee, where there is only a single license, will not fix the measure of compensation.—Judson v. Bradford, Case No. 7,564.

Where the amount of the license fees varies greatly, it cannot be considered in estimating damages.—Black v. Munson, Case No. 1,463.

The fact that defendant acted in good faith, and might have used an unpatented machine with equal advantage, cannot control complainant's damages as fixed by license fees.—Emerson v. Simm, Case No. 4,443.

If the patentee has accepted small patent fees in order to introduce his invention to public notice, this fact should be taken into consideration in fixing a patent fee as a measure of damages.—Sickels v. Borden, Case No. 12,832.

The price for which territorial rights were sold is no criterion by which to determine the damages.—Campbell v. Barclay, Case No. 2,353.

§ 205. —— Estimating damages and elements of compensation.

In arriving at profits as the basis of damages, the jury must take into account the interest on capital, the risk of bad debts, and expenses of selling.—Wilbur v. Beecher, Case No. 17,634; McCormick v. Seymour, Id. 8,726.

In computing damages for infringement of a patent for washboards, the increased facilities in making them, due to inventions since the patent, are to be excluded.—Wayne v. Holmes, Case No. 17,303.

The actual damages sustained include all necessary and proper expenses in protecting the violated rights.—Washburn v. Gould, Case No. 17,214.

Expenses of commencing and closing out the business are not properly chargeable to the patent.—Goodyear v. Bishop, Case No. 5,559.

The amount which plaintiff might have obtained from advertisers in his patented advertising hotel register, as well as the profits he might have made upon selling the book, must be considered in estimating damages.—Hawes v. Gage, Case No. 6,237; Same v. Washburne, Id. 6,242.

Where no rights are sold by the patentee, the measure of damages is the profits he could have made, excluding the mere profits of mechanical construction.—McCormick v. Seymour, Case No. 8,727.

Where no licenses are granted, and the patent is for a mere improvement, the damages are what the patentee would have made by the sale of his improvement, excluding the profits of manufacture and the value of the use of the old machine.—McCormick v. Seymour, Case No. 8,727.

The price of the machine, the nature, actual state, and extent of the use of plaintiff's invention, and the particular losses to which he may have been subjected by the piracy, are all proper to be considered by the jury in estimating damages.—Earle v. Sawyer, Case No. 4,247.

Interest by way of damages may be given by the jury.—Tatham v. Le Roy, Case No. 13,760.

Interest should be allowed on the actual damages from the commencement of suit.—McCormick v. Seymour, Case No. 8,726; Pitts v. Hall, Id. 11,192.

Interest on the amount of the license fee will be given from the time of infringement.—McCormick v. Seymour, Case No. 8,727.

Necessary expenditures for counsel fees and other charges, though not taxable costs, cannot be allowed as part of plaintiff's damages.—Blanchard's Gun-Stock Turning Factory v. Warner, Case No. 1,521; Stimpson v. Railroads, The, Id. 13,456; Whittemore v. Cutter, Id. 17,600. CONTRA, see Allen v. Blunt, Case No. 217; Knight v. Gavit, Id. 7,884; Pierson v. Eagle Screw Co., Id. 11,156; Boston Mfg. Co. v. Fiske, Id. 1,681.

Damages may be given because of publications by defendant while violating the patent, disparaging plaintiff's improvement.—McCormick v. Seymour, Case No. 8,726.

§ 206. —— Increase of actual damages.

The court may allow treble what is found by the jury as damages.—Allen v. Blunt, Case No. 217.

The jury must find the actual damages sustained by the plaintiff, which the court will treble.—Gray v. James, Case No. 5,718; Whittemore v. Cutter, Id. 17,601.

The power to increase actual damages should be exercised only to remunerate parties in cases of wanton and persistent infringement.—Brodie v. Ophir Silver Min. Co., Case No. 1,919; Guyon v. Serrell, Id. 5,881.

The damages cannot be increased by the fact that defendants used on their infringing preparation labels counterfeiting those of the patentee.—Stephens v. Felt, Case No. 13,368a.

The difficulty of furnishing proof of damages, either by showing profits made by defendants or the value of infringing articles sold, does not authorize any presumption whereby the recovery may be enhanced beyond the damages actually shown by the testimony.—Rollhaus v. McPherson, Case No. 12,026.

The damages will be trebled where the sum awarded by the verdict is inadequate to recompense an inventor for a long and expensive litigation, but not in the case of a mere assignee of the patent who has purchased on speculation.—Schwarzel v. Holenshade, Case No. 12,506.

Damages in the sum of $5,000, awarded by a verdict, increased by the court to $7,500, where the conduct of defendant was peculiarly aggravated.—Peek v. Frame, Case No. 10,903.

The provision as to trebling the verdict does not apply to mere collection suits brought upon expired patents.—Bell v. McCullough, Case No. 1,256.

§ 207. —— Exemplary damages.

In an action for a violation of a patent right, the plaintiff can recover for actual damages only, and not for a vindictive recompense.—Whittemore v. Cutter, Case No. 17,601; Hall v. Wiles, Id. 5,954; Pitts v. Hall, Id. 11,192.

Where defendant did not know of plaintiff's right at the time of the infringement, compensatory damages only will be given.—Parker v. Corbin, Case No. 10,731.

Exemplary damages will not be awarded where defendant purchased the infringing machine in the open market, not knowing it was patented, and abandoned all the patented appliances on notice.—Emerson v. Simm, Case No. 4,443.

Where the infringement is characterized by a disposition to affect the interest of the patentee, counsel fees and vindictive damages may be assessed—Parker v. Corbin, Case No. 10,731.

§ 208. Trial.

It is the province of the court to determine what constitutes novelty and utility, and of the jury to determine from the evidence adduced whether the invention is new and useful.—Parker v. Stiles, Case No. 10,749.

It is a question for the jury whether the production of the article involved inventive genius.—Haselden v. Ogden, Case No. 6,190; Poppenhusen v. Falke, Id. 11,280.

It is the province of the court to construe the patent and specification to ascertain the intent, and of the jury to decide whether the description is sufficient.—Batten v Clayton, Case No. 1,105; Carver v. Braintree Mfg. Co., Id. 2,485; Clark Patent Steam & Fire Regulator Co. v. Copeland, Id. 2,866; Conover v. Roach, Id. 3,125; Davis v. Palmer, Id. 3,645; Davoll v. Brown, Id. 3,662; Emerson v. Hogg, Id. 4,440; Page v. Ferry, Id. 10,662; Parker v. Hulme, Id. 10,740; Reutgen v. Kanowrs, Id. 11,710; Teese v. Phelps, Id. 13,819.

When the effect and operation of mechanical contrivances enter into the question of the extent of a patented combination, it is a mixed question of law and fact, and, therefore, a proper one for the jury.—Foote v. Silsby, Case No. 4,916.

The construction of the claims of a patent is for the court, except in the case of technical terms which need explanation by evidence.—Ransom v. New York, Case No. 11,573.

The question of identity is for the jury, under instructions as to what, in law, constitutes substantial identity.—Smith v. Higgins, Case No. 13,058.

Upon the issue of infringement, the jury is limited to the question as to whether the two things involve substantially the same mechanical principles.—Judson v. Cope, Case No. 7,565.

The meaning of technical words of art in commerce and manufactures, used in a patent, as well as the surrounding circumstances, which may materially affect their meaning, are to be interpreted by the jury.—Washburn v. Gould, Case No. 17,214; Brooks v. Jenkins, Id. 1,953.

Whether a patent is old, or whether the original and renewed patent are not for the same invention, are for the jury.—Carver v. Braintree Mfg. Co., Case No. 2,485.

Quære, whether the usefulness of an invention is a question of fact or of law.—Langdon v. De Groot, Case No. 8,059.

The question whether the claim of a reissue is vague and uncertain or too broad is one of law, to be determined by the state of the art.—Blake v. Stafford, Case No. 1,504.

The question of abandonment, whether in regard to the time prior to two years before the application for the patent or to the time included in such two years, is a question of fact.—Russell & Erwin Mfg. Co. v. Mallory, Case No. 12,166.

The question whether plaintiff was the first inventor of the thing for which he obtained a patent is one for the jury.—Reutgen v. Kanowrs, Case No. 11,710.

Whether an invention is patentable is a mixed question of law and fact, and will not, in ordinary cases, be disposed of on demurrer.—Teese v. Phelps, Case No. 13,818.

The question whether a design patent is abandoned to the use of the public by putting the manufactured article onto the market, two or three months before the application, held to be a question of fact.—Booth v. Garelly, Case No. 1,646.

Continuity of successive applications is a question of fact.—Bevin v. East Hampton Bell Co., Case No. 1,379.

The question as to whether the "continuity" of the application is destroyed by the filing of a new application is, in an action at law, one of fact, for the jury.—Howe v. Newton, Case No. 6,771.

It seems that if, by plaintiff's own showing, the invention is useless and an imposition on the public, the court should direct a verdict.—Langdon v. De Groot, Case No. 8,059.

See, also, post, §§ 260, 262.

§ 209. Verdict and judgment.

Where several prior inventions are offered in evidence to defeat a patent, the jury should agree on each separately, and, in order to find a verdict for the defendants on any one of them, they must agree on that one.—Waterman v. Thomson, Case No. 17,260.

In an action against two defendants, plaintiff may recover damages against one, although the other be acquitted.—Reutgen v. Kanowrs, Case No. 11,710.

A verdict making an allowance for attorney's fees and other charges under the court's direction will not be set aside where the misdirection was not assigned as a reason for new trial, and the same result might have been reached by trebling the damages.—Stimpson v. Railroads, The, Case No. 13,456.

A verdict of $2,000, held, should not be set aside because of the absence of specific proof of profits and damages, where there was evidence that defendants' sales were highly profitable, and that they had made and sold large quantities.—Stephens v. Felt, Case No. 13,368.

The verdict of a jury in a patent case is of the same force as a verdict in any other action at law, and a verdict on conflicting evidence will not be set aside.—Blanchard's Gun-Stock Turning Factory v. Jacobs, Case No. 1,520.

Verdicts in suits at law, obtained without contest, without collusion, are entitled to the same weight as verdicts obtained on full trial.—Potter v. Fuller, Case No. 11,327.

A decision that no infringement had been committed held necessarily binding in a subsequent suit on a reissue patent for infringement by use of the same device.—Cammeyer v. Newton, Case No. 2,344.

A decree for damages for the amount of the established license fee gives defendant no right to use the invention for the life of the patent.—Emerson v. Simm, Case No. 4,443; Hayden v. Suffolk Mfg. Co., Id. 6,261.

The recovery of profits and damages from the manufacturers of an infringing machine bars a recovery from a user for its use.—Booth v. Seevers, Case No. 1,648a.

See, also, post, § 264.

§ 210. Review.

A judge of the circuit court, sitting at chambers, has power to allow a writ of error under Act July 4, 1836, § 17.—Foote v. Silsby, Case No. 4,917.

§ 211. Costs.

The provision in the judiciary act of 1789 that plaintiff shall not have costs if he recover less than $500 applies to actions for infringement of patents.—Kneass v. Schuylkill Bank, Case No. 7,876.

See, also, ante, § 120; post, § 265.

(C) SUITS IN EQUITY.

§ 212. Nature and grounds of suit.

Where the use of a patented machine is not unlawful, the patentee will be denied relief in equity.—Blanchard v. Sprague, Case No. 1,516.

Where there are no profits, and the limit of the injury is necessarily the value of the license fee, a bill in equity will not lie for an account, as the patentee has an adequate remedy at law.—Vaughan v. Central Pac. R. Co., Case No. 16,897.

Where a patent is for an improvement in the mode of operating brakes for railroad cars, an action of law furnishes a full, complete, and adequate remedy, and a suit for an account cannot be maintained.—Vaughan v. Central Pac. R. Co., Case No. 16,897.

The general rule that a bill in equity will not be maintained where a party has a remedy by an action at law is not applicable to patent cases where the bill prays for a discovery and account of profits.—Vaughan v. East Tennessee V. & G. R. Co., Case No. 16,898; Goodyear v. Hullihen, Id. 5,573.

A bill to recover profits, if it be not a bill for discovery, cannot be entertained as a bill for an account, in order to confer equitable jurisdiction.—Sayles v. Richmond, F. & P. R. Co., Case No. 12,424.

A bill in equity may be maintained by a patentee against an infringer for a discovery and an accounting of profits, irrespective of any right to or demand for an injunction, and although the patent has expired.—Blank v. Manufacturing Co., Case No. 1,532; Bloomer v. Gilpin, Id. 1,558; Gordon v. Anthony, Id. 5,605; Howes v. Nute, Id. 6,790; Imlay v. Norwich & W. R. Co., Id. 7,012; Jordan v. Dobson, Id. 7,519; Nevins v. Johnson, Id. 10,136; Sayles v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., Id. 12,417; Sickles v. Gloucester Mfg. Co., Id. 12,841; Stevens v. Kansas Pac. Ry. Co., Id. 13,401; Vaughan v. East Tennessee V. & G. R. Co., Id. 16,898. CONTRA, see Jenkins v. Greenwald, Case No. 7,270; Draper v. Hudson, Id. 4,069.

After the expiration of a patent, a federal court will not entertain jurisdiction of a suit for infringement under its general equity jurisdiction, where the bill is not for an account or a discovery.—Sayles v. Richmond, F. & P. R. Co., Case No. 12,424.

Where, owing to many transfers, it is doubtful whether action at law for infringement can be maintained, equity will afford relief.—Bicknell v. Todd, Case No. 1,389.

Where the patentee sues in equity for an infringement, he need not first establish his legal right in a court at law and by a verdict of a jury.—Sanders v. Logan, Case No. 12,295.

Equity will entertain jurisdiction of a suit for infringement of a patent to prevent a multiplicity of suits.—Motte v. Bennett, Case No. 9,884.

Equity has jurisdiction in case of infringement on the ground of want of adequate remedy at law.—McMillin v. Barclay, Case No. 8,902.

Where there is no question of fiduciary property in a patent, the infringer cannot be treated as a trustee de son tort, and the court cannot upon that ground entertain equitable jurisdiction.—Sayles v. Richmond, F. & P. R. Co., Case No. 12,424.

Jurisdiction being acquired, on the ground of infringement, the court may settle other matters between the parties in the case, which do not afford original ground of jurisdiction.—Brooks v. Stolley, Case No. 1,962.

A complainant having two suits against the same defendant for infringement of the same letters patent will not be compelled to elect which he will prosecute.—Turrell v. Spaeth, Case No. 14,268.

An allegation, in relation to an action at law, should not be set up as any portion of the foundation of a proceeding in equity, unless there was a bona fide trial and complete judgment.—Doughty v. West, Case No. 4,029.

See, also, ante, § 188.

§ 213. Statutory provisions.
The repeal by Act July 8, 1870, § 111, of Act July 4, 1836, did not have the effect to prevent the maintaining of suits on patents previously granted for causes of action subsequently accruing.—Union Paper-Bag Mach. Co. v. Newell, Case No. 14,390.

§ 214. Defenses.
The discontinuance of proceedings for infringement of a patent does not estop complainant from bringing a second suit.—Thompson v. Jewett, Case No. 13,961.

Where the claims are definitely distinguished, the fact that some of them are void for want of novelty will not prevent a suit for infringement upon the valid claims.—Rumford Chemical Works v. Lauer, Case No. 12,135.

Defendants who have used the invention are estopped to deny its utility.—Coleman v. Liesor, Case No. 2,984.

The express recognition by agreement of the validity of a patent, in consideration of a license, will estop the licensee, in a subsequent suit for infringement, to set up its invalidity.—Magic Ruffle Co. v. Elm City Co., Case No. 8,949.

An admission that a third person had a right to grant a license will estop the owners from prosecuting those who relied thereon.—Gear v. Grosvenor, Case No. 5,291.

A person offering to take a license from the patentee is not thereby estopped to deny that the patentee is the original inventor.—Evans v. Eaton, Case No. 4,559.

A third person cannot take advantage of the fact that the patent was obtained by fraud, but the patent must be respected and enforced until reversed or annulled by some proceedings directly for that purpose.—Crompton v. Belknap Mills, Case No. 18,285.

Proof of fraud in obtaining an extension will not avail respondents, shown to have consented to the acts complained of.—Goodyear v. Providence Rubber Co., Case No. 5,583.

Irregular proceedings in the granting of a reissue are no defense to a wrongdoer unless they were contrary to law, and the patent was granted to the wrong person.—Dental Vulcanite Co. v. Wetherbee, Case No. 3,810.

The defense that an invention is wanting in novelty or originality goes to the validity of the patent.—Coleman v. Liesor, Case No. 2,984.

Where both parties assert rights under different patents with identical claims, defendant cannot set up that the claim in plaintiff's patent does not claim patentable subject-matter.—Russell & Erwin Mfg. Co. v. Mallory, Case No. 12,166.

An infringer cannot defend upon the ground that the extension of the patent was obtained by means of fraud and perjury.—Whitney v. Mowry, Case No. 17,594.

An unreasonable neglect or delay to enter a disclaimer at the patent office, where the disclaimer has been filed, either before or after suit brought, is a good defense to a suit for infringement.—Reed v. Cutter, Case No. 11,645.

A statement of the date of invention, made to the patent office by the patentee after an assignment by him, will not estop the assignees to show that the invention was in fact made at an earlier date.—Union Paper-Bag Mach. Co. v. Crane, Case No. 14,388.

A license to practice the invention is a complete defense to a suit for infringement, though defendant has not fulfilled his contract.—Tilghman v. Hartell, Cases Nos. 14,039, 14,040.

A license under a patent to another is no defense.—Stuart v. Shantz, Case No. 13,556.

Where a license is revoked, and the licensee is sued as an infringer, he is at liberty to avail himself of any defense ordinarily open to any defendant charged with infringement.—Woodworth v. Cook, Case No. 18,011; Wooster v. Singer Mfg. Co., Id. 18,039a.

The fact that defendant has refrained from the use of the thing patented, and has promised not to further infringe, is no ground for a denial of the remedy in equity.—Jenkins v. Greenwald, Case No. 7,270.

It is no justification of the infringement of a reissued patent that the infringer had used the invention with impunity before the patent was amended.—Howe v. Williams, Case No. 6,778.

Where two or more patents are included in one suit, a defense addressed solely to one patent has no application to the others.—Kelleher v. Darling, Case No. 7,653.

It is no defense that the particular form which defendant has infringed is unnecessary to the operation of the apparatus.—Blaisdell v. Puffer, Case No. 1,490.

Defendant cannot avail himself of the defense that he has not marked or labeled the infringing machines as patented.—Herring v. Gage, Case No. 3,422.

Passive conduct with knowledge of an appropriation by defendant, which the inventor is powerless to prevent, does not estop him from subsequently asserting his right on obtaining a patent.—McMillin v. Barclay, Case No. 8,902.

Defendants will be concluded by the statement of their process in their printed labels prepared before the suit was brought.—Jones v. Merrill, Case No. 7,481.

A consent by defendant to a judgment on making a settlement by taking a license under the patent held an admission of the validity of the patent.—Goodyear v. Day, Case No. 5,566.

Use of the invention by the infringer before the renewal is no justification of an infringement thereafter.—Goodyear v. Day, Case No. 5,566.

See, also, ante, § 189.

§ 215. Persons entitled to sue.
An assignee of an exclusive territorial right to make, use, and sell the patented article may maintain a suit in equity.—Ogle v. Ege, Case No. 10,462; Bicknell v. Todd, Id. 1,389; Perry v. Corning, Id. 11,004.

An exclusive licensee may maintain a suit for infringement even against the patentee.—Star Salt Caster Co. v. Crossman, Case No. 13,321.

The licensee of a territorial exclusive right to use, rent, and vend a patented article cannot maintain a suit against persons using the article in violation of the license.—Hill v. Whitcomb, Case No. 6,502.

The owner of a patent right may sue on the patent in a federal court in Pennsylvania, though he derived his right from a foreign administrator, who has never taken out letters in Pennsylvania.—Smith v. Mercer, Case No. 13,-078.

The equitable title of an assignee to a subsequent extended term granted to the patentee is sufficient to enable him to maintain a suit for infringement.—Ruggles v. Eddy, Case No. 12,117.

See, also, ante, § 190.

§ 216. Persons liable.

One who purchases patented articles from a licensee, with knowledge of his having repudiated his contract with the patentee, is liable on a sale of such articles.—Moody v. Taber, Case No. 9,747.

The sale of infringing machines by defendants as agents of the maker will be enjoined.—Potter v. Fuller, Case No. 11,327.

A mere licensor under letters patent, who did not derive any profit from an infringing machine constructed thereunder by his licensee, is not liable.—Hussey v. Bradley, Case No. 6,946.

A person who used a driven well for household or other purposes on his property held liable to an injunction and accounting. Otherwise as to one who boarded with his mother, and contributed to the expenses of the family.—Green v. Gardner, Case No. 5,758a.

The managing directors of a manufacturing corporation, under whose direction it manufactures and sells infringing articles, and its selling agents, are responsible for such infringement, and will be restrained by injunction.—Goodyear v. Phelps, Case No. 5,581.

A clerk of defendant who purchases his rights pending the motion for an injunction does not stand before the court as an independent infringer.—Parkhurst v. Kinsman, Case No. 10,-760.

After a decision by the commissioner of patents in an interference case the defeated applicant entered into partnership with the patentee for the manufacture of the patented article, and advertised it as secured by patent. Held, on dissolution of the partnership, where the defeated applicant continued to manufacture the patented article, preliminary injunction should be granted.—Pentlarge v. Beeston, Case No. 10,963.

See, also, ante, § 191.

§ 217. Joinder of causes of action.

Where an infringing machine contains all the improvements embraced in four patents for improvements in such machine, the bill for infringement may be founded upon all the patents.—Nourse v. Allen, Case No. 10,367.

A bill for the infringement of two patents owned by plaintiff by one article manufactured by defendant is not bad for multifariousness.—Gillespie v. Cummings, Case No. 5,434.

Where there is privity or connection between the different defendants, they are jointly liable on a bill for infringing a patent.—Wells v. Jacques, Case No. 17,398.

The fact that the assignment of one of the patents embraces other territory than that in question does not make the bill bad.—Gillespie v. Cummings, Case No. 5,434.

Bill for infringement of 33 claims, in 4 several patents, held demurrable for multifariousness.—Hayes v. Bickelhoupt, Case No. 6,261b.

§ 218. Jurisdiction.

The circuit court, sitting as a court of equity, has a full concurrent jurisdiction with the court sitting as a court of law of all actions for the infringement of a patent.—Perry v. Corning, Case No. 11,004.

Upon the death of the patentee the personal representative at his domicile may sue for infringement in any federal court having jurisdiction, without taking out letters in the state in which the suit is brought.—Hodge v. North Missouri R. R., Case No. 6,561.

The suit may be brought in any district in which defendant is found, regardless of the place where the infringement was committed.—Thompson v. Mendelsohn, Case No. 13,968.

See, also, post, § 245.

§ 219. Limitations and laches.

Prior to Act July 8, 1870, there was no statute limiting the time within which a suit in equity must be prosecuted for the infringement of a patent.—Wood v. Cleveland Rolling-Mill Co., Case No. 17,941; Same v. Union Iron-Works Co., Id.

A suit against the most conspicuous and extensive infringer, brought within a reasonable time, and prosecuted with reasonable diligence, is sufficient to prevent the defense of laches as to other infringers.—Colgate v. Gold & Stock Tel. Co., Case No. 2,991.

State statutes of limitation cannot be pleaded in bar of suit for infringement.—Anthony v. Carroll, Case No. 487.

Quære, whether state statutes of limitation are applicable to suits for infringement.—Stevens v. Kansas Pac. Ry. Co., Case No. 13,401.

See, also, ante, § 192; post, § 241.

§ 220. Parties and process.

The party who is immediately injured by the infringement, and who is equitably entitled to the fruits of the recovery, may be joined with the owner of the legal title.—Goodyear v. Allyn, Case No. 5,555; Same v. Central R. Co., Id. 5,563.

All parties having title to a patent are necessary parties to a suit for infringement. If their title is disputed, they should be made defendants.—Edgarton v. Breck, Case No. 4,-279.

In a suit upon a patent granted to the personal representative of the inventor the heir or equitable owner is a necessary party.—Northwestern Fire Extinguisher Co. v. Philadelphia Fire Extinguisher Co., Case No. 10,337.

A grant of a right to construct and use 50 machines within certain localities, reserving to the grantor the right to construct but not use others therein, is of an exclusive right, and suits are to be brought in the name of the assignees.—Washburn v. Gould, Case No. 17,-214.

A mere licensee under a patent cannot sue in equity for the infringement of his rights under the patent, without joining with him, as plaintiff, the owner of the legal title.—Nelson v. McMann, Case No. 10,109; Potter v. Holland, Id. 11,329; Same v. Wilson, Id. 11,342. CONTRA, see Brammer v. Jones, Case No. 1,806.

And he need not be joined in the suit by the owner of the patent.—Potter v. Holland, Case No. 11,329; Same v. Wilson, Id. 11,342; Goodyear v. Day, Id. 5,566; Hussey v. Whitely, Id. 6,950. CONTRA, see Hammond v. Hunt, Case No. 6,003.

The legal owner is a necessary party to a suit for infringement, where his license of the exclusive use to another provided that he was to have half the damages recovered for violations. —North v. Kershaw, Case No. 10,311.

The owner of the legal title is properly joined as plaintiff with one holding an exclusive right to make and vend the patented article for use in foreign countries in a suit to restrain defendant from making the patented article, and selling to persons who buy for export.—Dorsey Revolving Harvester Rake Co. v. Bradley Mfg. Co., Case No. 4,015.

Nonjoinder of parties in a bill for an infringement of a patent constitutes no defense after the cause has been set down for final hearing. —Forbes v. Barstow Stove Co., Case No. 4,923.

In a suit by an assignee to recover damages and profits accruing both before and since the assignment, the assignor need not be made a party.—Henry v. Francestown Soap-Stone Stove Co., Case No. 6,382.

Trustees of a license to use a patent may sue to restrain infringement within their territory without joining the cestuis que trustent.—Bryan v. Stevens, Case No. 2,066a.

The next of kin of a patentee cannot be united as parties plaintiff with the personal representative in a bill to enjoin infringement.—Hodge v. North Missouri R. R., Case No. 6,561.

An officer of a corporation owning an infringing patent who, in its behalf, executes a license to defendant to use, for a fixed rental, the corporation's infringing machines, is a proper party defendant to an injunction suit.—Nichols v. Pearce, Case No. 10,246.

The owner of infringing machines and a lessee from him may be joined as defendants in a suit for infringement.—Wells v. Jacques, Case No. 17,398.

In a suit for infringement of a patent issued to an executor in trust for the devisees of the inventor, both the executor and the devisees should be joined as plaintiffs.—Stimpson v. Rogers, Case No. 13,457.

Suits for infringements held properly brought in the name of a trustee of the patentee, joining the patentee as owner of the equitable interest.—Dibble v. Augur, Case No. 3,879.

A person interested in a patent, though not within the particular district in which the suit to restrain infringement is brought, may be made a party to the bill.—Buck v. Cobb, Case No. 2,079.

In suits founded on a patent issued to a partnership, both partners are necessary parties.—Ambler v. Chouteau, Case No. 272.

It is a fatal defect in the bill that all the owners of the patent have not been made parties; but those only are deemed owners to whom the patent was issued, or to whom interests in it have been transferred by assignment in writing, duly authenticated.—Jordan v. Dobson, Case No. 7,519.

The remedy of parties joined as complainants who have no title to the patent is not a dismissal of the bill, but merely of their names as parties.—Edgarton v. Breck, Case No. 4,279.

An amendment in a suit by a patentee by adding an exclusive licensee as plaintiff not allowed. —Goodyear v. Bourn, Case No. 5,561.

See, also, ante, § 193.

§ 221. Pleading—Original bill.

See, also, ante, §§ 194–197; post, § 244.

A bill founded on the infringement of a patent, containing the usual prayer for an answer on oath and a prayer for an account of profits, but not alleging that a discovery was necessary, and having no special interrogatories annexed, held sufficient to give the court jurisdiction as a bill for a discovery and account, notwithstanding an admission of counsel that a discovery was not necessary.—Perry v. Corning, Case No. 11,003.

Where a bill for infringement prays for a discovery and an account of profits, and alleges that plaintiff has no adequate remedy except in equity, it is not demurrable on the ground that plaintiff has an adequate remedy at law.—Perry v. Corning, Case No. 11,004.

Where the original patent was reissued in divisions, the bill need not aver that each division was for a distinct invention.—Thompson v. Jewett, Case No. 13,961.

A general allegation of profits accrued will not sustain a bill for an account, and where, from the nature of the invention alleged, it is apparent that there cannot possibly be any profits of a character to justify charging defendant as trustee, a demurrer will be sustained.—Vaughan v. Central Pac. R. Co., Case No. 16,897.

Plaintiff must allege in his bill that he, or the one under whom he claims, is the original and first inventor of what is claimed in the patent.—Tucker v. Tucker Mfg. Co., Case No. 14,227; Sullivan v. Redfield, Id. 13,597.

A simple averment that the title to the patent in suit is vested in plaintiff is sufficient. Plaintiff need not set forth a deduction of title.—Nourse v. Allen, Case No. 10,367.

Plaintiff who relies upon a verdict and judgment at law establishing his title must aver it in his bill for an injunction.—Parker v. Brant, Case No. 10,727.

Statement of locality or place of business of the corporation complainant held not necessary. —National Hay-Rake Co. v. Harbert, Case No. 10,044.

Plaintiff, claiming title through a territorial assignment, need not aver in his bill the recording of the instrument in the patent office. The defense that defendant is a bona fide purchaser for value without notice must be made in the answer.—Perry v. Corning, Case No. 11,004.

Sufficiency of averment of the issue of letters patent.—Noe v. Prentice, Case No. 10,284a.

The particulars of the infringement need not be stated in a bill in equity, a general allegation of infringement being sufficient.—Haven v. Brown, Case No. 6,228; Thatcher Heating Co. v. Carbon Stove Co., Id. 13,864; Turrell v. Cammerer, Id. 14,266.

The allegation that respondents are using, etc., is sufficient where it appears that they are acting in concert as stockholders, managers, etc., of a corporation.—Poppenhusen v. Falke, Case No. 11,279.

In a bill in equity, after alleging the infringement of a valid patent, it is surplusage, and not multifariousness, to aver the infringement of a void reissue thereof.—Roemer v. Logowitz, Case No. 11,996.

Where suit is brought for the infringement of several patents for different improvements, not necessarily embodied in the construction and operation of any one machine, the bill must contain an explicit averment that the infringing machines contain all the improvements embraced in the several patents, or it will be bad for multifariousness.—Nellis v. McLanahan, Case No. 10,099.

It is no ground of demurrer to a bill for infringement of two patents by the use of the devices in one apparatus that the bill does not allege that the devices were used conjointly, or connected together.—Horman Patent Mfg. Co. v. Brooklyn City R. Co., Case No. 6,703.

A bill by an inventor, alleging a fraudulent sale of his patent rights, which does not clearly show whether the relief prayed for is that the sale be canceled and the patent restored, or that the sale be confirmed and the buyer forced to account for the profits, is bad on demurrer.—Ambler v. Chouteau, Case No. 272.

The bill need not aver that the patentee had marked the articles made or vended under the patent as required by Act March 2, 1861, § 13.—Goodyear v. Allyn, Case No. 5,555.

On a bill in equity the right to damages follows the decree under the general prayer for relief. Complainant need not pray for damages eo nomine.—Emerson v. Simm, Case No. 4,443.

The bill must be sworn to.—Sullivan v. Redfield, Case No. 13,597.

The bill may be properly verified by the equitable owner of the patent.—Goodyear v. Allyn, Case No. 5,555.

The affidavit annexed to the bill that the patentee was the original and first inventor of the thing patented can be made by the assignee of the patent, as well as by the patentee himself.—Thompson v. Jewett, Case No. 13,961.

§ 222. —— Cross bill.

In a suit for infringement, defendant cannot, by a cross bill which sets up no color of title in himself, demand a discovery from the plaintiff in the original suit as to the source of validity of his title.—Young v. Colt, Case No. 18,155.

§ 223. —— Plea and answer.

Where the defense is that the patentee is not the first inventor, the answer in equity must allege the names and places of residence of those relied on to prove the fact.—Graham v. Mason, Case No. 5,671.

A plea to an answer setting up a license, that defendant has abandoned the license, must state the acts showing the abandonment.—Brooks v. Stolley, Case No. 1,963.

Want of novelty, as a defense, must be specially alleged.—Guidet v. Barber, Case No. 5,857.

The objection that the answer, raising the defense for want of novelty, fails to specify time, place, etc., if not taken when the testimony is introduced, is waived, and defendant will be allowed to amend to conform to his proofs.—Brown v. Hall, Case No. 2,008.

The defense of the insufficiency of the specification to enable the invention to be practiced, to be available, must be set up in the answer.—Jennings v. Pierce, Case No. 7,283; Goodyear v. Providence Rubber Co., Id. 5,583.

The claim that a reissue was obtained under false representations must be distinctly alleged, and as distinctly proved.—Doughty v. West, Case No. 4,029.

The defense that a reissue is invalid, on the ground that the patent does not contain a sufficient specification of the proportions of the ingredients to meet the requirements of the law, cannot be considered unless set up in the answer.—Wonson v. Peterson, Case No. 17,934.

A defense in a suit in equity that the patentee has, since he obtained his patent, abandoned or dedicated it to the public use, must be set up in the answer.—Williams v. Boston & A. R. Co., Case No. 17,716; Wyeth v. Stone, Id. 18,107.

A defense that the invention involved simply substitution of one material for another, not set up in the answer, is not available—Comstock v. Sandusky Seat Co., Case No. 3,082.

The failure to deny the use of a machine as alleged and described in the bill is an admission of such use.—Ely v. Monson & B. Mfg. Co., Case No. 4,431.

Defendants will be estopped by averments in their answer from setting up facts to the contrary by affidavits.—Morse Fountain Pen Co. v. Esterbrook Steel Pen Mfg. Co., Case No. 9,862.

The admission of the originality and value of complainant's patent, in the answer, will conclude defendant, though he subsequently amends his answer and denies both.—Livingston v. Jones, Case No. 8,413.

An answer to a bill for infringement which is indistinct and evasive as to the use of the patented invention will be considered as an admission.—Jordan v. Wallace, Case No. 7,523.

Effect of admission in the answer that defendant had made "large profits" by the use of the alleged infringing machinery.—Troy Iron & Nail Factory v. Corning, Case No. 14,196.

§ 224. —— Replication.

As no special replication to an answer is allowed, the question whether the licensee has abandoned his license can only be brought up by amendment to the bill. Equity Rule 45.—Brooks v. Stolley, Case No. 1,963.

A replication to the answer, merely traversing the license, would not lay a foundation for evidence of abandonment.—Brooks v. Stolley, Case No. 1,963.

§ 225. —— Amended and supplemental pleadings.

Leave to amend an answer by denying the novelty and utility of the invention will not be granted where, in a prior suit on the same patent, defendant acknowledged in writing the novelty and utility of the invention, and a final decree was entered against him by consent.—Pentlarge v. Beeston, Case No. 10,964.

Amendment setting up a new defense not allowed after interlocutory decree, and account proceeded with, where reasonable diligence not shown.—India Rubber Comb Co. v. Phelps, Case No. 7,025.

Amendments to an answer sought to be made a year after plaintiff's proofs were closed by setting up two years' prior public use, and anticipation by a prior patent, not allowed, where the excuse was mistake of counsel as to the law governing the case, and no knowledge as to such prior patent.—Webster Loom Co. v. Higgins, Case No. 17,341.

Where defendants admit the infringement, setting forth the number of articles made and sold, and rest their defense on a claim of ownership of the patent, they will not be granted leave to amend to contest the infringement, after a rehearing has been denied and an accounting had.—Ruggles v. Eddy, Case No. 12,118.

Defendants allowed to strike out an admission in their answer of the making of certain articles as to which an injunction was sought.—Morehead v. Jones, Case No. 9,791.

A surrender and reissue puts an end to a suit pending on the original patent, and plaintiff must proceed by a new bill. He cannot file a supplemental bill.—Fry v. Quinlan, Case No. 5,140.

§ 226. —— Notice of special matter.

No notice is required by Act July 4, 1836, § 15, of the names and places of residence of the witnesses by whom it is intended to prove a prior knowledge and use of the thing patented.—Wilton v. Railroads, Case No. 17,857.

If the notice of special matter sufficiently indicates the sources of defendant's proofs, so that complainant can identify and resort to them, it is sufficient under the statute.—Smith v. Frazer, Case No. 13,048.

Defendant must give notice of the place where and the parties by whom the thing relied on under the defense of prior use has been used.—Hays v. Sulsor, Case No. 6,271.

A reference to a county in which, it is alleged, the prior use took place, is not sufficient.—Hays v. Sulsor, Case No. 6,271.

Where defendant, in his special notice, gave the names of certain mining establishments in a specified county, as the places of an alleged prior use, held, that this was sufficient.—Smith v. Frazer, Case No. 13,048.

Defendant must give notice of his defense of want of novelty.—Coleman v. Liesor, Case No. 2,984; Collender v. Griffith, Id. 3,000.

The absence of proper notice of the defense of want of novelty in the answer will render evidence thereof inadmissible, though the answer is subsequently amended by setting up such defense in due form.—Roberts v. Buck, Case No. 11,897.

The absence of notice in the answer of evidence of want of novelty is waived where the testimony of witnesses is received without objection.—Roemer v. Simon, Case No. 11,997.

The testimony of a witness to prove prior knowledge stricken out, at the hearing, on motion, on the ground that his place of residence was not given in the answer.—Decker v. Grote, Case No. 3,726.

Copies of drawings of foreign patents are not admissible without a notice in the answer, as required by the statute.—Earl v. Dexter, Case No. 4,242.

A notice in a special plea, stricken out before the trial, is not sufficient to admit a public work in evidence to show want of novelty.—Foote v. Silsby, Case No. 4,916.

Testimony of prior use and printed publications, of which no notice was given in the answer, can be considered only to show the state of the art.—Geier v. Goetinger, Case No. 5,299.

If it should appear that such testimony clearly established the invalidity of the patent, the court might grant the respondent leave to amend.—Geier v. Goetinger, Case No. 5,299.

Complainant cannot acquiesce in the taking of testimony, and afterwards object to it for want of notice.—Lock v. Pennsylvania R. Co., Case No. 8,438.

Want of notice of the names of witnesses to prove want of novelty is waived where their evidence is taken without objection.—Crouch v. Speer, Case No. 3,438.

§ 227. Issues and proof.

The issue tendered by respondent must be clear and unconditional.—Graham v. Mason, Case No. 5,671.

Proof showing the prior state of the art cannot be considered for purposes of anticipation when that issue is not raised by the pleadings. —Middletown Tool Co. v. Judd, Case No. 9,536.

Machines not set up in the answer cannot be introduced in evidence or considered upon final hearing.—Howe v. Williams, Case No. 6,778.

Prior patent not pleaded is admissible to show state of art, but not want of novelty.—American Saddle Co. v. Hogg, Case No. 315.

Testimony as to prior knowledge and use by persons not named in the answer is incompetent.—Coleman v. Liesor, Case No. 2,984; Collender v. Griffith, Id. 3,000.

An allegation of infringement by making and using the patented invention is sustained by proof of using alone.—Locomotive Engine Safety Truck Co. v. Erie Ry. Co., Case No. 8,452.

See, also, ante, § 198.

§ 228. Evidence—Presumptions and burden of proof.

See, also, ante, §§ 23, 30, 34, 41–43, 53, 57, 59, 199, 200; post, § 248.

Both parties, when claiming under patents, are entitled to the benefit of the presumption that the patent is prima facie for a new and useful invention.—Blanchard v. Puttman, Case No. 1,514.

The burden of showing in defense that the patentee was a joint inventor is on defendant. —Ashcroft v. Cutter, Case No. 578.

The party claiming that the patent should be limited in duration has the burden of proof. —American Diamond Rock Boring Co. v. Sheldon, Case No. 297.

No notice will be taken of defenses set up in an answer, where the burden is upon the respondent, unless some proof is introduced in their support.—Cook v. Howard, Case No. 3,160.

After defendant shows failure of the patentee to mark the articles, plaintiff has the burden of showing that defendant continued to make and vend the articles after notice of infringement.—Goodyear v. Allyn, Case No. 5,555.

In the case of a patent for an improvement, the burden is upon the plaintiff to show the profit resulting from such improvement.—Star Salt Caster Co. v. Crossman, Case No. 13,320.

Defendant, shown to have in his possession a number of each of the parts constituting the elements of complainant's patented combination, may be compelled to show his subsequent use of such parts.—Turrell v. Spaeth, Case No. 14,267.

§ 229. —— Admissibility in general.

Complainant may show that his invention was made and reduced to practice at a date much earlier than that of the date of the application.—Kelleher v. Darling, Case No. 7,653.

Rejected specifications and drawings are admissible after the invention is perfected to ascertain the date of the invention, the design of the inventor, and the principle, intended functions, and mode of operation of the mechanism.—Northwestern Fire Extinguisher Co. v. Philadelphia Fire Extinguisher Co., Case No. 10,337.

Where a prior adjudication in favor of the patent is relied upon, defendant may show that the title was not fairly in controversy, or that some material fact was then unknown or apposite argument overlooked. — Parker v. Brant, Case No. 10,727.

Copies from the records of the patent office of assignments are evidence.—Brooks v. Jenkins, Case No. 1,953.

The model filed in compliance with the law is admissible as evidence of the scope of the invention and of the defects in the patent.—Ex parte Ball, Case No. 811.

As to the admissibility in evidence of the certified copy of a drawing filed after the original records in the patent office were destroyed by fire, see Emerson v. Hogg, Case No. 4,440.

Evidence of plaintiff's declarations held admissible to prove that he asserted a right as the discoverer, and described the invention.—Evans v. Hettick, Case No. 4,562.

Parol evidence is not admissible to show at what time a patent was applied for, as the patent office contains written evidence of such fact.—Wayne v. Winter, Case No. 17,304.

The commissioner's certificate that the annexed "is a true copy," annexed to various assignments of a patent, attached so as to constitute one document, applies to all of such assignments.—Goodyear v. Blake, Case No. 5,560.

§ 230. —— Weight and sufficiency.

A patent will be sustained on testimony of patentee that he was sole inventor, corroborated by the circumstances, as against testimony of another claiming to be joint inventor.—Ashcroft v. Cutter, Case No. 578.

The defense of invention by and patent to a third person may be met by producing the application of and the patent to such third person, with his accompanying or contemporaneous declarations.—Hitchcock v. Shoninger Melodeon Co., Case No. 6,537.

Persons alleging invalidity of patent after it has been repeatedly sustained in other circuits must show indisputable grounds. — Blake v. Robertson, Case No. 1,501.

It is not enough for defendant to make oath that he manufactures under a patent granted to himself; he must support his right by the affidavits of third persons.—Lombard v. Stillwell, Case No. 8,472.

A patent will not be invalidated on the testimony of a single witness of the public use of an alleged prior machine some 20 years before. —Blake v. Eagle Works Mfg. Co., Case No. 1,494; Same v. Rawson, Id. 1,499.

A verbal admission of infringement and a promise to desist is a strong circumstance against defendant.—Morse Fountain Pen Co. v. Esterbrook Steel Pen Mfg. Co., Case No. 9,862.

The purchase by plaintiff from defendant, in the usual course of defendant's business, of the infringing article, will sustain a decree for an injunction and an accounting as to other sales.—De Florez v. Raynolds, Case No. 3,742.

The fact that defendant has obtained a patent for his process, while not controlling, is entitled to weight.—Jones v. Merrill, Case No. 7,481.

Plaintiff cannot strengthen his case on the question of infringement by rebutting affidavits.—Union Paper-Bag Mach. Co. v. Binney, Case No. 14,387.

Where defendants offered no testimony, held the infringement was sufficiently proved by testimony of their admissions that they had sold certain articles which were substantially the same as the articles described in plaintiff's patent. — Thatcher Heating Co. v. Drummond, Case No. 13,865.

The affidavit of the manufacturer of an article, stating its composition from his personal knowledge, will prevail over the affidavits of dealers, stating their opinions.—Gutta-Percha & Rubber Mfg. Co. v. Goodyear Rubber Co., Case No. 5,879.

Where the evidence is the same as upon a prior case, the decision there will be followed. —Bailey Wringing Mach. Co. v. Adams, Case No. 752.

Copies of the specifications and drawings are not alone sufficient evidence to prove a patent. —Brooks v. Norcross, Case No. 1,957.

Complainant will be given the benefit of rights adjudicated against a defendant in another suit in which defendant herein contributed to the defense.—Birdsall v. Hagerstown Agricultural Implement Mfg. Co., Case No. 1,433.

Original model may be proved by specifications and drawings where certified model is broken, and parts lost.—Aultman v. Holley, Case No. 656.

Proof of mere finding of infringing machines in defendant's possession will support a finding for plaintiff where the answer does not explicitly deny infringement. — Gear v. Fitch, Case No. 5,290.

§ 231. —— Opinions of experts.

The opinions of experts, or persons skilled in the structure of machines, is evidence.—Brooks v. Jenkins, Case No. 1,953.

Testimony of experts are entitled to more weight than opinion of commissioner.—Ex parte Arthur, Case No. 563a.

As bearing on the art, the testimony of persons skilled in the business that no such improvement as that covered by the patent had previously come to their knowledge is inadmissible. — Hitchcock v. Shoninger Melodeon Co., Case No. 6,537.

Proofs furnished by practical operation and experiment are entitled to greater weight than the opinion of an expert.—Hudson v. Draper, Case No. 6,834.

The opinion of an expert that two machines are essentially different in mechanical structure and mode of operation, when the particulars of difference are not pointed out, will not control where the machines appear to be practically identical.—United States Annunciator & Bell Telegraph Mfg. Co. v. Sanderson, Case No. 16,790.

Experts will not be allowed to testify, where the court is convinced, upon an inspection of the machine and the patent, that there is no infringement.—Ely v. Monson & B. Mfg. Co., Case No. 4,431.

§ 232. Preliminary injunctions, when granted—In general.

The same rule obtains in patent cases as in other equitable cases as to the granting of a preliminary writ.—Irwin v. Dane, Case No. 7,081.

The rules laid down under which preliminary injunctions are granted.—Doughty v. West, Case No. 4,029.

The court should grant the preliminary writ without evasion if of opinion that plaintiff is entitled to it by law.—Blanchard v. Reeves, Case No. 1,515.

An injunction will be denied except in clear cases, or where the answer or affidavit is equivocal and evasive.—Parker v. Sears, Case No. 10,748.

Defendant may be enjoined from infringing some of the claims of a patent pending a decision as to the validity of others.—Colt v. Young, Case No. 3,032.

A preliminary injunction will be refused where the court is in doubt as to the validity of the patent or of the infringement.—American Middlings Purifier Co. v. Atlantic Milling Co., Case No. 305; American Nicholson Pavement Co. v. Elizabeth, Id. 312; Beane v. Orr, Id. 1,176; Dodge v. Card, Id. 3,951; Ogle v. Ege, Id. 10,462; Fales v. Wentworth, Id. 4,623; Crowell v. Harlow, Id. 3,444; Goodyear v. Hills, Id. 5,571a; Jones v. Field, Id. 7,461; Same v. Hodges, Id. 7,469; Mowry v. Grand Street & N. R. Co., Id. 9,893; Ogle v. Ege, Id. 10,462; Sickels v. Youngs, Id. 12,838; Winans v. Eaton, Id. 17,861.

Denied where its purpose is to compel a city to award a contract to complainants.—American Nicholson Pavement Co. v. Elizabeth, Case No. 312.

Denied where the patentee, before making his application, had sold a large quantity of the manufactured article in packages marked as imported.—Booth v. Garelly, Case No. 1,646.

Denied to inventor who falsely described his invention as patented before applying for patent.—Anonymous, Case No. 451.

Not granted where there are conflicting statements of fact.—Cooper v. Mattheys, Case No. 3,200.

The grant of a patent, without notice to a prior patentee of the application, is no bar to a preliminary injunction in favor of the latter. —Wilson v. Barnum, Case No. 17,787.

Preliminary injunction denied where the validity of the patent, six months old, was put in issue, and defendant alleged a license granted by complainant before the patent issued.—McGuire v. Eames, Case No. 8,814.

Not granted where defendant shows a belief that he has a just defense, and is not a willful pirate of the plaintiff's invention.—Goodyear v. Dunbar, Case No. 5,570.

Infringement enjoined independent of other relief.—American Cotton-Tie Supply Co. v. McCready, Case No. 295.

§ 233. —— Establishing right of patentee by trial at law or exclusive use.

A preliminary injunction will not be granted unless the patentee's right has been established by a suit at law, or his possession and exercise of the right have been exclusive, undisturbed, and long-continued.—Brooks v. Bicknell, Case No. 1,946; Burleigh Rock-Drill Co. v. Lobdell, Id. 2,166; Grover & Baker Sewing Mach. Co. v. Williams, Id. 5,847; Gutta-Percha & Rubber Mfg. Co. v. Goodyear Rubber Co., Id. 5,879; Hockholzer v. Eager, Id. 6,556; Hovey v. Stevens, Id. 6,745; Mitchell v. Barclay, Id. 9,659; Mowry v. Grand Street & N. R. Co., Id. 9,893; Muscan Hair Mfg. Co. v. American Hair Mfg. Co., Id. 9,970; Pentlarge v. Pentlarge, Id. 10,965a; Potter v. Whitney, Id. 11,341; Serrell v. Collins, Id. 12,671; Stevens v. Felt, Id. 13,397; Thomas v. Weeks, Id. 13,914; Toppan v. National Bank-Note Co., Id. 14,100.

Where the patent is of long standing, and the inventor has exclusive possession under it, and the infringement is clear, the writ will be granted without a trial at law.—Brown v. Hinkley, Case No. 2,012; Buck v. Cobb, Id. 2,079; Chase v. Wesson, Id. 2,631; Gibson v. Betts, Id. 5,390; Same v. Van Dresar, Id. 5,402; Green v. French, Id. 5,757; Goodyear v. Central R. Co., Id. 5,563; Howe v. Williams, Id. 6,778; Miller v. Androscoggin Pulp Co., Id. 9,559; Motte v. Bennett, Id. 9,884; Orr v. Badger, Id. 10,587; Same v. Littlefield, Id. 10,590; Potter v. Muller, Id. 11,334; Sickels v. Mitchell, Id. 12,835; Washburn v. Gould, Id. 17,214; Weston v. White, Id. 17,459; Woodworth v. Hall, Id. 18,016.

The injunction will be denied, where the patent has not been judicially established or acquiesced in by the public, unless plaintiff's right is free from doubt, and the violation of right by defendant is equally clear.—North v. Kershaw, Case No. 10,311.

Where the patent is only recently granted, very strong evidence of acquiescence on the part of the community is required to justify a preliminary injunction.—Mannie v. Everett, Case No. 9,039.

The public acquiescence in an inventor's claim of right for two years before his application is entitled to weight in considering his right to a preliminary injunction.—Sargent v. Larned, Case No. 12,364.

The alleged public acquiescence in a patent must be attended with circumstances indicating that such acquiescence would not have occurred if any fair doubt had existed as to the validity of the patent.—Guidet v. Palmer, Case No. 5,859.

Four years' use of a pavement laid by the patentee under a contract with the city held insufficient to raise a presumption in favor of the validity of the patent.—Guidet v. Palmer, Case No. 5,859.

Public acquiescence in a patent will not be construed as acquiescence in a reissue, where both patents do not claim the same thing.—Grover & Baker Sewing Mach. Co. v. Williams, Case No. 5,847.

Granted where complainants had enjoyed an uninterrupted use of their invention for 11 years, and established their patent in an action at law, and obtained an extension, notwithstanding vigilant opposition.—Cook v. Ernest, Case No. 3,155.

Granted where complainant's possession had been acquiesced in for a long time by the public, and for some time by defendant.—Morse v. O'Reilly, Case No. 9,859.

The exclusive possession for eight years under a patent for a useful machine, affecting an extensive business, held sufficient prima facie evidence to entitle a patentee to an injunction.—Foster v. Moore, Case No. 4,978.

Previous use by plaintiff is not absolutely essential.—American Middlings Purifier Co. v. Christian, Case No. 307. See, also, Mitchell v. Barclay, Case No. 9,659.

What is a sufficient public acquiescence in the exclusive right of a patentee to make a prima facie title without a judgment at law, see Sargent v. Seagrave, Case No. 12,365.

§ 234. —— Irreparable or comparative injury to parties.

The writ will be refused where there does not appear to be danger of irreparable injury to plaintiff.—Dorsey Revolving Harvester Rake Co. v. Bradley Mfg. Co., Case No. 4,015; Earth Closet Co. v. Fenner, Id. 4,249.

An unconditional injunction will be granted, irrespective of the hardship to defendants, and the security to plaintiff, if there be no substantial doubt of plaintiff's right.—Ely v. Monson & B. Mfg. Co., Case No. 4,431; Hodge v. Hudson River R. Co., Id. 6,560; Hussey v. Whitely, Id. 6,950; Morris v. Lowell Mfg. Co., Id. 9,833; Potter v. Fuller, Id. 11,327. But see Potter v. Whitney, Case No. 11,341.

A preliminary injunction will not be granted where there is more probability of incalculable mischief from the granting than from the withholding.—Day v. Candee, Case No. 3,676; Hockholzer v. Eager, Id. 6,556; Irwin v. Dane, Id. 7,081; North v. Kershaw, Id. 10,311; Sargent v. Seagrave, Id. 12,365.

Refused where complainant's right is in doubt, and defendants are amply able to answer in damages, and would suffer great injury by suspension of their work.—Essex Hosiery Mfg. Co. v. Dorr Mfg. Co., Case No. 4,533.

Unless the balance of inconvenience be clearly on the side of the complainant, or if the case be at all doubtful, an injunction will not be granted against a mere user.—Howe v. Newton, Case No. 6,771.

The standing of complainants in the market, and their relation to the trade, may be properly considered on the motion.—Irwin v. Dane, Case No. 7,081.

The state of the litigation, where the plaintiff's title is denied, the nature of the improvement, the character and extent of the infringement, and the comparative inconvenience which will be occasioned to the respective parties, by allowing or denying the injunction, must all be considered.—Forbush v. Bradford, Case No. 4,930.

It seems, will be denied where cessation of alleged infringement would be injurious to the public.—Blake v. Greenwood Cemetery, Case No. 1,497.

The object of the writ is to prevent irreparable mischief, not to give complainant the means of coercing a compromise on his own terms.—Parker v. Sears, Case No. 10,748.

On a motion for preliminary injunction, the court will not look further than to ascertain whether, upon established principles of equity, its interference is required to prevent irreparable injury pending the litigation.—Sickels v. Youngs, Case No. 12,838.

The fact that plaintiff grants licenses at a fixed sum, and that defendant is a mere user, is not alone sufficient reason to refuse the writ. —Howe v. Newton, Case No. 6,771.

Notwithstanding complainant's right to an injunction is clear, defendant will be allowed to continue the use of the patented invention, where plaintiff exercises his monopoly by selling licenses, and defendant is willing to pay a reasonable license fee.—Hodge v. Hudson River R. Co., Case No. 6,560; Baldwin v. Bernard, Id. 797.

Whether defendant is fully responsible for any profits or damages which may be decreed against him is material.—Morris v. Lowell Mfg. Co., Case No. 9,833.

That defendant does not make or vend the patented machine, but only uses it, is also material.—Morris v. Lowell Mfg. Co., Case No. 9,833.

An injunction will not issue where defendant was manufacturing under the patent on the understanding that the question between him and the plaintiff was one of compensation, and he was willing to pay a reasonable sum for the use of the invention.—Smith v. Sharp's Rifle Mfg. Co., Case No. 13,106.

Denied where the bill charges that defendants have violated their contract of license, and thereby become infringers, especially where there is a substantial controversy as to the equities.—Smith v. Cummings, Case No. 13,034.

Not granted where injury to defendant would be irreparable and profits to patentee are by licensing.—Batten v. Silliman, Case No. 1,106.

Where complainant can be compensated in damages, an injunction will not be granted during the last few weeks of a patent.—Parker v. Sears, Case No. 10,748.

Not granted where defendant licensee failed to pay his royalties, if it appear that complainant sold licenses for less than the agreed price, to defendant's injury.—Crowell v. Parmenter, Case No. 3,446.

The fact that only 20 days remain of the life of the patent is no ground for withholding injunctions, where the patent had only just been finally sustained, and had been much litigated.—Rumford Chemical Works v. Vice, Case No. 12,136.

§ 235. —— Defendant acting under claim and color of right.

The writ will not be granted as against a party who has been in possession of the invention for a long time under color and claim of right.—Hall v. Speer, Case No. 5,947; Cooper v. Mattheys, Id. 3,200.

The grant of a subsequent patent will not prevent the granting of an injunction where the infringement is clear.—Morse Fountain Pen Co. v. Esterbrook Steel Pen Mfg. Co., Case No. 9,862.

Denied where defendant's machine was patented to him after the granting of a preliminary injunction against him in a prior suit—Onderdonk v. Fanning, Case No. 10,510a.

Where, on a motion for a preliminary injunction, both parties claim to act under patents regularly issued, they stand on the same footing, and the court will not decide as to the validity of the patent.—Congress Rubber Co. v. American Elastic Cloth Co., Case No. 3,099a.

The writ will not be granted where defendant is acting under letters patent which cover his process or machine.—Goodyear v. Dunbar, Case No. 5,570; Congress Rubber Co. v. American Elastic Cloth Co., Id. 3,099a; Sargent v. Carter, Id. 12,362.

An injunction will not issue where defendant is manufacturing under letters patent, unless the court can see from an inspection alone that he is infringing.—Sargent Mfg. Co. v. Woodruff, Case No. 12,368.

A decision in favor of the applicant on an interference declared between an application and a patent is sufficient ground for refusing injunction to senior patentee.—Asbestos Felting Co. v. United States & F. S. Felting Co., Case No. 570.

Where the patent was not attacked for want of novelty, and the infringement was clear, but it appeared that defendant had publicly used his apparatus for three years without objection, the application was denied, with leave to renew the motion on defendant's giving security and keeping an account.—Sykes v. Manhattan Elevator & Grain Drying Co., Case No. 13,710.

Where the patent has been sustained in a trial at law, and an injunction has been obtained against the use of a particular apparatus, the use of a like apparatus by a different party will be enjoined, though such apparatus is patented, and has been adopted by defendant in good faith.—Sickels v. Tileston, Case No. 12,837.

The court cannot ignore the rights of defendant claiming under an adverse patent because of irregularity in its issue, and assume it to be a nullity.—Mitchell v. Barclay, Case No. 9,659.

§ 236. —— Threatened infringement.

Where the plaintiff's rights have been clearly established, and an infringement is threatened, or there is good cause to believe that a past infringement will be continued, an injunction will issue.—Poppenhusen v. New York Gutta Percha Comb Co., Case No. 11,281.

A bill in equity quia timet will lie for an injunction upon well-grounded proof of an apprehended intention of defendant to violate a patent. —Woodworth v. Stone, Case No. 18,021.

§ 237. —— Effectiveness of relief.

It is not a sufficient reason against the awarding of an injunction that it does not furnish plaintiff effectual relief, or that it may be avoided by defendant.—Thompson v. Mendelsohn, Case No. 13,968.

§ 238. —— Discontinuance of infringement.

The discontinuance of infringements or a cessation to use the infringing article is no bar to an injunction.—Goodyear v. Berry, Case No. 5,556; Potter v. Crowell, Id. 11,323; Rumford Chemical Works v. Vice, Id. 12,136; Sickels v. Mitchell, Id. 12,835.

Where a licensee has violated the restrictions of his license under a misapprehension of his rights, and has discontinued such violation, a provisional injunction will not be granted.—Wilson v. Sherman, Case No. 17,833.

§ 239. —— Acquiescence and misleading conduct of patentees.

Acquiescence by the patentee in the alleged infringement is strong ground for refusing a preliminary injunction. — Sloat v. Plymton, Case No. 12,948.

Preliminary injunction not refused where defendant has not been misled by plaintiff's conduct in allowing his suit to rest until a recovery in other suits by him, and then discontinuing, and bringing a new action. — Atlantic Giant Powder Co. v. Rand, Case No. 626.

Preliminary injunction denied where defendants were misled in continuing the infringement by plaintiffs' answer to their inquiry as to whether plaintiffs regarded their process as an infringement.—Jones v. Merrill, Case No. 7,481.

Preliminary injunction denied, except in a clear case where defendant claims to have acted under a patent, with plaintiff's knowledge, for a long time, and has made large investments.—North v. Kershaw, Case No. 10,311.

§ 240. —— Laches.

Preliminary injunction denied where defendant claimed openly to have manufactured under a patent of prior date, where complainants delayed for many years to enforce their rights, though their inventions antedated the patent under which defendants manufactured.—Whitney v. Rollstone Mach. Works, Case No. 17,596.

Advantage cannot be taken of complainant's delay in applying for an injunction where his suspicions of infringement were allayed by direct misrepresentations of defendant.—Wortendyke v. White, Case No. 18,050.

The loss of a patent required to be recorded (Act 1793) is no excuse for delay in applying for an injunction.—Cooper v. Mattheys, Case No. 3,200.

Preliminary injunction denied where the patentee had knowledge of the alleged infringement for nearly two years before making application.—Sperry v. Ribbans, Case No. 13,238; Spring v. Domestic Sewing Mach. Co., Id. 13,258.

A delay of three months in filing a bill after the infringement was ascertained is no ground of denial.—Union Paper-Bag Mach. Co. v. Binney, Case No. 14,387.

A delay of 18 months after knowledge of infringement is good ground for refusing an injunction.—Hockholzer v. Eager, Case No. 6,556.

Denied where suit had been pending many months and was nearly ready for hearing, and no newly-discovered ground for writ was shown. —Andrews v. Spear, Case No. 380.

The burden of showing complainant's previous knowledge of the infringement, where the motion is resisted on the ground of laches, is upon defendant.—Wortendyke v. White, Case No. 18,050.

Effect of laches in general.—American Middlings Purifier Co. v. Christian, Case No. 307; Anonymous, Id. 451.

§ 241. —— Discretion of court.

The granting of the injunction rests in the sound discretion of the court.—Orr v. Badger, Case No. 10,587; Potter v. Whitney, Id. 11,341; Tucker v. Carpenter, Id. 14,217.

§ 242. Security instead of injunction.

Where defendant's machine, though infringing, contains valuable improvements not covered by plaintiff's patent, an order for an account and security may be substituted for an injunction.—Stainthorp v. Humiston, Case No. 13,280; Howe v. Morton, Id. 6,769.

Denied, on defendant's giving security, where he was constructing a single machine only, and the validity of the patent and public acquiescence were denied.—Morris v. Shelbourne, Case No. 9,836.

In a suit for infringement against a person who had bought his infringing machine from one against whom complainant had obtained a decree for profits and damages, held that injunction would not issue on defendant's giving security to pay any decree rendered against him.—Gilbert & Barker Mfg. Co. v. Bussing, Case No. 5,416.

Denied on defendants' giving bond where they were merely selling agents on commission of manufacturers of the alleged infringing articles, against whom a suit was pending in another circuit by complainants. — Irwin v. McRoberts, Case No. 7,085.

Granted where the patent has been declared valid, and an infringement is probable, unless a bond is given to pay the decree, to keep an account, etc.—American Middlings Purifier Co. v. Christian, Case No. 307.

Bond not required of defendant unless injunction should issue if not given.—American Middlings Purifier Co. v. Atlantic Milling Co., Case No. 305.

Denied where defendant, setting up a license, offers to pay into court the amount of complainant's fixed license fees to abide a final decision.—Blake v. Greenwood Cemetery, Case No. 1,497.

Where complainant's right will be fully protected, defendant will only be required to give a bond and file accounts, though patent has been repeatedly sustained.—Blake v. Robertson, Case No. 1,500.

Where complainant has established a right to an injunction, defendant cannot defeat it by tendering security for damages.—Consolidated Fruit-Jar Co. v. Whitney, Case No. 3,132.

Will be withheld on the giving of an ample bond, where defendant is an extensive manufacturer with a large capital invested, and complainant is not a manufacturer.—Dorsey Harvester Revolving-Rake Co. v. Marsh, Case No. 4,014.

A patent having but six months to run, defendants were allowed to give bond to account, in lieu of a preliminary injunction.—Howe v. Morton, Case No. 6,769.

Where an injunction restraining the use of a patent hotel enunciator would compel defendant to close his hotel business, an injunction was denied on defendant giving bonds.—United States Annunciator & Bell Telegraph Mfg. Co. v. Sanderson, Case No. 16,790.

Where defendant gave bond and continued to manufacture the alleged infringing article, held, that complainant, though not within the district at the time, should be enjoined from bringing suits against his vendees.—Birdsell v. Hagerstown Agricultural Implement Mfg. Co., Case No. 1,437.

§ 243. Against whom preliminary injunction will issue.

Injunction will lie against agent selling infringing article for manufacturer. — Buck v. Cobb, Case No. 2,079.

Not granted where defendant, at the time of filing the bill, had parted with all interest in the infringing machine. — Brammer v. Jones, Case No. 1,806.

An inventor may enjoin the use of his invention by a submarine cable company in operating a cable under an exclusive legislative grant. —Colgate v. International Ocean Tel. Co., Case No. 2,993.

Denied where the infringement was committed by a corporation of another state in which the interested defendant was only one of several directors.—Jones v. Osgood, Case No. 7,487.

Injunction will not lie against equitable owner of patent on application of legal owner.— Clum v. Brewer, Case No. 2,909.

An injunction will not be issued against a respondent's using a machine, unless it is proved that he has used it himself, or employed others to use it for him, or at least has profited by the use of it.—Woodworth v. Hall, Case No. 18,016.

The purchasers from defendant of the alleged infringing machine, whose use by him has been enjoined, will be restrained from using the machine where the injunction remains in full force.—Woodworth v. Edwards, Case No. 18,014.

The obtaining of an interlocutory decree in a suit against infringing manufacturers is not a sufficient reason for withholding an injunction against purchasers from such manufacturers.— Tucker v. Burditt, Case No. 14,216.

Not granted where complainant's assignor had never done anything with the patent in the state, and defendants bought their machines in good faith.—Gear v. Holmes, Case No. 5,292.

§ 244. Application for preliminary injunction and proceedings thereon—Pleadings and affidavits.

An answer containing a positive denial cannot be treated merely as an affidavit.—Parker v. Sears, Case No. 10,748.

Where a plaintiff moves for an injunction, and it is denied on defects pointed out, it is too late for him to wait until after the defendant has closed his proofs for final hearing, before renewing his motion, on papers designed to cure such defects.—Wooster v. Howe Mach. Co., Case No. 18,037.

An answer to an injunction bill, though filed without a rule, will be treated as an answer, on a motion to grant or continue an injunction. —Brooks v. Bicknell, Case No. 1,944.

A general allegation by affidavit, on information and belief, that the thing patented existed before, without disclosing the particulars of the information leading to the belief, is insufficient.—Young v. Lippman, Case No. 18,160.

The bill need not contain a special prayer for an interlocutory injunction.—Goodyear v. Mullee, Case No. 5,579.

Not granted on a theory not affirmatively supported by affidavits.—American Diamond Rock Boring Co. v. Sullivan Mach. Co., Case No. 298.

A separate affidavit by plaintiff of his belief that the patentees were the first and original inventors dispensed with where the bill contains such an averment.—Young v. Lippman, Case No. 18,160.

An inventor himself suing for infringement must make oath that he is the true inventor, and this, together with the patent, is adequate proof on which to claim an injunction.—Stevens v. Felt, Case No. 13,397.

Affidavits may be read on both sides as to facts unconnected with the title.—Brooks v. Bicknell, Case No. 1,944.

An injunction granted on an original bill, before the surrender of a patent, cannot be maintained upon the new patent, unless a supplemetal bill be filed, founded thereon.—Woodworth v. Stone, Case No. 18,021.

§ 245. —— Jurisdiction.

Act Feb. 15, 1819, does not alter the principles on which injunctions are granted, but merely extends the jurisdiction of the court to parties not before falling within it.—Sullivan v. Redfield, Case No. 13,597.

Where it may be necessary to proceed directly against the machine itself, as in extreme cases of contumacy, or of fraudulent contrivance to evade an injunction, the proceedings must be instituted in the district in which the machine is located.—Wilson v. Sherman, Case No. 17,833.

An injunction will not issue where it does not appear from the record that defendant has ever made or sold the infringing articles in the district.—Wilson Packing Co. v. Clapp, Case No. 17,850; Goodyear v. Chaffee, Id. 5,564.

For the purpose of restraining the unlawful use of a patented machine out of the jurisdiction, it is only necessary that the court should have jurisdiction of the person of defendant.—Wilson v. Sherman, Case No. 17,833.

§ 246. —— Effect of prior decisions.

A decree of another federal court sustaining a patent is generally controlling on the application.—American Middlings Purifier Co. v. Christian, Case No. 307; American Nicholson Pavement Co. v. Elizabeth, Id. 312; Goodyear v. Honsinger, Id. 5,572.

A prior decision is controlling in the absence of new evidence.—Blaisdell v. Dows, Case No. 1,489.

A verdict in another circuit as to the validity of the patent will be followed on a motion for preliminary injunction.—Van Hook v. Wood, Case No. 16,855; Poppenhusen v. New York Gutta Percha Comb Co., Id. 11,281.

Adjudication of validity by other courts is ground of granting only where infringement is palpable.—American Shoe-Tip Co. v. National Shoe-Toe Protector Co., Case No. 317.

Facts found by a jury in a suit at law between the parties will be considered as conclusively established on the motion.—Poppenhusen v. New York Gutta Percha Comb Co., Case No. 11,281.

Although, on an issue awarded in the cause, the jury has found infringement, the court will not, on a motion for preliminary injunction, adopt its verdict, but will examine the whole case, and exercise its own judgment thereon.—Sickels v. Youngs, Case No. 12,838; Many v. Sizer, Id. 9,057.

A decision on a preliminary application is not of controlling right in another circuit.—Cornell v. Littlejohn, Case No. 3,238; Sargent Mfg. Co. v. Woodruff, Id. 12,368.

Neither the verdict at law nor finding of the jury in a feigned issue is ever conclusive upon the judge sitting in equity, upon a motion for an injunction.—Day v. Hartshorn, Case No. 3,683.

The case is the same on bill of exceptions and writ of error sued out.—Day v. Hartshorn, Case No. 3,683.

On motion for a provisional injunction, the verdict in another suit in which plaintiff testified may be admitted in evidence in the discretion of the court.—Buck v. Hermance, Case No. 2,081.

The question of priority will not be considered on the application, where priority has been declared in an interference proceeding and acquiesced in for a long time.—American Shoe-Tip Co. v. National Shoe-Toe Protector Co., Case No. 317.

Where a judgment sustaining a patent is acquiesced in or affirmed by the supreme court, questions as to the originality of the invention or validity of the patent will not be considered de novo.—Wells v. Gill, Case No. 17,394.

Facts showing the invalidity of the patent set up in defendant's uncorroborated affidavit are no ground of denying the writ, where defendant had remained silent in regard thereto in a preliminary suit in which he took an active interest.—Robinson v. Randolph, Case No. 11,962.

Where the validity of the patent has been fully sustained in prior cases, the court will not hear evidence except on the question of infringement.—Robertson v. Hill, Case No. 11,925.

A decision between other parties upon the points in issue is entitled to great weight, though not conclusive.—Potter v. Fuller, Case No. 11,327; Same v. Muller, Id. 11,334; Same v. Whitney, Id. 11,341.

The considerations which will induce the court to renew the discussion, must be such as would have induced the court to set aside a verdict.—Parker v. Brant, Case No. 10,727.

An adjudication in favor of a patent at final hearing on full proofs is controlling unless cogent evidence is presented in addition to that found insufficient upon such hearing.—Jones v. Merrill, Case No. 7,481.

The presumption of the validity of the patent is diminished in force where it appears that the judgment was obtained, without resistance, in an action in which several patents were in issue.—Grover & Baker Sewing Mach. Co. v. Williams, Case No. 5,847.

Abandonment of defense will not detract from the force or effect of a verdict or judgment at law where plaintiff made a plain case. —Goodyear v. Central R. Co., Case No. 5,563.

The considerations stated which apply to a case where, after a patent has been sustained on final hearing, a new defendant, in a new suit, seeks to attack the patent for want of novelty.—Colgate v. Gold & Stock Tel. Co., Case No. 2,991.

A verdict for plaintiff in suits against other parties is a controlling consideration, if the infringing machines are substantially similar.—Burr v. Prentiss, Case No. 2,194.

A decision between the same parties in another circuit is not controlling where the alleged infringing articles are not shown to be the same.—Blake v. Boisselier, Case No. 1,493a.

A patentee who establishes his title under the original letters patent is entitled to a temporary injunction under an extension of such letters patent without a further trial of his right.—Clum v. Brewer, Case No. 2,909.

The writ will be granted, notwithstanding pendency of another suit between the same parties upon the same patent in another state, where the validity of plaintiff's patent has been determined in prior suits.—Pennsylvania Salt Mfg. Co. v. Myers, Case No. 10,955.

For the purposes of a preliminary injunction, defendant's machine will be regarded as identical with that of defendant in a prior case, where identity is not denied.—Conover v. Mers, Case No. 3,123.

Denied, after decision by supreme court in favor of defendant, though after a reissue the same machine was held to be an infringement in another circuit, and plaintiff alleged infringement by a similar machine with slight alterations.—Wells v. Jacques, Case No. 17,399.

Denied, where verdicts at law have been obtained on such inconsistent and contradictory claims as to leave complainant's title so doubtful that the court cannot tell what is an infringement.—Parker v. Sears, Case No. 10,748.

Granted where plaintiff's rights have been established in a prior case against another, though defendant be perfectly responsible and willing to give security.—Conover v. Mers, Case No. 3,123.

A prior decree sustaining a patent, if entered by default, will not warrant a preliminary injunction in a subsequent suit.—Mannie v. Everett, Case No. 9,039.

The recovery of judgment against other parties is ground of granting an injunction, though it was rendered by agreement, and the patent has since been reissued.—Orr v. Littlefield, Case No. 10,590.

Defendants will be restrained from using an article which has been decided to be an infringement of plaintiff's patent in suits against parties supplied with the same by defendants, who assumed and conducted their defense.—United States & Foreign Salamander Felting Co. v. Asbestos Felting Co., Cases Nos. 16,787, 16,787a.

See, also, post, § 261.

§ 247. —— Time of granting.
The irregularity in the service of the subpœna to answer is no ground for withholding an injunction against defendant, who had notice of the motion, and appeared to oppose it.—Thayer v. Wales, Case No. 13,871.

Where a motion for a new trial or an appeal taken by defendant cannot be considered as intended merely for delay, the court will await the final result before awarding an injunction.—Morris v. Lowell Mfg. Co., Case No. 9,833.

An injunction will be refused until after the determination of a motion for new trial on a verdict for plaintiff in a trial at law.—Day v. Hartshorn, Case No. 3,683.

Neither the question of novelty nor that of infringement justifies a preliminary injunction until full hearing has been had.—Burr v. Smith, Case No. 2,196.

The pendency of a suit in another circuit is no ground of postponing the writ where the patent has been declared valid.—Atlantic Giant Powder Co. v. Goodyear, Case No. 623.

§ 248. —— Hearing, evidence, and decree.
Allegations in the affidavits in answer to the motion may be rebutted by proper testimony.—Goodyear v. Mullee, Case No. 5,579.

On motion for an injunction, the affidavit of a single witness is not sufficient to outweigh the oath of a patentee and the general presumption arising from the grant of the letters after a great lapse of time.—Woodworth v. Sherman, Case No. 18,019; Same v. Cheever, Id.

On application for a provisional injunction, expert demonstration of the patents may be made.—Barrett v. Hall, Case No. 1,047.

The court, or a judge out of court, may permit plaintiff, on motion for preliminary injunction, where defendant sets up a license, to put in rebuttal evidence.—Day v. New England Car Co., Case No. 3,686.

The order to permit such rebutting proof, when made by the court, is regular, although not made until the proofs are received.—Day v. New England Car Co., Case No. 3,686.

Defendant cannot reply to such rebutting proofs by further proofs on his part.—Day v. New England Car Co., Case No. 3,686.

On preliminary hearing the court may consider matters of ordinary knowledge outside the affidavits.—Adams & W. Mfg. Co. v. St. Louis Wire-Goods Co., Case No. 72.

The application may be granted or refused unconditionally, or terms may be imposed on either of the parties, as conditions.—Forbush v. Bradford, Case No. 4,930.

The court will not decide the question of infringement summarily, where it admits of doubt, or the facts are in dispute. Otherwise where the solution depends only upon the construction of the patent.—Goodyear v. Central R. Co., Case No. 5,563.

In the case of a simple mechanism, a bare inspection is sufficient on the question of infringement.—Morse Fountain Pen Co. v. Esterbrook Steel Pen Mfg. Co., Case No. 9,862.

The case should be such as to leave little, if any, doubt in the minds of the court as to the validity of the patent, especially if it rests upon complainant's own showing.—Sullivan v. Redfield, Case No. 13,597.

The effect of quiet enjoyment, acquiescence, recoveries without collusion, and strong evidence as to novelty, in inducing the granting of an injunction, considered.—Potter v. Holland, Case No. 11,330.

Where the rights of the plaintiff and the violation of them by defendant are clear, considerations of public or private convenience should have little weight.—Sickels v. Tileston, Case No. 12,837.

On denying an application, defendant was required to be ready to try a pending action at law at the next term.—Serrell v. Collins, Case No. 12,671.

Terms imposed and an affidavit required on granting an injunction to restrain defendant from making and vending the patented machine.—Rogers v. Abbot, Case No. 12,004.

Though preliminary injunction denied, defendant required to keep an account.—Allen v. Sprague, Case No. 238; American Middlings Purifier Co. v. Atlantic Milling Co., Id. 305.

Defendants will not be compelled to give bond nor to file periodic accounts until complainant's rights and the validity of the patent are established at law.—Bryan v. Stevens, Case No. 2,066a.

Where a license had been forfeited the licensor applies for an injunction, an order was made granting it, unless the licensee should, within 60 days, pay the amount of the note and other unpaid notes, with costs.—Woodworth v. Weed, Case No. 18,022.

The patent never having been the subject of litigation, complainant was ordered to file an injunction bond before the issue of the writ.—Shelly v. Brannan, Case No. 12,751.

Where the question of the right to the injunction depends only on the interpretation of a license, the question will be settled on motion for the injunction.—Hodge v. Hudson River R. Co., Case No. 6,560.

On a motion for an injunction the court is not bound to decide doubtful and difficult questions of law or disputed questions of fact.—Parker v. Sears, Case No. 10,748.

On the withdrawal of opposition to a motion for a preliminary injunction, plaintiff is not entitled to a decision on the merits.—American Middlings Purifier Co. v. Vail, Case No. 308.

Form of an order for a preliminary injunction on a patent, in a case where the plaintiff exercises his rights by granting licenses.—Colgate v. Gold & Stock Tel. Co., Case No. 2,991.

§ 249. Dissolving, vacating, and modifying preliminary injunctions.

The dissolving of an injunction rests in the sound discretion of the court, and on the justice and equity of each particular case.—Tucker v. Carpenter, Case No. 14,217.

The injunction ought not to be suspended until the final decree, unless there be shown some special grounds of peculiar hardship to the defendant.—Potter v. Mack, Case No. 11,331.

Assignment by complainant after preliminary injunction granted is no ground on which to dissolve it.—Thompson v. Barry, Case No. 13,942.

Defenses that cannot be availed of by defendant in the taking of proofs for final hearing cannot be availed of on motion to dissolve the injunction.—Union Paper-Bag Mach. Co. v. Newell, Case No. 14,389.

An injunction will not be dissolved merely on an answer denying the validity of the patent, but, if requested, plaintiff will be required to bring a suit at law to test the title.—Orr v. Merrill, Case No. 10,591.

The sending of circulars to parties engaged in the trade, notifying them of a preliminary injunction, is improper.—Wilson Packing Co. v. Clapp, Case No. 17,850.

An injunction will not be dissolved as a matter of course on the coming in of the answer denying the equity of the bill, if the complainant has adduced auxiliary evidence of his right.—Orr v. Littlefield, Case No. 10,590.

A motion to dissolve the injunction will not be heard on the same evidence on which it was granted, or new evidence improperly neglected to be offered before.—Woodworth v. Rogers, Case No. 18,018; National School Furniture Co. v. Paton, Id. 10,050.

Where, on a motion to dissolve an injunction, the evidence seems to preponderate in plaintiff's favor, the court will continue the injunction until the right can be tried at law or by issue out of chancery.—Woodworth v. Rogers, Case No. 18,018.

The injunction will be dissolved on the answer denying the validity of the patent supported by evidence, unless plaintiff file counter evidence sustaining its validity.—Woodworth v. Rogers, Case No. 18,018.

An injunction will not be dissolved on account of doubts as to the validity of a new patent issued to correct clerical mistakes in the original patent.—Woodworth v. Hall, Case No. 18,017; Same v. Stone, Id.

Where the respondents deny the validity of the patent of the plaintiffs, the court will dissolve the injunction at the next term, if the suit at law is not by that time brought against them to try its validity.—Woodworth v. Edwards, Case No. 18,014.

On a motion to dissolve an injunction, defendant's proofs must overcome the equity in the bill and the evidence in its support.—Sparkman v. Higgins, Case No. 13,208.

An injunction dissolved upon an answer denying the equity of the bill may be reinstated on application, where testimony subsequently taken shows the right of complainant to relief.—Tucker v. Carpenter, Case No. 14,217.

An application to modify an injunction so as to permit furnishing the alleged infringing article to prior purchasers will be denied where defendant fails to show want of notice of a suit to annul the license under which he operated, before making the contracts in question.—Consolidated Fruit-Jar Co. v. Whitney, Case No. 3,132.

§ 250. Permanent injunction.

A court of equity may in a proper case grant a permanent injunction upon a final hearing, though there has been no trial at law.—Buchanan v. Howland, Case No. 2,074; Sickles v. Gloucester Mfg. Co., Id. 12,841.

The fact that after suit brought defendant stopped using the infringing device, where he did not disclaim the right to it, is not a reason why a decree for an injunction should not be granted.—Bullock Printing Press Co. v. Jones, Case No. 2,132.

Where a patent covers but a small part of a machine which is claimed to infringe, which part is not materially useful, injunction is not the proper remedy.—Lowell Mfg. Co. v. Hartford Carpet Co., Case No. 8,569.

An injunction will not be granted where the patentee exercises his monopoly by renting licenses generally.—Livingston v. Jones, Case No. 8,414; Sanders v. Logan, Id. 12,295.

The fact that defendant, who has sold an infringing article, sold it on behalf of its owner, and had no interest in it, or in its sale, is no ground of refusing an injunction against him.—Maltby v. Bobo, Case No. 8,998.

Injunction will not be granted where the patent is recent, the specification obscure, and proof of infringement meager and unsatisfactory, but the court will retain the bill and require complainant to bring an action at law.—Muscan Hair Mfg. Co. v. American Hair Mfg. Co., Case No. 9,970.

A perpetual injunction is made part of the decree which finds the infringement.—Potter v. Mack, Case No. 11,331.

An injunction will, as a matter of course, follow a decree in favor of complainant on the merits, unless defendant show that it should in equity be withheld until after the account has been taken.—Rumford Chemical Works v. Hecker, Case No. 12,134.

Permitting infringement for several years does not waive or impair the patentee's rights, but it deeply affects his claim to an injunction.—Stevens v. Felt, Case No. 13,397.

An injunction will not be granted after the expiration of the term for which the patent issued.—Vaughan v. Central Pac. R. Co., Case No. 16,897.

Where reference is made to a master to take an account, an injunction was withheld until the coming in of his report.—Yale & G. Mfg. Co. v. North, Case No. 18,123.

The injunction may issue by the court having jurisdiction of the person, although the machine may be used beyond its jurisdiction.—Boyd v. McAlpin, Case No. 1,748.

Injunction withheld on final hearing where infringing hose couplings were necessary for the daily use of defendant city in the prevention of fires, but accounting decreed.—Bliss v. Brooklyn, Case No. 1,544.

§ 251. Violation of injunction — What constitutes.

A sale of a patent while the suit is pending in relation to it, and before an injunction is issued, is not a contempt of court.—United States v. Day, Case No. 14,934.

Defendant, enjoined from infringing a patent by manufacturing or selling, is guilty of a contempt in selling as agent for another.—Potter v. Muller, Case No. 11,333.

A lease of a machine by defendant to one of the joint complainants or an assignee from him is not a violation of an injunction obtained by complainants prohibiting defendant from using such machine.—Smith v. Patton, Case No. 13,088.

An injunction prohibiting defendant's using the patented article, or conferring the right to use it to others, except as to articles then in use by it, is violated by the furnishing of the article under a prior contract.—Colgate v. Gold & Stock Tel. Co., Case No. 2,992; Same v. Western Union Tel. Co., Id. 2,994.

Injunction against infringement of patents held to be violated by fitting up machinery for another, and keeping it in running order, in a factory known to be manufacturing the infringing articles.—Goodyear v. Mullee, Case No. 5,577.

A party enjoined against the use of a patent is guilty of contempt if he afterwards use another patent, similar in principle, with knowledge that the author of such patent had previously been enjoined.—Woodworth v. Rogers, Case No. 18,018.

An injunction against selling a patented "hose pipe provided with internal radial plates" is violated by the sale of new pipes with radial plates taken out of worn-out pipes.—Craig v. Fisher, Case No. 3,332.

An order requiring defendant to file a monthly account of all "iron safes hereafter manufactured or sold by him" is sufficiently complied with by giving the inside dimensions of the safes, without stating the prices or the names of the purchasers.—Wilder v. Gayler, Case No. 17,648.

Defendant must take the judgment of the court as to the portions of the enjoined machine which he is entitled to use. Advice of counsel is no justification.—Hamilton v. Simons, Case No. 5,991.

Where an injunction has issued after the patent has been sustained on an issue out of chancery, defendant cannot excuse himself from a violation by an allegation of paramount right under a purchase of prior patents covering plaintiff's device.—Valentine v. Reynolds, Case No. 16,813.

It is no excuse for the violation of the injunction that the patent is invalid, or the writ improvidently granted.—Phillips v. Detroit, Case No. 11,101.

§ 252. —— Procedure and punishment.

An attachment for contempt for violating an injunction will not be issued unless the violation is plain and clearly proven.—Birdsell v. Hagerstown Agricultural Implement Mfg. Co., Case No. 1,436.

It seems that, to attach one for breach of an injunction against the infringement of a patent, he must be a party to the suit, and have had notice of the application for the injunction. —Sickels v. Borden, Case No. 12,833.

Plaintiff, who sets on foot a stratagem to lead defendant to violate an injunction, to entrap him, must pay the costs of a motion for an attachment.—Sparkman v. Higgins, Case No. 13,209.

Where the president of defendant corporation was served with the injunction, and devised and practiced the transgressing process, an attachment will be awarded against him.—Wetherill v. New Jersey Zinc Co., Case No. 17,463.

An issue as to whether an article sold by defendant, not appearing to have existed before the making of the decree, is an infringement of the patent, cannot be disposed of on motion for an attachment on affidavits, but must be determined in a suit brought for the purpose.—Liddle v. Cory, Case No. 8,338.

A bond acknowledging the validity of a patent reciting an infringement held no evidence of breach of injunction subsequently granted.—Byam v. Eddy, Case No. 2,263.

Evidence is inadmissible to vary the construction given by the court to a patent on a motion for attachment for contempt for violating the injunction.—Burdett v. Estey, Case No. 2,146.

On a motion for an attachment for the violation of an injunction to restrain the infringement of letters patent, affidavits to show that the patentee was not the first and original inventor of the thing patented are immaterial and irrelevant.—Whipple v. Hutchinson, Case No. 17,517.

It is a matter of discretion whether the court on motion for attachment for contempt in violating an injunction will require expert testimony as to the infringement.—Burdett v. Estey, Case No. 2,146.

The question of identity of the machines on motion for commitment for contempt for violating an injunction is one of fact.—Birdsell v. Hagerstown Agricultural Implement Mfg. Co., Case No. 1,436.

In determining such question, in the absence of models, the testimony of experts is controlling.—Birdsell v. Hagerstown Agricultural Implement Mfg. Co., Case No. 1,436.

Where the violation is willful, the summary method of correction is imperative, and will not be arrested by the fact that the things used by defendant are in some respect different from those interdicted.—Wetherill v. New Jersey Zinc Co., Case No. 17,463.

The question of violation of an injunction was retained until final hearing on defendant's showing that alleged articles were not within the claim of the patent as construed by the court.—Welling v. Rubber-Coated Harness Trimming Co., Case No. 17,383.

Where the injunction has been violated, and the defendant is protected from the consequences only by a defect in the service of the writ, no costs will be allowed to him on a denial of a motion for an attachment for such violation.—Whipple v. Hutchinson, Case No. 17,517.

Persons acting in an official capacity, and deriving no personal benefit from the infringement, not required to pay the patentee the amount of his royalty for violating a preliminary injunction.—Phillips v. Detroit, Case No. 11,101.

Fees and disbursements on application for an attachment for contempt in violating the injunction, and on a reference to take testimony, allowed as part of the fine, though the extent of the violation was not shown.—Doubleday v. Sherman, Case No. 4,020.

The punishment limited to a fine of the amount of such fees and disbursements and the taxed costs, and commitment until payment.—Doubleday v. Sherman, Case No. 4,020.

Circumstances stated which govern the amount of the fine to be imposed for a contempt of court in violating an injunction.—Schillinger v. Gunther, Case No. 12,456.

After imprisonment for 50 days, defendant, without means of paying fine, was released on his own recognizance.—Goodyear v. Mullee, Case No. 5,578.

Where the violation was not willful, defendant was directed to pay to plaintiff the profits and damages on account of the violation and the costs of the contempt proceedings.—Ready Roofing Co. v. Taylor, Case No. 11,613.

The decision on motion for attachment was made without prejudice to the raising of the same question of infringement on the accounting under the interlocutory decree.—Burdett v. Estey, Case No. 2,146.

§ 253. Damages.

Under Act July 8, 1870, complainant may recover, in addition to the profits of the respondent, damages sustained.—Carew v. Boston Elastic Fabric Co., Case No. 2,397.

In an equity suit brought before the passage of Act July 8, 1870, §§ 55, 111, both profits and damages cannot be recovered.—Williams v. Leonard, Case No. 17,726.

Profits are the net gains of the infringer from the invention; damages are the losses sustained by the owner.—La Baw v. Hawkins, Case No. 7,961.

Damages for an alleged reduction in prices or loss of sales caused by the infringement must be based upon evidence furnishing a sound and safe basis of calculation.—Ingersoll v. Musgrove, Case No. 7,040.

The owner of a patent is entitled to recover the damages from a reduction of prices caused by the competition of the infringer, although he is accountable to a copartner for a part of them.—Sargent v. Yale Lock Mfg. Co., Case No. 12,366.

Reduction of prices, and consequent loss of profits, caused by the competition of the infringer, is a proper ground for awarding damages.—Sargent v. Yale Lock Mfg. Co., Case No. 12,366.

No part of the expenses of the litigation should be assessed as damages.—Holbrook v. Small, Case No. 6,596; Bancroft v. Acton, Id. 833.

A patentee who has conveyed the exclusive right to the patent within the jurisdiction of the court, with the reservation of his rights in suit, is entitled to damages only to the time of the conveyance, and not to an injunction.—Boomer v. United Power Press Co., Case No. 1,638.

The use of plaintiff's patent restored the salable character of the article defendant made, and saved defendant from loss. Held, that the money value of such advantage could be recovered as compensation, though there were no profits.—Sargent v. Yale Lock Mfg. Co., Case No. 12,367.

The amount paid by defendant for a license to use a patented device, which he afterwards substituted for plaintiff's device, held to be the proper measure of the value of the invention to defendant.—Sargent v. Yale Lock Mfg. Co., Case No. 12,367.

A royalty paid in consideration for the whole monopoly of a patent is not a safe criterion of damages, unless it is shown that plaintiffs lost the sale of the same number of machines made and sold by defendants.—La Baw v. Hawkins, Case No. 7,961.

Damages cannot be trebled in a suit in equity.—Motte v. Bennett, Case No. 9,884; Holbrook v. Small, Id. 6,596.

A court of equity cannot inflict exemplary or punitive damages where defendant has acted wantonly or vexatiously.—Sanders v. Logan, Case No. 12,295.

Where the patentee exercises his monopoly by granting licenses indiscriminately, the measure of his damages is the price or value of the license; and an account of profits is not required, and the jurisdiction of equity need not be invoked.—Sanders v. Logan, Case No. 12,295.

See, also, ante, §§ 162, 201–207.

§ 254. Profits—Nature of profits and right in general.

The infringer is in equity a trustee of the patentee of the gains derived by him from the infringement.—Wetherill v. New Jersey Zinc Co., Case No. 17,464; Wetherill v. Same, Id.; Jenkins v. Greenwald, Id. 7,270.

The profits recoverable for infringements are not regarded as unliquidated damages, and they are subject to assignment.—Jenkins v. Greenwald, Case No. 7,270.

Plaintiff can recover the profits realized by the wrongdoer from the infringement.—Carter v. Baker, Case No. 2,472.

Defendant must account for the profits on repairs sold upon infringing mechanisms previously made and sold by him.—Graham v. Mason, Case No. 5,672.

The fact that defendant could have made the profits realized by the infringement by doing the work in another way is immaterial.—American Nicholson Pav. Co. v. Elizabeth, Case No. 309.

The rule that gains and profits are the proper measure of damage in equity suits is inapplicable where the injury sustained is greater than such amount.—Brady v. Atlantic Works, Case No. 1,795.

Amount of defendant's profits, he not being a willful infringer, held adequate compensation.—Buerk v. Imhaeuser, Case No. 2,107.

A contract by the owner of a territorial right, giving an agent power to sell without limit, will prevent his recovery of damages on the principle of profits, regardless of his declaration of intention to make a close monopoly.—Burdell v. Denig, Case No. 2,142.

The question of profits is not affected by the fact that defendant made the infringing contrivance cheaper than he could make the contrivance in the exact form and shape described in the patent.—Graham v. Mason, Case No. 5,672.

§ 255. —— Amount and estimation of profits.

On accounting for infringement, defendant must account for the entire profits realized.—Child v. Boston & F. Iron Works, Case No. 2,674.

The infringer's entire profit is the measure of damages only where the patentee exercises a complete monopoly and the invention is such as to supersede all other machines or manufactures of the same genus.—Livingston v. Jones, Case No. 8,414.

The profits recoverable from an infringer are those derived from the use of the invention over what would have been derived from the use of other machines then open to the public. —Knox v. Great Western Quick-Silver Min. Co., Case No. 7,907; Bell v. Daniels, Id. 1,247; Black v. Thorne, Id. 1,466; Turrill v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., Id. 14,272.

The saving to defendant made directly by using the patented device, and not that which he might have made if he had used any or all of various other devices, held the proper measure of damages.—Herring v. Gage, Case No. 6,422.

Upon an accounting, complainant may recover the entire profits accruing from the infringement, irrespective of the established royalty.—Knox v. Great Western Quick-Silver Min. Co., Case No. 7,907; Wooster v. Taylor, Id. 18,041; American Nicholson Pav. Co. v. Elizabeth, Id. 309.

Only the actual profits from the making, using, or selling of the invention by defendant are to be considered in estimating damages.—Parker v. Perkins, Case No. 10,745; Piper v. Brown, Id. 11,181.

The actual profits are those which are made by the use of the patented device, and not those made upon the machine as a whole.—Brady v. Atlantic Works, Case No. 1,795; Webster v. New Brunswick Carpet Co., Id. 17,338; Ingels v. Mast, Id. 7,034. But see Livingston v. Jones, Case No. 8,414.

The whole profits may be awarded against defendants, though made while they were using the patented invention in conjunction with a person not a defendant.—Herring v. Gage, Case No. 6,422.

Where the patented articles were not stamped with the word "Patented," held, that complainant was entitled to profits only from the date of the decree.—Putnam v. Sudhoff, Case No. 11,483.

Where the infringed patent is for an art, a fair measure of the infringer's actual profits is the saving in cost of production by the use of the appropriated invention over the cost of production by the use of cognate means, used and available.—Wetherill v. New Jersey Zinc Co., Case No. 17,464.

The net profit derived from using infringing machinery in making articles which are sold is determined by deducting from the value of the articles all the elements of cost in their production.—Troy Iron & Nail Factory v. Corning, Case No. 14,196.

Consideration of the expenses and charges proper to be allowed to defendant in ascertaining such net profits.—Troy Iron & Nail Factory v. Corning, Case No. 14,196.

In estimating the profits realized from infringement, compensation is not allowed the infringer for his time and labor.—Piper v. Brown, Case No. 11,181; Williams v. Leonard, Id. 17,726.

Expenses of defendants for advertising the infringing machine are to be deducted in estimating their profits.—La Baw v. Hawkins, Case No. 7,961.

The value of the use of real and personal estate belonging to the infringer, such as shops, fixtures, and machinery, including repairs, employed in making the infringing machines, is to be allowed as part of their cost.—Steam Stone Cutter Co. v. Windsor Mfg. Co., Case No. 13,335.

The amount paid for insurance and for local taxes on such property is not to be allowed as part of the cost.—Steam Stone Cutter Co. v. Windsor Mfg. Co., Case No. 13,335.

Salaries paid in good faith for services actually rendered by stockholders of defendant corporation employed in making the infringing machine are to be allowed as part of the cost.—Steam Stone Cutter Co. v. Windsor Mfg. Co., Case No. 13,335.

Nothing is to be deducted for liabilities on guaranties and warranty of title incurred by the infringer.—Steam Stone Cutter Co. v. Windsor Mfg. Co., Case No. 13,335.

The amount paid by defendant in satisfaction of complainant's rights against purchasers from defendant is not a legitimate charge against the manufacture, and cannot be deducted in accounting for profits.—Graham v. Mason, Case No. 5,672.

The general expenses of conducting defendant's entire business, held, should be divided in the proportion that the amount of sales of the infringing device bore to the sales in the entire business.—Hitchcock v. Tremaine, Case No. 6,539.

The gain or saving arising from the use of the infringing machine cannot be applied to make up losses sustained by defendant on other branches of his business.—Conover v. Mers, Case No. 3,122.

The portion of the price of an infringing machine due to a patented improvement of the infringer, as well as the cost of making such improvement, is not to be allowed.—Steam Stone Cutter Co. v. Windsor Mfg. Co., Case No. 13,335.

Royalties paid or due by defendant under an infringing patent, which contains improvements over complainant's patent, should be deducted from the amount of profits.—La Baw v. Hawkins, Case No. 7,961.

Plaintiff is entitled to any profit arising from the making and selling of any of the infringing machines, though other infringing machines were disposed of without profit, or are still on hand, and cannot be disposed of.—Steam Stone Cutter Co. v. Windsor Mfg. Co., Case No. 13,335.

Interest on the cost of a device, and the cost of power, are to be allowed as deductions from profits only when it is shown they have been paid or incurred as debts.—Herring v. Gage, Case No. 6,422.

Where defendants have not all been jointly concerned in the infringement for the whole time covered by the account their several liability must be apportioned in making up the decree.—Tatham v. Lowber, Case No. 13,765.

§ 256. —— Interest.

Interest on profits will not be allowed.—Brady v. Atlantic Works, Case No. 1,795; Holbrook v. Small, Id. 6,596.

Interest on the profits decreed will be allowed from the time of the entry of the interlocutory decree.—Steam Stone Cutter Co. v. Windsor Mfg. Co., Cases Nos. 13,335, 13,336.

Interest will be allowed on the profits to the date of the master's report.—Tatham v. Lowber, Case No. 13,765.

Complainants are entitled to interest upon profits only from date of final decree.—American Nicholson Pavement Co. v. Elizabeth, Case No. 309; Webster v. New Brunswick Carpet Co., Id. 17,338.

§ 257. —— Particular instances.

Computation of profits in the use of an invention in producing fat acids and glycerin from fatty bodies.—Tilghman v. Mitchell, Case No. 14,041.

Price of coal saved by use of improvement for utilizing waste heat held proper measure of damages.—Bell v. Phillips, Case No. 1,262.

The entire profits of infringing car wheels were allowed where such wheels could not have been made without infringing the patented process, though other equally valuable wheels could have been made at less cost by other processes.—Whitney v. Mowry, Case No. 17,594.

The infringer of a patented process of reducing zinc ores for the production of white oxide cannot be charged with the value of an increased residuum, obtained by using the process, available for renewed treatment, which residuum fluctuates with the varying richness of the ore, and results from its inherent natural properties, and is not imparted to it by the direct operation of any contemplated function of the process.—Wetherill v. New Jersey Zinc Co., Case No. 17,464.

Where, in the case of an infringement of a patented process, the infringer used a furnace specially adapted thereto, and there were no data from which its contributory value could be estimated, the court treated the furnace and process as co-equal, and allowed one-half the profit.—Wetherill v. New Jersey Zinc Co., Case No. 17,464.

Profits resulting from an increased price obtained by defendant for unpreserved fish, from their ability to withdraw fresh fish from the market by the use of complainant's patented process of preserving fish, are not recoverable in a suit for infringement.—Piper v. Brown, Case No. 11,181.

§ 258. —— Burden of proof.

The plaintiff is entitled only to the profits accruing from the use of his patent, the burden of proving which is upon him.—Black v. Munson, Case No. 1,463.

The infringer is liable for the whole profits unless he show affirmatively the extent to which instrumentalities and improvements not covered by patents contributed.—American Nicholson Pav. Co. v. Elizabeth, Case No. 309.

Plaintiff is entitled only to nominal damages, where he fails to show the proportion contributed to the machine in question by his improvement.—Burdell v. Denig, Case No. 2,142.

In taking an account where profits and damages are estimated upon the extent of use of the patented machine in manufacturing an article, complainant must show affirmatively the amount actually produced. Profits and damages cannot be given upon the estimated capacity of the machine.—Webster v. New Brunswick Carpet Co., Case No. 17,338.

Where no profits are proved to have been made by defendant, complainant cannot recover as damages the profits which it would have made on the articles sold by defendant.—St. Louis Stamping Co. v. Quinby, Case No. 12,240a.

The patentee must give evidence tending to apportion the defendant's profits and the patentee's damages between the patented and unpatented features of the article sold, or show that its entire marketable value was due to the patented feature.—Garretson v. Clark, Cases Nos. 5,248, 5,250; Gould's Mfg. Co. v. Cowing, Id. 5,642, 5,643.

Where plaintiff fails to give such evidence, he will not be allowed, after a finding of nominal damages, to put in other evidence.—Garretson v. Clark, Case No. 5,248.

Where plaintiff fails to show the profits arising from the use or sale of the improvement, nominal damages only can be recovered.—Gould's Mfg. Co. v. Cowing, Cases Nos. 5,642, 5,643.

Nominal damages only can be recovered where plaintiff, not being entitled to damages on the principle of profits, fails to prove a license price.—Burdell v. Denig, Case No. 2,142.

§ 259. Reference to master.

On bill for infringement where title not disputed, the circuit court under Act July 4, 1836, § 17, will refer to master to take account of profits.—Allen v. Blunt, Case No. 215.

On a reference to take an account, defendant cannot be examined as a witness in his own favor, if objection be made by plaintiff, though he was first called and examined as a party by plaintiff.—Foote v. Silsby, Case No. 4,920.

The accounting should cover all infringements down to the date on which the accounting is had.—Knox v. Great Western Quick-Silver Min. Co., Case No. 7,907; Tatham v. Lowber, Id. 13,765.

On a reference to ascertain the damages caused by an infringement, the master cannot go into the general question of infringement, nor consider the general scope and extent of the patent.—Turrill v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., Case No. 14,272.

Upon an accounting before a master, the extent of the monopoly and the infringement must first be ascertained to establish the basis of profits or damages.—Ruggles v. Eddy, Case No. 12,116.

On a reference to a master to ascertain damages and profits, where the bill is taken pro confesso, the master can report only nominal damages where complainants fail to make satisfactory proof.—Fisk v. West Bradley & Cary Mfg. Co., Case No. 4,830a.

Where a patent for concrete pavement claimed the separation of the pavement in sections, and, on an account of profits for infringement, there was no proof of a license fee or the value of the patented improvement, held, that the master should have reported no profits.—Schillinger v. Gunther, Case No. 12,457.

Where an infringement commenced by one railroad company is continued by another with which it is consolidated, the extent of the infringement by each must be ascertained by the master.—Turrill v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., Case No. 14,272.

Report of master set aside on the ground that what he had reported as an established license fee was not shown to have been such.—Greenleaf v. Yale Lock Mfg. Co., Case No. 5,783.

It is not proper, upon a motion to confirm or reject the master's report, to consider open any question which was foreclosed by the decree by which the case was referred to the master.—Whitney v. Mowry, Case No. 17,594.

In the case of the infringement of a patent for a process of annealing cast-iron car wheels, the case was referred back to the master to report whether the infringing wheels could have had any market value without the infringing process, and, if so, the amount of value derived from the use of the patented process.—Whitney v. Mowry, Case No. 17,593.

Where an interlocutory decree in an equity suit inadvertently provides for the recovery of both profits and damages, it is no ground of exception to the report of a commissioner that damages could not be recovered in such suit, but in such case the court will resettle the interlocutory decree.—Williams v. Leonard, Case No. 17,726.

A finding of the master, based in part upon unreported evidence and his own examination of the infringing device, made by consent and in the presence of the parties, will not be set aside.—Piper v. Brown, Case No. 11,181.

§ 260. Hearing.

The provision that "notice of the day set for the hearing of the case shall be published, as now required by law, for at least sixty days," held to be satisfied by a publication for three successive weeks commencing sixty days before the hearing.—Gear v. Grosvenor, Case No. 5,291.

It is not the province of the master or the court to suggest the proper line of proof to adopt.—Garretson v. Clark, Case No. 5,250.

The court may inspect a model exhibited in evidence, and from such inspection decide the question of patentability.—Everett v. Thatcher, Case No. 4,578.

Plaintiff was allowed to produce evidence in rebuttal at the hearing on payment of costs to defendant of procuring its evidence. — Stainthorp v. Humiston, Case No. 13,281.

Plaintiff, in a suit for infringement of patent, cannot, at the hearing, for the first time, as a matter of right, introduce evidence to rebut proof that he was not a citizen of the United States.—Stainthorp v. Humiston, Case No. 13,281.

Evidence is inadmissible at the hearing which was not offered before the master.—Potter v. Wilson, Case No. 11,342; Grover & Baker Sewing Mach. Co. v. Sloat, Id. 5,846.

An objection to evidence is waived where not distinctly made when taken.—Barker v. Stowe, Case No. 994.

Defendant may show the condition of the model at the time it was filed in the patent office, and at the date of the original patent.—Johnson v. Beard, Case No. 7,371.

Where no infringement is found, the court will not pass upon the validity of the patent.—Saxe v. Hammond, Case No. 12,411.

Where the question of priority of invention was put in issue, evidence of other alleged anticipations is merely cumulative.—Blandy v. Griffith, Case No. 1,530.

The construction of the patent is for the court.—Cahoon v. Ring, Case No. 2,292.

Whether a disclaimer has been made within a reasonable time is a mixed question of law and fact.—Brooks v. Jenkins, Case No. 1,953.

It is a question of law whether the thing invented is sufficiently described. — Brooks v. Jenkins, Case No. 1,953.

To prevent multiplicity, suit between patentee and user of infringing machine suspended to await result of pending suit between patentee and principal infringer.—Barnum v. Goodrich, Case No. 1,036.

See, also, ante, §§ 208, 248.

§ 261. Effect of prior decisions in general.

The court, upon final hearing, may pass upon a patent without reference to the fact whether or not it has been before a jury.—Doughty v. West, Case No. 4,029.

A decree of a circuit court taken pro confesso will not preclude full inquiry and investigation by another court.—Everett v. Thatcher, Case No. 4,578.

A decision of a court of equity upon final hearing in relation to the validity of letters patent furnishes an authority for the action of courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction. — American Wood-Paper Co. v. Fibre Disintegrating Co., Case No. 320.

The decision of a co-ordinate court on an interlocutory decree will be followed, in the absence of new or additional or contradictory evidence, which impels the court in a second hearing to a different result.—Rumford Chemical Works v. Hecker, Case No. 12,133.

In such case a full decree will be rendered, which will also reveal the distinct ground on which the court refused to look into the question. — Rumford Chemical Works v. Hecker, Case No. 12,133.

The decision of another circuit on the same points and the same state of proofs is entitled to great consideration.—Hitchcock v. Shoninger Melodeon Co., Case No. 6,537.

A clear case of infringement by a patented article is necessary before the court will consider it as covered by a decree in another suit in which its structure had not been under consideration.—Buerk v. Imhaeuser, Case No. 2,108.

A decision that a certain patent does not destroy the novelty of another is not necessarily a decision that the use of an arrangement in the latter is not an infringement of the former. —Bachelder v. Moulton, Case No. 706.

Notwithstanding prior decisions upon the validity of the patent, held, that the case should be tried anew upon additional facts proved.—Blake v. Rawson, Case No. 1,499.

Where the aspect of the case is substantially changed by new evidence, a district judge sitting alone in the circuit court may review or set aside the action of the court, when presided over by the circuit justice. — Hussey v. Whitely, Case No. 6,950.

An adjudication upon the original patent will not conclude defendant, where the infringement of a reissue lies between the limits of the original and reissued patents.—Poppenhusen v. Falke, Case No. 11,279.

See, also, ante, § 246.

§ 262. Submission of issues to jury.

An issue at law will be directed where the testimony is conflicting.—Brooks v. Bicknell, Cases Nos. 1,944, 1,946; Parker v. Hatfield, Id. 10,736.

Where, on a bill for infringement, the evidence is uncertain and unsatisfactory, an issue will be awarded on the questions whether the patentee was the first inventor, and whether the invention was known and used by others two years before the application.—Sicles v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co., Case No. 12,842.

A feigned issue will not be awarded unless the court have doubts as to the identity of the two machines.—Van Hook v. Pendleton, Case No. 16,851.

A feigned issue will be awarded in a suit for an injunction founded on a verdict, in an action at law, on newly-discovered evidence tending to show a want of novelty, and defendants will be allowed to amend their answer on payment of costs by inserting the new matter.—Foote v. Silsby, Case No. 4,918.

The court will not send the case to a jury where, after a hearing on full proofs, it is well satisfied of the originality of the invention, the regularity of the patent, and of the fact of infringement.—Goodyear v. Day, Case No. 5,569.

It is discretionary with the court to order issues for a jury.—Ayling v. Hull, Case No. 686; Brooks v. Norcross, Id. 1,957.

Original letters patent are not admissible on trial of feigned issues presenting no issue of fraud or mistake, where the bill of complaint was founded exclusively upon the reissued letters.—Cahoon v. Ring, Case No. 2,292.

Letters patent offered in evidence in the trial of feigned issues to show want of originality in the complainants' invention must be construed by the court; and, if having no tendency to support the issue, should be rejected.—Cahoon v. Ring, Case No. 2,292.

Evidence of new experiments upon the machines in question, on the trial of feigned issues, in a patent suit, cannot be offered by the complainant in rebuttal.—Cahoon v. Ring, Case No. 2,292.

Further time to take testimony given where feigned issues out of equity have been ordered before the time for taking testimony had expired.—Cahoon v. Ring, Case No. 2,292.

See, also, ante, § 208.

§ 263. Rehearing.
Motion for rehearing in suit for infringement of patent cannot be made after term at which final decree entered.—Barker v. Stowe, Case No. 995.

The reissue, after the first hearing, of a patent prior to plaintiff's, which was in evidence, is no ground for granting a rehearing.—Hitchcock v. Tremaine, Case No. 6,540.

The want of proper expert testimony is no ground for granting a rehearing, where no sufficient excuse is shown for not applying, prior to the first hearing, for opportunity to introduce the same.—Hitchcock v. Tremaine, Case No. 6,540.

A rehearing will be ordered where it appears doubtful whether a decree adverse to the patent could be sustained under the allegations in the answer, with leave to amend such answer.—Schneider v. Thill, Case No. 12,470b.

An attorney was employed by the assignee of a bankrupt patentee when a suit for infringement was on the trial list, and the patent was declared invalid. Held, that a rehearing would not be granted because of want of preparation, where the validity of the patent could be tested in other pending suits.—Nutter v. Rodgers, Case No. 10,383.

Rehearing on the ground of newly-discovered anticipating devices will be denied, in the absence of clear proof of anticipation.—Kerosene Lamp Co. v. Littell, Case No. 7,723.

Inexperience and lack of legal knowledge of counsel and ignorance of defendant in not setting up foreign patents, to show want of novelty, held not sufficient ground for opening interlocutory decree.—De Florez v. Raynolds, Case No. 3,743.

A prior decision in another court is no ground for opening an interlocutory decree, where the question has since been passed upon at law in this court.—Ingersoll v. Benham, Case No. 7,036.

The case will be opened to permit introduction of newly-discovered evidence to show a change in the model when the reissue was granted.—Johnson v. Beard, Case No. 7,371.

After the neglect of an order to file testimony, and the overruling of a demurrer as bad, the case will not be opened for further hearing as to a temporary injunction previously granted, unless respondent show by affidavit that the course pursued was not for delay, and indemnity is also filed.—Woodworth v. Edwards, Case No. 18,014.

§ 264. Decree and review.
A decree for an accounting will be granted, though it appear that no profits resulted from the infringement, where it does not appear whether or not complainant suffered damage therefrom.—Bullock Printing Press Co. v. Jones, Case No. 2,132.

Where infringement is admitted, if the patent is valid, an interlocutory decree should be entered for complainant, and the cause sent to a master to ascertain damages.—Carew v. Boston Elastic Fabric Co., Case No. 2,397.

A decree will be entered for complainant where the facts averred, showing the validity and infringement of the patent, are admitted by defendant, who also admits the want of any valid defense.—Franz & Pope Knitting Mach. Co. v. Lamb Knitting Mach. Mfg. Co., Case No. 5,061a.

The title to the infringing machine passes to the purchaser where a decree is given for the profits on the manufacture and sale—Spaulding v. Page, Case No. 13,219; Steam Stone Cutter Co. v. Windsor Mfg. Co., Id. 13,335; Gilbert & Barker Mfg. Co. v. Bussing, Id. 5,416; Perrigo v. Spaulding, Id. 10,994.

A recovery of profits for the use of the infringing machine does not vest the title thereto in the defendant.—Spaulding v. Page, Case No. 13,219.

Where the court awards as damages the license fee which the patentee has fixed for the perpetual use of a machine, which defendant pays, he is entitled to the use of the infringing machine.—Sickels v. Borden, Case No. 12,832; Spaulding v. Page, Id. 13,219.

A decree for a perpetual injunction in a patent case will not be opened to let in a defense after a delay of 11 months from the payment of an execution issued for costs.—Doubleday v. Sherman, Case No. 4,019.

The limitation of two years in section 2057 does not apply to a proceeding to review a decree in equity.—Wilt v. Stickney, Case No. 17,854.

A motion to set aside a decree pro confesso, and for leave to answer, denied on plaintiff's stipulating to limit recovery to a certain amount, being less than expense to defendant of trying issue.—Andrews v. Denslow, Case No. 372.

Where a writ of error is pending, the court in another circuit will consider the errors alleged to have been committed at the trial, and will disregard the judgment where there was radical error.—Wells v. Gill, Case No. 17,394.

A decree in a patent case, making the injunction prayed for perpetual, with a reference to a master for an account of profits, is not a final decree.—Reeves v. Keystone Bridge Co., Case No. 11,661.

And no appeal lies from a decree in a patent case which provides for a reference to a master to state an account until the coming in of the master's report.—Potter v. Mack, Case No. 11,331.

See, also, ante, §§ 209, 210, 248.

§ 265. Costs.
Plaintiff is not entitled to costs in a suit for infringement of a patent, where he recovers a verdict for infringement of valid claims, while other claims are rejected as void for want of novelty.—Peek v. Frame, Case No. 10,904.

Where, in a suit in equity for infringement of a patent, defendant was held to have infringed one claim, and another claim was held to be invalid, no costs were allowed to either party.—Yale & G. Mfg. Co. v. North, Case No. 18,123.

Costs refused defendant in a bill for infringement on its dismissal, as he received benefit from the settlement of the question.—Smith v. Woodruff, Case No. 13,128a.

The plaintiff in a patent suit is entitled to costs (Act 1836, § 14), on a verdict in his favor, whether the recovery is nominal or compensatory, and regardless of the action of the court in respect to increasing damages.—Merchant v. Lewis, Case No. 9,437.

Where the patent is sustained, and infringement found, but only nominal damages are given on a reference, plaintiff is entitled to costs, except of the reference, report, exceptions, and hearing thereon.—Garretson v. Clark, Cases Nos. 5,248, 5,250.

Where a case is referred to a master, to ascertain complainant's damages and defendant's profits; and complainant's exceptions to the master's report are overruled, defendant will be allowed costs subsequent to the interlocutory decree, to be set off against complainant's costs up to such time.—Fisk v. West Bradley & Cary Mfg. Co., Case No. 4,830a.

Where the suit is brought in the name of the holder of the legal title for the benefit of an exclusive licensee, it will not be discontinued without the latter's consent, but the court may compel him to give security for costs.—Goodyear v. Bishop, Case No. 5,558.

Copies of patents, either that of the plaintiff or others, procured by the defendant, cannot be taxed as costs to the plaintiff.—Woodruff v. Barney, Case No. 17,986.

In a suit for infringement of a patent, models cannot be classed as "exemplifications," under Act Feb. 26, 1853.—Parker v. Bigler, Case No. 10,726.

In a suit for the infringement of a patent, copies of plaintiff's models and papers, which he is not obliged to produce, when obtained by defendant, are proper items of costs.—Hathaway v. Roach, Case No. 6,213.

Models of the invention described in the plaintiff's patent, and procured by the defendant in good faith, may be included in the taxation of costs, but not other models.—Woodruff v. Barney, Case No. 17,986; Hussey v. Bradley, Id. 6,946a.

The expenses for printing pleadings, testimony, and briefs, and of making drawings used on the final hearing, and of reporting arguments of counsel for the court, are not proper items of taxation, unless so stipulated.—Hussey v. Bradley, Case No. 6,946a.

Where, in taking an account of profits in a patent suit, plaintiff greatly exaggerated his claim, and introduced a large amount of irrelevant testimony, and recovered only a small sum, held, that each party should bear his own costs, and the compensation of the master should be paid equally by both.—Troy Iron & Nail Factory v. Erastus Corning, Case No. 14,198.

See, also, ante, §§ 120, 211.

XIII. DECISIONS ON THE VALIDITY, CONSTRUCTION, AND INFRINGEMENT OF PARTICULAR PATENTS.

§ 266. Original patents.

Alizarine: No. 95,465, and reissue No. 4,321, for artificial alizarine, produced from anthracene, held valid and infringed by article produced under patent No. 153,536.—Badische Anilin & Soda Fabrik v. Cochrane, Case No. 719; Same v. Cummins, Id. 720; Same v. Hamilton Mfg. Co., Id. 721; Same v. Higgin, Id. 722.

Amalgamating Pan: Patent to Belknap for improvements construed, and held not infringed. —Coolidge v. McCone, Case No. 3,186.

Armor: Heaton's patent of April 14, 1863, for improved defensive armor for ships and other batteries held void for want of novelty.—Webb v. Quintard, Case No. 17,324.

Bag Tie: No. 135,899, for improvement in ties for grain bags, held valid and infringed.—Foote v. Frost, Case No. 4,910.

Baling Press: No. 60,196, for an improvement, held valid and infringed.—King v. Louisville Cement Co., Case No. 7,798.

Bark Mill: Montgomery's and Harris' patent for an improvement in a mill for breaking and grinding bark held valid and infringed.—Wilbur v. Beecher, Case No. 17,634.

Barrel: No. 136,763, for improvement in head linings, held invalid for want of novelty.—Reed v. Reed, Case No. 11,650.

Base Ball: No. 127,098, for double leather covering, held invalid for want of invention.—Mahn v. Harwood, Case No. 8,966.

Bed: No. 97,375, for bedsprings, held invalid for want of novelty.—Woven Wire Mattress Co. v. Whittlesey, Case No. 18,058.

Bed: No. 191,244, for an improvement in spring-bed bottoms, held valid and infringed.—Ladd v. Tucker Mfg. Co., Case No. 7,974.

Beverage: A composition of certain materials in certain proportions for use as a table beverage, called "Birch Beer," held patentable. —Rogers v. Ennis, Case No. 12,010.

Beverage: Nos. 193,038 and 198,467, for improvement, consisting in a compound called "Birch Beer," held valid.—Rogers v. Ennis, Case No. 12,010.

Beverage: No. 193,476, for an improvement in syrups and mineral waters, held valid.—Bowker v. Dows, Case No. 1,734.

Billiard Table Cushion: No. 60,657 (reissued No. 3,323), for improvement, construed, and held valid and infringed.—Decker v. Griffith, Cases Nos. 3,724, 3,725; Same v. Grote, Id. 3,726.

Blind Slat: No. 199,948, for improvement in connecting, held infringed.—Whitman v. James, Case No. 17,579a.

Blower: Patent to Roots of July 27, 1869, for improvement in a rotary blower case, held valid and infringed.—Roots v. Hyndman, Case No. 12,040.

Boiler and Pipe Covering: Letters patent No. 55,598, granted June 19, 1866, to John Ashcroff, for "covering a steam boiler pipe or the heater with felt or other nonconducting material," is valid.—Chalmers Spence Pat. Nonconductor Co. v. Cramp, Case No. 2,573a.

Boiler and Pipe Covering: Nos. 108,055, 114,-711, and reissue No. 4,134, for improvement in compositions for covering, held infringed.—United States & Foreign Salamander Felting Co. v. Merrimack Mfg. Co., Case No. 16,789.

Boiler Furnace: No. 20,616, for improvement for burning wet fuel, held valid.—Bantz v. Elsas, Case No. 967.

Bolt: No. 48,555, for improvement in door bolt, held valid.—Stanley Works v. Sargent, Case No. 13,289.

Bonnet: No. 15,570, for improvement in machine for pressing, held not infringed.—Doubleday v. Bracheo, Case No. 4,018.

Such patent construed, and held to be infringed.—Doubleday v. Sherman, Case No. 4,-021.

Bonnet: No. 19,932, for an improvement in bonnet frames, construed and limited.—Kidd v. Spence, Case No. 7,755.

Boot and Shoe: Priority in arrangement of vibrating knives awarded to Richards.—Eames v. Richards, Case No. 4,240.

Boot and Shoe: A patent for cutting the soles of shoes by means of a cutting die mounted on a shaft held infringed.—Maynadier v. Tenney, Case No. 9,350.

Boot and Shoe: Priority of invention of an improvement in pegging machines awarded to Greenough. — Sturtevant v. Greenough, Case No. 13,579.

Boot and Shoe: Nos. 28,181, 39,546, 42,555, for improvements in machines for burnishing the edges of soles and heels of boots and shoes, held not infringed.—Sweetser v. Helms, Case No. 13,689.

Boot and Shoe: No. 49,572, for an improved mode of cutting soles, held invalid.—Walker v. Rawson, Case No. 17,083.

Boot and Shoe: No. 122,030 (reissued Nos. 6,098, 6,099), for improvements in the manufacture of moccasin boot and shoe pacs, held valid in part and infringed.—Kelleher v. Darling, Case No. 7,653.

Boot and Shoe: No. 127,090, for forming heel stiffeners, construed, and held not infringed. —Moffitt v. Rogers, Case No. 9,691.

Boot and Shoe: No. 127,964, for improvement in manufacture of soles and heels, held invalid.—Adamson v. Dedrick, Case No. 74.

Boot Tree: No. 14,951, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Eames v. Cook, Case No. 4,239.

Boot Tree: No. 170,462, for improved boot tree, held valid and infringed.—Cox v. Ramsdell, Case No. 3,305.

Boring Machine: No. 170,980, for improvement in machine for boring holes in boot trees, held valid and infringed.—Cox v. Ramsdell, Case No. 3,305.

Bottle Stopper: No. 23,263 (reissued No. 1,-606), for "improved bottle-stopper fastener," held valid, but not infringed.—Putnam v. Hickey, Case No. 11,480.

Bottle Stopper: No. 48,300, for improvement, held not infringed.—Hicks v. Moller, Case No. 6,461.

Bottles: A U-shaped movable wire fastener, extending over the top of the stopper, and connected with another wire surrounding the neck of the bottle, held not anticipated by a U-shaped movable fastener made of sheet metal, extending over the stopper, and connected with a sheet-metal strap around the neck of the bottle. —Putnam v. Weatherbee, Case No. 11,485.

Brace: No. 35,856 (reissue No. 4,187), and No. 73,279, for improvements in bit stocks and braces, held valid and infringed.—Miller's Falls Co. v. Ives, Case No. 9,599.

Brake: No. 8,552, for improvement in railroad car brakes, held valid.—Emigh v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., Case No. 4,448.

Brake: No. 9,109, for improvement in railroad car brakes, held valid and infringed.—Sayles v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., Cases Nos. 12,414, 12,415.

Brick Machine: Invention of improvement in, held patentable.—In re Wagner, Case No. 17,038.

Brick Press: No. 2,768, for improvement, construed.—Hall v. Wiles, Case No. 5,954.

Bridge: Sprague's invention held patentable. —Ex parte Sprague, Case No. 13,247.

Bridge: Linville's patent of 1862, and Linville's and Piper's patent of 1865, relating to the lower chord bars of truss bridges, held not infringed.—Keystone Bridge Co. v. Phoenix Iron Co., Case No. 7,751.

Bridge: No. 2,707, for an improvement in bridges, construed and held valid. — King v. Hammond, Case No. 7,797.

Bridge: No. 101,529, for an improvement in dies for making chord-bar heads, held void for want of novelty.—Smith v. American Bridge Co., Case No. 13,002.

Bronzing Iron: No. 40,964 (reissue No. 2,-355), for coloring iron in imitation of bronze, held valid and infringed.—Tucker v. Tucker Mfg. Co., Case No. 14,227.

Brush: No. 98,787, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Murphy v. Eastham, Case No. 9,949; Same v. Kissling, Id. 9,950.

Brush: No. 160,933, for improvement, held infringed.—Megraw v. Carroll, Case No. 9,393b.

Buckle: Patent May 26, 1863, is void for want of novelty.—Chase v. Sabin, Case No. 2,-627.

Bung: No. 87,163, for improved method of rendering wooden bungs impervious to liquids and gases, held valid.—Geier v. Goetinger, Case No. 5,299.

Burring Machine: No. 4,023 (reissue No. 1,-137), for improvement, held valid and infringed. —Parkhurst v. Kinsman, Case No. 10,757.

Bustle: The invention of Matthew Chambers for a framework for a skirt or bustle was not anticipated by the patent of Alexander Douglass, No. 17,082, nor by the English patent of Ozman, No. 20,513 of 1856.—In re Chambers, Case No. 2,581.

Button: No. 56,261, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Platt v. United States Patent Button, Rivet, Needle & Machine Mfg. Co., Case No. 11,222.

Button: No. 110,070, for improvement in attaching shanks, construed, and held not infringed.—Potter v. Thayer, Case No. 11,340.

Camera: Southworth's patent of April 10, 1855, reissued September 25, 1860, for plate holders, held valid.—Wing v. Richardson, Case No. 17,869. CONTRA, see Wing v. Schoonmaker, Case No. 17,870.

Camera: No. 12,700 (reissue No. 1,049), for plate holder for cameras, held valid and infringed.—Ormsbee v. Wood, Case No. 10,579.

Camera: No. 16,700 (reissued No. 2,311), for improvement in solar cameras, held valid and infringed.—Woodward v. Dinsmore, Case No. 18,003.

Candle: No. 12,492, for improvement in machines for making, held valid.—Stainthorp v. Humiston, Case No. 13,279. But see Thayer v. Wales, Case No. 13,871.

Canned Beef: Nos. 43,516 (reissued No. 6,-451), 149,276 (reissued No. 6,370), 161,848 (reissued No. 7,923), for canned meats, held invalid for want of novelty.—Wilson Packing Co. v. Clapp, Case No. 17,851.

Canned Corn: Nos. 34,928, 35,274, 35,346, and 36,326, for improvement in process of preserving green corn, held valid and infringed.—Jones v. Merrill, Case No. 7,481; Same v. Sewall, Id. 7,495.

Cannon: No. 13,927, for improvement in manufacture, held void for want of novelty.—Treadwell v. Parrott, Case No. 14,158.

Capstan: No. 63,917, for improvement in applying steam power to capstans, held valid and infringed.—McMillin v. Barclay, Case No. 8,-902.

Carburetter: No. 93,268, for improved apparatus for carburetting air, held valid and infringed.—Gilbert & Barker Mfg. Co. v. Tirrell, Case No. 5,417. CONTRA, see Gilbert & Barker Mfg. Co. v. Walworth Mfg. Co., Case No. 5,418.

Carding Machine: Patent to Goulding, with reissue and extension, for improvement in machinery for the manufacture of fibrous materials, held valid.—Jordan v. Dobson, Case No. 7,519.

Carpet Lining: No. 52,835 (reissued No. 4,-296), and No. 60,476 (reissued No. 4,066), for improvement, held to be infringed.—Fales v. Wentworth, Case No. 4,623.

Cartridge: No. 1,948, for machine for making cartridge cases, held infringed.—Union Metallic Cartridge Co. v. United States Cartridge Co., Case No. 14,369.

Car Wheel: Whitney's patent for an improvement in the process of manufacturing cast-iron railroad wheels held valid and infringed.—Whitney v. Mowry, Cases Nos. 17,592, 17,593, 17,594.

Car Wheel: No. 640, for improvement in mode of making cast-iron car wheels, construed.—Many v. Jagger, Case No. 9,055; Same v. Sizer, Id. 9,056, 9,057.

Car Wheel: No. 110,779, for improvement in casting car wheels, construed.—Needham v. Washburn, Case No. 10,082.

Caster: Blake's patent for improvement in, held valid.—Blake v. Smith, Case No. 1,502; Same v. Sperry, Id. 1,503.

Chain: No. 43,987, for an improved machine for stretching chains, held valid and infringed. —Hall v. Bird, Case No. 5,926.

Chain Link: No. 193,543, for an improvement in ornamental chain links, construed, and held valid and infringed.—Simmons v. Blackinton, Case No. 12,866.

Chair Seat: Reissue No. 7,203, for improvements in chair seats, held invalid.—Gardner v. Herz, Case No. 5,229.

Chewing Gum: No. 111,798, for improvement, held void.—Adams v. Loft, Case No. 61.

Circular Saw: No. 10,965, for clamps for circular saws, held valid and infringed.—Myers v. Duker, Case No. 9,989; Same v. Frame, Id. 9,991.

Circular Saw: No. 33,270 (reissued No. 1,456), for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Spaulding v. Tucker, Case No. 13,220.

Circular Saw Frame: No. 7,027, for improvement in hanging circular saws, held valid and infringed.—Lee v. Blandy, Case No. 8,182.

Clapboard: No. 10,903 (reissued No. 3,268), for an improved clapboard joint, held invalid for want of novelty.—Everett v. Thatcher, Case No. 4,578.

Clock: No. 84,517, for improved pallet of clock escapement, held invalid for want of novelty.—Terry Clock Co. v. New Haven Clock Co., Case No. 13,841.

Cloth: Nos. 10,986, 106,101, and 124,180, and reissues Nos. 5,004, 5,186, for improvements in cloth-cutting machines construed, and held not infringed.—Warth v. Browning, Case No. 17,209a.

Coal Car: Winan's patent held invalid.—Winans v. Eaton, Case No. 17,861.

Coffin: Patent to Fish, for a metal air-tight coffin, held valid and infringed.—Forbes v. Barstow Stove Co., Case No. 4,923.

Coffin Handle: Patent to Strong of December 14, 1869, for improvement in, held void for want of novelty.—Strong Mfg. Co. v. Meridan Britannia Co., Case No. 13,546.

Collar: No. 45,998 (reissued No. 2,034), for improvement in turn-down enameled paper collars, held valid and infringed.—Hoffman v. Aronson, Case No. 6,576; Same v. Stiefel, Id. 6,578.

Collar: No. 132,547, for a method of cutting collars from sheets of paper, etc., held void for want of novelty.—Snow v. Taylor, Case No. 13,148.

Column: No. 35,582, for an improvement in the construction of columns, shafts, braces, etc., construed, held valid, and infringed.—Reeves v. Keystone Bridge Co., Case No. 11,660.

Composition Covered Ring: No. 57,941 for improvement, construed, and held valid, and infringed.—Welling v. Rubber-Coated Harness Trimming Co., Case No. 17,382.

Cornsheller: No. 132,128, for improvement, held valid.—Adams v. Joliet Mfg. Co., Case No. 56.

Corset: No. 137,893, for an improvement in corsets, held void because of prior publication abroad.—Cohn v. United States Corset Co., Case No. 2,969.

Corset: No. 143,356, for corset clasp and cloth attachment, held invalid for want of novelty.—Seligman v. Day, Case No. 12,643.

Corset Skirt-Supporter: Nos. 22,532, 39,910, 39,911, 45,296 (reissued No. 4,831), 54,323, and reissue No. 2,654, for improvements, held valid and infringed.—Foy v. Hunter, Cases Nos. 5,017, 5,018, 5,019.

Corset Spring: No. 173,124 (reissued No. 7,729), for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Judson v. Bradford, Case No. 7,564.

Cotton-Bale Tie: No. 19,490, for improvement in metallic cotton ties, held valid.—Cook v. Ernest, Case No. 3,155. See, also, McComb v. Beard, Case No. 8,706; Same v. Brodie, Id. 8,708.

Cotton-Bale Tie: No. 59,144, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Johnson v. Fassman, Case No. 7,365. But see Johnson v. Beard, Case No. 7,371.

Cotton Cleaner: Hayden's improvement held patentable.—Ex parte Hayden, Case No. 6,256.

Cotton Cleaner: Nos. 18,742 and 29,971, for improvements, held valid and infringed.—Hayden v. Suffolk Mfg. Co., Case No. 6,261.

Cotton Press: Brooks' patent for improvment held void for want of novelty.—Wicks v. Stevens, Case No. 17,616.

Coupling Bumper: Bishop's invention of sliding block with V-shaped chamber, for guiding link, held not patentable.—In re Bishop, Case No. 1,439.

Cultivator: No. 4,459, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Tracy v. Torrey, Case No. 14,127.

Cultivator: No. 19,412 (reissued No. 1,515), for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Dennis v. Eddy, Case No. 3,794.

Cultivator: No. 22,859 (reissued No. 2,380), for improvement in cultivators, held void for want of novelty.—Sayles v. Hapgood, Case No. 12,420.

Cultivator: No. 55,630, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Dennis v. Eddy, Case No. 3,795.

Dam: No. 80,492, for improved portable and adjustable still-water dam, construed, and held not infringed.—Cammeyer v. Newton, Case No. 2,345.

Dental Plate: A dental plate made of celluloid held not an infringement of a patent for a vulcanite plate.—Goodyear Dental Vulcanite Co. v. Davis, Case No. 5,589. CONTRA, see Goodyear Dental Vulcanite Co. v. Preterre, Case No. 5,596.

Dental Plate: No. 43,009 (reissued No. 1,904), for improvement in artificial gums and palates, held valid and infringed.—Goodyear Dental Vulcanite Co. v. Gardiner, Case No. 5,591; Same v. Root, Id. 5,597; Same v. Smith, Id. 5,598.

Die: No. 68,446, for an improved die for swaging mattocks, hoes, etc., held not anticipated, and valid.—Konold v. Klein, Case No. 7,925.

Distilling Tub: No. 81,115 (reissued No. 3,612), for improvement in tubs for distilling essential oils, construed and limited, and held not infringed.—Van Marter v. Miller, Case No. 16,863.

Door: No. 9,765, for an improved door fastening, construed, and verdict returned for defendant on the questions of novelty and infringement.—Kittle v. Merriam, Case No. 7,857.

Door Knob: No. 2,197, for a porcelain knob, held invalid.—Hotchkiss v. Greenwood, Case No. 6,718.

Door Mat: No. 19,347, for cellular India-rubber door mat, construed, and held not infringed.—Brown v. Rubber-Step Mfg. Co., Case No. 2,028.

Dough: Invention of Treadwell for machine for making rolled dough held patentable.—Treadwell v. Fox, Case No. 14,156.

Dry Dock: Application for patent for pumping apparatus refused for want of invention.—In re Everson, Case No. 4,580.

Dust Deflector: No. 13,676, for an improved dust deflector for railroad car windows, construed, and held infringed.—Cook v. Howard, Case No. 3,160.

Egg Beater: No. 23,694, for improvement, construed, and held not infringed.—Monroe v. Dover Stamping Co., Case No. 9,714.

Ejector: No. 92,718, for improvement, held not infringed.—Scaife v. Fulton, Case No. 12,426.

Elastic: No. 9,653 (reissued Nos. 2,843, 2,844, and 3,014), for improvement in corded elastic fabrics, held void for want of novelty.—Smith v. Elliott, Case No. 13,041; Same v. Nichols, Id. 13,084. But see Smith v. Glendale Elastic Fabrics Co., Case No. 13,050.

Elastic Packing: Patent No. 3,579, granted August 3, 1869, for "improvement in the manufacture of elastic packing," includes only soft vulcanized rubber, and not hard rubber.—Clarke v. Johnson, Case No. 2,855.

Elastic Packing: No. 54,554 (reissued No. 3,579), for improvement, held valid and infringed. —Jenkins v. Johnson, Case No. 7,271.

Elevator: Patent to Tufts, of December 11, 1866, for improvement in elevator guides, held invalid for want of novelty.—Tufts v. Boston Mach. Co., Case No. 14,231.

Elevator: No. 25,061, for improvements in hoisting apparatus, construed, strictly, and held not infringed.—Tufts v. Boston Mach. Co., Case No. 14,231.

Elevator: No. 32,441, for improvements in the mode of suspending and operating elevators, held invalid for want of novelty.—Tufts v. Boston Mach. Co., Case No. 14,231.

Elevator: No. 60,442, for improvements in the mode of adjusting the length and tension of the ropes, held invalid for want of novelty.—Tufts v. Boston Mach. Co., Case No. 14,231.

Embroidering Machine: Nos. 83,909, 83,910, for improvement, held to be infringed.—Cornely v. Henderickx, Case No. 3,240.

Envelope: Manner of folding and pasting sides, held not patentable.—Arnold v. Pettee, Case No. 561b.

Ether: No. 4,848, for an improvement in surgical operations by the use of ether, held invalid. —Morton v. New York Eye Infirmary, Case No. 9,865.

Faucet: Jenkins patent of June 27, 1865, for a self-closing faucet, held valid.—Zane v. Peck, Case No. 18,200.

Ferrotype and Ferrotype Plate: Reissue No. 6,982, for improvement, held valid.—Hedden v. Eaton, Case No. 6,318.

Firearm: Cutting away obstructing portion of hinge of breach piece, quære, whether patentable.—Berdan Fire-Arms Mfg. Co. v. Remington, Case No. 1,336.

Firearm: Improvement in priming tubes, held to involve patentable invention.—In re Halsey, Case No. 5,963.

Firearm: No. 12,648, for improvement in repeating firearms, held valid and infringed.—White v. Allen, Case No. 17,535.

Firearm: No. 12,649, for improvement in repeating firearms, held infringed.—White v. Boker, Case No. 17,537.

Firearm: No. 16,797 (reissued No. 3,798), for improvement in breach-loading firearms, held valid and infringed.—Renwick v. Cooper, Case No. 11,701; Same v. Pond, Id. 11,702.

Firearm. No. 22,094 (reissued No. 3,946), for improvement, construed, and held valid and infringed.—Roberts v. Schuyler, Case No. 11,915.

Fire Engine: No. 1,980, for improvement, construed in a charge to the jury.—Ransom v. New York, Case No. 11,573.

Fireplace: No. 14,447, for improvement, held not infringed.—Dodge v. Card, Case No. 3,951.

Fish: No. 31,736, for improvement in the method of preserving, held void for want of novelty.—Piper v. Moon, Case No. 11,182.

Flour: Construction of patent granted to Oliver Evans for an improvement in the art of manufacturing flour.—Evans v. Eaton, Case No. 4,559; Same v. Hettick, Case No. 4,562.

Flouring Machine: The third claim in letters patent of February 27, 1849, for an improvement on a machine for separating flour from bran, is bad for uncertainty, and the fourth claim is bad as one to the legal result.—Carr v. Rice, Case No. 2,439.

Fruit Jar: No. 102,913, to John L. Mason, held invalid, the right to a patent having been lost by delay.—Consolidated Fruit Jar Co. v. Wright, Case No. 3,135.

Furnace: No. 12,678, No. 18,874, and reissue No. 446, for improvement in furnaces for burning wet fuel, etc., construed, and held valid.—Black v. Thorne, Case No. 1,465.

Furnace: No. 45,803, for improved method of desulphurizing and oxydizing metallic ores, held to interfere with No. 41,897, for improvement in stoves.—Gold & Silver Ore Separating Co. v. United States Disintegrating Ore Co., Case No. 5,508.

Furnace: No. 71,244, for improvement in hot-air furnaces, held valid.—Thatcher Heating Co. v. Carbon Stove Co., Case No. 13,864.

Furnace: No. 92,822 (reissued No. 7,254), for an improvement in hot-air furnaces, held valid, and infringed.—Flint v. Roberts, Case No. 4,875.

Gas-Burner: Walsh's invention of an improvement held patentable.—In re Walsh, Case No. 17,112.

Gas-Burner: First claim in patent granted June 14, 1870, for improvement in gas-burners, includes combination in patent granted July 26, 1870, to a prior inventor.—Clough v. Gilbert & B. Mfg. Co., Case No. 2,906.

Gas Meter: No. 12,535, for benzole vapor apparatus, held valid and infringed.—Munson v. Gilbert & B. Mfg. Co., Case No. 9,934.

Ginning Machine: Patent to Whipple for improvement held valid and infringed.—Whipple v. Middlesex Co., Case No. 17,520.

Glass Cutter: No. 91,150, for improved tool for cutting glass, held valid, and infringed.—Monce v. Adams, Case No. 9,705. CONTRA, see Monce v. Woodworth, Case No. 9,706.

Glove-Fastening: No. 155,077, for improvement, construed, and held not infringed.—Field v. De Comean, Case No. 4,765.

Glycerine: No. 11,766, for a process for producing fat acids and glycerine, held valid and infringed.—Tilghman v. Mitchell, Cases Nos. 14,041, 14,042, 14,043.

Grain Drill: No. 90,268 (reissued No. 3,976), for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Ingels v. Mast, Case No. 7,033.

Grain Separator: Patent of December 20, 1859, held valid.—Booth v. Parks, Case No. 1,648.

Gutta-Percha: No. 339, known as the "Grease Patent," held valid and infringed.—Poppenhusen v. Falke, Case No. 11,280; Same v. New York Gutta-Percha Comb Co., Id. 11,283.

Gutta-Percha: No. 10,741 (reissued No. 797), known as the "Tin-Foil Patent," held valid and infringed.—Poppenhusen v. Falke, Case No. 11,280; Same v. New York Gutta-Percha Comb Co., Id. 11,283.

Hair Net: No. 124,340, for improvement in ladies' hair nets, construed, and held void for want of novelty.—Dalton v. Jennings, Case No. 3,548.

Hand Stamp: No. 18,249 (reissued No. 4,675) for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Robertson v. Garrett, Case No. 11,924; Same v. Secombe Mfg. Co., Case No. 11,928.

Harness-Saddle Pad: No. 86,112, for improvement, held valid.—American Saddle Co. v. Hogg, Case No. 315.

Harvester: McCormick patent for the arrangement of the raker's seat construed, and held valid.—McCormick v. Seymour, Cases Nos. 8,725, 8,726.

Harvester: No. 15,044 (reissued No. 4,281), for improvement, held invalid.—Mann v. Bayliss, Case No. 9,034.

Harvester: No. 74,342, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Graham v. Gammon, Case No. 5,668.

Harvester Rake: No. 14,350 (reissued No. 2,982, and extended March 4, 1870), for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Dorsey Harvester Revolving-Rake Co. v. Marsh, Case No. 4,014.

Hat: Patent to Kendall and Trested, for compound for coating textile fabrics, held not infringed.—Baldwin v. Schultz, Case No. 804.

Hat: Patent to Noe of July 20, 1843, for sewing edges of braid together with horse-hair, held valid.—Noe v. Prentice, Cases Nos. 10,284, 10,284a.

Hat: No. 4,472 to Wells, and reissues to Burr and others, for improvement in making and hardening bats of wool or fur for hat bodies, construed, and held valid, but not infringed.—Burr v. Cowperthwait, Case No. 2,188; Same v. Duryee, Id. 2,190.

Such patent held infringed.—Burr v. Prentiss, Case No. 2,194.

Hat: No. 30,379, for improvement in curling hat brims, construed, and held to be infringed.—Doubleday v. Sherman, Case No. 4,022.

Hat: No. 33,978, for improvement in manufacture, held infringed.—Baldwin v. Bernard, Case No. 797. But, see Baldwin v. Schultz, Case No. 804.

Hat: No. 34,043, for improvement in men's hats, held valid and infringed.—Mallory v. White, Case No. 8,993.

Hat: No. 46,553 (reissued No. 3,217), for improvement in machines for stretching hat bodies, construed, and held valid and infringed.—Eickemeyer Hat-Blocking Mach. Co. v. Pearce, Case No. 4,312.

Hat Body: Application for patent for machine for making, rejected because of prior public use or sale.—Cowperwaithe v. Gill, Case No. 3,298.

Hayrake: No. 21,712, for improvement in, construed and held valid and infringed.—Brown v. Whittemore, Case No. 2,033.

Headlight: No. 35,122 (reissued No. 2,133), for improvement in locomotive lamps, held valid in part and infringed.—Williams v. Boston & A. R. Co., Case No. 17,716; Same v. Rome, W. & O. R. Co., Id. 17,735.

Hoop Skirt: Nos. 34,026 (reissued No. 1,518) and 37,124, for improvements in machinery for fastening clasps or spangles to the hoops and tapes of hoop skirts, held valid and infringed.—Wilcox v. Komp, Case No. 17,641.

Hoop Skirt: No. 74,672, for improvement in springs, construed, held valid and infringed.—Young v. Lippman, Case No. 18,160.

Horse Rake: No. 21,712 (reissued No. 2,994), for improvement, held to be infringed.—Edgarton v. Breck, Case No. 4,279.

Horseshoe: No. 17,665, for improved machine for making, construed.—Burden v. Corning, Case No. 2,143.

Hotel Register: No. 63,889, for an advertising hotel register, held valid and infringed.—Hawes v. Antisdel, Case No. 6,234; Same v. Cook, Id. 6,236.

Hydraulic Mining: No. 110,222 (reissued No. 5,193), for an improvement in hydraulic mining apparatus, held valid and infringed.—Fisher v. Craig, Case No. 4,817.

Hydraulic Power: Patent to Parker of October 19, 1829, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Parker v. Hatfield, Case No. 10,736; Same v. Stiles, Id. 10,749.

Hydrometer: Adams' improvement, held patentable.—Ex parte Adams, Case No. 38a.

India Rubber: No. 16, to Chaffee, covers both the process and the machinery used in carrying it on.—Day v. Union India-Rubber Co., Case No. 3,691.

India Rubber: No. 3,633 (reissued No. 156, and No. 1,085), for improvement in manufacture of India rubber fabrics, held valid and infringed.—Goodyear v. Beverly Rubber Co., Case No. 5,557; Same v. Providence Rubber Co., Id. 5,583.

India Rubber: No. 8,075 (reissued No. 556 and No. 557), for improvement in manufacture and product, held valid and infringed.—Goodyear v. Berry, Case No. 5,556; Same v. Blake, Id. 5,560; Same v. Evans, Id. 5,571; Same v. Mullee, Id. 5,577, 5,579; Same v. New York Gutta Percha, etc., Co., Id. 5,580; Same v. Rust, Id. 5,584; Same v. Wait, Id. 5,587.

Insulator: No. 65,019, for an improvement in insulating submarine cables, construed, and held valid.—Colgate v. Western Union Tel. Co., Case No. 2,995.

Iron Molding: No. 142,661, for an improvement for black-washing molds; No. 53,883, for improved molding and casting apparatus; and No. 37,037, for improved flasks for cast-iron pipes,—held not infringed.—Smith v. Marshall, Case No. 13,077.

Isinglass: No. 134,690, for improvement in manufacture, held invalid, the invention having been in public use for more than two years.—Manning v. Cape Ann Isinglass & Glue Co., Case No. 9,041.

Jail: No. 110,483, for an invention relating to the construction of jails, construed in a charge, and found infringed by the jury.—May v. Johnson County, Case No. 9,334.

Journal: No. 1,252, for improvement in boxes or bearings for journals or axles, construed in a charge to a jury.—Roberts v. Ward, Case No. 11,918.

Kettle: No. 8,589, for machine for making kettles and articles of like character from disks of metal, held valid.—Waterbury Brass Co. v. New York & B. Brass Co., Case No. 17,256.

Kindling Wood: No. 93,775, for improvement, held void.—Alcott v. Young, Case No. 149.

Knitting Machine: No. 99,426 and reissue No. 7,368, for improvements, held valid.—Franz & Pope Knitting Mach. Co. v. Bickford, Case No. 5,061.

Knitting Needle: No. 6,025, for improvement, held valid.—Aiken v. Dolan, Case No. 110.

Lamp: No. 13,286, for improvement relating to the attachment for securing the globe, held invalid.—Dennis v. Cross, Case No. 3,792.

Lamp: No. 20,159 (reissued No. 648), for improvement in lamps, held valid and infringed.—Jones v. Vankirk, Case No. 7,500.

Lamp: No. 30,381 (reissue No. 6,844), for improvement, held invalid.—Miller v. Bridgeport Brass Co., Case No. 9,563.

Lamp: No. 49,984, for improvement, construed as a combination of a burner and chimney, and held infringed by a sale of the burner alone.—Wallace v. Holmes, Case No. 17,100.

Lamp: No. 50,591, for hinged top, held valid. —Adams v. Illinois Mfg. Co., Case No. 54.

Lamp: Nos. 65,230, 73,012, 86,549, 89,770, and 99,443, for improvement in lamps and lanterns, held valid and infringed.—Irwin v. Dane, Case No. 7,082.

Last: No. 36,495, for an improvement in shoe-lasts, construed to be for a specific device, not a combination, and held infringed.—Mabie v. Haskell, Case No. 8,653.

Lathe: Blanchard's patent for a machine for turning irregular forms construed, and held to be infringed.—Blanchard v. Eldridge, Case No. 1,509; Same v. Reeves, Id. 1,515.

Lathe: No. 10,204, for machine for turning and cutting irregular forms, held valid and infringed.—Gear v. Grosvenor, Case No. 5,291.

Lathe: No. 23,957, for improvement in lathes for turning irregular forms; held invalid for want of novelty.—Spring v. Packard, Case No. 13,260.

Lathe: No. 53,003, for improvement, construed, and held valid and infringed.—American Whip Co. v. Lombard, Case No. 319.

Lead Pencil: No. 36,854 (reissued No. 3,863), for combination of the lead and an India-rubber eraser in the same sheath, construed, limited, and held not infringed.—Reckendorfer v. Faber, Case No. 11,625.

Leather: Woodman's patent of March 29, 1864, for an improved machine for ornamenting leather, held valid and infringed.—Woodman v. Stimpson, Case No. 17,979; Woodman Pebbling Mach. Co. v. Guild, Id. 17,981.

Leather Dressing: No. 83,925, for improved bronze dressing, held valid and infringed.—Cahill v. Beckford, Case No. 2,290; Same v. Brown, Id. 2,291.

Level: The invention of Thomas A. Chandler for a level (patent No. 17,023) possesses patentable novelty, and is prior to the invention for which the patent No. 7,263 was granted to William G. Ladd, and to the invention for which Samuel Reed applied for a patent.—Chandler v. Ladd, Case No. 2,593.

Level: No. 39,906, for improvement, held void, as containing too broad a claim.—Stanley Rule & Level Co. v. Davis, Case No. 13,288.

Lock: Sherwood's patent for double-faced door locks held valid.—Livingston v. Jones, Case No. 8,413.

Lock: No. 16,676, for improved keeper for right and left hand door locks, held valid and infringed by Patterson's patent.—Adams v. Jones, Case No. 57.

Lock: No. 32,331 (reissued No. 4,170), for improvement in locks, held valid and infringed. —Yale & G. Mfg. Co. v. North, Case No. 18,123.

Lock: No. 35,030, for improvement, construed, and held not infringed.—Miller v. Smith, Case No. 9,589.

Lock and Latch: Claims of reissued patent granted to Charles A. Miller, January 27, 1863, for improvement in locks and latches, so construed as to relieve the objection that they claim results or effects.—Coffin v. Ogden, Case No. 2,950.

Lock and Latch: No. 72,946, for improvements in reversible locks and latches, held valid and infringed.—Russell & Erwin Mfg. Co. v. Mallory, Case No. 12,166; Same v. P. & F. Corbin Mfg. Co., Id. 12,167.

Locomotive: No. 34,377, for "improvement in trucks for locomotives," construed, and held valid and infringed.—Locomotive Engine Safety Truck Co. v. Erie Ry. Co., Case No. 8,452; Same v. Pennsylvania R. Co., Id. 8,453.

Loom: No. 6,936, for improvement in looms for weaving figured fabrics, held not infringed. —Crompton v. Bellknap Mills, Case No. 18,285.

Loom: No. 130,961, for improvement, held infringed.—Webster v. New Brunswick Carpet Co., Case No. 17,337. Such patent held invalid.—Webster Loom Co. v. Higgins, Case No. 17,342.

Lubricating Machinery: No. 36,603, for improvements in machinery for oiling or lubricating wool or other fibrous materials, held valid and infringed.—Harwood v. Mill River Woolen Mfg. Co., Case No. 6,187.

Lubricating Oil Can: Device for opening and closing spout held patentable.—Ex parte Arthur, Case No. 563a.

Lubricator: No. 79,279, for improvement, held valid.—Pelton v. Waters, Case No. 10,913.

Machine for Splitting Wood: No. 12,857, construed, and held infringed.—Conover v. Dohrman, Case No. 3,120; Same v. Rapp, Id. 3,124; Same v. Roach, Id. 3,125. But see Johnson v. Onion, Case No. 7,401.

Matches: Phillips' patent of 1836, for improvement, held valid.—Bryan v. Stevens, Case No. 2,066a.

Matches: No. 68, for improvements in the mode of manufacturing friction matches, construed broadly, and held infringed.—Ryan v. Goodwin, Case No. 12,186.

Meat: No. 12,530, for improvement in processes for curing, held valid.—Pike v. Potter, Case No. 11,162.

Metal: No. 35,842 (reissued No. 1,651), for an apparatus for recovering gold and silver from waste solutions, held invalid.—Shaw & Wilcox Co. v. Lovejoy, Case No. 12,727.

Metallic Packing: No. 5,767, for an "improved composition for metallic packing in steam engines," construed in a charge to a jury.—Matthews v. Skates, Case No. 9,291.

Metal Tool: Application for patent for casting tools with iron bodies and steel edges denied.—Collins v. White, Case No. 3,019.

Millstone: Hoyt's invention of improvement by uniting segments by molten metal held patentable.—Ex parte Hoyt, Case No. 6,804.

Mirror: Claim of patent granted July 27, 1869, for an "improved hand mirror," covers a mirror having two wires running from the body into the handle and concealed by cement, of which the handle and back are composed. Such patent held valid.—Clark v. Scott, Case No. 2,833.

Mirror: No. 92,942, for improvement, held not infringed.—Florence Mfg. Co. v. Boston Diatite Co., Case No. 4,882.

Mortising Machine: No. 10,422, for an improvement, construed, and held valid and infringed.—Smith v. Fay, Case No. 13,045.

Moulding: No. 74,068, for an improvement in machine for forming sheet metal mouldings, held valid and infringed.—Fischer v. Wilson, Case No. 4,812.

Nickel Plating: Nos. 93,157, 102,748, and 113,612, for improvements in the electro-deposition of nickel, held valid and infringed.—United Nickel Co. v. Anthes, Case No. 14,406; Same v. Harris, Id. 14,407; Same v. Keith, Id. 14,408; Same v. Manhattan Brass Co., Id. 14,410.

Nonexplosive Lamp: No. 57,245, to Beschke, held not infringed by Houchin's patent.—Ashcroft v. Hollings, Case No. 579.

Nut Making Machine: Patent No. 13,118 is entitled to priority over patent No. 8,427.—Carter v. Carter, Case No. 2,475.

Nut: No. 8,427 (reissue No. 666), and No. 13,118 and No. 8,322 (reissued No. 313), for improvement in the manufacture of nuts, held valid and infringed by machines described in Chisholm's patent of November 17, 1863, and Paton's patent of November 29, 1864.—Wood v. Cleveland Rolling-Mill Co., Case No. 17,941; Same v. Union Iron-Works Co., Id.

Oil: No. 90,284, for improved manufacture of heavy hydrocarbon oils, construed.—Merrill v. Yeomans, Case No. 9,472.

Oil Well: No. 59,936 (reissued No. 6,258), for improvement in method of increasing capacity, held valid and infringed.—Roberts v. Dickey, Case No. 11,899; Same v. Roter, Id. 11,912.

Paint Can: No. 24,748, for improvement, construed, and held valid and infringed.—Masury v. Anderson, Case No. 9,270; Same v. Tiemann, Id. 9,271.

Paper: Ames' patent construed and held infringed.—Ames v. Howard, Case No. 326.

Paper: No. 1,336, for a machine for making paper, found valid, and infringed, by the verdict of a jury.—Knight v. Gavit, Case No. 7,884.

Paper: No. 94,843, for an improved paper-pulp engine, held valid and infringed.—Rose v. Sibley Mach. Co., Case No. 12,051.

Paper: No. 134,105, for machine for uniting paper and cloth, held void for want of novelty.—Snow v. Tapley, Case No. 13,147.

Paper Bag: Notch in mouth to facilitate opening held not patentable.—In re Arkell, Case No. 531.

Paper Bag: No. 24,734, for improvement in machinery for making paper bags, held valid and infringed.—Union Paper-Bag Mach. Co. v. Pultz & Walkley Co., Cases Nos. 14,392, 14,393.

Paper Bag: No. 48,036, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Arkell v. J. M. Hurd Paper-Bag Co., Case No. 532.

Paper Bag: No. 49,951, for machine for making, construed, and held valid and infringed.—Union Paper-Bag Mach. Co. v. Newell, Case No. 14,390.

Parer: No. 10,078, for improvement in apple-paring machine, construed.—Sargent v. Carter, Case No. 12,362.

Paste: No. 52,779 for improved paste for bookbinders, construed, and held infringed.—Woodward v. Morrison, Case No. 18,008.

Patent Roller: Hutchinson's improvement held patentable.—Hutchinson v. Meyer, Case No. 6,957.

Pavement: Smith's invention of an improvement in iron pavements held patentable.—Ex parte Smith, Case No. 12,966.

Pavement: Tillman's invention held no infringement of Kirk's invention.—Ex parte Tillman, Case No. 14,050.

Pavement: No. 11,941 held infringed by Brocklebank's and Trainer's patent for improvement.—American Nicholson Pavement Co. v. Elizabeth, Case No. 311.

Pavement: No. 11,941 (reissues Nos. 1,583 and 2,748), for improved wooden pavements, construed, and held not infringed.—Nicholson Pavement Co. v. Hatch, Case No. 10,251.

Pavement: No. 121,544, for improvement in wooden pavements, held void for want of novelty.—Phillips v. Detroit, Case No. 11,100.

Pegging Machine: Nos. 9,947, 23,361, and 36,292 (reissues Nos. 3,533 and 3,517), for improved machine for pegging boots and shoes, construed, and held valid and infringed.—Gallahue v. Butterfield, Case No. 5,198.

Petroleum: No. 49,502, for improved process for purifying, held valid and infringed.—National Filtering Oil Co. v. Arctic Oil Co., Case No. 10,042.

Phosphoric Acid: No. 14,722 (reissued No. 2,979), for an improvement in preparing phosphoric acid as a substitute for other solid acids, held void as to certain claims, and valid and infringed as to others.—Rumford Chemical Works v. Hecker, Case No. 12,133; Same v. Lauer, Id. 12,135.

Photograph: No. 179,316, for improvement in making colored photographs on glass, held valid and infringed.—Irish v. Knapp, Case No. 7,063.

Photographic Shield: No. 21,829 held valid.—Gordon v. Anthony, Case No. 5,605.

Pin: Slocum's patent for "a machine for sticking pins into paper" and Howe's improvement defined, and held not infringed by Crosby's patented machine.—American Pin Co. v. Oakville Co., Case No. 313.

Pipe: No. 1,980, for machine for making lead pipe by pressure, held valid and infringed.—Tatham v. Le Roy, Case No. 13,760. But see Tatham v. Le Roy, Case No. 13,762.

Pitching Barrels: No. 42,580, for improved method of pitching inside of barrels, held valid and infringed.—Gottfried v. Bartholomae, Case No. 5,632; Same v. Phillip Best Brewing Co., Id. 5,633.

Planing Machine: Woodworth's patents held valid and infringed.—Brooks v. Jenkins, Case No. 1,953; Gibson v. Betts, Id. 5,390; Same v. Gifford, Id 5,395; Same v. Harris, Id. 5,396; Same v. Van Dresar, Id. 5,402; Olcott v. Hawkins, Id. 10,480; Pitts v. Edmonds, Id. 11,191; Sloat v. Patton, Id. 12,947; Smith v. Mercer, Id. 13,078; Van Hook v. Pentleton, Id. 16,851; Same v. Scudder, Id. 16,853; Same v. Wood, Id. 16,855; Wilson v. Curtius, Id. 17,800; Same v. Rousseau, Id. 17,832; Bloomer v. McQuewan, Id. 18,242.

Planing Machine: No. 32,904, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Stover v. Halsted, Case No. 13,509.

Planing Machine: No. 138,462, for improvement, held invalid, as having been anticipated.—Woodbury Patent Planing Mach. Co. v. Keith, Case No. 17,970.

Plastering Hair: No. 152,560, for a method of putting up plastering hair in convenient packages for sale and transportation, held void for want of invention.—King v. Frostel, Case No. 7,794.

Plow: Patent to Davis for improvement in moldboards construed, and held valid.—Davis v. Palmer, Case No. 3,645.

Plow: Prouty's patent for an improvement construed, and held not infringed.—Prouty v. Draper, Case No. 11,446.

Power: Parker's patent of October 19, 1843, for an improvement in the application of hydraulic power, construed in a charge to a jury.—Wintermute v. Redington, Case No. 17,896.

Preserving Jar: No. 97,920, for improvement, held valid.—Watson v. Cunningham, Case No. 17,280.

Printer's Galley: No. 60,151 (reissued No. 6,326), for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Hoe v. Tuthill, Case No. 6,573.

Printing Press: Priority awarded for a device for stopping the impression without stopping the machine.—Ruggles v. Young, Case No. 12,122.

Printing Press: Award of priority to No. 22,611 for improvement.—Babcock v. Degener, Case No. 698.

Printing Press: Patent No. 98,087 is valid.—Child v. Boston & F. Iron Works, Case No. 2,675.

Puddler's Ball: A patent for a machine for rolling puddler's balls held to be for a process.—Burden v. Corning, Case No. 2,144.

Puddling Furnace: No. 153,110, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Pennock v. Beale, Case No. 10,940.

Pump: Patent awarded to Boardman for improvements.—Atkinson v. Boardman, Case No. 608.

Pump: No. 73,938, for improved apparatus for cleaning privies, held valid and infringed.—Odorless Excavating Apparatus Co. v. McCauley, Case No. 10,436.

Pump: Holly's patent, No. 87,413 (reissue No. 5,132), for a device for supplying city with water, held valid and infringed.—Holly v. Union City, Case No. 6,624.

Pump: No. 141,587, for improvement in pump valves, held valid and infringed.—Odorless Excavating Apparatus Co. v. McCauley, Case No. 10,436.

Pump: No. 155,670, for improvement in pumps for emptying cesspools, held valid and infringed.—Odorless Excavating Apparatus Co. v. McCauley, Case No. 10,436.

Pump Tube: No. 45,647 held void for want of novelty.—Shoup v. Henrici, Case No. 12,-814.

Rail: Nos. 9,703, 9,704, for invention of splice plate, held valid.—O'Reilly v. Smith, Case No. 10,566.

Rail: No. 15,687, for improvement in anvil or swage block for welding railroad bars, held valid and infringed.—Turrill v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., Cases Nos. 14,270, 14,271.

Railroad Car: No. 389 for improvement in mode of supporting bodies of cars, and connecting them with truck, construed, and held infringed.—Imlay v. Norwich & W. R. Co., Case No. 7,012.

Railroad Car: Winan's patent of October 1, 1834, construed, held valid and infringed.—Winans v. New York & H. R. Co., Case No. 17,-864; Same v. Schenectady & T. R. Co., Id. 17,-865.

Railway-Track Broom: No. 180,717, for improvement, held valid.—Isaacs v. Abrams, Case No. 7,095.

Reed Organ: No. 87,241, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Burdett v. Estey, Cases Nos. 2,145, 2,146.

Refrigerator: No. 13,803 (reissued No. 455), for improvement, held invalid for want of novelty.—Roberts v. Buck, Case No. 11,897; Same v. Ryer, Id. 11,913. CONTRA, see Roberts v. Harnden, Case No. 11,903.

Register: No. 76,646, for a conductor's register of fares and tickets, construed, and held not infringed.—Railway Register Mfg. Co. v. Highland St. Ry. Co., Case No. 11,535.

Revolver: No. 30,990, for an improvement, held valid, on proof of priority of invention over No. 28,951 (reissued as No. 1,268).—Smith v. Allen, Case No. 12,999.

Rocking-Chair: No. 1,531, for improvement, held invalid.—Bean v. Smallwood, Case No. 1,-173.

Rubber: Ayling's patent for improved treatment of caoutchouc held valid.—Ayling v. Hull, Case No. 686.

Rubbing Machine: Nos. 75,217 and 75,218, for an apparatus for exercise, held infringed by Wood's patent for an improved apparatus for treating diseases by mechanical movement.—Taylor v. Wood, Case No. 13,808.

Rubbing Machine: No. 77,933, for an oscillating rubbing machine for medical uses, held infringed by Wood's patent for an improved apparatus for treating diseases by mechanical movement.—Taylor v. Wood, Case No. 13,808.

Ruffle: No. 28,244, for improvement in manufacture, construed.—Magic Ruffle Co. v. Douglas, Case No. 8,948; Same v. Elm City Co., Id. 8,949.

Ruled Paper: No. 158,249 held invalid.—Cone v. Morgan Envelope Co., Case No. 3,096.

Saddle: The Dixon patent for improvement, held invalid.—Dixon v. Moyer, Case No. 3,931.

Safe: No. 3,117, for application of plaster of Paris, held valid.—Adams v. Edwards, Case No. 53.

Sand Cutting: No. 108,408, for improvement in cutting and engraving stone, metal, glass, etc., held valid and infringed.—Tilghman v. Morse, Case No. 14,044.

Sawmill: No. 51,310, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Hamilton v. Ives, Case No. 5,982; Same v. Rollins, Id. 5,988.

Screw Auger: No. 56,869, for improved machine for swaging the heads of screw augers, held valid and infringed.—Jennings v. Pierce, Case No. 7,283.

Screw Peg: No. 85,374, for a self-clinching metallic screw peg for fastening soles of shoes, held valid, but not infringed.—Estabrook v. Dunbar, Case No. 4,535.

Seat: Nos. 134,486, 163,537, for improvement in show and portable seats and circus seats, held not infringed.—Price v. Kelley, Case No. 11,413.

Seed Drill: Nos. 30,685, 31,819, for improvements, construed, and held not infringed.—Moore v. Thomas, Case No. 9,776.

Seed Planter; Patent No. 12,231 held not infringement.—Case v. Brown, Case No. 2,488.

Seed Planter: No. 26,410, for improvement, construed and limited, and held not infringed.—Trader v. Messmore, Case No. 14,132.

Seed Planter: Nos. 88,971, 91,144, for machines for sowing seed, held valid and infringed.—Holbrook v. Small, Case No. 6,595.

Sewing Machine: Anti-friction surfaces for thread held not patentable.—Ex parte Berry, Case No. 1,353.

Sewing Machine: Gibbs' automatic or self-feeder held not equivalent to Johnson's hand-feeder.—Gibbs v. Johnson, Case No. 5,384.

Sewing Machine: Priority awarded to Johnson over Gibbs for chain stitch.—Gibbs v. Johnson, Case No. 5,384.

Sewing Machine: Munson's claim for tucking gauge held anticipated by patent No. 11,-615.—Ex parte Munson, Case No. 9,933.

Sewing Machine: Patent to Robertson for improvement construed, and held valid and infringed.—Dibble v. Augur, Case No. 3,879.

Sewing Machine: No. 2,135, for improvement, construed, and held infringed.—Potter v. Braunsdorf, Case No. 11,321.

Sewing Machine: No. 4,750, to Howe, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Howe v. Morton, Case No. 6,769; Same v. Underwood, Id. 6,775; Same v. Williams, Id. 6,778.

Sewing Machine: No. 7,776 (reissued Nos. 345, 346), for improvement, construed, held valid and infringed.—Potter v. Davis Sewing-Mach. Co., Case No. 11,324; Same v. Holland, Id. 11,-330; Same v. Muller, Id. 11,334; Same v. Schenck, Id. 11,337; Same v. Whitney, Id. 11,-341; Same v. Wilson, Id. 11,342.

Sewing Machine: No. 10,597 (reissued No. 355), for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Johnson v. Root, Cases Nos. 7,410, 7,411.

Sewing Machine: No. 10,974 held not infringed.—Singer v. Wooster, Case No. 12,901a.

Sewing Machine: No. 16,030, for an improvement, construed, and held valid and infringed.—Singer v. Braunsdorf, Case No. 12,897.

Sewing Machine: No. 26,205, relating to braiding attachments, construed, and held not infringed.—Dibble v. Sibley, Case No. 3,883.

Sewing Machine: Nos. 28,633 and 40,084 (reissued No. 3,218), for improved tucker, construed, and held not infringed.—Fuller v. Yentzer, Case No. 5,151.

Sewing Machine: No. 29,785, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Haskell v. Shoe Mach. Mfg. Co., Case No. 6,194.

Sewing Machine: No. 37,033, for improvement in machines for filling and crimping, held valid and infringed.—Elm City Co. v. Wooster, Case No. 4,415.

Sewing Machine: No. 53,927, for an improvement for stitching the sweat cloths to hats, construed, and held valid.—Sanford v. Merrimack Hat Co., Case No. 12,313.

Sewing Silk: No. 173,125, for an improved method of putting up sewing silk, held void because of anticipation.—Knowlton v. Holland, Case No. 7,904.

Shade Roller: No. 11,638, for improvement in spring rollers, held valid and infringed.—Bray v. Hartshorn, Case No. 1,820.

Shears: No. 1,092, for improvement in tailors' shears, held valid and infringed.—Heinrich v. Luther, Case No. 6,327.

Sheep-Shears: No. 42,572 (reissued No. 5,701), for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Earle v. Harlow, Case No. 4,246.

Shingle Machine: No. 11,858, for improvement, construed, and held valid, but not infringed.—Evarts v. Ford, Case No. 4,574.

Shingle Mill: Patent to Earle of December 28, 1822, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Earle v. Sawyer, Case No. 4,247.

Shirt Cuffs: No. 56,737, for improvement in paper cuffs, held void in part and valid in part and infringed.—Union Paper-Collar Co. v. Van Deusen, Case No. 14,395.

Sieve: No. 106,597, held not infringed.—Adams & W. Mfg. Co. v. St. Louis Wire-Goods Co., Case No. 72.

Sizing Machine: No. 41,214, for machine for surface sizing fibrous materials, construed, and held not infringed.—Fuzzard Wadding Mfg. Co. v. Dickinson, Case No. 5,165.

Skirt: Doughty & Draper patent for woven skeleton skirts held valid.—Draper v. Moran, Kelly & Co., Case No. 4,070.

Skirt: No. 25,701 (reissued No. 870), for improvement in skeleton skirts, construed, and held not to be infringed.—Doughty v. West, Case No. 4,029. But see Doughty v. West, Case No. 4,028.

Skirt Hoop: No. 20,681, for improvement, construed, and held valid and infringed.—Doughty v. Day, Case No. 4,026.

Skirt Protector: No. 155,534 held valid against the defense of anticipation, and infringed.—MacDonald v. Blackmer, Cases Nos. 8,757, 8,758; Same v. Shepard, Id. 8,767; Same v. Sidenberg, Id. 8,768.

Soap: No. 118,440, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Eastman v. Hinckel, Case No. 4,256.

Soda-Water Apparatus: No. 40,811, for improvement, held valid.—Blaisdell v. Tufts, Case No. 1,491.

Speaking-Tube Whistle: No. 103,406, for improvement, held infringed.—Woolcocks v. Many, Case No. 18,024.

Speeder for Roving Cotton: No. 3,089, for improvement in, held valid and infringed.—Davoll v. Brown, Case No. 3,662.

Spelling Block: No. 59,603, for improvement in cubical blocks, held not infringed.—Hill v. Houghton, Case No. 6,493.

Spike: Burden's patent for improvements in machinery for making hook or brad-headed spikes, held valid.—Troy Iron & Nail Factory v. Erastus Corning, Case No. 14,195.

Stamp: No. 91,108, for an improved government revenue stamp, held valid, but not infringed.—Fletcher v. Selden, Case No. 4,866.

Stamper: No. 114,068, for improvement in machines for punching and stamping sheet metal, held null and void, and ordered to be canceled.—Sturges v. Van Hagen, Case No. 13,570.

Steamboat Staging: No. 31,147, for improvement, held to be infringed.—Converse v. Cannon, Case No. 3,144.

Steam Engine: No. 13,145, for improvements in packing for pistons or stuffing boxes, limited, and held infringed.—Tuck v. Bramhill, Case No. 14,213.

Steam Engine: No. 21,059, for a bed plate, construed, held valid and infringed.—Blandy v. Griffith, Case No. 1,529. See, also, In re Blandy, Case No. 1,528.

Steam Gauge Cock: No. 13,563, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Dalton v. Nelson, Case No. 3,549.

Steam Joint: No. 17,855, for rendering joints steam-tight, held valid and infringed.—Poillon v. Schmidt, Case No. 11,241.

Steam Regulator: Patents and reissue patent to Corliss, for improvements, construed, and held valid and infringed.—Corliss v. Wheeler & Wilson Mfg. Co., Case No. 3,233.

Stone Crusher: Blake's patent for an improved machine held not infringed by Hamilton's machine.—Blake v. Rawson, Case No. 1,499; Same v. Robertson, Id. 1,501.

But held infringed by machine constructed under Smith's patent.—Blake v. Robertson, Case No. 1,500.

Stone Crusher: No. 68,248, for an improved machine for crushing and washing stone and sand, held void for want of novelty and invention.—Smith v. Frazer, Case No. 13,048.

Stove: Barston's improvement held not anticipated.—Ex parte Barstow, Case No. 1,063.

Stove: Wilson's patent of October 10, 1834, for improvement, held invalid.—Wilson v. Janes, Case No. 17,811.

Stove: Patent for raising oven shelf by closing oven door held not to cover all methods of raising the shelf by closing the door.—Bridge v. Excelsior Mfg. Co., Case No. 1,859.

Stove: No. 1,157, to Buck for improvement, construed, and held valid and infringed.—Buck v. Gill, Case No. 2,080; Same v. Hermance, Id. 2,082.

Stove: No. 2,636, for an improvement in regulating the draft of stoves, construed in a charge to a jury.—Foote v. Silsby, Case No. 4,919.

Stove: No. 80,235, for an improved guard plate, held valid and infringed.—Stuart v. Shantz, Case No. 13,556.

Sugar: No. 37,548, for improvement in method of purifying and cleansing, construed in a charge to a jury.—Union Sugar Refinery v. Matthiesson, Case No. 14,399.

Suspender: Patent to Flagg, September 14, 1869, for an improvement in suspender ends, held valid and infringed.—Fisk v. Church, Case No. 4,826.

Suspender: Greeley's invention of an improvement, held to have been anticipated.—Ex parte Greeley, Case No. 5,745.

Switch: Littlefield's claim for an automatic railroad switch operated by an eccentric held to be entirely destitute of novelty and invention. —In re Littlefield, Case No. 8,399.

Syringe: No. 28,196, for improvement in enema syringes, held invalid.—Richardson v. Lockwood, Cases Nos. 11,786, 11,787.

Telegraph: Patents to Morse, Nos. 1,647 (reissues Nos. 79 and 117), and 4,453 (reissue No. 118), and 6,420, held to cover both the result and the process, and to be valid and infringed. —Morse v. O'Reilly, Case No. 9,859; Same & Bain Tel. Case, Id. 9,861.

Telegraph: The Morse patents of June 20, 1840, and April 11, 1846, and their reissues, for electro-magnetic telegraphs, construed, and held not infringed by the House patent of June 13, 1848.—Smith v. Downing, Case No. 13,036.

Telegraph: No. 42,842 (reissued, No. 3,335), for improvement in electro-magnetic telegraph, held void for want of novelty.—Day v. Bankers' & Brokers' Tel. Co., Case No. 3,672.

Telegraphy: Morse's claim (patent No. 6,420) for a new system construed, and held not to interfere with Bain's claim (patent No. 6,328).— Bain v. Morse, Case No. 754.

Thistle Digger: Boughton's invention held not anticipated by Hilton's invention.—In re Boughton, Case No. 1,696.

Thread: No. 26,415, for improvement in machines for winding thread on spools, held valid. —Willimantic Linen Co. v. Clark Thread Co., Case No. 17,763.

Threshing Machine: No. 542, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Pitts v. Wemple, Case No. 11,194; Same v. Whitman, Id. 11,196.

Tin Can: No. 71,680, for improvement in machine for manufacture, held void for want of novelty.—Barry v. Gugenheim, Case No. 1,061.

Tobacco: No. 140,020, for improvement in plug and bunch tobacco, held valid.—Eppinger v. Richey, Case No. 4,505.

Topsail Yard: No. 11,125, for "extra yards for topsails," held valid and infringed.—Howes v. Nute, Case No. 6,790.

Torpedo: No. 47,458, for improvement in explosive torpedoes in artesian wells, held valid.— Roberts v. Reed Torpedo Co., Case No. 11,910.

Towboat: Patent to John L. Sullivan for improvement held invalid for want of invention.— Sullivan v. Redfield, Case No. 13,597.

Traveling Bag: Nos. 56,801 and 83,212, for improvements, held valid and infringed.—Roemer v. Logowitz, Case No. 11,996; Same v. Simon, Id. 11,997.

Trunk: Vogler's patent for a removable hinged tray held infringed by Plumer's patent. —Vogler v. Semple, Case No. 16,987.

Truss: Patent to Hull, held valid and infringed.—Hull's Truss, Case No. 6,860.

Truss: No. 70,324, for a truss and supporter, held invalid for want of novelty.—Elastic Truss Co. v. Page, Case No. 4,325.

Tubing: No. 46,507, for improved flexible tubing for illuminating gas, held valid and infringed. —Taylor v. Archer, Case No. 13,778.

Type: No. 55,299, for improvement in the construction and manufacture of printing type, held not infringed.—Hudson v. Draper, Case No. 6,834.

Umbrella Case: No. 149,480, for improved machine for fixing metallic rings to umbrella cases, held valid.—Odiorne v. Denney, Case No. 10,431.

Umbrella Rib: No. 39,210, for improvement in tempering, defined and held valid and infringed.—American Mfg. Co. v. Lane, Case No. 304.

Valve: Patent to Jenkins, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Jenkins v. Johnson, Case No. 7,271.

Valve: No. 2,631 held not infringed.—Sickels v. Youngs, Case No. 12,838. But see Sickels v. Gloucester Mfg. Co., Case No. 12,841.

Valve: No. 4,199, for an improvement in cutoff valves, held valid and infringed.—Sickels v. Borden, Case No. 12,832; Same v. Falls Co., Id. 12,834; Same v. Rodman, Id. 12,836; Same v. Tileston, Id. 12,837. CONTRA, see Sickels v. Mitchell, Case No. 12,835.

Valve: No. 7,755 (reissued No. 255), for improved valves for governors, held valid and infringed.—Judson v. Moore, Case No. 7,569.

Valve: No. 102,187, for an improvement in stop valves for petroleum packages, construed, and held not infringed.—Meissner v. Devoe Mfg. Co., Case No. 9,397.

Vulcanizing Rubber: "Tin foil" and "oil" patents, for improved methods, held valid.—Coppenhusen v. Folke, Case No. 3,215a.

Vulcanizing Rubber: The description under letters patent No. 11,608 as a process for working over vulcanized rubber is in substance the same as the description in the reissue No. 3,531. —Carew v. Boston Elastic Fabric Co., Case No. 2,397.

Wagon Gearing: No. 16,648 (reissued No. 6,660), for improvement, held valid and infringed. —Halsey v. Garlick, Case No. 5,965.

Wagon Reach: No. 69,789, for improvement, held invalid for want of novelty.—Flood v. Hicks, Case No. 4,877.

Watch: No. 61,207 (reissued No. 4,334), for improvement in stem-setting watches, held valid and infringed.—Jurgensen v. Magnin, Case No. 7,586.

Watchmen's Time Detector: No. 40,048 and reissue No. 3,869, for improvement in, held valid and infringed.—Buerk v. Valentine, Case No. 2,109.

Watchmen's Time Detector: No. 48,048, for improvement in, held valid and infringed.—Buerk v. Imhaeuser, Case No. 2,106.

Water-Cooling Pitcher: Hebbard's invention, held patentable.—In re Hebbard, Case No. 6,314.

Water Wheel: Patent to Parker of October 19, 1829, for a percussion and reaction water wheel, construed, and held valid and infringed. —Parker v. Haworth, Case No. 10,738.

Water Wheel: No. 2,708, for improvement, held valid, but not infringed.—Rich v. Close, Case No. 11,757.

Weather Strip: Leach's invention of strips with flanged edges, for tacking against door or window frame, held to possess patentable novelty.—Ex parte Leach, Case No. 8,155.

Weaver's Temple: Priority of invention of improvement awarded to Jillson.—Jillson v. Winsor, Case No. 7,321.

Well: Tillotson's patent for an improved filter well, held invalid for want of novelty.—Tillotson v. Munson, Case No. 14,051.

Well: No. 42,126, for improved method of putting down and operating bored wells, held not infringed.—Haselden v. Ogden, Case No. 6,190.

Well: No. 49,129 (reissued No. 6,337) and No. 130,871, for improvement in well tubes or drills, held valid and infringed.—Rouse v. Fletcher, Case No. 12,087.

Well: No. 73,425 (reissue No. 4,372), held valid.—Andrews v. Carman, Case No. 371; Same v. Wright, Id. 382.

Well Tube: No. 65,648, for improved well tube, held invalid. Case No. 3,338 reversed.— Craig v. Smith, Case No. 3,339.

Wheel: No. 17,520 (reissued No. 4,116), and No. 61,900 (reissued No. 5,366), for improved carriage wheels, construed in relation to each other, and validity determined.—Sarven v. Hall, Cases Nos. 12,369, 12,370.

Whip: No. 60,606, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Strong v. Noble, Case No. 13,-543.

White Oxide of Zinc: Burrow's invention, of furnace for producing, held to have been anticipated by Wetherill's.—Burrows v. Lehigh Zinc Co., Case No. 2,207.

White Oxide of Zinc: No. 8,756, for improvement in manufacture, held invalid.—Jones v. Osgood, Case No. 7,487.

White Oxide of Zinc: No. 13,806, for process for making, held infringed.—Wetherill v. New Jersey Zinc Co., Case No. 17,463.

Wire Fence: No. 6,106, for an improvement, held not infringed.—New York Wire-Railing Co. v. Walker, Case No. 10,218.

Wood-Bending Machine: Blanchard's patent of December 18, 1849, reissued November 15, 1859; and Morris' patent of March 11, 1856, reissued May 27, 1862,—construed, and held to be for different machines.—Blanchard v. Puttman, Case No. 1,514.

Wood-Bending Machine: No. 14,405 (reissue No. 1,312), for improvement, construed, and held valid.—Morris v. Barrett, Case No. 9,827; Same v. Royer, Id. 9,835.

Wood Pulp: No. 17,387 defined, and held valid and infringed.—American Wood-Paper Co. v. Fibre Disintegrating Co., Case No. 320; Same v. Glen's Falls Paper Co., Id. 321; Buchanan v. Howland, Id. 2,074.

Wood Pulp: No. 21,161, for improvement in reducing wood to paper pulp, held valid and infringed.—Miller v. Androscoggin Pulp Co., Case No. 9,559.

Wood Pulp: Nos. 25,418 and 38,901 defined and construed.—American Wood-Paper Co. v. Fibre Disintegrating Co., Case No. 320.

Wringer Roll: No. 101,994 (reissued No. 5,-081), for an improvement in rubber rolls for wringers, held valid, but not infringed.—Forsyth v. Clapp, Case No. 4,949.

Yarn Coloring: No. 7,446 (reissue No. 217), for an improvement in apparatus for parti-coloring yarn, held not infringed.—Smith v. Higgins, Case No. 13,060.

§ 267. Reissue patents.

Adjustible Fastener: Reissue No. 4,870, for fish-plate fastening, held invalid, as being for a different invention than that described in the original patent.—Johnson v. Flushing & N. S. R. Co., Case No. 7,384.

Auger: Reissue No. 5,624, for an improvement in machinery for manufacturing curved or gauge-lip augers, construed, and held valid.—Bruff v. Ives, Case No. 2,050.

Billiard Table Cushion: Reissue No. 2,511, for improvement in, held to be for the process of making the cushion, and not for the cushion.—Collender v. Bailey, Case No. 2,998.

Such patent held to be infringed.—Collender v. Came, Case No. 2,999.

Boiler: Reissue No. 3,618 (original No. 93,-244), for feed-water heater and filter, held valid and infringed.—Stilwell & Bierce Mfg. Co. v. Cincinnati Gaslight & Coke Co., Case No. 13,-453.

Boiler: Reissue No. 4,467, for improvement in boilers for ranges, stoves, etc., held invalid.—Scaife v. Magens, Case No. 12,426a.

Bottle Machine: Reissue No. 5,903 held invalid for want of novelty.—Boston Elastic Fabrics Co. v. East Hampton Rubber-Thread Co., Case No. 1,675.

Brace: Reissue No. 6,350 (original No. 62,-232), for improvement in stocks or braces for bits and other tools, held valid and infringed.—Miller's Falls Co. v. Backus, Case No. 9,598.

Bracelet: Reissue No. 4,192, for improvement in plated metal bracelets, held valid.—Barclay v. Thayer, Case No. 978.

Buckle: Reissue No. 7,129 (original No. 61,-628), for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Schuessler v. Davis, Case No. 12,485.

Bung Bushing: Reissues Nos. 5,026, 5,027, held to be infringed.—Cornell v. Littlejohn, Case No. 3,238.

Bung: Reissue No. 5,937 (original No. 148,-747), held not infringed.—Pentlarge v. Pentlarge, Case No. 10,965a.

Carriage Body and Seat: Reissue No. 4,780, for improvement, held valid.—Comstock v. Sandusky Seat Co., Case No. 3,082.

Caustic Alkali: Reissues Nos. 2,569, 2,570, 2,571, for improvements in the manufacture and improved process of putting up, held valid.—Pennsylvania Salt Mfg. Co. v. Gugenheim, Case No. 10,954; Same v. Thomas, Id. 10,956.

Centrifugal Machine. Reissue No. 2,845 (original No. 63,770), for improvement in centrifugal machines for draining sugar and other substances, held valid and infringed.—Weston v. Nash, Case No. 17,454.

Chain: Reissue No. 5,774 (original No. 147,-045), for improvement in chains and chain links for necklaces, etc., held valid and infringed.—Mulford v. Pearce, Case No. 9,907.

Cheese Press: Reissue No. 5,256, for improvement in, held valid.—Boomer v. United Power Press Co., Case No. 1,638.

Chime Toy: Reissue No. 150,933, held valid.—Abbe v. Clark, Case No. 5.

Cigar Mold: Reissue No. 6,662 (original No. 155,806), for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Miller & Peters Mfg. Co. v. Du Brul, Case No. 9,597.

Circular Saw: Reissue No. 8,070, for improvement, held void as being for an invention different from the original patent.—Curtis v. Branch, Case No. 3,499.

Clothes Wringer: Reissue No. 2,829 (original No. 21,029), for improvement, construed as limited by prior patents, and held not infringed.—Metropolitan Washing-Mach. Co. v. Providence Tool Co., Case No. 9,507.

Clothes Wringer: Reissue No. 5,223 (original No. 61,680), for improvement, construed, limited, and held not infringed.—Metropolitan Wringing-Mach. Co. v. Young, Case No. 9,508.

Coal Scuttle: Reissue No. 3,438, for improvement in manufacture, held not infringed.—Habeman v. Whitman, Case No. 5,885a.

Collar: Reissue No. 1,646 (original No. 38,-961), held void for want of novelty.—Union Paper-Collar Co. v. Van Deusen, Case No. 14,-395.

Collar: Reissue No. 1,828 (original No. 11,376), for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Union Paper-Collar Co. v. Van Deusen, Case No. 14,395.

Collar: Reissues Nos. 1,980, 1,981 (original No. 23,771), held invalid for want of novelty.—Union Paper-Collar Co. v. Van Deusen, Case No. 14,395.

Collar: Reissue No. 2,309 (original No. 38,-664), for improvement in paper shirt collars, held void for want of novelty.—Union Paper-Collar Co. v. Van Deusen, Case No. 14,395.

Collar: Reissue No. 5,109 (original No. 11,-376), for improved shirt collar, held valid and infringed.—Union Paper-Collar Co. v. White, Case No. 14,396.

Collar and Cuff: Reissue No. 5,259 (original No. 23,771), for paper collars and cuffs, held void for want of novelty.—Union Paper-Collar Co. v. Leland, Case No. 14,394.

Corset: Reissue No. 6,100 (original No. 97,418), for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Thomson v. Jacobs, Case No. 13,982.

Corset Spring: Reissue to Barnes, for improvement, construed, and held valid and infringed.—Barnes v. Straus, Case No. 1,022.

Crucible: Reissue No. 6,166 (original No. 49,140), for improvement in the manufacture of plumbago crucibles, held void for want of novelty.—Pickering v. McCullough, Case No. 11,121.

Cultivator: Reissue No. 3,932, for improvement in, held valid and infringed.—Calkins v. Bertrand, Case No. 2,317.

Enameled Ware: Reissue No. 7,779 (original No. 177,953), for improvement in the manufacture of enameled iron ware, held valid and infringed.—St. Louis Stamping Co. v. Quinby, Case No. 12,240.

Explosive Compound: Reissues Nos. 4,818, 4,819, held to be invalid as for compounds where the original patent was for a process.—Giant Powder Co. v. California Powder Works, Case No. 5,379.

Explosive Compound: Reissue No. 5,799, for combination of nitroglycerin with an absorbent substance, held valid and infringed.—Atlantic Giant Powder Co. v. Goodyear, Case No. 623; Same v. Mowbray, Id. 624; Same v. Parker, Id. 625; Same v. Rand, Id. 626.

Firearm: Reissue No. 60 for improvement in locks, held valid.—Allen v. Sprague, Case No. 238.

Fire Extinguisher: Reissue No. 4,994 (original No. 88,844), for improvement, held void for want of novelty.—Northwestern Fire Extinguisher Co. v. Philadelphia Fire Extinguisher Co., Case No. 10,337.

Fire Gong: Reissue No. 6,831, for combination with fire-alarm gong, of attachment automatically releasing horses from stalls, held infringed.—Bragg v. San Jose, Case No. 1,803.

Flour: Reissue No. 4,712, for improvement in cooling and drying meal, held valid.—Herring v. Nelson, Case No. 6,424.

Flour: Reissue No. 5,841 for manufacture of new process by purification of "middlings" invalid as broader than original.—American Middlings Purifier Co. v. Atlantic Milling Co., Case No. 306.

Fluting: Reissue No. 3,000, for an improvement in fluting machines, construed, and held valid and infringed. — King v. Maudelbaum, Case No. 7,799; Same v. Werner, Id. 7,809; Kursheedt v. Same, Id. 7,947.

Fluting: Reissue No. 3,001, for an improvement in fluted puffing, held void for want of novelty. — King v. Werner, Case No. 7,809. CONTRA, see King v. Maudelbaum, Case No. 7,799.

Fly Trap: Reissue No. 6,493, for improvement, held valid and infringed. — Harper v. Cooke, Case No. 6,086.

Gate: Reissue No. 2,667, for improvement in farm gates, held invalid.—Wright v. McMillan, Case No. 18,083.

Glue: Reissue No. 4,072, for improvement in manufacture, held invalid for lack of invention.—Milligan & Higgins Glue Co. v. Upton, Case No. 9,607.

Grain Separator: Reissue No. 4,793, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Howes v. McNeal, Case No. 6,789.

Gutter: Reissue No. 6,675, for machine for making, held not infringed.—Buffum v. Oakland Mfg. Co., Case No. 2,113.

Hand Car: Reissue No. 5,274, for improvement, construed to cover combinations only, and not infringed by machine omitting an essential part.—Brown v. Hinkley, Case No. 2,012.

Harness: Reissue No. 5,155, for dies for finishing rubber coated mountings, held valid.—Albright v. Celluloid Harness-Trimming Co., Case No. 147.

Harvester: Reissues Nos. 72, 1,682, and 1,683, for improvements, held valid and infringed.—Seymour v. Marsh, Case No. 12,687. CONTRA, see Seymour v. Osborne, Case No. 12,688.

Harvester: Reissue No. 239, for improvements in reaping machines construed, and held not infringed.—McCormick v. Manny, Case No. 8,724; Same v. Seymour, Id. 8,727.

Harvester: Reissues Nos. 875, 877, 878, 879, 2,610, and 2,632, for improvement, held valid.—Wheeler v. Clipper Mower, etc., Co., Case No. 17,493; Same v. McCormick, Id. 17,499.

Harvester: Reissue No. 1,211, for improvements in combined harvesting machines, construed, and held void for want of invention.—Kirby v. Beardsley, Case No. 7,837.

Harvester: Reissue No. 1,262, for improvements in grain harvesters, as restricted to valid claims, held not infringed.—Kirby v. Dodge & Stevenson Mfg. Co., Case No. 7,838.

Harvester: Reissue No. 2,254 (original No. 37,630), for an improvement in harvesters, consisting in a raking and reeling apparatus, construed, and held not infringed.—Marsh v. Dodge & Stevenson Mfg. Co., Case No. 9,115.

Harvester: Reissues Nos. 2,608, 723, 724, 726, for improvements, held valid.—Aultman v. Holley, Case No. 656.

Harvester: Reissue No. 3,372 (original No. 19,377), for improvement, held valid.—Sprague v. Adriance, Case No. 13,248.

Harvester: Reissues Nos. 4,484, 4,672, and 4,673, for improvements in grass cutting and harvesting machines, held valid and infringed.—Ketchum Harvesting Mach. Co. v. Johnston Harvester Co., Case No. 7,741.

Hat: Reissue to Modena Hat Company for an improved fabric for hats, bonnets, etc., held not infringed.—Baldwin v. Schultz, Case No. 804.

Hat: Reissue No. 2,942, for machine for making hat bodies, held valid.—Wells v. Gill, Case No. 17,395; Same v. Jacques, Id. 17,399.

Such patent, held infringed.—Wells v. Gill, Case No. 17,393.

Such patent held not infringed.—Wells v. Hagaman, Case No. 17,396.

Hinge: Reissue No. 4,006 (original No. 53,251), for improvement in the mode of hinging covers to stoves and open-topped vessels, construed.—Perry v. Littlefield, Case No. 11,008.

Hook: Reissue No. 2,166 (original No. 21,879), for an improvement in self-mousing or snap hooks, held valid and infringed.—Middletown Tool Co. v. Judd, Case No. 9,536.

Horse Power: Reissue No. 1,322, for improvement, held not infringed.—Gray v. Hulshizer, Case No. 5,717.

Horse Rake: Reissues Nos. 1,912–1,915, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Hoffheins v. Brandt, Case No. 6,575.

Hose Coupling: Reissue No. 3,768, for improvement in, held void as for worthless invention.—Bliss v. Brooklyn, Case No. 1,546. CONTRA, see Bliss v. Gaylord Patent Coupling & Manufacturing Co., Case No. 1,547; Same v. Haight, Id. 1,548.

Such patent held infringed.—Bliss v. Gaylord Patent Coupling & Manufacturing Co., Case No. 1,547.

Hub: Reissue No. 5,366, for improvement in hubs of wagon wheels, held valid and infringed. —Hall v. Jones, Case No. 5,937.

India Rubber Shoe: Reissue No. 4,977 (original No. 111,962), for an improvement, construed, and held void for want of novelty.—Meyer v. Pritchard, Case No. 9,517.

Inking Roller: Reissues Nos. 1,771, 1,772, for composition for printer's inking rollers, held valid, but not infringed.—Francis v. Mellor, Case No. 5,039.

Kettle: Reissues Nos. 3,995, 3,996, for improvement in machine for making kettles, and improvement in kettles, held valid and infringed. —Waterbury Brass Co. v. Miller, Case No. 17,-254.

Knob Latch: Reissue No. 3,909, for improvement in reversible knob latches, held valid.—Norwalk Lock Co. v. Berger, Case No. 10,355.

Lamp: Reissue No. 325 (original No. 8,154), for improvement, held invalid for want of invention.—Sangster v. Miller, Case No. 12,320.

Lamp: Reissue No. 3,747, for devices for removing the globe, held invalid.—Dane v. Illinois Mfg. Co., Case No. 3,558.

Lamp: Reissue No. 7,417, for improvement in, held invalid.—Blackman v. Hibbler, Case No. 1,471.

Lamp: Reissue No. 7,511 (original No. 182,-973), for a combination of a transparent shade holder and shade to perform the functions of a chimney, held valid.—Schneider v. Jackson, Case No. 12,469. CONTRA, see Schneider v. Thill, Case No. 12,470a.

Lamp Chimney: Reissue No. 7,069, for an improved attachment, held valid and infringed. —Kerosene Lamp Heater Co. v. Littell, Case No. 7,724.

Lantern Deflector: Reissue No. 2,765 held void, as involving no invention.—Dane v. Chicago Mfg. Co., Case No. 3,557.

Lathe: Reissue No. 1,400, for machine for shaping irregular surfaces in wood, held not infringed by the machine patented to Oakes for cutting irregular forms.—Hale v. Stimpson, Case No. 5,915.

Locomotive: Reissues Nos. 5,050, 5,051 (original No. 120,637), for improvement in spark-arresters and consumers for locomotive engines, construed, and held valid and infringed.—Pike v. Providence & W. R. Co., Case No. 11,163.

Loom: Reissue No. 947, for an improvement in looms for weaving figured fabrics, construed, and held valid, but not infringed.—Crompton v. Belknap Mills, Case No. 3,406.

Loom: The second claim of reissue No. 5,150, held not void for want of novelty.—Carstaedt v. United States Corset Co., Case No. 2,467. But see Carstaedt v. United States Corset Co., Case No. 2,468.

Lubricator: Reissue No. 5,328, for an improvement, held anticipated by No. 111,881.—Siebert v. Garratt, Case No. 12,845.

Mattress: Reissue No. 2,092, for a spring mattress, held valid and infringed.—Kittle v. Frost, Case No. 7,856.

Mill: Reissue No. 3,794, for an improved smut mill and separator, construed, limited, and held not infringed.—Knox v. Murtha, Case No. 7,911.

Mitre: Reissue No. 3,445, for improvement in mitre machines, held valid, and infringed by a machine made according to the Hall patent of August 17, 1858.—La Baw v. Hawkins, Case No. 7,960.

Molding: Reissue No. 243 (original No. 5,575), for improvement in machinery for making, construed.—Serrell v. Collins, Case No. 12,672.

Mop-Head: Reissue No. 3,682 (original No. 22,990), for improved mop-head, construed, and held not infringed.—Taylor v. Garretson, Case No. 13,792.

Mowing Machine: Reissue No. 3,460, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Jackson v. Breck, Case No. 7,132.

Musical Instrument: Reissue No. 484, for improvement in reed musical instrument, held void, as broader than original.—Cahart v. Austin, Case No. 2,288.

Organ: Reissue No. 3,665, for tremolo attachment, held valid and infringed.—Hitchcock v. Shoninger Melodeon Co., Case No. 6,537; Same v. Tremaine, Id. 6,538. But see Saxe v. Hammond, Case No. 12,411.

Oven: Reissue to Ball, for improvements, held invalid as broader than original.—Ball v. Withington, Case No. 815.

Paint: Reissue No. 4,598 (original No. 40,515), for a paint to prevent the fouling of ship's bottoms, held valid, but not infringed.—Wonson v. Gilman, Case No. 17,933. But see Tarr v. Webb, Case No. 13,757.

Paint: Reissue No. 4,599 (original No. 40,515), for paints for ship's bottoms, held valid and infringed.—Tarr v. Folsom, Case No. 13,756; Wonson v. Peterson, Id. 17,934.

Paper Bag: Reissue No. 920 (original No. 17,-184), and No. 38,452, for improvement in machines for making paper bags, construed, and held valid and infringed in part.—Union Paper-Bag Co. v. Nixon, Cases Nos. 14,386, 14,391.

Pavement: Reissue No. 4,106, for Belgian pavement, held invalid for want of novelty.—Guidet v. Brooklyn, Case No. 5,858. CONTRA, see Guidet v. Barber, Case No. 5,857.

Pavement: Reissue No. 4,364 (original No. 105,599), for improved concrete pavement, held valid and infringed. — Schillinger v. Gunther, Case No. 12,456.

Pick: Reissue No. 6,951, for a method of forming the eyes of picks by drawing them down on a mandrel between rolling dies, which completely encompass the walls of the eye, held valid and infringed.—Klein v. Park, Case No. 7,868.

Plane: Reissue No. 6,498 (original No. 67,-398), for improvement, held valid and infringed. —Stanley Rule & Level Co. v. Bailey, Case No. 13,287.

Plough: Reissue No. 6,824, for improvement in attachments, construed, and held infringed.—Gale Mfg. Co. v. Prutzman, Case No. 5,191a.

Plug Tobacco: Reissue No. 7,362, for improvement, held invalid for want of patentable invention.—Lorillard v. Ridgway, Case No. 8,-511.

Powder: Reissue No. 2,769 (original No. 41,-097), for improvement in putting up powders, held void for want of novelty.—Sawyer v. Bixby, Case No. 12,398.

Pump Filter: Reissue of letters patent No. 5,804 are valid as to the first claim, but void as to the second claim.—Christman v. Rumsey, Case No. 2,704.

Pump: Reissue to Barker, for improvements in buckets for chain pumps, held infringed by buckets made under Stowe's patent.—Barker v. Stowe, Case No. 994.

Pump: Reissue No. 6,962, for improved apparatus for cleaning privies, held valid.—Odorless Excavating Apparatus Co. v. Clements, Case No. 10,437.

Railway Switch: Reissue No. 7,690, for improvement in safety railroad switches, held valid.—Cooke v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., Case No. 3,176.

Reaping Machine: Reissues Nos. 449, 450, 451, 742, 917, for improvements, held valid and infringed.—Hussey v. Bradley, Case No. 6,946; Same v. McCormick, Id. 6,948.

Reaping Machine: Ball held entitled to reissue of his reissue No. 832.—Ex parte Ball, Case No. 811.

Reflector: Reissues Nos. 3,826 and 3,827, for improved reflectors for gas lights, construed, and held valid and infringed.—Frink v. Petry, Case No. 5,128.

Register: Reissue No. 6,929, for improved fare register, held valid and infringed.—Railway Register Mfg. Co. v. Highland St. Ry. Co., Case No. 11,535.

Register: Reissue No. 7,120, for an improved fare register, construed, and held not infringed. —Railway Register Mfg. Co. v. Highland St. Ry. Co., Case No. 11,535.

Reservoir Cooking Stove: Reissue No. 5,435, for improvements, construed, and held infringed. —Bussey v. Wager, Case No. 2,231.

Rock Drill: Reissue No. 3,690, for improvement, construed, and held valid.—American Diamond Rock Boring Co. v. Sheldon, Case No. 296; Same v. Sullivan Mach. Co., Id. 298.

Roof: Reissue No. 2,684, for improved composition for roofing, held valid.—Plastic Slate-Roofing Joint-Stock Co. v. Moore, Case No. 11,-209.

Sash Lock: Reissue No. 6,693, for improvement, as construed, held not infringed.—Hopkins & Dickinson Mfg. Co. v. Corbin, Case No. 6,695.

Seat: Reissue No. 21, for improvement, held valid.—Allen v. New York, Case No. 232.

Seed-Hulling Machine: Reissue No. 1,299 held valid.—Birdsall v. McDonald, Case No. 1,-434.

But not infringed.—Birdsell v. Hagerstown Agricultural Implement Mfg. Co., Case No. 1,-436.

Seed Planter: Reissues Nos. 1,036–1,040 and 1,091–1,095 held invalid for want of novelty of invention.—Brown v. Selby, Case No. 2,030.

Sewing Machine: Reissue and extension of Bachelder, held infringed by machines constructed under reissues Nos. 346 and 414.—Bachelder v. Moulton, Case No. 706.

Sewing Machine: Reissue No. 1,562 (original No. 11,971), for improvement in relation to shuttle driver, construed, and held valid.—Parham v. American Buttonhole, Overseaming & Sewing-Mach. Co., Case No. 10,713.

Sewing Machine: Reissue No. 6,550, for improvements, held valid and infringed.—Thomas v. Shoe Machinery Mfg. Co., Case No. 13,911.

Shade: Reissue No. 2,756, to Hartshorn, for improvement in spring fixtures, construed broadly, and held to be infringed.—Hartshorn v. Almy, Case No. 6,166; Same v. Shorey, Id. 6,167; Same v. Tripp, Id. 6,168.

Shawl Strap: Reissue No. 4,289 held invalid for want of novelty.—Crouch v. Roemer, Case No. 3,437. CONTRA, see Crouch v. Speer, Case No. 3,438.

Skate: Reissue No. 7,151 (original No. 28,-495), for improvement in mode of fastening to the feet, held valid and infringed.—Turrell v. Spaeth, Case No. 14,269.

Skirt and Bustle Stiffening: Reissue No. 501 (original No. 17,602), for improvement, construed, and held not infringed.—West v. Silver Wire & Skirt Mfg. Co., Case No. 17,425.

Slide for Extension Table: Claim of reissue letters No. 40,317 examined and limited, and certain claims therein held not to show patentable invention.—Carter v. Messinger, Case No. 2,478.

Soda-Water Apparatus: Reissue No. 2,711, for improvement, held valid in part, and infringed by apparatus constructed under patent to Matthews, Oct. 3, 1865.—Bigelow v. Matthews, Case No. 1,401.

Spinning Machine: Reissue No. 6,036, for improvement in bobbins and spindles, held valid and infringed.—Pearl v. Ocean Mills, Case No. 10,876.

Spoon and Fork: Reissue No. 2,682, for improvement, held valid and infringed.—Grosjean v. Peck, Stow & Wilcox Co., Case No. 5,841.

Spring: Reissue No. 4,202 (original No. 10,-280), for an improvement in combined India rubber and steel springs, held valid and infringed.—National Spring Co. v. Union Car Spring Mfg. Co., Case No. 10,051.

Square: Reissue No. 5,408, for improvements in machinery for graduating carpenters' squares, held valid and infringed.—Hart, B. & M. Mfg. Co. v. Sargeant, Case No. 6,156.

Stamp: Reissue division A, No. 4,143, for an improvement in post-office postmarking and canceling hand stamps, held valid.—Campbell v. James, Case No. 2,361.

Steam Gauge: Reissue No. 4,775 (original No. 101,583), for improvement, construed, and held not infringed.—United States Steam-Gauge Co. v. American Steam-Gauge Co., Case No. 16,794.

Steam Safety Valve: Reissue No. 58,962, as properly limited, held not infringed by patent No. 58,294.—Ashcroft v. Boston & L. R. Co., Case No. 577.

Steam Valve: Reissue No. 1,260 (original No. 4,199), for an improvement in tripping cut-off valves, held void, because for a different invention than that of the original patent.—Sickles v. Evans, Case No. 12,839.

Stone Crusher: Reissue to Blake, January 9, 1866, for improved machine, held valid and infringed.—Blake v. Eagle Works Mfg. Co., Case No. 1,494; Blake v. Stafford, Id. 1,504.

Stove: Reissue No. 3,523, for improvement in self-feeding coal stoves, held valid and infringed.—Henderson v. Cleveland Co-operative Stove Co., Case No. 6,351.

Stove: Reissue No. 6,979, for improvement in base-burning stoves, held valid and infringed. —Detroit Stove Works v. Michigan Stove Co., Case No. 3,834.

Tan Bark: Reissue No. 1,922, for improved process of extracting, held invalid.—Bridge v. Brown, Case No. 1,857.

Such patent held not infringed.—Bridge v. Brown, Case No. 1,858.

Tin Can: Reissue No. 1,804 held not invalid as broader than the original claim.—De-Florez v. Raynolds, Case No. 3,742.

Trunk: Reissue No. 7,149, for improvement in corner clamps or protectors for trunks, held invalid for want of novelty.—Gould v. Ballard, Case No. 5,635.

Vault: Reissue No. 303, for an improvement in vault covers, construed, and held not infringed.—Lake v. Fitzgerald, Case No. 7,993.

Ventilator: Reissue No. 5,786, for a method of cooling and ventilating rooms, construed, and held valid and infringed.—Lyman Ventilating & Refrigerator Co. v. Lalor, Case No. 8,632. CONTRA, see Lyman Ventilating & Refrigerator Co. v. Chamberlain, Case No. 8,631.

Vulcanized Rubber: Reissued patent No. 3,-531 did not embrace the invention of Charles Goodyear for the manufacture of vulcanized India rubber.—Carew v. Boston Elastic Fabric Co., Case No. 2,397.

Weaver's Harness: Reissue No. 5,282, for an improvement in machines for making weaver's harnesses, held infringed.—Kendrick v. Emmons, Case No. 7,694.

Whip Socket: Reissue No. 4,071 (original No. 52,439), for an improvement in whip sockets, construed, and held not infringed.—Merriam v. Drake, Case No. 9,461.

Whip Socket: Reissue No. 5,400 (original No. 70,627), for improvement in whip sockets for carriages, held valid and infringed.—Searles v. Van Nest, Cases Nos. 12,587, 12,587a.

Whip Socket: Reissue No. 5,713 (original No. 43,858), for attachments for fastening whip sockets to carriages, construed, and held not infringed.—Merriam v. Van Nest, Case No. 9,462.

Window Screen, Adjustable: Reissue No. 52,726 held invalid as too broad.—Adjustable Window-Screen Co. v. Boughton, Case No. 81.

Winnower: Reissue No. 306 (original No. 6,545), for improvement, construed, and held valid only in part.—Sanders v. Logan, Case No. 12,295.

Wire Staple: Reissue No. 2,183 (original No. 19,747), for improvement in wire staples adapted for use in making window blinds or screens, held valid and infringed.—Rogers v. Sargent, Case No. 12,020.

Wood Pulp: Reissues Nos. 1,448 and 1,449, for improvement, held invalid.—American Wood Paper Co. v. Heft, Case No. 322.

Wringer Roller: Reissue of April 18, 1865, for improvement, held valid.—Bailey Washing & Wringing Mach. Co. v. Lincoln, Case No. 750.

§ 268. Design patents.

Cheese Safe: Design patent held void for want of invention.—Northrup v. Adams, Case No. 10,328.

Design for Handle of Table Spoon and Fork: Patent to Gorham and others held not infringed.—Gorham Mfg. Co. v. White, Case No. 5,627.

Sieve: Design No. 4,637, for flaring rim, held invalid.—Adams & W. Mfg. Co. v. St. Louis Wire-Goods Co., Case No. 72.

Stove: Design patent No. 7,456 held valid.—Perry v. Starrett, Case No. 11,012.

PAUPERS.

Action or defense in forma pauperis, see "Costs," § 10.

PAYMENT.

I. REQUISITES AND SUFFICIENCY.

§ 1, What constitutes payment. § 2, Medium of payment—In general. § 3, —— Notes or coin. § 4, —— Confederate bonds and notes. § 5, Acceptances, notes, and checks—Of debtor. § 6, —— Of third person.

II. APPLICATION.

§ 7, General rules. § 8, By debtor. § 9, By creditor. § 10, In absence of application by parties. § 11, Secured and unsecured debts. § 12, Principal and interest. § 13, Rights of sureties. § 14, Presumptions.

III. OPERATION AND EFFECT.

§ 15, Discharge of debt. § 16, Discharge of interest.

IV. PLEADING AND EVIDENCE.

§ 17, Pleading. § 18, Issues and proof. § 19, Presumptions—In general. § 20, —— Lapse of time. § 21, Admissibility and sufficiency of evidence—In general. § 22, —— Receipts. § 23, Province of court and jury.

V. RECOVERY OF PAYMENTS.

§ 24, Right to recover in general. § 25, Fraud. § 26, Mistake of fact. § 27, Duress. § 28, Taxes, license fees, and assessments.

See, also, "Accord and Satisfaction"; "Compromise and Settlement"; "Tender."
Amount, see "Sales," § 8.
By one partner, see "Partnership," § 27.
Part payment within statute of limitations, see "Limitation of Actions," § 25.
Payment into court in admiralty, see "Admiralty," § 66.
Rights of assignee in bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," § 197.
Subrogation on payment, see "Subrogation."
Suspension, as act of bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," §§ 79–87.
To trustees, see "Trusts," § 17.

Of particular classes of obligations or liabilities.

See "Bills and Notes," §§ 81–84; "Customs Duties," §§ 55–59; "Execution," § 22; "Insurance," §§ 164–166; "Judgment," §§ 73–78; "Taxation," § 11.
Bottomry bond, see "Shipping," § 126.
Costs, see "Costs," § 27.
—— in admiralty, see "Admiralty," §§ 150–153.
Freight, see "Shipping," § 187.
Lays or shares in earnings of vessel, see "Seamen," § 151.
Legacies, see "Wills," § 46.
Liens, see "Maritime Liens," § 38; "Mechanics' Liens," § 6.
Premiums for insurance, see "Insurance," §§ 17, 31, 85–87.
Price of goods sold, see "Sales," §§ 28, 32.
—— of land sold, see "Vendor and Purchaser," § 13.
Wages of seamen, see "Seamen," §§ 115–120.

I. REQUISITES AND SUFFICIENCY.

§ 1. What constitutes payment.

A simple contract debt is not extinguished by taking new security, unless so agreed, or the security is of higher nature.—The Betsy and Rhoda, Case No. 1,366.

Where a higher security is given by the debtor, the law presumes, prima facie, that it is intended as an extinguishment of the debt; otherwise where the security is the bond of a third person.—United States v. Lyman, Case No. 15,647.

Inclosing money in a letter deposited in a post office, for the purpose of paying a debt, held a payment, under the circumstances, though it never reached the creditor.—Selman v. Dun, Case No. 12,648.

A deposit by a debtor of a sum of money with a third person for his creditor, who assented thereto, or gave the depositary a new credit, will discharge the original debtor.—Swift v. Hathaway, Case No. 13,698.

A note against one partner held paid by agreement of other partner to credit its amount on a note which he held against the payee, where the proper credits were made in the firm accounts.—Gwathney v. McLane, Case No. 5,882.

A bank held a note for collection, and, before it was due, received a deposit of money from one of the makers to pay it. Held, that the note remained unpaid, where the bank failed on the day on which it fell due, where the money was not actually applied to its payment.—Hulburt v. Squires, Case No. 6,855.

§ 2. Medium of payment—In general.

The word "dollars," as used in a note made in the United States, means lawful money of the United States.—Stoughton v. Hill, Case No. 13,501.

"Lawful money" of any state is equivalent to United States money.—Cocke v. Kendall, Case No. 2,929b.

In estimating freight, expressed in dollars, on goods shipped to England, the pound sterling is to be reckoned at its mercantile value in dollars in England.—Jelison v. Lee, Case No. 7,256.

Under a stipulation for payment in New York of an amount expressed in English money, "at the current rate of exchange" for bills on London, the amount payable is not calculated in gold, but in currency, at the current rate of bills on London, with interest at the New York rate.—Hus v. Kempf, Case No. 6,944.

A creditor suing for a balance due on account, payable in a foreign country, is entitled to be paid at the rate of exchange.—Grant v. Healey, Case No. 5,696.

A balance of account, for advances made at Boston, upon goods consigned to the plaintiffs at Trieste, held payable at Boston, and to be estimated at the par, and not at the rate of exchange.—Grant v. Healey, Case No. 5,696.

Under an act authorizing the court to settle the rate of exchange, witnesses may be examined to prove such rate.—Bond v. Grace, Case No. 1,622.

A person indebted in a certain sum of British sterling gave a bond for the amount in sterling generally, payable in Ireland. Held to be construed British sterling, but to carry Irish interest.—Bushby v. Camac, Case No. 2,226.

New York creditors were given notes payable in Illinois for collection, to apply the proceeds in payment of their debts. Held, that Illinois currency received in payment thereof was to be applied only at its value in New York.—Howe v. Wade, Case No. 6,777.

A payment in bank notes issued without authority of the bank is not valid where the party paying knew that fact at the time.—Cassedy v. Williams, Case No. 2,501.

§ 3. —— Notes or coin.

Foreign charter to pay freight "in cash" on delivery in New York held to mean in specie.—Gladstone v. Chamberlain, Cases Nos. 5,469, 5,470, 5,471.

A decree for freight payable in sterling money will be for the amount of such money in gold and silver coin of the United States.—Forbes v. Murray, Case No. 4,928.

A contract to pay 1,000 pounds sterling, lawful money of Great Britain, agreed to be worth a certain sum "in the gold coin of the United States." is solvable only in gold coin.—The Edith, Case No. 4,281.

The recovery on such contract must be for so many dollars in gold and silver coin as are equivalent, at the rate agreed upon, to the pounds sterling.—The Edith, Case No. 4,281.

An express contract to pay in gold, made since the passage of the legal tender acts, is valid and enforceable.—The Edith, Case No. 4,281; The Emily B. Souder, Id. 4,454, 4,456.

On a shipment at St. John for a voyage to terminate in the United States for wages at "$25 per month," the seaman is not entitled to an amount in our currency equal to the value of the contract price here, if paid in the currency of St. John.—Trecartin v. The Rochambeau, Case No. 14,163.

Where a debt for advances to a vessel in a foreign port is contracted in gold, the decree against the vessel therefor will be for the amount in gold.—The Emily B. Souder, Case No. 4,454.

An agreement for payment of wages in pounds held to mean pounds sterling, and not the currency of the locality, which was greatly depreciated.—Quimby v. The Euphemia, Case No. 11,512.

Reservation in 1779 of an annual rent of £26, current money in Virginia, permits payments in paper money while current, but requires gold and silver afterwards.—Marsteller v. Faw, Case No. 9,137.

While a company may issue promissory notes, in the form of bank notes, in payment, they have no right to issue them for the purpose of putting them in circulation as a current circulating medium.—United States v. Ray, Case No. 16,124.

The principal of a ground rent is not a debt, within the meaning of Act Feb. 25, 1862, in relation to legal tenders of money.—Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Morrison, Case No. 11,089.

§ 4. —— Confederate bonds and notes.

Payment in Confederate bonds of a balance of account with the bank of North Carolina, accepted by the depositor, held valid.—Holleman v. Dewey, Case No. 6,607.

Where, in the absence of fraud, etc., Confederate money has been received in exchange for property, the federal courts will not interfere.—Bailey v. Milner, Case No. 740.

An executor who receives payment during the Civil War, in Confederate money, of a bond given before the war, if liable at all, is only liable for the value of the Confederate currency, as of that date.—Howland v. Kelly, Case No. 6,796.

Credit for payment in Confederate money for damages to land held should be scaled down to the gold value at the time, in computing the liability of the one receiving it.—Bigler v. Waller, Case No. 1,404.

Payment during the Civil War in Confederate money to an agent in the Southern states of a citizen of a Northern state does not discharge the debt.—Anderson v. Bank, Case No. 354.

Where funds in a bank belonging to an enemy are in Confederate notes, the payment under military authority may be made in Confederate notes.—Bank of Tennessee v. Union Bank of Louisiana, Case No. 899.

§ 5. Acceptances, notes, and checks — Of debtor.

The delivery and receipt of a promissory note of the debtor does not constitute payment, unless it appear that the creditor expressly agreed or intended to take the note as payment.—In re Ouimette, Case No. 10,622; Baker v. Draper, Id. 766; Maze v. Miller, Id. 9,362; Weed v. Snow, Id. 17,347; Risher v. The Frolic, Id. 11,856.

An indorsed note taken for an account, where it bears a higher rate of interest and the account is receipted as paid in full by the note, extinguishes the debt.—Risher v. The Frolic, Case No. 11,856.

A note given by an agent for goods sold to enable the seller to raise money at the bank, where no settlement is made, and the account is not receipted, will not be presumed to be in payment.—Hudson v. Bradley, Case No. 6,833.

In Massachusetts a negotiable note or bill of the debtor given for a pre-existing debt is prima facie evidence of payment.—Page v. Hubbard, Case No. 10,663; Palmer v. Elliot, Id. 10,690; Baker v. Draper, Id. 766.

Such presumption may be rebutted by circumstances showing that such was not the intention of the parties.—Page v. Hubbard, Case No. 10,663; Palmer v. Elliot, Id. 10,690.

Where notes are given for money due under a simple contract, the presumption in Massachusetts is that this was accepted as payment, in the absence of circumstances indicating a contrary intent.—Kimball v. The Anna Kimball, Case No. 7,772.

Whether the giving of promissory notes for money due under a charter party operated as payment is to be determined in a suit in admiralty in a federal court by the rule prevailing in the state where the transaction took place.—Kimball v. The Anna Kimball, Case No. 7,772.

If it be shown that a payment, acknowledged in a receipt, was by bill or note, which was not paid, then there is no payment.—Maze v. Miller, Case No. 9,362.

An indorsement on an account of "Rec'd payment," after accepting the negotiable note of one of two debtors, held prima facie evidence of payment.—Palmer v. Priest, Case No. 10,694.

An order payable out of a particular fund, and not negotiable, is not payment of a preceding debt.—Virginia v. Turner, Case No. 16,970.

§ 6. —— Of third person.
Taking a draft or note of a third person does not discharge the debt, unless it is received unconditionally as payment.—Slocomb v. Lurty, Case No. 12,949; Allen v. King, Id. 226.

Taking a bill of exchange is only prima facie evidence of a satisfaction and extinguishment of an antecedent debt.—Wallace v. Agry, Case No. 17,096.

A debt is discharged by the taking of a bill of exchange in payment, or in such manner as imports an intention to take the risk of the bill.—Brown v. Jackson, Case No. 2,016.

An accepted draft will not be considered in payment of an indorsed note, unless there was an express contract that it should be so received.—Cooper v. Gibbs, Case No. 3,194.

A bill of exchange is not payment of a preexisting debt unless paid or accepted as such, or the debtor sustain injury by the laches of the creditor receiving it.—Gallagher v. Roberts, Case No. 5,195.

A note taken from an indorser by his creditor operates to discharge the debt if the indorsee fails to demand payment and give notice of dishonor.—Allen v. King, Case No. 226.

A bill of exchange remitted to a creditor in payment of a debt will be considered as payment, where the amount of the bill is lost by the negligence of the creditor.—Roberts v. Gallagher, Case No. 11,902.

Goods consigned by an agent, with notice that they belong to his principal, are not paid for by the acceptance and payment of drafts drawn by the consignor on general account.—In re Baxter, Case No. 1,119.

Where notes of a third person are taken from a debtor upon an agreement that they shall be considered in payment, if collectible, the creditor is bound to use ordinary means and diligence to collect them.—In re Ouimette, Case No. 10,622.

The taking of negotiable notes from the debtor held no extinguishment of a mortgage which had been given to one partner to secure a debt due the firm.—Osborne v. Benson, Case No. 10,596.

An assignment of recognizances as security for a debt to be collected as the creditor may think proper is no bar to an action to recover the debt; otherwise when negotiable instruments are assigned.—Kemmil v. Wilson, Case No. 7,685.

II. APPLICATION.

In case of usury, see "Usury," § 13.

§ 7. General rules.
A debtor owing several accounts, who makes a payment, may appropriate the same as he pleases. Where he fails to make the appropriation, the creditor may make it; and, if neither makes it, the law applies it to the oldest item.—United States v. Bradbury, Case No. 14,635; Cremer v. Higginson, Id. 3,383; United States v. Wardwell, Id. 16,640.

Where the debtor omits to make the appropriation, the creditor may make it; if both omit it, the law will apply payments according to its own notions of justice.—Leef v. Goodwin, Case No. 8,207.

The officers of the treasury department have not the right to make application of payments against the will of the debtor or of his administrator.—United States v. Wardwell, Case No. 16,640.

In cases of running accounts, where debits and credits are made at different times, the payments are to be deemed as made towards items antecedently due in the order of time in which they stand in the account.—United States v. Wardwell, Case No. 16,640.

The case of the United States furnishes no exception to such rule.—United States v. Wardwell, Case No. 16,640.

§ 8. By debtor.
A bank must apply the proceeds of a note discounted by it as intended by the person offering it.—Bank of Alexandria v. Saunders, Case No. 852.

§ 9. By creditor.
A creditor holding several notes of his debtor has a right to apply a general payment equally to all the notes to protect them from the bar of the statute.—Jackson v. Burke, Case No. 7,133.

The creditor cannot elect to what debt to apply an indefinite payment, except where it is utterly indifferent to the debtor to which it is applied.—Gass v. Stinson, Case No. 5,262.

Where an appropriation is made by a receipt, it is prima facie made by the creditor.—United States v. Bradbury, Case No. 14,635.

Where the revenues of Spain were pledged to secure a loan, duties payable to the king of Spain, coming legally into the hands of the creditors, are properly applied by them to the liquidation of the loan.—King of Spain v. Oliver, Case No. 7,813.

§ 10. In absence of application by parties.
Where a payment is not applied by either party, the court will make the application according to the equities of the case.—Gordon v. Hobart, Case No. 5,608.

The right of appropriation exists only between the original parties. The assignee of the one making the payment cannot insist on a specific appropriation.—Gordon v. Hobart, Case No. 5,608.

Payments on running accounts, where there is no direction or application by the parties are to be applied to the earliest items.—Gass v. Stinson, Case No. 5,262; The A. R. Dunlap, Id. 513; Leef v. Goodwin, Id. 8,207.

Advances made on account generally will be applied to extinguish the amounts due on contracts completed in preference to those not completed.—McDowell v. Blackstone Canal Co., Case No. 8,777.

Application of payments in case of long-running account between parties of notes, acceptances, etc.—Whetmore v. Murdock, Case No. 17,510.

§ 11. Secured and unsecured debts.
Payments not applied by the parties will be appropriated in law to extinguishment of debt secured by lien rather than unsecured debt.—The Antarctic, Case No. 479. But see One Hundred and Fifty-One Tons of Coal, Id. 10,520.

An application of payments once made will not be varied so as to affect the liability of a surety.—Bank of North America v. Meredith, Case No. 893.

§ 12. Principal and interest.
Payments will be applied first to the interest of the debt.—Russell v. Lucas, Case No. 12,-156a.

§ 13. Rights of sureties.
A debtor cannot appropriate a payment in such manner as to affect the relative liability or rights of his different sureties, without their assent.—Postmaster General v. Norvell, Case No. 11,310.

Where a public officer has given different bonds with different sureties, his payments must be so appropriated as to give each bond credits for the moneys respectively due, collected, and paid under it.—Postmaster General v. Norvell, Case No. 11,310.

If a debtor of the government fail to make an application of payments, the government may do so. If both fail, the law will make the application, but it cannot do so to the prejudice of the rights of the debtor's sureties.—United States v. Linn, Case No. 15,606.

§ 14. Presumptions.
A payment by a partner to his private creditor, who is also a creditor of the partnership, will be presumed to be on his private account.—Gass v. Stinson, Case No. 5,262.

III. OPERATION AND EFFECT.

Effect to release surety, see "Principal and Surety," § 10.

§ 15. Discharge of debt.
A payment by a bank to military authorities of funds belonging to the enemy, under coercion, discharges the debt.—Bank of Tennessee v. Union Bank of Louisiana, Case No. 899.

Where an indorser paid the amount of the note, but by mistake another note by the same maker was surrendered to him, held that it was nevertheless a payment of the first note.—Maury v. Mason, Case No. 9,314.

The acceptance of a deed of land in payment of a debt bars an action for the debt; and, if the title be defective, the creditor must look to his warranty.—Miller v. Young, Case No. 9,596.

Where the payment of the principal is accepted, a separate suit will not lie for the interest, though the right thereto was expressly reserved in the receipt given.—Riley v. Maxwell, Case No. 11,838.

Payment will not be permitted in equity to operate as an extinguishment, as against those equitably entitled to substitution in place of the party receiving payment.—In re Foot, Case No. 4,906.

Payment is no ground of quashing the proceedings in a suit on the debt. — Bingham v. Wilkins, Case No. 1,416.

The acceptance of new security without full knowledge of the facts, or where induced by fraud or deceit, is not a discharge.—Baker v. Draper, Case No. 766.

§ 16. Discharge of interest.
After the plaintiff has received the principal debt, he cannot recover the interest in an action for principal and interest.—Potomac Co. v. Union Bank, Case No. 11,318.

A receipt given for the principal is no bar to a recovery of interest, where the question of interest is expressly reserved at the time.—Burr v. Burch, Case No. 2,187.

IV. PLEADING AND EVIDENCE.

§ 17. Pleading.
A plea of payment referring to the instrument sued on, as a "supposed writing obligatory," is nevertheless good, and those words may be rejected as surplusage.—Murphy v. Byrd, Case No. 9,947b.

A plea of payment admits all the allegations in the plaintiff's declaration, essential to support the action, and it is unnecessary for the plaintiff to prove them.—Archer v. Morehouse, Case No. 18,225.

§ 18. Issues and proof.
The letters and transactions between officers of the government and a debtor to the United States, relative to his account, may be given in evidence under a plea of payment.—United States v. Beattie, Case No. 14,554.

In an action against one of two sureties in a joint and several bond given to the United States, a discharge of the other surety by the president under Act March 3, 1817, cannot be given in evidence under a plea of payment.—United States v. Beattie, Case No. 14,554.

Upon the plea of payment to debt on a single bill, it is not necessary to produce the bill in evidence.—Turner v. White, Case No. 14,264.

In Pennsylvania, any evidence may be given, under a plea of payment, which proves that ex equo et bono the debt ought not to be paid.—Latapee v. Pecholier, Case No. 8,101.

Under a plea of payment, proof of a discontinuance of the suit is inadmissible; the alleged discontinuance should have been taken advantage of before making defense.—Latapee v. Pecholier, Case No. 8,101.

Bonds whose consideration had failed, previously assigned in payment of a debt, cannot be given in evidence on a plea of payment.—Wilson v. Hurst, Case No. 17,809.

§ 19. Presumptions—In general.
The presumption that negotiable security given for a pre-existing debt is in payment may be controlled by proof to the contrary.—The Betsy and Rhoda, Case No. 1,366.

§ 20. —— Lapse of time.
No presumption of payment from the lapse of time can be raised against the government.—United States v. Williams, Cases Nos. 16,720, 16,721.

A presumption of payment, arising from lapse of time, may be rebutted by accounting for the time, and showing the improbability of payment.—Hopkirk v. Page, Case No. 6,697.

The presumption of payment of a bond arising from lapse of time is not rebutted by the obligee's indorsement of a payment on account by work done, unless this was with the privity of the obligor.—Kirkpatrick v. Langphier, Case No. 7,849.

The presumption of payment of a mortgage debt arising after the lapse of 50 years, the original securities not being produced, and the mortgagor being in possession, is rebutted by proof that the mortgage debt has not been paid. —Burnham v. Hewey, Case No. 2,175.

A presumption of payment of a debt arises at common law after the lapse of 16 years. After the lapse of 20 years, the presumption is conclusive.—Didlake v. Robb, Case No. 3,899.

Payment of a bond is presumed in 20 years if no interest has been paid in that time. If a shorter period is relied upon, the presumption should be fortified by circumstances.—Goldhawk v. Duane, Case No. 5,511.

Payment must be presumed as to installments due on a bond after 20 years, and may be presumed after 19 years and 10 months.—Miller v. Evans, Case No. 9,569.

The equitable rule of limitation applied to bonds, where there has been no demand for 20 years, is a mere presumption of payment, not an absolute limitation.—Postmaster General v. Rice, Case No. 11,312.

The presumption of payment of a bond or note, arising from the lapse of 20 years, may be rebutted by circumstances.—Denniston v. McKeen, Case No. 3,803.

§ 21. Admissibility and sufficiency of evidence—In general.

The fact that a note was given and received in payment of an account may be shown by circumstances.—Riley v. Anderson, Case No. 11,-835.

Payment of an account held to be sufficiently shown by authority to another to settle it, followed by the rendition of an account by the creditor showing credit in full.—Bradley v. Richardson, Case No. 1,786.

§ 22. —— Receipts.

A receipt is prima facie evidence that the sum of money expressed in it was paid according to its tenor.—Vint v. King, Case No. 16,950; Findlay v. Vint, Id.; Allen v. Same, Id.; Sheffey v. Same, Id.

A receipt is only evidence of payment, and may be explained or contradicted by parol.—Weed v. Snow, Case No. 17,347.

Where a bill is receipted, "Received payment by note," the giving of the note must be treated as a payment thereof, in the absence of any evidence to qualify the receipt.—Drew v. Hull of a New Ship, Case No. 4,078.

The receipt of a bond of a third person "in part pay" of a precedent debt is conclusive evidence of payment to that extent, although the obligor was insolvent when the receipt was given.—Muir v. Geiger, Case No. 9,902.

A receipt of payment by a note is not conclusive, but only prima facie evidence of payment. —Moore v. Newbury, Case No. 9,772.

The words, "received in full payment" or "satisfaction," do not necessarily mean absolute satisfaction, when a note or other security is taken.—In re Hurst, Case No. 6,925.

§ 23. Province of court and jury.

The question whether a bill of exchange drawn upon a London firm, and payable in Paris, is to be governed in respect to the medium of payment by the French law, held to be a question for the jury.—Searight v. Calbraith, Case No. 12,585.

V. RECOVERY OF PAYMENTS.

See, also, "Money Received."

Recovery of insurance premium paid, see "Insurance," § 34.

§ 24. Right to recover in general.

Money paid on contracts expressly prohibited by law cannot be recovered.—McLean v. Lafayette Bank, Case No. 8,888.

Where, on payment of a debt, a bond was given to secure the obligee against a possible subsequent payment "on compulsion of law," and afterwards two suits were brought to recover the same debt, whereupon the obligee filed a bill of interpleader, and paid the sum into court, held a voluntary payment, not recoverable under the bond.—Massey v. Schott, Case No. 9,262.

§ 25. Fraud.

An action will lie at once for money advanced on a forged note.—Gibson v. Stevens, Case No. 5,401.

An action will lie for money fraudulently obtained on a note, before the note becomes due.—Gibson v. Stevens, Case No. 5,401.

§ 26. Mistake of fact.

Money paid by an agent under a mistake of the legal obligation of his principal may be recovered back by the latter.—United States v. Bartlett, Case No. 14,532.

The purchaser of a vessel, who has paid expenses of a previous voyage upon the master's order, under a mistaken expectation that he was to be reimbursed out of the freight, cannot recover them from the master.—Hodgson v. Butts, Case No. 6,564.

A person entitled to recover money paid under a mistake of fact must give prompt notice of the discovery of the mistake to the person to whom the money was paid.—United States v. Union Nat. Bank, Case No. 16,597.

The person to whom the money is paid is discharged from liability where he sustains damage in the loss of his remedy over against another, through the neglect to give notice of the discovery of the mistake.—United States v. Union Nat. Bank, Case No. 16,597.

The United States, suing to recover money so paid, is chargeable with such neglect equally with any other plaintiff.—United States v. Union Nat. Bank, Case No. 16,597.

An action by the United States to recover the amount of a draft paid upon a forged signature will not lie against the banker who innocently collected the same, after the lapse of six years. —United States v. Cooke, Case No. 14,855.

Money paid to purchase freedom by a person held in slavery abroad and remaining with his master after coming to the United States may be recovered back as paid without consideration. —Curranee v. McQueen, Case No. 3,488.

Where plaintiff pays money under a mistake of fact, he will not be allowed interest, both parties having acted in good faith.—Curranee v. McQueen, Case No. 3,488.

§ 27. Duress.

Assumpsit will lie for money extorted by duress of goods.—Tutt v. Ide, Cases Nos. 14,-275a, 14,275b.

A payment by an executor while in commitment upon a ca. sa., issued upon a judgment of a justice of the peace in an action against him, is under duress, and may be recovered back.—Foy v. Talburt, Case No. 5,020.

Real property is not under duress unless there be an illegal demand made against the owner, coupled with a present power or authority in the person making such demand to sell or dispose of the same if payment is not made as demanded.—Mariposa Co. v. Bowman, Case No. 9,-089.

A payment made by a shipper to a carrier at the place of destination of a rate in excess of that previously agreed, to obtain possession of the goods after the carrier's refusal to deliver them, is not voluntary, and the excess may be recovered back.—Tutt v. Ide, Cases Nos. 14,-275a, 14,275b.

Payments, without objection, of illegal exactions by government officials, cannot be recovered back.—Hamilton v. Dillin, Case No. 5,979.

Payments made by a person on the unlawful demand of the government, as a condition of being allowed to have goods deposited in his bonded warehouse (Act 1846), are voluntary, and cannot be recovered back.—Corkle v. Maxwell, Case No. 3,231.

A payment under protest of a half month's storage before the collector would allow goods, which had been entered for warehouse, to be landed for consumption, held voluntary, and could not be recovered back.—Irvin v. Schell, Case No. 7,072.

§ 28. Taxes, license fees, and assessments.

Payment to a public officer, if unaccompanied by oral or written remonstrance or protest, is voluntary.—United States v. Clement, Case No. 14,815.

A payment of internal revenue taxes, under protest, is not a voluntary payment, where both the collector and the party paying understand at the time that payment must be made, or the law will be enforced.—Shaefer v. Ketchum, Case No. 12,693.

Money paid for a license to carry on a business in a city which the city had no right to exact cannot be recovered back.—Washington v. Barber, Case No. 17,224.

See, also, "Internal Revenue," § 20; "Taxation," § 11.

PEACE.

Breach of public peace, see "Breach of Peace."

PEDIGREE.

Declarations as evidence, see "Evidence," § 41.

PENALTIES.

§ 1, Statutory provisions. § 2, Remission of penalties. § 3, Nature and grounds of action. § 4, Informers. § 5, Defenses. § 6, Jurisdiction. § 7, Pleading. § 8, Evidence. § 9, Trial. § 10, Costs. § 11, Decree and enforcement. § 12, New trial and arrest of judgment.

Breach of contract, see "Damages," § 7.
Cutting timber, see "Public Lands," § 8.
Engaging in slave trade, see "Slaves," § 4.
Nonpayment of tax, see "Taxation," § 18.
Relief against, see "Equity," § 7.
Taking usury, see "Banks and Banking," § 20; "Usury," § 19.
Under copyright law, see "Copyrights," §§ 16, 37.
—— mail contracts, see "Post Office," § 10.
Violation of customs laws, see "Customs Duties," §§ 109–122.
—— of election laws, see "Elections," § 12.
—— of embargo and nonintercourse acts, see "War," § 24.
——of gaming laws, see "Gaming," § 2.
—— of internal revenue laws, see "Internal Revenue," §§ 91–95.
—— of regulations as to carriage of passengers, see "Shipping," § 206.
—— of regulations as to patents, see "Patents," § 163.
—— of regulations relating to pilots, see "Pilots," § 13.
—— of regulations relating to seamen, see "Seamen," § 13.
—— of shipping regulations, see "Shipping," §§ 11–15.

§ 1. Statutory provisions.

Penal statutes strictly construed.—Andrews v. United States, Case No. 381.

The legislature cannot create an obligation or impose a penalty for an act which, when done, incurred no such liability.—Falconer v. Campbell, Case No. 4,620.

Construction of penal statutes, see "Statutes," § 32.

Repeal of statutes, see "Limitation of Actions," § 7; "Statutes," § 15.

§ 2. Remission of penalties.

The secretary of the treasury has no power to remit penalties, unless in cases provided for by law.—The Margaretta, Case No. 9,072.

"Prosecution," as used in the act for the remission of penalties, includes all the proceedings in a suit, as well before as after judgment, including the execution.—United States v. Morris, Case No. 15,816.

The certificate of a consul is evidence to remit a penalty due to the United States.—Brown v. The Independence, Case No. 2,014.

§ 3. Nature and grounds of action.

Actions for penalties, being founded upon the implied contract which every person enters into with the state to observe its laws, are civil actions, both in form and substance.—Stearns v. United States, Case No. 13,341.

Although, in the absence of an informer, the government may have judgment for the whole, yet this does not authorize the proceeding by indictment.—United States v. Tilden, Case No. 16,523.

A qui tam action is not the proper remedy where no part of the penalty goes to the party suing for it.—Washington v. Eaton, Case No. 17,228.

Where both a money penalty and imprisonment are prescribed as punishment for an offense, an action of debt will lie for the money penalty.—United States v. Foster, Case No. 15,142.

See, also, "Debt, Action of," § 1.

Abatement and survival of action, see "Abatement and Revival," § 5.

Election of remedies, see "Election of Remedies," § 2.

§ 4. Informers.

An officer who obtains information by the examination of witnesses compelled to testify before the grand jury is not the informer.—United States v. One Hundred Barrels of Distilled Spirits, Case No. 15,946.

An officer who acts on information furnished him by another officer intended to be given the government, and does not discover new facts by his own diligence, or who merely makes certain what was suspected, is not the informer.—United States v. One Hundred Barrels of Distilled Spirits, Case No. 15,946.

An assistant assessor of internal revenue held entitled to the informer's share, where he gives information, leading to the indictment and conviction of an offender, which he acquired of his own motion, while in the discharge of his official duties.—United States v. Chassell, Case No. 14,789.

It is only the giving of information which led to the seizure which entitles a person to a part of the penalty as an informer.—Brewster v. Gelston, Case No. 1,853.

It is only when the amount of the penalty has been recovered by judgment of the court that an informer is entitled to a moiety thereof.—United States v. One Hundred Barrels of Distilled Spirits, Case No. 15,946.

The penalty of a recognizance for the appearance in court of a defendant charged with a crime under Act March 2, 1799, is not a penalty recovered by virtue of such act, and the informer is not entitled to a share therein.—United States v. Fanjul, Case No. 15,069.

An agreement between informers to divide the informer's share equally is valid, and will be regarded by the court in distributing it.—United States v. Stockwell, Case No. 16,406.

Where a statute creates an offense, and affixes a specific pecuniary penalty, appropriating one-half thereof to the informer, it adopts by implication those remedies by which alone the informer can sue.—United States v. Tilden, Case No. 16,523.

A pardon remitting a penalty under the revenue law after judgment therefor operates to remit the moiety adjudged to the informer.—United States v. Thomasson, Case No. 16,479.

§ 5. Defenses.

Ignorance of the existence of penal statute forms no legal excuse for its violation.—The Ann, Case No. 397.

§ 6. Jurisdiction.
In suits for penalties incurred under Act Aug. 2, 1813, giving a moiety to the United States, and the other moiety to the collector or informer, the state courts have jurisdiction.—Stearns v. United States, Case No. 13,341.

The judiciary act of 1789, giving exclusive original cognizance to the district courts in cases of penalties incurred under the federal laws, is pro tanto repealed by Act Aug. 2, 1813, giving the state courts jurisdiction in certain cases.—Stearns v. United States, Case No. 13,341.

Jurisdiction of admiralty, see "Admiralty," § 34.
—— of federal district court, see "Courts," § 96.

§ 7. Pleading.
The complaint in an action by a private person must allege plaintiff's right to sue.—Briscoe v. Hinman, Case No. 1,887.

The complaint, in an action for a statutory penalty, must state that the act or omission alleged was contrary to the statute.—Briscoe v. Hinman, Case No. 1,887.

In an action on a statute, the party prosecuting must allege every fact necessary to make out his title and his competency to sue.—Ferrett v. Atwill, Case No. 4,747.

In debt on a penal statute the existence of the statute must be alleged as a matter of fact by a direct allegation.—United States v. Batchelder, Case No. 14,540.

A declaration describing two penal offenses in one count, where one penalty only is sought, is good after verdict.—Smith v. United States, Case No. 13,122.

A declaration in debt for a penalty describing the offense in the words of the statute held good after verdict.—Jacob v. United States, Case No. 7,157.

A declaration to recover a statutory penalty must demand a precise sum, although the statute declares that the penalty shall be "not more than" a sum stated.—United States v. Elliot, Case No. 15,043.

Where several acts are mentioned in the declaration, an allegation that "by force of said act," without designating the particular act, is not fatal on error.—Sears v. United States, Case No. 12,592.

Such declaration need not specify the uses to which the forfeiture inures, and an allegation in that respect may be stricken out as surplusage.—Sears v. United States, Case No. 12,592.

Declarations in penal actions are to be strictly construed, and they must negative all exceptions.—Smith v. United States, Case No. 13,122.

In an action for a statutory penalty, the declaration must conclude against the form of the statute.—Cross v. United States, Case No. 3,434; Sears v. Same, Id. 12,592; United States v. Babson, Id. 14,489.

Or with words of equivalent import.—United States v. Babson, Case No. 14,489.

A declaration for a penalty given by a single statute is good on error, although it concludes against the form of the "statutes."—Kenrick v. United States, Case No. 7,713.

A conclusion in a declaration of debt for a penalty under a statute "against the law in such case made and provided" is not a conclusion against the form of a statute, and is bad on error.—Smith v. United States, Case No. 13,122.

§ 8. Evidence.
An answer by one who is charged with a forfeiture under a law of the United States is not admissible against him in an action brought against him for a penalty under the same law.—Clark v. United States, Case No. 2,837.

§ 9. Trial.
On an issue found against defendant on plea of nil debet in an action of debt to recover a penalty given by the embargo act, the amount of the penalty is to be fixed by the jury.—United States v. Allen, Case No. 14,431.

Right to trial by jury, see "Jury," § 2.

§ 10. Costs.
A prosecutor liable for costs upon an indictment for a misdemeanor has no right to withdraw the prosecution without the consent of the attorney of the United States.—Virginia v. Dulany, Case No. 16,959.

§ 11. Decree and enforcement.
The record in a friendly action of debt for penalties after compromise of criminal proceedings for frauds on the revenue and an action for estimated duties is not conclusive of the rights of the parties, and the character of the fund.—In re Webster, Case No. 17,332.

Penalties may be enforced either by an execution against defendant's property or by capias; but where the sentence directs collection by execution a subsequent imprisonment under a capias is illegal.—In re Teuscher, Case No. 13,846.

§ 12. New trial and arrest of judgment.
A verdict in favor of defendant in an action to recover a statutory penalty will be set aside if contrary to the evidence and the law applicable thereto.—United States v. Fox, Case No. 15,155.

In a suit to recover a pecuniary penalty, the court has power to grant a new trial, although the verdict was for defendant.—United States v. Halberstadt, Case No. 15,276.

Where the declaration is defective in this particular, the judgment will be arrested on motion.—United States v. Batchelder, Case No. 14,540.

PENDENCY OF ACTION.

Effect as to property involved, see "Lis Pendens."

PENNSYLVANIA.

Grants of public lands, see "Public Lands," §§ 69-73, 77-80.

PENSIONS.

§ 1, Power to grant. § 2, Persons entitled. § 3, Officers—Bonds. § 4, Fraudulent payments. § 5, Offenses.

§ 1. Power to grant.
Under the constitutional authority to raise and support armies, congress has power to bestow bounties and pensions upon those who may engage in military service.—United States v. Fairchilds, Case No. 15,067.

§ 2. Persons entitled.
An adopted child is not entitled to a pension, but a legitimated child is entitled to a pension under Act March 4, 1814.—United States v. Skam, Case No. 16,308.

§ 3. Officers—Bonds.
Where, under a rule of the department, an accounting is required before a new bond of an officer is accepted, held, that the sureties on the old bond were liable where the officer resigned two days after the approval of the new bond, and before an accounting.—United States v. Haynes, Case No. 15,334.

§ 4. Fraudulent payments.
A town having notice of fraud in obtaining a pension which sues the pensioner for support as a pauper, and receives a portion of the pension money in compromise, is liable to the United States in an action for money had and received.

—United States v. Waterborough, Case No. 16,-648.

§ 5. Offenses.
Act July 4, 1864, §§ 12, 13, limiting the fees of pension agents and attorneys, and making it a misdemeanor to take any greater compensation, is constitutional.—United States v. Fairchilds, Case No. 15,067; Same v. Marks, Id. 15,721.

One collecting an excessive fee for services in procuring a pension under Act July 4, 1862, is not subject to the penalty prescribed by Act July 4, 1864, § 13.—United States v. Marks, Case No. 15,721.

Under the constitutional authority to raise and support armies, congress may make it an offense to detain from a military pensioner any portion of the sum collected in his behalf as his pension. —United States v. Fairchilds, Case No. 15,067.

Specification of elements necessary to be proved to convict one of withholding pension money. Rev. St. § 5485.—United States v. Howard, Case No. 15,400.

The mere fact that a banker or other person agrees to collect a pension check does not make him an agent for the prosecution of a pension claim, within the meaning of said section.—United States v. Howard, Case No. 15,400.

An agent is indictable under such act who withholds from a pensioner a pension granted under a later act.—United States v. Chaffee, Case No. 14,771.

Effect of repeals and re-enactments of pension acts as to the punishment of the offense of withholding pension claims allowed, stated.—United States v. Bennett, Case No. 14,570.

An indictment for retaining a greater sum than the statutory allowance for collecting a pension cannot be sustained where the amount was paid under a prior contract for services in causing to be removed from the rolls of the war department a charge of desertion.—United States v. Snow, Case No. 16,350.

The two acts of transmitting and presenting forged papers, etc., are not separate offenses, under Act March 3, 1823, to punish frauds against the United States.—United States v. Armstrong, Case No. 14,468.

PERJURY.

I. OFFENSES AND RESPONSIBILITIES THEREFOR.

§ 1, Statutory provisions. § 2, The oath. § 3, Nature of the proceeding. § 4, Jurisdiction of court or officer. § 5, Knowledge and intent.

II. PROSECUTION AND PUNISHMENT.

§ 6, Mode of proceeding. § 7, Indictment or information. § 8, Evidence. § 9, Trial. § 10, Sentence and punishment.

Ground of opposition to discharge in bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," §§ 586–588.

I. OFFENSES AND RESPONSIBILITIES THEREFOR.

Offenses against bankrupt laws, see "Bankruptcy," § 672.

§ 1. Statutory provisions.
The act of 1825 in relation to perjury, being a general law, applies to all subsequent cases which come within it.—United States v. Nihols, Case No. 15,880.

§ 2. The oath.
An oath to do a certain thing in the future cannot be the subject of a prosecution for perjury.—United States v. Glover, Case No. 15,218.

§ 3. Nature of the proceeding.
A state statute, punishing false swearing in "judicial proceedings," held applicable only to proceedings under the state laws.—Ex parte Bridges, Case No. 1,862.

Whether perjury committed on a hearing on a criminal complaint before a district judge is punishable under Act April 30, 1790, c. 9, § 18, query.—United States v. Clark, Case No. 14,-804.

An indictment for an act which does not constitute an offense under the laws of the United States is still "a suit, controversy, matter or cause pending," in which perjury may be committed. Act 1790.—United States v. Reese, Case No. 16,138.

Although the income tax act makes no provision for compelling a person to make oath to his return, yet, as it permits him to do so, intentional false swearing therein is perjury.—United States v. Smith, Case No. 16,341.

The secretary of war may prescribe the contents of affidavits by drafted soldiers claiming exemption from military service, and false swearing as to such facts is perjury. Act March 3, 1863.—United States v. Sonachall, Case No. 16,-352.

Perjury may be committed in an affidavit to an account for the purpose of getting it passed by the orphans' court.—United States v. Thomas, Case No. 16,475.

An oath administered by a commissioner to a person tendering himself for justification, as bail for a person committed by such commissioner to await the issuing of a warrant for his removal for trial, will support an indictment for perjury, though it does not appear that the deposition was used on the application for bail.—United States v. Volz, Case No. 16,627.

§ 4. Jurisdiction of court or officer.
To sustain an indictment for perjury, the oath must be administered by some one authorized. —United States v. Deming, Case No. 14,945.

An oath in a case required by law, taken before a deputy collector, may be the basis of an indictment for perjury.—United States v. Barton, Case No. 14,534.

An oath, not required to be administered by any law or rule of court, is not perjury, though administered under the usage of a ministerial officer.—United States v. Babcock, Case No. 14,-488.

Authority to a county clerk to swear petitioners resident in his county does not give him power to administer an oath to one who resides in another county.—United States v. Deming, Case No. 14,945.

Where an act expressly describes the kind of proof of compliance with its requirements, it is not competent for any officer of the United States to require new oaths, so as to make the false taking of them perjury.—United States v. Nickerson, Case No. 15,878.

§ 5. Knowledge and intent.
A false swearing from mistake is not perjury. —Anonymous, Case No. 475.

False swearing is committed by knowingly swearing falsely to any material fact, and not merely by rash or reckless swearing.—United States v. Moore, Case No. 15,803; Same v. Shellmire, Id. 16,271.

An affidavit to the existence of a fact does not import that the affiant has personal knowledge thereof, unless it is so stated, or the fact be of such a character that he must have personal knowledge.—United States v. Moore, Case No. 15,803.

Perjury, under Act 1823, may be either by swearing to a fact which the party knows is not true, or to his knowledge of a fact when he has not knowledge. An intent to defraud the government is not necessary.—United States v. Atkins, Case No. 14,474.

To constitute the offense of false swearing under the fisheries bounty act of 1813, there must be a willful and corrupt intent to swear falsely. —United States v. Smith, Case No. 16,336.

An indictment for perjury cannot be sustained under Act July 29, 1813, §§ 7, 9, granting bounties to vessels engaged in the fisheries, where the owner signs the certificate, and the agent swears to it.—United States v. Kendrick, Case No. 15,519.

A person cannot be convicted of perjury in swearing falsely to an income tax return, where it was not made with a corrupt intention, but with the honest belief that it was correct.—United States v. Smith, Case No. 16,341.

Where affiant stated the facts truly, and signed an affidavit on the advice of his lawyer, in whom he confided, that they were substantially the same therein, he is not guilty of perjury, though the affidavit be false.—United States v. Stanley, Case No. 16,376.

II. PROSECUTION AND PUNISHMENT.

Jurisdiction, see "Criminal Law," § 13.

§ 6. Mode of proceeding.

If the party purge himself on oath, the court will not hear collateral evidence for the purpose of impeaching his testimony and proceeding against him for the contempt; but, if perjury appear, he will be recognized to answer, etc.—United States v. Dodge, Case No. 14,975.

§ 7. Indictment or information.

An indictment for perjury alleged to have been committed on an examination of a person charged with a crime against a law of the United States should show what the particular crime was.—United States v. Wilcox, Case No. 16,692.

An indictment for perjury alleged to have been committed on an examination before C., "a commissioner of the United States, newly appointed," but not stating how, or by whom, or under what statute, or for what purpose such commissioner was appointed, is bad on demurrer.—United States v. Wilcox, Case No. 16,692.

The indictment should set out the name and official title of the officer before whom the oath was administered.—United States v. Wilcox, Case No. 16,692.

Act April 30, 1790, §§ 19, 20, do not dispense with the necessity of such averment.—United States v. Wilcox, Case No. 16,692.

The judgment will be arrested where the indictment fails to state the day upon which the trial took place, and on which defendant was sworn in the case in which the perjury was alleged to have been committed.—United States v. Bowman, Case No. 14,631.

The indictment should charge that the oath was false, and known to be so by the witness, and that the motive was corrupt.—United States v. Babcock, Case No. 14,488.

The materiality of the facts sworn to must appear in the indictment either by averment or by a statement of facts which show their materiality.—United States v. Cowing, Case No. 14,880; Same v. McHenry, Id. 15,681.

An indictment for subornation of perjury (Act March 3, 1825, § 13), averring that defendant did feloniously, knowingly, and willingly procure B. to swear falsely in the taking of an oath, etc., but not averring that B. knowingly and willingly swore falsely, is bad on demurrer. —United States v. Wilcox, Case No. 16,693.

An indictment for subornation of perjury must aver that defendant knew that the testimony which he instigated the suborned witness to give was false, and that, in giving such testimony, the witness would commit the crime of perjury. —United States v. Dennee, Case No. 14,947.

Where an indictment charges perjury at the circuit court held on the 19th day of May, and the record shows that the court was held on the 20th of May, the variance is fatal.—United States v. McNeal, Case No. 15,700.

§ 8. Evidence.

Papers filed by the prisoner to sustain the allegations contained in the original paper, if they tend to establish the charge made in the indictment as to guilty knowledge, will be admitted in evidence.—United States v. Gardiner, Case No. 15,186a.

The falsity of the oath, taken under the revenue laws, on which perjury is assigned, may be shown by the books and papers of the defendant.—United States v. Mayer, Case No. 15,753.

The affidavit of a third person is admissible to show what the prisoner swore to, where both affidavits were on the same sheet of paper.—United States v. Buete, Case No. 14,680a.

The prosecution must show that the oath was administered to defendant by the person named, that he had authority to administer it, that defendant was sworn in a matter where an oath or affirmation is required under the laws of the United States, and that defendant swore with a wicked and corrupt intent, willfully false in regard to the matters alleged to be untrue. Act March 3, 1825, § 13.—United States v. Coons, Case No. 14,860.

Where a witness testifies that he is well acquainted with the applicant, on an application to a state court for the naturalization of a foreigner, and it appears that he was a total stranger to the applicant, and volunteered as a witness, there is sufficient evidence to warrant a conviction of the witness on an indictment for perjury, under Rev. St. § 5392.—United States v. Jones, Case No. 15,491.

On an indictment for perjury, an affidavit of the defendant directly contradicting the one on which the perjury is assigned, is not sufficient evidence of the falsity of the latter.—United States v. Mayer, Case No. 15,753.

It is only necessary to prove so much of the testimony of the witness as relates to the particular fact on which the perjury is assigned. —United States v. Erskine, Case No. 15,057.

A copy of the record in the cause in which the perjury was committed, where the court is the same, need not be produced.—United States v. Erskine, Case No. 15,057.

The statements of defendant which are made the basis of a charge of perjury must be disproved by two witnesses, or by one witness and corroborating circumstances.—United States v. Coons, Case No. 14,860.

There need not be positive evidence that the paper was sworn to by the prisoner; it may be proved by circumstantial evidence.—United States v. Gardiner, Case No. 15,186a.

§ 9. Trial.

Whether a false oath was taken under mistake as to the law or fact involved therein is a question of fact for the jury.—United States v. Smith, Case No. 16,341.

Alleged errors in instructions on a trial for perjury considered.—United States v. McHenry, Case No. 15,681.

§ 10. Sentence and punishment.

Upon a conviction of perjury the court may inflict the punishment of fine, imprisonment, and the pillory.—United States v. Snow, Case No. 16,349.

PERPETUITIES.

§ 1, Statutory provisions. § 2, Creation of future contingent estates in general. § 3, Remoteness of gifts to charities.

§ 1. Statutory provisions.
A devise of lands to be held until the last born grandchild became of age, then to be divided among all living grandchildren, and the issue of such as were dead, taking per stirpes, is not void as to the child of a grandchild who died before the testator, under a statute prohibiting devises except to persons in being when the will is made, or their immediate issue or immediate descendants. Act Ohio Dec. 17, 1812.—McArthur v. Allen, Case No. 8,659.

§ 2. Creation of future contingent estates in general.
A devise over, if the parties first taking should all die, "without leaving any issue of the body of either of them," at the death of the last survivor, "or if such issue should all die before attaining the age of 21 years," is too remote.—Maxwell v. Call, Case No. 9,323.

§ 3. Remoteness of gifts to charities.
A condition against alienation annexed to property devoted to charity does not render the devise void.—Jones v. Habersham, Case No. 7,465.

An immediate gift to trustees for a general charity, which cannot take effect except on the occurrence of contingent and uncertain events, is valid, and the fund will be held up for a reasonable time to await the happening of the contingencies.—Jones v. Habersham, Case No. 7,465.

A devise to trustees for a charitable purpose, which is to be carried on by them until a building to be erected for the charity shall be completed, which is then to be handed over by the trustees, with the funds to support it, to a corporation to be created, creates no perpetuity.—Jones v. Habersham, Case No. 7,465.

PERSONAL INJURIES.

See, also, "Negligence."
Damages for, see "Damages," §§ 1–3, 9.
From assault, see "Assault and Battery," § 6.
Jurisdiction over action for, see "Admiralty," § 32.
Limitation of liability, see "Shipping," § 246.
Received on Sunday, see "Sunday," § 3.
To employé, see "Master and Servant," §§ 3–8.
To licensees, see "Railroads," § 69.
To passengers, see "Carriers," §§ 40–48; "Shipping," § 203.
To seamen, see "Seamen," §§ 156–174.
To traveler on highways, see "Highways," §§ 4, 5; "Municipal Corporations," § 25.
To trespassers, see "Railroads," § 69.

PERSONAL PROPERTY.

See "Property."

PETITION.

In admiralty, see "Admiralty," § 91.
In bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," §§ 37, 54.
In pleading, see "Pleading," §§ 4–15.

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

§ 1, Authority to admit to practice. § 2, Practicing without authority. § 3, Right to compensation.

§ 1. Authority to admit to practice.
Constitution and legality of the medical board of examiners of the District of Columbia.—United States v. Williams, Case No. 16,713.

§ 2. Practicing without authority.
In a prosecution for practicing medicine without a license, a witness will not be compelled to produce the medicine which he received from defendant.—United States v. Williams, Case No. 16,713.

The application, by an oculist, of a liquid to the eye, is not the practice of medicine, but rather of surgery.—United States v. Williams, Case No. 16,713.

§ 3. Right to compensation.
Where a statute provides for a board of medical examiners, and requires a license from them as a condition of practicing medicine, a physician may maintain an action at law for his services, though he practiced without a license, if during the time of such services there was no existing board of examiners.—Woodside v. Baldwin, Case No. 17,995.

PIERS.

See "Wharves."

PILOTS.

§ 1, Statutory regulations. § 2, Pilot commissioners. § 3, Licenses. § 4, Obligation to take pilots. § 5, Tender of services. § 6, Rights and duties. § 7, Compensation—Right in general. § 8, —— Amount. § 9, —— Actions. § 10, —— Lien. § 11, —— Transfer of wages. § 12, Liability for negligence. § 13, Penalties for violations of regulations

§ 1. Statutory regulation.
The territory of Washington has power to pass pilot laws. Such power is recognized as concurrent in the states by Act Aug. 7, 1794.—The Panama, Case No. 10,702.

Act Aug. 30, 1852, providing for the employment of pilots on vessels propelled in whole or in part by steam, engaged in carrying passengers on any of the bays, lakes, or other navigable waters of the United States, so far as it goes, supersedes all state laws regulating the employment of pilots on such vessels.—The Panama, Case No. 10,702.

In case of conflict the presumption is that congress intended to abrogate state laws on the subject.—The Panama, Case No. 10,702.

The Pennsylvania compulsory pilotage law of 1803 applies to foreign as well as American vessels.—Smith v. The Creole, Case No. 13,032.

Validity of state laws, see "Commerce," § 1.

§ 2. Pilot commissioners.
Act providing that pilot commissioners "may" appoint a secretary held to be mandatory.—The California, Case No. 2,313.

§ 3. Licenses.
A pilot's license, when prima facie evidence of the facts recited therein.—The California, Case No. 2,313.

A pilot commissioner cannot authorize another member of the board to sign his name to a license.—The California, Case No. 2,313.

A state law requiring that a pilot licensed by the inspectors of steam vessels (Act Feb. 25, 1867) shall also be licensed by the state pilot commissioners when navigating a vessel within the state, held valid.—The George S. Wright, Case No. 5,340.

A warrant to act as pilot, appearing on its face to have been regularly issued, cannot be questioned collaterally, and justifies the master of the ship in dealing with the holder as a lawfully constituted pilot.—The Panama, Case No. 10,702.

A pilot for the port of Charleston, S. C., must be thoroughly acquainted with the bar at the mouth of the harbor, and the practicability of crossing it at a given time.—The Washington v. The Saluda, Case No. 17,232.

§ 4. Obligation to take pilots.
Neither in nor out bound vessels are, by the laws of Massachusetts, positively bound to employ a pilot.—Camp v. The Marcellus, Case No. 2,347.

A vessel that is within pilotage ground, but disabled so that she cannot get into port without steam, is not bound to accept the offer of a pilot, or pay his fee.—Flanders v. Tripp, Case No. 4,854.

Pilots held not entitled to fees on tender and refusal of services to vessels passing through Boston harbor, bound to Lynn and Dorchester. Rev. St. Mass. c. 32, §§ 15–22.—Nash v. The Thebes, Case No. 10,022.

A vessel owned by a resident of Maine, and sailing under a fishing license, is not liable for half pilotage as either a "foreign vessel" or "vessel under register," within the New York pilot law.—Weaver v. McLellan, Case No. 17,309.

A law which obliges vessels entering and leaving a harbor to receive a pilot or forfeit half pilotage is not compulsory, but optional; and hence a vessel navigated by such a pilot is liable for a collision caused by his negligence. Case No. 13,032 reversed.—Smith v. The Creole, Case No. 13,033.

§ 5. Tender of services.
Tender of services by a Hell Gate pilot to a vessel bound through Hell Gate at a point 17 miles east of Sand's Point held effective.—The Georgia D. Loud, Case No. 5,353.

The exhibition to the master of the vessel of the pilot's warrant is a necessary part of the tender of services, under Act Wash. T. Jan. 26, 1863.—The Eldridge, Case No. 4,332.

Act N. Y. 1865, giving half pilotage on a tender and refusal of services, held applicable to a tender made as far east as Sand's Point, to a vessel bound to New York.—Horton v. Smith, Case No. 6,709.

An offer to take on board a pilot tendering services, accompanied with refusal to pay offshore pilotage, is a refusal to take the pilot, within the meaning of the New York statute, though another pilot is subsequently taken and in-shore pilotage paid.—The Nevada, Case No. 10,130.

The tender of services by a Hell Gate pilot as far east as Block Island is not legal, and a refusal and subsequent settlement with him will not prevent a pilot, who tendered his services off Oak Neck, from recovering half pilotage, where they were refused.—The S. & B. Small, Case No. 12,291b.

§ 6. Rights and duties.
Licensed pilot, employed to remain on vessel to take her in and out of port, is subject to master's discipline, but not liable to ship's duty except when in charge as pilot.—Beataugh v. Nicholson, Case No. 1,194.

Use of force to compel obedience of pilot held a trespass.—Beataugh v. Nicholson, Case No 1,194.

Master is not justified in ordering regularly employed pilot ashore, for failure to obey order to leave quarter deck.—Beataugh v. Nicholson, Case No. 1,194.

The master may interfere in case of gross ignorance or palpable and dangerous mistake by the licensed pilot in charge.—Camp v. The Marcellus, Case No. 2,347.

§ 7. Compensation—Right in general.
Right to compensation for salvage services, see "Salvage," §§ 5, 20, 23, 44.

State pilot laws have sufficient effect beyond the state boundaries to fix the compensation of pilots.—The Nevada, Case No. 10,130.

It is not the mere clearance for a port, but being actually bound into it, that imposes on a vessel the obligation to pay a pilot.—Nash v. The Thebes, Case No. 10,022.

The seizure of a vessel on process, which interrupts her regular business, is notice to the pilot that his services are no longer required, and terminates his right to wages.—The Joseph Hall, Case No. 7,539.

An abandoned bark, towed into New York, is not liable for the fees of a pilot who does not board her, nor control her navigation.—Chapman v. The Lucerne, Case No. 2,605.

A vessel in the port of New York, which has entered on a voyage which will carry her through Hell Gate, who refuses a pilot's services, is liable for half pilotage, though the voyage through Hell Gate is not completed.—The Traveller, Case No. 14,147.

To charge one, as agent of a vessel, for half pilotage fees under the New York statute, he must be shown to have some connection with her.—Mason v. Ingraham, Case No. 9,238.

§ 8. —— Amount.
A pilot was allowed $100 extra pilotage for navigating into the port of New York a passenger ship discovered 60 miles outside Sandy Hook in a disabled condition.—The Warren, Case No. 17,193.

Pilots taking a vessel partly crippled, but not in immediate peril, nor unnavigable through Sandy Hook channel, held entitled to a reasonble extra compensation, but not to double fees, as a legal right under a claim of usage of the port.—Love v. Hinckley, Case No. 8,548.

A pilot who does not take charge of a vessel until she reaches pilot grounds is only entitled to inshore pilotage.—The Alaska, Case No. 129.

To sustain a claim for half pilotage by a Hell Gate pilot, he must show that the vessel was in the prosecution of a voyage which would carry her through Hell Gate.—The Kalmar, Case No. 7,601.

The limits of pilot grounds are not fixed by any rule of law, but depend upon usage or custom; and that usage is not settled and uniform, but varies according to circumstances.—Hope v. The Dido, Case No. 6,679.

A pilot is not bound to take charge of a disabled vessel for the usual pilot's fee.—Flanders v. Tripp, Case No. 4,854.

Pilot who takes charge of, and tows into port, an abandoned ship, at request of vessel which had been towing her, is entitled to greater compensation than the usual pilot fee.—The Champion, Case No. 2,582a.

§ 9. —— Actions.
Admiralty has jurisdiction over action to recover half pilotage under state laws for services tendered and refused.—Banta v. McNeil, Case No. 966. CONTRA, see Arcularias v. Staples, Case No. 509b.

The inference that no pilot was employed on board a vessel which refused libelant's offer of services may be drawn from the fact that the master admitted the correctness of libelant's claim, and no evidence of employment was given.—The Nellie Husted, Case No. 10,098.

Presumptions and proof as to the terms of hiring at monthly wages of a pilot on the Hudson river.—Truesdale v. Young, Case No. 14,204.

A claim to half pilotage for a tender and refusal of services, supported only by the oath of the pilot, and contradicted by two witnesses from the other vessel, cannot be sustained where the pilot might have produced other witnesses, whose absence he did not account for.—The Thomas Turrall, Case No. 13,932.

Jurisdiction of admiralty, see "Admiralty," § 27.

§ 10. —— Lien.
A claim for half pilotage given by a state law on a tender and refusal of services is a lien on the vessel, and admiralty has jurisdiction to enforce the same.—The California, Case No. 2,312; The America, Id. 289; The Kalmar, Id. 7,601; The George S. Wright, Id. 5,340. CONTRA, see Leitch v. The George Law, Case No. 8,223; Harrison v. The Anna Kimball, Id. 6,132; The Robert J. Mercer, Id. 11,891.

The pilot has a lien for wages, as such, though when the vessel was in port he officiated and was recognized as master.—Logan v. The Æolian, Case No. 8,465.

A pilot has a lien on the ship for services in bringing the vessel into port, rendered under agreement with the passengers in pretended mutiny.—Johnson v. The Anne, Case No. 7,370.

Mere wrongdoers or mutineers have no authority to bind the ship for pilotage.—The Anne, Case No. 412.

§ 11. —— Transfer of wages.
A contract by a pilot purchasing a share in a vessel that his part owners shall retain yearly out of his wages such sum as he is able to spare, until the balance of the purchase money is paid, is not an assignment of unaccrued wages, within Rev. St. § 4536.—Somers v. The Jersey Blue, Case No. 13,169.

§ 12. Liability for negligence.
A licensed pilot, who runs his vessel on a shoal in fair weather and open daylight, is liable for resulting damages, and cannot set up the failure of the vessel to have a hawser, with which she might have been warped off without injury.—Santiago v. Morgan, Case No. 12,331.

See, also, "Collision," § 95.

§ 13. Penalties for violations of regulations.
A master who, without being licensed, performs the duty of pilot to make up the required number, is liable to a penalty of $100 (Act Aug. 30, 1852), besides subjecting the boat and its owners to a penalty of $500. Act July 7, 1838, § 1.—United States v. The Science, Case No. 16,239.

PIRACY.

§ 1, Statutory provisions. § 2, What constitutes. § 3, Persons liable. § 4, Defenses. § 5, Evidence.

Jurisdiction, see "Criminal Law," §§ 10, 11.

§ 1. Statutory provisions.
The provisions of the law relating to piracy were not repealed by Act June 26, 1812, 2 Stat. 759.—United States v. Jones, Case No. 15,494.

Congress may make depredations upon the high seas punishable as piracy, though they do not strictly constitute such crime as known to international law.—Charge to Grand Jury, Treason and Piracy, Case No. 18,277.

§ 2. What constitutes.
A pirate is one who acts solely on his own authority, without any commission or authority from a sovereign state, seizing by force, and appropriating to himself, without discrimination, every vessel he meets with.—Davison v. Seal-Skins, Case No. 3,661.

The United States court will treat as pirates all persons engaged in plundering vessels of the United States citizens under authority of a government set up by insurgents against whom a civil war is being waged.—United States v. Smith, Case No. 16,318.

Act 1790, c. 9, § 8, as well as Act 1820, c. 113, applies to all murders and robberies committed on board of or upon American ships on the high seas.—United States v. Gibert, Case No. 15,204.

Act April 30, 1790, § 9, in regard to piracy or robbery on the high seas, applies only to citizens, and not to foreigners.—United States v. Baker, Case No. 14,501.

Larceny committed on board an American ship in an inclosed dock in a foreign port is not punishable under Act April 30, 1790, c. 9, § 16. —United States v. Hamilton, Case No. 15,290.

To constitute robbery on the high seas within Act May 15, 1820, § 3, the taking need not be such as to amount to piracy according to the law of nations.—United States v. Baker, Case No. 14,501.

Act May 15, 1820, § 3, in regard to robbery on the high seas, applies to all persons, whether citizens or foreigners.—United States v. Baker, Case No. 14,501.

The seizure of a vessel carrying arms and munitions of war to a port of the enemy by an armed ship, whose officers held commissions from the hostile country, is not piracy.—United States v. Smith, Case No. 16,339a.

The crime of piracy, as defined by the law of nations and the acts of congress, consists of robbery or forcible depredation upon the sea.—United States v. Chapels, Case No. 14,782.

Slave trade is not punishable as piracy.—United States v. Corrie, Case No. 14,869.

To constitute the offense of running away with a vessel, it must appear that the command was taken from the master, and that the act was done feloniously, and with intent to convert the vessel and cargo or either of them to the use of the persons concerned in the act.—United States v. Haskell, Case No. 15,321.

Robbery on the high seas is piracy; but to constitute the offense the taking must be felonious, and the quo animo may be inquired into. —Davison v. Seal-Skins, Case No. 3,661.

If the seamen participated in taking property from a Spanish ship, it must be shown that they knew or might have known that robbery, and not capture as prize, was contemplated.—United States v. Jones, Case No. 15,496.

To constitute the offense of piracy (Act April 30, 1790, c. 9) by piratically and feloniously running away with the vessel, personal force and violence is not necessary. There must be a fraudulent and unlawful conversion.—United States v. Tully, Case No. 16,545.

A confederacy by American citizens on land or on board an American vessel, with pirates, under the laws of nations, or the yielding up of a vessel by a citizen to such pirates, is punishable, under section 8, Act April 30, 1790.—United States v. Howard, Case No. 15,404.

So, also, is an endeavor by a mariner to corrupt the master of the vessel and induce him to go over to such pirates.—United States v. Howard, Case No. 15,404.

The language of section 12 implies contract and association with the pirates as well in relation to the past as to the future.—United States v. Howard, Case No. 15,404.

Sections 10 and 11, Act April 30, 1790, as to accessories, refer to the piracy mentioned in section 8, which includes only crimes committed by American citizens, or on board American vessels.—United States v. Howard, Case No. 15,404.

§ 3. Persons liable.
In order to affect all the officers and crew of a piratical vessel with guilt, the original voyage must have been undertaken with a piratical design, and the officers and crew have known and acted upon such design; otherwise, those only are guilty who actively co-operated in the piracy. —United States v. Gibert, Case No. 15,204.

In order to convict a seaman on a privateer for piracy committed in conjunction with the officers, he must be shown to have participated feloniously in the taking, and proof of acts of robbery generally by officers and crew is insufficient. —United States v. Jones, Case No. 15,496.

A subordinate officer, who in good faith enters a formal protest against a seizure by his vessel, is not guilty with the others of an act of piracy. —United States v. Smith, Case No. 16,339a.

The simple fact of presence on board the piratical vessel, where there was no original piratical design, is not sufficient per se to affect a party with a crime.—United States v. Gibert, Case No. 15,204.

The rule that robbery on the high seas is piracy has no exception or qualification in favor of commissioned privateers.—United States v. Jones, Case No. 15,494.

A French citizen transiently within the United States cannot be criminally prosecuted for piracies and robberies committed by the captain of a privateer owned by him, upon neutral vessels.—United States v. Owners of the Unicorn, Case No. 15,979a.

§ 4. Defenses.

A commission by a nation at war to a private armed vessel will afford protection even in the judicial tribunals of the enemy, against a charge of robbery or piracy.—United States v. Baker, Case No. 14,501.

A forged commission under which an officer acts in good faith held a good defense to an indictment for piracy.—United States v. Smith, Case No. 16,339a; Same v. Bass, Id. 14,537.

§ 5. Evidence.

Parol evidence is admissible to establish the time of sailing, and the course and termination of a voyage, without proving that the log book was missing or lost.—United States v. Gibert, Case No. 15,204.

A commission from a government whose independence has not been recognized may be given as evidence, merely as a paper found on board, but not to justify acts done under it.—United States v. Hutchings, Case No. 15,429.

Other evidence of ownership of the ship and cargo may be admitted, besides the register and bills of sale, and the invoice, bills of lading, etc.—United States v. Jones, Case No. 15,494.

PLEA.

In civil actions, see "Equity," §§ 43–54; "Pleading," §§ 16–36.
In criminal prosecution, see "Criminal Law," §§ 45–50.

PLEADING.

I. ORDER, FORM, AND ALLEGATIONS IN GENERAL.

§ 1, Form of pleading in general. § 2, Order of pleading. § 3, Matter of law.

II. DECLARATION OR COMPLAINT.

§ 4, Title of court. § 5, Statement of venue. § 6, Joint defendants. § 7, Uncertainty. § 8, Anticipating and negativing defenses. § 9, Inducement. § 10, Surplusage. § 11. Duplicity. § 12, Jurisdictional facts. § 13, Averment of citizenship. § 14, Pleading and setting out documents. § 15, Abandonment of counts.

III. PLEA OR ANSWER.

§ 16, Time of answer or filing plea. § 17, Sufficiency of plea or answer in general. § 18, Statement of partial defense only. § 19, Argumentative plea. § 20, Joint answer. § 21, Inconsistent allegations or defenses. § 22, Plea puis darrien continuance. § 23, Matter occurring after commencement of suit. § 24, Impertinence. § 25, Distinct defenses. § 26, Misnomer. § 27, Duplicity. § 28, Frivolous plea. § 29, Verification. § 30, Dilatory pleas—Plea to the jurisdiction. § 31, —— Plea or answer in abatement. § 32, General issue. § 33, Admissions. § 34, Pleas in confession and avoidance and special pleas. § 35, Set-off and counterclaim. § 36, Pleas amounting to general issue.

IV. REPLICATION OR REPLY AND SUBSEQUENT PLEADINGS.

§ 37, Replication or reply. § 38, Rejoinder.

V. DEMURRER.

§ 39, Grounds for demurrer. § 40, Special demurrer. § 41, Demurrer to whole or part of pleading. § 42, Demurrer as opening record. § 43, Admissions by demurrer. § 44, Pleading on overruling or sustaining demurrer.

VI. AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS, REPLEADER, AND WITHDRAWAL OF PLEADINGS.

§ 45, Power and discretion of court. § 46, Notice to adverse party. § 47, Amendment of declaration. § 48, Amendment of demurrer. § 49, Time of amendment. § 50, Imposing conditions on allowing amendment. § 51, Form and sufficiency of amended pleading. § 52, Effect of amendment. § 53, Supplemental pleadings. § 54, Repleader. § 55. Withdrawal of pleadings.

VII. SIGNATURE AND VERIFICATION.

§ 56, Sufficiency of signature. § 57, Time of verification. § 58, Sufficiency of verification. § 59, Effect of failure to verify.

VIII. PROFERT AND OYER.

§ 60, When party entitled. § 61, Time of demanding. § 62, Sufficiency.

IX. BILL OF PARTICULARS.

§ 63, When bill will be ordered. § 64, Sufficiency and effect.

X. MOTIONS.

§ 65, Motions to strike out.

XI. ISSUES, PROOF, AND VARIANCE.

§ 66, Joinder of issues of fact. § 67, Evidence admissible under pleadings. § 68, Variance between allegations and proof.

XII. WAIVER OF OBJECTIONS AND AIDER BY VERDICT.

§ 69, Waiver of objections in general. § 70, Aider by verdict.

After removal of cause, see "Removal of Causes," § 60.
As evidence, see "Admiralty," § 94; "Equity," §§ 92, 93; "Evidence," § 27.
Conformity of judgment to pleading, see "Judgment," § 16.
Defects as ground for new trial, see "New Trial," § 4.
Estoppel by allegations in, see "Estoppel," § 1.
Indictment or criminal information or complaint, see "Indictment and Information."
Waiver of objection to jurisdiction, see "Admiralty," § 36.

Allegations as to particular facts, acts, or transactions.

See "Accord and Satisfaction," § 4; "Adverse Possession," § 9; "Damages," § 12; "Estoppel," § 9; "Fraud," § 7; "Judgment," §§ 81–83; "Pardon," § 7; "Payment," §§ 17, 18; "Statutes," § 36; "Usury," § 16.

Discharge in bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," §§ 634, 635.
—— in insolvency, see "Insolvency," § 16.
Jurisdiction, see "Bankruptcy," § 18; "Courts," §§ 60–62.
Laches, see "Equity," § 21.
Statute of frauds, see "Frauds, Statute of," § 6.
—— of limitations, see "Limitation of Actions," §§ 26, 27.

In actions by or against particular classes of parties.

See "Corporations," § 56; "Executors and Administrators," § 48; "Municipal Corporations," § 41; "Officers," § 5; "Partnership," § 36; "Seamen," § 138; "Sheriffs and Constables"; "United States Marshals," § 21.
Assignees in bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," § 361.
Insurance companies, see "Insurance," §§ 172, 173.

In particular actions or proceedings.

See "Account," § 1; "Assumpsit, Action of," § 4; "Cancellation of Instruments," § 8; "Creditors' Suit," § 8; "Debt, Action of," § 2; "Detinue," § 3; "Discovery," § 4; "Ejectment," § 10; "False Imprisonment," § 4; "Forcible Entry and Detainer," § 1; "Libel and Slander," §§ 15–18; "Malicious Prosecutions," § 6; "Quieting Title," § 7; "Replevin," § 8; "Specific Performance," § 14; "Trespass," § 7; "Trespass to Try Title"; "Trover and Conversion," § 3.
Criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," §§ 45–50.
For breach of contract, see "Contracts," § 39.
—— of covenants, see "Covenants," § 9.
—— of promise of marriage, see "Breach of Marriage Promise," § 1.
For collision, see "Collision," §§ 125–129.
For foreclosure, see "Mortgages," § 35.
For forfeiture, see "Forfeitures," § 8; "Internal Revenue," § 83.
For infringement of copyright, see "Copyrights," § 43.
—— of patents, see "Patents," §§ 194–198.
—— of trade-mark or trade-name, see "Trade-Marks and Trade-Names," § 29.
For injunction, see "Injunction," § 12.
For penalties, see "Customs Duties," § 120a; "Penalties," § 7.
For rent, see "Landlord and Tenant," § 9.
For violation of customs laws, see "Customs Duties," § 101.
—— of embargo and nonintercourse acts, see "War," § 19.
In admiralty, see "Admiralty," §§ 37–49, 79–91.
In bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," §§ 106–122.
In equity, see "Equity," §§ 35–93.
In justices' courts, see "Justices of the Peace," § 9.
On bills or notes, see "Bills and Notes," §§ 96–99.
On bonds, see "Bonds," §§ 20, 21.
—— in replevin, see "Replevin," § 15.
On guaranty, see "Guaranty," § 11.
Prize proceedings, see "War," § 59.
To enforce liens, see "Maritime Liens," §§ 59, 60.
—— trusts, see "Trusts," § 48.
To recover duties or charges paid, see "Customs Duties," § 70.
—— salvage, see "Salvage," § 65.
To set aside fraudulent conveyances, see "Fraudulent Conveyances," § 31.

I. ORDER, FORM, AND ALLEGATIONS IN GENERAL.

§ 1. Form of pleading in general.
Under the system of pleading adopted in New York, judgment at trial, in a suit at law, is to be rendered in accordance with the facts pleaded and proved, without regard to the form of the pleadings or the theory on which they were prepared.—Whalen v. Sheridan, Case No. 17,476.

§ 2. Order of pleading.
The order of pleading is part of the common law, and does not depend upon a mere rule of the court.—Fenwick v. Grimes, Case No. 4,734.

§ 3. Matter of law.
It is not necessary to aver matter of law or public statutes of which the court takes judicial notice.—Young v. Montgomery & E. R. Co., Case No. 18,166; Jones v. Hays, Id. 7,467.

II. DECLARATION OR COMPLAINT.

See, also, post, §§ 47, 70.

§ 4. Title of court.
It is sufficient to state the title of the court in the caption of the declaration.—Gassett v. Palmer, Case No. 5,265.

§ 5. Statement of venue.
The jurisdiction of the court is not affected by the venue laid, or a wrong one, or by the entire omission to lay one.—Cage v. Jeffries, Case No. 2,287.

A declaration in a local action in a federal district court, which does not lay a venue, or avers a wrong one, is bad on demurrer.—United States v. Woolsey, Case No. 16,762.

The venue, if substantially laid, is sufficient.—Gassett v. Palmer, Case No. 5,265.

Venue in the margin of pleading is sufficient where none is laid in the body of the declaration.—Cocke v. Kendall, Case No. 2,929b.

A venue in the body of the declaration is sufficient without being stated in the margin.—Dwight v. Wing, Case No. 4,219.

Where the absence of a venue in one count may be supplied by necessary inference from the venue in others, the count is not bad.—Noe v. Prentice, Case No. 10,284a.

Venue is necessary to every traversable fact, and, where one is laid in the count, all matters following refer to it.—Cocke v. Kendall, Case No. 2,929b.

Where a cause of action is local, a reference to the "district aforesaid," named in any preceding count, is a sufficient designation of the place.—Jones v. Van Zandt, Case No. 7,505.

The words "state aforesaid," in the body of the declaration, held to refer to the state or venue in the margin, and not those mentioned in the body.—Cage v. Jeffries, Case No. 2,287.

§ 6. Joint defendants.
A declaration against two of three obligors is defective which does not aver that all three have failed to pay the debt.—Robins v. Pope, Case No. 11,931a.

§ 7. Uncertainty.
An allegation that the defendant failed to furnish transportation to laborers furnished the defendant by plaintiff, to his damage so many dollars, is not uncertain, but only nominal damages can be recovered under it.—Oh Chow v. Hallett, Case No. 10,469.

§ 8. Anticipating and negativing defenses.
Matter in defeasance of an action need not be stated in the declaration.—Hammer v. Kaufman, Case No. 5,997.

The continued use of an improvement, where, under the agreement with plaintiff, nonuser was to release defendant from his obligation to pay, need not be alleged in the declaration.—Hammer v. Kaufman, Case No. 5,997.

§ 9. Inducement.
Inducement should consist of such facts as authorize an inference against the right asserted by the other party.—Egberts v. Dibble, Case No. 4,307.

§ 10. Surplusage.

If a count in a declaration contains sufficient averments, surplusage will not vitiate it.—Wyman v. Fowler, Case No. 18,114.

§ 11. Duplicity.

The union of several facts constituting together but one cause of action, is not duplicity.—Jackson v. Rundlet, Case No. 7,145.

See, also, post, § 27.

§ 12. Jurisdictional facts.

The facts and circumstances upon which jurisdiction depends must be stated in the declaration or pleadings.—Donaldson v. Hazen, Case No. 3,984.

Where a statute declares that a certain suit shall not be brought without certain allegations, such allegations in the declaration are essential to the plaintiff's right to sue.—Walker v. Johnson, Case No. 17,074.

Where, in order to give jurisdiction, it is necessary that defendant should be found within the district, a mere statement in the declaration that defendant "being in custody," etc., is insufficient.—United States v. Woolsey, Case No. 16,762.

§ 13. Averment of citizenship.

A general averment of the citizenship of the plaintiff is sufficient.—Thompson v. Cook, Case No. 13,952.

An averment of citizenship in the first count is sufficient for all the other counts where referred to therein.—Jones v. Heaton, Case No. 7,468.

§ 14. Pleading and setting out documents.

A slight variation in describing a written instrument is fatal.—Clark v. Phillips, Case No. 2,831a.

An exhibit is no part of a pleading in an action at law; a record or instrument should be stated in a pleading either according to its tenor or legal effect.—Fitch v. Cornell, Case No. 4,834; Oh Chow v. Hallett. Id. 10,469.

A writing merely referred to and annexed as an exhibit will be stricken out on motion as impertinent and irrelevant.—Oh Chow v. Hallett, Case No. 10,469.

§ 15. Abandonment of counts.

Plaintiff may enter a nolle prosequi to any account in his declaration.—McLain v. Rutherford, Case No. 8,868a.

In Ohio a count cannot be abandoned after the jury retire to consult on the verdict.—Jones v. Van Zandt, Case No. 7,502.

Counts abandoned are considered as still in the record for matters of references in subsequent counts.—Jones v. Van Zandt, Case No. 7,505.

III. PLEA OR ANSWER.

See, also, post, § 55.

§ 16. Time of answer or filing plea.

Defendant, at the imparlanced term, allowed to plead any issuable plea to the merits, although rule to plea expired.—Darnall v. Talbot, Case No. 3,578.

Where an amended declaration, filed 20 days before the commencement of the term, was removed from the clerk's office by plaintiff's counsel, the court refused to compel defendant to plead during the term.—Walker v. Johnson, Case No. 17,075.

When a substantial amendment is made in a declaration, the defendant should be allowed until the next succeeding term to plead.—Wyatt v. Harden, Case No. 18,106a.

After a cause has been at issue 18 months, leave will not be given to plead non est factum without affidavit denying execution of the bond in suit.—Bullock v. Van Pelt, Case No. 2,131.

Defendant not permitted to plead the statute of limitations after the expiration of rule to plead.—Bank of Columbia v. Hyatt, Case No. 869; Beatty v. Van Ness, Id. 1,198; Reed v. Clark, Id. 11,643. But see Marsteller v. McClean, Case No. 9,139.

The plea of the statute cannot be put in after the rule day, unless it be shown by affidavit to be necessary to the justice of the case.—Thompson v. Affick, Case No. 13,939.

Ignorance of the practice of the court by an attorney recently admitted held good cause for allowing the statute of limitations to be pleaded after the rule day.—Union Bank v. Eliason, Case No. 14,350; Wetzell v. Bussard, Id. 17,471.

The statute of limitations may be pleaded on setting aside the office judgment at the first term.—Gregg v. Bontz, Case No. 5,798; Mechanics' Bank of Alexandria v. Lynn, Id. 9,384; Morgan v. Evans, Id. 9,800. CONTRA, Smith v. Stoops, Case No. 13,110.

After interlocutory decree, and an issue ordered, the court will not permit the defendant to plead the statute of limitations and to file an answer.—Wilson v. Turberville, Case No. 17,844.

On reinstatement after nonsuit, defendant not permitted to plead the statute of limitations unless he show it to be necessary for the justice of the case.—McIver v. Moore, Case No. 8,831.

An exception (in Louisiana) that plaintiff, suing as administrator, is not administrator, must be pleaded in limine litis.—Barras v. Bidwell, Case No. 1,039.

Such an exception cannot be embodied in the answer, and it must be verified by affidavit.—Barras v. Bidwell, Case No. 1,039.

The same rules apply to the exception of lis pendens.—Barras v. Bidwell, Case No. 1,039.

If the defendant on the plea day demand oyer, which is not given until the subsequent term, the court will give the defendant time to plead after oyer.—Calvert v. Slater, Case No. 2,326.

§ 17. Sufficiency of plea or answer in general.

A plea in bar is not good if the facts stated do not constitute a bar.—Curtis v. Central Ry., Case No. 3,501; Smith v. Ely, Id. 13,043.

A plea to a declaration on a bond conditioned to pay a certain sum in pounds sterling, that it was not equivalent to, and that defendant did not owe, the sum in United States money, as averred in the declaration, held bad on demurrer.—Gurney v. Hoge, Case No. 5,875.

A plea negativing a breach assigned in its very words is good on a general demurrer.—United States v. Hammond, Case No. 15,292.

Where a declaration is special, stating facts and circumstances, a plea setting up the same matter is bad.—Van Avery v. Phœnix Ins. Co., Case No. 16,829.

A plea is demurrable where its structure is that of a plea in bar, but which avers by way of set-off a claim for damages for improper performance by plaintiff of the contract out of which plaintiff's cause of action arose.—Central Ohio R. R. v. Thompson, Case No. 2,550.

A plea in bar is bad, whether involving questions of law or fact, where it goes only to the question of damages.—King v. American Transp. Co., Case No. 7,787.

The extent of the rule that, where there are several pleas, the legal inferences from the averments contained in one plea have no influence in deciding on the averments of another plea.—Pegram v. United States, Case No. 10,906.

A statement in the answer of the evidence upon which defendant relies to sustain his claim of ownership is irrelevant.—Wythe v. Myers, Case No. 18,119.

§ 18. Statement of partial defense only.

A plea which does not answer the whole charge or count is bad.—Culbertson v. Wabash Nav. Co., Case No. 3,464; Kerr v. Force, Id. 7,730; Parker v. Lewis, Id. 10,741a; Postmaster General v. Reeder, Id. 11,311.

Where a plea professes to answer only part of the actionable matter charged in the count, and the replication or demurrer treats it as a plea to the whole matter, this is a discontinuance; but otherwise if it is treated as a plea to that part only which it purports to answer, provided that plaintiff, at the time of replying or demurring, take judgment by nil dicit for the unanswered part of the count.—Kerr v. Force, Case No. 7,730.

§ 19. Argumentative plea.

A plea is bad which argumentatively denies a fact averred in the declaration.—Mower v. Burdick, Case No. 9,890; Kinney v. Consolidated Va. Min. Co., Id. 7,827.

§ 20. Joint answer.

A joint answer must be good as to all defendants joining therein.—United States v. Halsted, Case No. 15,287.

§ 21. Inconsistent allegations or defenses.

Defendant may plead inconsistent or contradictory defenses to the same action under Civ. Code Or. § 72.—Hall v. Austin, Case No. 5,925.

Where inconsistent allegations in the answer are not excepted to, the one most strongly against claimants will be taken to be the one really made.—The Olbers, Case No. 10,477.

§ 22. Plea puis darrein continuance.

The plea puis darrein continuance admits plaintiff's cause of action.—Wisdom v. Williams, Case No. 17,904.

And waives all prior issues.—Spafford v. Woodruff, Case No. 13,198.

And all previous defenses.—Good v. Davis, Case No. 5,530a; Wisdom v. Williams, Id. 17,904.

§ 23. Matter occurring after commencement of suit.

A plea which states matters which occurred subsequent to the institution of the suit is bad on demurrer.—Lockington v. Smith, Case No. 8,448.

§ 24. Impertinence.

Impertinences are any matters not pertinent to those points which are properly before the court for decision at any particular stage of the case.—Wood v. Mann, Case No. 17,952.

§ 25. Distinct defenses.

Where distinct defenses are pleaded, one cannot be taken to help or destroy the other.—Bachman v. Everding, Case No. 708.

§ 26. Misnomer.

A plea is not bad on special demurrer because misnaming plaintiff in marginal title. Bank of Columbia v. Jones, Case No. 870, overruled.—Bank of Columbia v. Ott, Case No. 878.

But a plea of the statute of limitations, misnaming the plaintiffs in the margin, is bad on special demurrer.—Bank of Columbia v. Jones, Case No. 870.

§ 27. Duplicity.

A plea is bad, if it set up two distinct matters of defense, either of which is sufficient to defeat plaintiff's action.—Halsted v. Lyon, Case No. 5,968.

Several distinct and independent pleas to separate parts of a count are not double, and, if all be held good on demurrer, will make out a complete bar, so that judgment must be given for defendant.—Kerr v. Force, Case No. 7,730.

A plea will not be considered double for setting up matter which is immaterial to the issue of law raised by the demurrer.—Derby v. Jacques, Case No. 3,817.

See, also, ante, § 11.

§ 28. Frivolous plea.

A plea of estoppel which does not show that the defendant was misled by the plaintiff, or those under whom he claims, is frivolous.—Gager v. Harrison, Case No. 5,171.

Denial of citizenship of the plaintiff pleaded with matter to the merits becomes frivolous.—Gager v. Harrison, Case No. 5,171.

A plea in abatement for variance, in that the writ did not state citizenship of the parties, whereas the declaration did, is frivolous, and will be stricken out on motion.—Burrow v. Dickson, Case No. 2,203.

A plea which expressly or in effect admits the cause of action cannot be stricken out as frivolous.—Bachman v. Everding, Case No. 708.

A statement in the answer that defendant derives title from the administrators of a certain person, it not being alleged that such person ever owned or had any interest in the property, is frivolous.—Wythe v. Myers, Case No. 18,119.

An allegation that the property was conveyed by administrators, in obedience to an order of the probate court, where it does not appear that the order was duly or lawfully made, or that the court had authority to make it, is frivolous.—Wythe v. Myers, Case No. 18,119.

A plea stating that defendant is in possession as assignee of an unsatisfied mortgage, but which does not allege that he entered with the assent of the mortgagor, is frivolous, but not sham or redundant.—Witherell v. Wiberg, Case No. 17,917.

Plea not stricken out as frivolous if matter properly pleaded is included.—Bachman v. Everding, Case No. 708.

§ 29. Verification.

A plea, which is not a direct denial of some material fact stated in the declaration, should conclude with a verification.—Tucker v. Lee, Case No. 14,221.

See, also, post, §§ 57–59.

§ 30. Dilatory pleas—Plea to the jurisdiction.

A plea to the jurisdiction of the court, alleging facts which show a want of jurisdiction, is not a submission to the jurisdiction.—Van Antwerp v. Hulburd, Case No. 16,826.

A plea to the jurisdiction must be pleaded by itself, and cannot be set up in the answer.—Vose v. Reed, Case No. 17,011.

A plea to the jurisdiction on the ground that a demand has been colorably assigned in order to evade a discharge in insolvency is not to be treated as dilatory and captious, like some pleas in abatement.—Wallace v. Clark, Case No. 17,098.

After a complaint is amended on demurrer to cure a jurisdictional defect it becomes substantially a new suit, and defendant may interpose another plea to the jurisdiction.—Donaldson v. Hazen, Case No. 3,984.

In an action ex delicto, the objection that the court has no jurisdiction of a certain defendant is personal to such defendant, and cannot be made by one defendant for another.—Hinckley v. Byrne, Case No. 6,510.

An affidavit to a plea to the jurisdiction must be positive, and not on belief.—Adams v. White, Case No. 68.

In a court of limited jurisdiction, a plea that the cause of action did not arise within the jurisdiction is a plea in bar, and good after office judgment.—Smith v. McCleod, Case No. 13,073.

§ 31. —— Plea or answer in abatement.

A plea in abatement of another suit pending in the usual form need not allege that such suit was not discontinued before the plea was filed.—Nelson v. Foster, Case No. 10,105.

A plea in abatement must show jurisdiction of the former suit, if pending in a court not under the same sovereignty.—White v. Whitman, Case No. 17,561.

An allegation in a plea of abatement that all of defendants in the action are not citizens of the state is bad for uncertainty.—Hinckley v. Byrne, Case No. 6,510.

Where proceedings in bankruptcy are pleaded in abatement, all matters required to give jurisdiction must be averred.—Ex parte Balch, Case No. 790.

But such plea must show that the court has jurisdiction.—Ex parte Balch, Case No. 790.

A plea in abatement not upon oath, may be treated as a nullity.—Fenwick v. Grimes, Case No. 4,734; White v. Whitman, Id. 17,561.

A plea of the pendency of a former suit in another court must offer to produce the record of such suit.—Riddle v. Potter, Case No. 11,811.

Certificate of counsel that, in his opinion, the plea is well founded, need not accompany a plea of abatement in the federal court.—Nelson v. Foster, Case No. 10,105.

A plea in bar overrules a plea in abatement.—Fenwick v. Grimes, Case No. 4,734.

Where, on a rule to show their cause of action, the plaintiffs have produced a positive affidavit of debt, the defendant cannot give evidence that a suit for the same cause of action has been instituted in another court.—Post v. Sarmiento, Case No. 11,301.

§ 32. General issue.

The plea of nil debet is improper where the action is founded on a deed; otherwise where the deed is only inducement to the action.—United States v. Cumpton, Case No. 14,902.

When the record set forth in the declaration is not the foundation of the action, but only matter of conveyance or inducement, nul tiel record is not a good plea, for it does not answer the whole count.—United States v. Litle, Case No. 15,608.

When the record is shown forth in the declaration, defendant may deny the operation thereof.—United States v. Litle, Case No. 15,608.

The general plea of non est factum is proper where an obligation under seal is void ab initio.—Bottomley v. United States, Case No. 1,688.

A plea of non assumpsit to a declaration sounding in tort is fatally defective.—Davis v. Garland, Case No. 3,636.

See, also, post, § 36.

§ 33. Admissions.

A plea which does not traverse the facts averred in the declaration, but sets up new matter in defense, admits the case made in the declaration.—Greathouse v. Dunlap, Case No. 5,742.

Where an unsworn plea is put in, denying the instrument on which the action is founded or the indorsement of it, the note and the indorsement as averred in the declaration are admitted.—Thomas v. Clark, Case No. 13,894.

§ 34. Pleas in confession and avoidance and special pleas.

The statement of new matter in the answer must be concise, and must constitute a defense to the action. The ultimate facts, and not the evidence of them, must be stated. Civ. Code Or. § 316.—Moreland v. Marion County, Case No. 9,794.

A plea is bad which sets up matters in defense, and neither denies nor admits, and avoids plaintiff's allegation.—Halsted v. Lyon, Case No. 5,968.

In special pleas in bar, color to the plaintiffs' right must be given.—Dibble v. Duncan, Case No. 3,880.

Defendant, in his answer, cannot introduce new matter in the nature of a cross bill, and require plaintiff and others under whom he claims to answer it.—Morgan v. Tipton, Case No. 9,809.

A special plea is required where the instrument sued on is merely voidable.—Bottomley v. United States, Case No. 1,688.

A special plea which sets up several defenses is bad.—Cook v. Tribune Ass'n, Case No. 3,165.

A special plea of non est factum must conclude with a verification.—Contee v. Garner, Case No. 3,139.

§ 35. Set-off and counterclaim.

A counterclaim is substantially a cross action, and should contain nothing but the facts necessary to constitute it; and if any other defense is inserted therein it may be stricken out.—Neff v. Pennoyer, Case No. 10,085.

A claim in reconvention should be pleaded with the same precision and detail as an original cause of action.—Barras v. Bidwell, Case No. 1,039.

It is a good ground of exception to a claim in reconvention that it has been substantially adjudicated between the same parties in another state, where it was pleaded as a counterclaim.—Barras v. Bidwell, Case No. 1,039.

Unless notice of set-off be given before the suit is called for trial, it will not be permitted to be given in evidence.—Deneale v. Young, Case No. 3,786; Whetcroft v. Burford, Id. 17,505.

An account in bar or set-off must be filed one term before trial, under the rules in the District of Columbia.—Janney v. Baggot, Case No. 7,210.

§ 36. Pleas amounting to general issue.

A plea which amounts to the general issue is bad.—Curtis v. Central Ry., Case No. 3,501; Dibble v. Duncan, Id. 3,880; Halsted v. Lyon, Id. 5,968; Parker v. Lewis, Id. 10,741a.

A plea which admits the execution of an instrument sued on and sets up matter in avoidance is not objectionable, as amounting to the general issue.—Thomas v. Page, Case No. 13,906.

IV. REPLICATION OR REPLY AND SUBSEQUENT PLEADINGS.

See, also, post, § 69.

§ 37. Replication or reply.

A reply is not necessary when the plea does not state facts necessarily precluding a recovery by plaintiff.—United States v. Atwill, Case No. 14,475.

A judgment in assumpsit will be reversed where the cause was tried without replication to good pleas in bar.—Miles v. Rose, Case No. 9,544a.

Plaintiff will not be allowed to file his replication after the rule day and in term time except upon condition of a continuance.—Veatch v. Harbaugh, Case No. 16,905.

The state practice having been adopted by the standing rules of the district court of the Southern district of New York, plaintiff may obtain leave to file a double replication to defendant's plea.—Valarino v. Thompson, Case No. 16,810a.

Granting leave to put in several replications not an adjudication of their sufficiency.—Andreæ v. Redfield, Case No. 368.

A replication may set up the title of the equitable plaintiff, and notice thereof to the defendant, and thus show the asserted bar to be in fraud of such rights.—Brown v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., Case No. 2,009.

A replication which alleges two distinct and independent facts, either of which is a complete answer to the plea, is double, and is bad on special demurrer.—Burnham v. Webster, Case No. 2,178.

A replication to the plea of the statute of limitations, which stated that the debt arose on an account between merchants, and that the plaintiff was beyond sea, is bad for duplicity.—Craig v. Brown, Case No. 3,329.

Replication to plea of statute of limitations setting up agreement not to plead statute and a new promise is double.—Andreæ v. Redfield, Case No. 368.

A replication to a plea of payment in an action on a bond for the payment of money, that the sum paid was not accepted in satisfaction, was not paid on the day appointed, and the damages and interest due for nonpayment were not paid, held bad for duplicity.—United States v. Gurney, Case No. 15,271.

A departure takes place when a second plea contains matter not pursuant to the former, and does not fortify the same, except that, if matter be pleaded which could not have been shown in the former plea, such new matter will probably not always be a departure.—United States v. Morris, Case No. 15,816.

§ 38. Rejoinder.

A rejoinder must answer the replication, and tender an issue on a single point, else it is demurrable.—McCue v. Washington, Case No. 8,735; United States v. Cumpton, Id. 14,902.

A rejoinder is bad which puts in issue to the jury matter of law.—McCue v. Washington, Case No. 8,735.

After a plea of general performance, a rejoinder stating an excuse for not performing is bad. —McGowan v. Caldwell, Case No. 8,806.

V. DEMURRER.

See, also, post, §§ 48, 55.

§ 39. Grounds for demurrer.

Defects in declaration in setting forth case may be availed of by demurrer.—Bas v. Steel, Case No. 1,087.

A variance between the writ and the declaration cannot be taken advantage of by a demurrer.—Wilder v. McCormick, Case No. 17,650; Wilkinson v. Pomeroy, Id. 17,675. But see Triplet v. Warfield, Case No. 14,177.

If a defendant wishes to contest the citizenship of the parties to an action in the national courts, he must do so by plea in abatement; and such a plea, if joined to one to the merits, may be stricken out, but is not liable to a demurrer.—Wythe v. Myers, Case No. 18,119.

Where a plea in abatement is bad, plaintiff need not demur, but may treat it as a nullity.—Anonymous, Case No. 18,224.

Where want of jurisdiction appears upon the face of the pleadings, the objection should be taken by demurrer; otherwise by plea.—Varner v. West, Case No. 16,885.

§ 40. Special demurrer.

A special demurrer may be filed in all actions in the courts of the United States. 1 Stat. 91. —Cage v. Jeffries, Case No. 2,287.

Defects reachable only by special demurrer at common law will be disregarded as special demurrers are abolished.—Chandler v. Byrd, Case No. 2,591b.

Objections to a replication for not alleging time and place can be taken only by special demurrer.—Blossburg & C. R. Co. v. Tioga R. Co., Case No. 1,563.

All defects in form in pleading can be taken advantage of only by special demurrer.—Jackson v. Rundlet, Case No. 7,145.

Objections to pleading for duplicity can be taken advantage of only by special demurrer.—Blossburg & C. R. Co. v. Tioga R. Co., Case No. 1,563.

A demurrer for duplicity must point out the particulars in which the duplicity consists.—Martin v. Bartow Iron Works, Case No. 9,157.

A special demurrer will not be permitted on setting aside an office judgment.—Whetcroft v. Dunlop, Case No. 17,506.

The objection to misjoinder of counts can only be taken by special demurrer.—Dobbin v. Foyles, Case No. 3,942.

Want of venue is reachable only by special demurrer.—Cocke v. Kendall, Case No. 2,929b.

A variance between the writ and declaration may be taken advantage of by special demurrer. —How v. McKinney, Case No. 6,749.

If a plea which purports to answer all the breaches in the declaration is a good answer to some of them only, the objection cannot be taken advantage of on error, but on special demurrer only.—United States v. Willard, Case No. 16,698.

Matters of abatement alleged as special causes for demurring will be disregarded, and the demurrer will be considered independently of them.—Furniss v. Ellis, Case No. 5,162.

A special demurrer operates as a general demurrer as to all the pleadings of the party demurring.—McCue v. Washington, Case No. 8,735.

§ 41. Demurrer to whole or part of pleading.

On a general demurrer, unless for misjoinder of actions, judgment must be given for the plaintiff, if there is one good count in the declaration.—French v. Tunstall, Case No. 5,104a; Parrott v. Barney, Id. 10,773a; Vermont v. Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, Id. 16,920.

A demurrer does not lie to a part of a plea or defense, or immaterial matter therein, but it must deny its sufficiency as a whole.—Lewis v. Oregon Central R. Co., Case No. 8,329.

In covenant, when several breaches are assigned, some of which are sufficient if defendant demur to the whole declaration, judgment must be given against him though part are bad.—Gill v. Stebbins, Case No. 5,431.

A demurrer that "the several pleas" are insufficient will be overruled, if there be one good plea in the record.—Brown v. Duchesne, Case No. 2,003.

Code Civ. Proc. N. Y. does not authorize a demurrer unless it is to the whole complaint or to a separate cause of action alleged therein.—Frericks v. Coster, Case No. 5,108a.

§ 42. Demurrer as opening record.

On demurrer judgment will be given against the one who committed the first fault in pleading.—Blossburg & C. R. Co. v. Tioga R. Co., Case No. 1,563; Bockee v. Crosby, Id. 1,593; Egberts v. Dibble, Id. 4,307; Greathouse v. Dunlap, Id. 5,742; Hart v. Rose, Id. 6,154a; McCue v. Washington, Id. 8,735; Sagory v. Wissman, Id. 12,217; United States v. Beard, Id. 14,551; Same v. Spencer, Id. 16,368.

The rule that on demurrer judgment must be rendered against him who commits the first fault in pleading is only applicable to faults that are bad on general demurrer.—Jackson v. Rundlet, Case No. 7,145.

A demurrer to a special plea cannot be carried back to the declaration where the general issue has been pleaded.—McDonald v. Orvis, Case No. 8,764.

On demurrer to a plea, the court will consider defects in the complaint which otherwise would have been considered waived by the plea.—Bank of Illinois v. Brady, Case No. 888.

§ 43. Admissions by demurrer.
A demurrer in a case proceeded on under the civil law does not prevent the party controverting the facts confessed.—Crawford v. The William Penn, Case No. 3,373.

§ 44. Pleading on overruling or sustaining demurrer.
After demurrer to a plea of set-off has been overruled, plaintiff should have leave to reply.—Rochell v. Phillips, Case No. 11,974a.

After judgment for the plaintiff on the defendant's demurrer, and writ of inquiry awarded, the court will not permit the defendant to plead de novo, unless he will withdraw his demurrer.—Woodrow v. Coleman, Case No. 17,983.

VI. AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS, REPLEADER, AND WITHDRAWAL OF PLEADINGS.

See, also, ante, § 44, and references under "Amendment."

§ 45. Power and discretion of court.
The powers of the court in cases of amendments are liberally exercised to promote justice. —Tiernan v. Woodruff, Case No. 14,027.

In courts proceeding under the civil law, amendments in case of variance are allowed with more freedom than in courts proceeding under the common law.—Crawford v. The William Penn, Case No. 3,373.

Amendments in England, under their statutes, constitute no rule for the courts in this country. —Brush v. Robbins, Case No. 2,059.

The allowance of amendments of defective pleadings is in the discretion of the court.—United States v. Batchelder, Case No. 14,541.

§ 46. Notice to adverse party.
A copy need not be served under the rule on the making of a slight amendment of the declaration, which in no respect can affect the merits of the case.—Spofford v. Ritten, Case No. 13,244.

§ 47. Amendment of declaration.
A declaration in an action brought in the name of a firm may be amended by inserting the names of the persons who compose the firm. —Tibbs v. Parrott, Case No. 14,022.

An error of the attorney in stating the name of defendant as "James" instead of "William" may be corrected.—Tilley v. Tharp, Case No. 14,047.

Mistake in plaintiff's name in declaration drawn by the clerk must be regarded as the mistake of the attorney, and amendment allowed only on defendant being permitted to plead de novo.—Furniss v. Ellis, Case No. 5,162.

An amendment by changing the form of the action from debt to covenant, and by striking out the name of one of the plaintiffs, will be allowed.—Tyson v. Belmont, Case No. 14,315a.

Plaintiff not allowed to amend to change the form of action from trespass on the case to debt.—Ten Broeck v. Pendelton, Case No. 13,827.

But the court may refuse to allow the declaration to be amended by striking out the name of one of the plaintiffs in the suit.—Moores v. Carter, Case No. 9,782a.

A party will be allowed to amend before trial his writ and declaration by striking out the name of one of the defendants.—Tobey v. Claflin, Case No. 14,066.

An amendment making new parties will not be allowed.—Morris v. Barney, Case No. 9,826.

An amendment by changing the action from case to covenant will not be granted.—Scholfield v. Fitzhugh, Case No. 12,474.

Declaration amended as of course at trial by suggesting proceeding by two non ests against a joint defendant not taken.—Brooklyn White Lead Co. v. Pierce, Case No. 1,940.

Declaration allowed to be amended by increasing the damages laid.—Gregg v. Gier, Case No. 5,799.

The amendment of a libel in the district court will not be allowed where the same introduces a new, substantive cause of action, and a new charge against defendant. Otherwise where the new cause of action corresponds in character, and is kindred in nature, to that presented in the original libel.—United States v. One Hundred and Twenty-Three Casks of Distilled Spirits, Case No. 15,943.

§ 48. Amendment of demurrer.
The court will not give leave to amend a demurrer unless it goes to the merits of the case. —Offutt v. Beatty, Case No. 10,448.

§ 49. Time of amendment.
The district courts may allow amendments of substance on terms, but this must be before final judgment.—Smith v. Jackson, Case No. 13,065.

Amendments may be made at any time before judgment, and in some cases afterwards.—Nelson v. Barker, Case No. 10,101.

The declaration may be amended at any time before the case is actually committed to the jury.—Smith v. Barker, Case No. 13,013.

At common law an amendment might be made while the proceedings were in paper.—Brush v. Robbins, Case No. 2,059.

Amendment not permitted at trial unless defense is just.—Allen v. Magruder, Case No. 230.

Plaintiff will not be permitted to amend after jury is sworn, if the justice of the case be against him.—Clarke v. Mayfield, Case No. 2,858.

An amendment of the declaration, offered after the jury is sworn, and introducing a new cause of action, cannot be allowed.—Postmaster General v. Ridgway, Case No. 11,313.

A misnomer may be amended after plea in abatement, the plea being the basis thereof.—Nelson v. Barker, Case No. 10,101.

An amendment may be allowed of a declaration after a special plea, replication, and demurrer, provided the cause of action remains the same, and costs are paid, arising from the demurrer.—Fiedler v. Carpenter, Case No. 4,759.

A defective averment of citizenship of parties may be amended after verdict.—Maddux v. Usher, Case No. 8,936.

An amendment to a plea, when not affecting the vital question on which the defense is based, should be allowed after commission issued.—Buchanan v. Trotter, Case No. 2,075.

§ 50. Imposing conditions on allowing amendment.

Leave given defendant to amend, on payment of costs of the term, or a continuance, at plaintiff's option.—Milburne v. Kearnes, Case No. 9,543.

The payment of costs, given on leave to amend, is not a condition precedent.—Butts v. Chapman, Case No. 2,257; Wigfield v. Dyer, Id. 17,622.

Leave to amend a declaration in assumpsit blank as to dates and amounts, allowed on payment of full costs, after plea of the statute of limitations.—Ferris v. Williams, Case No. 4,749.

The writ and declaration may be amended by substituting the corporate name of the plaintiff for "The Corporation of Georgetown," on payment of all costs, and a continuance and leave to plead de novo.—Georgetown v. Beatty, Case No. 5,344.

After a plea of misnomer in abatement, the court will not suffer the record to be amended, but upon payment of costs and a discharge of the bail.—Payen v. Hodgson, Case No. 10,853.

An amendment of the ad damnum clause in a declaration after verdict for a greater amount will only be allowed upon condition of a new trial and payment of costs.—Elting v. Campbell, Case No. 4,422.

§ 51. Form and sufficiency of amended pleading.

The citizenship of parties may be stated in the present tense in an amended declaration.—Birdsall v. Perego, Case No. 1,435.

§ 52. Effect of amendment.

A subsequent amendment of the record does not affect the issue under the plea of nul tiel record.—Barnes v. Lee, Case No. 1,017.

§ 53. Supplemental pleadings.

Matters arising since the complaint, which increase plaintiff's damages, but do not change the cause of action, may be alleged by supplemental complaint.—Frericks v. Coster, Case No. 5,108a.

Leave to file supplemental answer, setting up good technical, though inequitable, defense, refused where there was unreasonable delay.—French v. Edwards, Case No. 5,097.

Supplemental answers are in the nature of pleas puis darrein continuance under the former practice, and, like such pleas, should be interposed at the first opportunity after coming to the knowledge of the parties.—French v. Edwards, Case No. 5,097.

After three terms leave to file a new plea which would oblige plaintiff to suffer nonsuit granted on condition of paying all costs.—Anonymous, Case No. 476.

§ 54. Repleader.

Defendant allowed a repleader where a mistake is made in a plea of puis darrein continuance through inadvertence of his attorney.—Heye v. Lieman, Case No. 6,445a.

A repleader is never awarded in favor of him who commits the first fault in pleading, nor where there is one material issue in the cause.—Hartfield v. Patton, Case No. 6,158a.

§ 55. Withdrawal of pleadings.

Defendant not permitted to withdraw the general issue and file a general demurrer.—Deakins v. Lee, Case No. 3,697.

Plea to merits not allowed to be withdrawn to permit special demurrer.—Alricks v. Slater, Case No. 259.

In case of a plea of limitations and a general demurrer defendant was allowed to withdraw the latter.—Suckley v. Slade, Case No. 13,587.

After judgment for the plaintiff upon demurrer to the replication to the plea of limitations, the court will not permit the defendant to withdraw the demurrer, and rejoin specially, unless he can show by affidavit that it is necessary to the justice of the case.—Wilson v. Mandeville, Case No. 17,821.

A plea in bar cannot be withdrawn, after the case has been prepared for trial, in order to file a plea in abatement.—Yeatman v. Henderson, Case No. 18,132.

Court will not order general issue to be stricken out to give defendant leave to plead in abatement.—Bank of Columbia v. Scott, Case No. 880.

After plea by appearance bail, defendant allowed to withdraw such plea, and plead anew.—Pickett v. Lyle, Case No. 11,125.

VII. SIGNATURE AND VERIFICATION.

See, also, ante, § 29.

§ 56. Sufficiency of signature.

A plea to the jurisdiction must be signed by the defendant in person.—Adams v. White, Case No. 68.

A pleading of a county, not subscribed by the proper district attorney, is not duly subscribed, and may be stricken out of the case. Civ. Code Or. §§ 79, 103.—Moreland v. Marion County, Case No. 9,794.

§ 57. Time of verification.

The verification of a plea should be made when it is filed; it cannot be made at the trial.—Benedict v. Maynard, Case No. 1,296.

§ 58. Sufficiency of verification.

Contents of a notary's certificate to verification of bill by agent of corporation plaintiff.—Blake Crusher Co. v. Ward, Case No. 1,505.

An agreement that an answer may be sworn to in France, before any person authorized to administer oaths by the laws of France, is not complied with where the answer is sworn to before the American consul.—Herman v. Herman, Case No. 6,407.

§ 59. Effect of failure to verify.

A plea denying the execution of an instrument sued on, if not sworn to as required in such case by the Indiana statute, admits the instrument, but is good for other purposes.—McClintick v. Johnston, Case No. 8,700.

An unsworn plea denying the signature to the instrument on which the action is brought admits the signature.—Benedict v. Maynard, Case No. 1,296.

VIII. PROFERT AND OYER.

§ 60. When party entitled.

If a party partially states a deed, which is defective, or contains matter qualifying the part stated, the defendant may crave oyer of the deed, and set forth the whole, and then demur.—Hobson v. McArthur, Case No. 6,554.

Profert of the bond declared on, and a collateral agreement necessary to establish the right to a recovery, being made in the declaration, defendant is entitled to oyer.—Hammer v. Klein, Case No. 5,998.

After oyer, and issue on the plea of payment, the plaintiff is not bound to again produce the bond.—Darlington v. Groverman, Case No. 3,576.

Upon an issue on plea of general performance, plaintiff is not bound to produce the original covenant sued upon.—Beall v. Newton, Case No. 1,164.

After oyer prayed and demurrer by the defendant, the plaintiff is not bound to give over at a subsequent term.—Offutt v. Beatty, Case No. 10,448.

Oyer cannot be demanded where profert not made.—Campbell v. Strong, Case No. 2,367a.

Plaintiff is not bound to give oyer of an instrument not in his possession and equally accessible to defendant.—Rockhill v. Hanna, Case No. 11,979.

§ 61. Time of demanding.
Oyer of plaintiff's letters of administration cannot be demanded after pleading to the merits.—Grahame v. Cooke, Case No. 5,678.

Oyer of the record of a judgment of another state will not be given if not prayed before the expiration of the rule to plead.—Cull v. Allen, Case No. 3,465.

§ 62. Sufficiency.
A copy will be received as oyer when a profert has been made of the original, and, if a copy is offered, the defendant may demur.—Wellford v. Miller, Case No. 17,381.

IX. BILL OF PARTICULARS.

§ 63. When bill will be ordered.
A bill of particulars will not be ordered where the matters of which information is sought are peculiarly within the knowledge of the party asking it, or where, from the nature of the case, plaintiff cannot be reasonably expected to be able to give the items.—United States v. Tilden, Case No. 16,521.

A bill of particulars ordered on information for violation of the revenue laws, where the allegations therein were vague.—United States v. Two Hundred Bushels of Corn, Case No. 16,586.

Sufficient information as to the particular article about which evidence is to be given can be obtained by an order for a bill of particulars, and for the exhibition to defendant of the article itself.—United States v. Foote, Case No. 15,128.

§ 64. Sufficiency and effect.
A bill of particulars appended to a petition to recover money paid as usury, which sets forth the usurious payments as general indebtedness for cash paid by the plaintiff to the defendant, is sufficient.—Whitaker v. Pope, Case No. 17,-528.

Where a plaintiff is called on to furnish a bill of particulars, he is limited in his proof to the items thus made out.—Williams v. Sinclair, Case No. 17,737.

An allegation in a bill of particulars that money unlawfully exacted was paid to a provost marshal raises no inference that the money was received by the commander of the post.—Kimberly v. Butler, Case No. 7,777.

X. MOTIONS.

§ 65. Motions to strike out.
A demurrer to a plea to a chancery attachment waives the right to move to strike out the plea, as having been made without giving special bail.—Irwin v. Henderson, Case No. 7,084.

An unnecessary plea will, on motion, be directed to be withdrawn, as improperly incumbering the record.—Hacker v. Stevens, Case No. 5,888; Varnum v. Campbell, Id. 16,887.

Ambiguity or uncertainty is not a ground of motion to strike out.—Gager v. Harrison, Case No. 5,171.

Objection for duplicity, under the Oregon Code, must be made by motion to strike out.—McKay v. Campbell, Case No. 8,839.

Bad pleas filed by a party given leave to amend may be stricken out on motion.—Parker v. Lewis, Case No. 10,741a.

Plea false on its face may be stricken out.—Bachman v. Everding, Case No. 708.

A plea of the statute of limitations, filed after the plea day, without leave of court, will be stricken out on motion.—Scott v. Lewis, Case No. 12,539.

A complaint containing more than one cause of action will be stricken out for duplicity, unless they are separately stated.—McKay v. Campbell, Case No. 8,839.

The sufficiency, in point of substance, of a plea which is regular in form, cannot be inquired into on motion.—Tyler v. Hyde, Case No. 14,310.

XI. ISSUES, PROOF, AND VARIANCE.

Issues, proof, and variance in particular actions and proceedings.

See "Assumpsit, Action of," § 5; "Covenant, Action of," § 4; "Debt, Action of," § 3; "Ejectment," § 11; "Libel and Slander," § 18; "Malicious Prosecutions," § 7; "Replevin," § 9; "Trespass," § 8.
By and against assignees in bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," § 362.
—— executors or administrators, see "Executors and Administrators," § 49.
—— partners, see "Partnership," § 37.
—— seamen, see "Seamen," §§ 139, 173.
For breach of promise of marriage, see "Breach of Marriage Promise," § 2.
For collision, see "Collision," § 129.
For forfeiture, see "Customs Duties," § 101.
For infringement of patent, see "Patents," §§ 198, 227.
For price of goods sold, see "Sales," § 44.
For usury, see "Usury," § 16.
In admiralty, see "Admiralty," § 89.
In bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," §§ 117, 571.
In equity, see "Equity," §§ 88, 89.
On bills or notes, see "Bills and Notes," § 99.
On bonds, see "Bonds," § 22.
On contract, see "Contracts," § 40.
On insurance policy, see "Insurance," § 173.
On judgment, see "Judgment," § 83.
To recover payment, see "Payment," § 18.

§ 66. Joinder of issues of fact.
Two affirmative facts in a plea and replication may be so contradictory as to make an issue, as where the plea averred diligence in the prosecution of a suit, and the replication charged negligence.—Walker v. Johnson, Case No. 17,-074.

In debt on bond, entry of pleadings as "covenants performed," "joined," is sufficient joinder of issue.—Alexandria v. Bowne, Case No. 180.

To a plea of want of consideration for the making and for the assignment of a note plaintiff should take issue on one or the other, and not on both.—McClintick v. Johnston, Case No. 8,-700.

§ 67. Evidence admissible under pleadings.
The plaintiff cannot give evidence of a consideration different from that alleged in the declaration.—Watson v. Dunlap, Case No. 17,282.

Under a plea of the general issue evidence may be introduced to show fraud or fraudulent representations on the part of the plaintiff as to the subject-matter of the suit.—Goodyear v. Day, Case No. 5,567.

§ 68. Variance between allegations and proof.
A bond payable on a day certain constitutes a variance from a declaration describing it (in legal effect) as payable on or before that date.—Kikindal v. Mitchell, Case No. 7,763.

Where the declaration was for money received to plaintiff's use, and the evidence showed that the money was received on joint account for plaintiff and his partners, a nonsuit was granted for variance.—Jordan v. Wilkins, Case No. 7,526.

Whenever time is material, whether in matters of contract or of tort, the plaintiff is strictly bound by the time specified in the declaration.—Eastman v. Bodfish, Case No. 4,255.

An averment of the demise from year to year for three years, at a certain sum per year, is not supported by evidence of a demise where the rent for one year was to be less than such sum.—Dorsey v. Chenault, Case No. 4,013.

Variance between proof of by-law of March 27 and averment of March 26.—Alexandria v. Brockett, Case No. 181.

Where the legal effect of an instrument would be the same whether the words constituting the variance be inserted or not, the variance is immaterial.—Cannell v. Milburn, Case No. 2,384.

XII. WAIVER OF OBJECTIONS AND AIDER BY VERDICT.

§ 69. Waiver of objections in general.
A general plea of nonassumpsit to several counts waives the objection that no account was exhibited with the declaration, as alleged therein.—Semmes v. Lee, Case No. 12,652.

After receiving and replying to a pleading the party cannot treat it, upon any ground of defect afterwards discovered, as a nullity, and proceed as if none had been served.—Gaines v. Travis, Case No. 5,179.

§ 70. Aider by verdict.
What defects in pleading title are cured by verdict.—Gray v. James, Case No. 5,719.

Where the declaration omits to state a fact which must necessarily have been proved at the trial to justify the verdict, the defect is cured by the verdict, if the general terms of the declaration are otherwise sufficient to comprehend the proof.—Dobson v. Campbell, Case No. 3,945.

A verdict will not cure a variance between the covenant alleged in the declaration and that produced on oyer.—Ingle v. Collard, Case No. 7,-043.

Omission of the averments of citizenship and of the value of the property in dispute are defects of substance, not cured by verdict, and not amendable after final judgment.—Smith v. Jackson, Case No. 13,065.

PLEDGES.

§ 1, What constitutes. § 2, Delivery. § 3, Indorsement of negotiable instruments. § 4, Consideration. § 5, Substitution. § 6, Duties and liabilities of pledgee. § 7, Lien of pledge. § 8, Redemption.

Attachment of pledged property, see "Attachments," § 3.
By factors, see "Factors," § 6.
Of insolvent debtor's property, see "Bankruptcy," § 255.

§ 1. What constitutes.
A silver cornet was delivered to the landlord, with an absolute bill of sale, as security for rent. The tenant subsequently borrowed it to use, and failed to return it. Held, that the transaction was a pledge, and that the lien was gone.—In re Harlow, Case No. 6,070.

§ 2. Delivery.
A delivery of the thing pledged where actual delivery is possible is necessary to render the pledge valid.—In re Wiley, Case No. 17,655.

Delivery to the pledgee may be either actual or constructive.—Ex parte Fitz, Case No. 4,837.

Possession may be kept by an agent, and that agent may be the pledgor.—Ex parte Fitz, Case No. 4,837.

The pledge of a note at the time in the lawful possession of a third person may be valid without actual delivery to the pledgee.—In re Wiley, Case No. 17,655.

§ 3. Indorsement of negotiable instruments.
It is doubtful, in Louisiana, whether indorsement as well as delivery is essential to the pledge of negotiable instruments.—Casey v. La Societe De Credit Mobilier, Case No. 2,496.

§ 4. Consideration.
A pledge or mortgage made to secure a debt previously incurred, but still subsisting, or to indemnify against a present liability arising out of a past contract, is made on a sufficient consideration.—In re Wiley, Case No. 17,655.

§ 5. Substitution.
Where bank notes were pledged to secure a loan, and, as they fell due, substituted others in their place, the pledge of the substituted notes is valid.—Casey v. La Societe De Credit Mobilier, Case No. 2,496.

§ 6. Duties and liabilities of pledgee.
A creditor vested with authority to sell securities deposited with him cannot exercise it otherwise than under a trust for the debtor's benefit.—Sparhawk v. Drexel, Case No. 13,204.

Where the giving of notice of the sale of a pledge has been rendered impossible by the act of the pledgor, neither the pledgee nor its agent in the sale of the collateral was liable for conversion.—City Bank of Racine v. Babcock, Case No. 2,741.

The holder of collateral security is not liable for a loss occurring without his fault, nor for neglecting to enforce the security when the debtor was, by the understanding of the parties, to do this.—Brown v. Hiatt, Case No. 2,011.

§ 7. Lien of pledge.
Corporate stock is bound for the payment of interest, where it is pledged for the redemption of certificates of debt, which in turn bind the debtor for the payment of "the sum therein mentioned and the interest thereon."—Swasey v. North Carolina R. Co., Case No. 13,679.

In the case of houses composed of the same persons, but transacting business under different names at different places, securities deposited with one to cover a special loan are not subject to a general lien in favor of the other.—Sparhawk v. Drexel, Case No. 13,204.

Where a creditor in a privileged relation, which gives him a general lien, receives security to cover a particular accommodation, such security is subject to the general lien.—Sparhawk v. Drexel, Case No. 13,204.

A person advancing money on the pledge of a policy of insurance on goods is entitled to the proceeds as against a surety on a bottomry bond given by the pledgor to the insurance company.—Wiggin v. Dorr, Case No. 17,625.

Railroad coupons held by a creditor as security were converted into land, the unrecorded deeds for which were deposited with the creditor in place of the coupons. Held, that such creditor had an equity in the land superior to the lien of a general judgment creditor.—First Nat. Bank v. Caldwell, Case No. 4,798.

§ 8. Redemption.
Pledged bonds sold at public auction, and bought in by the pledgee, may nevertheless be redeemed within a reasonable time; but a delay of 11 years after the sale is unreasonable.—Marsh v. Whitmore, Case No. 9,122.

POLICE POWER.

See "Constitutional Law," § 3.
Of municipality, see "Municipal Corporations," §§ 19-21.

POLICY.

Of insurance, see "Insurance."

POLITICAL POWERS.

See "Courts," § 2.

POLITICAL RIGHTS.

See "Constitutional Law," § 4.
Suffrage, see "Elections."

POSSESSION.

See "Adverse Possession."
Writ of assistance, see "Assistance, Writ of."

POST OFFICE.

I. POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT, POST OFFICES, POSTMASTERS AND OTHER OFFICERS, AND CARRIAGE OF MAILS.

§ 1, Postmaster general. § 2, Postmasters. § 3, Deputies and assistants. § 4, Bonds of officers—Necessity for bond. § 5, —— Requisites and validity of bond. § 6, —— Liabilities of sureties. § 7, —— Discharge of sureties. § 8, —— Actions on bonds and amount of recovery. § 9, Establishment of post roads. § 10, Contracts for carriage of mails.

II. OFFENSES AGAINST POSTAL LAWS.

§ 11, In general. § 12, Embezzlement or larceny of mail. § 13, Opening or detaining letters. § 14, Sending matter concerning lotteries. § 15, Unlawful franking. § 16, Illegal carrying, and private expresses. § 17, Robbery of mails. § 18, Obstructing the mail. § 19, Inclosures in printed matter. § 20, Receiving stolen mail matter. § 21, Sending obscene and indecent matter. § 22, Indictment or information—In general. § 23, —— Embezzlement or larceny. § 24, —— Illegal carriage. § 25, —— Unlawful franking. § 26, —— Opening letters. § 27, —— Sending obscene matter. § 28, —— Variance. § 29, Evidence.

Condemning land for building, see "Eminent Domain," § 1.
Mailing protest, see "Bills and Notes," § 76.
Removal of causes arising under post office laws, see "Removal of Causes," § 8.

I. POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT, POST OFFICES, POSTMASTERS AND OTHER OFFICERS, AND CARRIAGE OF MAILS.

See, also, "Collision," § 2.

§ 1. Postmaster general.
The postmaster general, in the discharge of those duties which are prescribed by law, is not lawfully subject to the control of the president. —United States v. Kendall, Case No. 15,517.

Act March 3, 1851, § 3, authorizes the postmaster general to deliver postage stamps to a deputy postmaster without prepayment; the intent being to require prepayment of persons not deputy postmasters.—United States v. Mason, Case No. 15,737.

§ 2. Postmasters.
The discretion of the postmaster general in granting or refusing extra allowance to postmasters for extra labor and expense in certain cases (Act June 22, 1854) is not subject to judicial review.—United States v. Davis, Case No. 14,927.

No postmaster has a legal right to the allowance for the necessary cost of rent, fuel, etc. (Act July 1, 1864, § 5), until it is awarded him by the postmaster general.—United States v. Davis, Case No. 14,927.

As to duties of postmasters in keeping moneys received for postage.—Trafton v. United States, Case No. 14,135.

No surrender of the property of the postoffice department to the government of the Confederate States, under any other than the coercion of armed force, will excuse a postmaster from liability on his bond.—United States v. Morrison, Case No. 15,817.

A postmaster, until the action of the postmaster general, does not vacate his office by remaining out of the neighborhood.—United States v. Pearce, Case No. 16,020.

§ 3. Deputies and assistants.
A deposit of post-office receipts in the joint name of the postmaster and his assistant does not make them jointly liable.—Trafton v. United States, Case No. 14,135.

Act March 3, 1825, substitutes a certified statement of the settled account as evidence in suits against deputy postmasters in lieu of the certified copy of the account current required by Act April 30, 1810.—Postmaster General v. Rice, Case No. 11,312.

The liability of a deputy postmaster and of his clerks for negligence in the forwarding of letters, and the sufficiency of pleadings, and admissibility of evidence in an action for damages, determined.—Dunlop v. Munroe, Case No. 4,167.

See, also, post, §§ 11-29.

§ 4. Bonds of officers—Necessity for bond.
The postmaster general may require a bond from a deputy for the faithful performance of his duties, though such bond is not expressly required by law.—Postmaster General v. Reeder, Case No. 11,311; Same v. Rice, Id. 11,312.

§ 5. —— Requisites and validity of bond.
A bond given by a postmaster, with sureties, for the performance of his official duties, does not constitute a binding contract until approved and accepted by the postmaster general.—Postmaster General v. Norvell, Case No. 11,310.

The reception and detention of an official bond by the postmaster general for a considerable time, without objection, is sufficient evidence of its acceptance.—Postmaster General v. Norvell, Case No. 11,310.

The return of the bond for the purpose of obtaining an additional surety affords no proof that it had not been accepted; nor does it amount either to a surrender or canceling of it. —Postmaster General v. Norvell, Case No. 11,-310.

§ 6. —— Liability of sureties.
The sureties on the bond of a deputy postmaster, which stipulates that the principal shall faithfully account for postage stamps received, are liable as upon a contract at common law.—United States v. Mason, Case No. 15,737.

The sureties on the official bond of a deputy postmaster are liable for his neglect as an agent of the postmaster general.—Boody v. United States, Case No. 1,636.

Balances due from postmasters may be extinguished by subsequent payments, so that, when the account is continued through a series of years, the postmaster's sureties will remain liable for a deficiency in his last quarterly account, until two years thereafter. Act March 3, 1825, §§ 3, 31.—United States v. Kershner, Case No. 15,527.

Under Act March 3, 1851, the sureties on the bond of a deputy postmaster are liable for postage stamps received by him.—United States v. Mason, Case No. 15,737.

§ 7. —— Discharge of sureties.
The sureties on official bonds are not discharged by the delay of the postmaster general to bring suits thereon.—Locke v. Postmaster General, Case No. 8,441; Postmaster General v. Reeder, Id. 11,311.

But under Act March 3, 1825, the sureties on a postmaster's bond are discharged where a suit is not brought within two years after a default. —Postmaster General v. Fennell, Case No. 11,-307; Roddy v. United States, Id. 11,990; United States v. Davis, Id. 14,929; Same v. Sears, Id. 16,246.

Such act does not apply to a default which occurred before the passing of the act.—Postmaster General v. Rice, Case No. 11,312.

Such act does not apply in cases of balances unpaid at the end of a quarter, which are subsequently liquidated by the receipts of a succeeding one.—Postmaster General v. Norvell, Case No. 11,310.

Mere indulgence or forbearance on the part of the government towards a defaulting postmaster for an indefinite time, in the absence of fraud, will not discharge his sureties.—United States v. Wright, Case No. 16,776.

The fact that the government continued a postmaster in office after discovery of a defalcation, and delayed to disclose the same, will not relieve his sureties from liability for subsequent defalcations.—United States v. Wright, Case No. 16,776.

The possession of the office of a postmaster by a special agent of the department for one day, while adjusting his accounts, will not release his sureties from all subsequent liability under Rev. St. § 3836.—United States v. Wright, Case No. 16,776.

The sureties on the official bond of a postmaster are not discharged by the making of an order of the postmaster general directing the postmaster to retain balances due until drawn for.—Locke v. Postmaster General, Case No. 8,441; Postmaster General v. Reeder, Id. 11,-311.

An act of congress increasing rates of postage, and consequently the responsibility of the postmaster's sureties, will not discharge them.—Postmaster General v. Munger, Case No. 11,-309.

The giving of a new bond by a postmaster does not discharge sureties on the old bond for past or subsequent defaults.—Postmaster General v. Munger, Case No. 11,309; Same v. Reeder, Id. 11,311.

In such case all the sureties are responsible for defaults happening after giving the second bond.—Postmaster General v. Munger, Case No. 11,309.

§ 8. —— Actions on bonds and amount of recovery.
A transcript, from the post-office department, of the balances struck by the postmaster is sufficient to charge him.—Lawrence v. United States, Case No. 8,145.

The return of a postmaster for a full quarter is evidence against his surety to show an average liability for a part of the quarter.—Lawrence v. United States, Case No. 8,145.

In an action on a postmaster's bond, defendant may counterclaim items which have been duly presented to the proper department for allowance and rejected.—United States v. Davis, Case No. 14,927.

Where there are items of debit and credit in a running account between the postmaster general and the deputy postmasters, in the absence of any specific appropriation by either party, the credits are to be applied to the discharge of the debits antecedently due, in the order of the account.—Postmaster General v. Furber, Case No. 11,308.

A payment, made by a postmaster, of a greater sum than the receipts of the quarter, should be applied as a credit for a subsequent quarter, as well before as after the date of his official bond.—Lawrence v. United States, Case No. 8,145.

§ 9. Establishment of post roads.
Constitutional provision for establishment of post roads means such roads as are laid out by the authority of the state.—Cleveland, P. & A. R. Co. v. Franklin Canal Co., Case No. 2,890.

"Post routes," which the postmaster general is authorized by Act March 3, 1851, § 10, to establish within cities and towns, are not the same as "post roads," in the act of 1827.—United States v. Kochersperger, Case No. 15,-541.

Act of congress making all railroads post roads means only such as have charters from the state. —Cleveland, P. & A. R. Co. v. Franklin Canal Co., Case No. 2,890.

§ 10. Contracts for carriage of mails.
The master or owner is not liable for the neglect of a clerk in failing to deliver a letter of which the former had no knowledge, unless they fail to exercise reasonable diligence.—United States v. Beaty, Case No. 14,555.

A recommendation by the postmaster general to the secretary of the navy to make a deduction from the pay of a contractor, on the ground that a portion of a service was performed by a steamer not of the class stipulated for in the contract, is not the imposition of a fine within the terms of the act.—United States v. Collins, Case No. 14,834.

The master or owner of a steamboat is not liable to the penalty of $150 (Act 1845, § 13) for failure to deliver a letter, unless it has been brought to him, or intrusted to his care, or is within his power.—United States v. Beaty, Case No. 14,555.

The postmaster general has no power under Act June 27, 1848, to impose a fine on a contractor for carrying the mails for delays, except for the causes specified in the act.—United States v. Collins, Case No. 14,834.

II. OFFENSES AGAINST POSTAL LAWS.

§ 11. In general.
Offenses under the post-office law are not felonies, but misdemeanors.—United States v. Lancaster, Case No. 15,556.

§ 12. Embezzlement or larceny of mail.
The embezzlement of a letter and the stealing of its contents are distinct offenses under Rev. St. § 5467.—United States v. Taylor, Case No. 16,438.

A letter delivered to an authorized agent cannot be charged to have been embezzled.—United States v. Sander, Case No. 16,219.

The stealing or taking a letter, etc., under section 22, means a taking with a criminal intent, and not a taking through mistake, or with an innocent intent.—United States v. Pearce, Case No. 16,020.

Rev. St. § 5467, is not confined to the offense of stealing or taking things out of a letter packet or bag, but includes the taking of the letter itself.—United States v. Pelletreau, Case No. 16,023.

No one can be convicted under Act 1825, § 21, who is not employed in the post-office department.—United States v. Nott, Case No. 15,900.

An employé in a post office, who steals gold dust from a letter in the mail, is liable to indictment, whether the same be mailable or not, under Act July 1, 1864, § 12.—United States v. Randall, Case No. 16,118.

To constitute the offense, it is not necessary that the letters stolen should have been taken out of the post-office building.—United States v. Nott, Case No. 15,900.

To constitute a post office under Act March 3, 1825, § 22, there need not be a building or room set apart. The post office may be a desk, trunk, or box, carried from one house or building to another.—United States v. Marselis, Case No. 15,724.

The place of deposit of the mailable matter would, in such case, constitute the post office, so that taking anything therefrom would be within Act March 3, 1825, § 22.—United States v. Marselis, Case No. 15,724.

A post-office clerk who steals a letter or package from the post office is punishable under Act March 3, 1825, § 22.—United States v. Marselis, Cases Nos. 15,724, 15,725.

An errand boy authorized to receive letters from the mail, who embezzles the contents of a letter so received, is not liable under Act March 3, 1825, § 22, as the taking was lawful.—United States v. Driscoll, Case No. 14,994.

One sworn in as a deputy postmaster, who handled the mail whenever he was about the post office and felt inclined to do so, is an employé within the meaning of the law.—United States v. Brent, Case No. 14,640.

A mail carrier is within Act April 30, 1810, § 13, punishing embezzlement by any person "employed in any of the departments of the general post office."—United States v. Belew, Case No. 14,563.

A person is not guilty of taking and embezzling a letter (Rev. St. § 3792) where he took from the post office and retained a registered letter addressed in his care to a person who was dead, and retained a draft inclosed therein.—United States v. Thoma, Case No. 16,471.

A decoy letter, containing money, mailed for the purpose of entrapping an employé in a post office, who opens it, and takes the money, is within Act March 3, 1825, § 21.—United States v. Cottingham, Case No. 14,872; Same v. Foye, Id. 15,157.

See, also, "Embezzlement."

§ 13. Opening or detaining letters.

After the deposit of a letter in the post office, no one except the writer or the addressee, or some one authorized by them, has the right, while it is there, to open it, for the mere purpose of ascertaining its contents.—United States v. Eddy, Case No. 15,024.

Neither the postmaster nor other officers have any authority to open it under the pretext that there might be something improper or even criminal therein.—United States v. Eddy, Case No. 15,024.

The delivery of a letter to an errand boy is a delivery to his employer, within Act March 3, 1825, § 22, and he cannot be convicted of opening the same "before it shall have been delivered to the person to whom it is directed."—United States v. Driscoll, Case No. 14,994.

It is an offense to open a letter, which has been in the post office, before delivery to the addressee, with intent to obstruct his correspondence, or pry into his business or secrets, though the letter was not sealed, and was written by defendant himself, and the addressee's name was not correctly given. Act March 3, 1825, § 22.—United States v. Pond, Case No. 16,067.

Act March 3, 1825, § 22, in relation to opening letters to obstruct correspondence, etc., applies only where the possession of letters was obtained wrongfully from the post office, or from a mail carrier.—United States v. Parsons, Case No. 16,000.

A person who receives a letter from a letter carrier, addressed to another, without fraud or artifice, is not liable to indictment under Act March 3, 1825, § 22, where he opens the same and embezzles money therefrom.—United States v. Parsons, Case No. 16,000.

A person who, without artifice, receives a letter for another, addressed in his care, and opens and destroys the same, cannot be convicted of opening the same with the design to obstruct the correspondence, etc., of another.—United States v. Mulvaney, Case No. 15,833.

On an indictment for taking a letter from the post office with intent to obstruct correspondence (Rev. St. § 3892), defendant may be convicted without evidence of an unlawful, clandestine, or fraudulent taking.—United States v. Nutt, Case No. 15,904.

Proof of an intentional nondelivery of a letter so taken from a post office may be sufficient.—United States v. Nutt, Case No. 15,904.

A person indicted for such taking of a letter with intent to pry into the business or secrets of another cannot be convicted if he knew the contents of the letter before he received it.—United States v. Nutt, Case No. 15,904.

It is no defense that the letter related in part to defendant's business, or that in good faith he believed that the letter was of no value to the person to whom it was addressed, even if such be the fact, or that the letter was voluntarily delivered to defendant by the postman.—United States v. Nutt, Case No. 15,904.

The writer of a letter which has passed from the office where mailed has no right to intercept it, or authorize its delivery to a person other than the one to whom it is directed.—United States v. Nutt, Case No. 15,904.

A person who takes a letter out of the post office and reads it by authority of the addressee, where it was also intended for him, does not violate the post-office law.—United States v. Tanner, Case No. 16,430.

Act 1825, § 21, which prescribes a punishment for the detention of a letter or packet, refers to a letter or packet detained before it reaches the place of destination.—United States v. Pearce, Case No. 16,020.

A letter dropped in a post office, intended for a person at such place, is not a letter intended to be "conveyed" by post. Act 1825, c. 275, § 21.—United States v. Oliver, Case No. 15,917.

A letter carrier who delivers letters from house to house is a mail carrier, within Act March 3, 1825, § 22.—United States v. Parsons, Case No. 16,000.

§ 14. Sending matter concerning lotteries.

An act prohibiting the carrying in the mail of letters or circulars concerning lotteries, and punishing as a crime the sending of such matter through the mails, is not unconstitutional.—In re Jackson, Case No. 7,124.

§ 15. Unlawful franking.

Though unlawful, it is not penal for a member of congress to frank envelopes to be used in transmitting printed circulars through the mail. Act March 3, 1825. § 28.—Dewees' Case, Case No. 3,848.

§ 16. Illegal carrying, and private expresses.

Act March 3, 1825, § 21, prohibiting mail carriers carrying letters or packets, does not prohibit their carrying a package containing executions only.—United States v. Chaloner, Case No. 14,777.

The postal law of 1845, prohibiting the establishing of private expresses, held constitutional. —United States v. Thompson, Case No. 16,489.

An expressman conveying letters in an express car is punishable, under Act 1825, c. 275. —United States v. Gray, Case No. 15,253.

The carrier of letters by private express, in a package, is not liable to the penalty under the act of 1825, unless he knew that the package contained letters.—United States v. Adams, Case No. 14,421.

Act March 2, 1827, § 3, and Act March 3, 1845, § 9, prohibit the business of private letter carriers on mail routes, but not within the limits of a post town.—United States v. Kochersperger, Case No. 15,541.

An order of the postmaster general declaring the streets of a city to be post roads does not make them so, within the act of 1827, or render the business of private letter carriers therein unlawful.—United States v. Kochersperger, Case No. 15,541.

The setting up of a post by railroad or steamboat service is not setting up a foot post, within Act 1827, § 3.—United States v. Kimball, Case No. 15,531.

The carrying of letters, though without distinct compensation, which are not in the form of receipts, etc., is a violation of the law.—United States v. Thompson, Case No. 16,489.

It is not unlawful for an express company to carry with a money letter or package an unstamped letter of advice concerning such money. Act March 3, 1845, § 9.—United States v. United States Exp. Co., Case No. 16,602.

The proprietor of a post road is not liable for the penalty (Act March 3, 1825, § 19), where letters are carried over his line by a passenger without his knowledge.—United States v. Hall, Case No. 15,281; Same v. Kimball, Id. 15,531; Same v. Pomeroy, Id. 16,065.

The owner of the line is liable where, by public advertisement, he has notice of the fact that certain persons or agents are thus sending letters; and in such case the persons employing the agents are liable, under section 24.—United States v. Hall, Case No. 15,281.

Where the owner of the line is not liable under section 19, no penalty is incurred, under section 24, by the person who sends such letters. —United States v. Hall, Case No. 15,281; Same v. Kimball, Id. 15,531.

§ 17. Robbery of mails.

The word "rob," in Act March 3, 1825, § 22, is used in its common-law sense.—United States v. Wilson, Case No. 16,730.

The offense of robbing the mail is a capital crime if effected by the use of dangerous weapons.—United States v. Hare, Case No. 15,304; Same v. Wood, Id. 16,757.

A sword or pistol in the hand of a robber, by terror of which the robbery is effected, is a dangerous weapon, within the law, though the sword be not drawn, and the pistol be not pointed.—United States v. Wood, Case No. 16,756.

The offer or threat to shoot with a pistol is within the law without proof that the pistol was loaded.—United States v. Wilson, Case No. 16,730; Same v. Wood, Id. 16,756.

Putting the person in custody of the mails in fear and his life in peril is putting his life in jeopardy.—United States v. Wood, Case No. 16,757.

"Jeopardy" means a well-grounded apprehension of danger to life in case of refusal or resistance.—United States v. Wilson, Case No. 16,730.

The possession and exhibition of dangerous weapons in effecting the robbery of the mail is within Act April 30, 1810, § 19, cl. 2.—United States v. Bernard, Case No. 14,584.

Robbers of a mail stage held not to intend to effect the robbery by the use of dangerous weapons which would put the guard's life in jeopardy, where, though armed, and dangerously wounded, they took precautions against injuring the guard.—United States v. Aminhisor, Case No. 14,442.

Carrier of the mail need not have taken the oath prescribed by section 2, nor need the whole mail be taken, to authorize a conviction.—United States v. Wilson, Case No. 16,730.

§ 18. Obstructing the mail.

Elements of the offense of obstructing the mails stated in a charge to the jury.—United States v. Lawhead, Case No. 15,570.

An intention to obstruct the mail flows from an unlawful act that so operates, although its primary object was to accomplish another purpose.—United States v. Stevens, Case No. 16,392.

The offense of obstructing the mail, under Rev. St. § 3995, is not committed unless the mail is in transitu, and the horse or vehicle taken is employed in carrying the mail.—United States v. McCracken, Case No. 15,664.

A mail carrier driving through a crowded city at such a rate as to endanger the lives of the inhabitants may be arrested by a constable without a warrant.—United States v. Hart, Case No. 15,316.

A warrant in a civil suit against a mail carrier is no justification to the officer executing it, on an indictment for obstructing the mail.—United States v. Harvey, Case No. 15,320.

The unlawful stopping of a passenger train by persons who are willing to permit the passage of the mail car detached from the passenger car is punishable under Rev. St. § 3995, as a willful obstruction or retarding of the passage of the mail.—United States v. Clark, Case No. 14,805.

A driver and carrier of the United States mail is exempt from arrest on civil process while engaged in the service, which includes waiting for the mail.—United States v. Bean, Case No. 14,550.

The lien of a private citizen against horses for their livery cannot be enforced so as to stop the United States mail in a stage coach drawn by such horses.—United States v. Barney, Case No. 14,525.

§ 19. Inclosures in printed matter.

The mere writing of a name on a newspaper is not within the prohibition of the post-office act.—United States v. Grafton, Case No. 15,245.

§ 20. Receiving stolen mail matter.

It is an offense under Act March 3, 1825, § 45, to receive or buy an article knowing it to have been stolen from the mail.—United States v. Keene, Case No. 15,512.

§ 21. Sending obscene and indecent matter.

Rev. St. § 3893, forbidding the depositing in the mail of any obscene or indecent publication, is not repugnant to any constitutional provision. —United States v. Bennett, Case No. 14,571.

The test of obscenity, within the meaning of the statute, is whether the tendency of the matter is to deprave and corrupt the morals of those whose minds are open to such influences, and into whose hands a publication of the sort may fall.—United States v. Bennett, Case No. 14,571.

A pamphlet of twenty-four pages, consisting of a sheet and a half, secured together by stitching, with a cover of four pages, and a title page, is properly described as a book.—United States v. Bennett, Case No. 14,571.

A notice in the form of a letter inclosed in a sealed envelope, if it give the prohibited information, is within the scope of the statute.—United States v. Foote, Case No. 15,128.

A written slip of paper giving the prohibited information is a "notice," within the meaning of the statute, although not volunteered, but sent in reply to a letter asking for the information.—United States v. Foote, Case No. 15,128.

A sealed letter, written by defendant to a person who had no existence, in answer to a decoy letter of a detective, and which, on its face, gives no information of the prohibited character, is not within Act July 12, 1876.—United States v. Whittier, Case No. 16,688.

Upon a prosecution for depositing in the mail a newspaper containing a quack medicine advertisement of where to obtain an article to obtain abortion, it is not necessary that the advertisement indicate any particular article or thing or its properties.—United States v. Kelly, Case No. 15,514.

A publisher knowingly depositing in the mails a newspaper containing a quack medical advertisement of how and where to obtain article to produce abortion, etc., is guilty of a violation of Rev. St. § 3893.—United States v. Kelly, Case No. 15,514.

Under an indictment for mailing an article "designed or intended for the prevention of conception or procuring of abortion" (Act June 8, 1872, § 148, amended March 3, 1873, § 2), it is no defense that the article would not in fact have such effect, if it was put up in a manner and described so as to insure its use for such purpose by one desiring to accomplish such result.—United States v. Bott, Case No. 14,626.

Under such acts, making it a misdemeanor to mail any advertisement or notice giving information where or of whom such article may be obtained, it is immaterial whether the article was in fact at the place designated.—United States v. Bott, Case No. 14,626.

The mailing of a postal card containing words imputing illicit intercourse to third persons, but no epithet in the form of a substantive or adjective, is an offense under Rev. St. § 3893, punishing the mailing of postal cards containing "indecent or scurrilous epithets."—United States v. Pratt, Case No. 16,082.

§ 22. Indictment or information—In general.

Less nicety in the form of the indictment is required in the prosecution of offenses under the postal laws than is required in cases of felonies in England.—United States v. Lancaster, Case No. 15,556.

An indictment against a carrier of the mail for an offense under the law, punishable generally, will sustain a conviction, the word "carrier" being stricken out as surplusage.—United States v. Burroughs, Case No. 14,695.

§ 23. —— Embezzlement or larceny.

To convict a person of stealing a letter, etc., who is employed in the department, such employment must be distinctly alleged and proved.—United States v. Nott, Case No. 15,900.

When the embezzlement is of a letter containing a banknote, it is not necessary to describe the note.—United States v. Patterson, Case No. 16,011.

In an indictment against a post-office clerk for embezzlement a description of the letter as directed to A. B. is sufficient where it is inclosed in an envelope directed to A. B.—United States v. Laws, Case No. 15,579.

It is unnecessary to particularly describe the letter or the bank notes therein.—United States v. Lancaster, Case No. 15,556.

An indictment against a postmaster for embezzling bank notes from the mail must aver that the note was a thing of value.—United States v. Cummings, Case No. 14,901.

But an indictment charging a mail carrier with stealing a letter out of the mail is sufficient without alleging that it contained an article of value.—United States v. Fisher, Case No. 15,102.

In an indictment against a post-office clerk for embezzling a letter containing a bank note, the letter being described as directed to a person other than defendant, it is unnecessary to allege that the letter or note was the property of any one.—United States v. Laws, Case No. 15,579; Same v. Okie, Id. 15,916.

In an indictment for larceny from a letter under section 21, the property stolen must be laid on some person other than the prisoner.—United States v. Cummings, Case No. 14,901a; Same v. Foye, Id. 15,157.

Notes of a third person, sent by a depositary with notes of his own, and stolen from the mail, may be laid in the indictment as the property of the depositary.—United States v. Burroughs, Case No. 14,695.

An indictment under Rev. St. § 5467, against a letter carrier, for embezzling a letter, is not defective, though it does not aver that the letter was not delivered to the addressee.—United States v. Jenther, Case No. 15,476.

Where a postmaster is indicted for embezzling a letter, it is enough to allege that the letter came into his hands, without showing where it was mailed, and by what route it was conveyed.—United States v. Lancaster, Case No. 15,556; Same v. Laws, Id. 15,579; Same v. Okie, Id. 15,916.

An indictment against a post-office employé for embezzling letters intrusted to him, and stealing bank notes therefrom, need not aver that the letters were intended to be conveyed by post.—United States v. Golding, Case No. 15,224.

In an indictment for embezzling a letter containing money (Act July 1, 1864, § 12), it is not necessary to aver that the letter embezzled was intended to be conveyed to any particular place, but only that it was intended to be conveyed by post.—United States v. Okie, Case No. 15,916.

An indictment against a post-office employé for stealing money from a letter (Rev. St. § 5467), which did not aver that the letter was one intended to be conveyed by mail, or that it had been deposited in any post office, or in charge of defendant, or that it came into his possession in the regular course of his official duty, held bad.—United States v. Winter, Case No. 16,744.

An indictment under Act March 3, 1825, § 22, which alleges that defendant did secrete "and" embezzle a certain letter, is not defective.—United States v. Sander, Case No. 16,219.

The indictment need not allege that the clerk obtained the letter by virtue of his employment; it is enough that, being a clerk, he has obtained possession of the letter.—United States v. Laws, Case No. 15,579.

In an indictment for embezzlement, it is sufficiently certain to charge that defendant was "a person employed in one of the departments of the post-office establishment of the United States."—United States v. Patterson, Case No. 16,011.

An indictment for abstracting a letter containing bank notes is good if it alleges that the letter was put into the post office to be conveyed by post, and was being so conveyed, and came into defendant's possession, as driver of the mail stage.—United States v. Martin, Case No. 15,731.

The embezzlement of the letters and stealing bank notes therefrom may be charged in the same count of the indictment.—United States v. Golding, Case No. 15,224.

The embezzlement of several letters from a post office may be charged in separate counts of the same indictment, or separate indictments therefor may be consolidated.—United States v. Brent, Case No. 14,640.

§ 24. —— Illegal carriage.

An information under the act of 1845 for carrying a letter out of the mail need not negative the fact that it was stamped.—United States v. Tilden, Case No. 16,523.

§ 25. —— Unlawful franking.

Sufficiency of indictment against member of congress for unlawfully franking a letter.—Dewees' Case, Case No. 3,848.

§ 26. —— Opening letters.

The indictment need not allege any venue of the lawful intent, nor that the opening was unlawful, nor that the addressee was a real person.—United States v. Pond, Case No. 16,067.

§ 27. —— Sending obscene matter.

An indictment charging defendant with depositing in the mail an obscene pamphlet, and a notice giving information how an article designed for the prevention of conception can be obtained, need not give a definite or detailed description of the pamphlet.—United States v. Foote, Case No. 15,128.

An indictment under such statute need not set forth in hæc verba the book, or the obscene part thereof, where it states that it is so indecent as to make it improper to place it on the records, where the book is otherwise sufficiently identified.—United States v. Bennett, Case No. 14,571.

An indictment is sufficient which alleges that defendant knowingly deposited the obscene book, without alleging that he knew it to be nonmailable matter under the statute.—United States v. Bennett, Case No. 14,571.

The statute refers to the place where such articles can be "obtained or made." Held, that an indictment using "obtained and made" was good, and proof of either sufficient.—United States v. Kelly, Case No. 15,514.

§ 28. —— Variance.

Certain variances as to the address upon a letter alleged to have been embezzled by a letter carrier, held not material.—United States v. Jenther, Case No. 15,476.

Where in an indictment for embezzlement the letter or bank note is described, it must be proved as laid.—United States v. Lancaster, Case No. 15,556.

The description of the termini between which the letter was intended to be sent by post cannot be rejected as surplusage, but must be proved as laid.—United States v. Foye, Case No. 15,157.

§ 29. Evidence.

On trial of an indictment charging the deposit in the mail of an obscene publication, clauses of alleged similar character cannot be read from other books by way of illustration.—United States v. Bennett, Case No. 14,571.

On trial of an indictment for depositing scurrilous postal cards in the mail, evidence is admissible of other writings of defendant containing identical errors in spelling, to prove authorship.—United States v. Chamberlain, Case No. 14,778.

On a trial for larceny from the mail, the best evidence of mailing is that of the person who mailed the letter, and of its loss of the person to whom it was addressed.—United States v. Crow, Case No. 14,895.

The presumption of theft arising from the disappearance of mail matter may be repelled by evidence of the miscarrying of mails sent through the same office after defendant's removal.—United States v. Sterland, Case No. 16,387.

Upon a prosecution under Act 1825, § 21, for the embezzlement by an employé of the post office, some evidence is necessary of the genuineness and value of bank notes charged to have been stolen out of a letter.—United States v. Nott, Case No. 15,900.

The postmasters through whose offices the embezzled letters were passed or distributed must be called as witnesses on a prosecution for stealing letters out of the mail.—United States v. Emerson, Case No. 15,051; Same v. Whitaker, Id. 16,672.

To show that the article has been stolen, the conviction of the persons who stole it is sufficient if the article be identified.—United States v. Keene, Case No. 15,512.

Evidence that the prisoner uttered, as genuine, what purported on its face to be a bank note, is competent proof that it was a bank note, though it is not otherwise shown that such a bank existed.—United States v. Foye, Case No. 15,157.

Sufficiency of evidence to sustain conviction for robbing the mail.—United States v. Cummings, Case No. 14,900.

POUNDAGE.

See "United States Marshals," § 11.

POWERS.

§ 1, Duration and termination. § 2, Construction and execution.

Assignment in bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," § 198.
Created by will, see "Wills," §§ 42, 43.
Of attorney, see "Principal and Agent."
Of sale in mortgage, see "Mortgages," §§ 18–27.
To confess judgment; see "Judgment," § 6.

§ 1. Duration and termination.

A collateral power, although irrevocable, expires with the life or bankruptcy of the appointor.—Lockett v. Hill, Case No. 8,443.

A naked power which expires with the death of the party creating it is such as requires the power to be executed in the name and as the act of the grantor.—Hunt v. Ennis, Case No. 6,889.

Where a naked power is necessarily such as can be exercised only after the death of the grantor, it does not expire with his death.—Hunt v. Ennis, Case No. 6,889.

A power coupled with an interest does not expire with the death of the person creating it.—Hunt v. Ennis, Case No. 6,889; Lockett v. Hill, Id. 8,443.

§ 2. Construction and execution.

Where power is given to a cestui que use to appoint by will, it cannot be exercised in any other way, and the court cannot interfere. —Markoe v. Maxcy, Case No. 9,093.

While the intention to execute a power of appointment must be clear, it need not appear in express terms.—Blagge v. Miles, Case No. 1,479.

The indorsement at the foot of a deed, "I consent to the above," signed by the person without whose "approbation and consent" a sale under a power of sale was not to be valid, held a sufficient compliance with the requirement.—Waldron v. Chasteney, Case No. 17,058.

Where a power has been completely executed, but with the addition of something improper and inconsistent with its purpose, if distinguishable, the execution is good, and the excess is void.—Warner v. Howell, Case No. 17,184.

A power, conferred upon trustees, to appoint a committee to designate the disposition of the estate after the death of testator's children, held to be one coupled with an interest, which could be exercised by a surviving trustee.—Loring v. Marsh, Case No. 8,515.

Courts always lean in favor of the execution of the power if it can be supported, even if it should disappoint the person executing it.—Warner v. Howell, Case No. 17,184.

Equity cannot afford relief against the defective execution of a power created by law. —Bright v. Boyd, Case No. 1,875.

A court of equity will interfere in favor of the grantee in a deed to aid the defective execution of a valid power where there is no opposing countervailing equity.—Segee v. Thomas, Case No. 12,633.

Under a power to appoint "among such of the children of A. and B., and in such proportions as B. may appoint," B. may entirely exclude certain children.—Ingraham v. Meade, Case No. 7,045.

A devise of "all the residue of my estate, of every name and kind," in a residuary clause, held sufficient as the execution of power of appointment.—Blagge v. Miles, Case No. 1,479.

A power to appoint among "children" may include grandchildren if they are, in a general way, manifest objects of the trust.—Ingraham v. Meade, Case No. 7,045.

An application of the benefits by the beneficiary of a power in trust in a form which the donee could not lawfully direct held not to render the appointment void, where there was no prior understanding.—Ingraham v. Meade, Case No. 7,045.

PRACTICE.

See "Prohibition."
Adoption by United States courts of practice of state courts, see "Courts," §§ 67–74.
Procedure of particular courts, see "Courts."

In particular civil actions or proceedings.

See "Account, Action on"; Action on the Case"; "Assumpsit, Action of"; "Covenant, Action of"; "Debt, Action of"; "Detinue"; "Discovery"; "Ejectment"; "Entry, Writ of"; "Habeas Corpus"; "Interpleader"; "Mandamus," § 7; "Quo Warranto"; "Real Actions"; "Replevin"; "Trespass," §§ 6–11; "Trial."
Condemnation proceedings, see "Eminent Domain," §§ 5–11.
Confiscation proceedings, see "War," § 90.
To establish or confirm grants, see "Public Lands," § 88.

Particular proceedings in actions.

See "Abatement and Revival"; "Affidavits"; "Appearance"; "Assistance, Writ of"; "Bail," §§ 1–13; "Continuance"; "Damages," § 12; "Depositions"; "Dismissal and Nonsuit"; "Evidence"; "Execution"; "Judgment"; "Judicial Sales"; "Jury"; "Limitation of Actions"; "Motions"; "Parties"; "Pleading"; "Process"; "Reference"; "Removal of Causes"; "Stipulations"; "Venue."
Nonsuit, see "Dismissal and Nonsuit"; "Trial," § 14.
Revival of judgment, see "Judgment," § 72.
Verdict, see "Trial," §§ 22, 23.

Particular remedies in or incident to actions.

See "Arrest," §§ 1–10; "Attachments"; "Deposits in Court"; "Garnishment"; "Injunction"; "Ne Exeat"; "Receivers"; "Scire Facias"; "Searches and Seizures"; "Tender."

Procedure in criminal prosecutions.

See "Bail," §§ 14–22; "Criminal Law"; "Extradition."
In bastardy, see "Bastards," § 2.

Procedure in exercise of special jurisdictions.

In admiralty, see "Admiralty"; "Collision," §§ 118–160; "Maritime Liens," §§ 54–65; "Salvage," §§ 57–78; "Shipping," §§ 244–255.
In bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy."
In equity, see "Equity."
In insolvency, see "Insolvency."
In justices' courts, see "Justices of the Peace," §§ 8–11.
In land office, see "Public Lands," §§ 46–49.
In patent office, see "Patents," §§ 66–87.
In prize cases, see "War," §§ 51–69.

Procedure on review.

See "Appeal and Error"; "Audita Querela"; "Exceptions, Bill of"; "Justices of the Peace," §§ 12–17; "New Trial."

PRE-EMPTION.

Public lands, see "Public Lands," § 22.

PREFERENCES.

See "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 4; "Bankruptcy," §§ 62–78, 214–250, 393–396, 594–601; "Fraudulent Conveyances," § 20.

PREJUDICE.

Ground of continuance, see "Continuance," § 5.
—— of removal of cause, see "Removal of Causes," § 23.
—— of reversal in civil actions, see "Appeal and Error," § 35.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION.

On criminal charge, see "Criminal Law," §§ 38–41, 72.

PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION.

See "Injunction," §§ 14–34; "Patents," §§ 232–249, 251, 252.

PREMIUMS.

For insurance, see "Insurance," §§ 17, 29–32.

PRESCRIPTION.

Acquisition of rights, see "Adverse Possession"; "Easements," § 1; "Waters and Water Courses," § 7.
Creation of corporation by, see "Corporations," § 7.

PRESENTMENT.

By grand jury, see "Indictment and Information."
Of bill or note, see "Bills and Notes," §§ 59-80.

PRESIDENT.

See "United States," § 4.

PRESUMPTIONS.

See "Evidence," §§ 9-14.

PRINCIPAL AND ACCESSORY.

See "Criminal Law," §§ 6-8; "Homicide," § 1.

PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.

I. THE RELATION.

§ 1, Creation and existence. § 2, Extension. § 3, Termination.

II. MUTUAL RIGHTS, DUTIES, AND LIABILITIES.

§ 4, Authority conferred. § 5, Substitution. § 6, Mode of executing authority. § 7, Liability for negligent and improper execution. § 8, Liability for proceeds of property. § 9, Liability for interest. § 10, Individual interest of agent. § 11, Conversion. § 12, Subagents. § 13, Joint agents. § 14, Indemnity to agent from liability to third persons. § 15, Actions for negligent or wrongful acts of agents. § 16, Compensation and lien of agent.

III. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES AS TO THIRD PERSONS.

§ 17, Powers of agent—Representation of principal. § 18, —— Express and implied authority. § 19, —— Necessity of seal to confer power. § 20, —— Evidence of authority. § 21, —— Liabilities incurred. § 22, —— Estoppel by agent's acts. § 23, Undisclosed agency. § 24, Unauthorized and wrongful acts—Duty to disclose authority. § 25, —— Knowledge of extent of authority. § 26, —— Effect of exceeding authority. § 27, —— Acting after termination of authority. § 28, —— Unauthorized dealings with principal's property. § 29, —— Representations and fraud of agent. § 30, —— Negligence or wrongful acts of agent. § 31, —— Repudiation by principal. § 32, Ratification. § 33, Notice to agent. § 34, Actions.

See, also, "Attorney and Client"; "Brokers"; "Factors"; "Mercantile Agencies"; "Powers."
Admissions by agents as evidence, see "Evidence," §§ 33, 34.
Agency of partner for firm, see "Partnership," §§ 19-31.
Appointment of agent by administrator, see "Executors and Administrators," § 15.
Competency as witnesses, see "Witnesses," § 34.
Corporate agents, see "Corporations," §§ 34-37, 81; "Insurance," §§ 91, 92; "Railroads," § 6.
Designation of agent for service of process on foreign corporation, see "Corporations," § 81.
Insurance agents, see "Insurance," §§ 5, 6, 12.
Municipal agents, see "Municipal Corporations," §§ 8, 24.
Notice to agent, see "Vendor and Purchaser," § 26.

I. THE RELATION.

§ 1. Creation and existence.
The duties of receiver of a bank and agent held not inconsistent.—Benedict v. Maynard, Case No. 1,295.

A power of attorney, sent by mail to a person, which never came to his possession, is not operative.—Thurston v. The Magnolia, Case No. 14,017.

An arrangement by a broker with a correspondent in another place to execute his orders, where the account was kept only with such correspondent, but the purchaser or seller was known in each transaction, held to make such correspondent an agent of the broker.—Scarlett v. Van Inwagen, Case No. 12,437.

The fact that an agent to compromise returns different terms from creditors than those submitted does not make him their agent.—Curran v. Munger, Case No. 3,487.

One having a contract right to purchase lands in a limited time, and selling the right before expiration thereof, is not an agent of the vendor, if there was a bona fide expectation that he might make the purchase; otherwise if the purpose was merely to speculate by selling the right within the time.—Mason v. Crosby, Case No. 9,235.

Letters of credit given to a Confederate agent to enable him to prosecute his mission abroad in aid of the Confederate government are void as in aid of the Rebellion.—The Confiscation Cases, Case No. 3,097.

Instruments executed abroad, as the foundation of sealed instruments in this country, must be under seal.—Harman v. Harman, Case No. 6,071.

An individual may prove his own agency.—Pendall v. Rench, Case No. 10,917.

An agency as against the individual may be proved by his acts and declarations.—Piatt v. Oliver, Case No. 11,115.

The motives or inducements of a contract with an agent may be proved by his letters or declarations admitting facts.—Blight v. Ashley, Case No. 1,541.

§ 2. Extension.
The agency is not continued by the fact that notes for the unpaid purchase price and a mortgage securing the same were left with the agent in escrow to await the delivery of a quitclaim deed from a third person, which the vendor was to furnish.—Walker v. Derby, Case No. 17,068.

§ 3. Termination.
The agency of a real-estate agent and his duty to his principal ceases upon delivery of the title papers and payment for the property, and thereafter he may deal for the property as any other person.—Walker v. Derby, Case No. 17,068.

The presumption is that a sale of a patent annuls an existing power of attorney relating thereto; but, if the power remains outstanding, persons dealing with the attorney on the faith thereof will be protected as against the principal.—Labaree v. Peoria, P. & J. R. Co., Case No. 7,959.

The appointment of a second attorney or agent to collect a debt is a revocation of the authority of the first one, and persons knowing of the second appointment are held to a knowledge of the revocation.—Williamson v. Richardson, Case No. 17,754.

A power of attorney to conduct all one's business at a particular place is not revoked by a lease of most of the property to the attorney, but only modified so as to exclude such property.—Perkins v. Currier, Case No. 10,985.

A power of attorney to conduct all one's business at a particular place is revoked pro tanto by the transfer by the principal of his interest in part of the property.—Perkins v. Currier, Case No. 10,985.

Where an agent has in good faith entered into engagements or incurred liabilities before notice of revocation of his powers, the principal is bound to indemnify him.—United States v. Jarvis, Case No. 15,468.

A power of attorney which gives to the agent a veto upon the acts of his principal is equivalent to a power coupled with an interest.—Day v. Candee, Case No. 3,676.

A revocation of a power is not necessarily implied from a subsequent power to another to do the same thing, where the second is not absolutely inconsistent with the first.—Starr v. Stark, Case No. 13,317.

An agent cannot renounce his agency at pleasure, without notice or good cause, except on condition of indemnifying his principal for any loss sustained thereby.—United States v. Jarvis, Case No. 15,468.

Authority given an agent by the principal to receive notices for him ceases with the principal's death.—Bank of Washington v. Peirson, Case No. 953.

A power of attorney given as collateral security is irrevocable by the grantor, but it dies with him.—Hunt v. Ennis, Case No. 6,889.

A power of attorney is revoked by the death of the principal, except so far as the attorney has an interest coupled with the power.—Boone v. Clarke, Case No. 1,641.

The authority conferred by a power of attorney is suspended by the subsequent insanity of the person who gave the power.—Bunce v. Gallagher, Case No. 2,133.

II. MUTUAL RIGHTS, DUTIES, AND LIABILITIES.

§ 4. Authority conferred.

Authority to sell real estate must be clear and distinct.—Bosseau v. O'Brien, Case No. 1,667.

A power which authorizes the attorney to sell and convey lands does not authorize him to make a deed for lands previously sold.—Johnson v. Sukeley, Case No. 7,414.

An agent to sell on credit, taking a mortgage as security, is not thereby authorized to foreclose the mortgage.—Aultman v. Jones, Case No. 657.

An agent for subscriptions or a canvasser for books has no right to cancel subscriptions or to transfer them to another party.—Stoddart v. Warren, Case No. 13,471.

A power of attorney, to indorse notes in the principal's name, confines the authority to notes of the principal, or those in which he is interested.—Butcher v. Tyson, Case No. 2,233.

A power of attorney to collect and compromise debts and sign necessary papers gives authority to sign a paper choosing an assignee in bankruptcy.—In re Knoepfel, Case No. 7,892.

A power of attorney to collect a judgment to arbitrate and compound the same, and to employ counsel, authorizes the attorney to employ counsel to appear in an action to annul a sale under such judgment, and consent to a judgment annulling such sale upon terms advantageous to the client.—Lee v. Rogers, Case No. 8,201.

The answer "I will sell" on terms specified, to a letter from a real estate agent asking for authority to sell, does not confer authority.—Bosseau v. O'Brien, Case No. 1,667.

A letter authorizing an agent to purchase property of a person to whom it was directed, to be paid for at such times as should be agreed upon between the owner and the agent, does not authorize the agent to purchase such property from other persons.—Peckham v. Lyon, Case No. 10,899.

A person acting under a power of attorney from the partner of a deceased consignee of goods held to be agent of such partner, and not of the shippers, and liable for the proceeds of the goods turned over to such partner without the approval of the shippers.—Holt v. Dorsey, Case No. 6,647.

Where a bond is executed in the name of the firm by a manager of the business who was so in the habit of using the firm name, authority to sign by a written instrument need not be shown.—United States v. Turner, Case No. 16,547.

Equity cannot aid a defective power.—Piatt v. McCullough, Case No. 11,113.

§ 5. Substitution.

A lease to a brother, who covenants to carry on business with the property leased for half the net profits, does not give him the right to substitute a stranger as manager, or change the proportion of profits.—Perkins v. Currier, Case No. 10,985.

A power of attorney to collect debts, with power of substitution, may authorize the attorney to appoint another to act for the principals in bankruptcy proceedings under an act passed subsequent to the execution of the power.—In re Knoepfel, Case No. 7,892.

§ 6. Mode of executing authority.

An agent whose orders are positive must strictly observe them, and can exercise no discretion except as to the best method of executing them. If ambiguous, they must be taken most strongly against the principal.—Kingston v. Kincaid, Case No. 7,822.

A deed of an attorney, executed in his own name, is not valid as the deed of his principal.—Barger v. Miller, Case No. 979.

A deed of an attorney in fact, manifestly intending to convey the title of the principal, is ineffectual, unless the attorney either signed the name of the principal, with a seal annexed, stating it to be done as attorney, or signed his own name, with a seal annexed, stating it to be done for the principal.—Randall v. Jaques, Case No. 11,553.

A power of attorney authorizing a public sale of property will not authorize a private sale of it.—The G. H. Montague, Case No. 5,377.

A power of attorney, which authorizes a conveyance to be made in as full and ample a manner as the principal could execute, authorizes a deed with covenants of general warranty.—Taggart v. Stanbery, Case No. 13,724.

An agent is governed by the price stated in the invoice accompanying goods where he is directed not to sell for less than the first cost and charges.—Loraine v. Cartwright, Case No. 8,500.

Agents are held to strict account where they act under plain orders.—Loraine v. Cartwright, Case No. 8,500.

Where an agent's orders are to sell "immediately on arrival," and forward returns by the same vessel, he has no discretion, but must sell at once, no matter at what loss.—Courcier v. Ritter, Case No. 3,282.

A power of attorney to convey land in Ohio must be recorded before a record is made of the deed.—Johnson v. Sukeley, Case No. 7,414.

§ 7. Liability for negligent and improper execution.

An agent who does not comply with his instructions is liable for the loss occasioned thereby, although the services were gratuitously rendered.—Walker v. Smith, Case No. 17,086.

Where a ratification is necessary to bind the principal, agent is not liable to principal for abuse of power.—Ætna Ins. Co. v. Sabine, Case No. 97.

A disobedience of orders is excused where the principal remains silent after full and candid statement of all the facts by the agent.—Courcier v. Ritter, Case No. 3,282.

A collecting agent, receiving Confederate notes in payment, without authority, is liable.—Bank of Tennessee v. Union Bank of Louisiana, Case No. 899; Anderson v. Bank, Case No. 354.

An agent in Virginia who collected a claim for a citizen of Kentucky in Confederate money, and invested it in Confederate bonds, by order of the state court, held liable for the value of the Confederate money as of the date when received.—Botts v. Crenshaw, Case No. 1,690.

The neglect of a merchant, who was in the habit of insuring vessels for his correspondent, to make insurance as ordered, will render him liable to the principal.—De Tastett v. Crousillat, Case No. 3,828; Morris v. Summerl, Id. 9,837; Manny v. Dunlap, Id. 9,047.

The neglect of the agent to give his principal notice of his having been unable to execute the order for insurance will make him liable in damages.—De Tastett v. Crousillat, Case No. 3,828.

A direction to procure a policy of insurance is not satisfied by a verbal contract of insurance.—Manny v. Dunlap, Case No. 9,047.

The principal need not maintain a suit on such verbal contract, where its validity is doubtful, before suing the agent for damages.—Manny v. Dunlap, Case No. 9,047.

§ 8. Liability for proceeds of property.

Defendant, who handles property as agent of plaintiff, is liable to him for the proceeds, although other persons may have been jointly interested with the plaintiff.—Gray v. Reardon, Case No. 5,727.

§ 9. Liability for interest.

An agent having a balance in his hands of a fund used to make purchases is not liable for interest until a demand is made therefor.—Williams v. Baxter, Case No. 17,715.

§ 10. Individual interest of agent.

An agent by virtue of a power of attorney cannot acquire title as against his principal.—Cleveland Ins. Co. v. Reed, Case No. 2,889.

An agent authorized to foreclose a mortgage, and bid in the property, who does so in his own name, holds for the benefit of his principal.—Aultman v. Jones, Case No. 657.

An agent to pay taxes on the land of his principal cannot acquire a valid title on tax sale.—Curts v. Cisna, Case No. 3,507.

Private collateral, taken for himself by an agent when contracting for his principal, will be considered as held in trust for the principal.—Garrow v. Davis, Case No. 5,257.

Where an agent employed to sell territorial rights under a patent procured a sale to himself of the entire territory, on false representations of his inability to sell to others, the vendor is entitled to have the sale set aside as to all portions of the territory not previously disposed of by the agent, and to an account of the proceeds of sales by him.—Jeffries v. Wiester, Case No. 7,254.

Every sort of profit derived by an agent from dealing or speculating with his principal's effects is the property of the latter, and must be accounted for.—Yates v. Arden, Case No. 18,126.

Where an agent or factor keeps the proceeds of his principal's goods separate, the principal may claim the same, or the profits thereon, as against the agent or his general creditors.—Hourquebie v. Girard, Case No. 6,732.

§ 11. Conversion.

An agent converting to his own use money which he has been specifically directed to invest in a certain article is accountable for the value of such article after it has greatly increased in value.—Short v. Skipwith, Case No. 12,809.

In case of conversion by an agent the principal may follow his property into the hands of the agent or his legal representatives or assignees in insolvency, if either it or its proceeds can be traced.—Veil v. Mitchel, Case No. 16,908; Yates v. Curtis, Case No. 18,127.

§ 12. Subagents.

A collection agent, who transmits bills to his private agent, under an arrangement whereby the latter credits him personally with the proceeds, is personally liable for a loss caused by the failure of any of the parties.—Taber v. Perrot, Case No. 13,721.

An agency to make contracts for the transportation of freight held to be one of special trust and confidence, and bills of lading signed by the confidential clerk of such agent are not valid, but are admissible, when adopted by the agent, to show the contract for transportation.—Pendall v. Rench, Case No. 10,917.

§ 13. Joint agents.

Powers given by a letter of attorney to several persons jointly cannot be exercised by one of the attorneys alone.—In re Phelps, Case No. 11,071.

§ 14. Indemnity to agent from liability to third persons.

An agent purchasing property with money partly raised on his own credit may hold the same until indemnified, if his principal becomes insolvent.—Matthews v. Menedger, Case No. 9,289.

§ 15. Actions for negligent or wrongful acts of agents.

A declaration in an action for abuse of power as agent must aver that defendant acted as agent.—Ætna Ins. Co. v. Sabine, Case No. 97.

The owner of gold-bearing bonds, converted by an agent, may recover, at his election, their value as damages, or the amount received by the agent as such.—Brewer v. Caldwell, Case No. 1,849.

§ 16. Compensation and lien of agent.

Compensation to an agent for the sale and management of estates, the property of absent proprietors, remitting proceeds of sales, and performing all the duties of such an agency.—Committee of West New Jersey Soc. v. Morris, Case No. 3,065.

If the agent of a creditor is authorized to accept compensation from debtors for securing compromises, in which compensation the creditor upon certain conditions was to share, no contract between the agent and the debtor for such compensation will be enforced.—Bullene v. Blain, Case No. 2,124.

An agent collecting money for his principal, and retaining it as a loan to himself, according to a prior contract with the principal, is not entitled to commissions on the amounts collected.—Short v. Skipwith, Case No. 12,809.

An agent receiving back from a maritime average adjuster a part of the sum charged for services must credit his principal therewith.—Mauran v. Warren, Case No. 9,310.

Agent will not be directed to deliver up papers in his possession if he has a lien thereon.—Baring v. Willing, Case No. 985.

An assignment of a claim made to an agent, to enable him to collect it in his own name, held an absolute assignment of so much of the claim as the agent was entitled to retain as agreed compensation.—Dowell v. Cardwell, Case No. 4,039.

III. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES AS TO THIRD PERSONS.

§ 17. Powers of agent—Representation of principal.

The possession of property by an agent to sell, under a special agreement for that purpose, is the possession of the owner.—Erdhouse v. Hickenlooper, Case No. 4,509.

A clerk, as such, has no authority to bind his employer by an agreement to receive goods from a carrier at an unusual time; nor has a truckman such authority.—Goddard v. The Tangier, Case No. 5,494.

Where a power to an agent is general, he may do anything to bind his principal which is within the scope of his authority.—Allen v. Ogden, Case No. 233; Barger v. Miller, Id. 979; Hooe v. Alexandria, Id. 6,667.

Where the agency be special, everything is void which may be done unless in strict conformity with the authority.—Allen v. Ogden, Case No. 233.

Persons employed to charter a vessel, according to specific directions, held to be special agents, without power to bind their principal to a different contract.—Mercier v. Lachenmeyer, Case No. 9,455.

§ 18. —— Express and implied authority.

A power to sign notes in renewal of existing notes gives authority to sign renewal notes given for renewal notes.—Bank of Washington v. Peirson, Case No. 953.

A letter from a part owner of a steamboat, requesting another to advertise the writer's interest for sale, and in thus advertising to act as his agent, confers no authority to sell.—Thurston v. The Magnolia, Case No. 14,017.

An attorney in fact authorized to collect a debt cannot extinguish the same by commuting it for one due by himself to the debtor.—Kingston v. Kincaid, Case No. 7,822.

An agent may make a pledge of property to secure another for property unlawfully used by the principal, though not authorized in writing.—Jenkins v. Mayer, Case No. 7,272.

§ 19. —— Necessity of seal to confer power.

Authority to indorse notes need not be under seal.—Bank of Washington v. Peirson, Case No. 953.

A power of attorney, not under seal, will not authorize the attorney to execute a deed.—Piatt v. McCullough, Case No. 11,113.

§ 20. —— Evidence of authority.

An agent is a competent witness to prove his own authority if not in writing, and is not incompetent by reason of his liability to either of the parties.—Welch v. Hoover, Case No. 17,368.

The declarations of the agent in support of his authority will not be received in evidence unless contemporaneous with the act, and constituting part of the res gestæ.—Davis v. Robb, Case No. 3,649.

It is sufficient proof of authority that the principal recognized the firm as agent, although only one of its members was originally appointed.—Burritt v. Rench, Case No. 2,201.

§ 21. —— Liabilities incurred.

If a subagent receives from the vendee a part of the purchase money, and pays it over to the principal, taking land instead of it for his compensation, the principal is liable, on a rescission of the purchase for fraud, to repay that part as well as what he received directly.—Doggett v. Emerson, Case No. 3,962.

Money paid on account of suretyship for an agent in a matter where he is acting for the principal, and within the scope of his authority, creates a debt against the principal.—Tiernan v. Andrews, Cases Nos. 14,025, 14,026.

The principal is bound by the acts of a sale agent, though not personally known to him, where authority to employ sale agents is implied from the nature of the duties and powers committed to his general agent.—Gum v. Equitable Trust Co., Case No. 5,867.

An agent is not personally liable on transactions with his principal made through him unless so expressly agreed.—Bradford v. Eastburn, Case No. 1,767; Bank of Newbury v. Baldwin, Id. 892.

An agent to receive a deed for joint purchasers, being one of the number, who procures a deed to be executed directly to a third person for part of his own share, held liable, on rescission of the sale, for the whole consideration received.—Doggett v. Emerson, Case No. 3,962.

Agents who pass goods through the customhouse free of duty, by mistake of the revenue officers, are not liable for the sum afterwards found to be due, where their agency was well known.—United States v. Bevan, Case No. 14,588.

§ 22. —— Estoppel by agent's acts.

A principal may be estopped by the intentional, willful misstatement of an agent.—Wyckoff v. Page, Case No. 18,106b.

§ 23. Undisclosed agency.

One contracting with agent personally may refuse performance where responsibility is shifted to principal.—The A. Cheesebrough, Case No. 25.

An agent to whom a vessel is delivered by the builders, without notice of his agency, does not acquire a good title as against his principal.—Scudder v. Calais Steamboat Co., Case No. 12,565.

Agent of undisclosed principal personally liable.—Allen v. Schuchardt, Case No. 236.

An engineer hired to serve on board of a steamboat, by a man who appeared to have full control and did not state that he was an agent, may hold him personally for wages.—Farrell v. Campbell, Case No. 4,681.

§ 24. Unauthorized and wrongful acts—Duty to disclose authority.

The principal must suffer the consequences of the neglect of his agent to disclose the special nature of the contract under which he is acting, to those with whom he deals.—Scarlett v. Van Inwagen, Case No. 12,437.

§ 25. —— Knowledge of extent of authority.

A general agent, acting under special instructions, which are known to the person with whom he is dealing, cannot bind his principal by any act which violates his instructions.—United States v. Williams, Case No. 16,724.

§ 26. —— Effect of exceeding authority.

Under power of attorney from several persons to make a joint note in renewal of a joint and several note, a joint and several note made by the attorney, if beyond his power, is invalid only in part.—Bank of the Metropolis v. Moore, Case No. 901.

§ 27. —— Acting after termination of authority.

A principal is liable for drafts drawn by an agent after the expiration of his authority, to pay for prior purchases, duly authorized.—Farmers' & Mechanics' Bank v. Stickney, Case No. 4,657.

§ 28. —— Unauthorized dealings with principal's property.

Where an agent, employed to procure a vessel to be built in his own name, and to transfer the title to his employer, fraudulently transfers the title to a stranger, with notice, the transaction creates a trust cognizable in equity.—Scudder v. Calais Steamboat Co., Case No. 12,566.

A person with whom money of one person is deposited to the credit of another by the agent of the former cannot apply the same in satisfaction of a claim against the latter, where he has knowledge of the circumstances.—Vanderwick v. Summerl, Case No. 16,845.

§ 29. —— Representations and fraud of agent.

The principal is responsible for the misrepresentations of his agent in making a sale, though in excess of his authority, where he subsequently ratifies the sale.—Doggett v. Emerson, Case No. 3,960.

The owners of land, who give to another a bond to convey to him, or to give him all over a certain price, if he should make a sale, are bound by his representations to a purchaser procured by him.—Hough v. Richardson, Case No. 6,722.

A contract made by an agent in excess of his power, by means of false and fraudulent assertions, is void, and may be rescinded, or, where the principal receives the benefit and proceeds, he is liable in damages.—Foster v. Swasey, Case No. 4,984.

§ 30. —— Negligence or wrongful acts of agent.

The principal, and not the agent, is liable for the negligence of the latter.—Mandeville v. Cookendorfer, Case No. 9,010.

The owners of a stage coach are liable for the negligence of their agent in suffering the slaves of another to be taken away in the coach.—Lowe v. Stockton, Case No. 8,567.

The remedy for an illegal act of an agent in refusing to deliver goods sent by the principal to him for others is against the principal. —Bradford v. Eastburn, Case No. 1,767.

Irregularities of agent in disposing of proceeds do not affect title of realty sold by him.—Andrews v. Solomon, Case No. 378.

§ 31. —— Repudiation by principal.

The repudiation of an agent's act in excess of authority must be within a reasonable time after knowledge.—Abbe v. Rood, Case No. 6.

A person cannot adopt that part of an agreement made on his behalf without authority which is beneficial to himself, and repudiate the part which is beneficial to the other party. —Starr v. Stark, Case No. 13,317.

§ 32. Ratification.

An authorized sale by the agent held not ratified by the principal's drawing on him for a part of the proceeds. — Loraine. v. Cartwright, Case No. 8,500.

A settlement of accounts made by an agent abroad, and acquiesced in for four years, held should not be disturbed.—Wilcocks v. Phillips, Case No. 17,639.

The acceptance of a return cargo, ordered by the same vessel, is no ratification of the agent's disobedience of the order to sell the outward cargo immediately on arrival.—Courcier v. Ritter, Case No. 3,282.

Acts of agent in accepting notes and mortgages in payment are ratified by creditors' refusal to return them and bringing suit thereon.—Benedict v. Maynard, Case No. 1,294.

Failure to answer letters from an agent as to the consummation of a sale does not constitute ratification.—Bosseau v. O'Brien, Case No. 1,667.

A contract by an agent made subject to the principal's ratification will be held ratified by the principal's entering it on his books, and corresponding with the other party in regard thereto as a subsisting contract.—Ex parte Carter, Case No. 17,488.

There is no binding obligation where the principal fails to ratify an agreement made by his agent with the understanding that it should be submitted for ratification.—Colt v. Rood, Case No. 3,031; Abbe v. Rood, Case No. 6.

The principal will be bound by an adjustment of a controversy by the agent in which he exceeded his powers, if he does not repudiate it within a reasonable time after knowledge thereof.—Colt v. Rood, Case No. 3,031.

A recognition of the acts of an agent by his principal is equivalent to an original grant of authority.—Conn v. Penn, Case No. 3,104.

An irregular conveyance under a power of attorney, acquiesced in and acted upon by the principal, who has enjoyed the consideration, will vest an equitable title in the grantee.—Starr v. Stark, Case No. 13,317.

§ 33. Notice to agent.

The principal is chargeable with notice where his agent has full notice.—Varnum v. Milford, Case No. 16,891; Hough v. Richardson, Id. 6,722; United States v. Two Hundred and Seventy-Eight Barrels of Distilled Spirits, Id. 16,580.

A purchaser from a fraudulent grantee is not bound by knowledge of the fraud by his agent who made the purchase, unless the latter had the same in his mind at the time of the transaction.—Curts v. Cisna, Case No. 3,507.

§ 34. Actions.

No action will lie in the name of a principal on a written contract made by his agent in his own name, although defendant knew the agent's character.—United States v. Parmele, Case No. 15,997.

PRINCIPAL AND SURETY.

§ 1, Creation and existence of relation. § 2, Nature and extent of liability of surety—In general. § 3, —— Scope of liability. § 4, Discharge of surety —By agreement. § 4a, —— Death of surety. § 5, —— Change in principal contract. § 6, —— Extension of time of payment. § 7, —— Negligence of creditor. § 8, —— Delay in proceeding against principal. § 9, —— Release of principal. § 10, —— Payment. § 11, Remedies of creditors—Action against surety. § 12, Rights and remedies of surety—As to creditor. § 13, —— As to principal. § 14, —— As to co-surety.

See, also, "Bills and Notes," § 32; "Bonds"; "Guaranty"; "Indemnity."

Admissions of principal as evidence, see "Evidence," § 37.

Application of payment, see "Payment," §§ 11, 13.

Competency of parties as witnesses, see "Witnesses," § 33.

Proof of secured claims in bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," §§ 371, 397–402.

Right of assignee of devisee, see "Bankruptcy," § 201.

Subrogation to rights of surety, see "Subrogation," § 4.

Liability of sureties on bonds by particular parties or in particular proceedings.

Distillers, see "Internal Revenue," §§ 46–49.

In admiralty, see "Admiralty," §§ 67–77, 110.

In attachment, see "Attachments," § 17.

On appeal, see "Appeal and Error," §§ 41-46.
On release of person under arrest, see "Bail."
Purchaser on judicial sale, see "Judicial Sales," § 3.

Liability of sureties on bonds for performance of duties of office or trust.

See "Ambassadors and Consuls," § 4; "Army and Navy," § 11; "Banks and Banking," §§ 6, 10; "Corporations," § 39; "Customs Duties," § 26; "Executors and Administrators," §§ 75-78; "Guardian and Ward," § 11; "Officers," §§ 7-9; "Post Office," §§ 4-8; "United States," § 13; "United States Marshals," §§ 24-28.

§ 1. Creation and existence of relation.

The omission to at once return a new bond given on the withdrawal of a surety on the old bond held a presumption that it was accepted.—Gass v. Stinson, Case No. 5,260.

A feme covert, by charging her inchoate right of dower for her husband's benefit, does not thereby become a surety for him.—Hiscock v. Jaycox, Case No. 6,531.

An agent's bond is not invalidated by being left blank in regard to the place of agency.—Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Wilcox, Case No. 9,979.

A bond executed in blank by the surety, and subsequently filled in by the principal, is binding in the hands of an obligee without notice.—Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Wilcox, Case No. 9,979.

In order for the surety to escape liability on the ground of existing irregularities and defalcations of the agent, it must be shown that these were known to the principal.—Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Wilcox, Case No. 9,979.

One signing notes as surety, without duress, cannot plead the duress of his principal.—McClintick v. Cummins, Case No. 8,699.

§ 2. Nature and extent of liability of surety—In general.

Equity will not hold a surety liable, when he is discharged at law.—Fielden v. Lahens, Case No. 4,773.

The liability of sureties signing a bond, given pursuant to an order of court copied therein, is unaffected by anything the obligee may tell them as to their liability.—In re Mayo, Case No. 9,353a.

Sureties who bind themselves jointly and severally as principals in a bond are equally liable in equity with the principal debtor.—United States v. Cushman, Case No. 14,908.

§ 3. —— Scope of liability.

New sureties are not responsible for prior defalcations unless the condition of the new obligation embraces them.—Postmaster General v. Norvell, Case No. 11,310; Myers v. United States, Id. 9,996.

When a question arises between liabilities of sureties on different bonds of different dates, the general doctrine of the application of payment does not apply.—Myers v. United States, Case No. 9,996.

The liability of sureties on the official bond of the cashier of a bank is limited to his acts during the term of office to which he was elected when the bond was given.—Harris v. Babbitt, Case No. 6,114.

The surety on an assignee's bond is not liable for a default actually complete before the bond was given, in the absence of language in the bond showing an intent to be bound.—Easton v. Cutter, Case No. 4,257.

If an agent, at the time of signing the bond, had moneys in his hands which he ought to have reported as collected, but had not, they would come within the condition of the bond.—Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Wilcox, Case No. 9,979.

The sureties on a bond given for the faithful collection of subscriptions are liable for collections made during the second year, although he was to close his collections in one year, unless the time was extended.—Smith v. Addison, Case No. 12,998.

Construction of condition of a teller's bond to faithfully perform his duties and make good to the bank "all damages which the same shall sustain through his unfaithfulness or want of care."—Union Bank of Georgetown v. Forrest, Case No. 14,356.

A teller's bond, executed under the original charter of the bank, held would cover defalcations arising under an extended charter after the time when the original charter would have expired by its own limitation.—Union Bank of Georgetown v. Forrest, Case No. 14,356.

The sureties on the bond of a bank teller are not liable for loss caused by his receiving as cash, according to the usage of banks, the check of an individual of good credit upon another bank.—Union Bank of Georgetown v. Mackall, Case No. 14,359.

The fact that the teller subsequently agreed to take the check as his own, and look to the drawer for payment, will not render his sureties liable.—Union Bank of Georgetown v. Mackall, Case No. 14,359.

The surety on a bond given by a partnership to an insurance company, conditioned for the faithful performance of the duties of the firm as agents, and to pay the amounts received by the firm, is not liable for amounts received after the dissolution of the firm by death of one partner.—Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Bowler, Case No. 3,106.

§ 4. Discharge of surety—By agreement.

The surety is entitled to a discharge as to future liability on giving the required notice, notwithstanding unsettled accounts between the principal and the obligee.—Gass v. Stinson, Case No. 5,260.

Sureties on the bond of a collection agent held released to the extent of a balance due shown on a fraudulent account rendered by the collector, where the obligee promised to surrender the bond on execution of a deed to secure the balance shown thereon, but are liable for the amount fraudulently concealed.—Hopkirk v. McConico, Case No. 6,696.

§ 4a. —— Death of surety.

On the death of the surety in the case of an obligation joint, and not joint and several, the remedy at law is gone, as against his legal representatives.—Fielden v. Lahens, Case No. 4,773.

No state statute, enacted after the making of such an obligation, can change the contract of the surety to his prejudice.—Fielden v. Lahens, Case No. 4,773.

§ 5. —— Change in principal contract.

Sureties are released by any agreement without their consent between the creditor and principal which varies essentially the terms of the contract, even though such change be to the sureties' advantage.—United States v. Tillotson, Case No. 16,524; Miller v. Stewart, Id. 9,591; Dennis v. Rider, Id. 3,797; United States v. Case, Id. 14,743.

A change of relation from that of agent to sell and collect to purchaser with right to return goods discharges the agent's surety.—Gass v. Stinson, Case No. 5,260.

A change of contract under which C. was to receive a salary, and the expenses of the business were to be borne by D., so that C. was to pay the expenses and sell on commission, will discharge the sureties of C.—Victor Sewing Machine Co. v. Langham, Case No. 16,935.

Where a bond was given by the treasurer of a society for the faithful collection of subscriptions, held, that the sureties were not released by the allowance, without their consent, of an additional percentage to the principal on the collections.—Smith v. Addison, Case No. 12,998.

An agreement substituting tapia for brick, and altering the mode of estimation and price of labor in the construction of a fort, will discharge the sureties, though the change was for their benefit.—United States v. Tillotson, Case No. 16,524.

Sureties on the bond of a contractor to construct a fort are discharged by the refusal of the war department to permit the administrator of the contractor to complete the work.—United States v. Tillotson, Case No. 16,524.

Sureties for the performance of a contract with the government to build a ship canal, and keep it open for a certain number of years, are discharged where the government accepts the work done in a different manner than as contracted.—United States v. Corwine, Case No. 14,871.

§ 6. —— Extension of time of payment.

Giving time by the United States to the principal in a duty bond, before breach, without consent of the surety, discharges the latter.—United States v. Howell, Case No. 15,405.

The surety is discharged where the holder of a note, for a valuable consideration, gives time to the maker.—Varnum v. Milford, Case No. 16,890.

Where there is no consideration for the extension of time, the surety is not released.—Suydam v. Vance, Case No. 13,657.

The surety is discharged where the creditor, without his knowledge, takes from the principal bonds on time to secure payment of the sum due, though the arrangement operated to his benefit.—United States v. Hillegas, Case No. 15,366.

A surety on a bond is released where without his consent the creditor takes a new security, payable at a date beyond the maturity of the bond, with an understanding that he is not to trouble the principal for the money, unless the new security prove worthless.—Smith v. Crease, Case No. 13,031.

The surety is not discharged by a confession of judgment at the first term, with stay of execution until the second, where it appears that in the ordinary course of the business of the court a judgment could not have been obtained before the second term.—Suydam v. Vance, Case No. 13,657.

The surety is not discharged where time is given the principal at his instance, or with his consent.—Suydam v. Vance, Case No. 13,657.

A surety upon a bond is not discharged by a mere delay to demand payment after it becomes due, unaccompanied by fraud or an express agreement with the principal to allow the delay.—Hunt v. United States, Case No. 6,900.

The principle that the creditor loses recourse against security, where his debtor, to whom indulgence is extended, becomes insolvent, does not apply in favor of a mere donee.—Hopkirk v. Randolph, Case No. 6,698.

Sureties of claimant in admiralty proceedings become principal debtors after final judgment against them, and are not discharged by extension of execution against claimant. Act March 3, 1847.—The Col. Howard v. Hayden, Case No. 3,026.

§ 7. —— Negligence of creditor.

The neglect of the cashier of a bank to settle the daily accounts of the teller according to the by-law of the bank will not discharge the sureties on the teller's bond.—Union Bank of Georgetown v. Forrest, Case No. 14,356.

§ 8. —— Delay in proceeding against principal.

The surety is not released at law by the principal's becoming insolvent after he has requested the creditor to bring suit.—Dennis v. Rider, Case No. 3,797.

The limitation of suits for penalties or forfeitures provided by Rev. St. § 1047, does not apply to the penal sum named in a bond.—Raymond v. United States, Case No. 11,596.

To debt on the bond of a paymaster in the navy, a plea of laches on the part of the government in its dealings with the paymaster, and that defendant had revoked the bond, is bad.—Raymond v. United States, Case No. 11,596.

§ 9. —— Release of principal.

An assent by an heir of a deceased surety to the release of the principal debtor, without prejudice to the surety's liability, will not prevent the release from discharging the surety.—United States v. Cushman, Case No. 14,907.

Arrest and discharge of bail on a cap. ad sat. will not prevent resort to security taken in the shape of notes of a third person.—Hartshorne v. McIver, Case No. 6,171.

A discharge from imprisonment by the secretary of the treasury of a debtor to the United States, under the act of 1798, does not discharge his co-obligors and sureties in the bond from their liability.—United States v. Sturges, Case No. 16,414.

§ 10. —— Payment.

If an agent gives a trust deed to secure payment of a defalcation, the cancellation of the deed upon subsequent payment in full of that defalcation would not affect the agent's surety on a subsequent bond.—Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Wilcox, Case No. 9,979.

§ 11. Remedies of creditors—Action against surety.

The creditor, having separate obligations of the principal and the surety, may pursue separate remedies against them at the same time.—Muscatine v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., Case No. 9,971.

Separate suits may be brought against joint parties to different instruments, given as collateral security for the same debt.—United States v. Hoyt, Case No. 15,409.

In an action against a surety in a bond to perform a decree, it is not necessary that notice of the decree should have been given to the principal.—White v. Swift, Case No. 17,557.

The sureties on the bond of an assignee of a contract to account for "advances under and by virtue of the contract," are entitled to the benefit of all limitations provided in the contract, both as to past and future advances.—United States v. Tillotson, Case No. 16,524.

A demurrer generally to a plea in debt on a postmaster's bond, that plaintiff fraudulently neglected to bring suit on the bond, or give notice of the principal's default, admits the fraud, and defendant is entitled to judgment thereon.—Postmaster General v. Ustick, Case No. 11,315.

The defense that defendant signed as surety on the representation that another would join held not sustained where the bond contained no room for another signature.—Garnett v. Mayo, Case No. 5,245a.

Where a firm assumed the individual debts of one member who gave bond with sureties to indemnify the other member, and after dissolution an arbitration was had by agreement between them, held, that the award could not be given in evidence against the sureties.—Simonton v. Boucher, Case No. 12,877.

Entries made by the partners in the partnership books after dissolution could not be given in evidence against the sureties, but evidence could be given of the confessions of the principal.—Simonton v. Boucher, Case No. 12,877.

§ 12. Rights and remedies of surety—As to creditor.

A surety who has paid a debt cannot claim an assignment of the instrument evidencing it.—McLean v. Lafayette Bank, Case No. 8,888.

The creditor is not bound to use active diligence to enforce his claim against the principal debtor unless requested by the surety.—Bank of Mount Pleasant v. Sprigg, Case No. 891.

A surety can require the creditor to proceed first against the principal, only when his suretyship appears on the face of the instrument, or when he offers indemnity.—In re Babcock, Case No. 696.

An indorser of a note is entitled to the benefit of a deed of trust given by the maker to indemnify a subsequent indorser, as against the holders of subsequent deeds of trust, who took with knowledge thereof.—Swan v. Bank of United States, Case No. 13,668.

§ 13. —— As to principal.

The surety cannot recover the amount of his responsibility without showing that he has paid it before action brought.—Pigou v. French, Case No. 11,161.

Money not paid for a principal before action brought cannot be recovered by a surety as money paid unless on a special valid promise to pay it previously.—Whetmore v. Murdock, Case No. 17,510.

The rights of the surety against the principal are not extinguished by a joint judgment against the two.—In re Kitzinger, Case No. 7,861.

The surety who has paid the money upon execution may maintain an action against the principal for money had and received, though he holds the execution by assignment.—McDaniel v. Riggs, Case No. 8,745.

Where the principal is insolvent, the sureties, in respect to their liability, are regarded in equity as creditors, and may retain any funds of the principal in their hands, even against an assignee for value, without notice.—In re Reynolds, Case No. 11,724.

One having a mortgage securing his acceptances, which he buys up at a discount, can only charge such amount against the mortgaged property.—Ex parte Ames, Case No. 323.

A debtor has a right, without the assent of his surety, to convey his property, fairly, in payment of his debts.—Findlay's Ex'rs v. Bank of United States, Case No. 4,791.

§ 14. —— As to co-surety.

A surety who has paid more than his proportion is entitled to contribution out of the estate of his co-surety, and his claim ranks according to the dignity of the claim on which the excess was paid.—Lidderdale v. Robinson, Case No. 8,337.

The summary remedy given in Virginia by a motion against a co-surety is confined to the court which rendered the original judgment.—Dade v. Mandeville, Case No. 3,533.

Judgment will not be rendered on motion of one surety against another unless the insolvency of the principal be fully proved.—White v. Perrin, Case No. 17,555.

Property given to indemnify one surety will not be sold for the equal benefit of a co-surety where the former is discharged by payment of the debt.—McLean v. Lafayette Bank, Case No. 8,888.

PRIORITIES.

Attachment lien, see "Attachments," § 10.
Bonds, see "Municipal Corporations," § 35.
Bottomry liens, see "Shipping," § 124.
Claims against decedents' estates, see "Executors and Administrators," § 31.
—— against estate assigned for creditors, see "Assignment for Benefit of Creditors," § 12.
—— in bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," §§ 428–446, 455, 456.
Distribution of proceeds in admiralty, see "Maritime Liens," § 63.
Judgments, see "Judgment," § 59.
Jurisdiction, see "Courts," § 110.
Liens, see "Liens," § 2; "Maritime Liens," §§ 49–53; "Mechanics' Liens," § 5; "Railroads," § 40.
—— under execution, see "Execution," § 7.
Mortgages, see "Chattel Mortgages," §§ 11, 14; "Mortgages," § 12.
Taxes, see "Taxation," § 10.
United States, see "United States," §§ 16–20.

PRISONS.

§ 1. Custody of prisoner.

The court will not interfere in the exercise of the discretion vested in a jailer, as to the custody of his prisoner, unless it appear that he has abused such discretion for the purposes of oppression.—Ex parte Taws, Case No. 13,768.

A person arrested by military force for the violation of Act June 30, 1834, § 20, or Id. § 21, may be confined in the military prison, but he cannot be lawfully required to labor or perform any duty other than taking care of his person.—Waters v. Campbell, Case No. 17,265.

PRIVATE NUISANCE.

See "Nuisance," § 1.

PRIVATE ROADS.

Rights of way, see "Easements."
Taking land for, see "Eminent Domain," § 1.

PRIVILEGE.

Effect on limitation, see "Limitation of Actions," § 11.
From service of process, see "Process," § 6.
Of married women, see "Husband and Wife," § 4.
Of witness as to testimony, see "Witnesses," §§ 66–69.

PRIVILEGED COMMUNICATIONS.

Defamatory communications, see "Libel and Slander," § 9.
Disclosure by witness, see "Bankruptcy," § 328; "Witnesses," §§ 54–58.

PRIZE.

See "War," §§ 26–78.
Jurisdiction in prize cases, see "Admiralty," § 35; "Courts," § 98.

PROBABLE CAUSE.

For prosecution, see "Malicious Prosecutions," § 3.

PROBATE.

Of will, see "Wills," §§ 13–22.

PROBATE COURTS.

See "Courts," § 12.

PROCEDENDO.

See "Certiorari," § 3.

PROCESS.

§ 1, Issuance, requisites, and validity. § 2, Service—Personal service in general. § 3, —— Waiver of process. § 4, —— Substituted service. § 5, —— Publication. § 6, —— Privileges and exemptions. § 7, —— Return and proof of service. § 8, Defects, objections, and amendments. § 9, Abuse of process.

Adoption of state practice as to the form and service of process, see "Courts," §§ 67–74.
Conflict between state and federal courts, see "Courts," § 118.
Protection to officer, see "Sheriffs and Constables," § 2.
Resistance or obstruction, see "Obstructing Justice."

In actions against particular classes of parties.
See "Corporations," §§ 52, 81; "Municipal Corporations," § 40.
Assignees in bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," § 341.

In particular actions or proceedings.
See "Appeal and Error," § 14.
Criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," §§ 38–43.
Foreclosure, see "Mortgages," § 34.
For infringement of patents, see "Patents," §§ 193, 220.
In admiralty, see "Admiralty," §§ 56, 57, 62.
In justices' courts, see "Justices of the Peace," § 8.

Particular forms of writs or other process.
See "Arrest"; "Assistance, Writ of"; "Attachment," § 7; "Entry, Writ of"; "Execution"; "Garnishment"; "Injunction"; "Mandamus"; "Prohibition"; "Quo Warranto"; "Replevin"; "Scire Facias."
Search warrant, see "Searches and Seizures."
Subpœna, see "Witnesses," § 1.

§ 1. Issuance, requisites, and validity.
The order directing an absent defendant to appear, plead, etc., must be made by the court in term.—Bronson v. Keokuk, Case No. 1,928.

Deputy clerk of district court held authorized to sign process in his own name. Act March 3, 1821.—Bragg v. Lorio, Case No. 1,800.

Where necessary to the exercise of its jurisdiction the federal court will issue the proper process to bring the matter before the court.—Murray v. Patrie, Case No. 9,967.

The provision of the constitution of Louisiana requiring the style of process to be "The State of Louisiana" does not apply to citations.—Kimball v. Taylor, Case No. 7,775.

Proper form of process for the commencement of a suit at law in the federal courts in New York.—Johnson v. Healy, Case No. 7,389.

The absence of a seal from a citation in the copy of a record of a Louisiana court is no proof that the original was without a seal, it being the practice of the clerks to omit the seal in copying.—Kimball v. Taylor, Case No. 7,775.

Absence of a seal from a citation is immaterial after personal service thereof.—Kimball v. Taylor, Case No. 7,775.

A writ in debt, "that they answer unto him of a plea of debt of $1,000," held good on a demurrer to a plea in abatement that the writ did not run in the debet and detinet.—Guion v. McCullough, Case No. 5,863.

§ 2. Service—Personal service in general.
Fees for service and return, see "United States Marshals," § 10.
On Sunday, see "Sunday," § 4.
When service a contempt, see "Contempt," § 1.

Congress has power to authorize the supreme court to fix by rule the manner of serving process, and a rule providing for service of process upon an attorney is valid.—Levinson v. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co., Case No. 8,292.

The words "party to the action," as used in Rev. St. Minn. § 47, p. 456, relating to service of process, apply only to parties to the record.—Owens v. Gotzian, Case No. 10,634.

Act Mass. 1797, c. 50, prescribing the modes of serving process, does not apply to the case of defendant, a former inhabitant, who has changed his actual domicile before suit brought.—Picquet v. Swan, Case No. 11,134.

If the writ is against two defendants and one only is taken, the cause is discontinued, unless alias capias is issued against the other and continued by pluries, etc., until the trial term.—Nicholls v. Fearson, Case No. 10,226.

If a person declines to receive from an officer a paper presented for service, the officer may deposit it in any convenient place in the presence of the party, and the service will be good.—Norton v. Meader, Case No. 10,351.

Where the process on defendant is not served 20 days before he is bound to appear, all subsequent proceedings are irregular, and will be set aside on motion.—Treadwell v. Cleaveland, Case No. 14,155.

Service by a deputy marshal of a summons, previously in his hands, on the day after a new marshal files his bond and takes the oath, is valid.—Stewart v. Hamilton, Case No. 13,429.

Where a writ is served on a person of a different name from the one against whom it was issued, and there is no appearance, the plaintiff cannot proceed.—Elliott v. Holmes, Case No. 4,392.

Sufficiency of service of declaration in ejectment.—Huidekoper v. Stiles, Case No. 6,853.

If all the defendants in ejectment inhabit the same house, and this appears by the marshal's return, it is sufficient to deliver one copy.—Campbell v. Harper, Case No. 2,360.

Service of federal process cannot be interrupted by the arrest of the officer, or persons aiding him in serving it, or in any other manner, by means of state process or warrants.—United States v. Morris, Case No. 15,811.

§ 3. —— Waiver of process.
Parties may waive process and appear.—Nelson v. Moon, Case No. 10,111.

A power of attorney to confess judgment in a pending suit is a substantial waiver of service of process.—Varnum v. Runion, Case No. 16,892.

A stipulation to answer judgment waives illegal service of process.—The Acadia, Case No. 24.

A plea in abatement does not waive process. It may be abandoned, and a motion made to quash the writ for defective service.—Halsey v. Hurd, Case No. 5,966.
See, also, "Appearance."

§ 4. —— Substituted service.
Where personal service is not made, the requisites of the statutes substituted for it must be strictly complied with.—Halsey v. Hurd, Case No. 5,966.

The federal courts have no power to effect a constructive service of process on nonresidents.—Parsons v. Howard, Case No. 10,777.

Shares of corporate stock held by a nonresident of the district, within which the corporation is domiciled, are not "personal property within the district," so as to authorize constructive service on the owner, under Rev. St. 738.—Kilgour v. New Orleans Gas Light Co., Case No. 7,764.

§ 5. —— Publication.

When constructive or substituted service by publication in a personal action is authorized by statute in place of personal citation, the statute must be strictly pursued.—Galpin v. Page, Case No. 5,206.

Service by publication is resorted to only when personal service is not practicable within a reasonable time, and by the exercise of reasonable diligence. Act June 1, 1872.—Bronson v. Keokuk, Case No. 1,928.

A person temporarily residing at Honolulu as United States commissioner to the Hawaiian government is a nonresident, and may be served by publication under Code Or. § 30, subd. 3.—Collinson v. Teal, Case No. 3,020.

An averment in an affidavit for an order of publication that plaintiff has a just cause of action against defendant for a money demand on account is not sufficient to authorize such order. Code Or. §§ 55, 56.—Neff v. Pennoyer, Case No. 10,083.

But a verified complaint on file, if it contain a sufficient statement of facts, will sustain the order.—Neff v. Pennoyer, Case No. 10,083.

The omission of the order to direct that a copy of the summons and complaint be mailed to defendant is fatal, unless it appear that plaintiff had used reasonable diligence to ascertain defendant's place of residence, and that it was unknown to him.—Neff v. Pennoyer, Case No. 10,083.

Sufficiency of affidavit of publication, under Code Or. § 69.—Neff v. Pennoyer, Case No. 10,083.

An averment of due publication of a summons in a judgment entry which appears from the whole record to be untrue or is not affirmatively supported by the facts contained in such record is a nullity, and may be disregarded.—Neff v. Pennoyer, Case No. 10,083.

§ 6. —— Privileges and exemptions.

A judge privileged from arrest is exempt from service of process in a civil suit when about to set out on his circuit.—Lyell v. Goodwin, Case No. 8,616.

A judge privileged from arrest while performing his judicial duties may be served with summons in a civil action when at home and not about setting out on his circuit.—Lyell v. Goodwin, Case No. 8,617.

The immunity of members of congress from arrest under the constitution does not exempt them from service of summons in a civil suit.—Kimberly v. Butler, Case No. 7,777.

A nonresident defendant, coming within a state for the purpose of defending a suit, cannot be legally served with process in another suit.—Juneau Bank v. McSpedan, Case No. 7,582; Parker v. Hotchkiss, Id. 10,739.

A citizen of one state, indicted in the federal court of another, who comes therein to plead under an arrangement with the district attorney that he may appear without arrest, and plead and give bail, is exempt, while so in the state, from liability to civil process. — United States v. Bridgman, Case No. 14,645.

The service of a writ by enticing the person within the jurisdiction of the court by false representations or deceitful contrivances for the purpose of making such service will be set aside.—Union Sugar Refinery v. Mathiesson, Case No. 14,397.

The defendant, while within the jurisdiction of the court, on invitation of an inventor, for the purpose of settling a controversy in relation to infringement of a patent, was served with process in a suit for infringement brought by the assignees of the inventor, who had no knowledge of the purpose of his visit. Held, that the service would not be set aside.—Union Sugar Refinery v. Mathiesson, Case No. 14,397.

§ 7. —— Return and proof of service.

Sufficiency of return of marshal of service of declaration in ejectment.—Campbell v. Harper, Case No. 2,360.

A return by the marshal of "Not found" where defendants, residing out of the district, had a well-known place of business within the district, at which they usually attended every day, is a false return.—International Grain Ceiling Co. v. Dill, Case No. 7,053.

An affidavit of service is only necessary, where the service is not made by an officer of the court.—Campbell v. Harper, Case No. 2,360.

The recitals of service in certificates of service of a summons and complaint read: "A true —— of this writ attached to a certified copy of complaint," and "A true —— of the complaint attached to a true copy of the summons." Held that the omission in one was supplied by the statement in the other.—Norton v. Meader, Case No. 10,351.

Defendant cannot call upon the marshal to return a writ of hab. fac. poss., although plaintiff may do so.—Penn v. Kline, Case No. 10,934.

The return of an officer touching any fact about which he is bound to make return is conclusive on the parties to the suit and their privies.—Von Roy v. Blackman, Case No. 16,997.

Where, in a suit on a joint and several bond, there is a return as to some defendants of "No inhabitants," plaintiff may proceed to trial and judgment against those who were served with process.—Pegram v. United States, Case No. 10,906.

A court has discretion to permit an officer to amend a return with or without notice, and at any time after the date thereof, so as to bind the parties to the action or those claiming under them as privies, but not third persons who acquire rights in good faith prior to such amendment.—Rickards v. Ladd, Case No. 11,804.

An amended return, as between the parties to the action or their privies, whether made with or without notice, cannot be questioned by them collaterally.—Rickards v. Ladd, Case No. 11,804.

The marshal may amend his return to process after he goes out of office. Act Sept. 24, 1789, §§ 28, 32.—Cushing v. Laird, Case No. 3,508.

Justices of the peace in Pennsylvania may receive proof of the service of process of ejectment, issuing out of the circuit court of the United States.—Huidekoper v. Stiles, Case No. 6,853.

§ 8. Defects, objections, and amendments.

A writ may be amended, by consent of parties.—Elliott v. Holmes, Case No. 4,392.

The court will not grant leave to amend the writ by changing the name of one of the plaintiffs.—Comegyss v. Robb, Case No. 3,049.

Where a writ is not indorsed as required by the state statute, which has been adopted by the federal practice, an amendment to remedy such defect will be permitted.—Miller v. Gages, Case No. 9,571.

Mistake in name of plaintiff in writ made by the clerk may be corrected by the memorandum filed by counsel.—Furniss v. Ellis, Case No. 5,162.

After service on the right party, the writ, return, and bill may be amended by correcting an error in defendant's corporate name.—Noblet v. Ohio & M. R. Co., Case No. 10,283.

Motion to quash is the proper manner of taking advantage of a neglect to indorse the writ as required by the state statute, adopted by the federal practice.—Miller v. Gages, Case No. 9,571.

It is within the power, and is the duty, of the court to set aside summarily any process obtained by fraud and deception practiced upon itself. —In re Keiler, Case No. 7,647.

§ 9. Abuse of process.
The circuit court, on bill or petition filed, may restrain the use of its process by the marshal in a manner contrary to law.—Gibbs v. Usher, Case, No. 5,387.

Statements by officer, conveying the impression that the criminal proceedings could be averted by settling the prisoner's indebtedness, held not sufficient to show intent to abuse process.—In re Burke, Case No. 2,158.

PROFERT.

In pleading in general, see "Pleading," §§ 60–62.
—— in suits for infringement of patent, see "Patents," § 197.

PROHIBITION.

Of traffic in intoxicating liquor, see "Intoxicating Liquors."

§ 1. When writ will lie.
The federal circuit court has power to issue the writ of prohibition only when necessary for the exercise of its jurisdiction.—In re Bininger, Case No. 1,417.

A federal circuit court having jurisdiction of a petition for review in bankruptcy will not prohibit suits by the petitioner in the state court in respect to the property involved.—In re Bininger, Case No. 1,417.

PROMISE OF MARRIAGE.

See "Breach of Marriage Promise."

PROMISSORY NOTES.

See "Bills and Notes."

PROOF.

At trial, see "Trial," § 9.
In admiralty, see "Admiralty," §§ 89, 93, 96.
Of claims against estate assigned for creditors, see "Assignment for Benefit of Creditors," § 11.
Of common law, see "Common Law," § 3.
Of death, see "Death," § 1.
Of loss under insurance policy, see "Insurance," §§ 140–157, 194.
Of marriage, see "Marriage," § 5.
Of service of process, see "Process," § 7.
Taking and filing proofs in equity, see "Equity," §§ 94–96

PROPERTY.

§ 1, Realty or personalty. § 2, Possession.

See, also, "Exchange of Property."
Adverse possession, see "Adverse Possession."
Constitutional guarantees of right of property, see "Constitutional Law," §§ 5, 13.
Conveyance, see "Deeds."
Dedication to public use, see "Dedication."
Escheat, see "Escheat."
Estates, see "Estates."
In custodia legis, see "Courts," § 118.
Intermixture, see "Confusion of Goods."
Licenses in respect to real property, see "Licenses."
Measure of damages, see "Damages," § 10.
Of Indians, see "Indians," §§ 4, 5.
Of municipal corporation, see "Municipal Corporations," § 9.
Of United States, see "United States," § 14.
Protection of rights of property by injunction, see "Injunction," § 6.
Right of alien to acquire and hold, see "Aliens," § 3.
Taking for public use, see "Eminent Domain."

Particular species of property.

See "Animals"; "Copyrights"; "Fish"; "Fixtures"; "Good Will"; "Ground Rents"; "Literary Property"; "Logs and Logging"; "Mines and Minerals"; "Patents"; "Shipping"; "Slaves," § 6; "Trade-Marks and Trade-Names."

§ 1. Realty or personalty.
A lease for 99 years, renewable forever, by the common law is only a chattel.—McLean v. Rockey, Case No. 8,891.

§ 2. Possession.
Where several persons residing together have a joint possession of property, the law casts the actual possession upon the legal owner.—Lenox v. Notrebe, Case No. 8,246b.

PROPRIETARY GRANTS.

See "Public Lands," §§ 77–80.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEYS.

See "District and Prosecuting Attorneys."

PROSTITUTION.

See "Disorderly House."

PROTEST.

Against payment in general, see "Payment," § 28.
—— of duties, see "Customs Duties," §§ 64–68.
—— of taxes, see "Internal Revenue," § 20; "Taxation," § 11.
Of bill or note, see "Bills and Notes," §§ 71–79.

PROVINCE OF COURT AND JURY.

In civil actions, see "Trial," §§ 12–16.
In criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 93.

PROXIMATE CAUSE.

Direct or remote consequences of injury, see "Damages," § 1.
Of death, see "Insurance," § 111.
Of injury, see "Negligence," § 2.
Of loss within insurance policy, see "Insurance," § 104.

PUBLIC.

Aid to railroads, see "Municipal Corporations," §§ 27–37; "Railroads," §§ 12–14.
Debt, see "Municipal Corporations," §§ 26–38; "United States," §§ 22, 23.

PUBLICATION.

See "Literary Property," § 4.
Of invention, see "Patents," §§ 45–47.
Service of process, see "Process," § 5.
When contempt of court, see "Contempt," § 1.

PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS.

See "Municipal Corporations," §§ 14-18.

PUBLIC LANDS.

I. GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP.

§ 1, What are lands of the United States. § 2, Lands acquired by treaty. § 3, Governmental authority and control. § 4, Trespasses in general. § 5, Cutting and removing timber—Statutory regulation. § 6, —— Right to cut timber. § 7, —— Actions for recovery of timber or for damages. § 8, —— Penalties and forfeitures. § 9, —— Criminal prosecutions. § 10, False claims to bounty lands.

II. SURVEY AND DISPOSAL OF LANDS OF THE UNITED STATES.

(A) Surveys.

§ 11, What constitutes a survey. § 12, Surveyors general and deputy surveyors. § 13, Method and sufficiency. § 14, Effect in general. § 15, Errors and omissions. § 16, Conflicting surveys. § 17, Resurveys and contested surveys.

(B) Entries and Sales.

§ 18, Who may enter. § 19, Lands subject to entry. § 20, Certificate and entry. § 21, Rights acquired by entry in general. § 22, Pre-emption. § 23, Homestead. § 24, Town sites. § 25, Abandonment of claim.

(C) Donations and Bounty Lands.

§ 26, Grants by congress in general. § 27, New Madrid Act. § 28, Oregon Donation Act —Operation and effect in general. § 29, —— Grants made under act. § 30, —— Performance of conditions. § 31, —— Claims and certificates. § 32, —— Married settlers in general. § 33, —— Death of settler or wife of settler. § 34, —— Conveyances by settler. § 35, Military bounty lands.

(D) Reservations to United States.

§ 36, Mode of reservation in general. § 37, Springs.

(E) School Lands.

§ 38, Effect of reservation and grant in general.

(F) Grants in Aid of Railroads.

§ 39, Construction and operation of grants to state. § 40, Construction and operation of grant to railroad company in general. § 41, Vesting title in railroad company. § 42, Sufficiency of adoption of line. § 43, Lands included, reservations and exceptions. § 44, Overlapping grants. § 45, Forfeiture of grant.

(G) Proceedings in Land Office.

§ 46, Authority and duties of officers in general. § 47, Cancellation of entries and reinstatement. § 48, Determination of adverse claims. § 49, Conclusiveness and effect of decisions.

(H) Patents.

§ 50, Issuance. § 51, Delivery and acceptance. § 52, Requisites and validity. § 53, Construction and operation in general. § 54, Conclusiveness.

(I) Remedies in Case of Fraud, Mistake, or Trust.

§ 55, Suits by United States. § 56, Relief to claimant of land.

(J) Conveyances and Contracts.

§ 57, Transfers of right in general. § 58, Bona fide purchasers. § 59, Validity of contracts.

III. DISPOSAL OF LANDS OF THE STATES.

§ 60, California. § 61, Indiana. § 62, Iowa. § 63, Kentucky. § 64, Massachusetts. § 65, Mississippi. § 66, New Hampshire. § 67, North Carolina—Entry and survey. § 68, —— Grant. § 69, Pennsylvania—Warrants. § 70, —— Surveys. § 71, —— Location and settlement. § 72, —— Patents. § 73, —— Confirmation of titles. § 74, Tennessee. § 75, Texas. § 76, Virginia.

IV. COLONIAL AND PROPRIETARY GRANTS.

§ 77, Title and rights of proprietaries. § 78, Surveys. § 79, Construction and operation of grants and conveyances. § 80, Rights of purchasers and settlers.

V. SPANISH, MEXICAN, AND OTHER FOREIGN GRANTS.

§ 81, Right to grant. § 82, Requisites and validity of grants. § 83, Construction and operation of grants. § 84, Conditions. § 85, Location. § 86, Abandonment and forfeiture of grants. § 87, Actions and proceedings to establish or confirm grants—Jurisdiction. § 88, —— Procedure. § 89, —— Evidence. § 90, —— Hearing and determination. § 91, —— Review. § 92, Transfers by claimants. § 93, Preferred purchasers on rejection of grant. § 94, Patents. § 95, Survey—Necessity of survey. § 96, —— Method, sufficiency, and validity. § 97, —— Confirmation of survey. § 98, —— Contest of survey. § 99, —— Correcting and setting aside survey. § 100, —— Conflicting surveys. § 101, Indemnity or lieu lands. § 102, Decisions on particular grants. § 103, Title of lands in San Francisco.

VI. TITLES DERIVED FROM INDIANS.

§ 104, Rights acquired.

See, also, "Boundaries."

Appropriation of water rights, see "Waters and Water Courses," § 1.

Jurisdiction of actions involving title, see "Courts," § 33.

Lands under water, see "Navigable Waters," § 17.

Mineral lands, see "Mines and Minerals," §§ 1-9.

Taxation, see "Taxation," § 6.

I. GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP.

§ 1. What are lands of the United States. Intermediate the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo and the admission of California into the Union, the title to the lands was in the United States, and no military officer of the United States could make any alienation of the public land.—Friedman v. Goodwin, Case No. 5,119.

In the absence of proof that the title to land in California is obtained directly from the government, the legal presumption is that the title is in the United States.—Patterson v. Tatum, Case No. 10,830.

§ 2. Lands acquired by treaty. The stipulation in the Oregon treaty of 1846 that the United States would respect "the possessory right" of British occupants held not a grant, but a mere promise, for a violation of which occupants only have a claim against the United States for compensation.—Town v. De Haven, Case No. 14,113.

Land held not "mineral land," within the meaning of a treaty in relation to its purchase, because a coal deposit underlies it.—Stroud v. Missouri River, Ft. S. & G. R. Co., Case No. 13,547.

§ 3. Governmental authority and control.
A state has no power over public lands within its limits.—Turner v. American Baptist Missionary Union, Case No. 14,251.

As between individual citizens, rights to the possession of public lands are protected by the courts, and acquiesced in by the government.—Lamb v. Davenport, Case No. 8,015.

The secretary of the treasury cannot execute or approve of a lease of any property belonging to the United States without special authority of law.—United States v. Hare, Case No. 15,303.

§ 4. Trespasses in general.
A settlement upon public land without authority of law held a trespass.—Boyreau v. Campbell, Case No. 1,760.

A final receipt by a government officer authorized to act in the premises, for rent, where subsequent to the trespass alleged, is a full discharge, although the officer may never have accounted for the money received.—United States v. Gear, Case No. 15,195.

A permit to enter on land containing lead ore may be shown in an action of trespass by the United States; not as a justification, but to show the nature and object of the entry.—United States v. Gear, Case No. 15,195.

§ 5. Cutting and removing timber—Statutory regulation.
The Cherokee tribe derived the title to their lands by grant from the United States, and such lands cannot be held to be "lands of the United States," within Rev. St. § 5388.—United States v. Reese, Case No. 16,137.

The term "timber" signifies the standing trees and the felled trees prepared for transportation to a vessel or sawmill, such as sawlogs or lumber in bulk, but does not embrace any article manufactured from the tree, such as shingles or boards.—United States v. Schuler, Case No. 16,234.

§ 6. —— Right to cut timber.
The cutting and sale of timber from four acres in advance of the mining operation, where the only reason assigned is that the stumps may rot and be more easily removed, held unnecessary, and therefore unlawful.—United States v. Nelson, Case No. 15,864.

Persons occupying under the pre-emption, homestead, and mining acts, before becoming the owners of the land, may cut and use the timber thereon, so far as the same may be necessary to accomplish the purpose for which the land is occupied, but no further.—United States v. Nelson, Case No. 15,864.

A homesteader who has paid the entry fee and made affidavit, as required by law, has no right to cut and sell timber, merely for purpose of traffic and sale alone.—United States v. McEntee, Case No. 15,673.

§ 7. —— Actions for recovery of timber or for damages.
To maintain replevin for logs cut upon state lands and indistinguishably mingled with logs cut upon other lands, it is not necessary that the state identify each log.—Schulenburg v. Harriman, Case No. 12,486.

The government may proceed civilly for cutting timber.—Bly v. United States, Case No. 1,581.

The defense to an action of trespass for cutting timber, that defendant claimed the land under Act Sept. 4, 1841, can only be sustained by showing some steps taken to secure a pre-emptive right.—United States v. Brown, Case No. 14,668.

Parol evidence is inadmissible to show that the locus in quo was swamp land.—Bly v. United States, Case No. 1,581.

Remedies for wrongful cutting of timber, see "Election of Remedies," § 2.

§ 8. —— Penalties and forfeitures.
A libel against a vessel under Act March 2, 1831, § 2, for transporting timber cut from public lands, must allege that the timber was taken from lands reserved for naval purposes, or that it was live oak or red cedar. Case No. 15,341 reversed.—United States v. The Helena, Case No. 15,342.

§ 9. —— Criminal prosecutions.
The government may proceed criminally for cutting timber.—Bly v. United States, Case No. 1,581.

An indictment will lie for cutting or removing timber from any of the public lands, though the same are not reserved for naval purposes.—United States v. Redy, Case No. 16,133; Same v. Schuler, Id. 16,234.

An indictment which describes the land, in general language, as "lands of the United States," is not sufficient.—United States v. Schuler, Case No. 16,234.

An indictment for removing timber from public lands must state the particular section or quarter section from which the timber was taken, as a part of the description of the offense.—United States v. Schuler, Case No. 16,234.

An indictment for removal need not allege that the timber was removed from the land on which it was grown, or from which it was cut.—United States v. Schuler, Case No. 16,234.

In an indictment for cutting timber it is not necessary to state the class of lands from which the trees were cut.—United States v. Thompson, Case No. 16,490.

In such an indictment it is not necessary to describe every kind of timber cut.—United States v. Redy, Case No. 16,133.

The rule of proof on an indictment for cutting and removing timber from public lands is fixed by the statute. Act March 2, 1831.—United States v. Darton, Case No. 14,919.

An indictment for cutting oak on public lands cannot be sustained by evidence that defendant cut pine.—United States v. Darton, Case No. 14,919.

In prosecutions for cutting timber, the official plats and books in the land office are admissible to show title.—Bly v. United States, Case No. 1,581.

A nominal fine, only, imposed for cutting timber, where defendant had made full reparation, and there was no intention to defraud the public.—United States v. Murray, Case No. 15,843.

§ 10. False claims to bounty lands.
It is an offense under Act March 3, 1823, to transmit false papers for the purpose of obtaining from the government a bounty land warrant.—United States v. Bickford, Case No. 14,591.

It is an offense, under such act, to procure false papers with a view of their transmission by another; and the actual transmission by the prisoner need not be shown.—United States v. Bickford, Case No. 14,591.

Declarations and affidavits subscribed and sworn to by the signers are "papers" within said act.—United States v. Bickford, Case No. 14,591.

The offense is committed in Vermont, where the papers are transmitted from there to Washington city.—United States v. Bickford, Case No. 14,591.

Under Act Feb. 26, 1853, an indictment may join several counts for offenses under Act March 3, 1823, for transmitting false papers for the purpose of obtaining bounty land warrants.—United States v. Bickford, Case No. 14,591.

II. SURVEY AND DISPOSAL OF LANDS OF THE UNITED STATES.

(A) SURVEYS.

See, also, post, §§ 67, 70, 74.

§ 11. What constitutes a survey.
The marks on the ground really constitute the survey and determine the rights of the parties, the plot returned to the land office being only evidence of the survey.—Smith v. Houtz, Case No. 13,062.

§ 12. Surveyors general and deputy surveyors.
Whether lands are vacant the officers of survey do not determine; the applicant must judge for himself.—Smith v. Houtz, Case No. 13,062.

Where the boundaries of a surveyor general's district depend on the construction of acts of congress, which have long been construed in a particular way, a surety on his bond cannot set up that the duties as performed were beyond the limits of his district.—United States v. Lytle, Case No. 15,652.

§ 13. Method and sufficiency.
Where lines of a tract have been traced without a warrant, the warrant may be applied to such land without the surveyor going upon it, and the survey will bear date of the day when it was made.—Torrey v. Beardsly, Case No. 14,104.

Sufficiency of notice published by surveyor general.—Le Roy v. Jamison, Case No. 8,271.

"Place of publication," as used in Act June 14, 1860, means the place where the paper is first given to the public for circulation.—Le Roy v. Jamison, Case No. 8,271.

A survey made on instructions by the government without consultation with the claimant or allowance to him of an opportunity to make an election as to the land to be surveyed, will be set aside.—United States v. Covilland, Case No. 14,879.

The survey of a claim, made by the surveyor general after the final confirmation of the claim by the supreme court on which a patent has issued, is not invalid because the mandate issued by such court directing further proceedings to be had in the district court was not filed in the latter.—United States v. Vaca, Case No. 16,604.

A survey made by the board of property merely to mark the boundary of land claimed by the person for whom it is made, and not in execution of a warrant issued for the land, is not such a survey as will give title.—Wells v. Wright, Case No. 17,405.

A survey made without an entry is of no validity, nor is the survey valid, after an authorized or ratified withdrawal of the entry, and the land may be located by another warrant. Act March 2, 1807.—Gault v. McMillan, Case No. 5,274.

Every line of a survey need not be run and marked on the land. It is sufficient if the lines are run and marked on the ground so far as to enable the surveyor to lay down each particular tract by protraction.—Brown v. Arbunkle, Case No. 1,990.

What is a sufficient survey of a number of tracts adjoining each other, belonging to the same person.—Griffith v. Bradshaw, Case No. 5,821.

§ 14. Effect in general.
A survey will perfect the title under a defective warrant, only where the rights of third persons have not intervened.—Phillips v. Wilson, Case No. 11,109.

Title to lands by settlement, survey, etc., under Act Pa. April 3, 1792.—Balfour's Lessee v. Meade, Case No. 808.

Surveys made and returned into the land office in blocks are to be located on the ground in blocks.—Smith v. Houtz, Case No. 13,062.

A survey returned and accepted is prima facie presumed to have been legally made.—Griffith v. Bradshaw, Case No. 5,821; Same v. Tunckhouser, Id. 5,823; Harris v. Burchan, Id. 6,117.

§ 15. Errors and omissions.
Inaccuracies will not vitiate surveys made of wild lands infested with hostile Indians and at great hazard.—Robinson v. Moore, Case No. 11,960.

Mistakes of surveyor, when shown by satisfactory proof, may be corrected in courts of law, as well as in courts of equity.—Conn v. Penn, Case No. 3,104.

A survey referring to a tree as a live oak tree, where the only tree reasonably answering such description is a white oak tree, will not. on that ground, be overthrown.—United States v. Enwright, Case No. 15,054.

§ 16. Conflicting surveys.
Proper boundaries of purchase where surveys were run at different times.—Buel v. Tuley. Case No. 2,101.

The lines actually run by the surveyor, and not those reported, control the area.—Conn v. Penn, Case No. 3,104.

§ 17. Resurveys and contested surveys.
Grantees pendente lite from the original grantee of public lands are entitled to contest a survey, though the majority owners approve it.—Bajorques v. United States, Case No. 761.

In a proceeding to contest or reform a survey, no decree can be deemed final which does not adopt and approve some survey and plat fixing with precision every line of the land.—United States v. Semple, Case No. 16,250.

A case in which an order has been entered rejecting the original survey, and giving directions for a new and reformed survey, is still "pending," within Act June 14, 1860.—United States v. Semple, Case No. 16,250.

A "chamber survey," if returned and accepted, is voidable only; and a new survey may be had on the same warrant, by order of resurvey.—Smith v. Houtz, Case No. 13,062.

Where a survey based on a Mexican grant appears to be incorrect, it will be rejected, and a new one ordered.—United States v. Castro, Case No. 14,749.

(B) ENTRIES AND SALES.

See, also, post, §§ 63, 71.

§ 18. Who may enter.
Sioux half-breed scrip cannot be located by other than the party to whom the scrip issued in person, unless the application be accompanied with a power of attorney from him.—United States v. Chapman, Case No. 14,785.

§ 19. Lands subject to entry.
On the abandonment of a military reserve by giving notice to the secretary of the interior, the same may be considered as a part of the public lands open to entry and sale as other lands.—United States v. Railroad Bridge Co., Case No. 16,114.

Sioux half-breed scrip cannot be located on land occupied by another.—United States v. Chapman, Case No. 14,785.

Act March 2, 1807, which prohibited entries from being made on lands which had been surveyed or patented, does not protect void surveys or patents.—Miller v. Lindsey, Case No. 9,580.

An entry within the Virginia military district of Ohio before extinguishment of the Indiana title is void.—Chinn v. Darnell, Case No. 2,684.

§ 20. Certificate and entry.

A certificate and entry describing the land as "lying on the north side of the Kentucky river, about four miles from the river," held too general, and not saved by the special locative description, "on a small branch called Rockhouse."—Liggett v. Marshall, Case No. 8,342.

Notoriety as to the name of a small branch used as a descriptive and locative call in a certificate and entry subsequent to the time of such entry, but prior to the time the rights of others attached, is not sufficient to sustain a claim thereunder.—Liggett v. Marshall, Case No. 8,342.

§ 21. Rights acquired by entry in general.

A settler on public lands in Oregon, prior to September 27, 1850, had a mere possession. His interest ceased with his occupation, and he could not incumber it so as to affect a subsequent occupant. The latter took as if the land had never been occupied before.—Lownsdale v. Portland, Case No. 8,578.

A person who entered and paid for his land before the passage of the homestead act holds the land unaffected by it. His patent, when issued, will relate to the date of his entry.—Union Mill & Mining Co. v. Dangberg, Case No. 14,370.

Claiming the land, and exercising acts of ownership over it, which has been located by the withdrawn warrant, held a ratification of an unauthorized withdrawal.—Gault v. McMillan, Case No. 5,274.

What laches in a settler will postpone him to a warrant and survey.—Griffith v. Bradshaw, Case No. 5,821.

A party cannot set up a title to land by settlement prior to the day stated for the commencement of his settlement in the warrant issued to him for the land, but he may prove the land was never in the possession of the party who claims it from him by the right of settlement.—Wells v. Wright, Case No. 17,405.

§ 22. Pre-emption.

The right of pre-emption is not an interest in land, but only a right to be preferred as purchaser.—Aiken v. Ferry, Case No. 112.

Rights of pre-emption cannot be acquired to lands while the Indian title to occupancy still remains.—Russell v. Beebe, Case No. 12,153.

A reservation of land for a specific purpose withdraws it from general location and from pre-emption rights.—Turner v. American Baptist Missionary Union, Case No. 14,251.

Public land in Indiana, containing a salt spring not entered at the land office, or not coming within the 36 sections conveyed to the state (Act 1816), is subject to pre-emption.—Indiana v. Miller, Case No. 7,022.

Lands included within the limits of an incorporated town are not subject to entry under the pre-emption law of Sept. 4, 1841.—Root v. Shields, Case No. 12,038.

The provision in such act excepting lands pre-empted by the corporate authorities from the operation of the pre-emption act was intended to secure to the government the enhanced value of lands in and adjoining a town.—Root v. Shields, Case No. 12,038.

Act May 30, 1862, does not change the qualifications of pre-emption claimants prescribed by Act Sept. 4, 1841, or the limitations imposed thereby.—Gimmy v. Culverson, Case No. 5,454.

One owning land in trust for another is not a "proprietor" (Rev. St. § 2260) disqualified to acquire right of pre-emption.—Aiken v. Ferry, Case No. 112.

The pre-emptor must actually reside on land until final proof and payment made.—Aiken v. Ferry, Case No. 112.

A person who never has asserted any pre-emption rights to land, but has asserted other rights in contradiction thereof, cannot be deemed to have intended to claim such rights.—Root v. Shields, Case No. 12,038.

The person commencing an improvement has a right to continue, and any one that intervenes may be considered a trespasser.—United States v. Stanley, Case No. 16,376.

An actual settler is only entitled to buy that portion of a quarter section upon which his improvements are made. 14 St. 804.—Armsworthy v. Missouri River, Ft. S. & G. R. Co., Case No. 550.

§ 23. Homestead.

The provision of the homestead act that no lands acquired thereunder shall, in any event, become liable to any debt contracted prior to the issuing of the patent therefor, is valid and binding on the states.—Seymour v. Sanders, Case No. 12,690.

§ 24. Town sites.

Act May 23, 1844, known as the "Town-Site Law," was not enforced in Oregon before the passage of Act July 17, 1854.—Chapman v. School District, Case No. 2,607.

The act organizing Oregon territory did not extend the "town-site law" over that territory. The first act affecting the title or disposition of Oregon lands was the donation act.—Lownsdale v. Portland, Case No. 8,578.

What is an occupation for public uses under Act 1864, which excepts from the grant to the city all sites or other parcels of land in such occupancy by the United States.—United States v. Carr, Case No. 14,731.

§ 25. Abandonment of claim.

A claim to lands held to have been abandoned.—De Fitch v. United States, Case No. 3,741.

(C) DONATIONS AND BOUNTY LANDS.

See, also, ante, § 10.

§ 26. Grants by congress in general.

The general gift of 500,000 acres to California by Act Sept. 4, 1841, became a particular gift of specific lands, on the location by the state of lands subject thereto, vesting a title in the state from the date of such location.—Patterson v. Tatum, Case No. 10,830.

The grant to certain settlers in the village of Peoria, Ill., whose buildings had been destroyed by a military company, held to be for a consideration, and the heirs of a settler who died before it was made are entitled to the patent.—Forsythe v. Ballance, Case No. 4,951.

Ordinary grants and those for meritorious services are governed by the same principles and regulations.—Teschemacher v. United States, Case No. 13,843.

§ 27. New Madrid act.

Possession for 10 years under patent issued in 1827, pursuant to a New Madrid certificate or warrant, held sufficient to defeat ejectment.—Mackay v. Easton, Case No. 8,843.

§ 28. Oregon donation act — Operation and effect in general.

Land once occupied as a town site, but abandoned, may be taken up and held under the donation act as unoccupied public land.—Bear v. Luse, Case No. 1,179.

The donation act of 1850 does not include settlers upon the public lands in Oregon, who died before its passage.—Fields v. Squires, Case No. 4,776; Lamb v. Starr, Id. 8,021.

The Oregon donation act of 1850 is a grant in præsenti from the date of the settlement thereunder, or from the date of the act where the settlement was prior thereto, defeasible until conditions performed. The patent issued is only record evidence of the title.—Adams v. Burke, Case No. 49; Fitzpatrick v. Dubois, Id. 4,842; Lamb v. Davenport, Id. 8,015; Mizner v. Vaughn, Id. 9,678; Wythe v. Haskell, Id. 18,118.

The notice of settlement given to the proper officer under such act relates back to the commencement of the application, unless the same was prior to the passage of the act.—Fitzpatrick v. Dubois, Case No. 4,842.

§ 29. —— Grants made under act.
A grant to a settler under such act does not take effect prior to its passage, although made in consideration, or on account, of prior residence and cultivation thereon.—Fields v. Squires, Case No. 4,776.

A grant under section 4 of the Oregon donation act, to the children of L., the wife of a settler, includes her children by a prior husband.—Lamb v. Starr, Case No. 8,021.

Under that act, a grant to the "children or heirs" of a settler or wife takes effect first in favor of the children.—Lamb v. Starr, Case No. 8,021.

§ 30. —— Performance of conditions.
Until the complete performance of the conditions subsequent to a settlement in the donation act, the estate granted is liable to revert to the donation by the failure to perform such conditions.—Chapman v. School District, Case No. 2,607.

The patent to the settler under the donation act is conclusive evidence of a performance of such conditions in a court of law, and primary in equity.—Chapman v. School District, Case No. 2,607.

§ 31. —— Claims and certificates.
A claim under the donation act need not be described by its boundaries.—Alexander v. Knox, Case No. 170.

Where a valid objection is found in a certificate issued by the surveyor to a settler under the Oregon donation act, it should be returned to the local office for correction. It cannot be disposed of by issuing a patent contrary thereto.—Wythe v. Haskell, Case No. 18,118.

§ 32. —— Married settlers in general.
Though a married man limits his settlement under the donation act to the quantity of land granted to a single man, one-half thereof inures to the benefit of the wife, and she takes the same in her own right as the direct donee of the United States, and not subject to any of the previous acts or contracts of the husband.—Fields v. Squires, Case No. 4,776.

Under the Oregon donation act, the estate granted to a married person is a determinable fee, with contingent remainder to the survivor and the children of the grantee; and, in case the grantee dies before patent issues, such survivor and children take as donees of the United States, not as heirs of the deceased.—Lamb v. Starr, Case No. 8,022.

A patent to a married settler under the Oregon donation act, and to his wife, by name, cannot be contradicted in an action at law by showing that the true wife of such settler was another person, by a different name.—Sharp v. Stephens, Case No. 12,710.

A wife divorced before notice and proof of a claim is not entitled to share in the settlement, although the land was occupied before the divorce was obtained.—Fitzpatrick v. Dubois, Case No. 4,842.

Under the Oregon donation act the surveyor general might partition the donation of a married settler equally between the settler and his wife at any point of the compass he might deem expedient, subject, under Act July 4, 1836, § 1, to the supervision of the commissioner of the general land office.—Wythe v. Haskell, Case No. 18,118.

By virtue of the marriage the husband took an estate for the life of himself and wife in the latter's half of the donation claim, and it was not in the power of the territorial legislature to devest him of his estate, although it might exempt it from execution.—Wythe v. Smith, Case No. 18,122.

The wife's share of the donation under Act Sept. 27, 1850, was not her separate estate, and Act Or. Jan. 20, 1852, which undertook to declare it so, is void so far as prior settlements are concerned.—Wythe v. Smith, Case No. 18,-122.

Where a settler under the donation act fraudulently procures a certificate and patent to his wife's share, equity has jurisdiction to correct the error by requiring him to convey the premises to her.—Stevens v. Sharp, Case No. 13,-410.

§ 33. —— Death of settler or wife of settler.
A settler under the Oregon donation act, who dies before the conditions requisite for vesting title in him have been fulfilled, has no devisable interest in the land, and his heirs and widow take as donees of the government.—Hall v. Russell, Case No. 5,943.

On the death of the settler, after complying with the act, and before issue of the patent, the remainder vests in his children, by purchase, as donees of the United States.—Mizner v. Vaughn, Case No. 9,678; Adams v. Burke, Id. 49.

Under that act, a settler might change his location before making final proof; and, in case of death before completion of residence and cultivation, his widow might abandon her interest, and, by marrying another settler, become entitled to one-half of his donation.—Lamb v. Starr, Case No. 8,021.

On the death of the wife of a settler under such act, her interest passes directly to her husband and children in equal parts, as donees of the United States, and not as her heirs.—Fields v. Squires, Case No. 4,776; Lamb v. Wakefield, Id. 8,024.

Settler's wife dying before completion of residence under donation act has separate property which descends to her heirs.—Alexander v. Knox, Case No. 170.

§ 34. —— Conveyances by settler.
Where a married settler under section 4 of the Oregon donation act has completed the residence and cultivation required by the act, and made proof thereof, he is entitled to a patent for his donation, and may convey the same in fee simple.—Wythe v. Palmer, Case No. 18,-120.

The rights of vendees of a married settler under the act, on a partition of the wife's share after her death, determined.—Fields v. Squires, Case No. 4,776.

A donee under the Oregon donation act who, subsequent to the initiation of the four years' possession, and before the passage of the act, has conveyed all his right, will be compelled to convey the legal title vested in him, by the patent subsequently issued.—Starr v. Stark, Case No. 13,317.

The prohibition contained in the proviso to section 4 of the act does not include covenants or contracts made prior to the passage of such act.—Fields v. Squires, Case No. 4,776.

Covenants between jont occupants to convey to their prior vendees held not a "future contract for the sale of the land," within the meaning of the Oregon donation act.—Lamb v. Davenport, Case No. 8,015.

A quitclaim deed by the occupants of land in Oregon before the passage of the donation act, containing a covenant of warranty against all claims except that of the United States, and a covenant to convey the title of the United States, if obtained by the covenantors, will transfer only the possession.—Fields v. Squires, Case No. 4,776.

The possession delivered with the deed is a sufficient estate to carry the covenants therein to the assignee thereof.—Fields v. Squires, Case No. 4,776.

A bond given between private parties, in relation to certain lands covered by the Oregon donation act, construed.—Lamb v. Vaughn, Case No. 8,023.

§ 35. Military bounty lands.
The grantee of a patentee of military bounty lands is not within the provision of the statute (Act March 1, 1800, § 7) that the patentee shall hold the same free from any contract of sale.—Smith v. Shane, Case No. 13,105.

The patentee of military bounty lands is a necessary party to a suit by a purchaser from his grantee to compel a conveyance of the land.—Smith v. Shane, Case No. 13,105.

An actual settlement and survey is necessary to constitute an appropriation of land under a military warrant.—Carson v. Gorden, Case No. 2,463.

(D) RESERVATIONS TO UNITED STATES.

§ 36. Mode of reservation in general.
The president of the United States may reserve from sale certain lands within a pueblo, by order to that effect.—Grisar v. McDowell, Case No. 5,832.

§ 37. Springs.
A lease by a squatter on lands within the "Hot Springs" reservation is absolutely void, and the lessee is not estopped to deny his landlord's title in a suit for rent.—Dupas v. Wassell, Case No. 4,182.

(E) SCHOOL LANDS.

See, also, post, § 60.

§ 38. Effect of reservation and grant in general.
The right to any particular tract under the grant to the state of Michigan of section 16 for school lands (Act June 23, 1836) did not exist until a survey was made; and, if such section be found to contain minerals, another section must be selected.—Cooper v. Roberts, Case No. 3,201.

All mineral lands were reserved under the compact with the state (Michigan) to give it section 8 for school lands.—Cooper v. Roberts, Case No. 3,201.

(F) GRANTS IN AID OF RAILROADS.

See, also, post, § 62.

§ 39. Construction and operation of grant to state.
Act March 3, 1863, granting lands to Kansas to aid railroads, did not pass title to lands reserved to the Osage Indians by the treaties of June 2, 1825, and January 21, 1867.—United States v. Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co., Case No. 15,582; Same v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co., Id. 15,786.

Construction of acts of June 3, 1856, and May 5, 1864, granting land to Wisconsin for railroads from Madison or Columbus to the St. Croix river, and from thence to Lake Superior and to Bayfield, and the effect of acceptance thereunder.—Madison & P. R. Co. v. Wisconsin, Case No. 8,938.

The state has power to protect such lands from trespass, and may maintain replevin or trover for logs cut thereon by trespassers.—Schulenburg v. Harriman, Case No. 12,486.

§ 40. Construction and operation of grant to railroad company in general.
Construction of the grants of lands to the Burlington & Missouri River Railroad Company and the Union Pacific Railroad Company.—United States v. Burlington & M. R. Co., Case No. 14,688; Hunnewell v. Burlington & M. R. Co., Id. 6,879.

The secretary of war, under Act March 3, 1819, and Act April 28, 1828, held to have authority to grant to a railroad company the power to construct their railroad over government property at Harper's Ferry.—United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., Case No. 14,510.

Under Act March 3, 1875, providing for the use of any cañon by more than one railroad, two railroads granted a right of way through a cañon can construct their lines irrespective of the width of way granted.—Cañon City & S. J. Ry. Co. v. Denver & R. G. Ry. Co., Case No. 2,387.

§ 41. Vesting title in railroad company.
The gift of lands and bonds made by the United States to the Union Pacific Railroad Company were not in the nature of a trust, but were made absolutely without condition precedent.—United States v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 16,598.

Act July 1, 1862, granting land to the Central Pacific Railroad Company, was a present grant, operating immediately on the passage of the act.—Central Pac. R. Co. v. Dyer, Case No. 2,552.

Under Act July 1, 1862, granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri river to the Pacific Ocean, there was a present grant, which attached to the particular sections upon the definite location of the road.—Sanger v. Sargent, Case No. 12,319.

Lands claimed at the time of such location, under alleged Mexican or Spanish grants, which were in fact fraudulent and void, and were afterwards so judicially declared, passed by such grant.—Sanger v. Sargent, Case No. 12,319.

Where patents under a land grant were to be issued pro tanto on the completion of every 20 consecutive miles of road, and to be subject to the disposal of the company for construction purposes, held that the company had a complete title under the patents, and not one in trust.—North Wisconsin Ry. Co. v. Barron County, Case No. 10,347.

The railroad companies to which land was regranted on the failure of original grantees to build the roads do not hold the lands subject to any trust in favor of the creditors of the state or of the former companies.—Chamberlain v. St. Paul & S. C. R. Co., Case No. 2,578.

§ 42. Sufficiency of adoption of line.
The certificate of incorporation filed by the Denver & Rio Grande Railway Company under Rev. St. Colo. c. 18, was not such an appropriation of the right of way through the Grande Cañon as contemplated by Act June 8, 1872.—Cañon City & S. J. Ry. Co. v. Denver & R. G. Ry. Co., Case No. 2,387.

A surveying and staking of a proposed line of road by the Denver & Rio Grande Railway Company did not amount to an appropriation of the right of way granted to that company by Act June 8, 1872, nor was the building of the road from Pueblo to Cañon City.—Cañon City & S. J. Ry. Co. v. Denver & R. G. Ry. Co., Case No. 2,387.

Where a railroad company exhibits a copy of the profile of its line through the Grande Cañon, approved by the secretary of the interior, it will be considered as made in accordance with Act March 3, 1875.—Cañon City & S. J. Ry. Co. v. Denver & R. G. Ry. Co., Case No. 2,387.

Section 7, Act Cong. July 1, 1862, granting land to the Central Pacific Railroad Company, which required the company, within two years, to designate the route of the road and file a map, did not affect the grant of the right of way, but only furnished the means by which the land taken by the railroad could be withdrawn from private entry.—Central Pac. R. Co. v. Dyer, Case No. 2,552.

§ 43. Lands included, reservations and exceptions.

A grant of alternate sections of land within certain limits to aid in the construction of a railroad (Act July 25, 1866) held to attach on the filing of the plat of survey of the line with the secretary of the interior and the withdrawal of the land from sale, etc., but not as to any land lying outside of the limit to make up a deficiency, until such deficiency had been ascertained.—Ryan v. Central Pac. R. Co., Case No. 12,185.

The exception in the grant to the Union Pacific Railroad Company of lands to which homestead claims had attached does not operate in favor of a sham and fraudulent homestead claim.—Union Pac. R. Co. v. Watts, Case No. 14,385.

§ 44. Overlapping grants.

Overlapping grants to the Union Pacific Railroad Company and the Sioux City Branch make the two companies tenants in common.—Sioux City & P. R. Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 12,909.

In the case of overlapping patents, held, that the patentees under the elder grant, though it was the last finally located and patented, had the better right.—Bissell v. Henshaw, Case No. 1,447.

§ 45. Forfeiture of grant.

The lands granted to the state of Wisconsin by Act June 3, 1856, to aid in the building of railroads, did not ipso facto revert to the United States by a failure to build the road within the prescribed period.—Schulenburg v. Harriman, Case No. 12,486.

(G) PROCEEDINGS IN LAND OFFICE.

§ 46. Authority and duties of officers in general.

The board of land commissioners was authorized to consider and determine the claim to land made by the Catholic bishop of Monterey by virtue of a Mexican grant to the church for religious purposes.—Mora v. Foster, Case No. 9,784.

A commissioner of the land office has power, with the consent of the party in interest, who refused to accept the patent on the ground that it was erroneously located, and of defects in the proceedings prior to the patent, to recall the patent and order a resurvey.—Le Roy v. Clayton, Case No. 8,268.

The commissioner of the general land office may order a further examination, on the ground that the return of a survey made by the surveyor general of California represented the tract as containing more than the quantity sold and confirmed.—United States ex rel. Castro v. Hendricks, Case No. 15,347a.

§ 47. Cancellation of entries, and reinstatement.

Congress has power to reinstate an entry canceled by the land office, and to provide that this shall relate back to the original entry, so as to inure to the benefit of intermediate grantees.—McCarty v. Mann, Case No. 8,685.

In such case the intermediate grantees receive the benefit whether they took with or without warranty.—McCarty v. Mann, Case No. 8,685.

§ 48. Determination of adverse claims.

Person without showing right in himself cannot question right of others.—Aiken v. Ferry, Case No. 112.

§ 49. Conclusiveness and effect of decisions.

Decisions of land office on questions of fact conclusive, in absence of fraud or mistake.—Aiken v. Ferry, Case No. 112; Bear v. Luse, Id. 1,179.

Whether a settler under the donation act upon unsurveyed lands could commute his residence under Act Feb. 14, 1853, and Act July 17, 1854, is a question of law, and the decision of the land department thereon may be reviewed at the suit of a party having a prior equity.—Bear v. Luse, Case No. 1,179.

The subject of surveys of confirmed claims is under the control of the land department, and its action is not subject to the supervision of the courts, however erroneous.—United States v. Flint, Case No. 15,121.

In acting upon a claim to pre-empt a tract of land, the land officers exercise a judicial discretion, with which the court cannot interfere by injunction.—Litchfield v. Register, Case No. 8,388.

The decision of the board of land commissioners on a claim within their jurisdiction cannot be collaterally impeached.—Mora v. Foster, Case No. 9,784.

The determination of the commissioner upon receiving a survey transmitted to him as published, as to the regularity and sufficiency of the publication, is conclusive, unless reviewed and corrected on appeal by the secretary of the interior.—Le Roy v. Jamison, Case No. 8,271.

(H) PATENTS.

See, also, post, §§ 60, 72.

§ 50. Issuance.

As to the power of the commissioner of the general land office, relative to private claims to land and the issuing of patents therefor, under Acts July 4, 1836, June 14, 1860 and 1864.—Le Roy v. Jamison, Case No. 8,271.

No patent can issue pending a contest before the register and receiver of the United States land office between a purchaser from the state, on a state selection, and a claimant under Sioux half-breed scrip location.—United States v. Chapman, Case No. 14,785.

The entry, in the books of the land office, that the balance of the purchase money was paid by the person "to whom the patent had issued," is evidence that a patent did issue, although the patent is not produced.—Willis v. Bucher, Case No. 17,769.

Under Act June 14, 1860, it was the duty of the commissioner of the general land office, before issuing a patent upon a survey, to see that the necessary publication had been made, to render the survey final, when not submitted to the district court.—Le Roy v. Jamison, Case No. 8,271.

§ 51. Delivery and acceptance.

A personal delivery of a patent to a patentee is not necessary to the vesting of the title.—Le Roy v. Clayton, Case No. 8,268.

The acceptance of a grant where no personal obligation is imposed will be presumed in the absence of an express dissent, whenever the conveyance is placed in a condition for acceptance.—Le Roy v. Jamison, Case No. 8,271.

§ 52. Requisites and validity.
A patent for lands paid for by the father, but delivered to his son of the same name, who was described, by his residence, as the grantee, is valid until vacated for the mistake of description.—Babcock v. Pettibone, Case No. 700.

§ 53. Construction and operation in general.
A patent for land covered by a paramount title does not vest the fee in the patentee.—Nelson v. Moon, Case No. 10,111.

A patent to a deceased person inures to the benefit of his successor in interest. 5 Stat. 31.—Lamb v. Starr, Case No. 8,022.

A patent for land is presumptive evidence that the proper steps have been regularly pursued.—Brown v. Galloway, Case No. 2,006.

A patent signed, sealed, and recorded takes effect from such time, and it cannot be recalled while en route to the local officer for delivery to the patentee, without consent of the patentee.—Le Roy v. Clayton, Case No. 8,268; Same v. Jamison, Id. 8,271.

Location of land with scrip, under the act of July 17, 1854, passed the fee out of the United States and was equivalent to a patent.—Larriviere v. Madegan, Case No. 8,096.

A certificate and patent thereon, issued under the Oregon donation act, are parts of the same transaction or procedure, and may be read together for the purpose of correcting or explaining the patent, and where there is an absolute contradiction between them the certificate must prevail.—Wythe v. Haskell, Case No. 18,118.

§ 54. Conclusiveness.
A patent valid on its face cannot be collaterally impeached in the federal courts in ejectment to recover the land granted by it.—Le Roy v. Clayton, Case No. 8,268.

Equity has no jurisdiction to affect a patent except upon the ground of an antecedent equity in the plaintiff, disregarded in the issuing thereof.—Bear v. Luse, Case No. 1,179.

The patent to a settler under the Oregon donation act is only record evidence of the donee's right.—Adams v. Burke, Case No. 49; Wythe v. Haskell, Id. 18,118.

(I) REMEDIES IN CASE OF FRAUD, MISTAKE, OR TRUST.

§ 55. Suit by United States.
The United States may sue in equity in their own name in the circuit court to set aside a patent issued without authority of law.—United States v. Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co., Case No. 15,582.

The assignee of a land warrant, fraudulently procured from the government, has no higher legal rights than the warrantee.—Bronson v. Kukuk, Case No. 1,929.

§ 56. Relief to claimant of land.
A patent may be canceled, on the application of the grantee, where the land is lost in whole or in part.—Nelson v. Moon, Case No. 10,111.

Courts will not restrain the issue of patents for land, but will relieve against fraud practiced to procure them.—Leitensdorfer v. Campbell, Case No. 8,225.

Decision of conflicting claims to lands upon the evidence in a suit in equity to prevent the issuing of certain scrip.—Walker v. Smith, Case No. 17,085a.

A patent may be avoided at law for fraud only where it relates to the issuing of the patent.—Cooper v. Roberts, Case No. 3,201.

For the purpose of showing mistake in the calls of a grant, resort may be had to the plat and certificate of survey.—Dallum v. Breckenridge, Case No. 3,547.

Government may waive all regulations and irregularities, except as against vested rights of others.—Bernard v. Ashley, Case No. 1,346.

A junior settler to whom the land office by erroneous construction of law issues a patent will be decreed to hold in trust for senior settler.—Aiken v. Ferry, Case No. 112.

A bill against the register and receiver of the land office to restrain them from permitting settlers on lands treated by the department as public lands from entering them under the preemption laws, when such settlers are not made parties, is fatally defective.—Litchfield v. Register, Case No. 8,388.

(J) CONVEYANCES AND CONTRACTS.

§ 57. Transfers of right in general.
A deed of military bounty lands, made in 1820 by the attorney of a patentee under a power of attorney executed in 1816, where the patent was not issued until 1819, is void ab initio under Act April 16, 1816.—Wright v. Taylor, Case No. 18,096.

A warranty deed executed by an executor before the patent issues from the government conveys no legal title, but it will operate by way of estoppel, where a patent is afterwards issued in the name of the executor, though the will did not authorize him to convey.—Lewis v. Baird, Case No. 8,316.

A conveyance by a pre-emptioner where his entry was set aside, and no patent ever issued to him, is inoperative, either by way of grant or estoppel.—Kellom v. Easley, Case No. 7,668.

§ 58. Bona fide purchasers.
Persons will not be protected as bona fide purchasers (1) who purchased before the patent of the government issued; (2) when the defect in the title arises out of a rule of law, of which they are bound to take notice; (3) where the title acquired is absolutely void.—Root v. Shields, Case No. 12,038.

§ 59. Validity of contracts.
A covenant by bona fide settlers on unsurveyed lands to purchase them as soon as surveyed and then mortgage them to a creditor is not a contract in violation of Act March 31, 1830. §§ 4, 5.—Wright v. Shunway, Case No. 18,093.

III. DISPOSAL OF LANDS OF THE STATES.

§ 60. California.
Where a grant made by government refers in general terms to a certainty, it is the same as if the certainty had been expressed in the grant, though it be not matter of record.—Friedman v. Goodwin, Case No. 5,119.

A grant to an individual, of franchises, is to be strictly construed, but a grant to a purchaser must be interpreted according to the ordinary meaning of its language.—Griffing v. Gibb, Case No. 5,819.

A patent of the state, valid on its face, cannot be collaterally impeached by matter dehors the patent, by a party having no title, in an action at law brought in the national courts to recover the land.—Dodge v. Perez, Case No. 3,953.

Construction of Act Cal. March 17, 1866, relating to lands in the city of San Jose.—Le Roy v. Chabolla, Case No. 8,267.

A legislative grant is equivalent to a patent, and one made to a class of persons is as valid as one made to an individual.—Griffing v. Gibb, Case No. 5,819.

Where a party, in order to bring himself within a class of legislative grantees, must exhibit his muniments of title, it may be shown that they have been dishonestly obtained.—Seabury v. Field, Case No. 12,575.

Where lands are claimed under a Mexican grant, and are excluded from the external limits by a confirmation decree, from the time the decree becomes final such lands become subject to survey and sale as public lands, and are subject to selection by the state of California as school lands.—Dodge v. Perez, Case No. 3,953.

The term "tide lands" (Act May 14, 1861) means lands covered and uncovered by the tide, and does not include lands lying below low-tide mark, and permanently covered by the navigable waters of the bay or ocean.—Walker v. Marks, Case No. 17,078.

Table of land claims in the state of California. —30 Fed. Cas. p. 1217.

A list of governors of California, with notes. —30 Fed. Cas. p. 1259.

See, also, post, § 103.

§ 61. Indiana.
The Indiana swamp law of 1850 held to have carried the title of certain lands to the bed of a lake.—State v. Miller, Case No. 13,323a.

§ 62. Iowa.
Where the state of Iowa accepted the grant of certain railroad lands from the United States, and gave them to a particular company, subject to the right to make necessary rules and regulations, it was an express reservation of the power to regulate the tolls.—Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Attorney General, Case No. 2,666.

§ 63. Kentucky.
The words used in an entry should be construed in reference to their proper signification, rather than to their grammatical arrangement. —Holmes v. Trout, Case No. 6,645.

A variance of 40 poles, on a straight line, in running a two-mile line, held not unreasonable. —Holmes v. Trout, Case No. 6,645.

§ 64. Massachusetts.
Construction of the resolve of 1801, in favor of the inhabitants of Bangor, and of the authority of the commissioners appointed to adjust the same.—Dunlap v. Stetson, Case No. 4,164.

One who obtained a grant from the state with full knowledge of another's title is bound in equity to convey the land to the latter.—Dunlap v. Stetson, Case No. 4,164.

§ 65. Mississippi.
Rights of scrip or certificate holders in the New England Mississippi Land Company.—Gilman v. Brown, Case No. 5,441.

§ 66. New Hampshire.
Under the resolve of the legislature of New Hampshire, approved June 22, 1831, conveyances of state lands by a land commissioner may be recorded in the office of the secretary of state at any time, and take effect only on being so recorded.—Woods v. Jackson Iron Mfg. Co., Case No. 17,993.

§ 67. North Carolina—Entry and survey.
An entry takes effect from its date, and not from its place on the entry taker's book.—Graham v. Dudley, Case No. 5,665.

A call in an entry may be made good by description, though the object called for is not notorious.—Henderson v. Long, Case No. 6,354.

The calls must be for some notorious object, or for some point with reference thereto, so as to lead a person using reasonable diligence to the place.—Dallum v. Breckenridge, Case No. 3,547.

Notoriety will cure a defective description in an entry, and, in case of conflicting rights, will be sufficient, if such notoriety was established before the date of the conflicting entry.—Simms v. Dickson, Case No. 12,869.

Of two calls in an entry, repugnant to each other, and both equally notorious, the general call must give way and the locative call be adhered to.—Graham v. Dudley, Case No. 5,665.

If the call in an entry be for land to lie on a creek, the survey must be made so as to give an equal quantity of land on each side of it.—Shepherd v. Baily, Case No. 12,755.

Where the calls in an entry are indefinite, the survey should be made either in a square or an oblong.—Henderson v. Long, Case No. 6,354; Shepherd v. Baily, Id. 12,755.

§ 68. —— Grant.
The governor's act (in North Carolina) in signing and affixing the state seal to a land grant makes it operative, without signature by the secretary of state.—Philips v. Erwin, Case No. 11,093.

Under Act N. C. 1779, a grant in the name of a deceased person, founded on a removed warrant, will pass the land to his heirs, if an entry was made in his lifetime.—Dougherty v. Edmiston, Case No. 4,025.

Nothing passes to the heirs under a grant to a deceased person.—Dougherty v. Edmiston, Case No. 4,025.

"Adjacent," as used in a grant, does not mean "adjoining," but signifies "convenient," "near to," or "in the neighborhood."—Henderson v. Long, Case No. 6,354.

Validity of North Carolina land grants made after the cession act.—Polk v. Windel, Case No. 11,251.

A plat annexed to a grant cannot be recurred to for the purpose of destroying its validity.—Polk v. Hill, Case No. 11,249.

Irregularities or fraud in procuring a grant do not render it void, but only voidable, and it is good as between third persons.—Polk v. Hill, Case No. 11,249.

§ 69. Pennsylvania—Warrants.
One person may take out any number of warrants in the names of different persons, who will be considered trustees for him.—Huidekoper v. Burrus, Case No. 6,848.

Uncertainty of description in the warrant is no objection where the land is surveyed before an adverse title accrues to a third person.—Huidekoper v. Burrus, Case No. 6,848.

A warrant issued to resurvey land which was not legally surveyed will stand as an original warrant of survey.—Penn v. Klyne, Case No. 10,935.

A warrant taken out for certain land, which is subsequently found to have been previously taken up, may be laid upon adjoining lands.—Huidekoper v. McClean, Case No. 6,852.

A located warrant may be lifted and relocated on another tract, if no person has acquired the title in the meantime.—Huidekoper v. Burrus, Case No. 6,848.

A later warrantee, without notice, who obtains the first survey, has the better title.—Gordon v. Kerr, Case No. 5,611.

The title is in him who pays the money and obtains the warrant, though it is issued in the name of another.—James v. Gordon, Case No. 7,181.

Plaintiff, claiming under a warrant and survey of Pennsylvania lands, must prove payment of the purchase money to the proprietors, or to the state, to recover in ejectment.—Milligan v. Dickson, Case No. 9,604.

A warrant and survey returned into the land office and accepted, in Pennsylvania, vests a legal title.—Griffith v. Tunckhouser, Case No. 5,823.

Everything necessary to designate the land covered by the warrant, so as to prove it to be withdrawn from the general mass of property, and appropriated to the use of an individual, must be proved.—Brown v. Arbunkle, Case No. 1,990.

Upon a forfeiture for noncompliance with the terms of the warrant, no third person can enter on the land.—Huidekoper v. McClean, Case No. 6,852.

A warrant holder for lands in "the new purchase" loses his right of possession by failure to comply with the requisites of the law.—Huidekoper v. McClean, Case No. 6,852.

The date of the warrant, and not that of the payment of the purchase money, is the period from which the two years, allowed for the settlement, are to run.—Brown v. Galloway, Case No. 2,006.

The prevalence of the Indian war before the Revolution is no excuse for a neglect by the holder to have a warrant executed beyond the period when the war terminated.—Gordon v. Kerr, Case No. 5,611.

Neither under the Pennsylvania statutes, nor on general principles, is a warrant on settled lands void; and the same will be good if the settlement is not followed up.—Lanning v. London, Case No. 8,074.

A warrant and survey of lands within the "new purchase," without a compliance with the terms thereof enjoining a settlement on the land, is not sufficient to sustain ejectment.—Huidekoper v. Burrus, Case No. 6,848.

The warrant is functus officio after a survey has been once regularly made under it by direction of the warrantee.—Harris v. Burchan, Case No. 6,117.

§ 70. —— Surveys.

Surveys may be valid, though made by order of the commissioners of property.—James v. Stookey, Case No. 7,184.

A survey by a deputy surveyor of another district, though specially authorized by the surveyor general, held invalid.—Gordon v. Kerr, Case No. 5,611; Griffith v. Tunckhouser, Id. 5,823.

A survey in the district appropriated to satisfy depreciation certificates, made without going upon the land and running the lines, held valid where the boundaries can be ascertained with mathematical certainty by the lines of adjoining surveys.—Griffith v. Tunckhouser, Case No. 5,823.

Under Act Pa. 1785, every survey made, and to be returned upon warrant, must be made by actually going upon the ground and marking the lines.—Smith v. Houtz, Case No. 13,062.

A warrant holder in Pennsylvania must have the lands surveyed in a reasonable time, or lose his priority by the superior vigilance of a subsequent locator.—Dubois v. Newman, Case No. 4,108.

A warrant without a survey, made under a legally authorized surveyor, does not give a right of entry to support an ejectment.—Hurst v. Durnell, Case No. 6,927.

Where the outlines of a tract are legally surveyed, a third person cannot question the survey of one of the inside warrants.—Huidekoper v. Burrus, Case No. 6,848.

Ex parte proceedings by the board of property, ordering a survey to be struck from the records, are not binding on a person claiming thereunder.—Griffith v. Evans, Case No. 5,822.

§ 71. —— Location and settlement.

Sufficiency and validity of settlement of lands in the Pennsylvania new purchase.—Brown v. Arbunkle, Case No. 1,990.

Mere improvement, without occupancy and bona fide intention to reside, does not constitute a settlement.—Balfour's Lessee v. Meade, Case No. 808.

Actual settlement consists in clearing, fencing, and cultivating the land, and erecting a house fit for habitation and actual residence.—Balfour's Lessee v. Meade, Case No. 808.

As to the meaning of "a persistence in his endeavors to make such actual settlement," as used in Act Pa. 1792.—Huidekoper v. Burrus, Case No. 6,848; Same v. Douglass, Id. 6,851.

Custom in Pennsylvania as to location and surveys.—Conn v. Penn, Case No. 3,104.

A warrant for lands in Pennsylvania, if special, amounts to an immediate location.—Dubois v. Newman, Case No. 4,108.

History of the settlement on islands in the rivers of Pennsylvania.—Fisher v. Carter, Case No. 4,815.

The law of Pennsylvania relating to titles to land under application, warrants, surveys, locations, payment of purchase money, and the rules of the land office relative thereto, by which such titles are ascertained and determined.—Lewis v. Meredith, Case No. 8,328.

The Pennsylvania statute of April 3, 1792, from the second to the tenth section, inclusive, is inapplicable to lands in Luzerne county.—Lanning v. London, Case No. 8,074.

§ 72. —— Patents.

A patent for land is only prima facie evidence of title, and proof of the omission to take the preliminary steps for vesting title will defeat it.—Huidekoper v. Burrus, Case No. 6,848.

It is not necessary to produce a conveyance from the warrantee of lands in the Pennsylvania new purchase. The production of the patent is sufficient.—Brown v. Galloway, Case No. 2,006.

The title vests in the grantee upon the return and acceptance of the survey and payment of the purchase money, and the legal possession vests at the same time.—Potts v. Gilbert, Case No. 11,347.

§ 73. —— Confirmation of titles.

Construction of Act Pa. March 28, 1787, confirming the title of certain Connecticut settlers to lands claimed by them in Luzerne county.—Vanhorne v. Dorrance, Case No. 16,857.

§ 74. Tennessee.

To establish a grant, there must be an actual survey, or such a description with reference to natural objects or other lines capable of identification as will lead to the place called for.—Rutledge v. Buchanan, Case No. 12,177.

An occupation entry in Tennessee, made without an occupancy, held good except as against persons who entered their claims as soon as the preference in favor of occupants ceased.—Thompson v. Norwood, Case No. 13,970.

The occupant law of Tennessee, so far as it violates the compact with other states by giving preference to its citizens over those of the other states, is void.—Bass v. Dinwiddie, Case No. 1,092.

No person can claim privileges of an occupant (Act Tenn. 1806) unless he was actually settled on land claimed.—Bass v. Dinwiddie, Case No. 1,092.

§ 75. Texas.

Vacant unappropriated lands in Texas are to be applied to the payment of the debts and liabilities of the republic of Texas, under the conditions of the resolution of annexation.—Hancock v. Walsh, Case No. 6,012.

The charter of Brownsville of 1853 gave no title or interest to such city to land owned by the state of Texas which belonged to Matamoras on December 18, 1836.—Brownsville v. Cavazos, Case No. 2,043.

§ 76. Virginia.
Construction of grant for lands from the commonwealth of Virginia made in 1796.—Morrill v. Armstrong, Case No. 9,822.

Subsequently to the cession of the Virginia military district, the state of Virginia had no right to issue a patent for land within it.—Miller v. Lindsey, Case No. 9,580.

An entry and survey do not, in Virginia, convey the legal estate in lands out of the commonwealth.—Jones v. Bache, Case No. 7,454.

Under the laws of Virginia, the certificate of registry of a patent, which is required to be given, is not necessary to the title to lands under it.—Ritchie v. Woods, Case No. 11,865.

Effect of certificate from commissioners of Virginia as to lands subsequently found to be within the limits of Pennsylvania.—Swan v. Hughes, Case No. 13,669.

IV. COLONIAL AND PROPRIETARY GRANTS.

§ 77. Title and rights of proprietaries.
Title and rights of the proprietaries of Pennsylvania.—Penn v. Klyne, Case No. 10,935; Conn v. Penn, Id. 3,104.

The proprietary is neither an agent nor a trustee for the first purchasers.—Hurst v. Durnell, Case No. 6,927.

To show a title out of the proprietaries, a grant, warrant, and survey under the proprietors, or length of possession against them, may be shown.—Gardner v. Sharp, Case No. 5,236.

§ 78. Surveys.
An actual survey was not necessary as to all the lines, where some of them may be obtained from old lines and natural boundaries.—Penn v. Groff, Case No. 10,932.

Persons entitled to liberty lands were bound to have them laid off by surveyors regularly appointed, the same as other lands.—Hurst v. Durnell, Case No. 6,927.

§ 79. Construction and operation of grants and conveyances.
Construction and effect of grants and reservations made by the proprietaries of Pennsylvania previous to the Revolution.—Conn v. Penn, Case No. 3,104.

The contract for liberty land did not constitute the purchasers tenants in common.—Hurst v. Durnell, Case No. 6,927.

The appropriation by proprietaries of Pennsylvania of the manor of Springetsburg under the warrant of 1722, and the warrant of résurvey of 1762, and the rights of subsequent purchasers and settlers.—Conn v. Penn, Case No. 3,105.

The proprietary, by his promise to first purchasers, did not deprive himself of the right to lay off the manor of Springettsbury, north of the city of Philadelphia.—Hurst v. Durnell, Case No. 6,927.

Effect of the adjustment by an agent of the proprietaries of Pennsylvania in 1733 of the claims of settlers on the west side of the Susquehanna within the boundaries of lands afterwards resurveyed as the manor of Springettsbury.—Penn v. Groff, Case No. 10,932.

§ 80. Rights of purchasers and settlers.
The presumption of payment of the purchase money to the original proprietaries of land does not arise from length of time, where no patent is shown to have been issued.—Conn v. Penn, Case No. 3,104.

A warrant and survey, and consideration paid, gives a title sufficient to maintain ejectment against the proprietaries, or those claiming under them; otherwise where the consideration is not paid.—Penn v. Klyne, Case No. 10,935.

A settlement and improvement made under the Connecticut claim will not support the title. —Keene v. Harris, Case No. 7,642.

A right of settlement and improvement is merged in the title acquired under a survey under a warrant by the owner of the settlement and improvement.—Harris v. Burchan, Case No. 6,117.

The rights of settlers and warrant holders in cases of abandonment, improvement, etc., and delay to protect such title, stated.—Holtzapple v. Phillibaum, Case No. 6,648.

V. SPANISH, MEXICAN, AND OTHER FOREIGN GRANTS.

§ 81. Right to grant.
A consent to occupy land under "a provisional license" given on a petition for a grant of land for pasturage will not give petitioners any right to the absolute fee which will be respected by the government.—United States v. De Haro, Case No. 14,939.

Where no grant, either perfect or inchoate, was made, nor any promise given that a grant would be made, mere occupation pending an application for the land does not constitute a valid claim.—Romero v. United States, Case No. 12,-029.

An equity based upon a license to occupy can be enforced only where there is clear proof of an occupancy and settlement of the land upon the faith thereof.—United States v. Brown, Case No. 14,664.

There is no obligation upon the United States to allow the claim to land of one who had obtained its loan from the ayuntamiento, and had settled upon and cultivated it, where the Mexican government for years had failed to act favorably upon an application for a grant.—United States v. Berreyesa, Case No. 14,585.

An inchoate title, followed by juridical possession, presents an equity which the United States is bound to respect.—United States v. Enright, Case No. 15,053.

Where it appears that the governor intended to accede to the petition, and the land has been long occupied and enjoyed under the grant or promise to grant, and by everybody recognized as belonging to the grantee, the latter has an equitable title, which the United States will respect.—United States v. Soto, Case No. 16,357.

A mere permission to search for and take possession of land did not bind the Mexican government to make a title, and the United States are not required under the treaty to recognize such claim.—Garcia v. United States, Case No. 5,215.

Possession of lands in a pueblo under a concession by an officer having authority only to lease for five years, accompanied by efforts on the part of the occupant to obtain a grant, is not "under claim of ownership."—United States v. Berreyesa, Case No. 14,585.

The approval by the governor of an application for title by one in possession does not affect the character of his possession, so as to render it that of a Mexican colonist with the permission of the government.—United States v. Berreyesa, Case No. 14,585.

Construction of Act March 3, 1851, passed in execution of the obligation in the treaty under which California was ceded, to protect holders of Spanish or Mexican titles.—Montgomery v. Bevans, Case No. 9,735.

Such act operated upon the titles conferred by the Van Ness ordinance as effectually as a patent would have done.—Montgomery v. Bevans, Case No. 9,735.

§ 82. Requisites and validity of grants.

In the grant of land to the city of San Francisco for the uses and purposes specified in the Van Ness ordinance, the exception of such parcels as might be subsequently designated by the president (Act July 1, 1864, § 5) held did not defeat the entire grant.—Montgomery v. Bevans, Case No. 9,735.

A grant by a political chief for the time being of Alta California was not invalid, though it did not receive the previous approbation of the territorial deputation.—Cervantes v. United States, Case No. 2,560.

Assisting witnesses held not necessary to the validity of final Mexican titles extended by alcaldes and commissioners to make sales.—Sheirburn v. Hunter, Case No. 12,744.

Description of land granted aided by the diseño held sufficient.—United States v. Wilson, Case No. 16,735.

A grant described as the "place called 'Sanel,' its boundaries being the 'Serranias Altas' and the river," held sufficiently definite in description.—Feliz v. United States, Case No. 4,720.

The fact that a Mexican title document is written on unstamped paper is not fatal to its validity.—Sheirburn v. Hunter, Case No. 12,744.

The ayuntamiento of a pueblo had no power to grant lands within the limits of proprios duly and formally assigned to the pueblo, so as to create a greater estate in them than a leasehold for five years.—United States v. Berreyesa, Case No. 14,585.

Power of departmental assembly of California under the Mexican government to authorize the sale of lands.—Mora v. Foster, Case No. 9,784.

The power of the Mexican government to grant lands in California did not cease until the actual conquest of the country; and rights under grants made during the war will be respected, and are not affected by treaty stipulations.—Palmer v. United States, Case No. 10,697.

A Mexican land grant, made July 7, 1846, the date of the actual conquest of California, held entitled to respect, where the title was ordered to issue June 11, 1846.—Pico v. United States, Case No. 11,130.

Whether the issue of a previous grant of 11 leagues to a claimant disqualifies him from receiving a second grant is a question of law, and any error in its decision can be corrected only on appeal.—United States v. Flint, Case No. 15,121.

As to the presumption in favor of the validity of a grant to one supposed to be a French citizen by the governor of California, shortly before the territory passed from his hands.—United States v. Cambuston, Case No. 14,713.

A grant of land in the pueblo of San Francisco by an alcalde in 1846 to a person deceased is void.—Montgomery v. Bevans, Case No. 9,735.

A grant purporting to convey land lying within the limits of a colony will be void if the land, in fact, lies outside such limits, unless the parties acted in good faith.—Sheirburn v. Hunter, Case No. 12,744.

A grant by a political chief of Alta California was not invalid because the lands were not within the limits of a mission, or within 10 leagues of the seacoast, or because the approbation of the supreme executive did not appear, though it had been obtained.—Cervantes v. United States, Case No. 2,560.

Under the laws of Mexico, more than 11 leagues of land could not be granted in colonization to any one person.—United States v. Hartnell, Case No. 15,317.

§ 83. Construction and operation of grants.

The rule at common law, that in the construction of deeds quantity must yield to specific metes and bounds, cannot be applied to Mexican grants.—Tobin v. Walkinshaw, Case No. 14,-069.

The words "a little more or less" will be held to pass all the land included within the boundaries named, though in excess of the quantity named, where the description and the circumstances justify the belief that such was the intention.—United States v. Estudillo, Case No. 15,058.

A grant of a certain rancho according to boundaries named, stating the quantity as "one square league, a little more or less," held to convey the entire rancho, though it contained much more than one square league.—United States v. Bernal, Cases Nos. 14,578, 14,583.

A Mexican grant of "a little more than three leagues" held to carry but three leagues, to be taken from the larger tract named in the grant. —Marsh v. United States, Case No. 9,120.

Under a grant of land "of the extent of two square leagues, a little more or less," the judicial officer has no power to confirm a tract of 3½ leagues.—United States v. Castro, Case No. 14,753.

Under a grant designating the quantity as two leagues, a little more or less, the court will not confirm a claim to a tract of four or five leagues.—United States v. Peralta, Case No. 16,032.

§ 84. Conditions.

Conditions in a grant that the grantee should build and inhabit a house within a certain time, and obtain judicial possession of the land, are conditions subsequent.—Cervantes v. United States, Case No. 2,560.

Requisites to a complete title under a Mexican land grant, and necessity of compliance with conditions.—United States v. Cervantes, Case No. 14,768.

A Mexican land grant will be confirmed where the conditions as to cultivation and habitation annexed to the grant have been performed.—Chabolla v. United States, Case No. 2,566.

The danger from savages is no excuse for not complying with the condition of the grant, requiring settlement on the land to be made within one year.—United States v. Fremont, Case No. 15,164.

A neglect to occupy and settle before the conquest, where the grant was made less than a month before the capture of Monterey, held not unreasonable.—United States v. Galbraith, Case No. 15,182.

Where the conditions of a grant have been performed cy pres, though no approval has been given by the departmental assembly, the claim is entitled to confirmation.—United States v. Reading, Case No. 16,127.

The failure to strictly comply, in regard to time, with a condition requiring a house to be built upon the land, will not prevent the confirmation of a grant otherwise valid, and confirmed by the departmental assembly.—United States v. Soto, Case No. 16,355.

§ 85. Location.

The building of a house and the making of improvements within such limits by the grantee may be considered as an election of location in favor of a subsequent purchaser thereof, and will be so treated by the court to protect an earlier grantee, where there are conflicting claims.—United States v. Sutter, Case No. 16,-424.

An election of location of a grant as shown by the erection of buildings, and by the cultivation of the land, will prevail as against a location shown by deeds of the tract.—United States v. Castro, Case No. 14,750.

A warrant or order of survey could be executed by the surveyor general of the province of Louisiana, or by any deputy appointed by him, or by the district surveyor, or by the commandant of a post, or by a private person specially authorized by the governor general or intendant; but the location of a grant cannot be made by a mere private survey.—Winter v. United States, Case No. 17,895.

Location of grant on conflicting testimony.—United States v. Graham, Case No. 15,246.

A decision of the circuit court as to the proper location of a Mexican grant is entitled to great weight on a similar issue of fact, submitted on identical testimony, in another proceeding.—Dodge v. Perez, Case No. 3,953.

The recital in a grant of pueblo lands by the prefect as "within the demarkation" of the pueblo affords presumptive proof, in the absence of opposing evidence, that the land was so situated, and that the officer acted within the limits of his authority.—United States v. Sherebeck, Case No. 16,275.

In locating a grant, the court cannot be controlled in establishing the lines by the fact that the survey, which it regards as conformable to the grant, will include part of the lands falling within the limits of a subsequent grant, which has not yet been confirmed.—Weber v. United States, Case No. 17,329.

Construction of decree for the location of a lot under a Mexican grant, based upon the language used by a witness.—United States v. De Haro, Case No. 14,937.

After the lapse of many years, where large interests have been acquired on the faith of the finality of a decree, the location will not be disturbed, except in the case of manifest error, and on clear proof of incorrectness.—United States v. Folsom, Case No. 15,126.

The location of a valid grant cannot be affected by the fact that, without notice to the grantee, the grant was treated as forfeited, and part of the lands granted to another.—United States v. Larkin, Case No. 15,562.

Where a decree locating a grant rests on the idea of conforming as near as may be, and in a general way, to the supposed intention of the grantor, the court is not precluded from thereafter modifying in a slight degree the directions of the lines so as to obtain a location by which existing rights acquired in good faith may be protected.—Weber v. United States, Case No. 17,328.

Under Act June 14, 1860, settlers can object to the location of a Mexican grant only through the United States district attorney.—United States v. Carillo, Case No. 14,736; Same v. Folsom, Id. 15,127.

Lands not embraced within the exterior lines designated in a Mexican grant cannot be included in the juridical possession given by a magistrate.—Dodge v. Perez, Case No. 3,953.

A selection of other land by claimant, and a disclaimer made after a location against his protest, held would not estop him from setting up title derived under his patent subsequently granted, as against those locating on the same land before the final location of the grant.—Bissell v. Henshaw, Case No. 1,447.

An unapproved Mexican grant, not segregated from the public domain before the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, gives no rights except against a trespasser.—Tobin v. Walkinshaw, Case No. 14,069.

It is a sufficient severance from the public domain when the grant itself designates by unmistakable natural boundaries the limits of the district within which it is to be located, and where the particular land granted is specified by name.—United States v. Fremont, Case No. 15,164.

When a certain quantity has been granted within limits which embrace a much larger tract, the quantity granted is to be located within the exterior limits at the election of the grantee.—United States v. Sutter, Case No. 16,-424.

A clear and definite call for a line as of a given course and direction will not be controlled by an indefinite act of possession.—United States v. Enwright, Case No. 15,054.

§ 86. Abandonment and forfeiture of grants.

Prior and continued occupancy of a tract adjoining that granted will extend to the latter, so as to rebut any presumption of abandonment of the grant.—United States v. Rose, Case No. 16,195.

The nonperformance of a condition of a public grant to pay annually an ear of corn as rent is not a ground of forfeiture, as such rent is merely nominal.—Vermont v. Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, Case No. 16,919.

Forfeiture of a Mexican grant cannot be predicated on failure to occupy and cultivate, occurring after the acquisition of California.—United States v. Juares, Case No. 15,500.

A fraudulent attempt to alter the date of a grant so as to obviate an apprehended objection to its validity cannot take away from the claimant any lands actually granted to him before the acquisition of the country by the United States.—United States v. Galbraith, Case No. 15,182.

§ 87. Actions and proceedings to establish or confirm grants—Jurisdiction.

The district court has no jurisdiction to divide and partition a claim under a Spanish land grant among claimants.—Putnam v. United States, Case No. 11,484.

The district court had jurisdiction under Act June 14, 1860, to revise the location of the Boga grant.—Bissell v. Henshaw, Case No. 1,447.

Petition to confirm a grant lying mostly in another state dismissed, for want of jurisdiction.—Callender v. United States, Case No. 2,321.

§ 88. —— Procedure.

The division of a Spanish claim not allowed in the district court.—Bullitt v. United States, Case No. 2,128.

The neglect to support a petition for land by evidence within two years after it is presented to the board of land commissioners does not bring the claim within the limitation of Act March 3, 1851, § 13.—Swat v. United States, Case No. 13,680.

Construction of the California statute of limitations of 1863 in relation to claims to real property under Spanish or Mexican titles.—Montgomery v. Bevans, Case No. 9,735.

The statute of limitations of California does not begin to run against a confirmed Mexican grant, finally located under Act June 14, 1860, until the patent issues.—Le Roy v. Carroll, Case No. 8,266.

One whose claim under a grant has never been presented, and has been abandoned, has no right, under Act 1851, § 13, to intervene in a proceeding to confirm a different grant until after the determination of the proceedings by the confirmation of the claim.—United States v. White, Case No. 16,680.

Where a cause is remanded for further proceedings involving additional proofs, the United States are entitled to a reasonable time in which to close their testimony.—United States v. Fossat, Case No. 15,138.

In cases pending under Act March 3, 1851, the court will extend some indulgence to the district attorney to give him reasonable time to prepare for trial.—Palmer v. United States, Case No. 10,695.

The fact that the circuit and district courts are simultaneously in session is not sufficient cause for the continuance of a land case.—Palmer v. United States, Case No. 10,696.

§ 89. —— Evidence.

The oldest grant is evidence of title at law, and can only be defeated by producing an older entry coupled with a grant.—Patton v. Carothers, Case No. 10,833.

The fact that the grantee himself was acting governor, and made out the papers to himself, according to a petition presented to a previous governor, held not sufficient to justify rejecting the claim, where the possession had been long continued, and all the papers were regular.—United States v. Pico, Case No. 16,048.

A favorable report by the ayuntamiento on an application on an expediente formed does not show that any grant was actually made.—United States v. Berreyesa, Case No. 14,585.

The expediente is the most satisfactory evidence of the issuance of the grant.—United States v. Galbraith, Case No. 15,182.

The nonproduction of the grant will not affect the validity of the claim, where its loss is proved, and long and notorious occupation of the land has been established.—United States v. Castro, Case No. 14,752; Same v. Vallejo, Id. 16,606; Same v. Chaboya, Id. 14,769.

An expediente not placed among the records until 1855 is not archive testimony, such as is indispensable to the confirmation of an alleged grant.—United States v. Teschemacher, Case No. 16,455.

In the absence of archive evidence of the grant, the fullest and most satisfactory proofs of possession and occupation during the existence of the former government, under a notorious and undisputed claim of title, and clear and indubitable evidence of the genuineness of the grant produced, will be required.—United States v. Polack, Case No. 16,061.

Oral testimony is not admissible to establish the making and contents of a Spanish grant of the issue of which the archives contain no trace. —United States v. Berreyesa, Case No. 14,585.

The record of the act of possession, based on depositions containing statements upon which the alcalde acted, cannot be contradicted by testimony of aged, illiterate, and infirm witnesses as to their recollection of what was done or intended by the alcalde.—United States v. Payson, Case No. 16,015.

An unquestionably genuine Mexican grant will not be invalidated by an accompanying titulo which is forged and fraudulent, if neither the claimants nor the original grantees were parties to the fraud.—United States v. Juares, Case No. 15,500.

Sufficiency of evidence to prove the execution of a Mexican land grant, where the grant is alleged to have been lost.—Morehead v. United States, Case No. 9,792.

Claims to Mexican land grants rejected in the absence of documentary proofs.—Diaz v. United States, Case No. 3,878; United States v. Bernal, Id. 14,579; Same v. Brown, Id. 14,664.

Evidence held insufficient to establish a Mexican land grant.—Larkin v. United States, Case No. 8,091.

The Mexican grant to Ramon Mesa held sufficiently proven, there being no opposing testimony.—Brackett v. United States, Case No. 1,763.

Objections held removed by further testimony taken in the court on appeal from land commissioner.—Dana v. United States, Case No. 3,555.

Objections to confirmation of grant of land in San Joaquin county, Cal., held to have been removed by additional testimony as to performance of conditions.—Grimes v. United States, Case No. 5,828.

§ 90. —— Hearing and determination.

The court has no jurisdiction in a proceeding to confirm a grant to inquire into any questions of private right between the heirs or devisees of the grantee and the present claimants.—United States v. Vallejo, Case No. 16,606.

Where it appears that the original petition was for half a league of land, a claim to a larger extent will not be allowed.—United States v. De Haro, Case No. 14,940.

A co-claimant of a Mexican grant, who presents his separate claim for his half, and denies the execution of an alleged deed by him to the other, is entitled to a confirmation, as against the United States.—Thurn v. United States, Case No. 14,015.

A decree of confirmation must be made to the claimant, or to the legal representatives of the deceased grantee, whoever they may be, and without prejudice to the rights of any one who may be lawfully entitled under him.—United States v. Vallejo, Case No. 16,605.

The proceedings of the board of land commissioners for confirmation of Mexican grants are judicial in their character, and their decree is conclusive between the parties and their privies.—Boyle v. Hinds, Case No. 1,759.

A confirmation of a Mexican land grant under Act March 3, 1851, determined nothing as to the equitable relations between the confirmees and third persons.—Hardy v. Harbin, Case No. 6,060.

Advantage will be taken of ambiguity or discrepancies in the language of a decree of confirmation to restrict the claimant to the land actually granted.—United States v. De Haro, Case No. 14,938.

Confirmation of a Mexican land grant by the land commissioners and the district court does not vest legal title so as to bar ejectment by one holding a patent from the United States.—Mezes v. Greer, Case No. 9,520.

If the bill showed that the decree had been procured by fraud of the grossest character, the court would still be without jurisdiction, for it has no authority to pass upon the propriety of the decree.—United States v. Flint, Case No. 15,121.

After a decree confirming a grant according to described boundaries, and the dismissal of an appeal therefrom, the court has no authority, in determining questions relating to the survey, to assume the invalidity of the original grant.—United States v. Vallejo, Case No. 16,605.

Lands excluded from the external limits of a Mexican grant by the express terms of the decree for confirmation cannot properly be embraced within a survey of the grant.—Dodge v. Perez, Case No. 3,953.

§ 91. —— Review.

The rules of equity allowing the filing of a bill of review are not applicable to proceedings under Acts 1851, 1852, and 1855, in relation to the trial and determination of the validity of claims based on titles from the Mexican or Spanish government.—United States v. Bolton, Case No. 14,623.

The jurisdiction conferred upon the special tribunal created for the settlement of claims to lands in California, of Spanish and Mexican origin, and upon the courts empowered to review its decisions (Act March 3, 1851), was in its nature exclusive, and the decrees of such tribunals are not open to review in any court. —United States v. Flint, Case No. 15,121.

From what decrees appeals to circuit court in Mexican land-grant cases are authorized under Act July 1, 1864.—Mesa v. United States, Case No. 9,492.

Act May 6, 1864, in relation to claimants of San Ramon rancho lands, does not give the district court power to revise a decree of confirmation rendered by it under an agreement between the claimant and the district attorney, in the absence of mistake.—United States v. Carpentier, Case No. 14,728.

The court has no jurisdiction of an appeal from the decision of the board of land commissioners where notice is not filed with the clerk within six months, as prescribed by the act of 1852.—Yturbide v. United States, Case No. 18,-191.

Where both the city and the United States appeal from a decree of the land commission confirming the claim of the city, held, that the withdrawal and dismissal of the appeal on the part of the United States was an assent by them to the main facts upon which the claim of the city rested.—San Francisco v. United States, Case No. 12,316.

An appeal to the district court from a decree of the board of land commissioners (Act 1851), confirming a claim under a Mexican grant in California, opens the whole issue for consideration, and further evidence may be produced.—Le Roy v. Wright, Case No. 8,273.

§ 92. Transfers by claimants.

The claimants of a grant are estopped to object that parts of the land which they have sold and conveyed as part of their rancho are not within its limits, for the purpose of completing their quantity by embracing in the survey lands not conveyed by them.—United States v. Pacheco, Case No. 15,980.

Purchasers of land under final decrees of confirmation cannot be disturbed upon charges of fraud in the prosecution of the claims confirmed, and vague allegation of notice of such fraud. —United States v. Flint, Case No. 15,121.

§ 93. Preferred purchasers on rejection of grant.

A claimant under a Mexican grant, who has never presented his grant for confirmation, is not within the act authorizing the purchase of lands excluded by final survey. Act July 23, 1866, § 7.—Dodge v. Perez, Case No. 3,953.

§ 94. Patents.

The patent issued upon a confirmed Mexican grant is the final, authentic, and conclusive record of title, as against all persons having no patent.—Mora v. Foster, Case No. 9,784.

One claiming title to a confirmed grant in opposition to the confirmee, but under the same original grantee, is entitled, under Act 1851, § 13, to enjoin the issuance of a patent to the confirmee pending a suit in the state courts to determine the title as between the two.—United States v. Sanchez, Case No. 16,217.

§ 95. Survey—Necessity of survey.

Surveys were necessary under the Spanish government.—De Villemont v. United States, Case No. 3,839; Glenn v. Same, Id. 5,481.

The Spanish grant of June 27, 1797, of lands in Louisiana to Winter rejected, because the grant did not designate any particular land, and was not designated and ascertained by an authorized survey.—Winter v. United States, Case No. 17,895.

Land will not be excluded from the claimant's survey because included in the diseño of a neighboring rancho, where the latter has not been surveyed, and the owners have not intervened.—United States v. Pacheco, Case No. 15,-980.

Where precise locality is not given to a concession, a survey is necessary to sever the land from the royal domain.—De Villemont v. United States, Case No. 3,839.

A measurement and segregation from the public domain of the specific land granted within the boundaries designated was essential to a complete investiture of the title.—United States v. Castro, Case No. 14,754.

§ 96. —— Method, sufficiency, and validity.

A grant of land, held should be surveyed in accordance with the claimant's original survey and election, where large expenditures have been made, in reliance thereon, without objection by adjoining owners.—United States v. Richardson, Case No. 16,156.

Under the ordinances of the former government, all grants of public land were required to be measured in a square or rectangular form, or into a trapezium, where natural objects prevented the other measurement.—United States v. De Haro, Case No. 14,941.

To constitute a survey of land under the Spanish government, there must have been an actual measurement by running lines and angles with compass and chain, and designating corners and boundaries by marking trees, fixing monuments, or referring to existing objects of notoriety on the ground, giving bearings and distances, and making descriptive field notes and plots of the work.—Winter v. United States, Case No. 17,-895.

Validity of survey of Santa Teresa rancho determined upon the evidence.—United States v. Bernal, Case No. 14,580.

§ 97. —— Confirmation of survey.

Proceedings by the district court to confirm surveys of Mexican grants are judicial, and its judgments conclusive.—Bissell v. Henshaw, Case No. 1,447.

Such proceedings are in the nature of proceedings in rem, and all parties interested must intervene or be concluded.—Bissell v. Henshaw, Case No. 1,447.

The extension of the line beyond the limits of the grant recognized by the government and adjoining proprietors for a number of years held sufficient to warrant confirmation of a survey adopting such boundary.—United States v. Narvaez, Case No. 15,855.

The order of the governor directing the title to issue to the petitioner is not controlling in the determination of boundaries, when it appears that on the following day a decree of concession was made, accurately defining the rights of the petitioner, and the formal title was issued and accepted by him, declaring its boundaries with unmistakable precision.—United States v. Walkinshaw, Case No. 16,633.

A case is "pending," within the act of 1860, where a motion for rehearing remains unargued and undisposed of at the date of the passage of the act.—United States v. Murphy, Case No. 15,837.

Surveys of Mexican land grants confirmed upon the evidence.—United States v. Hignera, Cases Nos. 15,362, 15,363; Same v. Pico, Id. 16,044; Same v. Rodriguez, Id. 16,181a.

Where the district court had ordered a survey of a confirmed claim to land under a Mexican grant into court for examination (Act June 14, 1860), its jurisdiction over the entire subject-matter continued until the survey of the claim was finally disposed of, notwithstanding Act July 1, 1864.—United States v. Castro, Case No. 14,754.

§ 98. —— Contest of survey.
A survey made by the surveyor general on the confirmation of a Mexican grant cannot be contested by a purchaser from the claimant of a tract which is within the location as made by the surveyor-general, and which would be included within any survey that could be made.—United States v. Bidwell, Case No. 14,592.

On objections filed to a survey, any ambiguities and repugnancies in the decree establishing the authenticity of the claim may be removed by interpretation.—United States v. Hoppe, Case No. 15,388.

After affirmance of a decree of the district court, it may, upon objections to the survey, inquire whether the boundaries described therein are in accordance with its own decree, and with the title papers upon which the judgments of both courts, as shown by their opinions, were founded.—United States v. Peralta, Case No. 16,030.

Objections by the patentee to the survey of a confirmed Mexican land claim are waived by his acceptance of the patent.—Le Roy v. Jamison, Case No. 8,271.

Where a survey made under a decree of confirmation is objected to as erroneous, before a patent issues the court must direct its return in order that the questions raised as to the location and boundary may be heard and determined.—United States v. Folsom, Case No. 15.127.

A person alleging that any of the land included in a survey of a rancho is public land of the United States must urge his objection in their name, and through the district attorney.—United States v. Bidwell, Case No. 14,592.

§ 99. —— Correcting and setting aside survey.
In a proceeding to correct a survey under the act of 1860, the district court has no jurisdiction to review and reverse the final decree whereby the genuineness and validity of the claim are established.—United States v. Rico, Case No. 16,160.

Where the lines of a Mexican grant have been run due east and west instead of due north and south by mistake of the draftsman of the diseño, the running of such lines may be altered.—United States v. Alvisu, Case No. 14,435.

Modification of the official survey of the Mexican grant directed on a review of the evidence.—United States v. Sunol, Case No. 16,419.

An error in running a survey so as to include a different tract from that described in the grant and delineated on the diseño will be rectified by the court when the survey is submitted for approval.—United States v. Folsom, Case No. 15,125.

Where a judicial measurement and delivery of a tract of land according to fixed boundaries has been made by the Mexican government, and long acquiesced in, such boundaries will not be modified, although they include a considerable quantity in excess of the amount specified in the grant.—Yount v. United States, Case No. 18,187.

The court has no authority to deflect and modify lines so as to exclude particular parcels, even where they have been settled upon by others in good faith.—United States v. De Haro, Case No. 14,941.

A dividing line between two ranchos fixed in proceedings for the confirmation of one, to which the claimant of the other was a party, held, should not be disturbed on exceptions to the official survey of the latter rancho.—United States v. De Rodriguez, Case No. 14,950.

The commissioner of the general land office has jurisdiction to revise or set aside a survey of a Mexican grant made under Act March 3, 1851.—Bissell v. Henshaw, Case No. 1,447.

Before the court will disturb or set aside a survey made by the surveyor general under the law of 1851, it must be satisfied that the decree of confirmation has been plainly departed from, or that some clear and obvious error has been committed.—United States v. Bojorques, Case No. 14,620.

Official survey of Mexican land grant rejected upon the evidence.—United States v. Rodriguez, Case No. 16,182.

§ 100. —— Conflicting surveys.
A junior grantee cannot insist on a survey which will overlap a prior grant for which a patent has been issued, where he will obtain the full quantity without such overlapping.—United States v. Soto, Case No. 16,354.

§ 101. Indemnity or lieu lands.
French grantees of Louisiana lands held not entitled to indemnity from the United States for land diverted from them by a grant under the succeeding Spanish government.—Bouligney v. United States, Case No. 1,696a.

A grantee will not be decreed an equivalent for a deficiency within his exterior boundaries out of a sobrante accidentally found to exist within the exterior boundaries of a neighboring grant.—United States v. Rodriguez, Case No. 16,183.

§ 102. Decisions on particular grants.
Claims to Mexican land grants confirmed upon the evidence.—Castro v. United States, Case No. 2,509; Martin v. Same, Id. 9,168; Mesa v. Same, Id. 9,491; Noe v. Same, Id. 10,285; Nunez v. Same, Id. 10,379; Pacheco v. Same, Id. 10,641; Pico v. Same, Id. 11,127, 11,128, 11,129; Semple v. Same, Id. 12,662; United States v. Alvisu, Id. 14,436; Same v. Amador, Id. 14,437; Same v. Armijo, Id. 14,466; Same v. Bale, Id. 14,504; Same v. Bassett, Id. 14,538; Same v. Bernal, Id. 14,581, 14,582; Same v. Berreyesa, Id. 14,586; Same v. Boggs, Id. 14,618; Same v. Briones, Id. 14,649; Same v. Cambuston, Id. 14,712; Same v. Carrillo, Id. 14,737; Same v. Castro, Id. 14,751; Same v. Cazares, Id. 14,761; Same v. Chaboya, Id. 14,770; Same v. Chana, Id. 14,780; Same v. Cooper, Id. 14,862; Same v. Greer, Id. 15,261; Same v. Grimes, Id. 15,265; Same v. Guerrero, Id. 15,269; Same v. Horrell, Id. 15,391; Same v. Larkin, Id. 15,563, 15,564; Same v. Leese, Id. 15,590; Same v. Moraga, Id. 15,806; Same v. Murphy, Id. 15,839, 15,840, 15,841; Same v. Ortega, Id. 15,970; Same v. Osio, Id. 15,972; Same v. Pacheco, Id. 15,981; Same v. Page, Id. 15,987; Same v. Palomares, Id. 15,990; Same v. Payson, Id. 16,017; Same v. Peralta, Id. 16,031; Same v. Pico, Id. 16,046; Same v. Pope, Id. 16,068; Same v. Reid, Id. 16,140; 16,141; Same v. Rico, Id. 16,161; Same v. Rodriguez, Id. 16,181, 16,184, 16,185; Same v. Rose, Id. 16,195; Same v. Sanchez, Id. 16,218; Same v. Sheldon, Id. 16,270; Same v. Soto, Id. 16,356; Same v. Stevenson, Id. 16,397; Same v. Sunol, Id. 16,420; Same v. Thomes, Id. 16,481, 16,482; Same v. Thompson, Id. 16,488; Same v. Weber, Id. 16,657; Same v. Yount, Id. 16,784; Vallejo v. United States, Id. 16,818, 16,819; Valliere v. Same, Id. 16,822; Yount v. Same, Id. 18,188.

The "general title of sutler," derived from Gov. Micheltorena, held valid.—Bennitz v. United States, Case No. 1,327.

Spanish claims rejected upon the evidence.—Glenn v. United States, Case No. 5,481; De Villemont v. Same, Id. 3,839.

Mexican grants rejected upon the evidence.—Little v. United States, Case No. 8,396; Luco v. Same, Id. 8,594; McKee v. Same, Id. 8,850; Panaud v. Same, Id. 10,704; Redman v. Same, Id. 11,631; United States v. Galindo, Id. 15,-183; Same v. Limantour, Id. 15,601; Same v. Peralta, Id. 16,029; Same v. Pico, Id. 16,045, 16,047; Same v. Roland, Id. 16,190; Same v. White, Id. 16,673.

History of the claim of a grant to John Law, of lands in the Louisiana purchase.—Law v. United States, Case No. 8,131.

Boundaries of Armijo Mexican land grant.—Armijo v. United States, Case No. 536.

Determination of boundaries of grant to Justo Larios.—United States v. Fossat, Case No. 15,-139; Same v. Fossatt, Id. 15,140.

§ 103. Title of lands in San Francisco.
Validity of San Francisco alcalde titles.—Hall v. Unger, Case No. 5,949.

The title of the city of San Francisco to its municipal lands within its charter limits became perfected on the passage of Act July 1, 1864.—Harris v. McGovern, Case No. 6,125.

As to the control and disposal of lands in the city of San Francisco, whose title was derived under the Mexican law.—United States v. Carr, Case No. 14,731.

The title of the city of San Francisco to certain lands held determined by the decree of the circuit court of May 18, 1865, as modified by Act March 8, 1866.—Montgomery v. Bevans, Case No. 9,735.

An alcalde of the pueblo of San Francisco in 1846 had no authority to revoke a grant once made by him and delivered, or to mutilate its record.—Montgomery v. Bevans, Case No. 9,735.

Claim of the city of San Francisco, as successor of the pueblo, to municipal lands, how founded.—Montgomery v. Bevans, Case No. 9,735.

Ordinance No. 822 of the city of San Francisco, of June 20, 1855, confirming certain alcalde grants, held to operate as a full grant to the persons named therein.—Merriman v. Bourne, Case No. 9,480.

Lands within the limits of the pueblo of San Francisco are not subject to levy and sale under judgment and execution against the city.—United States v. Hare, Case No. 15,303.

By the laws of Mexico in force at the date of the conquest, a pueblo or town, when once established and officially recognized, became entitled for its own use and the use of its inhabitants to four square leagues of land.—San Francisco v. United States, Case No. 12,316.

Title to and power of control and disposition of lands of the pueblo of San Francisco.—United States v. Hare, Case No. 15,303.

The interest of a pueblo in lands in California, and the rights acquired by the United States upon the cession, considered.—Grisar v. McDowell, Case No. 5,832.

The Bay of San Francisco is the eastern boundary of the land confirmed to the city of San Francisco, the line being that of ordinary high-water mark as it existed July 7, 1846, crossing the mouth of all creeks running into the bay.—Tripp v. Spring, Case No. 14,180.

Right of derivative claimants of the Vigil and St. Vrain grant, under Acts June 21, 1860, and Feb. 25, 1869.—Leitensdorfer v. Campbell, Case No. 8,225.

VI. TITLES DERIVED FROM INDIANS.

§ 104. Rights acquired.
The seisin of lands belonging to Indian tribes is in the sovereign, and a purchaser from the Indians can only acquire the Indian title.—Jackson v. Porter, Case No. 7,143.

Under the Cherokee treaty of July 19, 1866, an actual settler upon the "neutral lands," whose rights were perfect on the date of ratification, could sell his improvements and rights to another.—Langdon v. Joy, Case No. 8,062.

An actual settler on "Cherokee neutral lands" under the treaty of July 19, 1866, may transfer his right to purchase the land, and the grantee may make the required proof.—Stroud v. Missouri River, Ft. S. & G. R. Co., Case No. 13,547.

PUBLIC NUISANCE.

See "Nuisance," § 2.

PUBLIC POLICY.

Contracts against, see "Contracts," § 9.
Provisions against, see "Seamen," § 30.

PUBLIC USE.

Dedication of property, see "Dedication."
Taking property for public use, see "Eminent Domain."

PUNISHMENT.

See "Forfeitures"; "Pardon"; "Penalties."
For contempt, see "Contempt," §§ 2–8.
For crime, see "Criminal Law," § 107.
For violation of injunction, see "Injunction," §§ 39, 40; "Patents," § 252.
Of seamen, see "Seamen," §§ 160–169, 180, 187.

PUNITIVE DAMAGES.

See "Collision," § 136; "Damages," § 8.

Q

QUANTUM MERUIT.

See "Assumpsit, Action of"; "Work and Labor."

QUESTIONS FOR JURY.

In civil actions, see "Trial," § 12.
In criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 93.

QUIETING TITLE.

§ 1, Right of action and defenses—Nature of remedy. § 2, —— Power of equity. § 3, —— What constitutes cloud upon title. § 4, —— Title and possession of plaintiff or complainant. § 5, —— Prior determination of title at law. § 6, Proceedings and relief—Jurisdiction. § 7, —— Pleading. § 8, —— Trial. § 9, —— Judgment or decree.

§ 1. Right of action and defenses—Nature of remedy.

The removal of a cloud from title is an equitable right, and can only be enforced on the equity side of the court.—Loring v. Downer, Case No. 8,513.

A suit brought under the Iowa statute to quiet title is an equity suit.—Balmear v. Otis, Case No. 819.

§ 2. —— Power of equity.

Equity has jurisdiction to remove a cloud upon the title to real estate, where there is no adequate remedy at law.—Morton v. Root, Case No. 9,866.

Relief in equity cannot be had, in Maine, to remove a cloud from the title to land, caused by an invalid levy, inasmuch as a plain, adequate, and complete remedy at law is provided by Rev. St. Me. c. 104, § 6.—Gray v. Call, Case No. 5,712.

Equity has jurisdiction to relieve against a meditated fraud, which throws a cloud over the title of a party.—Briggs v. French, Case No. 1,870.

Equity has jurisdiction to quiet the title at the suit of an owner of real estate in possession alleging a tax title held by defendant, who refuses to prosecute it.—Sharnleigh v. Surdam, Case No. 12,711.

§ 3. —— What constitutes cloud upon title.

Equity will entertain jurisdiction to remove a cloud upon title only where the instrument, etc., complained of, is valid upon its face.—Coulson v. Portland, Case No. 3,275; Hotchkiss v. Glasgow, Id. 6,717.

A void tax deed, which the statute does not make prima facie evidence of the regularity of the assessment and sale, does not cast a cloud upon the title.—Minturn v. Smith, Case No. 9,647.

A tax deed in California is prima facie evidence of the regularity of the tax proceedings, and therefore prima facie evidence of title, and, if executed in pursuance of a void sale, casts a cloud upon the title.—Huntington v. Central Pac. R. Co., Case No. 6,911.

§ 4. —— Title and possession of plaintiff or complainant.

Under Code Or. § 500, a party in possession cannot maintain the suit unless he shows some legal or equitable interest in or claim to the property.—King v. French, Case No. 7,793.

A title acquired under a statute of limitations will be quieted in the adverse holder on bill filed for that purpose, even against the holder of the paper title barred.—Four Hundred and Twenty Min. Co. v. Bullion Min. Co., Case No. 4,989.

Circuit court will entertain bill by one in prior possession, accompanied by title, to remove cloud upon title.—Bayerque v. Cohen, Case No. 1,134.

To maintain a bill of peace by a person having a present right of possession, he must have actual possession, which must be disturbed, and his right must have been previously determined at law.—Shepley v. Rangely, Case No. 12,756.

A bill of peace will not lie unless complainant is or has been in possession, or there is a defect in some deed asked to be given up.—Shapley v. Rangeley, Case No. 12,707.

§ 5. —— Prior determination of title at law.

A bill to quiet title will not lie between parties claiming title through the same person who is in possession, holding adversely to both, until the title is determined by a suit at law.—Shepley v. Rangely, Case No. 12,756.

The statute of Nevada providing that an "action" may be brought by any person in possession against any person who claims an interest or estate therein adverse to him, for the purpose of determining such adverse claim, dispenses with the necessity of establishing a right at law before suing to determine such adverse claims, as the term "action" in that state includes proceedings both at law and in equity.—Central Pac. R. Co. v. Dyer, Case No. 2,552.

§ 6. Proceedings and relief—Jurisdiction.

The federal courts have jurisdiction of a proceeding under a state statute for the confirmation of sales of land by sheriffs and other public officers whose object is to quiet title to lands.—Overman v. Parker, Case No. 10,623.

§ 7. —— Pleading.

A bill by legal owners alleging that defendants have forcibly taken possession under a false and fictitious claim of title, whose nature is not set out, is bad for want of equity on its face.—Speigle v. Meredith, Case No. 13,227.

Bill alleging seisin under state grant, and possession thereunder for seven years, is sufficient.—Bayerque v. Cohen, Case No. 1,134.

§ 8. —— Trial.

The rule is not universal that more than one trial at law is required to authorize a bill of peace.—Harmer v. Gwynne, Case No. 6,075.

On a bill to quiet title, the court cannot direct that on a second trial before a court of law the same evidence shall be received as was used upon the first trial.—Harmer v. Gwynne, Case No. 6,075.

§ 9. —— Judgment or decree.

A suit to ascertain and quiet title under Code Or. § 500, includes all grounds of controversy between the parties as to the title, and all matters affecting such title are determined by the final decree therein.—Starr v. Stark, Case No. 13,316.

Complainant, in a suit to determine an adverse claim to land, can only obtain relief upon the grounds alleged in his bill. Code Civ. Proc. Cal. § 738.—Burton v. Le Roy, Case No. 2,217.

QUI TAM ACTIONS.

See "Penalties," § 3.

QUO WARRANTO.

§ 1. When writ will lie.

When an information in the nature of a writ of quo warranto may be sustained against a person usurping an office under a private corporation.—Gunton v. Ingle, Case No. 5,870.

R

RAFTS.

Jurisdiction over, see "Admiralty," §§ 7, 26.

RAILROADS.

I. CONTROL AND REGULATION IN GENERAL.

§ 1, Status of railroad companies. § 2, Power to control and regulate. § 3, Statutory provisions.

II. RAILROAD COMPANIES.

§ 4, Incorporation and organization. § 5, Stockholders. § 6, Officers and agents. § 7, Franchises and powers. § 8, Amendment or revocation of charter. § 9, Reorganization. § 10, Consolidation. § 11, Abandonment of franchise.

III. PUBLIC AID.

§ 12, Rights under grants of aid in general. § 13, Conditions and performance of agreement. § 14, Negotiation and sale of securities.

IV. LOCATION OF ROAD AND TERMINI.

§ 15, Branches. § 16, Terminus. § 17, Connections with other roads. § 18, Extensions. § 19, Change of location.

V. RIGHT OF WAY AND OTHER INTERESTS IN LAND.

§ 20, Capacity to acquire and hold land.

VI. CONSTRUCTION, MAINTENANCE, AND EQUIPMENT.

§ 21, Statutory provisions. § 22, Road beds and tracks. § 23, Crossing other railroads. § 24, Contracts for construction or repair.

VII. SALES, LEASES, TRAFFIC CONTRACTS, AND CONSOLIDATION.

§ 25, Sales. § 26, Leases—Power to make lease. § 27, —— Requisites and validity. § 28, —— Construction and operation. § 29, Traffic arrangements. § 30, Consolidation.

VIII. INDEBTEDNESS, SECURITIES, LIENS, AND MORTGAGES.

(A) Nature and Extent of Liabilities.

§ 31, Bonds and other obligations. § 32, Indorsement or guaranty of bonds. § 33, Liens in general. § 34, Mortgages—Power to mortgage. § 35, —— Requisites and validity. § 36, —— Property and funds included. § 37, —— Debts and obligations secured. § 38, —— Rights and duties of trustees. § 39, Sinking funds. § 40, Priorities of liens and mortgages. § 41, Interest and coupons. § 42, Actions on obligations.

(B) Foreclosure of Liens and Mortgages.

§ 43, Right to foreclose. § 44, Foreclosure without action. § 45, Rights of action and defenses. § 46, Who may sue. § 47, Parties. § 48, Reference. § 49, Judgment. § 50, Sale. § 51, Rights and liabilities of purchasers. § 52, Distribution of proceeds. § 53, Review of proceedings. § 54, Actions to set aside foreclosure.

IX. RECEIVERS.

§ 55, Grounds of appointment—In general. § 56, —— To prevent forfeiture of grant or charter. § 57, —— Mismanagement. § 58, —— Inadequacy of security. § 59, —— Default in payment of debt or interest. § 60, Appointment. § 61, Control and management. § 62, Issue of certificates. § 63, Claims and liens. § 64, Effect of judgment against receiver. § 65, Rights and liabilities after discharge of receiver.

X. OPERATION.

§ 66, Proceedings to compel operation. § 67, Municipal and official regulations. § 68, Unguarded premises. § 69, Injuries to licensees or trespassers in general. § 70, Accidents to trains. § 71, Accidents at crossings. § 72, Injuries to animals on track. § 73, Fires.

See, also, "Street Railroads."

Condemning land for, see "Eminent Domain."

Jurisdiction of action against, see "Courts," § 37.

Liability for injuries to employés, see "Master and Servant."

Taxation, see "Internal Revenue," § 34; "Taxation," §§ 7, 9, 19.

—— upon rolling stock or receipts from transportation, see "Commerce," § 2.

I. CONTROL AND REGULATION IN GENERAL.

See, also, post, § 67.

§ 1. Status of railroad companies.

A railroad corporation, though its shares are owned by private individuals, is a public corporation.—Talcott v. Pine Grove, Case No. 13,735.

§ 2. Power to control and regulate.

The state can regulate the tolls of a railroad company organized under the general law of the state.—Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Attorney General, Case No. 2,666.

§ 3. Statutory provisions.

Act Wis. March 11, 1874, regulating railroad traffic, held not repealed by Acts March 12, 1874.—Bondholders v. Railroad Com'rs, Case No. 1,625.

II. RAILROAD COMPANIES.

§ 4. Incorporation and organization.

The St. Paul & Pacific Railroad Company is not in law the same corporation as the Minnesota & Pacific Railroad Company, and cannot be sued at law on the bonds and coupons made by the latter.—Hopkins v. St. Paul & P. R. Co., Case No. 6,690.

A certificate of an incorporation designating the company's place of business, and setting forth that it would be carried on in certain counties named, is a substantial compliance with Act Colo. 1876.—Cañon City & S. J. Ry. Co. v. Denver & R. G. Ry. Co., Case No. 2,387.

§ 5. Stockholders.

The holder of preferred stock, entitling him to dividends out of the "net earnings, * * * after payment of mortgage interest," is not entitled to dividends before payment of interest on bonds given for money subsequently borrowed, or of rent due on subsequent leases of connecting lines.—St. John v. Erie Ry. Co., Case No. 12,226.

"Net earnings" defined.—St. John v. Erie Ry. Co., Case No. 12,226.

Purchasers for value without notice of shares issued to a contractor for building its road as full-paid shares are not liable to assessment or liability thereon, as unpaid shares.—Steacy v. Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co., Case No. 13,329.

§ 6. Officers and agents.

The city of Baltimore had no power to appoint new directors in the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad on an increase of stock derived from stock dividends.—Wheeling v. Baltimore, Case No. 17,502.

Neither officers nor directors have authority to bind the company to supervise the construction of a railroad for another company, or to make it responsible for wasteful and extravagant expenditures in connection therewith.—Dows v. Chicago & S. W. Ry. Co., Case No. 4,048.

A company is not bound by the parol promises of its officers to guaranty the bonds of another company, nor by their false representations on the sale of such bonds.—Dows v. Chicago & S. W. Ry. Co., Case No. 4,048.

The mere presence and assent of a member of an executive committee with a subcommittee when an agreement was made, though, taken collectively, they constituted a majority of the executive, held not to make the agreement binding.—Dows v. Chicago & S. W. Ry. Co., Case No. 4,048.

The rights of a banking firm, financial agents of a railroad company, one of whose members was its president, to deal with the funds of the road as against other creditors in case of its insolvency, determined.—Duncan v. Mobile & O. R. Co., Case No. 4,138.

The president of a railroad company has the right to indorse and assign notes and mortgages given to it to aid in its construction.—Irwin v. Bailey, Case No. 7,079.

Bondholders of a railroad company which has united with another railroad company cannot join the trustees of the latter company as defendants in a suit for the removal of the trustees of the former for misconduct or negligence. —Stevens v. Eldridge, Case No. 13,396.

§ 7. Franchises and powers.

A railroad company may engage in an express business which requires the use of horse power to collect and deliver parcels.—Camblos v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co., Case No. 2,331.

The charges by a railroad company for such accessorial service with horse power cannot be imposed upon any of the public who decline to use it.—Camblos v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co., Case No. 2,331.

The railroad company cannot monopolize such business, or give any preferential facilities to itself or others, either as to rates, rebates, or facilities for receiving or carrying parcels.—Camblos v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co., Case No. 2,331.

A railroad engaged in the express business cannot extend to itself a privilege as to rates on unpacked parcels not extended to a competing express company.—Camblos v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co., Case No. 2,331.

A railroad charter which requires the assent of city authorities to the construction of the road within the city, and authorizes them to regulate the time and manner of using the same, enables the railroad company to agree that the city authorities shall retain the right to regulate the kind of power used in moving the cars.—New York & N. H. R. Co. v. New York, Case No. 10,199.

See, also, post, §§ 20, 26, 34.

§ 8. Amendment or revocation of charter.

Act Mo. March 24, 1868, amending the charter of the Louisiana & Missouri River Railroad Company so as to permit an extension of its road across and on the south side of the Missouri river, held, valid, as within the legislative power.—Pepper v. Saline County, Case No. 10,-972.

Construction of such act in relation to municipal subscriptions for stock.—Foster v. Callaway County, Case No. 4,967.

The constitutional power to alter a charter warrants an alteration reducing traffic rates.—Bondholders v. Railroad Com'rs, Case No. 1,-625.

A constitutional provision that charters may be altered or repealed at any time after their passage is to be read into all subsequent charters.—Bondholders v. Railroad Com'rs, Case No. 1,625; Piek v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., Id. 11,138; In re Northwestern Ry. Co., Id. 10,340.

A consolidation with a company chartered by another state will not affect the operation of such principle.—Bondholders v. Railroad Com'rs, Case No. 1,625.

Under the reservations in the constitution and statutes of the state of New York, held that the charter of the New York & Oswego Midland Railroad Company may be amended by repealing a grant of immunity from taxation.—Hewitt v. New York & O. M. R. Co., Case No. 6,443.

§ 9. Reorganization.

Bondholders not subscribing to a reorganization plan were allowed to participate in the purchase or reorganization on an equal footing with the others, providing they should come in by a day named.—Duncan v. Mobile & O. R. Co., Case No. 4,139.

Construction of special provisions of deed of trust and decree as to reorganization of a new railroad company, where the trustee purchased the property of the former company under a foreclosure decree for the benefit of the bondholders.—Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Central R. R. of Iowa, Case No. 4,664.

§ 10. Consolidation.

The fact that the right of a company to consolidate is limited under its charter does not deprive it of the right to consolidate under the general laws of the state.—Warrener v. Kankakee County, Case No. 17,205.

The means of consolidation of railroads under the statute of Illinois were left to be adjusted by contracts between the parties.—Dimpfel v. Ohio & M. Ry. Co., Case No. 3,918.

Unless provision is made therefor in the charter, a railroad cannot be consolidated with another, against the objection of a single stockholder.—Mowrey v. Indianapolis & C. R. Co., Case No. 9,891.

A consolidated company succeeds to all the franchises, rights, privileges, and immunities of the several companies of which it is formed. —Lewis v. Clarendon, Case No. 8,320.

On the consolidation of two companies, a stockholder in one of the old companies becomes a stockholder in the new, and he cannot bring a bill upon the theory that he is a stockholder in the old company.—Ridgway Tp. v. Griswold, Case No. 11,819.

The consolidation of a railroad company, on whose road there is a vendor's lien, with another company, does not discharge the lien.—Western Division of Western N. C. R. Co. v. Drew, Case No. 17,434; Schutte v. Florida Cent. R. Co., Id.

Stockholders cannot question contracts of consolidation after the lapse of several years, where mortgage bonds of the consolidated company have been sold to bona fide purchasers on the faith of such contracts.—Dimpfel v. Ohio & M. Ry. Co., Case No. 3,918.

In an action by a shareholder against the officers of the company, alleging an illegal consolidation with other companies in a new corporation, praying injunctions, etc., the officers of the consolidated company are necessary parties.—Tyson v. Virginia & T. R. Co., Case No. 14,321.

See, also, post, § 30.

§ 11. Abandonment of franchise.
An agreement between connecting lines to jointly regulate transportation rates is not an abandonment or transfer of the franchise of either.—Columbus, P. & I. R. Co. v. Indianapolis & B. R. Co., Case No. 3,047.

After the construction and operation of a road under a charter, the same cannot be abandoned, though the charter was permissive, merely, and not mandatory.—Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Henning, Case No. 4,666.

III. PUBLIC AID.

Grants of land in aid, see "Public Lands," §§ 39-45.
Municipal aid, see "Municipal Corporation," § 27.
Railway aid bonds, see "Counties," § 4.

§ 12. Rights under grants of aid in general.
The Central Pacific Railroad Company did not become liable to apply 5 per cent. of its net earnings annually to the payment of the principal and interest of the government subsidy bonds, until the completion of its road as accepted by the president, October 1, 1874.—United States v. Central Pac. R. Co., Case No. 14,763.

Under Act July 1, 1862, the government may recover, at law, of the Union Pacific and other railroad companies receiving United States bonds, 5 per cent. of the net income until the bonds and interest are paid.—United States v. Kansas Pac. Ry. Co., Case No. 15,505.

§ 13. Conditions and performance of agreement.
A condition that the track should be completed and in full operation by a certain date, and that the road should run to L., is substantially complied with where the track is completed, but not equipped with turntables, water tanks, etc., and came within a quarter of a mile of L.—Adams v. Douglas County, Case No. 52.

A grant of land in consideration that the grantee shall build a road, duly accepted, creates a contract binding on the grantee, performance of which may be enforced by mandamus.—Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Henning, Case No. 4,666.

The time for the construction of the road as conditioned in railway aid bonds in which it was not specified held to be seven years, as required by an amendatory act passed before their issue.—Green v. Dyersburg, Case No. 5,756.

§ 14. Negotiation and sale of securities.
The reception of railway aid bonds from the company in payment for goods of a character adapted for use in the construction and operation of the road does not prevent the taker from claiming as bona fide holder.—Kennicott v. Wayne County, Case No. 7,710.

IV. LOCATION OF ROAD AND TERMINI.

§ 15. Branches.
Under authority "to construct branch roads from the main route to other towns or places in the several counties through which the road might pass," the entire branch must be within the limits of a county.—Works v. Junction R. R., Case No. 18,046.

§ 16. Terminus.
A charter to construct the Union Pacific Railroad from a point on the "western boundary of the state of Iowa" held to mean from the Iowa shore to the Missouri river.—United States v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 16,601.

§ 17. Connections with other roads.
Three railroad companies, whose roads terminated in Philadelphia, procured a charter for a continuous road to connect their termini, and took most of the stock in the new company. Part of the connecting road was built by one of the three companies upon its own land. Held, that this part was subject to use by the new company for the benefit of the other two roads and its own stockholders.—Lathrop v. Junction R. Co., Case No. 8,110.

§ 18. Extensions.
Under the authority in general terms to extend the line of road, the company is not authorized to depart from it in any other part except from its termini.—Works v. Junction R. R., Case No. 18,046.

§ 19. Change of location.
A right to change a location, "either for the difficulty of construction, or of procuring a right of way at a reasonable cost, or whenever a better and cheaper route can be had," does not authorize a company to relocate because a particular town on the selected route will not contribute to the road. Nor will it authorize a departure from the points named in the charter.—Works v. Junction R. R., Case No. 18,046.

V. RIGHT OF WAY AND OTHER INTERESTS IN LAND.

§ 20. Capacity to acquire and hold land.
A railroad corporation, when not restricted by its charter, may acquire lands ad libitum.—Blackburn v. Selma, M. & M. R. Co., Case No. 1,467.

Construction of the charter of the Camden & Amboy Railroad Company in reference to the taking of land for a right of way.—Bonaparte v. Camden & A. R. Co., Case No. 1,617.

VI. CONSTRUCTION, MAINTENANCE, AND EQUIPMENT.

§ 21. Statutory provisions.
Statutes relating to the construction of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad construed.—Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Van Ness, Case No. 830.

§ 22. Road beds and tracks.
A railroad company must lay its tracks and construct its road so as to render it safe for the public as well as for its employés.—Gohen v. Texas Pac. Ry. Co., Case No. 5,507.

§ 23. Crossing other railroads.
Equity can control the manner in which one railroad shall cross another, when not regulated by statute.—Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Chicago & P. R. Co., Case No. 2,665.

Where a new road can at small expense cross an old one at a different level, equity will require it to be done, apportioning the additional expense between the roads.—Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Chicago & P. R. Co., Case No. 2,665.

§ 24. Contracts for construction or repair.
Interpretation of railroad construction contract providing for payment in bonds guarantied by certain towns.—Lee v. New Haven, M. & W. R. Co., Case No. 8,197.

A contract for railroad construction, obligating the contractor to complete any work left unfinished by any other contractor on the line, does not render such contractor an insurer of the defaulting contractors, and he is entitled to notice of the default.—Lee v. New Haven, M. & W. R. Co., Case No. 8,197.

A railroad company is not disabled from performing a contract to pay for bridges in stock by having mortgaged its road to secure the payment of debts due to others.—Boody v. Rutland & B. R. Co., Case No. 1,635.

A stipulation to pay for building a railroad, partly in stock, one-half to be reserved until the contract was completed, held executory; and, on wrongful interruption of the work, the covenantee was entitled to damages for the value of the stock.—Myers v. York & C. R. Co., Case No. 9,997.

VII. SALES, LEASES, TRAFFIC CONTRACTS, AND CONSOLIDATION.

§ 25. Sales.
The charter of a railroad company held to authorize its purchase of another railroad, or its sale to another company.—Branch v. Atlantic & G. R. Co., Case No. 1,807.

A lien for the purchase price of a railroad of persons accepting preferred stock held to be lost by delay and acquiescence in the sale.—Branch v. Atlantic & G. R. Co., Case No. 1,807.

Under a sale of a road, the franchises, right of way, depots, rolling stock, tools, and all other property, real, personal, and mixed, held, that the purchaser was not entitled to surplus earnings in the hands of the receiver, but was entitled to all property used to carry on the business of the road and keep it in repair.—Strang v. Montgomery & E. R. Co., Case No. 13,523.

§ 26. Leases—Power to make lease.
A lease of its property by a railroad corporation, which is neither in violation of any statute nor against the public policy of the state, is valid.—Pittsburg, C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Columbus, C. & I. C. Ry. Co., Case No. 11,197.

What are continuous or connected lines within the Missouri statutes allowing the purchase or lease of one road by another.—Eakin v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co., Case No. 4,236.

A lease to a corporation of another state for the purpose of forming a connecting line held valid.—Pittsburg, C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Columbus, C. & I. C. Ry. Co., Case No. 11,197.

Eight per cent. held too low rent for the use of rolling stock, where the owner bears all the loss and deterioration.—Pullan v. Cincinnati & C. Air-Line R. Co., Case No. 11,462.

§ 27. —— Requisites and validity.
A lease in perpetuity of another road held ratified by the stockholders by acquiescence after three years' delay, as respects innocent holders of bonds issued under and secured by such lease.—Eakin v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co., Case No. 4,236.

§ 28. —— Construction and operation.
A contract by a guarantor company to either furnish equipment or to lease and operate the road on terms to be agreed on held not a contract to lease for a rental sufficient to pay the interest on the guarantied bonds.—Dows v. Chicago & S. W. Ry. Co., Case No. 4,048.

A subsequent agreement in relation to a branch line held to refer merely to leasing and operation, and not to include an agreement to guaranty its bonds.—Dows v. Chicago & S. W. Ry. Co., Case No. 4,048.

An unexecuted decree for the sale of a portion of a leased railroad for the purpose of satisfying a mortgage made prior to the lease is not such an eviction of the lessee by paramount title as to terminate the lease.—Pittsburg, C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Columbus, C. & I. C. Ry. Co., Case No. 11,197.

A lessor corporation will be required to perform its stipulation to arrange, provide for, adjust, and classify its indebtedness, but will be given a reasonable time therefor.—Pittsburg, C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Columbus, C. & I. C. Ry. Co., Case No. 11,197.

Where the payment of rent by a lessee company is guarantied by other companies, holding large blocks of its bonds, the court will require it to pay such rent in advance of the interest on the bonds owned by the guarantors, and will restrain them from disposing of such bonds.—St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co. v. Indianapolis & St. L. R. Co., Case No. 12,236.

§ 29. Traffic arrangements.
An agreement to sell tickets over a connecting line in one direction does not give the right to sell in opposite direction.—Anderson v. New York & N. H. R. Co., Case No. 360.

§ 30. Consolidation.
By the act consolidating the New York Central and Hudson River Railroads, any liability of the former for a tax on dividends is enforceable from the property of the new corporation.—New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. v. Bailey, Case No. 10,203.

See, also, ante, § 10.

VIII. INDEBTEDNESS, SECURITIES, LIENS, AND MORTGAGES.

See, also, ante, § 14; "Bonds," §§ 12–14.

(A) NATURE AND EXTENT OF LIABILITIES.

§ 31. Bonds and other obligations.
Act Pa. April 8, 1861, does not authorize the issue of bonds by a railroad company otherwise than for a new and adequate consideration, increasing the available funds of the corporation.—Kemble v. Wilmington & N. R. Co., Case No. 7,684.

The objection that the petition for the issue of railroad bonds did not give the court jurisdiction, because of irrelevant conditions therein, held, could not be raised in an action on the bonds issued on the determination of such court.—Munson v. Lyons, Case No. 9,935.

Where the petition sufficiently conforms to the statute to call for the exercise of judicial judgment, error in the court's determination cannot affect the validity of the bonds.—Munson v. Lyons, Case No. 9,935.

Whether a transaction by an officer of the railroad company amounted to the purchase or the payment of coupons determined on the facts.—Duncan v. Mobile & O. R. Co., Case No. 4,138.

The purchaser of railroad bonds is bound only to take notice of what appears upon the face of the bonds and of the mortgage made to secure them.—Stanton v. Alabama & C. R. Co., Case No. 13,297.

Where a note and mortgage given to aid railroad construction were transferred as collateral to the company's bond, held, that a subsequent indorsement of the note by the president of the company was valid to pass its legal title.—Irwin v. Bailey, Case No. 7,079.

Where a later company adopted the route of a former company, which abandoned operations for want of funds, and used grading done by it, held, that bonds issued by the former company were a lien only to the extent of the value of the work done by it.—Smythe v. Chicago & S. R. Co., Case No. 13,135.

§ 32. Indorsement or guaranty of bonds.
A railroad company is liable on a negotiable municipal bond, indorsed by it.—Bonner v. New Orleans, Case No. 1,631.

A railroad company may guaranty punctual payment of coupons attached to municipal aid bonds, and may be sued in the first instance, and without demand or notice.—Evans v. Cleveland & P. R. Co., Case No. 4,557.

§ 33. Liens in general.
Where the lien of bondholders on railroad property is created by statute, the statute regulates their rights, notwithstanding the fact that, without its aid, a resulting equity would have arisen in their favor.—Western Division of Western N. C. R. Co. v. Drew, Case No. 17,434; Schutte v. Florida Cent. R. Co., Id.

The lien of the state of Missouri under Act Mo. March 3, 1857, on the property of a railroad receiving aid bonds, extends to public lands theretofore granted to aid in its construction.—Wilson v. Boyce, Case No. 17,793.

While the state of Missouri was in full possession of a railroad upon an express trust, to continue until state bonds loaned to the company were paid or exchanged, the county of St. Louis was empowered (Act Jan. 7, 1865) to loan its bonds to the company, and the commissioner theretofore receiving the road's earnings was authorized to pay into the county treasury a sufficient sum to meet the interest on the county bonds. Held, that thereby the state waived its lien pro tanto in favor of the county, which became substituted thereto.—Ketchum v. Pacific R. Co., Cases Nos. 7,739, 7,740.

Subsequent mortgagees, with notice of the fact that the county had made the loan, and that it was still unpaid, were chargeable with notice of all that the acts authorizing the lien contained.—Ketchum v. Pacific R. Co., Cases Nos. 7,739, 7,740.

One who builds cars for a railroad company has no lien on the cars for his work, in the absence of a special agreement.—Coe v. Pennock, Case No. 2,942.

A contractor who has a lien on the entire road cannot be required to first exhaust his remedy against the portion covered by the new work.—Smythe v. Chicago & S. R. Co., Case No. 13,135.

In Iowa, mechanics and material men are entitled to a lien on railways for their work and labor.—Taylor v. Burlington, C. R. & M. Ry. Co., Case No. 13,783.

Such lien dates from the commencement of the building of the road, and is prior to a mortgage executed pending such building, and before the particular work was done or materials furnished for which the lien is claimed.—Taylor v. Burlington, C. R. & M. Ry. Co., Case No. 13,783.

See, also, post, § 63.

§ 34. Mortgages—Power to mortgage.
Under a general power to mortgage, the railroad company may mortgage any part.—Pullan v. Cincinnati & C. Air-Line R. Co., Case No. 11,461.

Authority to a railroad company to mortgage its "road, income, and other property," does not authorize a mortgage of its franchises.—Pullan v. Cincinnati & C. Air-Line R. Co., Case No. 11,461.

Power to sell includes power to mortgage, and the franchises necessary to use and enjoy the road, not including, however, the franchise of being a corporation.—Branch v. Atlantic & G. R. Co., Case No. 1,807.

The power to mortgage franchises and property includes, as incident thereto, power to pledge everything that may be necessary to the enjoyment of the franchise and road.—Dunham v. Earl, Case No. 4,149.

§ 35. —— Requisites and validity.
A mortgage on the road, covering also the rolling stock and other property appertaining thereto, need not be recorded as a chattel mortgage.—Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. St. Joseph & D. C. Ry. Co., Case No. 4,669.

A mortgage given to secure bonds issued under legislative authority is valid between the parties without registration.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Mississippi Cent. R. Co., Case No. 7,008.

Bonds issued by a railroad company, expressly pledging its personal and real estate as security, are in effect mortgages, valid, without recording, as against the railroad company and creditors or subsequent purchasers having notice.—King v. Tuscumbia, C. & D. R. Co., Case No. 7,808.

§ 36. —— Property and funds included.
A railroad lying within the chartered limits of another company, by which it is purchased, becomes subject to a mortgage by the latter upon its line of road, completed and to be completed, but not to the prejudice of prior mortgages.—Branch v. Atlantic & G. R. Co., Case No. 1,807.

A mortgage of "all the present and future to be acquired property of the company, including the right of way and land occupied, and all rails and other materials used therein or procured therefor," includes the rolling stock.—Pullan v. Cincinnati & C. Air-Line R. Co., Case No. 11,461.

A mortgage covering all after-acquired property will include rolling stock, though it is personal property, under the state constitution, as against creditors who did not secure a lien before the rolling stock was acquired.—Scott v. Clinton & S. R. Co., Case No. 12,527.

A mortgage on the road, covering also rolling stock and other property appertaining thereto, does not cover coal, oil, and personal property which may be used for other than railway purposes.—Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. St. Joseph & D. C. Ry. Co., Case No. 4,669.

Equity will hold the road to be included in the mortgage of the right of way, when, from its terms, such appears to be the intention of the parties.—Dunham v. Cincinnati, P. & C. R. Co., Case No. 4,148.

A mortgage by a railroad of all property then in its possession or thereafter acquired includes railroad subsequently leased, and the title to such leased road is good in the hands of the mortgaged trustees, as against assignees in bankruptcy of the mortgagor.—Barnard v. Norwich & W. R. Co., Case No. 1,007.

A general mortgage of a railroad does not pass after-acquired lands, unless used in connection with the actual operations of the road as a part thereof.—Calhoun v. Memphis & P. R. Co., Case No. 2,309.

Sufficiency of description to pass after-acquired property.—Calhoun v. Memphis & P. R. Co., Case No. 2,309.

A mortgage of the entire property of a railroad, including property subsequently acquired, gives an equitable lien to the bondholders on after-acquired property.—Coe v. Pennock, Case No. 2,942.

A mortgage expressly including all after-acquired personal property covers fuel collected and stored by the company for the use of its engines.—Dunham v. Earl, Case No. 4,149.

Under a mortgage providing that the future earnings and profits shall be held in equity by the mortgagee, the mortgagor, receiving such earnings, etc., will be deemed to hold the same in trust.—Pullan v. Cincinnati & C. Air-Line R. Co., Case No. 11,462.

§ 37. —— Debts and obligations secured.
Provisions in mortgage given to secure bonds, providing for consent of trustee to contracts before they shall be a charge on proceeds of sale of bonds, held not to create a charge in favor of a contractor who built a portion of the road.—Dillon v. Barnard, Case No. 3,915.

§ 38. —— Rights and duties of trustees. Railroad mortgage trustees may maintain a bill in equity to enjoin an illegal proceeding which will injure the value of the bonds, or a bill to have settled a claim of priority with another mortgage, under which an irredeemable sale is about to be made.—Murdock v. Woodson, Case No. 9,942.

§ 39. Sinking funds. Under Act Fla. Jan. 6, 1855, §§ 2, 3, 12, the amount which the railroad company is bound to pay annually towards the sinking fund is to be calculated upon the amount of bonds still uncanceled.—Vose v. Florida R. Co., Case No. 17,007.

§ 40. Priorities of liens and mortgages. A railroad mortgage recorded in one county through which the road runs has priority in that county over the lien of a subsequent judgment, but not so in other counties where it is not recorded.—Ludlow v. Clinton Line R. Co., Case No. 8,600.

A mortgage of a branch line, under a special act providing that it shall be a first lien thereon, takes precedence of a prior mortgage of the railroad, as then "made or to be made."—Randolph v. Wilmington & R. R. Co., Case No. 11,563.

Change of manner of procuring loan by legislative consent held not to affect right reserved to make mortgage therefor superior to a prior mortgage.—Campbell v. Texas & N. O. R. Co., Case No. 2,369.

Right of Ohio material men, under statute, to priority over the mortgage on a consolidated road traversing Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, where no such statutes existed in the latter two states, considered.—King v. Ohio & M. Ry. Co., Case No. 7,801.

A judgment against receivers for personal injuries to a passenger does not take priority over mortgage bonds.—Davenport v. Alabama & C. R. Co., Case No. 3,588.

The equity of a contractor who built the road under an agreement that he should retain possession until receipt of payment out of the income is superior to that of bondholders under a prior mortgage upon the right of way, before the road was built.—Dunham v. Cincinnati, P. & C. R. Co., Case No. 4,148.

A contractor's right to possession of road until its completion is subordinate to right of trustees of mortgage bondholders to possession given upon default in payment of interest.—Allen v. Dallas & W. R. Co., Case No. 221.

§ 41. Interest and coupons. The law of the state in which is situated a railroad mortgaged to secure bonds governs as to the rate of interest, where it appears that the parties contracted with reference to such law, though the bonds were made payable in a larger city in another state.—Codman v. Vermont & C. R. Co., Case No. 2,935.

Coupons severed from bonds are not entitled to priority of payment over the principal or coupons subsequently maturing, in the absence of express provisions to that effect. — Duncan v. Mobile & O. R. Co., Case No. 4,138.

§ 42. Actions on obligations. Authority of a railroad company to guaranty the bonds of another, when made under a general statute, need not be alleged in an action on such bonds.—Toppan v. Cleveland, C. & C. R. Co., Case No. 14,099.

Municipal aid bonds and coupons, being made payable to bearer, pass by mere delivery, and no assignment is necessary to enable the holder to sue.—Evans v. Cleveland & P. R. Co., Case No. 4,557.

It is no defense against railroad bonds in the hands of a bona fide holder that they were exchanged for state bonds, which were used for purposes not contemplated by the statute authorizing the exchange.—Western Division of Western N. C. R. Co. v. Drew, Case No. 17,434; Schutte v. Florida Cent. R. Co., Id.

(B) FORECLOSURE OF LIENS AND MORTGAGES.

§ 43. Right to foreclose. The right to foreclose a railroad mortgage is not affected by a provision allowing the trustee on default to take possession and operate the road.—Alexander v. Central R. R. of Iowa, Case No. 166.

The insertion of a power of sale in a mortgage to trustees for the benefit of bondholders does not supersede the right of foreclosure by bill in equity.—Hall v. Sullivan R. Co., Case No. 5,948.

§ 44. Foreclosure without action. The trustee of a railroad mortgage has the right to decide in the first instance as to the right of bondholders to have the property sold to pay the bonds, but persons representing the railroad company may appeal to the courts.—Western Division of Western N. C. R. Co. v. Drew, Case No. 17,433.

§ 45. Rights of action and defenses. Misconduct of mortgage trustees in bringing foreclosure suit held no ground of denying relief, where all the parties in interest are brought before the court, so that their rights may be properly guarded.—Dows v. Chicago & S. W. Ry. Co., Case No. 4,048.

Bondholders cannot complain of extravagant construction contracts made by the lessee of the road and custodian of its bonds and funds, where, out of the lessee's own means, it has placed the road in first-class condition.—Dows v. Chicago & S. W. Ry. Co., Case No. 4,048.

§ 46. Who may sue. Where the trustees of a railroad mortgage are in such a position that they cannot alone properly represent the bondholders, the latter may sue to foreclose without showing a refusal by the trustees to do so.—Mercantile Trust Co. v. La Moille Val. R. Co., Case No. 9,432.

Individual bondholder may bring foreclosure, where trustee improperly refuses.—Alexander v. Central R. R. of Iowa, Case No. 166.

Bondholders may file a bill, in behalf of themselves and all others who may come in to enforce the trust, without making all bondholders parties.—Wilmer v. Atlanta & R. Air Line Ry. Co., Case No. 17,776.

Where state bonds issued in exchange for railroad bonds secured by a statutory mortgage are declared invalid, the holders of the state bonds may in equity enforce such mortgage for their own benefit.—Western Division of Western N. C. R. Co. v. Drew, Case No. 17,434; Schutte v. Florida Cent. R. Co., Id.

A provision in a deed of trust giving the majority bondholders the option to declare the principal due on default of payment of interest does not prevent a single bondholder from foreclosing for interest.—Alexander v. Central R. R. of Iowa, Case No. 166.

A guarantor of bonds expressly subrogated to the rights of mortgagees in respect to payments made by it may foreclose for interest payments which it has made.—Dows v. Chicago & S. W. Ry. Co., Case No. 4,048.

Court may allow trustee to file bill of foreclosure, after suit by individual bondholder.—Alexander v. Central R. R. of Iowa, Case No. 166.

Pending a suit by mortgage trustees to be put in possession on default in payment of the interest, a funding system was adopted, by which payment of the interest was postponed to enable the road to be completed. Held, that a nonassenting bondholder, who had not made a demand upon the trustees to foreclose, could not file an original bill for such purpose.—Stern v. Wisconsin Cent. R. Co., Case No. 13,378.

§ 47. Parties.
In a case where railroad bondholders are numerous, a suit brought by or against some in behalf of all will be binding on all. The parties who are not named may intervene.—Campbell v. Railroad Co., Case No. 2,366.

It is not necessary to make all bondholders parties to a suit, or to make any of them parties, if their trustees under the mortgages are parties.—Campbell v. Railroad Co., Case No. 2,366; Dows v. Chicago & S. W. Ry. Co., Id. 4,048.

Under equity rule 48, it is unnecessary to have all bondholders present in a suit to foreclose a railroad mortgage.—Kerp v. Michigan L. S. R. Co., Case No. 7,727.

Bondholders aggrieved by a decree in a suit to which they were not made parties may apply for relief, or institute such other proceedings as a party to the suit might institute.—Campbell v. Railroad Co., Case No. 2,366.

In a suit to foreclose a mortgage on the property of a railroad company composed of several consolidated companies, the fact that some of the stock of one of the constituent companies had never been converted into stock of the consolidated company held no ground for making such constituent company a party defendant.—Skiddy v. Atlantic, M. & O. R. Co., Case No. 12,922.

The fact that the trustees in a railroad mortgage have approved a reorganization plan recommended by one set of bondholders, rather than that approved by another set, is no ground for admitting a committee of the latter as parties to the foreclosure suit.—Skiddy v. Atlantic, M. & O. R. Co., Case No. 12,922.

Where a subsequent mortgagee is made a party to a foreclosure suit, the bill will be dismissed as to him, where it appears that his being made a party hinders and delays the suit.—Richards v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co., Case No. 11,771.

Where trustees under a mortgage, of whom it is alleged in the bill for a foreclosure that they had refused to realize on the security, apply to come in, and have been admitted as complainants in the bill, they must control the proceedings.—Richards v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co., Case No. 11,771.

On foreclosure of a blanket mortgage given by a consolidated company, containing a covenant to pay interest on mortgages given by the separate companies, the decree cannot extend to the latter where the holders are not made parties.—Union Trust Co. v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co., Case No. 14,403.

That the trustees of a railroad mortgage file a cross bill in a suit to foreclose another mortgage does not make a bondholder under the first mortgage a party to the suit by representation.—Mercantile Trust Co. v. Lamoille Val. R. Co., Case No. 9,432.

In a railroad foreclosure suit, service of process of a state court, outside the state, on a bondholder, as defendant to a cross bill, is ineffectual.—Mercantile Trust Co. v. Lamoille Val. R. Co., Case No. 9,432.

§ 48. Reference.
On a foreclosure of a mortgage of a portion of a road operating as a part of a larger line, where no separate accounts are kept, held, that the master properly made a pro rata estimate of the earnings and expenses of the whole road.—Pullan v. Cincinnati & C. Air-Line R. Co., Case No. 11,462.

§ 49. Judgment.
Where the principal sum named in the mortgage was not due, held, that a decree of foreclosure could go only in respect of interest due and unpaid.—Union Trust Co. v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co., Case No. 14,403.

In the case of corporations created by different states operating a continuous line of road, a decree of foreclosure made in one jurisdiction on service on the corporation residing therein and the appearance of the other will bind the latter.—Wilmer v. Atlanta & R. Air Line Ry. Co., Case No. 17,776.

A decree for the sale of a railroad, providing that the purchasers shall pay enough money to liquidate certain judgments, etc., may be amended at a subsequent term by providing that the property shall be sold subject to such judgments, etc.—Turner v. Indianapolis, B. & W. Ry. Co., Case No. 14,259.

The court in which a bill to foreclose a mortgage has been filed and a trustee appointed has jurisdiction to determine the conflicting rights arising out of its orders in the premises.—Bill v. New Albany, etc., Ry. Co., Case No. 1,407.

§ 50. Sale.
Specific property should be sold separately to give specific incumbrancers an opportunity to protect their securities.—Campbell v. Texas & N. O. R. Co., Case No. 2,369.

All questions of priorities should be determined before sale.—Campbell v. Texas & N. O. R. Co., Case No. 2,369.

Where a railway is conveyed by a trust deed or mortgage to secure bonds, and it cannot be divided and sold in pieces without manifest injury to its value, the whole may be sold, before the principal is due, on default in the payment of interest.—Wilmer v. Atlanta & R. Air Line Ry. Co., Case No. 17,776.

Where the road cannot be divided without injury to its value, the court may decree a sale of the entire property, though a large part is without its territorial jurisdiction.—Wilmer v. Atlanta & R. Air Line Ry. Co., Case No. 17,776.

A railroad may be sold, subject to claims against it as finally adjudicated, where their amount depends on a long course of litigation.—Turner v. Indianapolis, B. & W. Ry. Co., Case No. 14,259.

The parts of a railroad lying in counties where a certain judgment constitutes a prior lien cannot be sold, under the judgment, separate from a part lying in another county where a mortgage has priority, but the whole road must be appraised and sold together.—Ludlow v. Clinton Line R. Co., Case No. 8,600.

§ 51. Rights and liabilities of purchasers.
Bondholders, on purchasing at the foreclosure sale, may pay in bonds the residue of their bid, after satisfying the costs and charges of the litigation.—Duncan v. Mobile & O. R. Co., Case No. 4,139.

A purchaser under a decree of foreclosure of a railway mortgage held not a bona fide purchaser as to municipal aid bonds, given on a subscription to stock under a condition with which the company has not complied.—Foote v. Mt. Pleasant, Case No. 4,914.

§ 52. Distribution of proceeds.
Material men are not entitled to payment, in advance of mortgage bondholders, out of the fund arising from a foreclosure sale, notwithstanding promises of payment by the receiver.—Denniston v. Chicago, A. & St. L. R. Co., Case No. 3,800.

On a railroad mortgage foreclosure, interest coupons, which have been partly paid, will be paid before coupons coming due afterwards; and detached coupons in the hands of third parties will be paid before the bonds themselves.—Stevens v. New York & O. M. R. Co., Case No. 13,406.

Where there are a larger number of bonds issued than are allowed by law, all at the same time, those bearing the higher numbers stand on an equal footing with the others, in the distribution of the proceeds on foreclosure.—Stanton v. Alabama & C. R. Co., Case No. 13,297.

On mortgage foreclosure the court has no power without the consent of the bondholders to apply the income to a floating debt previously incurred to pay interest on bonds and for supplies and repairs.—Duncan v. Mobile & O. R. Co., Case No. 4,137.

A general judgment creditor under garnishee process against the officers of the company is entitled to the net income of the road between the date of the foreclosure decree and the appointment of a special receiver, where the trustees under the mortgage were not in possession of the road, and did not demand the income, and the decree was silent in regard thereto.—Gilman v. Illinois, etc., Tel. Co., Case No. 5,443.

§ 53. Review of proceedings.

Appeal from the order confirming foreclosure sale granted, but supersedeas denied, under the facts of the particular case.—Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Central R. R. of Iowa, Case No. 4,664.

Individual bondholders, not parties to a decree of foreclosure, have no legal right to have the same executed pending an appeal which does not operate as supersedeas.—Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Central R. R. of Iowa, Case No. 4,663.

§ 54. Actions to set aside foreclosure.

A decree for plaintiff on a bill to set aside a railroad mortgage foreclosure, and subject the property to payment of their judgments, renders the foreclosure invalid only as to the creditors who filed the bill.—Barnes v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., Case No. 1,016.

IX. RECEIVERS.

§ 55. Grounds of appointment—In general.

The court will not appoint a receiver where it appears that a much greater injury will result to those interested in the railroad than by leaving the property in the hands then holding it.—Tysen v. Wabash Ry. Co., Case No. 14,315.

A junior mortgagee in a suit to foreclose his mortgage may, on sufficient cause shown, have a receiver appointed, but without prejudice to the rights of the senior mortgagee.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Mississippi Cent. R. Co., Case No. 7,008.

Where a junior mortgage covered the whole road, while the senior mortgage covered only a portion, and a receiver was appointed on foreclosure of the former, held, that the property should be divided, and another receiver appointed for that portion covered by the senior mortgage.—Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Mississippi Cent. R. Co., Case No. 7,008.

§ 56. —— To prevent forfeiture of grant or charter.

To prevent from lapsing a land grant, which constitutes the principal security of the bondholders, a receiver will be appointed with authority to borrow money and complete the road. —Kennedy v. St. Paul & P. R. Co., Case No. 7,706.

Imminent danger of forfeiture of railroad charter and land grant for failure to complete road justifies appointment of receiver on application of bondholders.—Allen v. Dallas & W. R. Co., Case No. 221.

§ 57. —— Mismanagement.

Where, by the negligence or misfeasance of the mortgagor, railroad property has been wasted so as to jeopardize the security of the mortgage, a court of equity may take possession, notwithstanding Act Jan. 8, 1853.—Western Division of Western N. C. R. Co. v. Drew, Case No. 17,434; Schutte v. Florida Cent. R. Co., Id.

A receiver will be appointed where the tolls and income pledged as security are being applied to other uses.—Ruggles v. Southern Minnesota R. Co., Case No. 12,121.

The application of the earnings of the road in completing and operating it, after default in payment of bonds, where made in good faith, on consent of the mortgage trustees and part of the bondholders, held not a misapplication.—Williamson v. New Albany, etc., R. Co., Case No. 17,753.

A receiver may be appointed where trustees under a prior mortgage attempt to execute the trusts prejudicially to subsequent incumbrancers, or equity may enjoin improper execution. —Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Mississippi Cent. R. Co., Case No. 7,008.

§ 58. —— Inadequacy of security.

Where the security is inadequate, a receiver will be appointed.—Ruggles v. Southern Minnesota R. Co., Case No. 12,121.

A receiver may be appointed in railway foreclosure proceedings where the security is inadequate, the mortgagor irresponsible for any deficiency, earnings are not applied to interest, and the mortgagor is in possession by its tenant where the latter is a party before the court.—Kerp v. Michigan L. S. R. Co., Case No. 7,727.

§ 59. —— Default in payment of debt or interest.

A default in the payment of the debt is no ground for the appointment of a receiver in the absence of a stipulation that the mortgagee shall have the rents.—Tysen v. Wabash Ry. Co., Case No. 14,315.

Default in payment of interest on railroad bonds for which trustee is authorized to take possession of railroad property and operate it justifies appointment of receiver, regardless of question of insolvency.—Allen v. Dallas & W. R. Co., Case No. 221.

A receiver will be appointed on default in the payment of interest, only where it is shown that a loss will happen if the property remains in the hands of its present owners, though the mortgage covers the income, and gives the trustees immediate possession on default.—Union Trust Co. v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co., Case No. 14,402.

The appointment of a receiver of the property of a railroad company in the foreclosure of a mortgage is not a matter of course on default of payment of interest, but is a matter resting in the sound discretion of the court.—Williamson v. New Albany, etc., R. Co., Case No. 17,753.

Or, on default in the payment of a debt, the court has such discretion.—Tysen v. Wabash Ry. Co., Case No. 14,315.

Such appointment would be made even though there was no probable deficiency of the trust property to pay the debts secured by the trust deed.—Wilmer v. Atlanta & R. Air Line Ry. Co., Case No. 17,775.

Where a railroad, being an indivisible line, runs through several states, and defaults in payment of interest on bonds, the court, after demand on the mortgage trustees, will compel them to take possession or appoint a receiver.—

Wilmer v. Atlanta & R. Air Line Ry. Co., Case No. 17,775.

§ 60. Appointment.

Where, in the case of an inseparable railroad line running through several states, receivers are appointed by different courts in different jurisdictions, a federal court having jurisdiction will appoint a receiver for the whole line.—Wilmer v. Atlanta & R. Air Line Ry. Co., Case No. 17,775.

Neither a nonresident receiver nor more than one receiver should ordinarily be appointed for a railroad.—Meier v. Kansas Pac. Ry. Co., Case No. 9,395.

A nonresident may be appointed a receiver on the foreclosure of a railroad mortgage.—Stanton v. Alabama & C. R. Co., Case No. 13,296.

The appointment of a receiver of an insolvent company cannot be dictated by the secured creditors.—Richards v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co., Case No. 11,771.

On a motion for the appointment of a receiver in foreclosure proceedings, the case cannot be heard upon its merits as at the final hearing.—Kerp v. Michigan L. S. R. Co., Case No. 7,727.

Upon the application of a mortgage trustee for the appointment of a receiver, the company was directed to set aside half of its net earnings to the payment of interest on its bonded debt.—Williamson v. New Albany, etc., R. Co., Case No. 17,753.

Where appointment of receiver for railroad is not resisted because of concealment of service of notice of motion by officer, case will be reopened.—Allen v. Dallas & W. R. Co., Case No. 221.

§ 61. Control and management.

Under extraordinary circumstances, with consent of the trustees and four-fifths of the bondholders, held, that a receiver would be authorized to finish a railroad with money to be advanced by bondholders, and to be secured, after completion, by debentures constituting a lien upon the property.—Kennedy v. St. Paul & P. R. Co., Case No. 7,707.

Petition of receivers to make a car trust loan denied where the funds necessary for rolling stock and equipment can be raised from net earnings, though nothing is left for payment of interest on the bonded debt.—In re Philadelphia & R. R. Co., Case No. 11,085a.

It is a breach of trust for railroad receivers to contract to deliver all live stock coming within their control at the stock yards of one company, to the exclusion of other yards equally well situated.—McCoy v. Marietta & C. R. Co., Case No. 8,730b.

The receiver may be required to pay the claims of operatives and supplymen owing at the time of his appointment, and to hold the property subject to them irrespective of a lien.—Turner v. Indianapolis, B. & W. Ry. Co., Case No. 14,258.

A court in foreclosure proceedings should not enter upon the work of building or completing a railroad except in case of irresistible necessity, and to prevent great and certain sacrifice of rights and securities.—Kennedy v. St. Paul & P. R. Co., Case No. 7,707.

The court may authorize receivers appointed on foreclosure of a first mortgage to borrow money to complete portions of the road, and put it in a condition to transact its business, making the sum so borrowed a lien superior to that of the first mortgage.—Stanton v. Alabama & C. R. Co., Case No. 13,296.

A receiver is liable for damages to engines rented by him arising from omission to make necessary repairs.—Turner v. Indianapolis, B. & W. Ry. Co., Case No. 14,260.

Radical changes in the condition of railroad property in the hands of a receiver not permitted pending an appeal of the principal cause.—Cowdrey v. Railroad Co., Case No. 3,293.

The duties of receivers as to outlays in the management and operation of a railroad, allowances therefor, and for counsel fees and services, considered and determined.—Cowdrey v. Railroad Co., Case No. 3,293.

§ 62. Issue of certificates.

Receivers' certificates payable to bearer, referring to the order of the court authorizing their issue, and sold for less than par, held not commercial paper.—Stanton v. Alabama & C. R. Co., Case No. 13,296.

Such certificates are good for the amount of money actually paid for or advanced on them to the receivers in accordance with the terms of the order of court.—Stanton v. Alabama & C. R. Co., Case No. 13,296.

Persons who purchase such certificates, or advance money on them to the receivers, are not bound to see that the money is applied to the purposes of the trust.—Stanton v. Alabama & C. R. Co., Case No. 13,296.

§ 63. Claims and liens.

In distributing the earnings of a mortgaged railroad while in a receiver's hands, and the proceeds of its sale, priority awarded only to laborers and material men who have perfected their lien according to the state law.—Jessup v. Atlantic & G. R. Co., Case No. 7,299.

Advances to pay wages of employés on condition of reimbursement out of first net earnings will be paid out of income in receiver's hands in preference to mortgage claims.—Atkins v. Petersburg R. Co., Case No. 604.

Where a railroad is placed in the hands of a receiver at the instance of mortgage bondholders, the claims for operating expenses are prior liens.—Western Division of Western N. C. R. Co. v. Drew, Case No. 17,434; Schutte v. Florida Cent. R. Co., Id.

Wages due for eight months before the appointment of railroad receivers held payable to such employés as were retained by the receivers; otherwise as to assigned claims for wages, and claims for rails and supplies furnished on the credit of the company.—Skiddy v. Atlantic, M. & O. R. Co., Case No. 12,922.

Counsel's services to receiver are included within decree giving priority to claims for "labor in operation of the road."—Bayliss v. Lafayette, M. & B. Ry. Co., Case No. 1,141.

Claims of connecting lines for their share of through fares and freight stand upon the same footing as other unsecured debts.—Jessup v. Atlantic & G. R. Co., Case No. 7,299.

§ 64. Effect of judgment against receiver.

A receiver appointed in foreclosure proceedings is the agent of the bondholders and the trustees, and they are bound by a judgment rendered against him.—Turner v. Indianapolis, B. & W. Ry. Co., Case No. 14,260.

§ 65. Rights and liabilities after discharge of receiver.

A party having, as security for a large debt, a lease of a railroad, from whom possession has been taken by a receiver appointed in a suit by another, is, upon his discharge, entitled to have possession restored to him.—Howard v. La Crosse & M. R. Co., Case No. 6,760.

X. OPERATION.

Carriage of goods and passengers, see "Carriers."
Denial of civil rights, see "Civil Rights."

§ 66. Proceedings to compel operation.
A mandamus will issue to compel the company to operate its road over the bridge over the Missouri river in the same manner in which the other portions of its road are operated.—United States v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 16,601.

§ 67. Municipal and official regulations.
A regulation by a railroad company that canal boats unloading coal at its dock to be received on its cars there should employ its shovelers and rent its hoisting tubs at certain rates, being the usual market price, held unreasonable.—In re Three Hundred and Eighteen and One-Half Tons of Coal, Case No. 14,010.

The fencing of a railroad in a city with gates at public crossings is a regulation for public safety, and any incidental inconvenience is merged in the superior interest of the public.—Miller v. Long Island R. Co., Case No. 9,580a.

§ 68. Unguarded premises.
An unguarded railroad tunnel in a street held a nuisance, the continuance of which rendered the receivers of the roal liable for damages for an injury of which it was the proximate cause. —Morgan v. Illinois & St. L. Bridge Co., Case No. 9,802.

§ 69. Injuries to licensees or trespassers in general.
In the case of a trespasser upon the track, the railroad company is required to do only what prudent owners of railroads are doing in respect to their trains and equipments.—Ex parte Stell, Case No. 13,358.

Duties and liabilities of the parties in the case of a man walking along a railroad track in front of an approaching train, stated in a charge to a jury.—Finlayson v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., Case No. 4,793.

A rule that "no person shall be allowed to ride on the engine without the permission of the engineer," placed in the hands of an engine driver, authorizes him to permit a person to ride upon the engine.—Whitehouse v. Grand Trunk Ry. Co., Case No. 17,565.

Where a boy was killed by attempting to jump on an engine moving through a street, held, that there was no liability, unless defendant could have avoided the accident by ordinary care.—Miles v. Receivers, Case No. 9,544.

The failure of a railroad company to keep its turntable locked, so as to prevent its being turned by children or others, is not negligence, where prudent and well-managed railroads are not in the habit of guarding or securing their turntables.—Stout v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., Case No. 13,503.

Under what circumstances a railroad will be held liable for an injury to a child of tender years, caused by playing on its unguarded and unlocked turntable, see Stout v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., Case No. 13,504.

Negligence of the parents in permitting a child to wander from home and go upon a dangerous piece of machinery will not prevent liability of the owner for an injury to the child, resulting from his carelessness in not properly guarding and securing the same.—Stout v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., Case No. 13,503.

§ 70. Accidents to trains.
The company is liable for the death of a person lawfully riding on an engine having the right of way, caused by collision with another engine negligently dispatched to meet it on the same track.—Whitehouse v. Grand Trunk Ry. Co., Case No. 17,565.

§ 71. Accidents at crossings.
When an engine is backing a train across city streets, there should be a lookout.—Barley v. Chicago & A. R. Co., Case No. 997.

Irrespective of city ordinances, speed of train across streets should be such as to permit stoppage within reasonable time.—Barley v. Chicago & A. R. Co., Case No. 997.

Great care and vigilance is required where there is steam or smoke upon the track.—Barley v. Chicago & A. R. Co., Case No. 997.

The failure to ring the bell of a switch engine at a crossing where a freight train has just passed on an adjoining track is negligence. —Whiton v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., Case No. 17,597.

It is not, as matter of law, negligence preventing a recovery by a person injured at a railroad crossing in a city to fail to stop and look and listen before attempting to cross.—Whiton v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., Case No. 17,597.

The running of a freight train over a crossing at an unlawful rate of speed is not the proximate cause of an injury to persons who attempt to cross after the train has passed, and are struck by a train on an adjoining track.—Whiton v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., Case No. 17,597.

§ 72. Injuries to animals on track.
Where an animal is a trespasser on the track, the court will presume ordinary care in the management and operation of the train, in the absence of evidence to the contrary.—Campbell v. Receivers, Case No. 2,367.

§ 73. Fires.
The mere fact that a spark from a locomotive enters the window of a building, and sets it on fire, does not render the railroad company liable for the damage, but plaintiffs must prove that the company was negligent in the use of its engine.—Musselwhite v. Receivers, Case No. 9,972.

The company is liable only in case it fails, in using its engines, to use the diligence which good specialists in this department are accustomed to exercise.—Musselwhite v. Receivers, Case No. 9,972.

RANSOM.

Of property captured as prize, see "War," § 71.

RAPE.

§ 1, Aiding others to commit rape. § 2, Indictment. § 3, Punishment.

§ 1. Aiding others to commit rape.
The aiding, abetting, and assisting others to commit rape is punishable under the penitentiary act of March 2, 1831. 4 Stat. 448.—Keenan v. United States, Case No. 18,305.

§ 2. Indictment.
It is not a fatal defect in an indictment for rape that it also alleges that the woman was gotten with child.—United States v. Dickinson, Case No. 14,957a.

§ 3. Punishment.
An attempt by a slave to ravish a white woman is punishable by death.—United States v. Patrick, Case No. 16,006.

RATIFICATION.

See "Bills and Notes," § 13; "Novation," § 2.
Of act of agent, see "Principal and Agent," § 32.
—— of partner, see "Partnership," § 31.
—— of trustee, see "Trusts," § 27.
Of bonds, see "Municipal Corporations," § 31.

REAL ACTIONS.

§ 1, In general. § 2, Writ of right.

See, also, "Ejectment"; "Entry, Writ of"; "Trespass to Try Title."

§ 1. In general.
To most real actions, non tenure is in Massachusetts a good plea, either in bar or abatement. —Fiedler v. Carpenter, Case No. 4,759.

§ 2. Writ of right.
It is not a bar to a writ of right that there has been a judgment on a petition for partition between the same parties in favor of the tenant upon an issue joined therein upon the sole seisin of demandant.—Mallett v. Foxcroft, Case No. 8,989.

In a writ of right, the proof must strictly conform to the allegation; and an allegation by several demandants as equally interested is not supported by proof of different estates.—Scott v. Widdington, Case No. 12,547.

Though persons entering upon state lands are to be deemed mere intruders, yet, as against all others, the entry will be sufficient seisin to support a writ of right.—Thomas v. Hatch, Case No. 13,899.

The seisin shown by demandants will be presumed to continue until some adverse seisin or disseisin is shown.—Thomas v. Hatch, Case No. 13,899.

REAL PROPERTY.

See "Property."

REASONABLE DOUBT.

See "Criminal Law," § 73.

REBELLION.

See "Treason"; "War," §§ 78-90.

REBUTTAL.

Evidence, see "Trial," § 9.

RECEIPTS.

See "Release."
As evidence, see "Payment," § 22.
Warehouse receipts, see "Warehousemen," § 2.

RECEIVERS.

§ 1, Nature and grounds of receivership. § 2, Appointment. § 3, Qualification of receiver. § 4, Management and disposition of property. § 5, Actions by receiver. § 6, Actions against receiver. § 7, Accounting and compensation. § 8, Misconduct and removal.

Effect of appointment on jurisdiction in bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," § 14.
In action to foreclose mortgage, see "Mortgages," § 37.
In bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," §§ 157, 365.
In creditors' suit, see "Creditors' Suit," § 11.
Interference with, see "Contempt," § 1; "Courts," § 118.
Jurisdiction of action as dependent upon citizenship or residence, see "Courts," § 47.
Of corporation, see "Corporations," §§ 27, 52a, 66.
Of mortgaged property, see "Mortgages," § 19a.
Of national bank, see "Banks and Banking," § 22.
Of railroad companies, see "Railroads," §§ 55-65.
Of telegraph company, see "Telegraphs and Telephones," § 2.

§ 1. Nature and grounds of receivership.
Appointment of receiver is discretionary with court.—Beecher v. Bininger, Case No. 1,222.

A receiver will be appointed in all cases where the interest of the parties seems to require it.—Crane v. McCoy, Case No. 3,354.

A receiver will not be appointed of property which is in the possession of a person not a party to the suit.—Searles v. Jacksonville, P. & M. R. Co., Case No. 12,586.

The peril of a fund in litigation is cause for the interference of the court to secure and protect it by the appointment of a receiver.—Lenox v. Notrebe, Case No. 8,246b; Parkhurst v. Kinsman, Id. 10,760; Union Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Kellogg, Id. 14,373.

The court will not appoint a receiver of trust funds in the hands of high public officers where the trust involves duties of a public character, except in cases of gross fraud and imminent danger.—Vose v. Reed, Case No. 17,011.

§ 2. Appointment.
The facts essential to the appointment of a receiver need not be pleaded, but may be shown by affidavit at the hearing. A prayer for a receiver is unnecessary.—Commercial & Savings Bank v. Corbett, Case No. 3,057.

Previous notice of a motion for the appointment of a receiver is not necessary when counsel for the opposite party is present in court.—McLean v. Lafayette Bank, Case No. 8,887.

§ 3. Qualification of receiver.
A receiver should be an impartial person, not interested in the litigation or a partisan of any party to it.—Meier v. Kansas Pac. Ry. Co., Case No. 9,395.

§ 4. Management and disposition of property.
The validity of a receiver's act in selling or exchanging property will not be questioned in a collateral suit in another court.—Bradly v. Marine & R. Phosphate Min. & Mfg. Co., Case No. 1,789.

§ 5. Actions by receiver.
A receiver appointed by a federal court cannot maintain a suit in a federal court of a state other than that of his appointment.—Brigham v. Luddington, Case No. 1,874.

On petition of receiver, persons claiming to have pre-existing liens on realty in his possession were required to release them, and an order was made setting apart sufficient of the proceeds of sale to pay them after the determination of their respective rights.—De Visser v. Blackstone, Case No. 3,840.

A receiver appointed by a federal court who has previously been appointed in a state court of an adjoining state is not subject to the jurisdiction of the state court as to the property out of the state.—Lehigh Coal & Navigation Co. v. Central R. Co., Case No. 8,213.

The creditors of a corporation are neither proper nor necessary parties to a suit by its receiver to protect its property.—Gray v. Davis, Case No. 5,715.

§ 6. Actions against receiver.
A suit cannot be maintained against a receiver without leave being first obtained from the court by which he was appointed.—Hale v. Duncan, Case No. 5,914.

The court will not allow its receiver to be sued, unless the petition for leave states a prima facie cause of action against him.—Jordan v. Wells, Case No. 7,525.

A state statute providing that receivers appointed by any court may be sued without leave of the court is inapplicable to receivers appointed by the federal court.—Hale v. Duncan, Case No. 5,914.

The proper remedy for a person, having a demand against a fund in the hands of the receiver, is to bring his demand into the court appointing the receiver.—Thompson v. Scott, Case No. 13,975.

§ 7. Accounting and compensation.
A receiver cannot be called on to account before any court but that which appointed him.—Conkling v. Butler, Case No. 3,100.

Exceptions to master's report on a reference of a receiver's account are unavailing unless first made before the master.—Cowdrey v. Railroad Co., Case No. 3,293.

But the court may direct an account to be reformed where there are manifest errors or clearly improper charges.—Cowdrey v. Railroad Co., Case No. 3,293.

The master in such case acts in place of the court in a judicial, rather than a ministerial, capacity.—Cowdrey v. Railroad Co., Case No. 3,293.

If he adopts an erroneous principle, the court, on petition, will refer the matter back to him for correction.—Cowdrey v. Railroad Co., Case No. 3,293.

The compensation of a receiver must be graduated by his duties and the responsibilities of the office, and not by the amount for which another competent person would have done the work.—Cowdrey v. Railroad Co., Case No. 3,293.

§ 8. Misconduct and removal.
Receivers who willfully and corruptly exceed their powers are liable for the actual damage sustained by reason of their misconduct, but for nothing more.—Stanton v. Alabama & C. R. Co., Case No. 13,296.

On the appointment of a receiver who has taken possession of the property, the subject of the suit, by a court having jurisdiction, no other court can interfere with the property or entertain complaints against the receiver, or remove him.—Young v. Montgomery & E. R. Co., Case No. 18,166.

Two receivers appointed as representatives of different interests, which became hostile, removed, and a single disinterested receiver appointed.—Meier v. Kansas Pac. Ry. Co., Case No. 9,395.

RECEIVING STOLEN GOODS.

§ 1, Nature and elements of offense. § 2, Prosecution.

§ 1. Nature and elements of offense.
The possession of gold coin received at the mint in exchange for gold dust stolen from the mails is not a possession of such dust.—United States v. Montgomery, Case No. 15,800.

Stolen postage stamps sent by the thief to defendant were delivered up to a postmaster on written order of the thief, but were subsequently allowed to go forward, and to be delivered to defendant. Held, that they lost their character as stolen property.—United States v. De Bare, Case No. 14,935.

§ 2. Prosecution.
An indictment for receiving, concealing, and aiding in concealing, gold dust stolen from the mails, charges but one crime, and proof of either warrants a conviction.—United States v. Montgomery, Case No. 15,800.

An indictment for receiving stolen goods, charging that the accused received the goods from the principal felon, is not sustained by proof that they were received from the person to whom the thief had delivered them.—United States v. De Bare, Case No. 14,935.

Where two are indicted together for receiving, etc., stolen property, one may be found guilty of a separate receiving, etc., when the other has been discharged on a plea of prior conviction.—United States v. Montgomery, Case No. 15,800.

Venue, see "Criminal Law," § 21.

RECOGNIZANCES.

See "Bail."

RECORDS.

§ 1, Custody. § 2, Construction. § 3, Supplying or restoring lost records. § 4, Right to inspect, and proceedings to enforce right. § 5, Removal of records.

As evidence, see "Evidence," §§ 43-45.
Authentication for use in evidence, see "Evidence," §§ 60, 61.
Copies as evidence, see "Evidence," §§ 50, 51.
Effect of failure to record conveyance, see "Bankruptcy," § 241.
Estoppel by record, see "Estoppel," § 1.
Notice from, see "Vendor and Purchaser," § 29.
Production in evidence, see "Evidence," § 57.
Transcript as evidence, see "Evidence," §§ 48, 49.

Of judicial proceedings.

See "Depositions," § 35; "Judgment," §§ 18-24.
On appeal, see "Admiralty," § 121; "Appeal and Error," §§ 18-23; "Bankruptcy," §§ 28, 691.
Of courts, see "Courts," § 9.
Of naturalization, see "Aliens," § 12.
On removal of cause, see "Removal of Causes," § 44.

Of particular instruments.

See "Chattel Mortgages," §§ 9-12; "Deeds," §§ 5-8; "Mortgages," § 7.
Bills of sale, see "Sales," § 20.
Bottomry bond, see "Shipping," § 118.
Conditional sale, see "Sales," § 54.
Conveyances of vessels, see "Shipping," § 39.
Mortgages, see "Shipping," §§ 37, 39.
Notice of foreclosure and certificate of publication, see "Mortgages," § 21.

§ 1. Custody.
The register of the orphans' court in Alexandria is entitled to the custody of the record books of wills of the old court of hustings.—United States v. Deneale, Case No. 14,946.

§ 2. Construction.
Where an order to show cause recites that it was made on the filing of a petition, the filing of the petition will be presumed unless the record shows the contrary.—Alabama & C. R. Co. v. Jones, Case No. 127.

§ 3. Supplying or restoring lost records.
The proceedings to restore records in the federal courts must conform to the act of congress, and not to the state statute.—Turner v. Newman, Case No. 14,262.

Official re-establishing under legislative act of records which have been burned.—Hunt v. Innis, Case No. 6,892.

§ 4. Right to inspect, and proceedings to enforce right.
The right to inspect and examine all the records and papers belonging to the court exists only as allowed by statute or rule of court.—In re McLean, Case No. 8,877.

A citizen of the United States has not an unlimited right to inspect all the records belonging to the federal courts, but only the books containing docket or minute entries of judgments or decrees.—In re Cincinnati Enquirer, Case No. 2,719.

A petition for leave to inspect "books containing docket and minute entries of judgments and decrees" of district and circuit courts is sufficient on general demurrer.—In re Cincinnati Enquirer, Case No. 2,719.

§ 5. Removal of records.
Printed exhibits allowed to be taken from the files, and annexed to a commission, on filing photographic facsimiles in lieu thereof.—Daly v. Maguire, Case No. 3,551.

RECOUPMENT.

For defects of title, see "Vendor and Purchaser," § 10.

REDEMPTION.

By assignee in bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," § 291.
From foreclosure of mortgage, see "Bankruptcy," § 291; "Mortgages," §§ 43–47.
—— of vendor's lien, see "Vendor and Purchaser," § 37.
From sale for taxes, see "Levees," § 2; "Taxation," § 15.
—— on execution, see "Execution," § 18.
Of property pledged, see "Pledges," § 8.
Transfer of equity, see "Mortgages," § 15.

REFERENCE.

§ 1, Nature, grounds, and order of reference. § 2, Proceedings before referees. § 3, Compensation of referee. § 4, Report and findings—Form. § 5, —— Operation. § 6, —— Sufficiency. § 7, —— Objections and exceptions and hearing thereof. § 8, —— Setting aside report. § 9, —— Judgment on report. § 10, New trial.

See, also, "Arbitration and Award."
In action for infringement of patent, see "Patents," § 259.
—— of trade-mark, see "Trade-Marks and Trade-Names," § 31.
In action of account, see "Account," §§ 1, 2; "Patents," § 259.
—— to foreclose mortgage, see "Railroads," § 48.
In admiralty, see "Admiralty," §§ 101–105; "Collision," § 154.
In equity, see "Equity," §§ 109–118.
Of administrator's account, see "Executors and Administrators," § 65.

§ 1. Nature, grounds, and order of reference.
The circuit court of the United States has no authority to refer a suit at common law to a referee for trial, without the consent of both parties, although, in the state court, such a suit is referable without consent.—Howe Mach. Co. v. Edwards, Case No. 6,784.

A district judge in New York may refer a case involving long accounts to referees, in conformity to the practice of the state courts under the state law.—Eaken v. United States, Case No. 4,235.

A reference by consent of an action at law in the federal circuit court is lawful, and after a trial before the referee the court may grant a new trial.—Robinson v. Mutual Ben. Life Ins. Co., Case No. 11,961.

An order of reference may be entered nunc pro tunc, where a trial is duly had before a referee under a stipulation, and the parties have omitted to enter the order.—Robinson v. Mutual Ben. Life Ins. Co., Case No. 11,961.

§ 2. Proceedings before referees.
The referee, in an action of covenant, is the final judge of the lawful rule of damages.—Myers v. York & C. R. Co., Case No. 9,997.

The referee may disregard all such formal defects as might be amended if the case were tried in court.—Myers v. York & C. R. Co., Case No. 9,997.

Where the amount of a claim which defendant had against certain real estate was referred to a master to determine, he was not bound by the statement in defendant's answer.—Chickering v. Hatch, Case No. 2,671.

§ 3. Compensation of referee.
The compensation of auditors in Pennsylvania is regulated not only by their labor but also by the amount of money to be distributed.—Lombard v. Bayard, Case No. 8,469.

§ 4. Report and findings—Form.
A mistake in entitling a referee's report in the district court, where it was duly filed in the circuit court, and no one was misled, will be disregarded, or the report amended nunc pro tunc.—Fourth Nat. Bank v. Neyhardt, Case No. 4,991.

§ 5. —— Operation.
When the accounts of the parties in an action at law are referred by the court to an auditor, his report is of no avail except to ascertain the points really litigated by the parties.—Barry v. Barry, Case No. 1,060.

§ 6. —— Sufficiency.
The award must be sufficiently specific to enable the court to separate what was, from what was not, awarded, within the submission.—Myers v. York & C. R. Co., Case No. 9,997.

A general award of a specific sum, without specifying the items of which it is composed, is good, in point of form.—Myers v. York & C. R. Co., Case No. 9,997.

§ 7. —— Objections and exceptions, and hearing thereof.
The federal courts will not entertain questions on a referee's report, but will regard and treat it as an award by arbitration.—Denny v. Brown, Case No. 3,805.

Additional exceptions, discovered since the period for filing exceptions to the report has passed, will be allowed to be filed.—Thelasson v. Crammond, Case No. 13,877.

Testimony merely filed with the report, without any bill of exceptions, cannot be considered on exceptions to the referee's decision, under Comp. Laws Mich. c. 186.—MacDonald v. Saginaw Val. & St. L. R. Co., Case No. 8,766.

Evidence not laid before referees cannot be exhibited to the court on exceptions to the report.—Barton v. Anthony, Case No. 1,084.

§ 8. —— Setting aside report.
The court will not set aside the report of referees merely because the court might not have drawn the same conclusions from the evidence.—Jolly v. Blanchard, Case No. 7,438.

Report set aside because of palpable mistake of fact appearing by examination of the referees.—Knox v. Walton, Case No. 7,915.

§ 9. —— Judgment on report.
Following the practice of the state courts, the judgment upon a referee's report in the federal courts may be entered without an application to the court.—Fourth Nat. Bank v. Neyhardt, Case No. 4,991.

Consent to a reference does not authorize a judgment in invitum on the report.—Denny v. Brown, Case No. 3,805.

§ 10. New trial.
The court has no power to grant a new trial after judgment on a reference, though it was stipulated that judgment should be entered the same as if the cause had been tried by the court.—Neafie v. Cheesebrough, Case No. 10,064.

REFORMATION OF INSTRUMENTS.

§ 1, Right to reformation—Mistake. § 2, —— Fraud. § 3, —— Illegal contract. § 4, —— Reformation as against third persons. § 5, Proceedings and relief—Limitations and laches. § 6, —— Parties. § 7,—— Evidence. § 8, Effect of reformation.

See, also, "Cancellation of Instruments."
Policies of insurance, see "Insurance," § 19.

§ 1. Right to reformation—Mistake.
Mistake, to be available as ground of reformation, must not have arisen from negligence, where the means of knowledge were clearly accessible.—Kinney v. Consolidated Virginia Min. Co., Case No. 7,827.

A deed of trust, which, by mistake, states that it secures a certain note, may be reformed so as to secure a bond.—In re Clarke, Case No. 2,843.

Where a loan is made on agreement to give collateral security on property, and by mistake a power of attorney only is taken, equity will relieve the creditor, after the death of the debtor insolvent, by enforcing the original agreement against his administrator.—Hunt v. Ennis, Case No. 6,889.

Where, in a deed of trust to secure a debt to A., the name of B. is inserted by mistake, equity will require the money to be paid to A. in the first instance, the mistake being clearly shown.—McCall v. Harrison, Case No. 8,671.

Where parties deal with each other with knowledge that something is uncertain as to the amount or condition of the subject-matter, and the contract is in the form intended, there is no ground for correcting a mistake, if it should finally appear that one was made.—Kinney v. Consolidated Virginia Min. Co., Case No. 7,827.

If a grantor, conveying part of a mining claim, makes a mistake against himself in one part as to the amount conveyed, and in another part a mistake in his favor for a corresponding amount, the equities between him and his grantee are equal, and the mistake will not be corrected on his application to the injury of the other party upon the entire transaction.—Kinney v. Consolidated Virginia Min. Co., Case No. 7,827.

A written contract will not be reformed by previous parol contract on the same subject.—Andrews v. Essex Fire & Marine Ins. Co., Case No. 374; Tilghman v. Tilghman, Id. 14,045; Hoover v. Reilly, Id. 6,677.

But if a policy of insurance when drawn and received does not correctly express a previously concluded agreement for insurance, which it was designed by both parties to execute, equity will reform it, though the mistake arose from ignorance of law—Oliver v. Mutual Commercial Marine Ins. Co., Case No. 10,498.

Equity has power to reform and cancel an insurance policy issued by mistake for a greater length of time than was intended by the parties.—North American Ins. Co. v. Whipple, Case No. 10,315.

§ 2. —— Fraud.
If an agent in effecting insurance declared the interest in a wrong person through fraudulent design, equity will not relieve the principal; otherwise where there was an honest mistake.—Oliver v. Mutual Commercial Marine Ins. Co., Case No. 10,498.

Equity may reform a policy of insurance, even in material clauses, where, through fraud or mistake, it violates or does not express the intention of the parties.—Dean v. Equitable Fire Ins. Co., Case No. 3,705.

§ 3. —— Illegal contract.
The court will not reform a contract for the running of a horse race, so as to permit the recovery of a stipulated penalty for failure to run the race.—Lemmons v. Flanakin, Case No. 8,239b.

One who conveys his property for the purpose of defrauding his creditors can obtain no relief in equity against his grantee, nor will a trust relation be recognized for the purpose of reforming, on the ground of mistake, a subsequent deed from him to parties taking through the fraudulent grantee without notice of the fraud.—Kinney v. Consolidated Virginia Min. Co., Case No. 7,827.

Complainant conveyed, by unstamped conveyances, an interest in a mining claim, and his grantees, by good conveyances, deeded the same to defendant. Complainant afterwards conveyed his remaining interest directly to defendant, and afterwards filed a bill to correct a mistake in the latter conveyance. To make out the mistake, it was necessary for him to repudiate his unstamped conveyances. Held, that equity would not correct the mistake.—Kinney v. Consolidated Virginia Min. Co., Case No. 7,827.

§ 4. —— Reformation as against third persons.
A mistake in a conveyance will not be corrected, to the prejudice of bona fide purchasers from the grantee.—Reeves v. Vinacke, Case No. 11,663.

Where the description in a deed is not impossible or repugnant, the court will not reform it, as against third persons who purchased the remaining interest of the grantor at sheriff's sale without knowledge of the error in the description.—United States v. Payson, Case No. 16,016.

§ 5. Proceedings and relief—Limitations and laches.
A father who takes no steps to have corrected a patent erroneously naming his son as grantee is guilty of laches as against a bona fide mortgagee from the son.—Babcock v. Pettibone, Case No. 700.

An application to reform a deed, held, should not be entertained after the lapse of 11 years, where all persons had dealt with the land on the theory that the description was correct.—United States v. Payson, Case No. 16,016.

§ 6. —— Parties.
Where the trustee in a trust deed has reconveyed the property to the grantor under a decree of court, and afterwards died, his representatives are not necessary parties to a suit by the real beneficiary to obtain relief by showing mistake in the deed of trust.—McCall v. Harrison, Case No. 8,671.

§ 7. —— Evidence.
The party alleging the mistake must show exactly in what the error consists.—Dean v. Equitable Fire Ins. Co., Case No. 3,705.

A written instrument will not be reformed upon the ground of mistake unless the same be made out by the clearest and most unequivocal evidence.—United States v. Munroe, Case No. 15,835.

§ 8. Effect of reformation.
Equity may enforce a contract after it has been reformed, or grant the relief to which complainant shows himself entitled.—Brugger v. State Inv. Ins. Co., Case No. ?,051.

REGISTER.

In bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," §§ 310–315.

REGISTRATION.

See "Records."
Of vessels, see "Shipping," § 4.
Of voters, see "Elections," § 4.

Of particular instruments or transactions.

See "Chattel Mortgages," §§ 9–12; "Copyrights," § 17; "Deeds," §§ 5–8; "Mortgages," § 7; "Trade-Marks and Trade-Names," § 16.

REHEARING.

See "New Trial."
In admiralty, see "Admiralty," § 100; "Collision," § 157.
In equity, see "Equity," §§ 105–108; "Patents," § 263.
Motion for new trial, see "New Trial," § 25.
On appeal or writ of error, see "Appeal and Error," § 27.
—— in admiralty, see "Admiralty," § 122.

REINSURANCE.

See "Insurance," §§ 192–195.

REISSUED PATENTS.

See "Patents," §§ 102–114.

REJOINDER.

See "Pleading," § 38.

RELEASE.

I. REQUISITES AND VALIDITY.
§ 1, In general. § 2, Fraud.

II. CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION.
§ 3, Scope and effect in general. § 4, Of joint obligor or promisor. § 5, Of joint tort feasor. § 6, Impeachment and avoidance.

See, also, "Accord and Satisfaction"; "Compositions with Creditors"; "Compromise and Settlement"; "Payment."
Of claims of seamen, see "Seamen," § 159.
Of customs duties, see "Customs Duties," § 58.
Of dower, see "Dower," § 3.
Of mortgage, see "Mortgages," § 16.
Of property on bond, see "Customs Duties," § 96.
Of sureties on bond in admiralty, see "Admiralty," § 76.
—— on bond on appeal, see "Appeal and Error," § 42.

I. REQUISITES AND VALIDITY.

§ 1. In general.
The presumption in favor of the validity of a receipt will prevail in the absence of evidence that it was obtained by fraud, mistake, or ignorance of the rights of the party.—Thompson v. Faussat, Case No. 13,954.

The administratrix of a joint owner of a vessel will be bound by a settlement and release of all claims and demands between the parties, unless she show that she did not understand the transaction.—Crossley v. The Louis, Case No. 3,436.

A release given to one holding the relation of spiritual adviser held to be of no effect.—Nachtrieb v. The Harmony Settlement, Case No. 10,003.

§ 2. Fraud.
A release given to a debtor by a creditor who has been misled by his fraudulent misrepresentation or other artifice may be set aside in equity.—Phettiplace v. Sayles, Case No. 11,083.

A statement of property and a representation of insolvency, in a petition for the benefit of an insolvent act, are considered as representations to all creditors acting thereon.—Phettiplace v. Sayles, Case No. 11,083.

II. CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION.

§ 3. Scope and effect in general.
A release of the party primarily liable is a release of all parties secondarily liable.—Veazie v. Williams, Case No. 16,907.

A release from the assignee of a chose in action is a bar to an action by the assignor for the same cause of action.—Dade v. Herbert, Case No. 3,532.

A release given to a debtor of the United States by an officer of the government will have the same effect as an ordinary release from a creditor to a debtor.—United States v. Thompson, Case No. 16,487.

A release by purchasers at a sale by auction to the agent who made it would release the vendors from all liability for fraudulent by-bidding which enhances the price.—Veazie v. Williams, Case No. 16,907.

§ 4. Of joint obligor or promisor.
A release to one of two joint obligors extinguishes the obligation, and equity will not relieve in such a case, although it is most apparent the extinguishment was not intended by the parties.—Willings v. Consequa, Case No. 17,767; Consequa v. Willings, Id.

Where two persons are bound jointly or jointly and severally in an obligation, the release of one will discharge the other.—United States v. Thompson, Case No. 16,487.

The release of one after a judgment obtained against the other is not available to the latter. —United States v. Thompson, Case No. 16,487.

Where a joint judgment has been rendered against two defendants, a release of one of them subsequent to the judgment will discharge the other.—United States v. Thompson, Case No. 16,487.

While a defendant is charged in execution, the debt is considered as satisfied, and a discharge of one co-debtor is a discharge of all.—United States v. Parker, Case No. 15,992.

The release of one of two or more joint or joint and several debtors does not operate as a release of all of them, where it only extends to the individual liability of the party released to the creditors, and does not affect his liability to his joint debtors for contribution or otherwise.—Paret v. Bryson, Case No. 10,710.

Parol substitution of a third person for one of several obligors does not release the rest.—Garnett v. Macon, Case No. 5,245.

Where, on a joint decree against the executors of two persons, a creditor receives a moiety of the debt from the representatives of one of them, and covenants not to levy the residue of the decree upon the estate of that one, it does not discharge the representatives of the other.—Garnett v. Macon, Case No. 5,245.

§ 5. Of joint tort feasor.
A release of one of several joint tort feasors will not in equity be extended beyond the intent of the parties, regardless of its effect at law.—Ingels v. Mast, Case No. 7,033.

§ 6. Impeachment and avoidance.
A release of a claim by an assignee in insolvency, induced by a false and fraudulent statement of account by the treasurer of respondent corporation, will be set aside on bill in equity brought by the assignor after his debts are extinguished.—James v. Atlantic Delaine Co., Cases Nos. 7,177, 7,178.

RELEVANCY.

Of evidence in civil actions, see "Evidence," §§ 16–18.

RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES.

§ 1, Powers. § 2, Membership. § 3, Officers of church. § 4, Property and pews.

Charitable gifts, trusts, or bequests and devises to, see "Charities."
Disturbance of worship, see "Disturbance of Public Assemblage," § 1.
Subscriptions, see "Subscriptions."

§ 1. Powers.
As to the power of the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church to divide the church, and its control of the Book Concern.—Smith v. Swormstedt, Case No. 13,112.

A community cannot interfere with a member's natural rights under the law further than he has agreed to allow it, irrespective of usage long established.—Nachtrieb v. The Harmony Settlement, Case No. 10,003.

A church conference may consent to division of church into two bodies, which will carry with it a division of the common property.—Bascom v. Lane, Case No. 1,089.

Commissioners appointed by one of such divisions may maintain bill against trustees of common property for a division.—Bascom v. Lane, Case No. 1,089.

§ 2. Membership.
Preachers or members of the Methodist Episcopal Church who withdraw therefrom, either individually or with a body of others, lose all rights of property pertaining to them while in the church.—Smith v. Swormstedt, Case No. 13,112.

§ 3. Officers of church.
The vestry and wardens of the "Protestant Episcopal Church of Alexandria" held to have been the vestry of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the parish of Fairfax.—Mason v. Muncaster, Case No. 9,247.

§ 4. Property and pews.
An unincorporated religious association cannot hold property in its assumed name, nor can the directors and their successors in office hold it, but another may hold it by a conveyance in trust.—Goesele v. Bimeler, Case No. 5,503.

One taking an assignment of a pew in the Protestant Episcopal Church in St. John's parish, Washington, D. C., for a debt, is not personally liable to the vestry for taxes thereon.—Mauro v. St. John's Parish, Case No. 9,313.

REMAINDERS.

§ 1, Rights of remainder-man. § 2, Effect of renunciation of particular estate.

See, also, "Life Estates."

§ 1. Rights of remainder-man.
The issue of a female slave, born during the pendency of a particular estate, are property of the remainder-man.—Preston v. McGaughey, Case No. 11,397.

§ 2. Effect of renunciation of particular estate.
The renunciation or disclaimer of a life estate will not destroy subsequent remainders, but they immediately take effect and preserve contingent remainders.—Webster v. Gilman, Case No. 17,335.

REMAND.

Of cause on appeal or writ of error, see "Appeal and Error," § 40.
—— removed from state court, see "Removal of Causes," §§ 51–54.

REMEDY AT LAW.

Effect on jurisdiction of equity, see "Equity," §§ 11–14.

REMISSION.

Of forfeiture, see "Forfeitures, §§ 3, 4; "War," § 22.
Of penalties, see "Penalties," § 2.

REMITTITUR.

Of cause on appeal or writ of error, see "Appeal and Error," § 40.

REMOVAL.

From office, see "Executors and Administrators," § 7; "Receivers," § 8; "Sheriffs and Constables," § 10; "United States Marshals."
—— of assignee in bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," § 182.
—— of trustee, see "Trusts," § 15.
Of fixtures, see "Fixtures," § 4.
Of records, see "Records," § 5.

REMOVAL OF CAUSES.

I. POWER TO REMOVE AND RIGHT OF REMOVAL IN GENERAL.

§ 1, In general. § 2, To what causes applicable. § 3, Restrictions by state statutes. § 4, Relative authority of state and federal courts. § 5, Effect of stipulation, waiver, etc. § 6, To what court cause is removable.

II. ORIGIN, NATURE, AND SUBJECT OF CONTROVERSY.

§ 7, In general. § 8, Acts done under revenue laws. § 9, Acts done under national authority. § 10, Cases arising under federal constitution or laws. § 11, Corporations.

III. CITIZENSHIP OR ALIENAGE OF PARTIES.

§ 12, Construction of statutes in general. § 13, What parties may remove in general. § 14, Suits by and against aliens. § 15, Corporations. § 16, Substituted or intervening parties. § 17, Several plaintiffs or defendants—In general. § 18, —— Nominal parties. § 19, —— Parties not served or not appearing. § 20, —— Separable controversies. § 21, At what time diversity must exist. § 22, Subject-matter.

IV. PREJUDICE, LOCAL INFLUENCE, OR DENIAL OF CIVIL RIGHTS.

§ 23, Prejudice and local influence. § 24, Denial of civil rights.

V. AMOUNT OR VALUE IN CONTROVERSY.

§ 25, In general. § 26, How determined.

VI. PROCEEDINGS TO PROCURE AND EFFECT OF REMOVAL.

(A) At What Time Removal may be Claimed.

§ 27, Time of entering appearance. § 28, Commencement of criminal prosecution. § 29, Before trial or hearing. § 30, Under act of March 3, 1875—Suits pending at passage of act. § 31, —— Before or at term at which cause could be first tried. § 32. —— Before trial. § 33, After reversal on appeal in general. § 34, After granting of new trial.

(B) Procedure.

§ 35, In general. § 36, Parties to application. § 37, Requisites of petition—In general. § 38, —— Averments as to citizenship, alienage, etc. § 39, —— Averments as to subject-matter. § 40, —— Signature and verification. § 41, —— Amendment. § 42, Affidavit. § 43, Bond. § 44, Copy of record. § 45, Certiorari, habeas corpus, etc., as auxiliary proceedings. § 46, Proceedings in state court upon removal.

(C) Effect of Removal.

§ 47, Attachment, injunction, etc. § 48, Costs. § 49, Contempt proceedings. § 50, Parties not served or appearing.

VII. REMAND OR DISMISSAL OF CAUSE.

§ 51, Grounds—Want of jurisdiction or cause not removable. § 52, —— Irregularities or defects in proceedings. § 53, Motion to dismiss or remand. § 54, Order.

VIII. PROCEEDINGS IN CAUSE AFTER REMOVAL.

§ 55, Jurisdiction. § 56, Rights, remedies, and defenses in general. § 57, Parties, appearance, etc. § 58, Procedure in general. § 59, Distinction between legal and equitable remedies. § 60, Pleading. § 61, Trial.

Change of venue or place of trial, see "Venue," § 2.
Removal from one federal court to another, see "Courts," § 91.
—— of offender to another district, see "Criminal Law," § 42.

I. POWER TO REMOVE AND RIGHT OF REMOVAL IN GENERAL.

§ 1. In general.
A suit in a state court which falls within the description of suits removable into the federal circuit court may be removed, although it could not originally have been brought in the federal court, and this principle is not changed by Act March 3, 1875, § 5.—Warner v. Pennsylvania R. Co., Case No. 17,186.

Such cases only are liable to removal from the state to the circuit court as might have been brought before such court by original process.—Smith v. Rines, Case No. 13,100.

Act April 20, 1871, does not authorize removal in every case in which the United States courts would have original jurisdiction, but only in the circumstances specified.—Gaughan v. Northwestern Fertilizing Co., Case No. 5,272.

Under the constitution of the United States, causes may be removed to the federal courts from the state courts after as well as before judgment.—Murray v. Patrie, Case No. 9,967.

Act 1863, providing for the transfer of actions for personal trespass committed by virtue of military authority during the Civil war to the federal courts, is constitutional.—Clark v. Dick, Case No. 2,818.

§ 2. To what causes applicable.
A proceeding under the right of eminent domain to condemn land for a railroad is a suit of civil nature, and may be removed.—Warren v. Wisconsin Val. R. Co., Case No. 17,204.

Where an appeal from an appraisement of private lands taken by an incorporated company under the right of eminent domain assumes the shape of a suit docketed and pending as an action at law for the trial of the question of the value of the land, it is a suit of such a nature as may be removed.—Patterson v. Mississippi & R. R. Boom Co., Case No. 10,829.

A proceeding under an Ohio statute to compel an assignee for the benefit of creditors to allow a claim is a suit at law, within the removal act. —Claflin v. Robbins, Case No. 2,776.

A contest in regard to the distribution of a decedent's estate is a removable "controversy." March 3, 1875.—Craigie v. McArthur, Case No. 3,341.

A motion under 1 Wag. St. Mo. p. 291, § 13, for execution against a stockholder, is not removable to the federal court as a "suit at law or in equity." Act 1875, § 2.—Webber v. Humphreys, Case No. 17,326.

A proceeding by mandamus to compel defendant corporation to register transfers of certificates of stock held by plaintiff is a "suit of a civil nature at law." Act March 3, 1875.—Washington Imp. Co. v. Kansas Pac. Ry. Co., Case No. 17,242.

§ 3. Restrictions by state statutes.
A state statute prohibiting nonresident corporations from removing suits into the federal courts having been declared unconstitutional, a provision requiring revocation of a license of a corporation applying for a removal falls with it, and the federal court may restrain a forfeiture thereunder.—Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Doyle, Case No. 6,160.

§ 4. Relative authority of state and federal courts.
The federal, and not the state, court has the power to determine whether the case is a proper one for removal under the acts of congress.—Taylor v. Rockefeller, Case No. 13,802; Cobb v. Globe Mut. Life Ins. Co., Id. 2,921.

The federal court must determine for itself the question of its jurisdiction; the allowance of the petition for removal by the state court cannot confer jurisdiction.—Field v. Lownsdale, Case No. 4,769.

The right of removal under any act of congress is not dependent upon the volition, or action, or nonaction of the state court.—Fisk v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 4,827; Clippinger v. Missouri Val. Life Ins. Co., Id. 2,901.

The state court has no power to delay transfer of a cause or review the order of removal.—Akerly v. Vilas, Case No. 119.

§ 5. Effect of stipulation, waiver, etc.
A stipulation for removal will not confer jurisdiction unless the record shows the facts necessary to a removal under the acts of congress.—Kingsbury v. Kingsbury, Case No. 7,817.

A minor is incapable of consenting to a removal either by his guardian ad litem or any other person.—Kingsbury v. Kingsbury, Case No. 7,817.

An agreement of a foreign insurance company, filed with a state officer, waiving the right to remove causes against it to the federal courts, is absolutely void.—Rowland v. Empire State Life Ins. Co., Case No. 12,097.

A written stipulation of submission of a pending cause to the state supreme court after the admission of Colorado held a waiver of the right to remove the cause to the federal court. Act June 26, 1876.—Gaffney v. Gillette, Case No. 5,168.

A written stipulation of submission of a pending cause held a waiver of the right of removal after reversal and return for a new trial.—Gaffney v. Gillette, Case No. 5,168.

A person brought into court by order to interplead will not be regarded as voluntarily before the court, and waiving his right of removal.—Healy v. Prevost, Case No. 6,297.

A consent to a reference at the time a cause is called for trial, and might, in the ordinary course, have been tried, held a waiver of the right of removal on the ground of prejudice or local influence.—Hanover Nat. Bank v. Smith, Case No. 6,035.

The right to removal is waived or lost where the cause has been remanded after it has been once removed, for failure, by neglect of defendant, to perfect the removal.—McLean v. St. Paul & C. Ry. Co., Case No. 8,893.

§ 6. To what court cause is removable. Cause must be removed to federal court held at place where action was brought in the state court or place convenient.—Cobb v. Globe Mut. Life Ins. Co., Case No. 2,921.

Under the act of 1875, the circuit court, to which the cause is removable, is that for the district within whose territorial limits the cause is pending in the state court.—Knowlton v. Congress & Empire Spring Co., Case No. 7,902.

II. ORIGIN, NATURE, AND SUBJECT OF CONTROVERSY.

§ 7. In general. Under Acts March 2, 1833, March 3, 1863, and July 27, 1868, the right of removal is made to depend upon the subject-matter.—Fisk v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 4,827.

Under these acts, the entire suit is removed if any part of it is removed.—Fisk v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 4,827.

§ 8. Acts done under revenue laws. Act March 2, 1833, § 3, providing for the removal of prosecution in a state court against an officer of the United States for acts done under color of the revenue laws is not applicable to criminal indictments.—Ex parte Carson, Case No. 2,459.

The act of 1861, imposing direct taxes upon the states, is a revenue law, and cases arising under it are subject to removal under Act March 2, 1833.—Peyton v. Bliss, Case No. 11,055.

An action for slanderous words spoken by a United States collector of customs, while in the discharge of his official duty, and explanatory of it, is removable. Act March 2, 1833.—Buttner v. Miller, Case No. 2,254.

A suit against the assistant treasurer of the United States to recover the value of certain United States bonds deposited with him by plaintiff and retained by him under instructions from the treasury department, on the ground that they were unlawfully put into circulation as against the party to whom they were issued, cannot be removed under Act March 2, 1833, § 3.—Victor v. Cisco, Case No. 16,934.

A suit in a state court by an informer against a collector for the proceeds of goods condemned may be removed by certiorari into the federal circuit court. Act March 2, 1833, § 3.—Vanzandt v. Maxwell, Case No. 16,884.

The post-office laws of the United States are "revenue laws," within the meaning of Act March 2, 1833, § 3, providing for removal of a suit brought against a person for an act done under the revenue laws, or under color thereof.—Warner v. Fowler, Case No. 17,182.

An action against a postmaster for a wrongful refusal to deliver a letter to plaintiff is removable under such act.—Warner v. Fowler, Case No. 17,182.

The intention of the removal act of 1866 is to protect revenue officers and agents against suits in the state courts.—Benchley v. Gilbert, Case No. 1,291.

An action against a commissioner to recover money illegally exacted as fees in a criminal proceeding cannot be removed by certiorari, under Act July 13, 1866, § 67.—Benchley v. Gilbert, Case No. 1,291.

Suits against federal revenue officers on account of acts done under color of their offices, may be removed from state courts under Rev. St. § 643.—Venable v. Richards, Case No. 16,913.

Rev. St. § 643, is applicable to an indictment of a revenue officer in a state court for an act done under color of the United States revenue law, but charged to be in violation of the criminal law of the state.—Findley v. Satterfield, Case No. 4,792.

Act March 3, 1875, c. 137, § 10, does not repeal Rev. St. § 643, providing for the removal of suits from the state to the national courts in certain cases.—Venable v. Richards, Case No. 16,913.

Rev. St. § 643, providing for removal to the federal court of prosecutions against federal revenue officers, held constitutional.—Findley v. Satterfield, Case No. 4,792.

§ 9. Acts done under national authority. In a cause removed under the act of March 3, 1863, because it involved an act done under the authority of the president of the United States during the Rebellion, held, that the act of March 2, 1867, legalizing acts done by the president's authority, and providing that no person shall be held to answer for such acts in any court, did not deprive the court of jurisdiction so as to require a remand.—Lamar v. Dana, Case No. 8,005.

§ 10. Cases arising under federal constitution or laws. Original jurisdiction may be conferred by congress upon the federal circuit courts by the removal into them from the state courts of cases arising under the constitution and laws of the United States and treaties.—Murray v. Patrie, Case No. 9,967.

Under Act March 3, 1875, § 2, only suits involving rights depending upon a disputed construction of the constitution and laws of the United States are removable.—Trafton v. Nougues, Case No. 14,134.

When a defense depends wholly on the construction of the constitution of the United States and acts of congress, the courts of the United States have jurisdiction of the subject-matter, without regard to the citizenship of the parties.—Hodgson v. Millward, Case No. 6,568.

A suit to determine the right to mining claims is not removable under Act March 3, 1875, § 2, where the only questions to be litigated are as to the local laws, rules, regulations, and customs, and the fact of conformance thereto.—Trafton v. Nougues, Case No. 14,134.

A suit in the state courts to enforce a vendor's lien, where the defense is that the land was sold to defendant by the assignee in bankruptcy of the maker of the notes constituting the lien, is removable as involving the construction of federal law.—Connor v. Scott, Case No. 3,119.

An action of trespass is removable where defendant justifies the alleged trespass under the authority of a court and of the laws of the United States.—Houser v. Clayton, Case No. 6,739.

The Union Pacific Railroad Company, when sued in a state court for negligence, may remove the cause under a petition stating that it has a defense arising under its charter.—Turton v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 14,273.

A claim of title to land under a sale by a marshal upon fi. fa. issued from a federal court is not good ground of removal.—Gay v. Lyons, Case No. 5,281.

Such a case cannot be removed unless the validity or effect of the judgment, or the proceedings and sale under which the plaintiff claims title, is brought in question.—Gay v. Lyons, Case No. 5,281.

An action by the collector of internal revenue against the deputy collector on his official bond may be removed from the state court into the federal court, under Act March 3, 1875. —Orner v. Saunders, Case No. 10,584.

Where the construction of a law of congress is involved, it does not alter the case that there are other questions which do not depend upon the laws of congress.—Connor v. Scott, Case No. 3,119.

The fact that questions may arise, in the course of the litigation, besides those under the acts of congress, and which depend upon general principles of law, cannot withdraw the cause from the jurisdiction of the federal courts. —Fisk v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 4,828.

Nor can the suit be withdrawn from such jurisdiction, by joining defendants who are not within the limitation prescribed by the statute with those who are within such limitation.—Fisk v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 4,828.

§ 11. Corporations.

The act of July 27, 1868, in relation to removal of suits against corporations, is constitutional.—Fisk v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 4,827.

A member of a corporation, sued for a debt or liability of the corporation, may have the suit removed under Act July 27, 1868, § 2.—Gard v. Durant, Case No. 5,216.

But a member sued for alleged misconduct as an officer of the corporation cannot have the suit removed under such section.—Gard v. Durant, Case No. 5,216.

The fact that a state is plaintiff in the action will not affect the right of removal under Rev. St. § 640.—Texas v. Texas & P. R. Co., Case No. 13,848.

The jurisdiction of the federal courts over national banks under Rev. St. § 629, cl. 10, is only concurrent with that of the state courts, and a suit brought against such bank in a state court is not subject to removal thereunder.—Pettilon v. Noble, Case No. 11,044.

The fact that one of the parties to a suit is a national bank is no ground for removal from a state to the federal court.—Wilder v. Union Nat. Bank, Case No. 17,651.

Receivers of national banks have no right as such to have cases against them removed.—Bird v. Cockrem, Case No. 1,429.

The right of one of the class of corporations mentioned in Rev. St. § 640, when sued in a state court to remove the cause, does not depend upon the citizenship of the parties.—Texas v. Texas & P. R. Co., Case No. 13,848.

A suit commenced in a state court against a corporation of a foreign country cannot be removed by defendant under Act July 27, 1868, § 2.—Jones v. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co., Case No. 7,485.

Act July 27, 1868, § 2, construed, as to what suits are removable under it, and at whose instance, and what is the mode of removal.—Fisk v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 4,827.

III. CITIZENSHIP OR ALIENAGE OF PARTIES.

§ 12. Construction of statutes in general.

Under Acts Sept. 24, 1789, § 12, July 27, 1866, and March 2, 1867, the right of removal is made to depend upon citizenship or alienage.—Fisk v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 4,827.

Act March 2, 1867, only adds another cause for removal, and does not repeal the act of 1866.—Fields v. Lamb, Case No. 4,775.

Act March 3, 1875, invests the federal courts with jurisdiction, arising from diverse citizenship of litigant parties, coextensive with the judicial power conferred upon the general government by the constitution.—Girardey v. Moore, Case No. 5,462.

Act March 3, 1875, is inapplicable to causes brought in territorial courts subsequently made state courts by an enabling act.—Ames v. Colorado Cent. R. Co., Case No. 325.

§ 13. What parties may remove in general.

A citizen of the District of Columbia is not a citizen of a state, within the removal laws.—Cissel v. McDonald, Case No. 2,729.

Either plaintiff or defendant has the right of removal under Act March 2, 1867, which may be exercised at any time in the course of the litigation prior to final hearing or trial.—Johnson v. Monell, Case No. 7,399.

A defendant, though a citizen of the state where the suit is brought, may remove the case from the state to the federal court under Act March 3, 1875.—Osgood v. Chicago, D. & V. R. Co., Case No. 10,604.

Where the assignee of a contract made between citizens of the same state is a citizen of another state, a suit against defendant in the state of his residence may be removed under Act March 3, 1875.—Waterbury v. Laredo, Case No. 17,252.

An action is removable, though diverse citizenship does not appear on the face of the writ, if it appears on the petition for removal. —Ladd v. Tudor, Case No. 7,975.

§ 14. Suits by and against aliens.

An alien, complying with the provisions of the judiciary act of 1789, cannot be deprived of his right of removal under section 12.—Brownell v. Gordon, Case No. 2,039.

A corporation created by the laws of a foreign country is an "alien" (Act 1789, § 12), and when sued by a citizen may remove the cause. —Terry v. Imperial Fire Ins. Co., Case No. 13,838.

A citizen of the state sued in the state court by a citizen of a foreign country may remove the cause under Act 1875, § 2, cl. 1.—Deakin v. Lea, Case No. 3,695.

An unnaturalized foreigner may remove a cause as such, though he has long resided in a state, and, by permission of its laws and constitution, has voted at the state elections. Act March 3, 1875.—Lanz v. Randall, Case No. 8,080.

§ 15. Corporations.

Corporations are within the act of 1867, in respect to the removal of causes.—Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Maquillan, Case No. 4,668.

A corporation created under the laws of one state does not become a citizen of another state by complying with its law requiring the filing of a consent to service of process upon its agent within the state.—Lee v. Ætna Ins. Co., Case No. 8,181.

Code Va. §§ 19-36, requiring foreign insurance companies doing business in the state to keep an agent there to receive service of legal process, does not prevent such company removing a cause to the federal court.—Owen v. New York Life Ins. Co., Case No. 10,631.

A foreign corporation, by having an office and transacting business within the state of New York, does not lose the privilege of having all its members regarded as citizens of the state in which it was incorporated. Act N. Y. April 10, 1855.—Hatch v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., Case No. 6,204.

A foreign corporation against which jurisdiction is obtained by attachment of its property under a state law may remove the case, although no suit could have been commenced in the federal court by original process against it. —Bliven v. New England Screw Co., Case No. 1,550; Barney v. Globe Bank, Id. 1,031.

An action against a foreign corporation in the state court is effectually commenced by the service of summons upon its agent within the state, where it has filed a consent to such service as required by the state law.—Lee v. Ætna Ins. Co., Case No. 8,181. But see Leonard v. Lycoming Fire Ins. Co., Case No. 8,258.

Such action, where the amount in dispute is within the jurisdictional limit, may be removed to the federal court, and will not be remanded for want of jurisdiction.—Lee v. Ætna Ins. Co., Case No. 8,181.

§ 16. Substituted or intervening parties.

Nonresident attachment creditors substituted under a state law, for the sheriff in replevin, may remove the cause.—Beecher v. Gillett, Case No. 1,225.

In ejectment against a tenant, a nonresident owner, admitted as a defendant, is not entitled to a removal.—Beardsley v. Torrey, Case No. 1,190.

Defendants cannot prevent a removal by calling in warranty parties who are citizens of the same state with plaintiffs in a cause pending in a Louisiana state court, though under the local law the trial of the call in warranty cannot be separated from the trial of the main issue.—Ellerman v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., Case No. 4,382.

§ 17. Several plaintiffs or defendants—In general.

Act 1789, c. 20, § 12, in terms applying only to a single defendant, embraces cases where several aliens or several citizens of another state are jointly sued as defendants.—Smith v. Rines, Case No. 13,100.

In order to remove a cause under Act 1789, c. 20, § 12, all the defendants must join in the petition.—Smith v. Rines, Case No. 13,100.

To authorize a removal on the ground of diverse citizenship under Act Sept. 24, 1789, § 12, all the plaintiffs must be citizens of the state in which the suit is brought, and all the defendants must be citizens of some other state or states.—Hubbard v. Northern R. Co., Case No. 6,818.

In a suit commenced in the state court of Vermont by two plaintiffs, one was a citizen of that state, and the other of New Hampshire, while defendant was a citizen of New York. Held, that the cause was not removable under Act 1789, § 12.—Hubbard v. Northern R. Co., Case No. 6,818.

To remove a case under Judiciary Act 1789, § 12, each defendant must be either an alien or a citizen of a state other than that of the state to which plaintiff belongs.—Ex parte Girard, Case No. 5,457.

A suit cannot be removed from a state court into the circuit court of the United States, where a part of the plaintiffs or defendants are citizens of the state where the suit is brought and of some other state. Act 1789, § 12.—Wilson v. Blodget, Case No. 17,792.

A suit in which citizens of the state are joined as defendants with a foreign corporation and nonresidents cannot be removed, under Act Sept. 24, 1789, § 12, unless the citizens of the state are merely nominal parties.—Hatch v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., Case No. 6,204.

Under Act July 27, 1866, one of several defendants cannot remove the suit unless the controversy is separable as to him.—Bixby v. Couse, Case No. 1,451.

Under such act, all the nonresident defendants need not join in a petition for removal where a final determination can be had between plaintiff and the petitioning defendants without the presence of the others.—Lewis v. White, Case No. 8,335.

The fact that plaintiff and garnishees are citizens of the same state will not prevent a removal under Act March 2, 1867, garnishees not being parties to the suit.—Cook v. Whitney, Case No. 3,166.

All defendants who are not merely nominal parties must be citizens of another state or other states, and must unite in the petition to remove the cause, under Act March 2, 1867.—Bixby v. Couse, Case No. 1,451.

Where, in a suit by a nonresident plaintiff against a citizen of a state where the suit is brought and a citizen of another state, the latter voluntarily appears, plaintiff may obtain a removal of the cause as to all of the defendants under Act March 2, 1867.—Sands v. Smith, Case No. 12,305.

To entitle defendants to remove a case brought by a firm under Act March 2, 1867, it must appear that all the plaintiffs were citizens of a different state from defendant's state.—Case v. Douglas, Case No. 2,491.

If any person who is a necessary plaintiff and any one who is a necessary defendant are citizens of the same state, there is no right of removal, under Act March 3, 1875.—Van Brunt v. Corbin, Case No. 16,832; Tyler v. Hagerty, Id. 14,308; In re Frazer, Id. 5,068; Petterson v. Chapman, Id. 11,042.

In such case all the necessary parties on one side must unite in the petition.—Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. v. McComb, Id. 2,670; National Union Bank v. Dodge, Id. 10,053. CONTRA, see Stapleton v. Reynolds, Case No. 13,303.

If some of plaintiffs and some of defendants are citizens of the same state, the removal must be sought by all the plaintiffs or all the defendants under Act 1875.—Girardey v. Moore, Case No. 5,462.

But if all the plaintiffs on the one hand, and all the defendants on the other, are citizens of different states, then any one or more of either may remove the cause.—Girardey v. Moore, Case No. 5,462.

The whole suit must be removed, or no removal can take place, under Act 1875.—Girardey v. Moore, Case No. 5,462.

Foreign citizens, where they do not constitute the entire plaintiff or defendant, cannot remove a suit under Act March 3, 1875.—Hervey v. Illinois Midland Ry. Co., Case No. 6,434.

The requisite jurisdictional citizenship must exist as to each individual plaintiff in an action against an alien, to authorize a removal under Act March 3, 1875, § 2.—Sawyer v. Switzerland Marine Ins. Co., Case No. 12,408.

A bill to remove a cloud from plaintiff's title, against a trustee in a deed of trust, to secure a debt, the creditor secured and the person in possession who executed such deed, whose title is attacked, cannot be removed where the latter is a citizen of the same state with plaintiff.

Act March 3, 1875.—Steinkuhl v. York, Case No. 13,356.

§ 18. —— Nominal parties.

Where it is shown that the controversy is wholly between citizens of different states, and can be fully determined as between them, the cause is removable, though some of the formal or nominal plaintiffs or defendants may be citizens of the same state.—Taylor v. Rockefeller, Case No. 13,802; Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. v. McComb, Id. 2,670; Hatch v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., Id. 6,204; Hervey v. Illinois Midland Ry. Co., Id. 6,434; Edgerton v. Gilpin, Id. 4,280.

The right of removal cannot be defeated by the joinder as defendants of citizens of the same state with plaintiff against whom no relief is prayed.—Arapahoe County v. Kansas Pac. Ry. Co., Case No. 502.

Where the real controversy is between a city and one of its citizens, a citizen of another state interested cannot remove the cause.—Chicago v. Gage, Case No. 2,664.

The joinder of co-defendants in the petition is not necessary where the controversy is wholly between petitioner and complainant.—Osgood v. Chicago, D. & V. R. Co., Case No. 10,604.

Officers of a corporation, joined as defendants with the corporation, against whom, in their individual capacities, no relief is claimed, are merely nominal parties.—Hatch v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., Case No. 6,204.

A bill by a citizen of Tennessee to cancel certain policies and a loan against an insurance company of Missouri is removable, though the trustee was a citizen of the same state with complainant.—Chester v. Wellford, Case No. 2,662.

§ 19. —— Parties not served or not appearing.

The alien defendant may remove a case where the other defendants are not served and do not appear.—Ex parte Girard, Case No. 5,457.

A suit brought against co-partners to recover on a promissory note, where the only defendant served with process was a citizen of another state, and the other defendants were citizens of the state with plaintiff, may be removed to the federal court.—Wormser v. Dahlman, Case No. 18,048.

§ 20. —— Separable controversies.

A suit against tenants in common or persons claiming to be such, concerning the title to or possession of land, is divisible and removable by either defendant under Rev. St. § 639.—Goodenough v. Warren, Case No. 5,534.

As to the status of the tenant as a party, and the right of the landlord to appear and defend and have a severance, under Act 1789.—Ex parte Turner, Case No. 14,245.

The substantial controversy in a suit to quiet title brought against resident grantors and nonresident grantee of land held to be wholly between plaintiff and the grantee, and wholly removable, under Rev. St. § 639.—Goodenough v. Warren, Case No. 5,534.

Where there is a separable controversy, each defendant has the right of removal without reference to the status of his co-defendant, under Act July 27, 1866.—Field v. Lownsdale, Case No. 4,769; Fields v. Lamb, Id. 4,775; Allen v. Ryerson, Id. 235.

A suit to quiet title to real property against several defendants, who claim to be the owners of the same as tenants in common, "is one in which there can be a final determination of the controversy," as to each defendant, without the presence of the other, under Act July 27, 1866.—Field v. Lownsdale, Case No. 4,769.

One of several defendants sued as co-partners may have the cause removed, so far as concerns himself, under Act July 27, 1866.—McGinnity v. White, Case No. 8,802.

Act March 3, 1875, does not repeal that part of Act July 27, 1866, which authorizes removal of separable controversies.—Girardey v. Moore, Case No. 5,462.

A suit may be removed under Act March 2, 1867, by a defendant who is a citizen of a different state, although there be other defendants who are citizens of the state in which it is brought.—Florence Sewing Mach. Co. v. Grover & Baker Sewing Mach. Co., Case No. 4,883.

The case must be so removed that the controversy can be fully determined under Act March 3, 1875.—Hervey v. Illinois Midland Ry. Co., Case No. 6,434.

A cause cannot be removed under Act March 3, 1875, unless the controversy is so completely one between residents or citizens of different states that its termination will settle the whole suit.—Carraher v. Brennan, Case No. 2,441.

Whenever the controversy is between citizens of different states, the cause is removable, though some of the persons on opposite sides may be citizens of the same state. Act March 3, 1875.—Girardey v. Moore, Case No. 5,462.

A portion of a case cannot be removed under such act because the party interested in such portion is a citizen of another state from that of plaintiff.—Carraher v. Brennan, Case No. 2,441.

Where the landlord or real owner appears as a party, being called in by the tenant in trespass to try title in Texas, the controversy is one wholly between him and the plaintiff, and, if he is a citizen of another state, he may remove the cause. Act March 3, 1875.—Greene v. Klingler, Case No. 5,767.

In an action on the mortgage note of a resident corporation, held that a controversy between plaintiff and a nonresident defendant, who was a mortgagee of the company, and had purchased its entire property, was merely incidental to the main controversy, and the cause was not removable under Act March 3, 1875.—First Nat. Bank v. King Wrought Iron Bridge Co., Case No. 4,803.

A suit to foreclose a mortgage is not removable by a nonresident junior incumbrancer party defendant, where the other parties are citizens of the same state, and the only question is as to the validity of the mortgage and the amount due on it. Rev. St. § 639; Act March 2, 1875, § 2.—Donohoe v. Mariposa Land & Min. Co., Case No. 3,989.

On a bill of foreclosure filed by a bondholder of a railroad company, the cause may be removed under Act 1875, on petition of the company, its officers, and the mortgage trustees, without joining the co-defendants.—Osgood v. Chicago, D. & V. R. Co., Case No. 10,604.

The last clause of section 2 of the act of 1875, relating to separable controversies, authorizes removal only in suits between citizens of different states, and does not apply to foreigners.—Deakin v. Lea, Case No. 3,695.

Where there is a controversy between citizens of different states, the removal takes the whole suit, notwithstanding there were other controversies in it.—Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Chicago, P. & S. W. R. Co., Case No. 4,665.

§ 21. At what time diversity must exist.

The right of removal under Act Sept. 24, 1789, § 12, depends upon the facts as they exist when the suit is commenced.—Roberts v. Nelson, Case No. 11,907.

It is sufficient, under Acts March 2, 1867, and March 3, 1875, if the parties are citizens of different states when the petition for removal is filed, though not such when the suit was brought.—Jackson v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., Case No. 7,141; Cook v. Whitney, Id. 3,166; McGinnity v. White, Id. 8,802; McLean v. St. Paul & C. Ry. Co., Id. 8,892; Wehl v. Wald, Id. 17,356. CONTRA as to Act 1875, see Rawle v. Phelps, Case No. 11,588.

A voluntary change of residence made after suit brought, if real, does not affect the right of removal, under Act 1867, on the ground of diversity of citizenship, caused by such change, although made with intent to give jurisdiction. —Johnson v. Monell, Case No. 7,399.

The fact that plaintiff, who was an alien when the suit was brought and petition for removal filed, has since become a citizen, will not prevent the removal under Act 1875.—Houser v. Clayton, Case No. 6,739.

The right of removal under the act of March 3, 1875, is to be determined by the state of affairs as it appeared at the time of filing the complaint, and is not affected by an admission in the answers.—Latham v. Barney, Case No. 8,102.

Where, in a suit to recover money, defendant pays the same into court, and a third person, claiming the sum, is made defendant, and a new complaint filed, the suit is to be regarded as having been commenced when such substitution is made.—Wehl v. Wald, Case No. 17,356.

§ 22. Subject-matter.

A proceeding by petition of a citizen of the state against a citizen of another state to restrain the execution of a judgment obtained in the state court by the latter against the former is removable (Act March 3, 1875), though federal courts are prohibited by Rev. St. § 720, from granting an injunction to stay proceedings in a state court.—Watson v. Bondurant, Case No. 17,278.

A bill to reform a policy of insurance is an original suit, though an action at law was pending on the policy.—Charter Oak Fire Ins. Co. v. Star Ins. Co., Case No. 2,623.

A petition as an occupying claimant after judgment for plaintiff in ejectment under the statutes of Iowa is not removable, being a mere dependence on the original suit.—Chapman v. Barger, Case No. 2,603.

A petition by persons to recover compensation for services as counsel in procuring a decree and settlement of claim on a creditors' bill held to be an independent suit in equity, and removable, under Act March 3, 1875.—Pettus v. Georgia Railroad & Banking Co., Case No. 11,048.

A suit by railroad bondholders under a deed of trust which is paramount to the rights of stockholders may be removed to the federal court, notwithstanding the existence of a prior suit in the state court by the stockholders, and possession of the road taken therein.—Scott v. Clinton & S. R. Co., Case No. 12,527.

If a case is within Act 1789, § 12, the fact that it is connected with and grows out of matters litigated in the state court will not prevent its removal.—Hatch v. Preston, Case No. 6,208.

A cross bill by a nonresident defendant, merely setting up matters put in issue by the original bill and answers, cannot change the character of the case, or affect the question of jurisdiction.—Donohoe v. Mariposa Land & Min. Co., Case No. 3,989.

Collateral issues connected with the res in the state court do not destroy the right of removal, provided the parties are within the statute.—Osgood v. Chicago, D. & V. R. Co., Case No. 10,604.

The existence of judgment creditors and the fact that one of them has filed a cross bill does not affect the right of removal by defendant of a suit by a railroad bondholder to foreclose a mortgage.—Osgood v. Chicago, D. & V. R. Co., Case No. 10,604.

IV. PREJUDICE, LOCAL INFLUENCE, OR DENIAL OF CIVIL RIGHTS.

§ 23. Prejudice and local influence.

Act Feb. 5, 1867, authorizing removal for local prejudice, overrides section 11 of the judiciary act of 1789 as to suits by assignees.—Barclay v. Levee Com'rs, Case No. 977.

Rev. St. § 639, subd. 2, 3, giving the right of removal on the ground of prejudice or local influence, is not repealed by Act March 3, 1875. —Cooke v. Ford, Case No. 3,173; New Jersey Zinc Co. v. Trotter, Id. 10,167; Gurnee v. Brunswick, Id. 5,872.

A colored citizen, when sued by another citizen of the same state, cannot remove the cause because of local influence or prejudice.—Fowlkes v. Fowlkes, Case No. 5,005.

A criminal prosecution against a negro cannot be removed from the state to the federal court, on the ground of local prejudice against his race and color, preventing a fair trial.—Texas v. Gaines, Case No. 13,847.

The right of removal must be determined on the case made by the complaint, unaided by the answers; hence disclaimer by defendants who are residents of the same state with plaintiff will not enable a nonresident defendant to remove.—New Jersey Zinc Co. v. Trotter, Case No. 10,167.

Disclaimer by defendants residing in the same state with plaintiff will not enable a nonresident defendant to remove on the ground of local prejudice; for all the defendants must be nonresidents and must join in the petition.—New Jersey Zinc Co. v. Trotter, Case No. 10,167.

§ 24. Denial of civil rights.

It is only when some state law, statute, ordinance, regulation, or custom hostile to the rights of the petitioner, and their enforcement, is alleged to exist, that the petitioner is entitled to a removal under Rev. St. § 641.—Ex parte Wells, Case No. 17,386.

An allegation that a state law for the selection of jurors, which is on its face fair, will be so administered as to secure a jury inimical to petitioner, and that there is a general prejudice against him in the minds of the court, jurors, officers, and people, is not sufficient. Rev. St. § 641.—Ex parte Wells, Case No. 17,386.

V. AMOUNT OR VALUE IN CONTROVERSY.

§ 25. In general.

The amount in controversy is not material on the question of the right of removal of an action as having been commenced against a federal officer for an act done under color of the federal revenue laws.—Wood v. Matthews, Case No. 17,955.

Where it appears that the amount demanded, with interest thereon, exceeds the sum of $500, exclusive of costs, the case is a proper one for removal.—Roberts v. Nelson, Case No. 11,907.

Under the act of 1875, a suit involving over $500 is removable on the ground of diverse citizenship alone.—Low v. Wayne County Sav. Bank, Case No. 8,562.

To justify removal, it must appear that over $500 is in dispute, but this may appear either by the writ or the declaration; and if there is doubt, from different counts claiming different sums, the court may inquire into it by evidence. —Ladd v. Tudor, Case No. 7,975.

§ 26. How determined.

Where a judgment in one suit would conclusively settle the controversy in others between the same parties, they are to be considered together in determining the jurisdictional amount.—Anderson v. Gerding, Case No. 356.

Where the sum in dispute between plaintiff and defendant in an attachment case is within the jurisdiction of the federal circuit court, the fact that the claims of other creditors are less than $500 will not affect such jurisdiction.—Second Nat. Bank v. New York Silk Mfg. Co., Case No. 12,601a.

It is sufficient if the matter in dispute exceeds $500, besides costs, at the time when the right to the removal accrues and is applied for. Act July 27, 1866.—McGinnity v. White, Case No. 8,802.

The right of removal cannot be taken away by release of damages bringing the matter in dispute below $500.—Ladd v. Tudor, Case No. 7,975.

If a cause be removed from a state court by the defendant, and the plaintiff declares in the circuit court of the United States for more than $500, plaintiff cannot, by a release of part of his debt, so as to reduce it to less than $500, take away the jurisdiction of the circuit court. —Wright v. Wells, Case No. 18,101.

Where a suit is commenced by summons, and neither the summons nor complaint is filed, defendant may, in his petition for removal, show that the amount in controversy exceeds $500; and plaintiff is not entitled to a remand by afterwards filing a complaint stating the amount in dispute at less than $500.—Zinkeisen v. Hufschmidt, Case No. 18,214.

The jurisdiction of the federal court, once attached, cannot be devested by a reduction by the declaration filed in such court of the amount of the claim below the jurisdictional amount.—Roberts v. Nelson, Case No. 11,907.

VI. PROCEEDINGS TO PROCURE, AND EFFECT OF REMOVAL.

(A) AT WHAT TIME REMOVAL MAY BE CLAIMED.

§ 27. Time of entering appearance.

A petition for a removal under the judiciary act of 1789 cannot be entered by defendant later than the time of entering his appearance.—Kingsbury v. Kingsbury, Case No. 7,817; Sweeney v. Coffin, Id. 13,686.

A state court cannot cause an appearance to be entered nunc pro tunc, so as to entertain a motion for removal.—Ward v. Arredondo, Case No. 17,148.

The state court cannot agree to consider the petition to have been filed as of a preceding term, when an appearance was entered nunc pro tunc.—Gibson v. Johnson, Case No. 5,397.

Where there are several defendants entitled on appearance to remove a cause, some of whom have appeared and others not, those who have appeared cannot alone remove the cause where the judgment or decree must be joined. —Ward v. Arredondo, Case No. 17,148.

Defendants can remove the cause or appear in the federal court at different times, where their appearance is entered at different times in the state court, but an original appearance cannot be entered in the federal court.—Ward v. Arredondo, Case No. 17,148.

Rev. St. § 639, subd. 1, under which the petition must be filed at the time defendant entered his appearance in the state court, was repealed and superseded by Act March 3, 1875.—La Mothe Mfg. Co. v. National Tube Works Co., Case No. 8,033.

§ 28. Commencement of criminal prosecution.

Under Rev. St. § 643, the prosecution is not commenced until the finding of an indictment.—Georgia v. O'Grady, Case No. 5,352.

A criminal prosecution is commenced, within the meaning of Act March 3, 1863, c. 81, § 5, as soon as a warrant has been issued; and it is then removable.—Pennsylvania v. Artman, Case No. 10,952.

§ 29. Before trial or hearing.

Rev. St. § 639, subd. 3, providing for the removal of causes between citizens of different states on the filing of a petition at any time before trial or final hearing on making an affidavit of prejudice or local influence, was not repealed by the act of March 3, 1875.—Cooke v. Ford, Case No. 3,173; Dennis v. Alachua County, Id. 3,791; Sims v. Sims, Id. 12,894.

A suit by or against a citizen of another state may be removed by petition filed at any time before trial or final hearing, under Rev. St. § 639, subd. 3, on making an affidavit of prejudice or local influence, notwithstanding Act March 3, 1875.—Cooke v. Ford, Case No. 3,173; Dennis v. Alachua County, Id. 3,791.

Where, under the state statutes, its courts can act only in term, a cause referred to a referee for trial in vacation cannot be removed under Rev. St. § 639, subd. 3, by the filing of a petition, affidavit, and bond in vacation.—Scott v. Otis, Case No. 12,543.

A case cannot be removed after final judgment in the court of original jurisdiction where it is brought, though the party is entitled on appeal to a trial de novo. Act March 2, 1867.—Brice v. Somers, Case No. 1,856.

A suit in equity cannot be removed when pending in an appellate tribunal.—Waggener v. Cheek, Case No. 17,035.

§ 30. Under act of March 3, 1875—Suits pending at passage of act.

In determining at what term the cause could first be tried, under the act of 1875, a term prior to the passage of the law is not to be considered.—Merchants' & Manufacturers' Nat. Bank v. Wheeler, Case No. 9,439; Baker v. Peterson, Id. 776.

A cause may be removed under Act March 3, 1875, § 3, pending a new trial, though the same was granted before the act was passed.—Andrews' Ex'rs v. Garett, Case No. 375; Crane v. Reeder, Id. 3,356.

After a reversal on an appeal pending when Act March 3, 1875, was passed, the cause is removable at the first term of the lower court at which a new trial could be had after filing the remittitur.—Hoadley v. San Francisco, Case No. 6,544.

A removal cannot be had under Act March 3, 1875, of a suit pending at its passage, wherein a trial had been had after its passage, although the verdict was set aside, and a new trial granted.—Young v. Andes Ins. Co., Case No. 18,151.

§ 31. —— Before or at term at which cause could be first tried.

A cause may be removed before answer, on the petition of defendants brought in on order of interpleader.—Hodson v. Lake Shore & M. R. Co., Case No. 6,571a.

The petition is in time if filed before or at the term at which the cause "could be tried, and before the trial thereof."—McLean v. St. Paul & C. Ry. Co., Case No. 8,893.

No citizen of a state in which a suit is commenced can remove it except by filing a petition either before or at the term at which it might first be tried.—Cooke v. Ford, Case No. 3,173; Knowlton v. Congress & Empire Spring

Co., Id. 7,902; Wilcox & Gibbs Sewing Mach. Co. v. Follett, Id. 17,643.

Application must be made at or before term in which cause could have been finally heard. —Ames v. Colorado Cent. R. Co., Case No. 325.

The term at which a cause could be first tried is the term at which the issues are first made up, where the party applying for a removal has not been guilty of negligence.—Scott v. Clinton & S. R. Co., Case No. 12,527.

Application must be made at or before the first term at which the cause may be tried, although the court and parties may not be ready to try it.—Gurnee v. Brunswick, Case No. 5,872.

After a case regularly on the calendar for trial goes over the term, though by consent of the parties, it is not thereafter removable.—Stough v. Hatch, Case No. 13,499.

The mere fact that a cause is ready for the ex parte execution of a writ of inquiry by plaintiff after an office judgment is not equivalent to its being ready for trial on issues joined.—Hunter v. Royal Canadian Ins. Co., Case No. 6,909.

The fact that the cause is not actually tried at the first term at which it is at issue and legally triable, because the parties failed to put it upon the trial list, does not preserve the right of removal until a subsequent term.—Huddy v. Havens, Case No. 6,826.

Lapse of terms, while a reply is wanting to complete the issues, does not bar removal by the party not in default.—Michigan Central R. Co. v. Andes Ins. Co., Case No. 9,526.

Causes in Iowa being triable by law at the first term after service of process, such term limits the time for removal, though issue is not then formed.—Atlee v. Potter, Case No. 636.

Under the Code of Iowa, equity suits are not triable at the appearance term, and such suits may be removed to the federal circuit court at the second term.—Palmer v. Call, Case No. 10,-686.

Under that Code, the same rule as to the time of removal applies to suits to foreclose mortgages,—at least when there is no rule of court requiring such suits to be tried at the appearance term.—Palmer v. Call, Case No. 10,-686.

A cause commenced by attachment, in which no process was issued or served, held removable by petition filed at the term at which appearance was entered by consent, the cause continued, and time given to answer, under Code Iowa, § 2744.—McCullough v. Sterling School Furniture Co., Case No. 8,741.

A pro confesso taken by complainant at the return term will not prevent a removal.—Chester v. Wellford, Case No. 2,662.

The petition is too late where filed several terms after the cause could have been tried but for the neglect of the rules of the court for the taking of testimony.—Fulton v. Golden, Case No. 5,155.

After a decree in the probate court, the case cannot be removed.—In re Frazer, Case No. 5,068.

The application for removal by the landlord or real owner in trespass to try title in Texas is in time if made on the day after he becomes a defendant, though this be not the first term to which the suit was brought, provided the cause had not been previously at issue or ready for trial.—Greene v. Klinglor, Case No. 5,767.

The jurisdiction of a county or circuit court in Virginia on appeal from a board of county supervisors is original, and not appellate, and application to remove must be made at or before the first term of the court after the appeal is taken.—Gurnee v. Brunswick, Case No. 5,872.

If the term at which the cause could otherwise be first tried is one which occurs during the time a trial of the cause is stayed by an order of the state court, it is not such a term as is meant by the statute.—Warner v. Pennsylvania R. Co., Case No. 17,186.

For the purpose of a motion for judgment on default of a defendant, the court will compute the terms as if the action had continued in the state court.—Dunn v. Duncan, Case No. 4,175.

§ 32. —— Before trial.

Under the act of 1875, a removal cannot be had after entry of default and before vacation thereof.—McCallon v. Waterman, Case No. 8,-675.

An application filed after the commencement though before the conclusion of a trial, upon either the law or the facts of the case, which would conclude the controversy, is too late.—Lewis v. Smythe, Case No. 8,333.

The fact that decrees have been made in the state court as to incidental questions, from which appeals have been taken to the state appellate court, cannot interfere with the right of removal.—Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Chicago, P. & S. W. R. Co., Case No. 4,665.

A contest in regard to the distribution of a decedent's estate cannot be removed after an appeal has been taken from the court of original jurisdiction.—Craigie v. McArthur, Case No. 3,-341.

§ 33. After reversal on appeal in general.

After reversal in the state supreme court on appeal, with instructions to dismiss the suit, the party has no right of removal under Act March 2, 1867.—Boggs v. Willard, Case No. 1,603.

A case reversed by the state supreme court, and remanded for further proceeding, stands like a new cause, and is subject to removal under the act of March 3, 1875, passed during its pendency.—Pettilon v. Noble, Case No. 11,044.

Defendants are not bound to take affirmative action for a removal until complainants cause the case to be redocketed, of which they are entitled to due notice.—Pettilon v. Noble, Case No. 11,044.

§ 34. After granting of new trial.

Under Act July 27, 1866, Act March 2, 1867, Rev. St. § 639, subd. 3, and Act March 3, 1875, after a new trial is granted the case stands for trial as if no former trial had occurred, and is removable.—Akerly v. Vilas, Case No. 119; Andrews' Ex'rs v. Garett, Id. 375; Dart v. McKinney, Id. 3,583; Hoadley v. San Francisco., Id. 6,544; Kellogg v. Hughes, Id. 7,662; Minnett v. Milwaukee & St. P. Ry. Co., Id. 9,636; Sims v. Sims, Id. 12,894.

Under the act of March 3, 1875, the cause is removable after reversal on appeal where a new trial is granted, at the first term of the lower court at which a new trial could be had after filing the remittitur.—Hoadley v. San Francisco, Case No. 6,544.

(B) PROCEDURE.

§ 35. In general.

The provisions and conditions of the statute as to removals must be strictly complied with.—Wilcox & Gibbs Sewing Mach. Co. v. Follett, Case No. 17,643.

All the statutory requirements authorizing the transfer of causes must be complied with to dislodge the jurisdiction of the state court.—Burdick v. Hale, Case No. 2,147.

Irregularities in the removal do not vitiate it, nor authorize the federal court to remand or dismiss it. If it has jurisdiction, it should retain it.—Osgood v. Chicago, D. & V. R. Co., Case No. 10,604.

The affidavit for removal and bond having been filed in term time, but during a temporary recess of the state court, and the record not having been filed in the federal court, held that the state court, on a proper case being shown, had jurisdiction to appoint a receiver.—First Nat. Bank v. King Wrought Iron Bridge Co., Case No. 4,803.

Notice of the application for the removal of a cause is not necessary.—Wormser v. Dahlman, Case No. 18,048; Wehl v. Wald, Id. 17,356; Fisk v. Union Pac. R. Co., Id. 4,828.

Proof of publication of notice to defendant in chancery, made according to the state statutes subsequent to the removal, will sustain the jurisdiction of the federal court.—Turner v. Indianapolis, B. & W. Ry. Co., Case No. 14,259.

§ 36. Parties to application.

Presentation of a petition for removal is a sufficient appearance to make the removal proceedings valid.—La Mothe Mfg. Co. v. National Tube Works Co., Case No. 8,033.

A subject of Great Britain brought suit on a joint and several bond in an Illinois state court against a citizen of Illinois and two subjects of Great Britain. The latter were not served, but entered an appearance for the purposes of removal, and all three petitioned. Held, the bond being given in a federal court, it would retain jurisdiction.—Deakin v. Lea, Case No. 3,695.

The entry of an appearance solely for the purpose of joining in a petition for removal, and for no other purpose, so expressed, will give the court jurisdiction on removal, the same as though process had been personally served.—Deakin v. Lea, Case No. 3,696.

A cause cannot be removed on petition of one of two defendants under Act 1789, § 12.—Beardsley v. Torrey, Case No. 1,190.

A suit in a state court cannot be removed under the act of 1866 as to some of the parties, where one as to whom it is not removed is a necessary party.—Cape Girardeau & S. L. R. R. v. Winston, Case No. 2,390.

A suit cannot be removed as to one defendant under Act March 2, 1867, where there are other necessary defendants to the bill.—Waggener v. Cheek, Case No. 17,035.

All the defendants need not apply at the same time for the removal, under Act July 27, 1866, or Act July 27, 1868.—Field v. Lownsdale, Case No. 4,769; Fisk v. Union Pac. R. Co., Id. 4,828.

The whole suit, and not a part only, must be removed on a proper case, under Act March 3, 1875.—Arapahoe County v. Kansas Pac. Ry. Co., Case No. 502.

Rev. St. § 639, subd. 2, so far as it authorizes one of defendants to remove a cause as to him alone, was not repealed by Act March 3, 1875.—Wormser v. Dahlman, Case No. 18,048.

§ 37. Requisites of petition—In general.

The petition for removal must state facts showing a removable cause.—Ex parte Anderson, Case No. 349.

A petition for removal to the federal "circuit or district court" is not fatally defective, as the removal can only be to the former court.—McVaughter v. Cassily, Case No. 8,930.

The removal act of March 2, 1867, although repealed by the Revised Statutes, is substantially re-enacted therein, and a petition and notice referring thereto are not for that reason defective.—Minnett v. Milwaukee & St. P. Ry. Co., Case No. 9,636.

§ 38. —— Averments as to citizenship, alienage, etc.

A petition which does not state the citizenship of both parties is fatally defective.—McMurdy v. Connecticut Gen. Life Ins. Co., Case No. 8,903.

A suit between citizens of the same state, in which a nonresident third person is made a codefendant on his application stating that he is the legal owner of the land in dispute, cannot be removed on a petition which does not state any facts in relation to the ownership of the land or the relation of the parties.—Allin v. Robinson, Case No. 249.

The averment of citizenship or alienage of defendant need not appear on any one of the papers transmitted with the order of the state court.—Brownell v. Gordon, Case No. 2,039.

§ 39. —— Averments as to subject-matter.

To authorize a removal on the ground that the suit involves a question arising under the constitution and laws of the United States, it must clearly appear from the record that a federal question is presented, and must be passed upon in the disposition of the case, and the laws referred to and the facts relied upon as affected by these laws must be fully and clearly set out.—Wilder v. Union Nat. Bank, Case No. 17,651.

A petition for removal on the ground that the case arises under the constitution and laws of the United States must state the facts and indicate the questions arising which are claimed to give jurisdiction.—Trafton v. Nougues, Case No. 14,134.

A petition in general form that defendant has "a defense to the plaintiff's action arising under and by virtue of a law of the United States" is sufficient.—Kain v. Texas Pac. R. Co., Case No. 7,596.

In a petition under Act March 2, 1833, § 3, for removal of a cause on the ground that it is for acts done by defendant under the revenue laws, it is only necessary that the petition shall show that defendant was sued on account of acts done by him under such laws.—Abranches v. Schell, Case No. 21.

On petition by a United States marshal to have a case against himself removed from the state to the federal court, it must be shown that he is sued on account of some act done by him under color of his office.—Kelsey v. Dallon, Case No. 7,678.

A petition stating that defendant has a defense under a certain act of congress is sufficient, without stating what the defense is or the facts which constitute it.—Jones v. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co., Case No. 7,485.

The question of the actual existence and validity of the alleged defense cannot be determined on an interlocutory motion where the proceedings have conformed to the statute.—Jones v. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co., Case No. 7,485.

§ 40. —— Signature and verification.

Under the act of 1789, the petition for removal need not be verified by affidavit, but under the acts of 1833, 1863, 1866, and 1867, the petition must be verified by affidavit.—Sweeney v. Coffin, Case No. 13,686.

The petition for removal is not required to be verified, by Act March 3, 1875.—Houser v. Clayton, Case No. 6,739; Connor v. Scott, Id. 3,119; Osgood v. Chicago, D. & V. R. Co., Id. 10,604.

Both the signing of the petition for removal and the making of the affidavit may be done by the petitioner's attorney in fact.—Dennis v. Alachua County, Case No. 3,791.

A petition for removal is sufficiently signed and verified by the attorney of the party.—Wormser v. Dahlman, Case No. 18,048.

§ 41. —— Amendment.

The petition for removal may be amended in the federal court to conform to the facts.—Barclay v. Levee Com'rs, Case No. 977; Houser v. Clayton, Id. 6,739.

§ 42. Affidavit.
An affidavit of prejudice under Act March 2, 1867, is not required for a removal under Act July 27, 1866.—Allen v. Ryerson, Case No. 235.

The president, and perhaps the general manager, of a railroad corporation, is prima facie entitled to make the affidavit for removal.—Minnett v. Milwaukee & St. P. Ry. Co., Case No. 9,636.

The affidavit for removal must be taken and certified as required by the state law for affidavits in its courts.—Bowen v. Chase, Case No. 1,720.

An affidavit purporting to be taken and certified in conformity with Laws N. Y. 1869, c. 133, must have attached the certificate required by section 2.—Bowen v. Chase, Case No. 1,720.

An affidavit stating that defendant has a defense arising under the constitution and laws of the United States, in the words of the act, is sufficient.—Reding v. Texas & P. R. Co., Case No. 11,630a.

The addition of an averment specifying a defense which will not give jurisdiction will be rejected as surplusage.—Reding v. Texas & P. R. Co., Case No. 11,630a.

§ 43. Bond.
The filing of a proper bond is a condition precedent to a removal.—McMurdy v. Connecticut Gen. Life Ins. Co., Case No. 8,903.

A bond in the form prescribed by the act of 1875 held properly given on an application for removal under the act of 1867.—Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Chicago, P. & S. W. R. Co., Case No. 4,665.

A removal bond (Act March 3, 1875) in which the place where the penal sum should have been inserted is left blank is insufficient.—Burdick v. Hale, Case No. 2,147.

The condition in the bond that plaintiff shall file in the circuit court "copies of all process" renders the bond insufficient.—Burdick v. Hale, Case No. 2,147.

The suit is not properly removed where the bond given in a suit commenced after the passage of the act of March 3, 1875, contains no provision for costs.—Torrey v. Grant Locomotive Works, Case No. 14,105; McMurdy v. Connecticut Gen. Life Ins. Co., Id. 8,903.

Special bail, given upon removal, can only surrender the principal in open court.—Holbrook v. Seagraves, Case No. 6,593.

§ 44. Copy of record.
On a removal under Act 1789, § 12, certified copies of the process in the state court, and of an order of that court for their transmission, should be entered in the federal court. —Martin v. Kanouse, Case No. 9,162.

A party removing a cause under Act 1789, § 12, must file, in the federal court, not only a copy of the process, but also the declaration or bill, the petition for removal, and the order made by the state court, if any.—McBratney v. Usher, Case No. 8,661.

A state court clerk made up the record in detached papers, certifying to each one, and also that the papers constituted the whole record. Held a sufficient "copy of the record." Act March 3, 1875.—Commercial & Savings Bank v. Corbett, Case No. 3,057.

It is not essential that the record be certified by the judge of the state court; the attestation of the clerk under the seal of the court is sufficient.—Osgood v. Chicago, D. & V. R. Co., Case No. 10,604.

Proper time for entering in circuit court "copies of the proper papers" is on the first day of the next session after petition for removal. Act 1875.—Clippinger v. Missouri Val. Life Ins. Co., Case No. 2,901.

The terms of the court appointed for the trial and disposal of criminal cases are not sessions, within the meaning of an act requiring copies of proceedings in a suit to be entered on the first day of the session of the court, to perfect the removal.—Jones v. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co., Case No. 7,485.

Where the removal proceedings are perfected, the circuit court, on petition and notice, will grant leave to file the record before the day appointed by statute, for the purpose of administering provisional remedies to which petitioner may be entitled.—Mahoney Min. Co. v. Bennett, Case No. 8,968.

A defect or omission in the transcript of the record of the state court can be cured by certiorari.—Dennis v. Alachua County, Case No. 3,791.

Where the defendant removed the cause under Act 1789, but failed to have the transcript from the state court filed, plaintiff will be given leave to have the same filed and the case docketed.—Hyde v. Phœnix Ins. Co., Case No. 6,973.

The right of removal is not lost where the transcript of record is not filed within the time prescribed by Act March 3, 1875.—Cobb v. Globe Mut. Life Ins. Co., Case No. 2,921.

The failure of the moving party to file a copy of the record from the state court does not deprive the circuit court of jurisdiction under such act, but in such case the court has discretion to remand the case.—Jackson v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., Case No. 7,141.

A failure to file a copy of the record on the first day of the next session of the court will prevent a removal under Act March 3, 1875, though the state court, before such time, vacated its order of removal.—Broadnax v. Eisner, Case No. 1,909.

Where the removing party fails to file a copy of state court record, his opponent may file it.—Arthur v. New England Mut. Life Ins. Co., Case No. 565.

§ 45. Certiorari, habeas corpus, etc., as auxiliary proceedings.
Certiorari and habeas corpus not required for removal under the act of March 2, 1833.—Abranches v. Schell, Case No. 21.

A certiorari is not necessary where the record of the state court is already before the federal court.—Scott v. Clinton & S. R. Co., Case No. 12,527.

Sufficiency of application for a writ of certiorari to remove a case under Act March 2, 1833.—Salem & L. R. Co. v. Boston & L. R. Co., Case No. 12,249.

The federal court has no jurisdiction to issue a mandamus to compel a state court to allow a removal, as a mandamus is not necessary.—Fisk v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 4,827; In re Cromie, Id. 3,405; Spraggins v. County Court of Humphries, Id. 13,246; Hough v. Western Transp. Co., Id. 6,724. See, also, Ex parte Turner, Case No. 14,245.

When a suit has been removed under the act of 1868, as respects all the parties and all the subject-matter, the court will not make an order staying all proceedings in the state court, as such order is not necessary to the exercise of its jurisdiction.—Fisk v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 4,827.

An injunction will not be granted to restrain a party from proceeding in the state court in a cause which the other party claims has been removed to the federal court.—Penrose v. Penrose, Case No. 10,958.

§ 46. Proceedings in state court upon removal.

The application to the state court is ex parte. No notice need be given, and no affidavits can be read in opposition.—Fisk v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 4,828.

Where the proper steps to effect a removal have been taken, and evidence thereof is presented to the state court, the right of removal may be perfected by defendant's entering the proper papers in the federal court, and appearing.—Hatch v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., Case No. 6,204.

The filing of a sufficient petition and bond effects the removal. An order in the state court is not necessary.—Arthur v. New England Mut. Life Ins. Co., Case No. 565; Clippinger v. Missouri Val. Life Ins. Co., Id. 2,901; Cobb v. Globe Mut. Life Ins. Co., Id. 2,921; Commercial & Sav. Bank v. Corbett, Id. 3,057; Connor v. Scott, Id. 3,119; Dennistoun v. Draper, Id. 3,804; Dunham v. Baird, Id. 4,147; Ellerman v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., Id. 4,382; Fisk v. Union Pac. R. Co., Id. 4,827, 4,828; Hatch v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., Id. 6,204; Matthews v. Lyall, Id. 9,285; Petrie v. Pennsylvania R. Co., Id. 11,040a; Second Nat. Bank v. New York Silk Mfg. Co., Id. 12,601a.

After such filing the jurisdiction of the state court, except for the purposes of perfecting the removal, is at an end, and its subsequent proceedings are void.—Arthur v. New England Mut. Life Ins. Co., Case No. 565; Ellerman v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., Id. 4,382; Fisk v. Union Pac. R. Co., Id. 4,828; Matthews v. Lyall, Id. 9,285; Second Nat. Bank v. New York Silk Mfg. Co., Id. 12,601a; United States v. Judges, Id. 15,501.

No action of the state court upon either bond or petition is required to effect the removal. Act 1875.—Dunham v. Baird, Case No. 4,147; Commercial & Sav. Bank v. Corbett, Id. 3,057; Dennis v. Alachua County, Id. 3,791.

When the proper petition is presented with the proper surety, so that the state court acts upon the matter judicially, it loses jurisdiction of the cause eo instanti, unless its refusal is placed upon a valid defect in the petition, or insufficiency in the surety.—Fisk v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 4,827.

The state court may examine into the sufficiency of a petition presented thereto for removal under Rev. St. § 641, but the federal court may assert its jurisdiction by proper process, directed to the state court, which must yield obedience thereto.—Ex parte Wells, Case No. 17,386.

The petition and bond may be filed in the state court during vacation, and may be sufficient though there was no action upon them.—Osgood v. Chicago, D. & V. R. Co., Case No. 10,604.

When the petition and bond are filed in the state court during vacation, the jurisdiction of that court ceases; it does not remain until the court can act upon them in term time; and it is not for the state court to decide whether a proper case is made.—Osgood v. Chicago, D. & V. R. Co., Case No. 10,604.

The circuit court cannot review the decision of the state court on questions arising under the petition for removal under Act 1789, § 12. The remedy is by appeal to the supreme court of the state, and thence by writ of error to the supreme court of the United States.—Hough v. Western Transp. Co., Case No. 6,724.

An appeal does not lie from an order of a state court for the removal of a cause under Act March 3, 1875, and it is ineffectual to prevent a removal.—Ellerman v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., Case No. 4,382.

The order for removal need not be made before appearance by defendant. Act March 3, 1875.—Houser v. Clayton, Case No. 6,739.

(C) EFFECT OF REMOVAL.

§ 47. Attachment, injunction, etc.

No attachment of property in a state court will hold the same after removal under Act Sept. 24, 1789, where the attachment was not the original process in the suit, but, pursuant to a state statute, was issued after summons, as a separate process.—New England Screw Co. v. Bliven, Case No. 10,156; Clarke v. Chase, Id. 2,845; Barney v. Globe Bank, Id. 1,031.

Seizure of res by a state court does not affect the case, for that is necessarily transferred with the case.—Osgood v. Chicago, D. & V. R. Co., Case No. 10,604.

After removal, the federal court may entertain a motion to dissolve an attachment or discharge the attached property where such practice is authorized by the state law.—Garden City Mfg. Co. v. Smith, Case No. 5,217.

The court may hear such motion, though a similar motion was overruled by the state court prior to the removal.—Garden City Mfg. Co. v. Smith, Case No. 5,217.

An injunction issued by a state court is dissolved by the removal of the cause into the federal court.—Northwestern Distilling Co. v. Corse, Case No. 10,335; McLeod v. Duncan, Id. 8,898; Hatch v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., Id. 6,204; Bowen v. Kendall, Id. 1,724.

A motion to dissolve an injunction granted by state court of removal will not be considered without leave first asked and obtained.—Carrington v. Florida R. Co., Case No. 2,448.

§ 48. Costs.

A suit removed from the state court comes into the federal court impressed with all the rights and liabilities of the parties as to costs which accrued or attached by the laws of the state while the suit remained in the state court.—Wolf v. Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co., Case No. 17,924.

The acts of congress in relation to costs in such cases apply only to such costs as accrue after the removal.—Wolf v. Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co., Case No. 17,924.

A party after the removal is not entitled to any costs except such as are taxable under Rev. St. §§ 823, 824, though such items would have been taxable in his favor in the state court.—Clare v. National City Bank, Case No. 2,793.

Plaintiff, after removal, is entitled to costs, if successful, if given by the state law, though the recovery be less than $500, which would have prevented his recovering costs under Rev. St. § 968, had the suit been originally begun in the federal court.—Ellis v. Jarvis, Case No. 4,403; Field v. Schell, Id. 4,771; Howard v. American Dairy, etc., Co., Id. 6,753; Scripps v. Campbell, Id. 12,562. CONTRA, see Coggill v. Lawrence, Case No. 2,957.

§ 49. Contempt proceedings.

An order made in contempt proceedings instituted in a state court before the removal will be recognized and enforced in the federal court.—Williams Mower & Reaper Co. v. Raynor, Case No. 17,748.

But where such order has been appealed from, the federal court will hold in abeyance proceedings for its enforcement until the appeal is disposed of.—Williams Mower & Reaper Co. v. Raynor, Case No. 17,748.

§ 50. Parties not served or appearing.

Defendants not served or appearing in the state court when the order for removal is made are not affected by it, and as to them the cause is still pending in the state court.—Field v. Lownsdale, Case No. 4,769.

VII. REMAND OR DISMISSAL OF CAUSE.

§ 51. Grounds—Want of jurisdiction, or cause not removable.

A cause will not be remanded unless the court is satisfied that it has no jurisdiction.—Deakin v. Lea, Case No. 3,695.

A cause to which a state is a party will be remanded, as being beyond the jurisdiction of the federal court.—New Jersey v. Babcock, Case No. 10,163.

Where it appears that the cause does not really and substantially involve a dispute or controversy properly within the jurisdiction of the federal court, the cause must be dismissed or remanded.—Ryan v. Young, Case No. 12,188.

Suit remanded to state court where the motion for removal was not filed until after a receiver had been appointed, and where the proceedings were under a local statute.—Lehigh Coal & Navigation Co. v. Central R. Co., Case No. 8,213.

A cause will not be remanded, if one proper for removal under the statute in force at the time the motion is made, though the removal was not authorized by the statute under which the petition was filed.—Burnham v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., Case No. 2,174.

Where, after removal, plaintiff pleads anew setting up the removal, he cannot ask to remand the cause on the ground that it was not within the act.—Carrington v. Florida R. Co., Case No. 2,447.

A case was removed in the circuit court of the Southern district of New York on the allegation that plaintiff was a citizen of New York, and defendant a citizen of Massachusetts. Held, that a motion to remand on the ground that plaintiff is an alien should be granted, the fact not being denied.—Galvin v. Boutwell, Case No. 5,207.

A cause removed on the ground that defendant has a defense arising under the laws of the United States will be remanded when it appears by defendant's answer that no such defense is claimed or made.—Magee v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 8,945.

Where it appears that the nonresident party upon whose petition the cause was removed, has parted with his interest, and the substantial controversy is between citizens of the same state, the cause will be remanded.—Ryan v. Young, Case No. 12,188.

Where a cause has been removed at the instance of defendants who have appeared, the federal court can remand it in case the defendants do not all eventually appear.—Ward v. Arredondo. Case No. 17,148.

§ 52. —— Irregularities or defects in proceedings.

In the absence of jurisdictional objections, a cause once removed will not be remanded for defects in the bond, insufficiencies of sureties thereon, or other irregularities, which can be remedied, or are not prejudicial to the opposite party.—Dennis v. Alachua County, Case No. 3,791.

Irregularities in the removal are no ground for remanding after several years where all objection to the jurisdiction has been obviated by amendment.—Edgerton v. Gilpin, Case No. 4,280.

The circuit court will not remand the cause on account of erroneous steps in the mode in which it has been removed where otherwise it would have jurisdiction.—Kain v. Texas Pac. R. Co., Case No. 7,596.

A cause removed under Act July 27, 1866, will not be remanded because the petition for removal was unverified.—Allen v. Ryerson, Case No. 235.

The cause will not be remanded because the bond filed under Act 1875, and duly accepted by the state court, was in terms as required by Act 1866.—Baker v. Peterson, Case No. 776.

The cause will be remanded where the removing party fails to file a copy of the record on the first day of the next session of the court after petition filed.—Bright v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co., Case No. 1,877.

The cause will be remanded where the removing party fails, without other excuse than inadvertence, to file a copy of the record in the federal court until after the day named in the removal bond for such filing.—McLean v. St. Paul & C. Ry. Co., Case No. 8,892.

The filing of an imperfect transcript of the state court record is no ground for remanding the cause.—Cook v. Whitney, Case No. 3,166.

Admission of service of a rule to declare waives informality in removal. — Abranches v. Schell, Case No. 21.

§ 53. Motion to dismiss or remand.

A party is not guilty of laches affecting his right to move to remand because he did not in the first instance oppose the removal in the state court.—McMurdy v. Connecticut Gen. Life Ins. Co., Case No. 8,903.

A motion to remand may be made before the trial, where there are no disputed facts.—Magee v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 8,945.

The question whether defendant had in fact a right to remove the suit cannot be raised by a motion to remand, made before the trial.—Dennistoun v. Draper, Case No. 3,804.

The matters raised by the application to remove, and passed upon by the state court, and made the subject of bills of exception by plaintiff, cannot be inquired into on a motion to remand, based alone upon the matters contained in the transcript sent from the state court.—Greene v. Klingler, Case No. 5,767.

The truth of an averment that defendant has a defense arising under or by virtue of the constitution or laws of the United States cannot be inquired into upon motion to remand.—Texas v. Texas & P. R. Co., Case No. 13,848.

The averment in a petition that the suit has been brought for a cause of action specified in the act of July 27, 1868, cannot be tried on affidavit on motion to remand.—Fisk v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 4,828.

An act of congress should not be declared unconstitutional upon a motion to remand a cause to a state court.—Lamar v. Dana, Case No. 8,005.

Where a cause is removed as having been commenced against a federal officer for an act done under color of the United States revenue laws, the question whether the defendant was acting in performance of his duty as an officer of the customs under the revenue laws is a matter of fact involved in the merits of the case, which cannot be raised upon a motion to dismiss the suit.—Wood v. Matthews, Case No. 17,955.

On a motion to remand, the burden of proof is upon defendant corporation to show that it was not a citizen of the same state with plaintiff.—Copeland v. Memphis & C. R. Co., Case No. 3,209.

Where the cause is removed on the ground of citizenship, it will not be remanded on motion, where the question of citizenship is fairly disputed.—Heath v. Austin, Case No. 6,305.

Where a rule to show cause why defendant should not be attached for contempt for violating an injunction was granted by the state court before removal of the cause, the federal court will remand the contempt proceedings while retaining the main cause for adjudication.—Voorhees v. Albright, Case No. 16,999.

§ 54. Order.

The question of jurisdiction is considered as conclusively settled where there has been no appeal from a decision denying a motion to remand for want of jurisdiction.—Turner v. Indianapolis, B. & W. Ry. Co., Case No. 14,259.

VIII. PROCEEDINGS IN CAUSE AFTER REMOVAL.

§ 55. Jurisdiction.

Where a case is duly removed under Act Sept. 24, 1789, § 12, by defendant, the question of jurisdiction is not dependent upon any provisions of section 11.—Winans v. McKean R. & N. Co., Case No. 17,862.

The want of jurisdiction may be shown at the trial.—Kain v. Texas Pac. R. Co., Case No. 7,596; Dennistoun v. Draper, Id. 3,804; Murray v. Patrie, Id. 9,967.

A federal court has no power in a removed cause to amend the record of a state court in another action.—King v. French, Case No. 7,793.

The federal court held to have jurisdiction on removal notwithstanding a plea to the jurisdiction, filed but not passed upon in the state court, which would have defeated the action, but which set out facts requisite to give jurisdiction to the federal court.—Kelly v. Virginia Protection Ins. Co., Case No. 7,677.

The right to object to the jurisdiction of the federal court after removal of the cause from the state court is not waived by the failure to raise the objection at the first term of the court after the record is filed.—Young v. Andes Ins. Co., Case No. 18,151.

The filing of a petition for removal is no waiver of a fraud in procuring service of process.—Moynahan v. Wilson, Case No. 9,897.

The filing of the petition for removal is a sufficient appearance to the suit to give the court jurisdiction of the person.—Sweeney v. Coffin, Case No. 13,686.

After a foreign corporation, sued in the state court, has removed the case to the federal court, it cannot object to the jurisdiction of the state court, or take exception to the process by which it was brought in.—Sayles v. Northwestern Ins. Co., Case No. 12,421.

A foreign corporation cannot object to the jurisdiction of the court on the ground that it was not an inhabitant of or found within the district, after it has removed the cause from the state court to the federal court, under Act 1789, § 12.—Sayles v. Northwestern Ins. Co., Case No. 12,421.

After the proper proceedings for removal are taken, the federal court has jurisdiction to grant a provisional remedy before the term at which the parties are required to enter a copy of the record.—Commercial & Sav. Bank v. Corbett, Case No. 3,057.

Where objection to the jurisdiction is raised after removal, the court will protect the rights of the parties pending decision of the question.—Warren v. Ives, Case No. 17,197.

The federal court will grant an injunction restraining waste pending decision of the question of its jurisdiction after removal from a state court.—Warren v. Ives, Case No. 17,197.

§ 56. Rights, remedies, and defenses in general.

All rights and defenses under the state laws are recognized by the federal court.—Akerly v. Vilas, Case No. 120.

The defendant in a case removed as one arising under the constitution or laws of the United States will be confined substantially to the ground of defense indicated in the petition for removal.—Houser v. Clayton, Case No. 6,739.

A counterclaim which might have been interposed in the state court may be set up after removal.—Frank v. Chetwood, Case No. 5,051.

Where property was fraudulently decoyed within the jurisdiction of the state court, and seized on a writ of replevin, the service may be set aside on motion, where the case is at once removed.—Moynahan v. Wilson, Case No. 9,897.

Upon the trial of an indictment for murder, removed under Rev. St. § 643, the accused is called to answer to the offense as defined by the laws of the state.—Georgia v. O'Grady, Case No. 5,352.

The averment in the petition, that defendants have a defense arising under the constitution and laws of the United States, must be accepted as true in the federal court, until disposed of on the trial.—Fisk v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 4,827.

Effect of repeal of Act June 30, 1864, § 50, by Act July 13, 1866, § 68, on an action against a collector of internal revenue theretofore removed to the federal court.—Salt Co. of Onondaga v. Wilkinson, Case No. 12,269.

§ 57. Parties, appearance, etc.

On removal by one of two joint defendants, both of whom are nonresidents, one of whom only was served, plaintiff is entitled to process against the other.—Fallis v. McArthur, Case No. 4,627.

But in such case the court may hear and decide the case without making the defendant who was not served a party.—Fallis v. McArthur, Case No. 4,627.

A bill filed after the removal, naming as a party defendant a person who was not a party to the suit as brought in the state court, will be stricken from the files on motion.—Fisk v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 4,829.

In the case of a suit on a nonnegotiable contract, brought by assignees thereof, held, after removal the case should be continued in the name of the assignor, where the federal court had not adopted the state statute requiring suits to be brought in the name of the real party in interest.—Suydam v. Ewing, Case No. 13,655.

§ 58. Procedure in general.

Where a cause has been removed under the judiciary act of 1789, the case stands as though it had been originally commenced in the circuit court.—McLeod v. Duncan, Case No. 8,898.

The case stands in the circuit court as it did at the time of the removal in the state court.—Gier v. Gregg, Case No. 5,406.

After removal, the suit must be made to conform substantially to the modes of procedure observed in the federal courts, as in original cases.—Toucey v. Bowen, Case No. 14,107.

Property in custody involved in a replevin suit, removed to the federal court, should be sold, and the proceeds deposited on interest to abide the result.—Dennistoun v. Draper, Case No. 3,804.

Plaintiff may proceed after removal with a reference previously made to take the deposition of a witness to be used in the suit.—Bills v. New Orleans, St. L. & C. R. Co., Case No. 1,409.

§ 59. Distinction between legal and equitable remedies.

Where legal and equitable relief is sought by the same pleading in the state court, the plaintiff must replead after removal. — La Mothe Mfg. Co. v. National Tube Works Co., Case No. 8,033.

A declaration filed in the federal court after removal of a bill in equity, asking relief at law against some only of the defendants, if within the allegations of the complaint filed in the state court, will not be stricken from the files, nor will complainants be compelled to elect whether to proceed at law or in equity.—Fisk v. Union Pac. R. Co., Case No. 4,829.

§ 60. Pleading.

Under the act of 1789, a new declaration must be filed in the federal court, as if the suit were original there, before defendant is required to plead.—Martin v. Kanousè, Case No. 9,162.

Where an action was commenced by summons and complaint, further pleading on the part of plaintiff after removal is not necessary. —Bills v. New Orleans, St. L. & C. R. Co., Case No. 1,409.

New pleadings are not necessary on removal by one of two defendants after the cause is at issue in the state court. Act 1866.—Dart v. McKinney, Case No. 3,583.

An action at law removed when at issue proceeds on the same pleadings after removal.— Merchants' & Manufacturers' Nat. Bank v. Wheeler, Case No. 9,439.

An action removed after issue joined must be tried on the pleadings certified from the state court.—Akerly v. Vilas, Case No. 120.

A controversy is to be determined by the pleadings in the state court before the filing of the petition.—Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. v. McComb, Case No. 2,670.

The pleadings in a case removed must conform to the federal rules and practice.—Boston Belting Co. v. Judson, Case No. 1,674.

A complaint which does not so conform is demurrable.—Boston Belting Co. v. Judson, Case No. 1,674.

In cases properly removed under 1 Stat. 79, § 12, the defendant is not in default for not having answered or pleaded in the state court before or at the time of filing his petition for the removal.—Webster v. Crothers, Case No. 17,334.

After removal of cause, judgment as in case of nonsuit may be entered on plaintiff's failing to declare, after notice of rule to declare.— Abranches v. Schell, Case No. 21.

§ 61. Trial.

Upon the trial the right of the parties to challenge jurors is regulated by the law of the United States.—Georgia v. O'Grady, Case No. 5,352.

REMOVAL OF CLOUD.

See "Quieting Title."

RENEWAL.

Of filing or record of chattel mortgage, see "Chattel Mortgages," § 12.

RENT.

See "Ground Rents"; "Landlord and Tenant," §§ 8–11.

Rights and liabilities of mortgagor and mortgagee, see "Mortgages," §§ 13, 46.

REPAIRS.

Of highways, see "Highways," § 2.

Of premises demised, see "Landlord and Tenant," § 5.

To vessel, see "Maritime Liens," §§ 5–7, 10–16.

REPEAL.

Of bankruptcy statutes, see "Bankruptcy," § 5.

Of charter, see "Corporations," § 13; "Railroads," § 8.

Of patent, see "Patents," § 96.

Of statute of limitation, see "Limitation of Actions," § 7.

Of statutes in general, see "Statutes," §§ 13–16.

Of tariff laws, see "Customs Duties," § 3.

Of treaty, see "Treaties," § 3.

REPLEADER.

See "Pleading," § 54.

REPLEVIN.

§ 1, Property subject to replevin in general. § 2, Ownership and right to possession of plaintiff. § 3, Possession of defendant. § 4, Property seized under process and in custodia legis. § 5, Parties. § 6, Proceedings for taking and redelivery of property. § 7, Replevin bond. § 8, Pleading. § 9, Issues and proof. § 10, Evidence. § 11, Damages. § 12, Trial. § 13, Judgment. § 14, Action on bond—Nature and right of action. § 15, —— Pleading and evidence. § 16, —— Damages. § 17, —— Judgment and costs.

See, also, "Detinue."

For timber unlawfully cut, see "Public Lands," § 7.

Nonsuit, see "Dismissal and Nonsuit," § 1.

Of goods sold, see "Sales," § 41.

§ 1. Property subject to replevin in general.

Vouchers or documents filed with the treasury department to justify the settlement of a public account cannot be replevied.—Brent v. Hagner, Case No. 1,839.

Replevin lies in the circuit court in Massachusetts for writings or documents of value unlawfully detained. — Gibbs v. Usher, Case No. 5,387.

§ 2. Ownership and right to possession of plaintiff.

Possession by the plaintiff, and an actual wrongful taking by the defendant, are necessary to support replevin.—Dickson v. Mathers, Case No. 3,898a.

A mortgagee who has no right of immediate and exclusive possession cannot maintain replevin against a tax collector who has seized the property under a void assessment against the mortgagor.—Dixwell v. Jones, Case No. 3,-937.

To recover possession of personal property under the Missouri statute, plaintiff must show the same right of property and possession as in the common-law action of replevin.—Dixwell v. Jones, Case No. 3,937.

A re-replevin will be quashed.—Birch v. Gittings, Case No. 1,426.

§ 3. Possession of defendant.

Replevin does not lie for goods converted by a bailee thereof. Detinue or trover is the proper remedy.—Meany v. Head, Case No. 9,379.

§ 4. Property seized under process and in custodia legis.

Replevin lies against any one in whose possession personal property unlawfully taken may be found, except law officers who have possession by virtue of legal process.—Murphy v. Tindall, Case No. 9,952a.

Replevin will lie for the goods of a stranger taken in execution as the goods of the debtor, if taken out of the actual or constructive possession of the plaintiff.—Williamson v. Ringgold, Case No. 17,755.

Goods in the hands of an officer of the law under an attachment levy cannot be replevied. —Tavenner v. Hunter, Case No. 13,767.

Property released to the defendant on a forthcoming bond is still in the custody of the court, and not subject to seizure under a writ issued out of another court.—United States v. Dantzler, Case No. 14,917.

Property taken from the possession of a person, on suspicion of its being stolen, by a constable having a warrant to arrest him for forgery, is not in custodia legis.—Brent v. Beck, Case No. 1,835.

Property seized to enforce collection of taxes is in custodia legis and irrepleviable.—Dixwell v. Jones, Case No. 3,937.

As to replevin of property distrained for taxes in Washington, D. C.—Orr v. Ingle, Case No. 10,588.

Goods distrained by a collector of taxes in Washington, D. C., cannot be replevied without a special order from a justice of the peace, as required by Act Md. 1790, c. 53.—Dyer v. Coyle, Case No. 4,223.

Act Md. 1785, c. 34, forbidding replevin of goods restricted for tax, is not applicable to the corporation of the city of Washington.—Carroll v. Whitcroft, Case No. 2,458.

Property distrained under authority of the revenue laws is not repleviable.—Brice v. Elliott, Case No. 1,854.

§ 5. Parties.

Where a manufacturer contracted to furnish certain goods to the commissary general in payment of a debt due the latter and a third party, held, that the United States could not alone maintain replevin for such goods.—United States v. Kennan, Case No. 15,521.

Replevin will not lie by one joint owner, but the objection can only be taken by plea in abatement where he sues for the whole.—D'Wolf v. Harris, Case No. 4,221.

§ 6. Proceedings for taking and redelivery of property.

An affidavit is fatally defective which omits to state that plaintiff was lawfully possessed of the property, and that it was unlawfully taken from his possession without his consent.—McArthur v. Hogan, Case No. 8,659a.

Property taken from an officer who held the same on a levy under execution will be ordered restored.—Greenwell v. Botelor, Case No. 5,791; Murray v. Beck, Id. 9,957.

Where plaintiff in replevin never had possession of the goods, the court will, of course, order them to be returned to defendant, on motion, upon the usual security.—Emack v. Crabb, Case No. 4,432.

After issue joined in replevin, it is too late to move to quash the writ.—Haller v. Beall, Case No. 5,957.

The return of a United States marshal is conclusive of the facts which it sets forth, and its truth cannot be collaterally impeached.—Crane v. McCoy, Case No. 3,354.

Property replevied does not pass into plaintiff's possession after his bond has been accepted by the officer, until formal delivery by the officer.—Crane v. McCoy, Case No. 3,354.

§ 7. Replevin bond.

It is not necessary to the validity of a replevin bond that the plaintiff in replevin should be bound in the bond.—Wood v. Forrest, Case No. 17,945.

The marshal's commission of 5 per cent. may be included in a replevin bond for goods distrained for rent.—Alexander v. Thomas, Case No. 174.

§ 8. Pleading.

Several counts cannot be joined in the cognizance.—Rotchford v. Meade, Case No. 12,083.

Defendant who has pleaded property in himself will be permitted to amend by pleading property in a stranger, on payment of costs.—Semmes v. Oneale, Case No. 12,654.

§ 9. Issues and proof.

Property in the defendant must be specially pleaded, and cannot be given in evidence under non cepit.—Dickson v. Mathers, Case No. 3,898a.

Where refusal to deliver property to its owner is placed on the ground of a lien for storage and also for freight, and in a suit to recover possession it is decided that there is no lien for freight, defendant cannot claim judgment on the ground that he had a lien for storage alone.—Sicard v. Buffalo, N. Y. & P. Ry. Co., Case No. 12,831.

Upon the issue of "no rent arrear," the plaintiff in replevin will not be permitted to show that the defendant "had nothing in the tenements."—White v. Cross, Case No. 17,546.

§ 10. Evidence.

Upon the plea of property, plaintiff has the burden of proof.—Henderson v. Casteel, Case No. 6,350; Williamson v. Ringgold, Case No. 17,755.

Upon the plea of no rent arrear, in replevin, the whole burden of proof is on the party pleading it.—Hungerford v. Burr, Case No. 6,876.

Possession for 20 years is prima facie evidence of good title.—Mitchell v. Wilson, Case No. 9,672.

In replevin for goods distrained for rent, the defendant cannot give evidence of the value of the use and occupation.—White v. Cross, Case No. 17,546.

On non cepit, the issue must be for defendant if there was not a wrongful taking.—Meany v. Head, Case No. 9,379.

In replevin for goods distrained for rent, upon the issue of "no rent arrear," defendant need not prove that the distress was laid by his order or authority.—McLaughlin v. Riggs, Case No. 8,872.

Upon the issue of non cepit, plaintiff must prove that defendant took the property from his possession.—Calvert v. Stewart, Case No. 2,327.

In replevin, upon the issue of non cepit, proof that the defendant took the goods as marshal, is sufficient proof of the caption.—D'Wolf v. Harris, Case No. 4,221.

§ 11. Damages.

Plaintiff may recover according to the extent of his title proved.—Walker v. Johnson, Case No. 17,074.

Where the title to the goods is in issue, a new trial will be granted where defendant obtained a verdict for the value of the goods, as well as damages for taking them.—Thompson v. Carbery, Case No. 13,946.

An order on account of rent accepted by the landlord cannot be set off in replevin for goods distrained where the landlord produces it canceled and offers to pay the costs in a suit upon it.—Arguelles v. Wood, Case No. 520.

Nominal damages only should be allowed on judgment for defendant in replevin, where he has failed to show right in himself to the property in controversy.—Treat v. Staples, Case No. 14,162.

§ 12. Trial.
Actions of replevin, in Alexandria, may, on motion, be tried at the first term.—Wilson v. Johnston, Case No. 17,813.

Upon the plea of property in an action of replevin the plaintiff has the right to open and close.—Henderson v. Casteel, Case No. 6,350.

If the jury, in replevin, do not find the value of the goods distrained, their finding of the amount of rent in arrear is surplusage.—Wood v. May, Case No. 17,956.

Verdict amended in replevin for goods distrained for rent by stating amount of rent in arrears.—Arguelles v. Wood, Case No. 520.

§ 13. Judgment.
Judgment for defendant should, in all cases, be for a return.—Hemstead v. Colburn, Case No. 6,347.

A judgment for defendant in replevin, without a declaration, is irregular, and will, on motion, be set aside, even at a subsequent term. —Ringgold v. Elliot, Case No. 11,844.

If the jury find for plaintiff in replevin upon the plea of "non dimisit modo et forma," the judgment must be for the plaintiff upon the whole case, although they find for the defendant upon the issue of "No rent arrear."—Dorsey v. Chenault, Case No. 4,013.

In replevin for goods distrained for rent arrear, if the jury do not render such a verdict as will enable the court to render the statutory judgment in favor of the defendant, the court may render the common-law judgment for a return of the property replevied.—Wood v. May, Case No. 17,956.

A judgment for the return of the goods replevied, and for the rent in arrear for which they were distrained, corrected on motion by striking out the portion calling for a return of the goods.—Reilly v. Maryman, Case No. 11,672.

§ 14. Action on bond—Nature and right of action.
The defendant must rely upon a suit on the replevin bond for his damages, and the only judgment that can be issued in favor of the defendant in replevin is one cent damages and a retorno habendo.—Fields v. Crawford, Case No. 18,296.

A finding for defendant, with damages in the value of the goods, will not prevent defendant maintaining an action upon the replevin bond, and recovering damages beyond the value of the goods.—Hemstead v. Colburn, Case No. 6,347.

The nonpayment of the damages found by the jury is a breach of the condition of the replevin bond, upon which an action may be maintained.—Moore v. Shields, Case No. 9,775.

§ 15. —— Pleading and evidence.
In debt on a replevin bond, setting forth the condition and averring special breaches, the pleas of general performance, non damnificatus, that plaintiff had no property in the goods replevied, of nul tiel record, where no record is averred in the declaration, and a plea to the whole declaration which is an answer to a part only, are bad.—Wood v. Franklin, Case No. 17,946; Lenox v. Gorman, Id. 8,246.

To recover on a replevin bond, where there has been no judgment for a return of the property, plaintiff must show damages by the failure to prosecute the writ with effect.—Burch v. Dowling, Case No. 2,139.

The value of the goods stated in the replevin bond is prima facie evidence of plaintiff's damages; and, if defendant should contend for a less amount, the burden of proof is on him to show it.—Wood v. May, Case No. 17,956.

§ 16. —— Damages.
The merits of the case may be given in evidence in mitigation of damages in an action upon a replevin bond.—McDaniel v. Fish, Case No. 8,744.

In an action upon a replevin bond, for not returning the property distrained for rent, the defendant may show, in mitigation of damages, that no rent was in arrear.—Wood v. May, Case No. 17,956.

In an action upon a replevin bond, defendant may show, in mitigation of damages, title to the property in plaintiff in replevin, and such evidence may be rebutted by showing that the deed under which title was claimed was fraudulent and void.—Ringgold v. Bacon, Case No. 11,842.

It seems that in an action on a replevin bond defendant may, in mitigation of damages, give evidence of title in himself of the replevied property.—Smith v. Hazel, Case No. 13,055.

§ 17. —— Judgment and costs.
Sureties on a replevin bond are entitled to have their lands sold under the law in force at the date of the bond.—Stockwell v. Kemp, Case No. 13,465.

Upon a judgment on motion upon a replevy bond for rent, the plaintiff is entitled to costs of the motion.—Cooke v. Myers, Case No. 3,175.

REPLY.

In pleading, see "Admiralty," § 82; "Equity," §§ 60–64; "Pleading," § 37.

REPORT.

Of commissioners in admiralty, see "Admiralty," §§ 103–105.

REPORTS.

§ 1, Statutory provisions. § 2, Federal circuit and district court reports.

Copyright of law reports, see "Copyrights," §§ 3, 5.
Of commissioners in admiralty, see "Collision," § 155.
—— on reference of administrator's accounts, see "Executors and Administrators," § 65.
Of masters in chancery, see "Equity," §§ 113–117.
On reference in general, see "Reference," §§ 4–9.

§ 1. Statutory provisions.
The New York statutes in relation to the reporting and publication of the decisions of the court of appeals construed.—Little v. Gould, Case No. 8,394.

§ 2. Federal circuit and district court reports.
Notes and prefaces of the United States circuit and district court reports.—30 Fed. Cas. p. 1261.

REPUTATION.

As evidence, see "Evidence," § 19.
Of witness, see "Witnesses," §§ 76–78.
To prove partnership, see "Partnership," § 6.

REQUESTS.

For instructions in civil actions, see "Trial," § 19.
For instructions in criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 95.

REQUISITION.

See "Extradition," § 4.

RESCISSION.

Of act of bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," § 89.
Cancellation of written instruments, see "Cancellation of Instruments."
Of charter party, see "Shipping," § 45.
Of compromise agreement, see "Compromise and Settlement," § 4.
Of contract in general, see "Contracts," §§ 27, 28.
Of contract, for sale of goods, see "Sales," §§ 11–18.
—— of land, see "Vendor and Purchaser," §§ 5–9.
Of insurance policy, see "Insurance," §§ 39–43.
Of license, see "Patents," § 158.

RESERVATIONS.

For grantor in assignment, see "Assignments for Benefit of Creditors," § 3.
Of public lands, see "Public Lands," §§ 36, 37.

RES GESTÆ.

In civil actions, see "Evidence," § 18.
In criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," § 53.

RESIDENCE.

See "Domicile."

RESIGNATION.

Of sheriff, see "Sheriffs and Constables," § 10.

RES JUDICATA.

See "Judgment," §§ 46–51, 65, 66.

RESPONDENTIA.

See "Shipping," §§ 105–127.

RESTITUTION.

Of property seized as prize of war, see "War," § 70.

RESTRAINT OF TRADE.

See "Contracts," § 11.

RESTRICTIONS.

In deeds, see "Deeds," § 13.
In wills, see "Wills," § 41.

RESULTING TRUSTS.

See "Trusts," § 2.

RETAINER.

Of attorney, see "Attorney and Client," § 2.

RETIRING PARTNERS.

See "Partnership," §§ 40–49.

RETROSPECTIVE LAWS.

See "Statutes," § 35.
Constitutional restrictions, see "Constitutional Law," § 10.

RETURN.

Of attachment, see "Attachments," § 16.
Of election, see "Elections," § 6.
Of execution, see "Execution," § 21.
Of process in general, see "Process," § 7.
Of service of notices in bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," §§ 145, 146.
—— of process, see "Equity," § 33; "Garnishment," § 3.
Of taxes, see "Internal Revenue," § 9.
Of writ of habeas corpus, see "Habeas Corpus," § 7.

REVENUE.

See "Customs Duties"; "Forfeitures"; "Internal Revenue"; "Taxation."
Jurisdiction of suits arising under revenue laws, see "Courts," § 32.
Removal of causes arising under revenue laws, see "Removal of Causes," § 8.

REVIEW.

See "Appeal and Error"; "Audita Querela"; "Certiorari."
Bill of review in equity, see "Equity," §§ 127–135.
In admiralty, see "Admiralty," §§ 100, 124.
In criminal cases, see "Criminal Law," §§ 112, 113; "Indictment and Information," § 2.

REVISION.

Of statutes, see "Statutes," § 12.

REVIVAL.

Of action, see "Abatement and Revival," § 6.
Of judgment, see "Judgment," §§ 71, 72.
Of statutes, see "Statutes," § 16.

REVOCATION.

Of agency, see "Principal and Agent," § 3.
Of pardon, see "Pardon," § 5.
Of submission to arbitration, see "Arbitration and Award," § 1.
Of will, see "Wills," § 12.

REVOLTS.

See "Seamen," §§ 175–177.

REWARDS.

§ 1. Right to reward.
To entitle a person to a reward agreed in writing to be paid for recovering certain property, which was subsequently returned by the police, he must show that it was recovered through information furnished by him.—Franklin v. Heiser, Case No. 5,054.

RIGHT OF WAY.

See "Easements"; "Railroads," § 20.

RIGHT, WRIT OF.

See "Real Actions," § 2.

RIOT.

§ 1, Nature and elements of offense. § 2, Defenses. § 3, Persons liable. § 4, Indictment. § 5, Evidence. § 6, Punishment.

Liability for property destroyed, see "Municipal Corporations," § 12.

§ 1. Nature and elements of offense.
To constitute a riot, three or more persons must assemble with intent, by force and violence, to do some unlawful act, and mutually to assist each other against any one who should oppose them in doing such act; and the act must be done in a violent and turbulent manner, to the terror of the people.—United States v. Peaco, Case No. 16,018.

An assemblage for the purpose of seizing a man without lawful authority, executed by tumultuously surrounding his house, and entering it, is a riot.—United States v. Fenwick, Case No. 15,086.

Three or more persons who act in concert, by prior arrangement, in a violent and turbulent manner, in opposing a public officer in the performance of his duty, held guilty of riot.—United States v. Stewart, Case No. 16,401a.

It is not necessary, in order to convict defendant of a riot, that the intended act of violence, or any act of violence, should have been perpetrated.—United States v. Fenwick, Case No. 15,086.

It is not necessary that the unlawful intent should have existed at the time of meeting. It is sufficient if it be afterwards formed; and the unlawful act is evidence of the intent.—United States v. McFarland, Case No. 15,674.

Premeditation and conspiracy, or promises of mutual assistance, are not necessary to constitute a riot.—United States v. Peaco, Case No. 16,018.

§ 2. Defenses.
A person convicted of assault and battery committed in a riot may still be tried and convicted of the riot.—United States v. Peaco, Case No. 16,018.

§ 3. Persons liable.
All concerned in an unlawful assembly are equally guilty of the subsequent acts done by any of them in furtherance of the common object.—United States v. Fenwick, Case No. 15,086.

A man may be convicted of a riot, who was not actively engaged therein, if he was present and ready to give support if necessary.—United States v. Peaco, Case No. 16,018.

Where a defendant has combined with others in an intent to do violence, it is not necessary, in order to convict him of a riot, that he should have been present during the riot.—United States v. Fenwick, Case No. 15,086.

§ 4. Indictment.
In the indictment, it is sufficient to state that defendants assembled to disturb the peace, and, being so assembled, did certain unlawful acts.—United States v. Fenwick, Case No. 15,086.

It is an indictable offense at common law to incite others to insurrection, tumult, and riot; and the indictment need not aver that insurrection, tumult, and riot were thereby excited.—United States v. Fenwick, Case No. 15,086.

§ 5. Evidence.
The previous intent and agreement to do the unlawful act may be inferred from the doing of the act accompanied by the declaration of an intent to do it.—United States v. Stockwell, Case No. 16,405.

Where defendant's witnesses testified that they were of the party concerned in the riot, they will not be allowed to give evidence of their intention.—United States v. Dunn, Case No. 15,007.

§ 6. Punishment.
Riots are punishable at common law notwithstanding the statute. Imprisonment is not a necessary part of the punishment at common law.—United States v. McFarlane, Case No. 15,675.

RIPARIAN RIGHTS.

See "Fish"; "Navigable Waters," § 18; "Waters and Water Courses," § 2.

RISKS OF EMPLOYMENT.

Assumed by employé, see "Master and Servant," § 6.

ROADS.

See "Highways."
Post roads, see "Post Office," § 9.
Streets in cities, see "Municipal Corporations," §§ 22, 25.

ROBBERY.

§ 1, Nature and elements of offense. § 2, Indictment. § 3, Evidence.

Jurisdiction of offense of robbery on vessels, see "Criminal Law," § 11.
Of mails, see "Post Office," § 17.
On high seas, see "Piracy."

§ 1. Nature and elements of offense.
Robbery is the felonious taking of goods from the person of another, or in his presence, by violence, or by putting him in fear, and against his will.—United States v. Jones, Case No. 15,494.

To constitute robbery, there must be fear or force.—United States v. Sims, Case No. 16,290.

§ 2. Indictment.
An indictment for forcibly taking bank notes from another must state whose property they were.—United States v. McNemara, Case No. 15,701.

§ 3. Evidence.
No road in Virginia is a highway, within the statute taking away benefit of clergy, unless it be a public road laid out according to law, no evidence of which can be received but the record.—United States v. King, Case No. 15,534.

ROYALTIES.

See "Patents," § 159.

RULES OF COURT.

See "Admiralty," § 38; "Courts," § 6; "Motions."

RULES OF NAVIGATION.

See "Collision."

S

SALES.

I. REQUISITES AND VALIDITY OF CONTRACT.

§ 1, Offers or orders and acceptance. § 2, Conditions. § 3, What constitutes sale. § 4, Fraud. § 5, Subject of sale. § 6, Future delivery or "options."

II. CONSTRUCTION OF CONTRACT.

§ 7, What law governs. § 8, Price. § 9, Subject-matter. § 10, Conditions.

III. MODIFICATION OR RESCISSION OF CONTRACT.

§ 11, By agreement of parties. § 12, Rescission of contract by seller—In general. § 13, —— Fraud. § 14, —— Insolvency or misrepresentations of purchaser. § 15, Rescission by buyer—Fraud. § 16, —— Breach of contract. § 17, —— Breach of warranty. § 18, —— Return of goods.

IV. PERFORMANCE OF CONTRACT.

§ 19, Title and possession of seller. § 20, Bills of sale—Recording. § 21, —— Construction and effect. § 22, Delivery and acceptance of goods—In general. § 23, —— Time of delivery. § 24, —— Mode of delivery. § 25, —— Place of delivery. § 26, —— Partial delivery and acceptance. § 27, —— Refusal to receive goods. § 28, Payment of price.

V. OPERATION AND EFFECT.

§ 29, When title passes—In general. § 30, —— On delivery. § 31, —— On delivery to carrier. § 32, —— On payment of price or execution of notes. § 33, Rights of buyer as to third persons. § 34, Bona fide purchasers.

VI. WARRANTIES.

§ 35, In general. § 36, Implied warranty. § 37, Waiver of breach. § 38, Release from warranty.

VII. REMEDIES OF SELLER.

§ 39, Stoppage in transitu. § 40, Lien. § § 41, Recovery of goods delivered. § 42, Action for price or value—When action lies. § 43, —— Defences. § 44, —— Pleading. § 45, —— Amount of recovery. § 46, Action for damages.

VIII. REMEDIES OF BUYER.

§ 47, Recovery of price. § 48, Action for breach of contract—When action lies. § 49, —— Evidence. § 50, —— Damages. § 51, Actions for breach of warranty.

IX. CONDITIONAL SALES.

§ 52, Rights and liabilities of parties inter se. § 53, Validity of condition as against third persons. § 54, Recording contract.

See, also, "Vendor and Purchaser."
In admiralty, see "Salvage," § 70.
On execution, see "Execution," §§ 14–19.
On foreclosure of mortgage, see "Mortgages," §§ 18–27, 39–41; "Railroads," §§ 50, 51.
On order or judgment of court, see "Judicial Sales."
Parol evidence, see "Evidence," § 66.
Requirements of statute of frauds, see "Frauds, Statute of," § 3.
Tax sales, see "Taxation," § 13.

By particular persons.

Agent, see "Principal and Agent."
Assignee in bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," §§ 159, 296–309, 533.
Auctioneer, see "Auctions and Auctioneers."
Bailee, see "Bailment," § 2.
Executor or administrator, see "Executors and Administrators," §§ 21–27.
Factors, see "Factors," §§ 7–10.
Guardian, see "Guardian and Ward," §§ 5–7.
Partner, see "Partnership," § 24.

Of particular property.

Bankrupt's property, see "Bankruptcy," §§ 159, 296–302.
Bank stock, see "Banks and Banking," §§ 4, 15.
Cargo, see "Shipping," §§ 80–82, 190.
Copyrighted works, see "Copyrights," § 21.
Decedent's estate, see "Executors and Administrators," §§ 37–39.
Exempt property, see "Bankruptcy," § 533.
Forfeited property, see "Internal Revenue," § 88.
Goods for duties, see "Customs Duties," § 61.
Insolvent's estate, see "Insolvency," § 9.
Intoxicating liquors, see "Intoxicating Liquors."
Patented articles, see "Patents," §§ 160–163.
Patent rights, see "Patents," §§ 142–149, 160–163.
Property seized as prize, see "War," § 57.
Public lands, see "Public Lands," §§ 18–25.
Railroads, see "Railroads," § 25.
Trust property, see "Trusts," § 20.
Vessel, see "Shipping," §§ 29–35, 78, 79.
Wrecks, see "Shipping," § 257.

I. REQUISITES AND VALIDITY OF CONTRACT.

§ 1. Offers or orders and acceptance.

Sending a circular naming "present price" of an article is an offer to sell, and its acceptance by ordering a reasonable amount completes a contract.—Hall v. Kimbark, Case No. 5,938.

One to whom sugars were shipped without orders is entitled to a few days, after learning of the shipment, to deliberate whether to receive them on his own account or to reject them.—Kingston v. Kincaid, Case No. 7,822.

Where the market in certain goods is subject to sudden and great fluctuations, an acceptance of a proposition by telegraph, after a delay of 24 hours, is not within a reasonable time.—Minnesota Linseed Oil Co. v. Collier White Lead Co., Case No. 9,635.

§ 2. Conditions.

A contract to buy, made by a broker, on condition that the seller should get information as to the purchaser's financial standing, and, if unsatisfactory, accept security, is enforceable by the purchaser.—Atkinson v. Hubbard, Case No. 612.

§ 3. What constitutes sale.

An agreement whereby A. was to furnish goods to B. at schedule prices, B. to settle every three months for all goods sold or shipped from his warehouse, at the stipulated prices, and for all goods remaining on hand at the end of the year, creates the relation of buyer and seller.—In re Linforth, Case No. 8,369.

The title does not pass where a person receives goods to be paid for at the invoice price when sold by him, with the right to return those unsold at their invoice price.—Merrill v. Rinker, Case No. 9,471.

Where a chain cable is loaned a vessel until another can be manufactured for her, and she fails to return it as agreed, and sails with both cables, she is liable for the price of both.—Sarchet v. The General Isaac Davis, Case No. 12,357.

§ 4. Fraud.
The purchaser is not bound to answer the seller's inquiries respecting the state of the market.—Blydenburgh v. Welsh, Case No. 1,583.

A sale obtained by false representations is affirmed by an action for the purchase price, brought after knowledge of the fraud.—Dibblee v. Sheldon, Case No. 3,889.

A sale of flour branded "Gallego," described as "Haxall," is not void.—Bertram v. Lyon, Case No. 1,362.

See, also, post, §§ 13, 15.

§ 5. Subject of sale.
A contract to deliver goods not in existence at the time is not a sale.—Low v. Andrews, Case No. 8,559.

A sale of a thing not in existence is void.—Bertram v. Lyon, Case No. 1,362.

A valid sale may be made of personal property which is out of possession of the party.—The Sarah Ann, Case No. 12,342.

A bona fide sale by a factor of the goods of his principal for a valuable consideration by assigning over the bill of lading is valid against the principal if the bill of lading has been received by the factor.—Walter v. Ross, Case No. 17,122.

§ 6. Future delivery or "options."
A contract to deliver flour on or before a certain day is not void because the seller has not the flour on hand at the time of the contract.—Dodge v. Van Lear, Case No. 3,956.

A contract for the future delivery of goods which seller does not own, and has no means of obtaining, is not void for illegality.—Clarke v. Foss, Case No. 2,852.

A sale for future delivery is not invalid, as a gaming contract, unless the intention that there should not be actual performance was mutual.—Clarke v. Foss, Case No. 2,852.

A valid contract of sale for future delivery is not rendered illegal by a subsequent settlement by payment of difference. — Clarke v. Foss, Case No. 2,852; Gilbert v. Gaugar, Id. 5,412.

A contract of sale which does not contemplate an actual bona fide delivery, but is to be settled by payment of difference in market price at future time, is void as a gambling contract.—In re Green, Case No. 5,751.

A contract for the purchase or sale of cotton for future delivery is valid unless it be affirmatively shown that neither party intended a delivery, and that the contract should be performed by the payment of differences.—Lehman v. Strassberger, Case No. 8,216.

A contract for the sale and delivery of grain, which the party did not have and did not intend to have, is nevertheless valid, and the purchaser cannot show that the parties intended that the "difference" should be settled in cash.—Porter v. Viets, Case No. 11,291.

Rev. St. Ill. c. 38, § 130, does not prohibit sales of grain or other commodities for future delivery, where the seller reserves to himself a simple option as to the time of delivery within certain limits.—Gilbert v. Gaugar, Case No. 5,412.

II. CONSTRUCTION OF CONTRACT.

§ 7. What law governs.
The merchantable quality of goods sold is to be determined by the law of the place of delivery.—Ladd v. Dulany, Case No. 7,971.

The transfer of personal chattels is governed by the law of the owner's domicile if the contract of transfer was made there, though the chattels may be, at the time, in another state, by the laws of which the transfer would be void.—Wickham v. Dillon, Case No. 17,612.

A mere sale in one state, made with knowledge that the purchaser intended to use the property to violate some positive law of another state, can be the foundation of an action in the state whose law was intended to be violated.—Sortwell v. Hughes, Case No. 13,177.

A statute inflicting a penalty on a sale does not apply to mere executory contracts, especially where they are declared void by another statute.—Sortwell v. Hughes, Case No. 13,177.

§ 8. Price.
A payment in goods at "factory prices" means the prices at which such goods are sold at factories.—Whipple v. Levett, Case No. 17,518.

On the receipt of goods ordered from abroad, where no price was stipulated, the purchasers are only liable for their value at the time and place of shipment, irrespective of the invoice price.—Fenton v. Braden, Case No. 4,730.

An order, "Please ship me at once 25 bbls. same whisky I had before," is an order for a cash sale.—Maddux v. Usher, Case No. 8,936.

§ 9. Subject-matter.
Construction of a contract in relation to the sale of books.—Gray v. Harper, Case No. 5,716.

Construction of contract for sale of stock in a cotton compress manufacturing company and certain presses, where payments were to be made in installments. — Wheeler v. Helmbold, Case No. 17,496.

A contract for material in "tons," held to call for 2,240 pounds, though the state has attempted to fix a ton at 2,000.—The Miantinomi, Case No. 9,521.

The master of a vessel, to whom its cargo of wood is offered at a certain price per cord "for the quantity shipped," is justified, in accepting the same, as meaning the quantity actually shipped, and not that as per bill of lading, though the owner intended the latter.—Winterport Granite & Brick Co. v. The Jasper, Case No. 17,898.

§ 10. Conditions.
The condition "provided it is not sold" applies to the present status of the article.—Blydenburgh v. Welsh, Case No. 1,583.

III. MODIFICATION OR RESCISSION OF CONTRACT.

§ 11. By agreement of parties.
Where the buyer does not accept a modification of terms of payment proposed by the seller after delivering the goods, the original terms remain in full force.—Bauendahl v. Horr, Case No. 1,113.

§ 12. Rescission of contract by seller—In general.
A contract by the consignee of cargo for the sale thereof may be rescinded where the purchaser refuses to receive the cargo and make payment, except upon conditions which he has no right to prescribe.—The Treasurer, Case No. 14,159.

§ 13. —— Fraud.

It seems that, by the law of Massachusetts, a purchase of goods with an intent not to pay for them is voidable by the seller, and so is a sale made upon the faith of any willful misrepresentation.—Parker v. Byrnes, Case No. 10,728.

See, also, ante, § 4.

§ 14. —— Insolvency or misrepresentations of purchaser.

A sale cannot be avoided on the ground that the buyer knew himself to be insolvent, and had no reasonable expectation of being able to pay.—Biggs v. Barry, Case No. 1,402.

Material misrepresentations as to credit made by the purchaser, and relied upon by the seller, are ground of rescission.—Johnson v. Peck, Case No. 7,404.

On rescission by the seller, the articles sold may be recovered back from one to whom they have been mortgaged to secure an existing debt, but not from a third person to whom the title has passed for a new consideration.—Johnson v. Peck, Case No. 7,404.

§ 15. Rescission by buyer—Fraud.

Where teas were sold to be selected by A., and were changed after selection, the buyer can rescind, and refuse to accept them.—Cheongwo v. Jones, Case No. 2,638.

If, at the time of the sale of a horse, the animal is subject to a disease known to the seller, which he conceals, and which was not discoverable by the buyer with ordinary vigilance, the sale is fraudulent.—Pease v. McClelland, Case No. 10,882.

Fraud or misrepresentation cannot be taken advantage of by a purchaser from the original buyer, unless they were practiced on him also by the original seller; and, if so, the latter must be sued alone for what he alone did wrongfully.—Simpson v. Wiggin, Case No. 12,887.

Exaggerated representations as to price or value are not as strong evidence of fraud as untrue statements as to title or other material facts exclusively within the seller's knowledge.—Simpson v. Wiggin, Case No. 12,887.

Where a seller of tobacco in kegs opened some kegs for inspection, and offered to open more, but the quality turned out worse than either party supposed, he is not liable for fraud, nor is there any ground for rescission.—Simpson v. Wiggin, Case No. 12,887.

If the purchaser discovers that the articles are of less value than he supposed, and wishes to proceed in equity, he should offer to return them. He cannot sell them at auction, and then proceed in equity for damages alone.—Simpson v. Wiggin, Case No. 12,887.

If one in great need of money purchase an article on long credit for more than its market value, in order to resell and raise the needed money, such sale is not void for oppression, and probably not for usury, if nothing material was concealed.—Simpson v. Wiggin, Case No. 12,887.

See, also, ante, § 4.

§ 16. —— Breach of contract.

A sale of corporate stock to an alleged agent, and the receipt of a draft on the alleged purchaser for the purchase money, is a sale for cash, and a refusal of the latter to pay the draft nullifies the transaction.—McComb v. Credit Mobilier, Case No. 8,709.

§ 17. —— Breach of warranty.

One who purchases looking glass, advertised as superior quality, after a full examination, cannot claim to be relieved from the bargain because it is in fact of inferior quality.—Calhoun v. Vechio, Case No. 2,310.

See, also, post, §§ 35–38.

§ 18. —— Return of goods.

To rescind a sale, the property must be returned if possible.—Christy v. Cummins, Case No. 2,708; Henckley v. Hendrickson, Id. 6,348; Miller v. Smith, Id. 9,590.

IV. PERFORMANCE OF CONTRACT.

§ 19. Title and possession of seller.

Property distrained for rent may be transferred by the tenant to his creditors, subject to the lien for the rent.—Leonard v. Neale, Case No. 8,259.

Property levied upon by attachment or execution is subject to sale by defendant.—Starr v. Moore, Case No. 13,315.

Actual possession is not necessary to a transfer of personal property, nor is the want of it even an indicium of fraud, where from the circumstances, as in the case of goods at sea, it cannot be obtained.—United States v. Delaware Ins. Co., Case No. 14,942.

It is no objection to the vesting of the right of property in the consignee for value, or whose debt it is to secure, that the goods are, by agreement, to be at the risk and for account of the consignor.—United States v. Delaware Ins. Co., Case No. 14,942.

§ 20. Bills of sale—Recording.

A deed of personal property, not acknowledged and recorded according to Act Md. 1729, c. 8, is valid between the parties and their privies, though not accompanied by possession.—Prather v. Burgess, Case No. 11,367.

An absolute bill of sale of personal property, unaccompanied by possession, is void, at common law, as to subsequent purchasers without notice, although acknowledged and recorded agreeably to Act Md. 1729, c. 8, §§ 5, 6.—Hamilton v. Franklin, Case No. 5,981.

§ 21. —— Construction and effect.

A bill of sale of personal property is valid between the parties to transfer the legal title, although the possession and the beneficial interest remain with the vendor.—Washington v. Wilson, Case No. 17,240.

A clause in a bill of goods respecting deficiencies is inoperative where the contract is previously complete.—Allen v. Schuchardt, Case No. 236.

A bill of parcels, receipted by defendant, is not per se evidence of an unexecuted contract to deliver the goods, but is prima facie evidence of a contract executed.—Richardson v. Peyton, Case No. 11,794.

A joint bill of parcels is not conclusive evidence of joint property in goods sold.—Johnson v. Harris, Case No. 7,388.

§ 22. Delivery and acceptance of goods—In general.

The purchaser of goods sold while at sea acquires, without actual possession, a constructive possession, sufficient to maintain trespass against any wrongdoer.—Howland v. Harris, Case No. 6,794.

If the seller states under seal that he has bargained, sold, and delivered the property to the purchaser, he is estopped to deny the delivery, and the instrument is evidence of property in the purchaser.—Nevett v. Berry, Case No. 10,135.

Where property is in the possession of a person as agent at the time he accepts an offer of sale to him, no formal delivery is necessary to pass the title.—Winterport Granite & Brick Co. v. The Jasper, Case No. 17,898.

That goods sold on credit were allowed to remain in the seller's warehouse, at option of purchaser, does not prevent the delivery being complete, a note being given for the price. —Barrett v. Goddard, Case No. 1,046.

Under a contract to pay for goods as delivered, and to have an agent at the destination to receive the goods from the carrier, the risk of transportation is on the seller.—Thompson v. Cincinnati, W. & Z. R. Co., Case No. 13,950.

§ 23. —— Time of delivery.
Goods are deliverable in a reasonable time if no time for delivery is fixed, and the contract is broken by refusal to deliver on demand when no objection is made to the time. —Blydenburgh v. Welsh, Case No. 1,583.

If a contract be absolute to deliver flour on or before a particular day, the seller will not be excused by an obstruction of navigation.—Dodge v. Van Lear, Case No. 3,956.

§ 24. —— Mode of delivery.
The indorsement and delivery by the consignee of goods en route of a bill of lading to purchasers at a certain price per ton, and its acceptance by them, is a sufficient delivery to pass title.—Audenried v. Randall, Case No. 644; Balderston v. Manro, Id. 793.

A usage in the grain trade in a certain locality to deliver barley in sacks may be shown, when nothing is said in the contract as to the mode of delivery.—United States v. Robinson, Case No. 16,177.

§ 25. —— Place of delivery.
The place of delivery of wheat purchased by a commission merchant for his principal will be presumed to be the place where the commission merchant does business.—Rice v. Montgomery, Case No. 11,753.

The omission to designate the place of delivery between the points stipulated will not prevent the other party from making delivery at any convenient point he may select between the points stipulated, in discharge of his contract to deliver.—Hartfield v. Patton, Case No. 6,158a.

§ 26. —— Partial delivery and acceptance.
A contract to deliver a certain quantity at such times as may be required by the purchaser may be waived by acceptance of a less amount than that named in the notice, and giving notice to furnish at subsequent periods.—McNaughter v. Cassally, Case No. 8,911.

§ 27. —— Refusal to receive goods.
A refusal to take goods purchased dispenses with the necessity of a tender.—Calhoun v. Vechio, Case No. 2,310.

Where the party refused to accept at subsequent periods, in accordance with his notice to deliver, the previous nonperformance by the other party is no defense.—McNaughter v. Cassally, Case No. 8,911.

After refusal to receive one load of a certain quantity to be delivered, tender of the balance, if ready for delivery, is not necessary to charge the other party.—McNaughter v. Cassally, Case No. 8,911.

§ 28. Payment of price.
When there is no unfairness, the price agreed upon, though extravagant, must be paid.—Henckley v. Hendrickson, Case No. 6,348.

Where acceptance was refused because a delivery is accompanied by a demand for a greater price than agreed, the party is not bound to pay anything.—Detroit Stove Works v. Perry, Case No. 3,835.

Delay incident to the badness of the roads is within the agreement to transmit money through express in payment of the price of goods sold.—Halsey v. Hurd, Case No. 5,967.

V. OPERATION AND EFFECT.

§ 29. When title passes—In general.
The question whether the title has passed depends upon whether anything remains to be done by the seller.—Gates v. Winooski Lumber Co., Case No. 5,270.

The property does not pass unless there be a certain price agreed upon, and a delivery of possession.—Harper v. Dougherty, Case No. 6,087.

The mailing to a purchaser of a warehouse receipt for grain in a distant warehouse, though not separated from the general mass of grain therein, passes title.—Brooke v. Scoggins, Case No. 1,936.

Delivery of possession to the purchaser of a moiety of a vessel when in possession of the other part owner is not, in general, indispensable to pass the property.—Winsor v. McLellan, Case No. 17,887.

As between the mortgagor and mortgagee, notice to the part owner in possession is not necessary.—Winsor v. McLellan, Case No. 17,887.

§ 30. —— On delivery.
The title does not pass on delivery where the purchaser has agreed that the goods shall remain the property of the seller until payment of purchase price.—Gaylor v. Dyer, Case No. 5,283.

A delivery after the failure of the purchaser of goods purchased before, procured by a fraudulent suppression of the fact, is ineffectual to transfer the title.—D'Wolf v. Babbett, Case No. 4,220.

The title to machines ordered and received by persons who had the exclusive right to sell such machines in the state, with the understanding that they were to pay for them if sold within the year, and, if not, that they were "to take them for the next season," where the transaction appeared upon the invoices of the manufacturer and the books of the consignees as a sale, passes to the consignees upon delivery.—Wood M. & R. Co. v. Brooke, Case No. 17,980.

§ 31. —— On delivery to carrier.
Under a contract to deliver goods, putting them on board a vessel and transmitting bills of lading vests the property in the consignee, though the bill of lading does not arrive.—Low v. Andrews, Case No. 8,559.

A shipment will remain on the account and risk of the shipper, unless there be an express or implied authority to change the proprietary interest, and put the shipment at the risk of the consignees.—The San Jose Indiano, Case No. 12,324.

A shipment made by a merchant, who purchased goods for another consigned to his own agent, with the right to hold them until arrangements are made with the correspondent, does not devest the title or possession of the shipper.—The San Jose Indiano, Case No. 12,322.

If a shipper have general discretionary orders to ship goods, the shipment will remain at his own risk until he appropriates the shipment to his correspondent.—The Francis, Case No. 5,036.

A shipment made without or contrary to orders still remains at the risk of the shipper.—The Francis, Case No. 5,036.

Where the seller of merchandise delivers it to the wrong vessel, which sails before the mistake is discovered, and he subsequently delivers similar merchandise to the right vessel in fulfillment of the contract, the title to the first lot continues in him.—Wilson v. The Truxillo, Case No. 17,841.

A. having made a contract for the sale of a certain amount of wheat, and for its delivery on ship board, entered into a contract with B. to purchase and supply such wheat on joint account, and B. subsequently purchased the wheat, and delivered it for shipment in fulfillment of A.'s contract. Held, that the title passed on such delivery, and, where A. subsequently exercised the right of stoppage in transitu, he did so for his own benefit, and not for B.'s benefit.—In re Comstock, Case No. 3,079.

§ 32. —— On payment of price or execution of notes.

Where goods are to be paid for on delivery, the title does not pass where they are taken to the place of delivery and laid down, a note being offered in payment.—Wilmarth v. Mountford, Case No. 17,774.

On a sale of goods for cash or satisfactory paper, delivered upon condition that the contract should be complied with, title does not pass until performance by the purchaser.—Copland v. Bosquet, Case No. 3,212.

A delivery on board the purchaser's vessel, on condition of compliance with the terms of the contract that indorsed paper shall be given to secure the purchase price, does not pass the title.—D'Wolf v. Babbett, Case No. 4,220.

A contract for the conditional delivery of goods to a debtor gives his creditors no title to them until the account for the same is paid.—Sawyer v. Turpin, Case No. 12,410.

Where the seller sent an invoice for goods ordered, and a draft for the amount, with a request to accept and return it, the sale was conditional, and title did not pass until the condition was complied with.—Maddux v. Usher, Case No. 8,936.

The seller may replevy such goods from a marshal who has levied upon them as the property of the purchaser.—Maddux v. Usher, Case No. 8,936.

§ 33. Rights of buyer as to third persons.

A sale of a chattel is void as to creditors unless the possession accompanies and follows the bill of sale.—Moore v. Ringgold, Case No. 9,773.

The manufacturers received pay for an engine on the false representation that it had been finished and delivered for transportation. Held, where they subsequently built the engine, and marked it with the customer's name, that he was entitled to it, by estoppel, as against their assignee in bankruptcy.—In re Rockford, R. I. & St. L. R. Co., Case No. 11,978.

Notice of a lien or incumbrance binds the purchaser if received before payment of the purchase money.—Merrill v. Dawson, Case No. 9,469.

§ 34. Bona fide purchasers.

To constitute a bona fide purchaser for value, he must have been without notice, and have paid a consideration at the time of the transfer, either in money or in other property, or by a surrender of existing debts or securities.—Rison v. Knapp, Case No. 11,861.

A bona fide purchaser without notice can convey an equally good title to any purchaser.—The D. M. French, Case No. 3,938.

A person who purchases property with notice of the wrongful possession of his vendor holds it subject to all remedies that could be enforced against it in the hands of such vendor.—Rateau v. Bernard, Case No. 11,579.

Purchasers or pledgees of stock are not bound to look beyond the certificate to ascertain the validity of the transfer.—Lowry v. Commercial & Farmers' Bank, Case No. 8,581.

Where the existence of a mortgage is known and talked about in the neighborhood, and publicly proclaimed at execution sale, the purchaser is held to notice thereof.—Merrill v. Dawson, Case No. 9,469.

VI. WARRANTIES.

See, also, ante, § 17.
Action for breach, see post, § 51.

§ 35. In general.

In a contract for the sale of articles without warranty, if there be no fraud on the part of the seller, he is not answerable for the quality of the articles.—Willings v. Consequa, Case No. 17,767; Consequa v. Willings, Id.

A representation made in the course of a negotiation does not amount to a warranty, where not contained in the contract, as afterwards reduced to writing.—Randall v. Rhodes, Case No. 11,556.

Letters written before the making of the contract, and not referred to therein, are inadmissible to prove a warranty, where the contract is complete in itself.—Randall v. Rhodes, Case No. 11,556.

Description in sale note of flour as "Haxall" amounts to warranty.—Bertram v. Lyon, Case No. 1,362.

The purchaser cannot claim damages upon a warranty or an advertisement where he purchases after an examination.—McVeigh v. Messersmith, Case No. 8,931.

§ 36. Implied warranty.

Where goods are sold by sample, there is an implied warranty that the articles shall correspond with the samples.—Willings v. Consequa, Case No. 17,767; Consequa v. Willings, Id.

On a sale by sample exhibited in a sealed bottle, there is implied warranty that the goods correspond with its apparent qualities.—Allen v. Schuchardt, Case No. 236.

A usage of the wool trade to imply a warranty that the bale of wool is not falsely packed is valid and controlling.—Kellogg v. Barnard, Case No. 7,661.

On the sale of a machine ordered for a particular purpose, a warranty is implied that the machine is fit for such purpose, unless the seller, by express contract, relieves himself of responsibility.—Moore v. The Charles Morgan, Case No. 9,754.

There can be no implied warranty of the quality of goods which for some time before the sale have been, and at the time of the sale are, in the custody of the purchaser.—Dooley v. Gallagher, Case No. 3,996.

§ 37. Waiver of breach.

On a contract to deliver teas, to be selected by A., if A. accepts an inferior quality there is an end to the warranty.—Cheongwo v. Jones, Case No. 2,638.

Where there is a warranty, the examination and approval of part of the articles which are delivered is not a waiver of the contract as to the others.—Willings v. Consequa, Case No. 17,767; Consequa v. Willings, Id.

Payment of freight on and receipt of goods sold by sample, where the purchaser had no previous opportunity to examine them, will not estop him from refusing to accept the goods for failure to comply with the warranty, and he may recover back the freight and money paid.—Conrad v. Dater, Case No. 3,127.

§ 38. Release from warranty.

The performance of a contract to deliver teas of the first quality is not excused by the fact that no such teas can be obtained in the market. —Youqua v. Nixon, Case No. 18,189.

It is no excuse for the nonperformance of a contract to deliver "prime" "first chop" teas that the season of the year when the teas were to have been delivered was unfavorable to the best teas being at market.—Gilpins v. Consequa, Case No. 5,452.

A subsequent agreement to diminish the quantity and the price of certain goods contracted to be delivered does not excuse the contractor for a violation of the contract as to quality.—Youqua v. Nixon, Case No. 18,189.

VII. REMEDIES OF SELLER.

§ 39. Stoppage in transitu.
The right of stoppage in transitu exists in favor of the seller of imported goods "to arrive," entered in his name, and stored in a bonded warehouse.—In re Bearns, Case No. 1,191.

A seller of imported goods on long credit who takes notes for the price, delivering the shipping papers to the buyer, who warehouses them in his own name, has no right of stoppage.—Parker v. Byrnes, Case No. 10,728.

The right of stoppage in transitu ceases on a sale by the purchaser to a third person.—Schmidt v. The Pennsylvania, Case No. 12,464.

Where such buyer sells to another, giving an order on the warehouseman which is duly accepted by him, he has no lien or right over them.—Parker v. Byrnes, Case No. 10,728.

The doctrine as to stoppage in transitu does not apply where the actual or constructive possession remains in the shipper or his exclusive agents.—The San Jose Indiano, Case No. 12,322.

The right of the seller, in cases of insolvency, to stop goods for nonpayment of the purchase money, is confined to cases where the goods are still in transit to the vendee.—Conyers v. Ennis, Case No. 3,149.

Goods consigned to the purchaser after his death cannot be reclaimed by the seller after they have been received by his administrator, on the ground of insolvency at the time of the sale, in the absence of fraud.—Conyers v. Ennis, Case No. 3,149.

The seller has the right of stoppage in transitu as to goods sold for cash to be paid for on receipt of the invoice, where they were warehoused by the master of the canal boat on which they were loaded, on its being stopped by ice.—In re Foot, Case No. 4,907.

Goods cannot be stopped by the seller after reaching a forwarding merchant in whose hands they are to await instructions of the buyer as to further transit.—Biggs v. Barry, Case No. 1,402.

The possession of goods by customs officers prior to entry will not defeat the right of stoppage in transitu.—Burnham v. Winsor, Case No. 2,180.

Part payment and acceptance of a draft for the balance, and the fact that the consignees were part owners of the vessel, and the ship's husband, will not defeat the right of stoppage in transitu.—Burnham v. Winsor, Case No. 2,180.

The right of stoppage in transit does not affect the right of property in the purchaser.—Blum v. The Caddo, Case No. 1,573.

Consignees making advances on the goods have a paramount lien therefor, and the consignor has no right to divert them, or stop them in transitu.—Burritt v. Rench, Case No. 2,201.

§ 40. Lien.
The seller has no lien, as such, where he delivers possession to the purchaser and takes a chattel mortgage from him.—In re Leland, Case No. 8,234.

Where goods were deposited in a warehouse in the name of one to whom they were afterwards sold, no further delivery is necessary, and the seller's lien is lost.—In re Batchelder, Case No. 1,099.

Otherwise where goods deposited in the name of another were sold to a third person, and no notice given of that fact.—In re Batchelder, Case No. 1,099.

§ 41. Recovery of goods delivered.
The seller of goods delivered, where the sale was not complete because payment was not made as agreed, may maintain replevin under the Connecticut statute.—Bauendahl v. Horr, Case No. 1,113.

It is not necessary to the seller's right of reclamation, where the conditions of the sale were not performed, that he should return the buyer's promissory note, which was not accepted in payment.—Bauendahl v. Horr, Case No. 1,113.

§ 42. Action for price or value — When action lies.
Where the purchaser of a horse gave in payment an order on a third person, payable at a future day, and subsequently countermanded it, and acceptance was refused, an action will not lie for the price before the time when the order is payable.—Magher v. Johnston, Case No. 8,954.

The seller may sue before expiration of the credit where goods were procured by false representations, and sold in fraud of creditors.—Barrett v. Koella, Case No. 1,048.

The presumption is that the goods were sold for cash, or that notes taken were negotiable.—Barrett v. Koella, Case No. 1,048.

Where bank notes are taken in payment of goods sold with the understanding that they are to be returned if not current, the seller cannot sue for the price without returning the notes unless it appear that the buyer knew the notes were worthless when he made the bargain.—Wilkinson v. Williams, Case No. 17,677a.

A seller who accepts a note or bill in satisfaction of the debt cannot sue on the original cause of action, if there was no fraud or unfairness in the transaction.—Parker v. United States, Case No. 10,750.

A seller who takes negotiable paper from the buyer, without any agreement that it shall be received in payment, may sue on the original cause of action if he is in a position to return the paper.—Parker v. United States, Case No. 10,750.

In assumpsit on a draft drawn by an agent whose authority to draw it is denied, plaintiff may abandon the counts on the draft, and recover the value of the goods on the counts for goods sold and delivered.—Slocomb v. Lurty, Case No. 12,949.

§ 43. —— Defenses.
It is no defense to an action for the price of goods sold that the vendor knew that they were purchased to be sold in another jurisdiction, in violation of its law, unless he did or agreed to do some act in furtherance of the illegal intention.—Green v. Collins, Case No. 5,755.

In an action for the purchase price, defendant need not show an offer to return the property, where he proves fraud in the sale.—Cushwa v. Forrest, Case No. 3,517.

In an action for goods sold, defendant may give in evidence, in mitigation of damages, that the goods were of a quality inferior to what they were represented to be at the sale.—Miller v. Smith, Case No. 9,590.

§ 44. —— Pleading.
A declaration on a promise to pay on the delivery of goods to C. is not supported by proof of a promise to pay if C. did not.—Trask v. Duval, Case No. 14,143.

§ 45. —— Amount of recovery.
Where notes given for the purchase price of property are misdescribed in the declaration, plaintiff may recover on the general counts, but in such case the recovery is limited to the market value.—Henckley v. Hendrickson, Case No. 6,348.

On a dispute whether the price—$3.25—on the sale of shingles was for a bunch or for a thousand, held that, unless both parties had understandingly assented to one of those views, there was no special contract as to the price.—Greene v. Bateman, Case No. 5,762.

The purchaser, having sold the shingles after the seller refused to accept his understanding or their return, is liable for the amount for which he sold them, after deducting fair compensation for his services.—Greene v. Bateman, Case No. 5,762.

In an action on a note for the price of goods, where defendant sets up damages for a breach of contract, the same should be allowed as at the date of the verdict, and not at the date of delivery of the goods, so as to carry interest.—Youqua v. Nixon, Case No. 18,190.

§ 46. Action for damages.
Sales of goods at auction are not conclusive evidence of the value of goods in an action for damages for breach of contract.—Willings v. Consequa, Case No. 17,766; Consequa v. Willings, Id.

VIII. REMEDIES OF BUYER.

§ 47. Recovery of price.
The purchaser of property sold without title cannot recover the purchase money, in assumpsit, without proof of a return, or offer of return, of the property, nor where there was a bill of sale under seal, with an express warranty of title.—Gunnel v. Dade, Case No. 5,869.

Where the contract is terminated solely on account of the default of the purchaser, an action will not lie by him to recover back an advance payment.—Kane v. Jenkinson, Case No. 7,607.

Upon a sale of stock, paying par value, with the addition of a certain sum, to cover an anticipated dividend, held, that the purchaser might recover back such addition, where the dividend was not earned or declared.—Riggs v. Tayloe, Case No. 11,832.

§ 48. Action for breach of contract—When action lies.
Where the seller notifies the buyer that he regards the contract as rescinded, and will make no more deliveries under it, the purchaser may treat the contract as wholly broken, and at once recover damages upon the entire contract, without demand.—United States v. Robinson, Case No. 16,177.

A customer ordering goods of a manufacturer, knowing the latter's usage in respect to filling orders in turn, as received, cannot maintain suit for breach of contract, unless he establishes some right superior to that arising under the usage.—New England Screw Co. v. Bliven, Case No. 10,157.

§ 49. —— Evidence.
Under a contract to deliver within the state pork well put up for a foreign market, the purchaser may show the condition of the article en route to the foreign port, to enable the jury to judge whether it was well put up at the place of delivery.—Lawrence v. White, Case No. 8,147.

§ 50. —— Damages.
The measure of damages for failure to deliver an article sold is its value on the day the cause of action accrued.—McAllister v. Douglas, Case No. 8,657.

The rule of damages for breach of the contract is the market price at the time that the goods were deliverable, though defendant's refusal was made with a view to profit.—Blydenburgh v. Welsh, Case No. 1,583.

Where no price is fixed, the jury may give any rate appearing by the evidence.—Blydenburgh v. Welsh, Case No. 1,583.

The measure of damages for a failure to transfer corporate stock according to contract is the price of the stock on the day when it ought to have been transferred.—Tayloe v. Turner, Case No. 13,770.

The rule of damages for the nonfulfillment of a contract for the delivery of property is the difference between the price at which it was agreed it should be delivered and its actual market value at the time and place of delivery specified in the contract.—White v. Arleth, Case No. 17,536; McNaughter v. Cassally, Id. 8,911; Barnard v. Conger, Id. 1,001.

Measure of damages for breach of contract to deliver goods at Boston for shipment to a foreign market is the difference between the contract and the market price at Boston.—Ex parte Becker, Case No. 1,207.

The purchaser may claim as damages the difference between the contract price at the time delivery was to be made and the current price of the article at the actual time of delivery.—Halsey v. Hurd, Case No. 5,967.

The measure of damages for the failure to ship goods as agreed held to be their value at the place of shipment at the time of refusal under the contract.—Rabaud v. D'Wolf, Case No. 11,519.

The measure of damages for breach of a contract to deliver goods free on board at Boston, and procure freight to Antwerp, is the difference between the contract price and the market value in Boston at the time of the breach.—Sievers v. North, Case No. 12,847.

In case of loss in transit, the rule of damages is the difference between the contract price and the market value at the time and place of the delivery.—Thompson v. Cincinnati, W. & Z. R. Co., Case No. 13,950.

The damages sustained for unsoundness in pork, due to the manner in which it was put up, are ascertained by comparing the sales of the unsound article with the market price of the good article at the place where it was sold.—Forman v. Miller, Case No. 4,940.

The market price of oats after the bankruptcy of a broker who agreed to buy and hold them on a margin cannot be considered in estimating damages for breach of the contract.—Lehmer v. Smith, Case No. 8,217.

Damages for nonpayment of money or nondelivery of obligations for money is the amount due, with interest. Collateral damages are not given.—Memphis v. Brown, Case No. 9,415.

Damages for a breach of contract for the delivery of goods do not bear interest.—Youqua v. Nixon, Case No. 18,189.

§ 51. Actions for breach of warranty.
Assumpsit in the nature of an action of deceit will lie for false representation as to soundness, though there is a bill of sale under seal warranting title.—Grant v. Bontz, Case No. 5,694.

The sale of imported goods of the quality contracted for compared with sales of the goods as delivered furnishes the rate, but not the amount of loss.—Gilpins v. Consequa, Case No. 5,452.

No damages are to be allowed for any profit or gain the plaintiff might have obtained by exchange or otherwise.—Gilpins v. Consequa, Case No. 5,452.

The examination by supercargoes of goods purchased, and their expression of satisfaction to the purchaser, is not conclusive of quality if in fact the goods were not as represented.—Gilpins v. Consequa, Case No. 5,452.

IX. CONDITIONAL SALES.

§ 52. Rights and liabilities of parties inter se.

Where, by the contract, title is not to pass until the price is paid, the title remains in the vendor, though but a small part of the price is unpaid, and the vendee has possession.—In re Lyon, Case No. 8,644.

To save a stipulated forfeiture of an advance payment for failure to pay the residue by a certain day, the party must use his best efforts to tender the balance.—Bayley v. Duvall, Case No. 1,139.

§ 53. Validity of condition as against third persons.

The possession of the fixtures and outfit of a tobacco manufactory does not create any presumption as to title.—In re Binford, Case No. 1,411.

A sale on condition that the title shall not pass until the purchase money be paid and the goods delivered is valid even as against subsequent bona fide purchasers.—In re Binford, Case No. 1,411.

As against subsequent bona fide purchasers, the seller has the burden of showing the sale to be conditional.—In re Binford, Case No. 1,411a.

The seller is estopped by his silent allowance of claim of title by another to assert that the sale was conditional.—In re Binford, Case No. 1,411a.

A lease of a machine for a sum equal to its value, to be paid in nine months, in default of which the lessor was to have the right to repossess it, is a conditional sale, and invalid against a subsequent pledgee without notice, where not recorded. Code Iowa, § 1922.—Pittsburgh Locomotive & Car Works v. State Nat. Bank of Keokuk, Case No. 11,198.

§ 54. Recording contract.

A bill of sale on condition, having been recorded in the town where the purchaser represented that he resided, though he actually resided elsewhere, is valid as against his assignee in bankruptcy.—Allen v. Whittemore, Case No. 241.

Conditional sales of personal property are valid in Missouri, and need not be recorded.—Rogers Locomotive Works v. Lewis, Case No. 12,024.

SALVAGE.

I. RIGHT TO COMPENSATION.

§ 1, What constitutes salvage services—In general. § 2, —— Waters and places. § 3, —— Effect of usage. § 4, —— Recapture. § 5, —— Pilotage. § 6, —— Navigation. § 7, —— Transportation. § 8, —— Furnishing materials. § 9, —— Preventing loss or injury. § 10, —— Saving life. § 11, The peril—In general. § 12, —— Disabled or helpless vessel. § 13, Success essential. § 14, Request for, or refusal of, services. § 15, Forcing services. § 16, Towing services. § 17, Derelict property. § 18, Property subject to salvage. § 19, Who may claim salvage—In general. § 20, —— Voluntary or obligatory services in general. § 21, —— Officers and seamen. § 22, —— Passengers. § 23, —— Pilots. § 24, —— Corporations. § 25, Effect of negligence or fraud in causing original loss. § 26, Competing salvors. § 27, Effect of contract for services. § 28, Forfeiture—By misconduct in general. § 29, —— By embezzlement.

II. THE AMOUNT AND APPORTIONMENT.

§ 30, How amount determined in general. § 31, Discretion of court. § 32, The whole value, a proportion, or a specific sum. § 33, Considerations influencing or diminishing amount—Character of services in general. § 34, —— Number of salvors employed. § 35, —— Value of property saved. § 36, —— Peril from which saved. § 36a, —— Value of property employed in service. § 37, —— Equipment of salvors. § 38, —— Deviation, delay, and injury to salvor vessel. § 39, —— Expenses and disbursements of salvors. § 40, —— Negligence or misconduct. § 41, Value of property in peril, how determined. § 42, Derelict property. § 43, Effect of special contracts. § 44, Instances of amount of award—Towage services. § 45, —— Pilotage services. § 46, —— Saving cargo. § 47, —— Floating vessel aground. § 48, —— Navigating shorthanded vessel. § 49, —— Derelict vessel. § 50, —— Miscellaneous cases. § 51, Apportionment—Right to share in general. § 52, —— Right of owner of property used in service. § 53, —— Various sets of salvors. § 54, —— Between owners, officers, crew, and others. § 55, —— Deductions. § 56, —— Shares lost by misconduct or not claimed.

III. LIEN AND RECOVERY.

§ 57, Lien. § 58, Suits for salvage—Jurisdiction. § 59, —— Who may sue. § 60, —— Who may be sued. § 61, —— Time to sue. § 62, —— Defenses. § 63, —— Parties and intervention. § 64, —— Joinder of libels. § 65, —— Pleadings. § 66, —— Hearing. § 67, —— Evidence. § 68, Presentation of claims. § 69, The property and proceeds—Care and custody. § 70, —— Sale of property. § 71, —— Liens. § 72. —— Apportionment of salvage compensation. § 73, —— Restoration after payment of salvage. § 74, —— Claims to proceeds. § 75, —— Unclaimed proceeds. § 76, Costs. § 77, Appeal. § 78, Compromise and payment of salvage and recovery of shares.

Liability of insurer for salvage paid, see "Insurance," § 133.

I. RIGHT TO COMPENSATION.

§ 1. What constitutes salvage services—In general.

The relief of property from an impending peril of the sea by the voluntary exertions of those who are under no legal obligation to render assistance, and the consequent ultimate safety of the property, constitute a case of salvage.—Williamson v. The Alphonso, Case No. 17,749; The Centurion, Id. 2,554; The M. B. Stetson, Id. 9,363; The H. B. Foster, Id. 6,290.

Risk of life, expenditure of money, or the application of extraordinary means is not essential to a salvage service. It may be exclusively a case of skill.—Lea v. The Alexander, Case No. 8,153.

Personal exposure and risk is not a necessary element in a salvage service, but it is to be considered in measuring the compensation.—Spencer v. The Charles Avery, Case No. 13,232.

It does not affect the character of the service as a salvage service that it was performed by a steamship with but little peril to herself.—The Acacia, Case No. 22.

That the risk was slight, and the duration of the salvage service brief, affects the value of the same, but cannot bar the claim.—Coffin v. The John Shaw, Case No. 2,949.

Salvage will be awarded where property is exposed to a chance which might destroy it, and is saved at some personal risk.—In re Seven Coal Barges, Case No. 12,677.

It is no objection to a claim for salvage that the interference or assistance of the salvor did not arise from a desire to preserve the property or benefit the owner.—Le Tigre, Case No. 8,281.

The fact that there was no formal surrender of the vessel to which salvage services were rendered will not detract from their character.—Union Tow-Boat Co. v. The Delphos, Case No. 14,400.

A vessel in distress may refuse the services of salvors, but, where services are accepted without stipulation for absolute compensation, the capacity in which they were rendered will not prevent a recovery of salvage compensation.—The Susan, Case No. 13,630.

A purchaser on an illegal condemnation cannot claim salvage for having brought the vessel within the power of her former owners.—Coulon v. The Neptune, Case No. 3,273.

The act of the master of a steamer in signaling and informing a rescuing vessel of the wreck held a salvage service.—The Crown, Case No. 3,450.

The rescue of a steamer grounded in the Ohio river, and in imminent peril of loss, is a salvage service.—Blagg v. The E. M. Bicknell, Case No. 1,476.

Salvors are entitled to compensation for services rendered within the ebb and flow of the tide, without regard to location.—The Boston, Case No. 1,673.

§ 2. —— Waters and places.

Wherever services have been rendered in saving property on the sea, or wrecked on the coast of the sea, there is a salvage service in the sense of the maritime law.—The Emulous, Case No. 4,480.

Where a steamboat is sunk on a river by floating ice within a few feet of the shore, persons on the bank who assist, at the request of the master, in saving the cargo, are entitled to salvage.—Spencer v. The Charles Avery, Case No. 13,232.

§ 3. —— Effect of usage.

There is no usage or custom of binding obligation whereby steam tugs in New York harbor are obliged to render towage services to each other without compensation when found disabled and in need of assistance within their common field of employment.—Sturgis v. The Joseph Johnson, Case No. 13,576.

An alleged custom of boats running in New York Bay to assist each other in distress free of charge held not to have been proved.—Staten Island & N. Y. Ferry Co. v. The Thomas Hunt, Case No. 13,326.

§ 4. —— Recapture.

Salvage is allowed upon recapture or rescue from an enemy.—The Ann Green, Case No. 414; Brevoor v. The Fair American, Id. 1,847.

Salvage is not due for rescuing the vessel of a neutral out of the hands of a belligerent, who took possession of her for a supposed breach of treaty or of the law of nations.—Waite v. Antelope, Case No. 17,045.

Salvage allowed upon recapture of a ransomed ship, where the ransom bill declared that the sum agreed upon should only be payable upon the arrival of the vessel at her port of destination, and she never arrived there.—Moodie v. The Harriet, Case No. 9,744.

The rescuing of a vessel from pirates is a salvage service.—Porter v. The Friendship, Case No. 10,783.

To entitle a person to salvage upon property taken from pirates, the taking must have been lawful and meritorious.—Davison v. Seal-Skins, Case No. 3,661.

Salvage will not be awarded upon property taken, without authority, from pirates within the territorial jurisdiction of a country at peace with the United States.—Davison v. Seal-Skins, Case No. 3,661.

The seizure and bringing into port of a vessel in distress in command of mutinied slaves, who had killed the commanding officers, is a salvage service.—Gedney v. L'Amistad, Case No. 5,294a.

Salvage will be awarded in such case notwithstanding treaty provision requiring restoration of vessel taken from owners within jurisdiction.—Gedney v. L'Amistad, Case No. 5,294a.

§ 5. —— Pilotage.

Pilotage services rendered to a vessel flying a signal of distress, whose officers and crew, save one, were sick with fever, held entitled to salvage remuneration.—Moore v. The Caribon, Case No. 9,753a.

Piloting a vessel through dangerous shoals, where she could not have made her way unaided, is salvage service, if performed in connection with other salvage service.—The Maria Pike, Case No. 9,081.

Leading the way safely out to sea for a sail vessel anchored among the shoals off Cape May, and in danger of going ashore if her cable should part, after an unsuccessful attempt to tow her, is a salvage service entitled to a liberal reward.—Winso v. The Cornelius Grinnell, Case No. 17,883.

Services in piloting a vessel after she had worked off a shoal, through a narrow, intricate and unmarked channel, to open water, and in pumping during the passage, are in the nature of salvage services.—Curry v. The Loch Goil, Case No. 3,495.

§ 6. —— Navigation.

Giving the benefit of skill and experience and other incidental acts of relief may constitute a salvage service, though there is no actual labor or effort.—Boardman v. The Bethel, Case No. 1,585.

Where a master turned his own vessel over to the supercargo, and navigated into port a vessel whose crew were dead or disabled by yellow fever, held a salvage service, entitled to a liberal award.—Lamar v. The Penelope, Case No. 8,007.

Answering signal of distress, and placing navigator aboard the vessel at the request of the only remaining officer, ignorant of navigation, is a salvage service.—Butterworth v. The Washington, Case No. 2,253.

Services in placing a navigator aboard, and navigating back to port a vessel whose principal officers had been killed or injured in an affray, and in charge of a disabled second mate, held salvage services.—The J. L. Bowen, Case No. 7,322.

§ 7. —— Transportation.

A tug which takes the master and crew off of a ship aground, and carries them to port, is not entitled to salvage where the vessel is subsequently saved by other tugs.—The Puritan, Case No. 11,474.

Where a box of bullion is taken from a vessel abandoned at sea, and transferred while at sea to another vessel, to be taken to its destination, the service of the second vessel is not a continuation of the salvage service.—Williams v. Box of Bullion, Case No. 17,717.

A vessel lost in transporting salved cargo after it had been placed in a state of safety is not entitled to salvage.—Stephens v. Bales of Cotton, Case No. 13,366.

The sale by auction of the cargo of a wrecked whaler, which the master had no means of saving or storing, to other whalers homeward bound, will be regarded as a salvage service, and not a purchase.—Jones v. The Richmond, Case No. 7,492. CONTRA, see Jones v. The Richmond, Case No. 7,491.

§ 8. —— Furnishing materials.
Employment of wrecking tackle, under an agreement to arbitrate the value of services rendered, is a salvage service, and not a hiring of the articles on a quantum meruit.—Boardman v. The Bethel, Case No. 1,585.

§ 9. —— Preventing loss or injury.
Two vessels at anchor came in collision in a storm without fault. To prevent the destruction of both, one slipped her cable, and went ashore. Held not a salvage service.—Beane v. The Mayurka, Case No. 1,175.

The cutting of an anchored vessel's cable to avoid collision with an abandoned vessel drifting in a field of ice held a salvage service, rendering the latter liable to the extent of paying for the anchor and cable lost.—Nickerson v. The John Perkins, Case No. 10,252.

Persuasions and the stand taken by a passenger and members of the crew of a captured vessel in charge of a prize crew, to prevent her being burned by the captors, held not sufficient to entitle them to salvage.—Phillips v. McCall, Case No. 11,104.

§ 10. —— Saving life.
No award can be made for saving life, but it may be considered in fixing the amount of salvage in saving property.—The Emblem, Case No. 4,434.

Rescuing runaway slaves, destitute of food or water, adrift at sea, is a salvage service.—Bass v. Five Negroes, Case No. 1,093.

§ 11. The peril—In general.
Where a vessel has encountered any danger or misfortune which may possibly expose her to destruction if services are not rendered, they are salvage services, though the danger is not imminent or absolute.—The Saragossa, Case No. 12,334.

Salvage compensation may be awarded for services rendered to a vessel in distress, though she is in no imminent peril of loss.—The Mount Washington, Case No. 9,887.

The fact that the assistance rendered might not have been actually necessary does not prevent it being a salvage service, if rendered while the vessel was in such a perilous position as to excite apprehension for her safety.—The Courier, Case No. 3,283.

The fact of peril is to be ascertained from the circumstances surrounding the boat at the time when the salvage services commenced.—McGinnis v. The Pontiac, Case No. 8,801.

The drawing of a boat off when aground is not a salvage service, where there was no peril.—Montgomery v. The T. P. Leathers, Case No. 9,736.

Services performed in righting a wreck after it is saved from immediate danger, and has reached a port of safety, are not compensated as salvage services.—The W. D. B., Case No. 17,306.

A steamer which went to the relief of a sloop drifting towards a dangerous reef in Hell Gate after floating off a rock on which she had struck, and took her in tow, held entitled to salvage, though the crew, which had been watching her from the shore, had put out in their boat to board her.—Holmes v. The Joseph C. Griggs, Case No. 6,640.

Rescuing a stranded vessel from impending peril is a salvage service, though not indispensable nor attended with danger.—Boardman v. The Bethel, Case No. 1,585.

Services of wreckers in releasing vessel from perilous position, and bringing her into port, held to be pilotage in the nature of salvage, where the master, having facilities at hand, accepted proffered services of wreckers.—The Calcutta, Case No. 2,298.

Unloading a ship which is on fire, attended with danger to life, is a salvage service,—not simply stevedore services.—The Circassian, Case No. 2,723.

§ 12. —— Disabled or helpless vessel.
A vessel, out of sight of land, amid dangerous shoals, with master and both officers sick with a deadly, infectious disease, and with no navigator aboard, flying a signal of distress, is in a position to have salvage service rendered her.—Williamson v. The Alphonso, Case No. 17,749.

Whether the towing into port of a rudderless vessel is to be considered a salvage service depends upon whether the loss of the rudder rendered the vessel unnavigable.—Hope v. The Dido, Case No. 6,679.

If a vessel, though disabled, is manageable, and receives assistance for expedition only, the fact of being disabled will not of itself make the service salvage.—The Frank A. Hall, Case No. 5,052.

A vessel dismasted in a gale, and lying at anchor on a bank in the open sea, is in a condition to have a salvage service rendered.—The Independence, Case No. 7,014.

The towing to a safer place of a dismasted and rudderless bark, without an anchor, and transmitting information to the owners, held a salvage service.—Norris v. The Island City, Case No. 10,306.

Towing an unmanageable vessel into smooth water, and there hanging her rudder, thus making it possible to navigate her, is a salvage service.—The Millinocket, Case No. 9,609.

A barge without small boat, provisions, or means of propulsion, adrift on Lake St. Clair, after she had come to anchor in good weather, held in a situation to have salvage services rendered.—The Union Express, Case No. 14,363.

Rescuing and taking to a place of safety a steamer caught in the ice in New York Bay on a dark, foggy night, with a broken crank, is a salvage service calling for a small reward.—Staten Island & N. Y. Ferry Co. v. The Thomas Hunt, Case No. 13,326.

Persons going out to and securing a canal boat, with no one on board, cut adrift from her moorings by ice in New York harbor, and carried by the tide towards the sea, held entitled to salvage compensation.—Stilwell v. The Major Anderson, Case No. 13,452.

§ 13. Success essential.
Salvors are not entitled to compensation for an unsuccessful effort, and are only entitled to compensation for property actually saved by their exertions.—Curry v. The Loch Goil, Case No. 3,495; The Huntsville, Id. 6,916; Clarke v. The Dodge Healy, Id. 2,849; Brevoor v. The Fair American, Id. 1,847.

The property must have been in fact saved by the parties who make the claim.—Montgomery v. The T. P. Leathers, Case No. 9,736.

It is an indispensable ingredient of a salvage claim that the service has contributed immediately to the rescue or preservation of property in peril at sea.—The John Wurts, Case No. 7,434.

Where salvors employed by the owner on contingent compensation are compelled to abandon the wreck on account of the severity of the weather, and it drifts to sea, and is saved by another, the former have no claim to salvage compensation.—The John Wurts, Case No. 7,434.

Salvors who fall into distress, and are relieved by other salvors, do not thereby lose their original right to salvage. The second salvors cannot lawfully make a contract to that effect. —The Henry Ewbank, Case No. 6,376.

Where different salvors at different times render salvage service, each is entitled to compensation, though separate service of either would have been unavailing.—Adams v. The Island City, Case No. 55.

The fact that the exertions of the salvor did not save the boat, but she was saved by natural causes, will not affect his right to salvage, where he encountered the danger, and did all he could under the circumstances.—McGinnis v. The Pontiac, Case No. 8,801.

Persons whose exertions did not benefit the property cannot claim compensation as salvors, though for bona fide efforts, which were unsuccessful, they should be allowed something in the nature of a quantum meruit.—The Sailor's Bride, Case No. 12,220.

§ 14. Request for, or refusal of, services.

Licensed wreckers must offer services to vessels in need, though not requested.—The Angeline, Case No. 385.

Salvage will be awarded for keeping company with a distressed vessel at her master's request. —Allen v. The Canada, Case No. 219.

Services rendered to a vessel in need of salvage assistance in pursuance of a signal for a steamer, though not necessarily one of distress, are to be compensated as salvage services.—The James T. Abbott, Case No. 7,202.

A vessel which, by a signal of distress, secures the aid of salvors, will not be heard to say that she could have saved herself without assistance.—The Huntsville, Case No. 6,916; Sanderson v. The Ann Johnson, Id. 12,297a.

Persons who assist a vessel in distress at the request of her master or owner, with no definite arrangement for compensation, must ordinarily be paid as salvors.—The Louisa Jane, Case No. 8,532.

A person requested to take charge as master of a vessel in peril, and save her, if possible, is not deprived of salvage compensation where no definite contract is made with him.—McGinnis v. The Pontiac, Case No. 8,801.

The fact that the services were rendered in response to a signal for a pilot will not prevent the recovery of salvage compensation.—The Susan, Case No. 13,630.

A person authorized by the master of a vessel on fire to save what he can, and look to the property for compensation, is to be regarded as a salvor.—Emerson v. The Pandora, Case No. 4,442.

It is blamable to refuse to interpose to save property without a salvage compensation or a contract fixing its amount.—The Independence, Case No. 7,014.

The master of a ship wrecked upon the coast has the custody and charge of the property, and, as against strangers and salvors, may make such arrangements as he sees fit for saving it.—The Yucatan, Case No. 18,194.

§ 15. Forcing services.

Quaere, whether person taking forcible possession of ship exposed to danger, against will of commander, can claim salvage.—Clarke v. The Dodge Healy, Case No. 2,849.

Services rendered to a burning vessel by tugs, which were in fact supernumeraries, will not be compensated as salvage.—Union Tow-Boat Co. v. The Delphos, Case No. 14,400.

Persons who interfere unnecessarily with wrecked property, which is being saved under a contract between the owners thereof and a third party, cannot claim as salvors, although they bring the property into port.—In re Quantity of Iron, Case No. 11,496.

One who recovers and carries off, against the express commands of the master, cargo accidentally fallen overboard in the salvage operation, which the authorized salvors intend to save at their earliest convenience, cannot recover salvage thereon.—The Yucatan, Case No. 18,194.

§ 16. Towing services.

Where no agreement is made for compensation for towing a vessel in distress, the rate is to be governed by considerations applicable to salvage cases.—The H. B. Foster, Case No. 6,290.

Towing may be a salvage service, when performed in aid of a vessel in distress.—The H. B. Foster, Case No. 6,290.

The fact that towage services in extricating a vessel from impending peril were rendered in response to a mere signal for towage will not prevent the tug from recovering for salvage services.—Phillips v. The United States, Case No. 11,107.

Services rendered after reaching a port of safety in towing to a port where repairs could be made are towage, not salvage.—The W. D. B., Case No. 17,306; The W. F. Garrison, Id. 17,475.

Owners of steamboat, towing a burning vessel from one shore to another, held entitled only to reasonable compensation for towage.—Emerson v. The Pandora, Case No. 4,442.

A tug which gets a burning vessel afloat, and tows her to a place where other parties put out the fire, renders salvage service, although both sets of salvors deny co-operation.—The Huntsville, Case No. 6,916.

A steamboat towing other boats from a wharf to prevent them from coming in contact with a vessel which is on fire is entitled not to salvage, but merely to towage compensation.—Stevens v. The S. W. Downs and The Storm, Case No. 13,411.

Towing oil barges cast loose from a burning wharf, and still in danger, to a place of safety, held a salvage service, but only entitled to small compensation.—Fulmer v. Patterson, Case No. 5,152.

Services rendered by a tug in towing to a wharf a vessel which, being overtaken by a storm while entering a harbor, was left by her crew, held entitled to salvage remuneration.—The H. B. Foster, Case No. 6,290.

Services of tug in picking up canal boat which had broken from a tow in New York harbor in heavy weather, held entitled to salvage remuneration.—The Ontario, Case No. 10,543.

Towing into port a vessel in distress, but in no great danger of loss, is not strictly salvage service, and is worthy of but small compensation.—The Entire, Case No. 4,502.

Compensation will not be awarded as for salvage service for towing into port foreign vessel which only needed a pilot, irrespective of agreement made.—Boggs v. The Loutra, Case No. 1,601.

Small tugs assisting, for less than an hour, a large tug in pulling off a steamship aground in a harbor, entitled to compensation as salvage service.—Baker v. Hemenway, Case No. 770.

Towing a steam vessel which has lost the use of her machinery by an accident, although she is sound in hull and masts, is a salvage service.—The Saragossa, Case No. 12,334.

Meritorious services rendered by a tug in New York harbor in saving a vessel beset with ice are not in the nature of salvage services.—Crary v. The El Dorado, Case No. 3,362.

A libel against such vessel and cargo dismissed against the cargo, but reasonable compensation decreed against the vessel.—Crary v. The El Dorado, Case No. 3,362.

Services in towing into harbor a vessel leaking badly, anchored near shore of Cohasset, and liable to stranding on change of wind, held entitled to salvage remuneration.—Hennessey v. The Versailles, Case No. 6,365.

The towing of a steamer with broken shaft 731 miles to port, in good weather, held a salvage service.—The Colon, Case No. 3,024.

A steamer with broken propeller blades, proceeding from St. Thomas to New York, under sail, when 150 miles from Sandy Hook, and not in distress, was spoken by another steamer, which towed her into port without any price being fixed for such service. Held not a salvage service.—The Emily B. Souder, Cases Nos. 4,455, 4,458.

§ 17. Derelict property.

No length of time divests the original owner of property found derelict at sea. It will be restored upon payment of salvage according to circumstances unless there be proof of an intention to abandon wholly.—Wilkie v. Two Hundred and Five Boxes of Sugar, Case No. 17,662.

A case of derelict can arise only when there has been an abandonment by the master and crew, without any intention of returning and resuming possession.—The Emulous, Case No. 4,480; The Bee, Id. 1,219; Evans v. The Charles, Id. 4,556; Montgomery v. The T. P. Leathers, Id. 9,736; Tyson v. Prior, Id. 14,319.

A vessel is not derelict where the master and crew voluntarily leave while in peril with the bona fide intention of returning.—The Attacapas, Case No. 637; Bean v. The Grace Brown, Id. 1,171.

A vessel will be held derelict where the master and crew, thinking she had sunk, gave up pursuit of her, though, when they first left her in peril, they expected to return.—The Nathaniel Hooper, Case No. 10,030.

Vessel left by master and crew in sinking condition, who were picked up while yet in sight of the wreck, will be considered derelict.—The Boston, Case No. 1,673.

Ships forsaken through fear of enemies or loss of life are not legally derelict, so as to warrant full right by occupancy.—Warder v. La Belle Creole, Case No. 17,165.

Property found in a vessel abandoned in a harbor on an uninhabited coast comes within the maritime definitions of derelict property, unless it appears that there was an intention to return to the vessel on the part of the officers and crew.—Williams v. The Adolphe, Case No. 17,712.

A schooner in distress was found by a bark, and her crew taken off. The weather having moderated, the bark returned to the schooner, but the latter's master could not induce his crew to go on board. The bark then sent part of her crew, who brought the schooner in. Held not a case of derelict.—The Lovett Peacock, Case No. 8,555.

The abandonment of a steamboat by the master to the care and protection of the master and crew of another vessel, for the purpose of procuring assistance and safety, is not a case of derelict.—Montgomery v. The T. P. Leathers, Case No. 9,736.

A vessel with slaves on board, but no white person, will be considered as derelict.—Flinn v. The Leander, Case No. 4,870.

The fact that the owner is in pursuit of barges adrift in a navigable river, unknown to the salvor, does not deprive him of his claim.—In re Seven Coal Barges, Case No. 12,677.

The owner's exclusive right of possession is not lost by temporarily leaving goods for the purpose of obtaining aid.—The Bee, Case No. 1,219.

An anchor lost in a harbor will not be held derelict as to a wrecker who went in search thereof with knowledge that the owner would take means to recover it.—In re One Anchor and Chain, Case No. 10,517.

A disabled bark anchored is not derelict during the absence of a salvor vessel for a necessary and temporary purpose.—Cromwell v. The Island City, Case No. 3,410.

But a person finding the vessel in the meantime, and in good faith taking possession, and by his exertion contributing to its preservation, is entitled to salvage remuneration.—Cromwell v. The Island City, Case No. 3,410.

A vessel without any person on board, and in a condition where her instant destruction was menaced, may be rightfully taken possession of by salvors, though another vessel was employed to go to her relief.—The John Gilpin, Case No. 7,345.

Salvors thus taking possession may retain it if they are able to effect the salvage, and are conducting the business with fidelity and vigor.—The John Gilpin, Case No. 7,345.

Such persons will be regarded as the meritorious salvors where wrongfully interrupted in the work by others who complete the salvage.—The John Gilpin, Case No. 7,345.

The finder, who takes possession with intention of saving derelict goods, gains a right of possession maintainable against the true owner, and a lien for salvage.—The Bee, Case No. 1,219.

A salvor is not entitled to compensation for labor and injury after he is informed that the property is not derelict.—Crowell v. A Chain and Anchor, Case No. 3,443.

No distinction can be made between the boat and cargo of a derelict vessel.—Montgomery v. The T. P. Leathers, Case No. 9,736.

Compensation awarded for the services of a tug and lighter in saving cotton floating near the Narrows, which had been dumped from a lighter in New York Bay.—In re Twenty-Three Bales of Cotton, Case No. 14,284.

The uninterrupted continuance for 30 years of a custom of a certain court in regard to rights to derelicts raises an inference of the legality thereof.—Russell v. Forty Bales Cotton, Case No. 12,154.

§ 18. Property subject to salvage.

Salvage services are not limited to a vessel or cargo, but extend to any valuable property in peril, saved on navigable waters.—In re Raft of Spars, Case No. 11,528.

A steamboat dismantled and stripped of her motive power, and fitted and used as a saloon and hotel, cannot be the subject of salvage services where she went ashore while being towed to another place.—The Hendrick Hudson, Case No. 6,355.

Barges adrift on the Ohio river are a proper subject of salvage.—In re Seven Coal Barges, Case No. 12,677.

Services rendered in pulling boilers out of a navigable river, into which they had fallen from a steamboat, are salvage services.—The Silver Spray, Case No. 12,857.

A derrick boat raised from the bottom of the channel of a public navigable river may be the subject of a libel for salvage in admiralty.—Maltby v. Steam Derrick Boat, Case No. 9,000.

Services rendered in raising sectional docks used for dry-docking vessels are not the subject of salvage compensation.—Salvor Wrecking Co. v. Sectional Dock Co., Case No. 12,273.

Ferryboats in peril on the Ohio river are subjects of salvage.—The Cheeseman v. Two Ferry-Boats, Case No. 2,633.

No salvage will be awarded for saving the United States mails, though the service is in itself meritorious.—The Merchant, Case No. 9,-435.

No award can be made for saving, from a wreck, bills of exchange or other papers, the evidence of debts or of title to property.—The Emblem, Case No. 4,434.

A salvage service is performed when a raft of timber is saved from peril on navigable waters.—In re Fifty Thousand Feet of Timber, Case No. 4,783.

Rescuing a raft of timber found adrift in a harbor, and floating out to sea unaccompanied by any person, is a salvage service.—In re Raft of Spars, Case No. 11,529; Keteltas v. Raft of Timber, Id. 7,741a.

The rescue, while floating down stream, of logs which formed part of a raft of lumber driven from its anchorage and broken up in a high wind and tide, is not a salvage service.—Tome v. Four Cribs of Lumber, Case No. 14,083.

Cotton belonging to the United States, in course of transportation on freight, is liable to pay salvage.—The S. L. Davis, Case No. 12,939.

§ 19. Who may claim salvage—In general.

Those in possession are estopped from claiming as salvors if they requested the aid of those who save the property.—The Cheeseman v. Two Ferry-Boats, Case No. 2,633.

The master, being also a part owner, is entitled to salvage as against the other part owners and the shippers or insurers of the cargo, where he assists in rescuing his vessel from a capture by a belligerent.—Strout v. The Cuba, Case No. 13,549.

The officers and crew of public armed vessels are entitled to salvage for personal services, but at less rates than other persons.—The Mulhouse, Case No. 9,910.

The officers and crew of a foreign vessel of war are entitled to salvage, the same as in the case of other vessels.—Robson v. The Huntress, Case No. 11,971.

Services of no particular hazard rendered by the crew of a United States war vessel, under orders of their officers, in towing in a derelict, give no right to salvage compensation.—Smith v. The Josephine, Case No. 13,069.

Officers and crew of a United States vessel of war towing into port an American merchant vessel found abandoned at sea, 500 miles distant, held not entitled to salvage.—The Josephine, Case No. 7,546.

Seaman discharged from a ship of war at sea, to assist in bringing into port a short-handed whaling ship, held entitled to compensation as for a salvage service.—The Harvest, Case No. 6,176.

Slaves may receive compensation as salvors.—Small v. The Messenger, Case No. 12,961.

§ 20. —— Voluntary or obligatory services in general.

A salvor is one who, without any particular relation to a vessel in distress, proffers useful service, and gives it as a volunteer adventurer, without any pre-existing covenant that connected him with the duty of employing himself for the preservation of the vessel.—The Wave v. Hyer, Case No. 17,300.

Salvage to seamen, pilots, or passengers is only allowed for extraordinary exertions beyond their duty.—The Wave v. Hyer, Case No. 17,-300.

Pilots and others, assisting vessels in distress beyond what their mere duty requires, are entitled to compensation.—Dulany v. The Peragio, Case No. 4,123.

A passenger and members of the crew of a captured vessel, to whom the prize crew surrender her to prevent her from falling into the hands of an enemy, and who navigate her to port, held not entitled to salvage.—Phillips v. McCall, Case No. 11,104.

Public servants may recover salvage for assistance of great merit, rendered in the line of their regular duty, but in excess of the official requirements thereof.—The Huntsville, Case No. 6,916.

The mayor of Charleston has power to forbid the coming of a burning ship from sea to the city wharves; also, to make her coming conditional upon her paying all the expenses of saving her.—The Huntsville, Case No. 6,916.

A city fire department may recover salvage for saving a burning ship, brought, by permission of the city authorities, within the city jurisdiction.—The Huntsville, Case No. 6,916.

The extinguishment of a fire in a ship lying at the wharf of a city, by its fire department, does not entitle the firemen to salvage, even though there is no city ordinance requiring them to extinguish fires. Case No. 3,591 affirmed.—Davey v. The Mary Frost, Case No. 3,592.

The keeper of a lighthouse is under no obligation to render salvage services gratuitously.—The Ottawa, Case No. 10,617.

A salvor accepting the agency of the property cannot be allowed salvage, but where he acts in good faith will be allowed commissions as agent.—Acosta v. The Halcyon, Case No. 32.

One purchasing a vessel while wrecked cannot be considered a salvor.—Benjamin v. The Watchman, Case No. 1,305.

A wrecking company which rescues a derelict vessel which had been chartered by it for a wrecking enterprise, in which it was stranded, is entitled to salvage.—Browning v. Baker, Case No. 2,041.

The master and crew of the salvor vessel are entitled to salvage, though both vessels belonged to the same owner, in the absence of a contract, usage, or understanding that no salvage claim shall be made in such case.—The Colima, Case No. 2,996.

§ 21. —— Officers and seamen.

An officer who, while acting as such, exceeds the bounds of his official duty by giving extraordinary assistance to save property, is entitled to salvage.—Le Tigre, Case No. 8,281.

The master, in the case of a rescue of his vessel from capture by a privateer, acts in a new capacity, and is entitled to salvage.—Brevoor v. The Fair American, Case No. 1,847.

Seamen can be salvors only when their connection with the ship is entirely broken.—The Antelope, Case No. 484.

Successful exertions by the crew to avoid impending collision with another vessel are not salvage services.—The Acorn, Case No. 30.

A member of a crew of a vessel at anchor who cuts her cable to avoid collision with a vessel adrift is not entitled to salvage.—The John Perkins, Case No. 7,360.

No exertions for the safety of a vessel by a seaman who remained aboard for his own safety when the others took to the boats will constitute him a salvor thereof.—The John Perkins, Case No. 7,360.

The seaman's allegiance to the ship may be absolved by his being deserted by the master and rest of the crew, so as to entitle him to salvage for navigating the vessel to a place of safety.—The Triumph, Case No. 14,183.

One man left by design or negligence on an abandoned ship is thereby discharged, and may claim salvage for assisting to save her.—Mason v. The Blaireau, Case No. 9,230.

Soon after the crew of a vessel were abandoned by the master near the home port, the vessel was stranded, and the crew got her off with considerable difficulty and danger. Held, that they were not salvors.—The Olive Branch, Case No. 10,490.

A capture by a public or private armed vessel of a belligerent power or by a pirate terminates or suspends the contract, which binds the seamen to the ship, and rescue or recapture by the master and crew entitles them to salvage.—Strout v. The Cuba, Case No. 13,549.

The capture by a Confederate cruiser in July, 1861, is capture by a belligerent within the rule.—Strout v. The Cuba, Case No. 13,549.

The crew of a vessel in peril transferred to another vessel cannot recover for subsequent labors in saving the distressed vessel, according to the agreement under which they were transferred.—The D. M. Hall v. The John Land, Case No. 3,939.

The contract of seamen is dissolved by the abandonment of their vessel in distress at sea, and where the rescuing vessel subsequently falls in with the derelict, and they perform services in saving part of her cargo, they are entitled to salvage.—Taylor v. The Cato, Case No. 13,786.

Crew assisting salvors by performing extraordinary labor in pumping, allowed extra compensation.—Anonymous, Case No. 430.

The master and crew of a disabled vessel taken in tow will not be allowed salvage for their exertions in pumping to keep the vessel afloat while being towed.—The D. W. Vaughan, Case No. 4,222.

The crew of a ship wrecked on a desert island, who rescue, with great labor, part of her cargo, held not entitled to compensation as salvors.—The Holder Borden, Case No. 6,600.

No claim for salvage can be maintained by the crew of a vessel upon the ground that by their services she is brought through a storm into port, sound in hull.—Miller v. Kelly, Case No. 9,577.

In case of shipwreck, where seamen cannot earn wages, but perform meritorious services, they are entitled to salvage.—Cartwell v. The John Taylor, Case No. 2,482.

Where the crew rescue the vessel, their wages from the last port of delivery will be included in salvage.—Clayton v. The Harmony, Case No. 2,871.

Seamen are entitled to salvage for saving the materials of the ship, where freight is not earned, and under the circumstances salvage was allowed to the extent of their wages for the voyage.—The Two Catherines, Case No. 14,288.

Seamen who contract for a share of the freight, or of the proceeds of the voyage, cannot, in case of wreck, claim compensation for salvage services, or more than day wages for the time actually employed in saving the wreck.—Reed v. Hussey, Case No. 11,646.

Seamen, after a wreck, may recover from the materials and cargo, in relation to their respective values, wages for the time spent in saving them.—Roberts v. The Ocean Star, Case No. 11,908.

A seaman who in November, 1800, assisted in recapturing his vessel from French captors, held entitled to salvage, notwithstanding that the convention of October 3, 1800, between the United States and France, had already been signed, it having not yet been ratified at the time of the hearing.—Kennedy v. Ricker, Case No. 7,705.

A seaman cannot have salvage for the boat which has brought him to land after the loss of his ship.—Price v. Sears, Case No. 11,416.

The passengers on a steamer injured in a collision went aboard the other vessel, but the officers and crew stayed about the wreck, in small boats, and subsequently went aboard, and saved the passengers' effects. Held not a salvage service.—Mesner v. Suffolk Bank, Case No. 9,493.

The court will prohibit the payment of any part of the salvage to the crew of a stranded vessel who refused to assist in getting her off after wreckers were employed except upon the promise of extra compensation out of the salvage.—The York, Case No. 18,140.

Services of the mate and four men of a wrecked vessel in crossing the Gulf in an open boat to procure assistance held a salvage service.—The Mary Hale, Case No. 9,213.

§ 22. —— Passengers.

Salvage compensation will be allowed a passenger who rendered extraordinary service to the vessel in distress, though he had no opportunity of leaving it.—The Pennsylvania, Case No. 10,945.

A passenger who assisted in navigating the salvor vessel after she was short-handed by putting a crew on a deserted vessel is entitled to a portion of the salvage.—Bond v. The Cora, Case No. 1,621.

Passengers who refuse to assist when solicited are not entitled to a share.—The Charles Henry, Case No. 2,617.

Salvage was not allowed to a passenger who superseded an alleged incompetent master and brought the vessel to port, the facts alleged not being sustained by the proof.—The Anastasia, Case No. 346.

A passenger, who after the officers of the ship, in two days of effort, have exhausted all their means to get control of the rudder with a broken shaft, devises, and, with the aid of men put under his direction by the captain, executes a plan for that purpose, thereby saving the ship from peril, is entitled to salvage.—Towle v. The Great Eastern, Case No. 14,110.

Troops carried on a ship under contract with the government, held entitled to salvage for staying by vessel, and assisting in saving her from a total wreck, after they might have escaped on coming near shore.—The Merrimac, Case No. 9,473.

§ 23. —— Pilots.

Where a vessel is in such peril as to be the subject of salvage service, a pilot is not bound to give his aid for mere pilotage.—The Susan, Case No. 13,630.

What a pilot does beyond the limits of his duty, as such, may be the foundation of a claim for salvage, but not such acts as are within them.—Hand v. The Elvira, Case No. 6,015.

Pilots may be salvors, even after the relation of pilot to the particular vessel has been begun, the right depending upon the service rendered.—Lea v. The Alexander, Case No. 8,153.

Regularly authorized and licensed pilots are entitled to salvage compensation where their services are extraordinary, and beyond the strict line of their professional duty.—Bean v. The Grace Brown, Case No. 1,171.

If a pilot goes beyond the duty imposed upon him by law, and renders meritorious services to a vessel in distress, he becomes a salvor, and may sue in admiralty for salvage, though the service be performed upon pilotage ground. Case No. 17,297 reversed.—The Wave v. Hyer, Case No. 17,300.

Where the state laws make it a part of the official duty of pilots to assist vessels in distress, they are not entitled to salvage for rendering such service.—The Wave v. Hyer, Case No. 17,300.

The pilot tug at the mouth of the Columbia river (Act Or. Oct. 28, 1868) is entitled to salvage compensation for towing a vessel on her pilot ground only where she incurs extraordinary risk to tow the vessel, or to rescue it from impending peril.—Roff v. Wass, Case No. 11,999.

A pilot is entitled to salvage for extricating from peril a vessel aground upon a shoal, running out into the sea, which is not an entrance to a bay, inlet, river, harbor, or port, though within the cruising ground, if not made by law pilots' water.—Lea v. The Alexander, Case No. 8,153.

The fact that the ordinance from which the pilot derives his commission makes it his duty to go to vessels in distress will not prevent his recovering salvage.—Lea v. The Alexander, Case No. 8,153.

Pilots acting under an agreement for extra compensation will nevertheless be allowed salvage compensation, where there has been extraordinary personal merit or effort, or unforeseen exertion and hazard, in the performance of the service.—Hope v. The Dido, Case No. 6,679.

On the surrender of a vessel in peril to the master and crew of another, the contract with her pilot is dissolved, and he may render salvage services.—Montgomery v. The T. P. Leathers, Case No. 9,736.

Pilots conducting into port vessels in distress or in apprehension thereof are entitled to salvage compensation therefor.—Blunt v. The Frank, Case No. 1,577.

§ 24. —— Corporations.

A corporation organized for wrecking purposes is entitled to compensation for salvage services rendered by its wrecking vessels.—The J. F. Farlan, Cases Nos. 7,313, 7,314. CONTRA, see The Stratton Audley, Case No. 13,529.

A corporation organized to perform salvage services, employed by the owners of a vessel which had gone ashore in a fog, to relieve her from peril, held not entitled to salvage compensation, but to a reasonable compensation.—The Morning Star, Case No. 9,818.

A vessel owned by a corporation engaged in the wrecking business may earn salvage.—The Birdie, Case No. 1,432.

A tow-boat company cannot be treated as a salvor, but it is entitled to compensation for its property put at risk, the same as other salvors.—Union Tow-Boat Co. v. The Delphos, Case No. 14,400.

§ 25. Effect of negligence or fraud in causing original loss.

A pilot who is part owner of a pilot boat should not be allowed, on the ground of public policy, to recover salvage for towing in a vessel which received an injury by thumping on the bar while going out of the harbor under his charge as pilot.—The Washington v. The Saluda, Case No. 17,232.

Compensation for extraordinary exertion, for saving passengers' effects, will not be decreed where there is a presumption, against the wrecked vessel, of fault, for the collision.—Mesner v. Suffolk Bank, Case No. 9,493.

A vessel condemned in damages for a collision will not be allowed salvage for rescuing the other vessel from sinking by towing her to a place of safety.—The Sampson, Case No. 12,279.

Licensed wreckers held only entitled to an award for pilotage where salvage services resulted from lack of pilotage refused by them.—The Angeline, Case No. 385.

Salvors are entitled to a liberal compensation for saving vessel abandoned by her crew notwithstanding incompetency or bad faith by her master.—The Annie Leland, Case No. 421.

A tug carelessly ran her tow aground. Held, that her share in the salvage allowed for pulling the tow off should be forfeited to the tow.—The Homely, Case No. 6,661.

A salvor is not entitled to compensation for services rendered the vessel wrecked pursuant to an agreement between him and the master.—Church v. Seventeen Hundred and Twelve Dollars, Case No. 2,713.

The wrongful act of a master in wrecking his ship does not bar the claim of a salvor not in collusion with him.—Malone v. The Pedro, Case No. 8,995.

Associates of a salvor with whom a master corruptly agrees to wreck his ship cannot recover salvage.—Malone v. The Pedro, Case No. 8,995.

§ 26. Competing salvors.

First discoverers and bona fide possessors of a derelict have the right of exclusive possession.—The Amethyst, Case No. 330.

But they must accept services offered by others where their force is insufficient to save the derelict without great risk.—The Amethyst, Case No. 330.

Salvors having no means of saving a cargo of cotton but by rafting have no right to exclude others having vessels on the spot from participating in the salvage service.—The Concordia, Case No. 3,092.

A second set of salvors have no right to interfere, and become participators in the salvage, unless it appears that the first set will not be able to save the property without their aid.—Hand v. The Elvira, Case No. 6,015.

§ 27. Effect of contract for services.

To bar a claim for salvage services there must be an agreement to pay a certain sum absolutely.—Adams v. The Island City, Case No. 55; The Susan, Id. 13,630.

A contract for compensation at all events is no bar to salvage, unless it is express, explicit, and clearly proved.—The Huntsville, Case No. 6,916.

Salvage cannot be claimed where there is a bona fide contract to pay a quantum meruit for an attempt to save property, whether successful or not. But any other contract will not change the nature of the service.—The Independence, Case No. 7,014.

That the services were rendered at the request of the owner, and upon a promise to pay the bill if reasonable, otherwise to arbitrate, will not bar salvage compensation.—The Independence, Case No. 7,014.

A statement, by the master of a vessel to the commander of a tug asked to tow her out of danger, "that the ship would pay," is not sufficient evidence of a contract for payment at all events to bar a libel for salvage.—Pope v. The Sapphire, Case No. 11,276.

A voluntary contract for a fixed compensation, made without any controlling necessity, will not alter the character of the services.—The Emulous, Case No. 4,480.

A contract for a specific sum dependent on success does not alter the nature of a salvage service, but only furnishes a rule of compensation.—The Silver Spray, Case No. 12,857.

An agreement by underwriters engaging a steamer to relieve a vessel in distress for liberal compensation if successful is for salvage.—Bowley v. Goddard, Case No. 1,736.

Services of a wrecking tug in towing a ship from a dangerous shoal, which proceeded upon a negotiation for compensation not involving any idea of salvage, and not accepted as a salvage service, held, should not be compensated as such.—The Stratton Audley, Cases Nos. 13,529, 13,530.

One hired by a salvor to assist him, with knowledge that his employer is working under a contract, is limited in his recovery by the contract price. That he is misinformed as to the terms of the contract is no ground of additional liability on the part of the property or its owners.—The Silver Spray, Case No. 12,857.

Admiralty has no jurisdiction of a claim for services rendered to a vessel on the rocks in Hell Gate in the port of New York, and materials furnished in aid thereof, under employment by the owners in charge to assist them.—Sturgis v. The Oregon, Cases Nos. 13,576b, 13,577.

The salved vessel is not liable for salvage services rendered by the salvors under a contract with a wrecking company which was in charge of the vessel.—Baker v. The Tros, Case No. 783.

A person who has knowledge of a contract, between a wrecking company and the owners of a wrecked vessel, to raise the same for a certain interest therein, cannot maintain a libel in rem for services rendered for the wrecking company.—The Marquette, Case No. 9,101.

§ 28. Forfeiture—By misconduct in general.

The fact that a different course of conduct would have been better will not prevent compensation where the course followed was adopted in good faith.—The D. M. Hall v. The John Land, Case No. 3,939.

Salvage will not be denied for refusal of salvors of cotton to surrender it to the master of the vessel sent by the owners to pick it up. —In re Twenty-Three Bales of Cotton, Case No. 14,284.

Salvage on derelict cases and boxes not forfeited for refusal to deliver to owners' agent at a small port, into which the vessel put because of adverse winds.—Hartshorn v. Twenty-Five Cases Silk, Case No. 6,168a.

Seamen of a vessel which rescues a wreck during a voyage do not forfeit their claim for a share of the salvage by misconduct during such voyage, if they are guilty of no misconduct while engaged in the salvage.—The Centurion, Case No. 2,554.

Wreckers will forfeit all compensation by fraudulently keeping vessel aground to fabricate or enhance services.—The Byron, Case No. 2,275.

Wreckers who unnecessarily lighten a vessel, to magnify their services, forfeit all salvage.—The Aurora, Case No. 659.

The fraudulent employment by a salvor of an unnecessary number of assistants in order to magnify the importance of the services should cause a forfeiture of all compensation.—The Mount Washington, Case No. 9,887.

Salvors who at a critical moment refuse to work or embarrass others forfeit all compensation.—Anonymous, Case No. 429.

Salvors, by wrongfully burning a wrecked vessel, forfeit salvage on the cargo saved by them.—Roberts v. The St. James, Case No. 11,914.

Persons who plunder a vessel turned adrift by a privateer before she is stranded are not entitled to salvage for getting her off.—James v. The Sarah A. Boice, Case No. 7,183.

Willful breaking of boxes or packages of cargo by salvors, except in cases of urgent necessity, will forfeit salvage.—The Isaac Allerton, Case No. 7,088.

Salvage claimed for saving passengers refused to owner of wrecking vessel because of its leaky condition, and to crew because of their intoxication at the time when their services were needed.—The Mulhouse, Case No. 9,910.

Where salvors conceal from the court the names of other persons who participated in the salvage service, their libel will be dismissed.—Hessian v. The Edward Howard, Case No. 6,436.

The master of a vessel who neglects to inform another vessel of an imminent and secret danger into which the latter is running, when able to do so, cannot recover salvage compensation for services subsequently performed in relieving the vessel, but is entitled to reasonable compensation therefor.—American Ins. Co. v. Johnson, Case No. 303.

The master of a wrecking vessel, by countenancing a wrongful injury to a wrecked vessel by one of his crew, and by falsely denying knowledge thereof, forfeits all right to salvage. —Roberts v. The St. James, Case No. 11,914.

A licensed wrecker, who proceeds in opposition to the master's protest, is liable, in an extraordinary degree, to forfeiture of all compensation for anything short of final success.—Roberts v. The St. James, Case No. 11,914.

Gross neglect or wanton injury to the property saved works a forfeiture of all claim for salvage, and renders the salvors liable for damages. —The Sumner, Case No. 13,608.

A salvor only undertakes to exercise ordinary skill and diligence.—The Allegiance, Case No. 207.

The negligence or misconduct of the crew will not work a forfeiture of the share of the vessel, where the owner is innocent, and valuable salvage service is rendered, except in the case of wrecking vessels.—The Mulhouse, Case No. 9,910.

All salvors present when one of their number is guilty of willful wrong to the property are liable to forfeiture of their compensation, if the wrongdoer cannot be discovered.—Roberts v. The St. James, Case No. 11,914.

§ 29. —— By embezzlement.

A person who recovers property lost at sea, or shipwrecked, and sells the same and appropriates the proceeds, in violation of law, forfeits the right to salvage.—Harley v. Gawley, Case No. 6,069.

Where a master conceals a cask of oil which he has picked up at sea, and sells it at a secret sale after claim of ownership is made, he is not entitled to salvage compensation, or to be refunded duties paid by him.—Lears v. One Cask Oil, Case No. 8,161a.

Salvage cannot be given by way of set-off when the finder of a whale adrift has throughout contested the title of the owner.—Bartlett v. Budd, Case No. 1,075.

Embezzlement or a fraudulent concealment of any of the goods saved works a forfeiture of the salvage of the guilty person.—The Mulhouse, Case No. 9,910; Nickerson v. The John Perkins, Id. 10,252; The Rising Sun, Id. 11,858; Mason v. The Blaireau, Id. 9,230.

Embezzlement by a salvor does not prejudice his co-salvors, or the innocent owners of the salvor ship.—The Rising Sun, Case No. 11,858; Nickerson v. The John Perkins, Id. 10,252; The L. T. Knights, Id. 8,585; The Boston, Id. 1,673.

The fraudulent conduct of the masters of both vessels, in appropriating and concealing part of the property saved, will not defeat the claim of the salvor crew.—The Missouri, Case No. 9,654.

The share of the officers and crew of the salvor vessel held forfeited by acts of plunder committed by the crew.—Cromwell v. The Island City, Case No. 3,410.

Salvors who carry the property stripped from a vessel directly past her home port, where her name and port were painted on her stern, held guilty of embezzlement.—The Sumner, Case No. 13,608.

Neglect to produce property resulting from mere thoughtlessness will not forfeit salvage.—Anonymous, Case No. 429.

Appropriation of salved property, though of trifling value, forfeits all compensation.—Anonymous, Case No. 429.

A salvor, by his failure to bring in and report salved property, though it be of little value, and abandoned as worthless, forfeits all right to salvage, as against other property saved by him.—Roberts v. The St. James, Case No. 11,-914.

II. THE AMOUNT AND APPORTIONMENT.

§ 30. How amount determined in general.

The principle of salvage compensation is not confined to mere quantum meruit as to the persons saving, but is expanded so as to comprehend a reward for the risks of life and property, labor, and danger, as well as a premium operating as an inducement to similar exertion.—Warder v. La Belle Creole, Case No. 17,165; Scott v. The Clara E. Bergen, Id. 12,526a; Fisher v. The Sybil, Id. 4,824; Montgomery v. The T. P. Leathers, Id. 9,736; The Waterloo, Id. 17,257; Brooks v. The William Penn, Id. 1,965; Sonderburg v. Ocean Tow Boat Co., Id. 13,175: Pent v. The Ocean Belle, Id. 10,961; Bond v. The Cora, Id. 1,621.

In the case of a derelict sent in by a salvage crew, the reward should be such as would induce reasonable persons to encounter the peril and expense of such undertakings.—The Mary Ford, Case No. 9,212a.

Liberal compensation will be made not only with a view to the value and danger of the thing saved, but for the general interest in promoting exertions in such cases.—Fisher v. The Sybil, Case No. 4,824.

The salvors will be entitled to share to a greater or less degree in the benefit received from the service, when it is sufficient to warrant it.—The W. F. Garrison, Case No. 17,475.

The amount of the award should not increase with the value of the property beyond such as will justify a liberal reward as compared with ordinary profits.—Pope v. The Sapphire, Case No. 11,276.

The amount is estimated by the compound consideration of the danger and importance of the service.—Hand v. The Elvira, Case No. 6,015.

In determining the amount, the court will consider the value of the property saved, the extent of the labor, and the degree of merit and gallantry shown.—The Emulous, Case No. 4,-480; Taylor v. Twenty-Five Thousand Dollars, Id. 13,807.

Amount awarded is to be adjusted in conformity rather with the claims of the owner of property put at risk than with those of salvors for personal courage and heroism.—The Birdie, Case No. 1,432.

Other things being equal, the total award of salvage should vary with the degree of peril from which the property was saved.—The Mount Washington, Case No. 9,887; The Kristrel, Id. 7,935.

Other things being equal, the ratio of the salvage award to the value of the property saved should be less when such value is large than when it is small.—The Philah, Case No. 11,091a.

The value of the services to the property saved, and not the number of salvors, determines the amount.—Sanderson v. The Ann Johnson, Case No. 12,297a.

Where the services are very meritorious, and the value of the property saved very small, the usual proportion will be exceeded in making the award.—Smith v. The Joseph Stewart, Case No. 13,070.

The time occupied in the service is given but little weight in fixing the amount of salvage.—Sonderburg v. Ocean Tow Boat Co., Case No. 13,175.

The amount awarded should be more than a compensation for the mere labor employed.—The D. M. Hall v. The John Land, Case No. 3,939.

The amount of wages seamen receive at the time of the shipwreck is a safe criterion in fixing the quantity of salvage they are to receive.—Cartwell v. The John Taylor, Case No. 2,482.

In awarding salvage upon a foreign vessel, courts in this country will regard the rates of allowance in the courts of the owner's country.—The Waterloo, Case No. 17,257.

The amount may be affected or controlled by the usage of the port as to the rate of payment, where services are rendered at the request of the master or owner.—The Louisa Jane, Case No. 8,532.

The measure of compensation for services rendered upon the ocean will not be adopted in the case of services upon the Great Lakes.—Ensign v. The Peerless, Case No. 4,494.

Allowances in cases arising on the high seas are not safe precedents in cases arising on the Western rivers.—Mattingly v. Three Hundred and Fifty-Seven Bales of Cotton, Case No. 9,294.

§ 31. Discretion of court.

The amount is discretionary with the court, and is dependent on the labor, perils, and dangers incurred by the salvors, and the good faith that they exercise towards the owners of the property saved.—Western Transp. Co. v. The Great Western, Case No. 17,443.

The amount of the reward is left in the discretion of the court upon a just estimate of all the circumstances of the particular case.—The Emulous, Case No. 4,480; Bond v. The Cora, Id. 1,621.

The discretion of the court as to the amount should be used with a view to the circumstances of each case, previous decisions, and commercial policy.—The John and Albert, Case No. 7,333.

§ 32. The whole value, a proportion, or a specific sum.

A salvor will not be allowed the net proceeds as compensation, though his expenditures exceeded them, unless the owner abandons the property.—The Carl Schurz, Case No. 2,414.

Where the owner has expressly abandoned the property to the libelants, the whole amount may be awarded after payment of costs.—Llewellyn v. Two Anchors and Chains, Case No. 8,428.

An apparently empty chest was found floating on the high seas. On being broken up, 70 doubloons were found concealed therein. Held, that the finders were entitled to a moiety only, though there were no claims or marks of ownership.—Hollingsworth v. Seventy Doubloons & Three Small Pieces of Gold, Case No. 6,620.

Where the net proceeds of a derelict towed into port by a salvor were only $206, and the owner, after notice, failed to appear, the whole proceeds were decreed to the salvors.—The Zealand, Case No. 18,205.

As against the salvors, the United States are not entitled to the residue of a derelict.—Russell v. Forty Bales Cotton, Case No. 12,154.

A moiety is usually the highest compensation allowed.—Bearse v. Three Hundred and Forty Pigs of Copper, Case No. 1,193.

A moiety is the largest amount decreed.—British Consul v. Twenty-Two Pipes and Ten Hogsheads of Wine, Case No. 1,900; Cross v. The Bellona, Id. 3,428.

§ 33. Considerations influencing or diminishing amount—Character of services in general.

Salvage, where a stranded vessel is saved, should be proportionate to the promptness and skill of the rescue.—The Isaac Allerton, Case No. 7,088.

Avarice and hard dealing by a salvor should reduce, and extraordinary energy should increase, the amount of his compensation.—The D. M. Hall v. The John Land, Case No. 3,939.

Saving a cargo in midwinter by diving in the hold of the vessel, on an exposed reef, far from land, is a salvage service of great merit.—Roberts v. The St. James, Case No. 11,914.

The fact that the salvors' services might prove unavailing by the breaking up of the vessel before any amount of property could be saved is to be considered.—The John Gilpin, Case No. 7,345.

Unsuccessful efforts may be considered in fixing compensation for subsequent successful efforts.—Curry v. The Loch Goil, Case No. 3,495.

Salvage services rendered, without uncommon skill or exertions, to a ship in no great danger of loss, are of small merit.—The Marathon, Case No. 9,058.

Salvors of a grounded ship, which was in no great peril, and could have been got off without assistance by jettison of a part of her cargo, are entitled to only moderate compensation.—The Ellen Hood, Case No. 4,377.

The risk to a steam tug being very light, salvage is fixed accordingly.—The Allegiance, Case No. 207.

The owners of salved property cannot avail themselves of a contract, made by the salvor wrecking tug with marine insurance companies, to give services on their request to vessels in need of aid, at $15 per hour, except as evidence of what might be regarded as a reasonable reward for services rendered.—Sturgis v. The Vickery, Case No. 13,577a.

The fact that employés of a wrecking vessel, by their contract of employment, were not entitled to share in salvage compensation, will not reduce the amount of the award.—Bowley v. Goddard, Case No. 1,736.

§ 34. —— Number of salvors employed.

The amount awarded may be affected by the number to share therein.—The D. M. Hall v. The John Land, Case No. 3,939.

The amount of salvage is not increased by the fact that a large number of vessels and persons were employed.—The Crown, Case No. 3,450.

In fixing the amount, the number of salvors necessary to perform the services may be considered, but not a greater number actually employed.—The Mount Washington, Case No. 9,887.

Increased compensation will not be given on account of the employment of supernumeraries.—The Ashburton, Case No. 575; The Albus, Id. 148.

Additional unnecessary labor will not reduce the compensation for services actually necessary.—Sanderson v. The Ann Johnson, Case No. 12,297a.

§ 35. —— Value of property saved.

The value saved is of little importance in awarding salvage when the danger is not immediate and other assistance would probably have been rendered.—Bowley v. Goddard, Case No. 1,736.

As large a compensation should be given where a vessel and cargo are saved without injury, as in cases where the cargo only, or a portion of it, is saved.—The Euphrasia, Case No. 4,545.

Greater compensation should be awarded for saving vessel and cargo from imminent peril of total loss than for saving the cargo alone.—The Philah, Case No. 11,091a.

A less amount is awarded where the vessel is lost than where it is saved.—The Isaac Allerton, Case No. 7,088.

§ 36. —— Peril from which saved.

Unforeseen contingent events which might have increased the peril or occasioned a total loss cannot increase salvage compensation.—The Emulous, Case No. 4,480.

The question whether a crew of a grounded vessel could have got her off without assistance is important as tending to show the degree of peril she was in, and the proper amount to be awarded as salvage.—The Ella Hand, Case No. 4,369.

A written instrument of abandonment, signed by the officers of the vessel, is admissible to prove its perilous situation.—Blagg v. The E. M. Bicknell, Case No. 1,476.

§ 36a. —— Value of property employed in service.

The value of a wrecking tug is not to be considered where the salvage service consists in towing merely, which might have been as well done by a vessel of less power.—Sturgis v. The Joseph Johnson, Case No. 13,576.

Compensation will be made for increased labor due to the size of the salvor's vessels, where they used their best efforts.—Curry v. The H. J. May, Case No. 3,494.

The fact that salvage services were rendered by a steam vessel to a steam vessel is a ground for larger compensation than if both had been sailing vessels.—The Huntsville, Case No. 6,916.

Salvors cannot found a claim for increased compensation upon the use of a steamer furnished by underwriters free of charge.—The Ida L. Howard, Case No. 6,999.

§ 37. —— Equipment of salvors.

Salvage services rendered by professional wreckers on the Florida Coast are to be more liberally rewarded than like services would be if rendered in other places, and by persons and vessels pursuing other avocations.—Walter v. The Montgomery, Case No. 17,120.

The award for services rendered by wrecking vessels is not to be measured on the principle of salvage, but rather on that of a quantum meruit.—Sturgis v. The Vickery, Case No. 13,577a.

Licensed wreckers are entitled to greater compensation, and are charged with a higher degree of care and skill, than other salvors.—Roberts v. The St. James, Case No. 11,914.

Associations for wrecking purposes will be encouraged by the compensation awarded for salvage.—The Susan, Case No. 13,630.

A tug maintained at heavy expense for salvage purposes is entitled to the full remuneration usually awarded to other salvors.—Virden v. The Caroline, Case No. 16,956.

The fact that libelant's vessels were maintained for wrecking and salvage purposes, at heavy expense, and were often unemployed, is inadmissible as a basis for fixing compensation.—The J. F. Farlan, Case No. 7,313.

The owner of a salvor vessel is not liable for loss or damage caused by the unseaworthiness of his vessel, in the absence of fraudulent misrepresentations or concealment, except in the case of vessels engaged in the wrecking business.—The Mulhouse, Case No. 9,910.

§ 38. —— Deviation, delay, and injury to salvor vessel.

Delays for saving ships, goods, or mariners, producing uncommon risks, are deviations which are not excused under policies of insurance, and the increased risk incurred by the owner is to be considered in determining the amount of salvage. —Warder v. La Belle Creole, Case No. 17,165.

It is not a deviation for a vessel to go out of her course three miles to speak another at sea, on seeing a signal for that purpose, nor to delay three hours to take from a foreign ship, bound to a foreign port, shipwrecked mariners of the United States, for the purpose of bringing them direct to the United States.—Williams v. Box of Bullion, Case No. 17,717.

A stoppage to save life is not a deviation which discharges a policy of insurance, but a stoppage merely to save property is a deviation. —The Henry Ewbank, Case No. 6,376.

The mere possibility that a deviation for the purpose of rendering a salvage service might have forfeited the insurance will not be considered in fixing the amount.—Blagg v. The E. M. Bicknell, Case No. 1,476.

Damages caused by grounding to a steamer which, being delayed by a salvage service rendered by her, reached her destination at low water, and struck in going over Pollock Rip, are too remote, and cannot be recovered against the salved vessel.—Winso v. The Cornelius Grinnell, Case No. 17,883.

Neither the fact that the salvor vessel was saved from exposure to storm by going into a port of distress with a disabled steamer under tow, nor the fact that she was injured in a subsequent storm by reason of the delay, can be considered in fixing compensation for salvage.—The Saragossa, Case No. 12,335.

§ 39. —— Expenses and disbursements of salvors.

Extraordinary expenses, such as the breaking of a propeller, in rendering salvage services, are not included in the compensation.—Hattrick v. The Spanish Bark, Case No. 6,218a.

The salvor vessel will be allowed, out of the salvage, extra expenses incident to the salvage service, which may have been incurred over and above her ordinary outlays.—Sonderburg v. Ocean Tow Boat Co., Case No. 13,175.

The salvor of a vessel which is not derelict has no right, after the vessel is brought into port, to provide supplies which will create a lien upon the vessel, or charge the owner therewith.—Vincent v. The Penelope, Case No. 16,-946; Locke v. Same, Id.

The owner of blocks rented for the purpose of getting a wrecked vessel afloat, the owners having agreed that the vessel should be responsible for their hire and safe return, cannot recover either against the property saved, or in personam against the owners of the wreck, as a salvor, either the price agreed upon or for their loss.—Squire v. One Hundred Tons of Iron, Case No. 13,270.

The master will be allowed, out of the fund for disbursements, for pumping necessary to save the vessel after arrival into a port in which she was towed by a salvor vessel.—The D. W. Vaughan, Case No. 4,222.

§ 40. —— Negligence or misconduct.

Intoxication of salvors and refusal to work forfeits compensation in part.—Anonymous, Case No. 429.

Negligence of salvors in failing to make sounding resulting in a vessel being heaved off one shoal, and onto another, will reduce salvage.—The Ashburton, Case No. 575.

The fact that the salvors' boats were not large enough to carry the packages intact will not justify breaking them where there are other vessels at hand sufficiently large for the purpose.—The Isaac Allerton, Case No. 7,088.

Error of judgment in not saving property liable to rapid deterioration is ground for reducing salvage, but not for withholding all compensation.—Curry v. The H. J. May, Case No. 3,494.

From a salvage award of $15,000, for six days' towing of a rudderless bark, $3,500 deducted for the mistake of the mate in charge of the salvor vessel in casting off the towing hawser and anchoring the bark when off Absecom.—The John G. Paint, Case No. 7,346.

An allowance of $23,000 was reduced $5,000 for the failure of a wrecking master to make careful soundings, resulting in an ineffectual effort to heave the vessel off of a shoal in the wrong direction.—The Sultan, Case No. 13,601.

Salvage on cotton saved from a burnt and stranded vessel held should not be reduced for neglect of salvors to remove 46 bales undiscovered, where such bales were subsequently saved by others.—The Northwester, Case No. 10,333.

The want of good faith may be such as to reduce the salvage to a very small sum, or to destroy all claims to it.—Western Transp. Co. v. The Great Western, Case No. 17,443.

Refusal of salvors to interrupt their work of saving cargo to save an anchor and chain and rigging at the request of the master held not misconduct.—The Northwester, Case No. 10,333.

Salvors are bound to take reasonable care to prevent plundering by others. Slight negligence in this respect may diminish the award, and gross negligence works an entire forfeiture. —Nickerson v. The John Perkins, Case No. 10,-252.

Slight negligence in taking care of the property saved diminishes the amount of salvage, while gross negligence works a total forfeiture.—The Mulhouse, Case No. 9,910.

Salvors are liable for damage done to the sails of the vessel saved by being negligently left exposed to sparks from the salvor vessel.—The Senator, Case No. 12,664.

Salvage awarded to a passenger of the nautical profession, who had rendered extraordinary service to the vessel in peril, held should be materially reduced for his illegal usurpation of authority over the vessel after the services were rendered.—The Pennsylvania, Case No. 10,945.

Slight misconduct of salvors under great provocation, not resulting in any loss, should not reduce the amount.—The D. M. Hall v. The John Land, Case No. 3,939.

Only compensation for work and labor performed in saving cargo allowed, where stranded vessel was bored with augers, and guilt could not be fixed.—The Francis Ashby, Case No. 5,040.

A boy who refused to join in plundering a derelict vessel, but who took trifling articles "as keepsakes," held entitled to a less share than he otherwise would have had.—The L. T. Knights, Case No. 8,585.

Stores found on board a derelict may be used by the salvors for necessary subsistence during the course of the service.—The Ida L. Howard, Case No. 6,999.

The refusal of a tug to render towage services to a disabled ship on request held to reduce the grade of salvage allowance.—The Bolivar v. The Chalmette, Case No. 1,611.

In the case of illiberal conduct of salvors in dealing with a vessel in distress, liberal compensation will not be awarded.—The Howard, Case No. 6,752a.

§ 41. Value of property in peril, how determined.

The value of the vessel to the owners for purposes of repair will be adopted as the value of the vessel in fixing the salvor's award. Such value is determined by deducting from the value of the vessel just before the accident the cost of repair.—The Ellen Holgate, Case No. 4,375a.

Where it appears in the case of a vessel saved from wreck that a sum may be deposited to secure salvage, a smaller proportion will be awarded than in the case of a judicial sale, where full value is seldom obtained.—Rutter v. The Ferris, Case No. 12,178.

A vessel with cargo of cotton on fire was towed into shallow water, and scuttled and sunk. Held, that the amount which they brought at a sale in such condition was the measure of value in estimating salvage.—Hayden v. The C. W. Cochrane, Case No. 6,258.

The value of goods saved depreciating from time is to be ascertained at the time of filing the libel where salvors refused to deliver property to the owners and delayed filing bill.—The Albion Lincoln, Case No. 144.

In the case of a seizure and bringing to port of a vessel in the hands of mutinied slaves the court awarded one-third the appraised value of vessel and cargo as salvage compensation, but refused salvage as to the slaves, they having no value as such in the district (Connecticut), and there being no law under which they could be sold.—Gedney v. L'Amistad, Case No. 5,294a.

§ 42. Derelict property.

Salvage of derelict property is compensated by the same rules that obtain in respect to property not derelict.—The Ida L. Howard, Case No. 6,999.

The fact of the property being derelict only makes out a prima facie case of extreme danger of total loss, which enhances the award.—Hall v. The Paquet Bot De Cayenne, Case No. 5,941.

The rate of salvage in cases of derelict is seldom more than one-half of the net proceeds of the property saved. Two-thirds of the whole proceeds have sometimes been allowed, but the whole proceeds are never allowed unless their amount is so small that less would be an inadequate compensation.—The Waterloo, Case No. 17,257.

The amount of salvage in case of a derelict ought not to be less than one-third, unless the property be very valuable or the services very inconsiderable.—Tyson v. Prior, Case No. 14,-319.

In a case of derelict, where there are no peculiar circumstances, a moiety is awarded.—The Galaxy, Case No. 5,186; The John Wurts, Id. 7,434; The Charles Henry, Id. 2,617; Hindry v. The Priscilla, Id. 6,515.

The rule to allow a moiety in case of derelict is not departed from, except under extraordinary circumstances.—The Henry Ewbank, Case No. 6,376.

The rule to allow a moiety is not inflexible, and a greater or less proportion may be allowed. —The Elizabeth and Jane, Case. No. 4,356; Howland v. Two Hundred and Ten Barrels of Oil, Id. 6,801; The Rising Sun, Id. 11,858; Rowe v. The Brig, Id. 12,093; Sprague v. One Hundred and Forty Barrels of Flour, Id. 13,253; In re Two Hundred and Ten Barrels of Oil, Id. 14,297.

Salvors of derelict vessel stand on same footing as other salvors.—The Georgiana, Case No. 5,355.

One-third of the gross proceeds allowed in the case of a derelict sent in by a salvage crew from a vessel bound to a foreign port.—The Mary Ford, Case No. 9,212a.

Where a canal boat cast adrift from a tow was picked up in Long Island Sound, a salvage of 50 per cent. was proper.—The Capt. Geo. W. Wright, Case No. 2,393.

In the case of a whaler which lost her voyage to save the cargo of another whaler which was stranded and derelict five-sixths was awarded on a total valuation of $6,740.—In re Two Hundred and Ten Barrels of Oil, Case No. 14,297.

In the case of a derelict vessel navigated into port after three days of great exertion and imminent danger, a decree of the district court allowing the salvors one-seventh of the net value, of $21,000, was reversed, and a decree awarded for a moiety.—Rowe v. The Brig, Case No. 12,-093.

In cases of salvage of derelict, the proceeds remaining after payment of all costs and disbursements will be equally divided between the salvors and the owners.—The Cayenne, Case No. 2,532.

§ 43. Effect of special contracts.

Nothing but a contract to pay a given sum for the services to be rendered, or a binding engagement to pay at all events, whether successful or unsuccessful, will operate as a bar to a meritorious salvage claim.—Coffin v. The John Shaw, Case No. 2,949.

Salvage contracts are presumed prima facie to be fair, but, if proven to be unconscionable, they will not be enforced.—Eads v. The H. D. Bacon, Case No. 4,232.

The burden of proving that a salvage agreement between the master and salvors is contrary to equity and justice is on those attacking it.—The Clotilda, Case No. 2,903.

A contract to perform salvage service for a certain sum will bar a recovery of a greater amount, irrespective of the value of the labor performed.—Bounty v. Kerrin, Case No. 1,697a; The Whitaker, Id. 17,525.

An agreement fixing the amount of a salvage award will not be set aside, and commensurate salvage given, because it proves to be a hard one for the salvor.—The Silver Spray, Case No. 12,857.

A vessel employed for a stipulated sum by the principal salvors with the acquiescence of the master of the wrecked ship cannot, under any circumstances, recover salvage in addition to the sum agreed.—The Yucatan, Case No. 18,194.

Services rendered in lightening a vessel, with the understanding that they are to be compensated on the basis of daily wages, cannot afterwards be turned into a higher grade, without supervening circumstances changing either the peril or the contract.—The Emulous, Case No. 4,480.

An agreement made with the head and spokesman of wreckers, by persons who had bought the wreck, to assist in saving materials, held binding on the wreckers, though special authorization to make the agreement was not shown.—Dominy v. Anchors. Sails, etc., of the D'Alberti, Case No. 3,977.

The stipulations of a written contract are not enforceable against the person for whom the salvage was rendered except so far as they accord with the conscience of the court.—Williams v. The Jenny Lind, Case No. 17,723.

A contract for salvage services will be disregarded if exorbitant or unreasonable or extorted through pressure of impending calamity.—The A. D. Patchin, Case No. 87; Cowell v. The Brothers, Id. 3,294; Schutz v. The Nancy, Id. 12,495; Warder v. La Belle Creole, Id. 17,165.

Salvage contracts will be set aside, not merely in case of fraud or extortion, but where the compensation is excessive.—Sturgis v. The Edward, Case No. 13,575.

Where the sum stipulated in a contract for contingent compensation is unreasonable because of overvaluation of the vessel, it will be reduced by the court.—Collins v. The Fort Wayne, Case No. 3,012.

A contract for payment of salvors, at all events where the danger is not great, and success is reasonably certain, should have little influence on the amount of the award.—Pope v. The Sapphire, Case No. 11,276.

A contract for salvage services procured by the salvors upon the false representation that other persons, to whom the contract was originally given, had abandoned the same, is not enforceable.—Eldridge v. Forty-One Bars of Railroad Iron, Case No. 4,334.

A contract for salvage service and salvage compensation, where the salvor has not taken advantage of his power to make an unreasonable bargain, will be enforced.—The J. G. Paint, Case No. 7,318; Bearse v. Three Hundred and Forty Pigs of Copper, Id. 1,193; Collins v. The Fort Wayne, Id. 3,012.

A contract for salvage services will be enforced where it was deliberately made, and not apparently oppressive.—Gager v. The A. D. Patchin, Case No. 5,170.

The salvors' terms cannot be repudiated after they have been rendered by permission of the master, under the impression that they had been assented to by him, where they were not compulsory or unconscionable.—The Ellen Holgate, Case No. 4,375a.

A contract for salvage services to be rendered a vessel in distress will not be disturbed where fairly made, and not in excess of the amount which would have been awarded without the contract.—The Ellen Holgate, Case No. 4,375a.

But it must appear that no advantage was taken of the situation of the owners, and that the rate of compensation is just and reasonable. —The Emulous, Case No. 4,480.

A salvor by contract is not the agent of the owners, and cannot create against them or the property saved any liability beyond the contract price.—The Marquette, Case No. 9,101.

A contract for the salvage of a canal boat and cargo, made by the master, when all parties interested are within easy reach, will not be enforced where the rate agreed upon is exorbitant.—In re Two Hundred and Two Tons of Coal, Case No. 14,299.

Vessel towing disabled steamer held not entitled to contract price where the hawser parted, and the latter proceeded under sails, but entitled to salvage.—The Gary v. The Sherman, Case No. 5,259.

Rule of salvage fixed by contract is not imperative as to subsequent services.—Bearse v. Three Hundred and Forty Pigs of Copper, Case No. 1,193.

A contract made by the master with salvors, for the recovery of the cargo of a sunken vessel, sustained.—Harley v. Four Hundred and Sixty-Seven Bars of Railroad Iron, Etc., Case No. 6,068.

As against prior lien holders, a contract for contingent compensation will be enforced only to the extent of an equitable allowance.—Collins v. The Fort Wayne, Case No. 3,012.

An agreement to pay $3,000, for towing 90 miles a vessel worth $8,000, loaded with sugar, sustained by the court.—The J. G. Paint, Case No. 7,318.

$500 agreed to be paid for towing a schooner from a pier on the other side of which a vessel was burning, where both the labor and risk were insignificant, held exorbitant, and $100 allowed. —The Jacob E. Ridgway, Case No. 7,155.

An agreement to pay $2,500 for pulling off a brig aground on Romer shoal held exorbitant, and $1,250 was allowed.—The Homely, Case No. 6,661.

An agreement by a pilot boat to tow into port, for $2,500, a dismasted brig in distress, worth, with cargo, $3,800, made under threats to leave the brig, where the service occupied nine days, held inequitable, and $1,500 allowed. —The Wexford, Case No. 17,472.

A contract to pay $2,000 for towing a rudderless bark from her anchorage off the highlands below Sandy Hook, where she was in no immediate danger, to New York, held excessive, and the allowance was reduced to $1,000.—Sturgis v. The Edward, Case No. 13,575.

Contract to pay $10,000 for getting out cargo and raising hull of vessel scuttled to extinguish a fire, worth $28,000, held reasonable.—The Osteonthe, Case No. 10,608a.

§ 44. Instances of amount of award—Towage services.

5 per cent. awarded for mere towage service to disabled vessel in no immediate danger.—The Bolivar v. The Chalmette, Case No. 1,611.

20 per cent. allowed a brig for keeping by and towing for six days a bark which had lost her rudder in a gale, valued with her cargo at $75,000.—The John G. Paint, Case No. 7,346.

25 per cent. on a valuation of $90,000 allowed for bringing into port, after 13 days of severe labor and hardship, a schooner not derelict.—The Lovett Peacock, Case No. 8,555.

A wrecking tug allowed $25 per hour for towing into New York harbor in cold and tempestuous weather a bark anchored on the south shore of Long Island.—Sturgis v. The Vickery, Case No. 13,577a.

Owner awarded $50 for towing schooner from slip on fire.—The Arlington, Case No. 534.

$50 awarded five persons for saving a raft of spars worth $700, found floating out to sea in New York harbor.—In re Raft of Spars, Case No. 11,529.

$400 held a reasonable compensation for towing a vessel with cargo of cotton on fire, aground in a harbor, to a suitable place to scuttle her.—The Osteonthe, Case No. 10,608a.

$400 allowed a tug on a total value of $1,600 for picking up canal boat which had broken from tow in New York harbor in heavy weather.—The Ontario, Case No. 10,541.

$500 awarded on a net value of $37,500 to a tug for going to the rescue of a barge loaded with railroad cars, drifting in a field of ice.—Seaman v. Erie Ry. Co., Case No. 12,582.

$750 allowed on net proceeds of $2,000 of vessel lying dismasted, and in a helpless condition, near the shore of a dangerous coast, at a great distance from any port.—Hattrick v. The Spanish Bark, Case No. 6,218a.

$800 allowed on a valuation of $12,000, for towing into port a vessel in distress, but in no great danger.—The Entire, Case No. 4,502.

$900 allowed a vessel worth, with cargo, $230,000, for towing a disabled steamer, worth, with cargo, $100,000, 63 miles to port, incurring a loss of three hours' time to the salvor, and saving the other four days.—The Saragossa, Case No. 12,334.

$1,000 allowed a tug for towing into New York harbor a steamer, whose machinery was disabled by a collision, drifting out to sea in a storm.—Sturgis v. The Joseph Johnson, Case No. 13,576.

$1,000 allowed on a total value of $60,000 for towing a leaking vessel from the Southwest Spit into New York harbor.—Phillips v. The United States, Case No. 11,107.

$1,700 allowed a valuable steamer for going in search of, and towing to place of safety, a disabled schooner, worth, with cargo, $11,000.—The W. F. Garrison, Case No. 17,475.

$2,000 awarded a vessel worth $20,000 for two hours' towing of a disabled steamer worth $60,000, where a tug sent for was met on the way, and the weather was fair.—Pacific Coast Wrecking Co. v. The Eastport, Case No. 10,646.

$2,000 awarded a propeller valued with cargo at $200,000, for towing 45 miles, into harbor, a steamer, worth with cargo $85,000, temporarily disabled in a storm on Lake Michigan.—Ensign v. The Peerless, Case No. 4,494.

$2,250 allowed for towing to Sandy Hook brig rigged with jury masts, discovered 175 miles from New York, valued, with cargo, at $18,500.—The Minnie Miller, Case No. 9,638.

$2,800 awarded where valuable steamer saved, with little danger, in a few hours, brig and cargo valued at $95,000.—The George Gilchrist, Case No. 5,333.

$3,300 awarded schooner, valued, with cargo, at $8,500, for 24 hours' towage services rendered a disabled bark worth, with cargo, $70,000.—Norris v. The Island City, Case No. 10,306.

$3,600 allowed for towing to Boston a ship valued, with cargo, at $120,000, anchored near dangerous reefs near the shore of Cohasset.—Hennessey v. The Versailles, Case No. 6,365.

$4,000 awarded a vessel worth, with cargo, $275,000, for towing into New York harbor disabled steamer, out of the track of commerce, worth, with cargo, $70,000, where one day's time was lost.—The Rebecca Clyde, Case No. 11,621.

$4,500 awarded where the vessel saved was worth, with cargo, $70,000.—Cromwell v. The Island City, Case No. 3,410.

$5,000 allowed tug for towing to place of safety disabled steamship worth $47,000.—The Allegiance, Case No. 207.

$5,500 awarded to two steamers for towing vessel worth, with cargo, $160,000.—Bowley v. Goddard, Case No. 1,736.

$6,000 awarded an Atlantic liner worth, with cargo, $800,000, for towing into New York harbor vessel worth, with cargo, $85,000, found 90 miles from Sandy Hook in disabled condition.—Ocean Steam-Nav. Co. v. The Revenue, Case No. 10,413.

$9,000 allowed salvor vessel worth, with cargo, $434,000, for towing into Norfolk disabled steamer, worth, with cargo, $100,000.—The Saragossa, Case No. 12,335.

$10,000 allowed a tug valued at $60,000, for towing to place of safety a ship worth with cargo $160,000, which had dragged her anchors in a gale in San Francisco harbor.—Johnson v. The Industry, Case No. 7,391.

$10,000 awarded to a vessel valued, with cargo, at $242,000, for towing into port vessel valued, with cargo, at $244,000, in favorable weather, and by a loss of four days' time.—The Costa Rica, Case No. 3,262.

$10,000 awarded for services in towing, in fine weather, a steamer with broken shaft, worth, with cargo, $480,000, by a vessel worth, with cargo, $220,000, detained two and a half days in rendering the service.—The Colon, Case No. 3,024.

$13,000 allowed on property saved valued at $70,000.—Adams v. The Island City, Case No. 55.

$15,000 allowed to two tugs as towage compensation for towing a ship worth, with cargo, $250,000, from Romer shoal into the port of New York.—The Stratton Audley, Cases Nos. 13,529, 13,530.

$30,000 allowed two tugs for towing from the False Hook, into New York harbor, a vessel worth, with cargo and freight, $230,000, where the services lasted about 20 hours.—The Puritan, Case No. 11,474.

§ 45. —— Pilotage services.
$100, in addition to pilotage, allowed a pilot for bringing into port a vessel which was being navigated under a jury rig and makeshift rudder.—Topping v. The Warren, Case No. 14,101.

$800 awarded for navigating disabled vessel to port after she had got inside the Florida reefs.—The Herman, Case No. 6,406.

$900 allowed wrecking vessel, for piloting into port brig found among dangerous shoals, worth, with cargo, $12,000.—The Augusta, Case No. 646.

$1,500 awarded salvors on ship and cargo worth $60,000.—The Calcutta, Case No. 2,298.

$2,400 awarded pilots for bringing into port ship and cargo worth $38,000, left by master and crew in peril, with intention of returning.—Bean v. The Grace Brown, Case No. 1,171.

$2,500 allowed for piloting vessel, worth, with cargo, about $150,000.—Curry v. The Loch Goil, Case No. 3,495.

$5,000 awarded to a steamer worth, with her cargo, $500,000, for piloting out to sea, without any considerable danger to herself, a sailing vessel worth $122,500, from a position of considerable peril among the shoals off Cape May.—Winso v. The Cornelius Grinnell, Case No. 17,-883.

§ 46. —— Saving cargo.
From 5 to 55 per cent. allowed for saving different portions of cargo of shipwrecked vessel.—The Mulhouse, Case No. 9,910.

8 per cent. allowed first salvors on the value of the cotton saved by the second set, for saving it from fire by scuttling or cutting a hole in the side of the ship.—The Concordia, Case No. 3,092.

12 per cent. awarded on $118,202, the appraised value of cotton saved.—The Bickmore, Case No. 1,388.

14 per cent. awarded on dry cotton saved, amounting to $168,000, and 40 per cent. on damaged cotton, amounting to $22,000, and on materials sold at $3,078.—The Harwood, Case No. 6,186.

For saving a cargo of cotton, 15 per cent. allowed on dry cotton, amounting to $121,826, 33⅓ per cent. on damaged cotton, amounting to $40,000, and 45 and 50 per cent. on the portion dived for.—The John Wesley, Case No. 7,433.

19 per cent. awarded on $123,000 worth of cargo saved by 152 men working 13 days.—The Crown, Case No. 3,450.

One-fifth only allowed for saving a cargo of negroes valued at $38,800, where the risk was great, but the cargo, from its nature, was easily moved.—Jerby v. One Hundred and Ninety-Four Slaves, Case No. 7,288.

20 per cent. allowed salvors on a gross valuation of $207,000.—The Mississippi, Case No. 9,-650.

From 20 to 50 per cent. allowed on different parts of cargo of cotton saved from burnt and stranded vessel.—The Northwester, Case No. 10,-333.

20 per cent., 50 per cent., and 60 per cent. allowed, respectively, on net value of $23,904, $7,-967, and $1,283, in the case of three expeditions to a wreck.—The Telamon, Case No. 13,-820.

One-fourth allowed on a valuation of $12,583, where a small schooner loaded with coal saved floating cases and boxes.—Hartshorn v. Twenty-Five Cases Silk, Case No. 6,168a.

Salvors allowed 25 per cent. of cargo saved uninjured and 50 and 60 per cent. of damaged portions.—The America, Case No. 279.

Salvors allowed on cargo of sugar 27 per cent. of portion saved dry and 42 per cent. of injured portion.—The Arabella, Case No. 501.

Salvors allowed from 28 per cent. to 50 per cent. of value of cargo saved after unsuccessful efforts to float vessel.—In re Buckley v. The William M. Jones, Case No. 2,095.

30 per cent. allowed for saving cargo and materials valued at $18,000.—The Joseph A. Davis, Case No. 7,534.

30 per cent. allowed on $60,000, the value of cargo and materials saved by 145 salvors, employed five weeks.—The Eliza Mallory, Case No. 4,365.

30 per cent. allowed on undamaged cargo, and 40 and 50 per cent. on damaged cargo, and all of certain other portions saved by diving.—The Mississippi, Case No. 9,651.

For saving cargo and material valued at $41,-756, 30 and 50 per cent. allowed.—The Athalia, Case No. 598.

30 and 50 per cent. allowed, on different portions of cargo valued at $56,093.—The Nathaniel Kimball, Case No. 10,033.

One-third of the gross value allowed for saving goods from a wreck with no unusual labor or difficulty.—Small v. The Messenger, Case No. 12,961.

One-third part awarded as salvage in a case where the vessel was lost and part of the cargo saved, and where the salvage was not attended with extraordinary hazard or difficulty.—Weeks v. The Catharina Maria, Case No. 17,351; Jurgenson v. Same, Id.

One-third the proceeds of merchandise, and one-eighth the value of plate and money saved, awarded to a vessel for standing by another in a helpless condition at sea.—Warder v. La Belle Creole, Case No. 17,165.

An allowance of one-third the value of cargo saved for services of a tug consuming half an hour reduced on appeal from nearly $2,700 to $750.—Mattingly v. Three Hundred and Fifty-Seven Bales of Cotton, Case No. 9,294.

One-third allowed on cargo and materials, valued at $31,220, of vessel wrecked on the American reef, saved by four vessels, carrying 49 men. —The F. A. Everett, Case No. 4,603.

One-third allowed for cargo and materials valued at $58,751, saved from ship lost upon Carrysfoot reef.—The Brewster, Case No. 1,852.

35 per cent. on net value of cargo saved, and 45 per cent. on net value of materials, allowed in the case of a vessel wrecked on Florida reef.—Peacon v. The Amazon, Case No. 10,-871.

Salvors allowed 35 per cent. on dry cargo and 50 per cent. on wet cargo saved.—The Ajax, Case No. 117.

36 to 45 per cent. awarded on the value of property saved from a wreck in bad weather.—The Mary Hale, Case No. 9,213.

Two-fifths of net proceeds of vessel and cargo allowed for rescuing it from Malay pirates.—Parter v. The Friendship, Case No. 10,783.

40 per cent. awarded on cargo, 6 per cent. on specie, and 15 per cent. on surveyor's instruments, the specie and surveying instruments having been in no great danger.—The Merchant, Case No. 9,435.

43 to 50 per cent. of cargo and materials saved from a wreck awarded to the salvors.—The May Howland, Case No. 9,348.

43 per cent. allowed upon gross valuation of $41,924 for saving cargo, mainly by diving, from a vessel totally wrecked on Florida reefs.—The Yucatan, Case No. 18,194.

Salvors allowed 45 per cent. of proceeds of sale of cargo saved from ship burning at anchorage. —The Albert Gallatin, Case No. 140.

45 per cent. allowed on net proceeds of cargo valued at $5,500 saved by wreckers.—The North America, Case No. 10,313; The Norway, Id. 10,356.

45 and 50 per cent. of $8,276, the net value of materials and cargo saved, awarded salvors who worked five days in rough weather trying to float a vessel aground on Carrysfoot reef.—The Elizabeth Bruce, Case No. 4,358.

47 per cent. allowed on the value of cargo and materials saved.—The Emery, Case No. 4,-445.

47 per cent. awarded on cargo saved, valued at $29,153.—The Cora Nellie, Case No. 3,217.

One-half and one-third of net value allowed for saving cargo of a vessel wrecked on Charleston bar.—Stephens v. Bales of Cotton, Case No. 13,366.

For saving the cargo of a wrecked vessel, consisting of a locomotive and a quantity of railroad iron, court allowed one-half of the net value of the property saved.—The Cimbus, Case No. 2,-718.

One-half the value of cargo transshipped and 4 per cent. of that of the vessel and remaining cargo allowed where a brig caught and damaged in the ice in Delaware Bay was rescued by the removal of her cargo and towed into port by a steam tug.—Virden v. The Caroline, Case No. 16,956.

One-half allowed on cargo amounting to $7,500 saved from vessel wrecked on Pelican shoals.—The Robert Morris, Case No. 11,893.

One-half the net value of $96,309 allowed for saving cargo of ship sunk in five fathoms of water, where 434 persons were employed two months.—The Isaac Allerton, Case No. 7,088.

A moiety awarded where boxes of wearing apparel were picked up in a heavy sea at some risk.—Curtis v. Quantity of Wearing Apparel, Case No. 3,504.

55 per cent. allowed where sugar was saved from hold of abandoned vessel by great labor.—Curry v. The H. J. May, Case No. 3,494.

60 per cent. allowed for saving brass and other materials stripped from vessel after abandonment by original salvors.—Peacon v. The Amazon, Case No. 10,871.

$326 allowed for saving additional property, of the value of $632, by small boats picking up goods and materials afloat and ashore.—The F. A. Everett, Case No. 4,603.

$5,740 allowed, on valuation of $6,740, for saving oil and materials from a vessel abandoned at a distance of 1,000 miles from any country where assistance could be procured.—Howland v. Two Hundred and Ten Barrels of Oil, Case No. 6,801.

$6,000 allowed for lightening cargo worth $20,-000 from steamer cast ashore in December.—The Clotilda, Case No. 2,903.

$11,931 awarded on a net value of $35,821, in the case of a wreck upon the Florida reef.—The Tellumah, Case No. 13,823.

$16,000 awarded in the case of cargo, valued at $700,000, of a disabled vessel towed to port 730 miles by another vessel belonging to the same owners.—Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Ten Bales Gunny Bags, Case No. 10,648.

Eight vessels, with 120 men, saving cargo and materials from a wreck in boisterous weather, awarded $18,468 on a valuation of $50,227.—The Maryland, Case No. 9,218.

$21,050 allowed on cargo of iron valued at $36,222, saved, by diving, from vessel wrecked on Carysfort reef.—The Helen E. Booker, Case No. 6,330.

Salvors entitled to $23,500 on cargo valued at $30,000 about to be jettisoned by master to float ship and received by salvors who stayed by ship and helped at pumps.—The Alabamian, Case No. 128.

$33,852 allowed for one month's labor in saving property worth $91,076 from ship stranded on Florida reef.—The Indian Hunter, Case No. 7,024.

§ 47. —— Floating vessel aground.

15 per cent. allowed for staying by ship in peril, and dragging her over a shoal, into safe anchorage.—Brooks v. The William Penn, Case No. 1,965.

Where vessel and cargo were of the gross value of $73,000, 15 per cent. of net value allowed.—The Ashburton, Case No. 575.

One-fourth awarded upon a valuation of $35,391, for rescuing, in a partially damaged condition, a vessel and cargo stranded upon Florida reef.—The Howard, Case No. 6,752a.

One-third of net value, of $14,500, allowed for floating vessel aground on Loo-Key shoals by discharging 130 tons of ballast, carrying out anchors, etc.—The Iconiun, Case No. 6,995.

42 per cent. allowed for saving, in bad weather, at considerable risk, brig aground on Alligator reef, worth, with cargo, about $18,500.—Bennett v. The Tevere, Case No. 1,325.

45 per cent. allowed on a net value of $11,616 in the case of a vessel grounded on the Florida reef, where four days were spent in getting her off.—The Scotsman, Case No. 12,515.

Moiety allowed where value small and property saved from inevitable destruction.—Anonymous, Case No. 430.

One-half awarded where the vessel and cargo aground on a Florida reef would have been a total loss but for the timely assistance of the salvors, rendered at great hazard.—The Lexington, Case No. 8,336.

$400 allowed a wrecking tug for pulling off the Romer shoals a schooner worth, with cargo, $23,000.—The J. F. Farlan, Cases Nos. 7,313, 7,314.

$1,200 allowed on a net value of $38,000, for pulling off a vessel aground in a dangerous position in the channel of Charleston harbor.—Scott v. The Clara E. Bergen, Case No. 12,526a.

Small tugs, assisting in pulling off steamship worth, with cargo, $500,000, aground in harbor, allowed $1,200.—Baker v. Hemenway, Case No. 770.

A vessel driven on an island in Boston harbor in the daytime set a signal of distress. A tug pulled her off and towed her to a dock. Held, a salvage service, for which $1,500, on a valuation of $33,000, should be awarded.—The M. B. Stetson, Case No. 9,363.

Salvors allowed $2,500 for carrying out anchors for grounded ship worth $20,000.—The Albus, Case No. 148.

Salvors allowed $2,600 on vessel worth $11,000 saved by 20 salvors in 2 hours' time.—The Annie Leland, Case No. 421.

$6,000 allowed for saving a vessel aground on Pellican shoals, worth $20,000.—The John and Albert, Case No. 7,333.

$10,178 allowed professional wreckers for getting ship and cargo of cotton off the Florida reef, being one-fourth of the net value.—Walter v. The Montgomery, Case No. 17,120.

$12,000 held reasonable award for getting ship worth, with cargo, $125,000, off a reef at Key West, but reduced one-half because of delay resulting from negligence and gross errors of judgment.—The Diadem, Case No. 3,874.

$13,000 allowed upon a valuation of $95,000 to professional wreckers for getting a ship off of Florida reefs.—The York, Case No. 18,140.

$15,000 awarded for floating ship, aground on Carysfort reef, worth, with cargo, $46,470, and navigating her, through intricate channel, to open sea.—The Euphrasia, Case No. 4,545.

$17,000 awarded for saving a ship and cargo worth $85,000, grounded on Crocus reef, in imminent danger, after 36 hours' labor by 8 wrecking vessels and 92 men.—The Sierra Nevada, Case No. 12,846.

$17,000 allowed on a total valuation of $165,000 for lightening a stranded vessel, and towing her 70 miles, to Key West.—Pent v. The Ocean Belle, Case No. 10,961.

$20,540 awarded on a net value of $130,000 in the case of a vessel aground five miles west of Sombero light.—The Rockland, Case No. 11,981.

$23,000 allowed upon a net value of $127,000 to 12 wrecking vessels, carrying 108 men, for services rendered a vessel aground upon Couch reef.—The Sultan, Case No. 13,601.

§ 48. —— Navigating shorthanded vessel.

One-fourth allowed where an American brig, on the northwest coast of Africa, whose officers were dead or dying from coast fever, was rescued by a British naval vessel, and sent home in charge of one of its officers.—The Huntress, Case No. 6,912.

One-third allowed on a gross value of $4,500, in the case of a bark drifting at sea, with the greater part of her crew dead, and the rest rendered helpless by disease, discovered 40 miles from a port.—Sturtevant v. The George Nicholaus, Case No. 13,578.

$300 awarded on a gross value of $5,000, to a seaman, who, being deserted by the rest of the crew, alone navigated the vessel to a place of safety.—The Triumph, Case No. 14,183.

Salvors of brig worth, with cargo, $26,000, awarded $500 for placing navigator aboard in answer to signal of distress.—Butterworth v. The Washington, Case No. 2,253.

$3,000, on a valuation of $50,000, allowed for placing a navigator aboard and navigating back to port a vessel in charge of a disabled second mate, where the master was killed and the first mate seriously hurt in an affray.—The J. L. Bowen, Case No. 7,322.

$5,400 awarded for placing navigator aboard a vessel valued, with cargo, at $95,000, found in the middle of the Atlantic without a navigator.—The Czarina, Case No. 3,531.

§ 49. —— Derelict vessel.

Moiety allowed where vessel abandoned and partly stripped was worked into port.—Ashbahs v. The Trusty, Case No. 573a.

Moiety allowed for bringing into port abandoned vessel, found in sinking condition.—Bell v. The Ann, Case No. 1,245.

A moiety of the net proceeds of vessel and cargo allowed where found abandoned, on Bahama bank, and with great labor and danger brought to New York.—Concklin v. The Harmony, Case No. 3,089.

In cases of extraordinary merit or extraordinary peril to the rescuing ship, the owner should be allowed a moiety of the salvage.—The Cumberland, Case No. 3,470.

One-ninth awarded owners of salvor vessel for towing 40 miles, into port, derelict vessel, worth with cargo $9,300.—Evans v. The Charles, Case No. 4,556.

One-third allowed where a brig deserted by her crew was navigated to port with great difficulty by relief crew from another vessel.—Bond v. The Cora, Cases Nos. 1,620, 1,621.

Two-fifths allowed where vessel with valuable cargo saved derelict vessel of little value without much risk or labor.—The Georgiana, Case No. 5,355.

Three-fifths of the gross value allowed where a derelict found in a sinking condition was, at great risk, and without boats or anchors, brought 3,000 miles to port.—Mason v. The Blaireau, Case No. 9,230.

One-half allowed where a portion of the crew of the salvor vessel went on board an abandoned vessel and brought her to port after great peril and exertion.—Morehouse v. The Jefferson, Case No. 9,793.

Where a whaling vessel broke up her voyage to save derelict property valued at $3,831, held, that one-half should be allowed, less a moiety of the customs duties.—Johnson v. Certain Goods, Case No. 7,377.

One-half allowed on a gross value of $4,000 where a pilot boat went in search of a derelict schooner, and, after great labor, found and towed her to port.—The Saxon, Case No. 12,412.

$75 awarded for six hours' service for saving a water-logged and abandoned scow, worth, with cargo, $5,000.—The Senator, Case No. 12,664.

$350 allowed for four days laborious service in saving vessel worth $2,000.—The Bee, Case No. 1,219.

$750 allowed on a valuation of $3,000 for towing into port derelict schooner loaded with lumber, found by fishing sloop 12 miles from Sandy Hook.—The John E. Clayton, Case No. 7,338.

$850 allowed, being one-half gross amount for bringing into port in pleasant weather derelict found in accustomed track of coasters and fishermen.—The W. D. B., Case No. 17,306.

For saving vessel and freight valued at $3,500, salvors allowed $1,200.—The Attacapas, Case No. 637.

$1,500, on a valuation of $9,500, allowed a schooner for towing into port derelict bark found near the mouth of Delaware Bay.—Hall v. The Paquet Bot De Cayenne, Case No. 5,941.

$2,000 allowed 36 salvors, on a net value of $12,000, for services rendered derelict vessel stranded in Boston harbor.—The Ida L. Howard, Case No. 6,999.

$2,500 allowed on a valuation of $6,400 where a coal-laden schooner found derelict 50 miles from Long Island was brought in by the mate and two men from a coasting schooner, in 30 hours, with some risk.—The L. T. Knights, Case No. 8,585.

Salvors allowed $6,000 for bringing into port brig abandoned 50 miles from Sandy Hook, worth with cargo $30,000.—The Anna, Cases Nos. 398, 401.

§ 50. —— Miscellaneous cases.

6 per cent. of $38,000, the value of the ship and cargo, allowed salvors standing by a vessel in peril, and relieving her of part of cargo.—The Courier, Case No. 3,283.

Where the crew of a captured vessel rescued her from the prize master, they were allowed one-fourth of the whole value of vessel and cargo.—Clayton v. The Harmony, Case No. 2,871.

45 per cent. allowed on a net value of $4,560.—The Nathan Hannan, Case No. 10,029.

1½ per cent. on $15,000 allowed.—Magoun v. Fifteen Thousand Dollars, Case No. 8,959.

A decree awarding $5,000 to a steamer worth, with cargo, $170,000, for staying by a stranded vessel during the night, and saving her passengers and crew, reversed on appeal, and $2,500 allowed.—The Underwriter, Case No. 14,341.

$4,000, the contract price for raising a sunken steamboat in the Mississippi, valued at $20,000, where the work was performed in 12 hours, by the use of machinery and diving bell worth $20,000, held reasonable.—Eads v. The H. D. Bacon, Case No. 4,232.

$15,000 allowed on a gross value of $500,000 to a passenger for devising and putting in execution a plan for steering a steamer with a broken rudder shaft.—Towle v. The Great Eastern, Case No. 14,110.

$60,000 allowed upon a valuation of $260,000 for nine months' labor, where the salvor vessel abandoned a whaling cruise at its commencement.—The D. M. Hall v. The John Land, Case No. 3,939.

§ 51. Apportionment — Right to share in general.

All the crew of a vessel, who were ready and willing to engage in salvage service rendered by the vessel to a wreck in the course of the voyage, are entitled to a share of the salvage awarded, though they may not have gone on board of the wreck.—The Centurion, Case No. 2,554.

Where, under a contract, a salvage of 50 per cent. was awarded to a schooner which came to the relief of the wrecked vessel, the court will not give the whole compensation to the master and owners, and leave the seamen to look to the other moiety for their reward.—Cartwell v. The John Taylor, Case No. 2,482.

An owner who was not aboard his vessel when it rendered services to another in peril and did not personally render services cannot claim salvage, but is entitled to compensation for use of his vessel.—The Arlington, Case No. 534.

The owners of the cargo of the salvor vessel detained in rendering the salvage service are entitled to compensation from the vessel to which the services are rendered, for loss arising therefrom.—The Colon, Case No. 3,024.

The freighter, being on board and consenting to deviation to save property, is entitled to salvage; otherwise not.—Bond v. The Cora, Case No. 1,621.

The agent of the owners of the lost property, having purchased the claim of part of the salvors, is allowed from the sum awarded as salvage the amount he paid for the claim, and no more.—The W. D. B., Case No. 17,306.

Contracts of consortship, where reasonable, will be sustained; but the burden of proof of such a contract is upon the party setting it up.—Pent v. Two Thousand Eight Hundred and Fifty Dollars, Case No. 10,961a.

Salvors who save life, but no property, will share with those who save property, according to the merits of the service.—The Mulhouse, Case No. 9,910.

§ 52. —— Right of owner of property used in service.

The owners of the salvor vessel are always entitled to a portion of the award, the amount usually being one-third.—Evans v. The Charles, Case No. 4,556.

The owner of a vessel can come in as a co-salvor only where his vessel has been the direct means of rendering the service for which salvage is awarded.—Waterbury v. Myrick, Case No. 17,253.

The owner of a vessel is not entitled to salvage where his ship master pledged the owner's funds to procure another vessel with which to render the salvage service.—Waterbury v. Myrick, Case No. 17,253.

An action in rem will not lie against money earned by a shipmaster and supercargo as a salvor, whilst in the general employ of the libelant as owner of the vessel and cargo.—Waterbury v. Myrick, Case No. 17,253.

The shipowner is not entitled to recover from the master a share in an award for saving property from an island, where it had been landed by the passengers of a wrecked vessel, where the master left his own vessel in port, and employed another in the salvage service, though he used the owner's funds in the service.—Waterbury v. Myrick, Case No. 17,253.

Salvage remuneration cannot be awarded to the owner of a tug on a libel filed by him where he was not present when the salvage service was awarded, but an equitable compensation will be made for the use of the tug.—The Jack Jewett, Case No. 7,122.

The owner of a tug chartered by a wrecking company to perform salvage service, but without stating the services intended, is entitled to salvage compensation.—The Birdie, Case No. 1,431.

The agreement by the master, for a specific sum, to victual, man, and navigate the vessel under the direction of the owner, does not make him owner or part owner, during the voyage.—The Nathaniel Hooper, Case No. 10,032.

Where the owner under a charter party is to equip, victual, man, and sail the ship, he is the owner for the voyage, and entitled to salvage earned by the ship, unless the deviation and delay were authorized by the shipper.—The Nathaniel Hooper, Case No. 10,032.

A person whose oxen are used in a salvage service does not thereby become a salvor.—The Ottawa, Case No. 10,617.

The whole salvage will be awarded to the wrecking firm, where the wages of the crew employed were paid by it, and they make no claim to salvage.—Browning v. Baker, Case No. 2,041.

§ 53. —— Various sets of salvors.

Licensed wrecking vessels are entitled to be admitted to assist in the order in which they arrive, if further assistance is needed; and later vessels, admitted after the exclusion of earlier arrivals, are not entitled to a full share.—Pent v. The Ocean Belle, Case No. 10,961.

A wrecking vessel is deemed to have "arrived," within rule 4 of the Florida district, when within hailing distance, ready to receive and obey orders.—Acosta v. The Halcyon, Case No. 31.

Unlicensed vessels will be excluded from participating in a salvage service, sharing in the award therefor only when licensed vessels are present which are capable of rendering the required services, and their services are not accepted.—Pent v. Two Thousand Eight Hundred and Fifty Dollars, Case No. 10,961a.

Where the consorted vessels are amply sufficient to save the cargo and materials of a stranded vessel, a wrecking vessel subsequently arriving is not entitled to come into the consortship.—The Mimi, Case No. 9,627a.

§ 54. —— Between owners, officers, crew, and others.

Ordinarily, one-third of the entire salvage is given to the owners of the salvor vessel.—Sewell v. Nine Bales of Cotton, Case No. 12,683; The Boston, Id. 1,673; The Henry Ewbank, Id. 6,376.

But, in cases of extraordinary merit or peril to the ship, a greater allowance may be made.—The Henry Ewbank, Case No. 6,376.

The rule in the Fifth circuit is to give one-half to the salvor vessel, and the other half to her officers and crew, in proportion to wages.—Sonderburg v. Ocean Tow Boat Co., Case No. 13,175.

The owners and master of a lighter were allowed three-fourths of the award, where the actual work of lightering was done by the crew of the vessel in distress.—Studley v. Baker, Case No. 13,559.

Owners of large steamer with valuable cargo held entitled to three-fifths of the award.—The C. W. Ring, Case No. 3,525.

Where the services are such that the vessels are unable to participate, the rule of dividing the award equally between the vessels and the men will be varied so as to give the men the larger share.—Pent v. Two Thousand Eight Hundred and Fifty Dollars, Case No. 10,961a.

In apportioning salvage among the officers and crew of a steamer, the court regards their responsibilities in their different stations. Equal shares given to the master and pilot.—Brooks v. The William Penn, Case No. 1,965.

A distribution of the salvage among officers and men in proportion to wages held proper.—Sewell v. Nine Bales of Cotton, Case No. 12,683.

A passenger who advised the master to attempt the service, and was active in performing it, is entitled to an increased share.—The Charles Henry, Case No. 2,617.

Seaman put on board derelict by salvor vessel allowed a greater proportion of salvage.—Bell v. The Ann, Case No. 1,245.

The master has no right to compel the mate to perform a salvage service; and if he does perform one by the order of the master, without objection, he is to be considered as a volunteer.—Williamson v. The Alphonso, Case No. 17,749.

Where a salvor steamer places a mate aboard a vessel which has lost its officers through yellow fever, and is delayed only a few minutes thereby, the officer is entitled to the major part of the salvage allowed.—United States Mail S. S. Co. v. The John Potter, Case No. 16,792a.

A fireman who, at some risk, jumped on board the canal boat to make a line fast, should receive a share equal to that of the master of the tug.—The Ontario, Case No. 10,541.

Master allowed only the share of a common seaman, where he greatly weakened his own vessel to render the salvage service.—The Waterloo, Case No. 17,257.

The first mate of a bark, who refused to volunteer to assist in bringing in a schooner whose crew was taken off by his own vessel, held entitled to only the same share as the other seamen remaining on the bark.—The Lovett Peacock, Case No. 8,555.

An assignment and release by a seaman, to the owners of the salvor vessel, of a claim for salvage, executed in ignorance of the facts, will not deprive him of his share.—The Edward Lee, Case No. 4,292.

The salvor vessel allowed one-half the award of $15,000 for six days' towing services of a rudderless bark, where the master was disabled by the breaking of his leg and the fingers of one hand.—The John G. Paint, Case No. 7,346.

On an award of $30,000, the masters of two tugs were each allowed $3,000.—The Puritan, Case No. 11,474.

An award of $50 for saving a raft of spars found drifting out to sea was apportioned between libelants at the rate of $30 to one and $5 to each of the others who were in the employ of the former.—In re Raft of Spars, Case No. 11,529.

For particular instances of apportionment of the award between the owners of the property used in the salvage service and the officers and crews of the vessels and other persons engaged in the service, see The Anna, Case No. 398; Butterworth v. The Washington, Id. 2,253; The Galaxy, Id. 5,186; The Gerard Stuyvesant, Id. 5,356; The Henry Ewbank, Id. 6,376; The Mary Coe, Id. 9,204; The Waterloo, Id. 17,257.

§ 55. —— Deductions.

The share of a mate in charge of the salvor vessel, the master being disabled, reduced, because of his mistake in performance of the services.—The John G. Paint, Case No. 7,346.

An agreement by a salvor to pay the master 10 per cent. of the compensation may be lawfully performed, but in awarding salvage it should be reduced by that amount.—Church v. Seventeen Hundred and Twelve Dollars, Case No. 2,713.

Money given, even in charity, by salvors having salved property in their possession, to officers of the wrecked vessel, may be recovered by the owners and insurers.—Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Seller, Case No. 9,444.

§ 56. —— Shares lost by misconduct or not claimed.

When the compensation of certain salvors has been forfeited for misconduct, the court has discretion to determine what interest shall be benefited thereby.—Roberts v. The St. James, Case No. 11,914.

The forfeited shares of salvors do not accrue to their cosalvors, but go to the owners of the salved property.—The Rising Sun, Case No. 11,-858.

A share declared forfeited for wrongful appropriation or fraudulent concealment of a part of the cargo will inure to the owners thereof.—Flinn v. The Leander, Case No. 4,870; Anonymous, Id. 429.

Compensation forfeited for neglect of duty increasing labors of others should be divided between the latter.—Anonymous, Case No. 429.

Where some of the salvors decline asserting a claim for salvage compensation, their proportion will not accrue to the benefit of either their cosalvors or to the owners of the saving vessel.—Evans v. The Charles, Case No. 4,556.

III. LIEN AND RECOVERY.

§ 57. Lien.

There is no lien for salvage services performed under a contract for a fixed sum, to be paid at all events.—The Whitaker, Cases Nos. 17,524, 17,525; The Marquette, Id. 9,101.

Goods on board of a private ship, belonging to the government, are subject to admiralty process in rem for their proportion of salvage.—United States v. Wilder, Case No. 16,694.

The owners of cargo thrown overboard to make room for the salved property have not a prior lien on the proceeds of such property for reimbursement.—Williams v. The Adolphe, Case No. 17,712.

Where there are separate sets of salvors, they have not separate liens on the several articles saved by each set, but all are entitled to be paid out of all the property saved.—The Albion Lincoln, Case No. 144.

Possession is not necessary to give validity to a lien for salvage on the property saved.—Eads v. The H. D. Bacon, Case No. 4,232.

Retention of possession by salvors is not necessary to their lien.—Nickerson v. The John Perkins, Case No. 10,252.

It requires the most unequivocal acts on the part of the salvors to show that they intend to abandon their lien, and resort to the owners for payment.—Eads v. The H. D. Bacon, Case No. 4,232.

The lien for salvage is lost by an assignment of the claim.—Sturtevant v. The George Nicholaus, Case No. 13,578.

The finder of an abandoned vessel becomes the legal possessor and acquires a privilege against the property for salvage, which takes precedence of all other liens.—Lewis v. The Elizabeth and Jane, Case No. 8,321.

The claim of one who floats and repairs an abandoned stranded vessel is in the nature of salvage, and takes precedence of prior maritime liens, though such person held an immature mortgage.—The Barney Eaton, Case No. 1,028.

A salvage service has priority of lien over claims for wages earned and supplies furnished prior thereto.—Collins v. The Ft. Wayne, Case No. 3,012.

§ 58. Suits for salvage—Jurisdiction.

An action will not lie at common law for salvage on the high seas.—Brevoor v. The Fair American, Case No. 1,847.

A court of admiralty will entertain a suit for salvage as to property within its jurisdiction, where the only question is as to the rate of reward, though all the parties are foreigners.—In re One Hundred and Ninety-Four Shawls, Case No. 10,521.

The jurisdiction of the federal district court in cases of salvage is not confined to American property or to cases occurring in American waters.—Western Transp. Co. v. The Great Western, Case No. 17,443.

The district court in admiralty has jurisdiction in a case of salvage rendered by an American tug to a British vessel in Canadian waters.—The Sailor's Bride, Case No. 12,220.

The district court has jurisdiction over a case of salvage on the Ohio river.—In re Seven Coal Barges, Case No. 12,677.

The district court in admiralty has jurisdiction of a libel in rem as well as in personam for salvage services, though performed under a contract for a fixed compensation not contingent upon success.—The A. D. Patchin, Case No. 87; Gager v. The A. D. Patchin, Id. 5,170; The Louisa Jane, Id. 8,532; The Williams, Id. 17,-710. But see The Whitaker, Cases Nos. 17,-524, 17,525; The Marquette, Id. 9,101.

An action will lie in rem to recover a salvage compensation against the proceeds of salved property converted into specie, provided the same action would lie against the property itself.—Waterbury v. Myrick, Case No. 17,253.

Jurisdiction of salvage cases in Florida.—American Ins. Co. v. Canter, Case No. 302a.

See, further, "Admiralty," §§ 8, 28.

§ 59. —— Who may sue.

The owner of a vessel which is employed in a salvage service may recover compensation for such employment out of the salved property, either as co-salvor, by uniting with the officers and crew of the salving vessel in the suit, or by bringing it himself in his own right in case they refuse or neglect to join.—Waterbury v. Myrick, Case No. 17,253.

Where the right to compensation of persons assisting a salvor who has agreed to render the service for a certain amount is dependent upon success, they may maintain a libel for salvage compensation, but the owner will be protected beyond the amount agreed upon.—The Whitaker, Case No. 17,525.

The pendency of an action for salvage by the salvor vessel is no bar to a suit by the passengers of the injured vessel for salvage services rendered at the same time.—Forbes v. The Merrimac, Case No. 4,927.

A salvage suit will not be stayed pending an action of replevin for the salved property in a court of law, in which the validity of the salvor's lien may be determined.—In re Raft of Spars, Case No. 11,528.

§ 60. —— Who may be sued.

An action for compensation for salvage services rendered to a vessel cannot be maintained in personam against the master unless it was performed for his benefit.—Miller v. Kelly, Case No. 9,577.

The rights acquired by the salvors are only in rem, to be paid by the property. They have no claim in personam against the owners, if they choose to abandon the goods.—The Emblem, Case No. 4,434.

Where the property is delivered by the salvors to the owners, before a compensation for saving them is made, the salvors may maintain a libel in personam for the salvage.—The Emblem, Case No. 4,434.

As the admiralty rules are not to be regarded as restrictive, but as enumerative of the more common remedies, a libel for salvage services will lie against one with whom the salvor has deposited the property saved, but who had no other interest therein, though rule 19 prescribes that in suits for salvage the suit may be in rem or in personam against the party at whose request and for whose benefit the salvage service has been performed.—Gates v. Johnson, Case No. 5,268.

§ 61. —— Time to sue.
A libel filed before the salvor has completed his undertaking is premature.—Boyd v. The Towner, Case No. 1,748a.

§ 62. —— Defenses.
The merits of a libel in personam for salvage services are not affected by the fact that respondent has replevied the salved property from the salvor.—Bounty v. Kerrin, Case No. 1,697a.

Delay by petty officers and crew in bringing a suit against the owners for their share of the salvage is no defense, where they had no previous knowledge of the amount received.—Sonderburg v. Ocean Tow Boat Co., Case No. 13,-175.

Failure of libelants to refer their claim for salvage, as agreed, held, under the circumstances of the case, to be no bar to an action therefor.—Coffin v. The John Shaw, Case No. 2,949.

The tender of adequate compensation for salvage service, without deposit in court before answer, is no bar to an action for such service. —Boardman v. The Bethel, Case No. 1,585.

§ 63. —— Parties and intervention.
All co-salvors should be made parties to a libel for salvage.—Hessian v. The Edward Howard, Case No. 6,436; The Boston, Id. 1,673.

An objection that co-salvors were not joined in the bill comes too late at the final hearing.—Staten Island & N. Y. Ferry Co. v. The Thomas Hunt, Case No. 13,326.

Nonjoinder of the crew in a suit for salvage by the master and owner of the salvor is not objectionable, in the absence of personal danger and extraordinary hardships.—The A. D. Patchin, Case No. 87.

A suit for salvage may be maintained by the master and owner of the salvor vessel without joining its crew.—Gager v. The A. D. Patchin, Case No. 5,170.

Underwriters not having accepted an abandonment are not proper parties.—The Boston, Case No. 1,673.

A foreign consul may appear for citizens of his country to protect proceeds of sale of property for salvage.—The Adolph, Case No. 86.

A libel in the name of a British naval officer and the British consul, joining with him "for all other interests," where the vessel, rescued by a British naval vessel, was sent home in charge of the officer, held not fatally defective.—The Huntress, Case No. 6,912.

§ 64. —— Joinder of libels.
Several libels filed against the cargo saved will be joined and considered as one suit for the purposes of awarding salvage.—The Mississippi, Case No. 9,651.

Under the 19th admiralty rule a proceeding in rem cannot be joined with a proceeding in personam for salvage of the same goods.—Nott v. The Sabine, Case No. 10,366.

§ 65. —— Pleadings.
The libel should state the subject-matter in articles, and the answer should meet each material allegation, with an admission and denial or a defense. No evidence is admissible except it be appropriate to an allegation.—The Boston, Case No. 1,673.

Libelants permitted to amend and file a supplemental bill for extra compensation as pilots where their services were held not to constitute a claim for salvage.—Dexter v. The Richmond, Case No. 3,865.

§ 66. —— Hearing.
Facts tending to show that the master willfully caused the wreck may be considered, though not introduced by either party, and brought to the court's notice by accident.—Malone v. The Pedro, Case No. 8,995.

Compensation may be fixed by the court, upon consultation with merchants and owners of ships as to the value of service rendered.—George v. The Arctic, Case No. 5,330.

An award of a referee in a salvage case will not be recommitted because the counsel for the libelants omitted to call the attention of the referee to a matter which might have influenced the referee, if his attention had been called to it, to increase the amount of salvage.—The Liverpool Packet, Case No. 8,407.

§ 67. —— Evidence.
The master's neglect of reasonable precautions to prevent wreck, and of reasonable efforts to remedy the same without help, is evidence that the ship was willfully wrecked by him.—Malone v. The Pedro, Case No. 8,995.

Cumulative testimony for salvors is admissible.—Jones v. The Richmond, Case No. 7,492.

§ 68. Presentation of claims.
Co-salvors omitted from the original libel may present their claims by suitable allegations without notice or process to the other parties.—The Henry Ewbank, Case No. 6,376.

In a case of extraordinary merit, where a salvor failed to present his claim until after salvage was decreed and paid, he was allowed compensation out of the proceeds remaining in the marshal's hands, reserved for the owners.—Ryan v. The Cato, Case No. 12,184.

§ 69. The property and proceeds — Care and custody.
Salvors of a derelict have a right to retain possession until the salvage service is completed, but if their own means are inadequate they are bound to accept additional assistance, if offered.—The Ida L. Howard, Case No. 6,999.

Salvors have a right to the possession of the salved property until their claims are legally adjusted.—Hartshorn v. Twenty-Five Cases Silk, Case No. 6,168a.

Salvors must land the property saved at the nearest port of safety, and see that it is properly cared for.—The Sumner, Case No. 13,608.

Neither party is of right entitled to have a delivery of the property on bail, and the vessel owner is not in default in waiting for the regular termination of the salvage proceedings.—The Nathaniel Hooper, Case No. 10,032.

As to the right of salvors to take the vessel into port for adjudication, against the master's protest and offer to pay for services, see The La Bruce, Case No. 7,963.

As to the marshal's duty in relation to the care of the salved property, see The Isaac Allerton, Case No. 7,088.

§ 70. —— Sale of property.
Admiralty courts have jurisdiction to order a survey and decree a condemnation and sale of the ship, but the judge should be satisfied that the application is made in good faith, and that the vessel is so damaged that no prudent man would think of repairing her.—Walter v. The Montgomery, Case No. 17,120.

The vessel will be ordered to be sold where the master can raise no money, and repairs would exceed value after repairs.—Bennett v. The Tevere, Case No. 1,325.

Salvage on a recapture by a public vessel of war can be ascertained only by a sale, unless an appraisement is consented to.—Cross v. The Dolphin, Case No. 3,432.

Cargo should not be sold for salvage when the vessel cannot be temporarily repaired, and her master prays that she be sold to pay salvage.—The Kristrel, Case No. 7,935.

A sale of the damaged vessel requested by her master will not be ordered, though the repairs will nearly equal her present value, where the court does not think it to the interest of her owners and insurers and the owners of the cargo. —The Lexington, Case No. 8,336.

Where the subject-matter is bags of gold dust, owned by different persons, a sale of so much as may be necessary to raise the amount awarded will be ordered, and not an average on the different parcels.—Edwards v. Thirty-Five Boxes of Gold Dust, Saved from Wreck of the Union, Case No. 4,299a.

A foreign consul has no right to fees for attending a sale where interests of subjects of his government are not involved.—Bennett v. The Tevere, Case No. 1,325.

The owners of the cargo were allowed interest on the proceeds after deducting salvage from the date of a wrongful sale by the master to the claimants.—The Richmond, Case No. 11,797.

The payment of money to the purchaser of property under an unauthorized sale for salvage, with a reservation of all rights, does not prevent an action for wrongful sale.—American Ins. Co. v. Johnson, Case No. 303.

A salvor not guilty of an intentional tort in selling salved property is liable to the owner only for salvage received.—American Ins. Co. v. Johnson, Case No. 303.

§ 71. —— Liens.

The court may order all charges against the property to be produced before it for determination.—Bennett v. The Tevere, Case No. 1,325.

As to the lien for customs duties on the salved property and the duty of the court, see Tucker v. The Mary C. Potter, Case No. 14,223.

Import duties upon wrecked property are to be paid out of the gross proceeds, before deducting salvage, and are not to be charged exclusively on the owner's share of the salvage.—The Waterloo, Case No. 17,257.

A salvor has no claim against the proceeds of goods saved from a wreck for the passage money of the crew carried by him to port under personal contracts.—Brackett v. The Hercules, Case No. 1,762.

§ 72. —— Apportionment of salvage compensation.

All the property saved comes into one general fund, though salvage services were performed by different persons at different times in saving different kinds of property.—The Ottawa, Case No. 10,617.

Costs and charges must be paid by the property saved, and apportioned among the claimants according to their respective interests.—The Nathaniel Hooper, Case No. 10,032.

Where two vessels are in contact, causing mutual damage, salvors who separate them should receive from the one at fault salvage upon the total value of the two.—Pope v. The Sapphire, Case No. 11,276.

Salvors rendering no service except to receive cargo about to be jettisoned by the master to float the ship can claim only against such cargo.—The Albamiau, Case No. 128.

A vessel cast on shore should bear part of salvage earned in landing cargo, thereby lightening the vessel and enabling her to go to a place of safety.—The Clotilda, Case No. 2,903.

Salvage expenses are to be apportioned among vessel, cargo, and freight in proportion to their values, where the labor was carried on with a view of saving both vessel and cargo.—The Mulhouse, Case No. 9,910.

Where the vessel is lost each article of cargo is charged with its own particular expenses of saving.—The Mulhouse, Case No. 9,910; Roberts v. The Ocean Star, Id. 11,908.

The clothing of the master and crew, left aboard on abandonment of the vessel, will be restored free of charge.—The Rising Sun, Case No. 11,858.

Cargo held not chargeable with portion of allowance on libel of vessel for salvage, where the disaster occurred through unseaworthiness, and the point as to liability of cargo was not made in the answer.—The Delaware, Case No. 3,761.

§ 73. —— Restoration after payment of salvage.

Property libeled for salvage service is in the possession of the court, and can only be restored by express order.—The Byron, Case No. 2,275.

Restitution, upon payment of salvage, will be adjudged in all cases, if the original owners can be found.—British Consul v. Twenty-Two Pipes and Ten Hogsheads of Wine, Case No. 1,900.

The vessel must be restored after the payment of salvage to those in possession when she was relieved.—Booth v. L'Esperanza, Case No. 1,647.

The court, after decreeing salvage, may refuse to restore the ship and cargo to the master, if the interests of the owners and consignees seem to call for such refusal.—The Montserat, Case No. 9,740.

The court may refuse to restore the property to the master as bailee of the owners, where their interests would be jeopardized thereby. —The Byron, Case No. 2,275.

The proceeds will be withheld from the master where he has been guilty of fraud, embezzlement, or reckless conduct.—The North America, Case No. 10,313.

Circumstances surrounding disappearance of box containing $10,000 in gold held not sufficient to justify withholding proceeds from master.—The North America, Case No. 10,313.

§ 74. —— Claims to proceeds.

The surplus proceeds after paying salvage awards will be retained a reasonable time to permit owners or underwriters to file claims.—The Osteonthe, Case No. 10,608a.

In salvage cases, the district court has jurisdiction to determine the right to a balance of proceeds as between adverse claimants; and this notwithstanding that it involves an adjudication upon the validity of a capture at sea, and the effect of a subsequent abandonment.—The Mary Ford, Case No. 9,212a.

Underwriters cannot make any claim for salvage property in the admiralty, unless there has been an abandonment of the property to them, and an acceptance.—The Henry Ewbank, Case No. 6,376.

Duties on goods saved, see "Customs Duties," § 11.

§ 75. —— Unclaimed proceeds.

Unclaimed proceeds, remaining in the registry many years after awarding salvage without claim of ownership, will not be paid to the salvors, but will be paid into the treasury of the United States.—Peabody v. Proceeds of Twenty-Eight Bags of Cotton, Case No. 10,-869.

In the Southern district of Florida, the residue of a derelict, in the absence of any claimant, is delivered to the salvors after the lapse of a year and a day.—Russell v. Forty Bales Cotton, Case No. 12,154.

§ 76. Costs.

Where a libel for salvage is filed without notice to the owner of the vessel to whom the service was rendered, costs will not be allowed. —The Jack Jewett, Case No. 7,122.

On a libel for salvage, where a special agreement is shown in defense, but no tender of the balance of the stipulated price is shown, a decree will be entered for such amount, with costs.—Dominy v. Anchors, Sails, etc., of the D'Alberti, Case No. 3,977.

Libelants will be decreed to pay costs out of their distributive share, where a fair and liberal allowance has been tendered to them or their proctors.—Hessian v. The Edward Howard, Case No. 6,436.

Where a tender of a certain sum as salvage is refused, and the same sum is decreed to libelant, he is chargeable with his own costs subsequent to the tender, and, generally, with the owner's costs, also.—Lubker v. The A. H. Quinby, Case No. 8,586.

There should be but one libel in ordinary salvage cases, and costs paid but for one.— The Charles Henry, Case No. 2,617.

Where two libels are unnecessarily filed for salvage, the increased costs must be borne by the libelants in the second libel.—The Maryland, Case No. 9,218.

Respondents will be charged with costs where they denied the service, though an exorbitant claim was made therefor.—Johnson v. The Industry, Case No. 7,391.

Costs will be awarded salvors, though their claim was inequitable, where claimant offered no particular sum.—The Wexford, Case No. 17,-472.

The refusal of the salvor vessel to deliver up the towing chain of the salved vessel, on demand, will subject its owners to costs.—The Minnie Miller, Case No. 9,638.

The master having been at fault, the costs should be charged to the vessel and cargo, though, from misconduct, salvage was forfeited.—The Byron, Case No. 2,275.

The costs of the proceedings for salvage compensation in rescuing runaway slaves in a stolen canoe are not chargeable to owner of canoe, but to owner of slaves.—Bass v. Five Negroes, Case No. 1,093.

Libelants are not responsible for the expense incurred in effecting an average between the respective owners.—Edwards v. Thirty-Five Boxes of Gold Dust, Saved from Wreck of the Union, Case No. 4,299a.

Nor are they answerable to claimants for sums deposited on bonding the attached property, as rule 68 changes the former practice by securing the return of costs to successful claimants.—Edwards v. Thirty-Five Boxes of Gold Dust, Saved from Wreck of the Union, Case No. 4,299a.

Increased security, under rule 55, will not be required where the security given under rule 44 is not apparently insufficient, where a single libel is filed against a cargo belonging to numerous persons.—Edwards v. Thirty-Five Boxes of Gold Dust, Saved from Wreck of the Union, Case No. 4,299a.

Apportionment of costs among co-salvors and claimants.—The Henry Ewbank, Case No. 6,-376.

See, further, "Admiralty," §§ 127–152.

§ 77. Appeal.

An appeal by any parties interested in the distribution of salvage, as to their shares, brings up incidentally a review of the whole decree, so far as the distribution is concerned. —The Henry Ewbank, Case No. 6,376.

On appeal in a salvage case, the burden to prove mistake of law or fact is on appellant, and error must be clearly shown.—Bearse v. Three Hundred and Forty Pigs of Copper, Case No. 1,193; The Anna, Id. 401; The Emulous, Id. 4,480.

Allowances for salvage services will not ordinarily be disturbed upon appeal.—The Delaware, Case No. 3,761.

In salvage cases, the court on appeal will not alter amount of salvage upon slight grounds.— The Boston, Case No. 1,673.

Decisions on appeal, see "Admiralty," § 125.
—— reviewable, see "Admiralty," § 113.

§ 78. Compromise and payment of salvage and recovery of shares.

An adjustment of salvage, made by the owner of the cargo, is not binding upon the vessel. —The Union Express, Case No. 14,363.

A bona fide compromise will bar further claim for salvage.—Brevoor v. The Fair American, Case No. 1,847.

A master of a wrecked vessel cannot submit the question of compensation for salvage to arbitration, where he acts in bad faith.—Church v. Seventeen Hundred and Twelve Dollars, Case No. 2,713.

Though a settlement by arbitration may be void for fraud of the master, the salvors are entitled to reasonable salvage.—Church v. Seventeen Hundred and Twelve Dollars, Case No. 2,713.

The shares of persons who aid in a salvage service, and receive pay therefor from the owners, revert to the owners.—Spencer v. The Charles Avery, Case No. 13,232.

Salvage earned by an apprentice is payable to him, and not to his master.—Mason v. The Blaireau, Case No. 9,230.

The crew of a salvor vessel may recover their share of the reward by libel in admiralty from the owners, who have received salvage on a settlement with the owners of the property saved. —Studley v. Baker, Case No. 13,559.

The fact that the owners of the salvor vessel did not consider the services of the crew in making the settlement is immaterial where they signed a receipt "for the owners, master, and crew."—Studley v. Baker, Case No. 13,559.

One of the crew of a vessel, for whose services salvage was awarded by arbitrators, and paid to the master without distribution, may maintain a libel in personam against the master for a share.—The Centurion, Case No. 2,554.

Two years' delay is no defense to a libel in personam brought by a salvor against another who had received the salvage moneys.—Sonderburg v. Ocean Tow Boat Co., Case No. 13,175.

An action in personam will lie by one salvor against a co-salvor to recover a proportionate share of the salvage compensation, when the whole is received by the latter, and he withholds the share of the former.—Waterbury v. Myrick, Case No. 17,253.

The master and owners of the salvor vessel have general charge of a claim for salvage, and, where they present a bill for salvage service, it will be construed as covering the service of the crew, and they cannot maintain a libel for salvage against the vessel and cargo.—Roff v. Wass, Case No. 12,000.

The master and owners of a licensed pilot tug, who receive compensation for salvage services, are accountable to the crew for their shares.—Roff v. Wass, Case No. 11,999.

They are estopped to deny that the service was a salvage one where they receipt for the amount paid as extra compensation for extraordinary services and risk.—Roff v. Wass, Case No. 11,999.

SATISFACTION.

See "Accord and Satisfaction"; "Compromise and Settlement"; "Payment"; "Release."
Of judgment, see "Judgment," §§ 75–78.
Of legacy, see " Wills," § 52.
Of mortgage, see "Chattel Mortgages," §§ 20, 21; "Mortgages," § 16.

SCHEDULE.

In bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," §§ 21–27, 480, 563.

SCHOOL LANDS.

See "Public Lands," § 38.

SCHOOLS AND SCHOOL DISTRICTS.

§ 1. Public schools.
School district No. 1, of the county of Multnomah, is not the successor of the "trustees of the schoolhouse of Portland."—Chapman v. School District, Case No. 2,608.

The city of Portland is not the successor "of the trustees of the school and meeting house of Portland."—Chapman v. School District, Case No. 2,608.

Schoolhouse bonds issued under Act Mo. March 21, 1870, held valid, and enforceable by the ordinary remedies.—Bonham v. Board of Education of Harrisonville, Case No. 1,629.

The fact that free schools and a state university are expressly mentioned in the state constitution, and normal schools are not, held not to amount to a prohibition against their establishment.—Briggs v. Johnson County, Case No. 1,872.

SCIRE FACIAS.

§ 1, Amendment. § 2, Execution of writ.

§ 1. Amendment.
A sci. fa., in which the name of one person is written for another by mistake, may be amended.—Tayloe v. Wharfield, Case No. 13,772.

§ 2. Execution of writ.
A scire facias is an action to which a party may plead, and it may be executed in the same manner as a summons.—Bentley v. Sevier, Case No. 18,233.

SEALS.

§ 1, What constitutes a seal. § 2, Joint seals. § 3, Proof of seals.

By notaries, see "Notaries," § 2.
To bill of exceptions, see "Exceptions, Bill of," § 4.
To process, see "Process," § 1.

§ 1. What constitutes a seal.
A seal impressed on paper is equivalent to sealing with wax.—Roberts v. Pillow, Case No. 11,909.

Any forcible indentation on a parchment, though it be not wax, wafer, or a scrawl, may be a seal, if so intended.—Follett v. Rose, Case No. 4,900.

A scroll made with a pen, inclosing the letters "L. S.," will be held to be a seal, if so intended, though not expressly stated in the instrument.—Burton v. Le Roy, Case No. 2,217.

The word "Seal" in a scroll is a sufficient seal.—United States v. Hedges, Case No. 15,339.

A mark with ink, acknowledged by the maker of a deed, held sufficient to create a specialty.—United States v. Coffin, Case No. 14,823.

The common-law rule that a seal must consist of wax, or some tenacious substance, does not apply to a bond taken under an act of congress; and, under the general usage, a scroll is sufficient to make the instrument a sealed instrument.—United States v. Stephenson's Ex'rs, Case No. 16,386.

Any impression upon sealing wax or wafer adhering to the paper, without any device or words indicative of the particular official, is evidence of the official character of the officer signing.—In re Phillips, Case No. 11,098.

§ 2. Joint seals.
There cannot be a joint seal for diverse persons not incorporated.—Tingey v. Carroll, Case No. 14,056.

§ 3. Proof of seals.
Person acquainted with parchment patents may be examined, as to the traces of a seal, on the question whether such a writing had been originally sealed.—Follett v. Rose, Case No. 4,900.

Where there is doubt whether an instrument has been sealed, the fact is properly referable to the jury.—Follett v. Rose, Case No. 4,900.

SEAMEN.

I. REGULATION, PROTECTION, AND RELIEF.

§ 1, Complaints before consul. § 2, Seaworthiness of vessel. § 3, Statutory regulation—Lists, certificates, and return of crew. § 4, —— Shipping commissioners. § 5, —— Colored seamen. § 6, Provisions and supplies—Food. § 7, —— Medicine. § 8, Medical treatment—Liability of vessel or master in general. § 9, —— Treatment at foreign or home port. § 10, —— Expenses chargeable against ship. § 11, —— Fault of seaman. § 12, —— Duration of ship's liability. § 13, Penalties for violation of regulations.

II. EMPLOYMENT IN GENERAL.

§ 14, What law governs. § 15, Who are seamen. § 16, Who may be required to perform seamen's duty. § 17, Minors. § 18, Liabilities of seamen. § 19, Services and care and skill required. § 20, Duration of employment.

III. CONTRACT OF SHIPMENT.

(A) Requisites and Validity.

§ 21, Capacity of parties. § 22, Necessity of writing. § 23, Parol contract. § 24, Duress. § 25, Contracts made after sailing. § 26, Explanation of contract to seamen. § 27, Execution. § 28, Provisions as to voyage or term of employment—Necessity. § 29, —— Sufficiency of description. § 30, Provisions against public policy. § 31, Legality of object.

(B) Construction and Operation.

§ 32, General rules of construction. § 33, What law governs. § 34, Evidence to explain contract. § 35, Term of employment. § 36, Voyage—In general. § 37, —— Particular voyages. § 38, —— Duration and termination. § 39, Provisions for arbitration.

(C) Performance and Breach.

§ 40, Performance. § 41, Breach.

IV. DISCHARGE.

§ 42, What constitutes discharge. § 43, Authority to discharge. § 44, Grounds for discharge in general. § 45, Discharge in foreign port. § 46, Right of seamen to discharge. § 47, Wrongful discharge. § 48, Revocation of discharge and reinstatement.

V. WAGES.

(A) Right to Wages.

§ 49, Nature of right. § 50, What law governs. § 51, Persons entitled in general. § 52, Deceased seamen. § 53, Sickness of seamen. § 54, Wages as dependent upon freight in general. § 55, Shipwreck. § 56, Capture and confiscation of vessel. § 57, Condemnation of vessel for unseaworthiness. § 58, Abandonment of vessel. § 59, Interdiction of commerce of port of destination. § 60, Agreements to renounce wages. § 61, Absence of written agreement. § 62, Illegality of voyage.

(B) Forfeiture.

§ 63, Nature and cause of forfeiture in general. § 64, Desertion—What constitutes. § 65, —— Excusable or justifiable leaving. § 66, —— By minor. § 67, —— Proof of desertion in general. § 68, —— Entry in log-book. § 69, —— Effect of desertion. § 70, Disobedience and misconduct in general. § 71, Refusal of duty. § 72, Drunkenness. § 73, Negligence. § 74, Rebellious or mutinous conduct. § 75, Larceny and embezzlement. § 76, Smuggling. § 77, Imprisonment of seamen. § 78, Return and tendering amends. § 79, Waiver and remission of forfeiture.

(C) Amount.

§ 80, In absence of valid agreement. § 81, Quantum meruit in general. § 82, Amount measured by voyage or season of navigation. § 83, Breaking up voyage in general. § 84, Refusal to continue voyage. § 85, Attachment of vessel or sale on execution. § 86, Capture of vessel. § 87, Wreck or loss of vessel. § 88, Wrongful discharge. § 89, Sickness or injury of seamen. § 90, Amount in time of war. § 91, Advancement of seamen during voyage. § 92, Disrating.

(D) Extra Wages.

§ 93, Discharge in foreign port. § 94, Extra services. § 95, Insufficient provisions.

(E) Deductions and Offsets.

§ 96, Debts due from seamen to master or owner. § 97, Payment on account. § 98, Contribution among seamen. § 99, Absence from service. § 100, Disobedience, misconduct, and insolence. § 101, Losses or injuries caused by wrongful act of seamen in general. § 102, Sickness by fault of seamen. § 103, Incompetency. § 104, Embezzlement. § 105, Negligence. § 106, Assault. § 107, Expenses upon arrest or imprisonment. § 108, Expense of watch of vessel. § 109, Expense of survey. § 110, Release of claim for deduction.

(F) Who are Liable.

§ 111, In general. § 112, Owners of vessel. § 113, Mortgagee. § 114, Vessel.

(G) Payment, Receipt, and Release.

§ 115, When wages are payable. § 116, In whose presence and to whom payment must be made. § 117, Furnishing accounts to seamen. § 118, Foreign money and valuation thereof. § 119, Payment of advance wages. § 120, Receipts and releases. § 121, Exchange.

(H) Lien.

§ 122, Who entitled to lien. § 123, For what services lien attaches. § 124, Property subject to lien in general. § 125, Sale, pledge, or attachment of vessel or freight. § 126, Wreck of vessel. § 127, Change of master. § 128, Vessel sailed on shares by master. § 129, Priorities as to voyage. § 130, Enforcement of lien. § 131, Waiver or discharge.

(I) Actions and Summary Proceedings.

§ 132, Who may sue. § 133, When suit may be brought. § 134, Jurisdiction. § 135, Defenses. § 136, Limitations and laches. § 137, Parties. § 138, Pleading. § 139, Issues and proof. § 140, Evidence. § 141, Trial. § 142, Recovery. § 143, Costs. § 144, Appeal. § 145, Summary proceedings.

(J) Lays or Shares in Earnings.

§ 146, Nature of agreement. § 147, Liability of owners of vessel. § 148, What is subject to lay. § 149, Amount or rate. § 150, Expenses allowed in determining lays. § 151, Payment and settlement. § 152, Lien. § 153, Actions.

VI. INJURIES.

(A) Injuries to Property.

§ 154, Loss of property. § 155, Wrongful detention of property.

(B) Personal Injuries in General.

§ 156, Injuries caused by negligence of owner or master. § 157, Assault. § 158, False imprisonment. § 159, Release and settlement of claims.

(C) Punishment of Seamen.

§ 160, Right to punish in general. § 161, Who may be punished. § 162, Authority to punish. § 163, When justified in general. § 164, Mode of punishment—Weapons used. § 165, —— Flogging. § 166, —— Imprisonment. § 167, —— Removal to forecastle. § 168, Hearing before master of vessel. § 169, Excessive punishment.

(D) Actions.

§ 170, Nature and right of action. § 171, Limitations. § 172, Evidence. § 173, Issues and proof. § 174, Damages.

VII. OFFENSES.

(A) Offenses by Seamen.

§ 175, Revolts—In general. § 176, —— Endeavors to make revolts. § 177, —— Confining master.

(B) Offenses Against Seamen.

§ 178, Forcing seamen on shore. § 179, Assault in general. § 180, Punishment.

(C) Criminal Prosecutions.

§ 181, Indictment. § 182, Evidence. § 183, Arrest of judgment.

VIII. FOREIGN SEAMEN.

§ 184, What law governs. § 185, Contract of shipment. § 186, Wages. § 187, Punishment. § 188, Offenses.

Authority and duties of master as to seamen, see "Shipping," § 83.

Competency as witnesses, see "Witnesses," § 45.
Jurisdiction over foreign seamen, see "Admiralty," §§ 5, 6.
Maritime character of services, see "Admiralty," §§ 24, 26.

I. REGULATION, PROTECTION, AND RELIEF.

§ 1. Complaints before consul.
The right of the crew to lay complaints before the consul does not apply to mere affrays or quarrels between the officers and crew.—Jordan v. Williams, Case No. 7,528.

A seaman severely beaten without cause by the mate, on a voyage to a foreign port, is entitled to lay his grievance before the American consul, and the master has no right to refuse his request therefor.—Knowlton v. Boss, Case No. 7,901.

§ 2. Seaworthiness of vessel.
If seamen really believe, upon reasonable ground, that a vessel is unseaworthy, and ask for a survey, they are not bound to go to sea in her until such request is granted.—United States v. Givings, Case No. 15,212.

The crew may demand a survey in a foreign port, where they have reasonable grounds to believe the vessel to be unseaworthy.—The Hibernia, Case No. 6,455.

§ 3. Statutory regulation—Lists, certificates, and return of crew.
The bond given for the return of the crew (Act Feb. 28, 1803) does not apply in the case of a vessel sold abroad which does not return to the United States.—Montell v. United States, Case No. 9,723.

Such bond does not extend to cases where the seaman is lawfully separated from the ship, or is separated without fault of the master or owner.—Montell v. United States, Case No. 9,723.

The statutes requiring bond for the return of all the crew do not apply to foreign seamen shipped at their own home for a particular cruise, ending where it began, and discharged there according to the terms of their contract.—United States v. Parsons, Case No. 16,002.

Under the statutory bond to exhibit the crew list and produce the persons named therein, the master is bound to exercise all his lawful authority for the purpose of bringing back the persons named therein.—United States v. Page, Case No. 15,986a.

The master should be considered as relieved from the performance of the condition of the bond when, by reason of sickness, or by being superseded in a foreign port, he becomes unable to perform the conditions.—United States v. Page, Case No. 15,986a.

The master is not exonerated from his covenant by merely showing physical inability subsequently accruing on his part to perform it, or that others, whose consent and concurrence were necessary, would not permit its performance.—United States v. Page, Case No. 15,986a.

A bond given for the exhibition of the list of the ship's company under Act Feb. 28, 1803, held valid, though it did not refer to the statute, and did not state which of the obligors was the principal, and which the surety.—United States v. Hatch, Case No. 15,325.

An alteration made by a custom house clerk for the purpose of rectifying the bond, which did not affect its construction, held immaterial.—United States v. Hatch, Case No. 15,325.

In an action on a bond for the safe return of the crew, parol evidence is admissible of the contents of a consul's certificate authorizing the discharge of one of the men, on proof that such paper has been lost.—United States v. Parsons, Case No. 16,002.

The certificate of the consul that the seamen were left in a hospital, unable to return, and that the master had paid for their maintenance, and left the amount of their wages, held insufficient to excuse the master, under Act Feb. 28, 1803, relating to a bond to be given by the master, conditioned for the exhibition of the list of his ship's company to the first boarding officer at the first port of arrival in United States.—United States v. Hatch, Case No. 15,325.

The sum named in such bond is intended as a forfeiture, and not as a penalty.—United States v. Hatch, Case No. 15,325.

It is the duty of the master to find and apprehend all deserters of seamen leaving the ship openly.—United States v. Page, Case No. 15,986a.

§ 4. —— Shipping commissioners.
Under the act of June 7, 1872, the office expenses of a shipping commissioner are to come out of fees received, after which he may retain, as his emolument, $5,000 per annum, the balance to be paid into the treasury.—In re Shipping Com'r of Port of New York, Case No. 12,792.

The shipping commissioner may appoint clerks with the title of deputy commissioner, under Rev. St. § 4505.—In re Shipping Com'r of Port of New York, Case No. 12,793.

Salaries of employés in the office of the shipping commissioner of the port of New York considered.—In re Shipping Com'r of Port of New York, Case No. 12,793.

§ 5. —— Colored seamen.
Act La. 1842, No. 123, prohibiting colored seamen belonging to domestic vessels being brought in such vessels into the ports of that state, is unconstitutional.—The Cynosure, Case No. 3,529.

A seaman imprisoned at New Orleans under such statute cannot recover damages of the master therefor; and such seaman is not liable for the prison expenses paid by the master, as required by the statute.—The Cynosure, Case No. 3,529.

§ 6. Provisions and supplies—Food.
The owner is bound by his contract to furnish the seamen suitable subsistence. What is suitable depends upon what is usual in similar voyages.—Foster v. Sampson, Case No. 4,982.

Where a seaman is left or put on shore, his reasonable board and wages must be paid by the ship.—Walton v. The Neptune, Case No. 17,135.

The navy ration is the measurement of a food allowance on a merchant vessel.—Gardner v. The New Jersey, Case No. 5,233; The Mary, Id. 9,191; The Mary Paulina, Id. 9,224.

Five pounds a week is a short allowance of bread, within Act July 20, 1790.—The Mary Paulina, Case No. 9,224.

An overabundance of meat cannot be substituted for the bread required by the statute.—The Mary Paulina, Case No. 9,224.

But if the master is unable to obtain the kind of provisions required by the statute, other kinds may be substituted.—The Mary, Case No. 9,191.

Mariners who properly remain by their vessel may recover the amount paid for necessary subsistence not furnished by the master.—The Gazelle, Case No. 5,289.

Where a ship has full supply of provisions, and the crew is insufficiently furnished, their remedy is an action for damages.—The Childe Harold, Case No. 2,676.

Seamen compelled to supply themselves with board have a lien against the vessel for the expenses thereof.—Brown v. The Alexander McNeil, Case No. 1,988.

Proof of short allowance casts the burden upon the owner to show that the vessel had on board the quantity of provisions required by law.—The Elizabeth Frith, Case No. 4,361.

Where there has been long delay in bringing suit for a short allowance, the burden will be put upon libelant of showing that the ship went to sea unprovided with a sufficient supply.—Piehl v. Balchen, Case No. 11,137.

§ 7. —— Medicine.

When the ship is properly furnished with a medicine chest, the seamen must pay for surgical or medical advice and assistance.—Holmes v. Hutchinson, Case No. 6,639; Walton v. The Neptune, Id. 17,135.

The expenses of medical attention on shore, where the seaman is removed from the vessel at his own request, are to be borne by the seamen, where the vessel is properly provided with a chest of medicines.—Pierce v. Patton, Case No. 11,145.

When the sufficiency of the medicine chest is questioned, the proper evidence to be produced is the testimony of some reputable physician who has examined it.—The William Harris, Case No. 17,695.

The onus probandi in respect to the sufficiency of the medicine chest lies on the owner.—Harden v. Gordon, Case No. 6,047; The Nimrod, Id. 10,267.

§ 8. Medical treatment—Liability of vessel or master in general.

A seaman is entitled to be cured at the expense of the ship of a sickness, hurt, or wound contracted or received in the service of the ship.—The Ben Flint, Case No. 1,299; The Forest, Id. 4,936; Holmes v. Hutchinson, Id. 6,639; Myers v. The Lizzie Hopkins, Id. 9,993; The Nimrod, Id. 10,267; The North America, Id. 10,314; Ringgold v. Crocker, Id. 11,843; Swift v. The Happy Return, Id. 13,697.

A steward injured while in performance of his duty on board the vessel is entitled to his wages and board and medical attendance while being cured, though the master and owners are free from negligence.—Jackson v. The Fleta, Case No. 7,135.

This rule applies to seamen employed on lakes and navigable rivers.—The Ben Flint, Case No. 1,299.

The rule extends to fishermen on mackeral voyages, in licensed and enrolled vessels, although they are paid in proportion to their individual catches.—Knight v. Parsons, Case No. 7,886.

And it applies to seaman whose compensation is by share in earnings.—The Atlantic, Case No. 620.

The phrase, "service of the ship," is not confined to acts done for the benefit of the ship, or in the actual performance of the seaman's duty.—Ringgold v. Crocker, Case No. 11,843.

A second mate, wounded by accidental discharge of pistol in his hands while assisting to suppress a riot on board, held injured in service of ship.—Callon v. Williams, Case No. 2,324.

The seaman is entitled to be cured, at the expense of the ship, of any injury received by him in executing an improper order, or inflicted upon him by the wrongful violence of an officer in the exercise of his authority, as officer, to punish him.—Ringgold v. Crocker, Case No. 11,843.

An express promise by a sick seaman to pay the amount of a physician's bill for attendance is without consideration and void.—Freeman v. Baker, Case No. 5,084.

A mate succeeding to the command of the ship upon the death of the master is entitled to be cured at the expense of the ship, in the same manner as a seaman.—The George, Case No. 5,329.

The cost of the cure of a mariner injured in the service of the vessel may be recovered by proceeding in rem, together with damages in the nature of additional wages, where the injury is caused by neglect or misconduct of officers or owners.—Brown v. The D. S. Cage, Case No. 2,002.

Such damages are not allowed, however, in the absence of fault of the officers.—Brown v. The Bradish Johnson, Case No. 1,992.

A general averment that a vessel was supplied with a medicine chest according to law is not, of itself, sufficient evidence to discharge a master from his liability for a physician's bill for attendance upon a sick seaman.—Freeman v. Baker, Case No. 5,084.

§ 9. —— Treatment at foreign or home port.

Where a seaman was injured in the home port so severely that he could not be removed to the ship hospital, the shipowners were liable for his expenses.—Canfield v. Reed, Case No. 2,381.

A seaman whose feet are frozen while in the ship's boat, in the service of the ship, before he is discharged therefrom on the return voyage, at the home port, is entitled to be cured at the ship's expense.—Reed v. Canfield, Case No. 11,641.

A seaman disabled in the service of the ship and necessarily left abroad is entitled to the expenses of his cure, and of his return.—Brunent v. Taber, Case No. 2,054.

Expenses for board, medicine, and medical attendance for a seaman who voluntarily goes on shore to be treated for yellow fever are chargeable to the ship.—Lamson v. Westcott, Case No. 8,035.

Under the British law, where an injured seaman is left behind in a foreign port, the ship is liable for his cure and care.—The Magna Charta, Case No. 8,953.

The fact that a seaman is suffering from a malignant and infectious disease will not justify the master in setting him ashore without provision for his care, subsistence, and proper medication.—Tomlinson v. Hewett, Case No. 14,087.

Expenses of care and cure of seaman on shore chargeable to ship which has no means to care for him.—Babcock v. Terry, Case No. 702; The Forest, Id. 4,936; The George, Id. 5,329.

A seaman on a voyage from Calcutta to Boston, 25 days before passing St. Helena, fell from aloft, and broke his legs. Held, that the master should have put into St. Helena for his relief.—Brown v. Overton, Case No. 2,024.

§ 10. —— Expenses chargeable against ship.

The expenses of curing a sick seaman, chargeable against a ship, include, not only medicines and medical advice, but nursing, diet, and lodging, where the seaman is carried ashore.—Harden v. Gordon, Case No. 6,047.

The services of a manservant or attendant upon the master, who contracted a sickness in a foreign port, are not a charge upon the vessel or her owners.—Sunday v. Gordon, Case No. 13,616.

A seaman cannot recover against a vessel for gratuitous hospital treatment. The right to recover is limited to actual charges and disbursements.—Davis v. The Erie, Case No. 3,632a.

Nor can he recover for injurious effects still remaining because of the injury, in the absence of negligence.—Davis v. The Erie, Case No. 3,632a.

§ 11. —— Fault of seaman.
The vessel is not chargeable with the expenses of the cure of a seaman who contracted disease by his own vices or faults, and in defiance of the counsel or command of the officers of the vessel.—Pierce v. Patton, Case No. 11,-145.

A seaman who disregards the advice of his physician, and uses a wounded foot, cannot recover of the ship for its subsequent care and cure, and damages for loss of time and general debility caused thereby.—Richardson v. The Juillette, Case No. 11,784.

A seaman who shipped as an able man is not entitled to be treated at the expense of the ship, nor to wages, while he is disabled by disease brought on by his own vices.—Chandler v. The Annie Buckman, Case No. 2,591a.

To forfeit the claim, the disability or sickness of the seaman must be owing to vicious or unjustifiable conduct, not mere negligence.—The Ben Flint, Case No. 1,299.

§ 12. —— Duration of ship's liability.
The right of a seaman to be cured at the ship's expense continues no longer than his right to wages under his contract.—The Ben Flint, Case No. 1,299; The Cambridge, Id. 2,335; Nevitt v. Clarke, Id. 10,138.

Such liability is usually limited to time necessary to enable him to return home.—The Atlantic, Case No. 620.

§ 13. Penalties for violation of regulations.
Foreigners employed as seamen in American merchant ships are seamen "of the United States," within the meaning of the act of 1803, c. 62.—Matthews v. Offley, Case No. 9,290.

An action against a master for the penalty given by Act 1803 for refusing to bring destitute seamen to the United States must be brought in the name of the United States, and not of the consul.—Matthews v. Offley, Case No. 9,290.

In such action the certificate of the consul is prima facie evidence of the facts.—Matthews v. Offley, Case No. 9,290.

Under Act 1803, providing for the recovery of a penalty where a master refuses to take destitute seaman on board, the consul is the proper judge as to what ship shall bring to the United States a destitute seaman.—Matthews v. Offley, Case No. 9,290.

The fact that the seaman has deserted from a ship still in port does not prevent the consul from requiring another ship to bring him home. —Matthews v. Offley, Case No. 9,290.

In an action of debt, to recover several penalties under Act 1790, c. 29, § 1, against the master of a vessel for shipping seamen without articles, a single count for all the penalties is sufficient.—Wolverton v. Lacey, Case No. 17,-932.

The provisions of the act, imposing a penalty on masters of vessels in the merchant service for shipping seamen without articles, extend to the merchant marine upon the lakes and public navigable waters connecting the same.—Wolverton v. Lacey, Case No. 17,932.

One, not a shipping commissioner, who engages seamen for a vessel of which he is not the owner, consignee, or master, is liable to the penalties prescribed by Act June 7, 1872.—United States v. Idell, Case No. 15,436.

The provisions of said act apply as well to vessels engaged in the coastwise as to those engaged in the foreign trade.—United States v. Idell, Case No. 15,436.

Where a steamship ships a crew under articles executed before a notary public, it is a violation of Act June 7, 1872, and the ship incurs the penalty provided therein.—The City of Mexico, Case No. 2,756.

The penalty imposed for a failure to provide medical stores, etc., may be recovered by the United States by a civil action, when brought in the circuit court for the district of Massachusetts.—United States v. Elliot, Case No. 15,043.

An attachment of the seaman's wages is no excuse for delay in payment, and the penalty is recoverable. Rev. St. § 4529.—The John E. Holbrook, Case No. 7,339.

Seamen cannot recover the penalty provided by Rev. St. § 4529, for the nonpayment of wages then due them, when the net proceeds from the sale of the vessel are insufficient to pay the officers and crew, and it does not appear that the master could have raised a sufficient sum for the purpose.—The Wenonah, Case No. 17,412.

Seamen discharged at the home port, without payment of any portion of their wages, the amount of which was not disputed, held entitled to recover double pay for 10 days, although their suit was brought within 10 days from the discharge. Act June 7, 1872.—The Columbia, Case No. 3,034.

II. EMPLOYMENT IN GENERAL.

Powers of master in the employment of seamen, see "Shipping," § 77.

§ 14. What law governs.
The laws of the United States follow seamen engaged on its vessels until the voyage is completed, whether in a foreign country or here.—Roberts v. Skolfield, Case No. 11,917.

§ 15. Who are seamen.
The clerk of a steamboat is a mariner.—The Sultana, Case No. 13,602.

A fireman on board a steamer is a seaman.—The North America, Case No. 10,314.

Cooks and stewards are mariners.—Black v. The Louisiana, Case No. 1,461.

A woman employed as cook on board a vessel is a mariner.—Sageman v. The Brandywine, Case No. 12,216; Wolverton v. Lacey, Id. 17,-932.

The ship's carpenter ranks with an ordinary seaman, and is subject to the orders of the second mate.—Sheridan v. Furbur, Case No. 12,-761.

Persons shipping as sealers on board a vessel engaged in the sealing business are mariners.—The Ocean Spray, Case No. 10,412.

§ 16. Who may be required to perform seamen's duty.
One who secretes himself on board before sailing, and discovers himself after the vessel is at sea, is not one of the crew, though the master requires him to work, as a condition of his having food, and he does work.—United States v. Small, Case No. 16,314.

Cook may be required to perform service as seaman so far as he is able.—Allen v. Hallet, Case No. 223.

A distressed American seaman, sent home on board an American vessel, his fare being paid by the American consul, is bound to do duty as a seaman when called upon by the mate of the vessel.—United States v. Salisbury, Case No. 16,214.

A deserting seaman, who secretes himself on board after another is shipped in his place, may be required to perform seaman services.—Allen v. Hallet, Case No. 223.

A mate improperly dismissed from his office is not bound to perform the duties of a common seaman.—Thompson v. Busch, Case No. 13,944.

§ 17. Minors.
Where a minor concealed himself on board a whaling vessel until she was at sea, but might have been left at an intermediate port with the American consul there, held, that the father was entitled to his wages from the time of leaving that port.—Luscom v. Osgood, Case No. 8,608.

§ 18. Liabilities of seamen.
Seamen are liable for demurrage where the vessel is detained by their refusal to work.—Snell v. The Independence, Case No. 13,139.

Where the mates and crew of a vessel discharge ballast into a lighter or barge so carelessly as to load her on one side, and cause her to sink, they are liable to the owner for the loss.—Fogerty v. Pratt, Case No. 4,896.

Seamen are liable where a loss is caused by their strict obedience to orders which they know are improper, where they fail to remonstrate.—Fogerty v. Pratt, Case No. 4,896.

The crew are not authorized to jettison any part of the cargo without the master's order.—The Nimrod, Case No. 10,267.

Mate and sailor leaving boat unattended on shore, whence it is stolen, are chargeable therefor.—Knap v. The Eliza and Sarah, Case No. 7,873.

§ 19. Services and care and skill required.
A seaman may refuse to inflict punishment on one of the crew unless some justifiable cause is pointed out to him.—United States v. Winn, Case No. 16,739a.

A shipkeeper, by night or day, is not obliged, without an engagement to that end, to pump the ship, wash her decks, etc.—The Harvest, Case No. 6,175.

A seaman is not relieved from working on Sunday by any general law.—Ulary v. The Washington, Case No. 14,323.

Seamen on a vessel lying at anchor off shore, in a place of danger, in case of a change of weather, may be required to help unload on Sunday.—The Richard Matt, Case No. 11,766.

A mate whom the master refuses to allow to act in that capacity need not act in any other station.—Atkyns v. Burrows, Case No. 618.

A person shipping as cook and steward undertakes that he has experience and skill to enable him to perform the duties of those positions.—Forbes v. Parsons, Case No. 4,929.

Hands employed in a special character are responsible for reasonable skill as such, and for faithful performance of duties.—The Buena Vista, Case No. 2,105.

§ 20. Duration of employment.
Where a seaman ships on a general trading voyage without limitation of time or a fixed terminus, either party may put an end to the contract at pleasure, where the time or circumstances are not particularly inconvenient or injurious.—The Crusader, Case No. 3,456.

Officers and seamen must remain by ship and unload the cargo, in default of which they are liable to the owner.—Cloutman v. Tunison, Case No. 2,907.

Seamen who ship for an indefinite period may leave the ship after the termination of any particular voyage, and the discharge of the cargo at the port of delivery.—Jansen v. The Theodor Heinrich, Case No. 7,215.

Whether seamen are bound to remain after the end of a voyage to assist in discharging depends on the custom of the port.—The Mary, Case No. 9,191; The Annie M. Smull, Id. 423.

A shipwreck discharges the principal obligation, but does not release seamen from the obligation of rendering their best services in saving the ship and cargo.—The Dawn, Case No. 3,666.

Legal obligations of seamen do not continue after capture of vessel.—Clayton v. The Harmony, Case No. 2,871.

But it is the right and duty of the mariners of a neutral ship, after capture, and even after condemnation, to remain by the ship, while there is any hope of recovering the property.—Brown v. Lull, Case No. 2,018.

But they are not obliged to await the issue of an appeal.—Powell v. The Betsy, Case No. 11,355.

III. CONTRACT OF SHIPMENT.

See, also, post, § 185.

(A) REQUISITES AND VALIDITY.

§ 21. Capacity of parties.
Seamen are competent to bind themselves by contract as to rate of wages.—The Atlantic, Case No. 620.

§ 22. Necessity of writing.
The maritime law requires that contracts touching the service of seamen shall be in writing.—Smith v. Chase, Case No. 13,023.

The contract must be in writing where the vessel is engaged in a general coasting and trading voyage between ports in different states. Act July 20, 1890.—The Crusader, Case No. 3,456.

An agreement with a seaman on a voyage from New York to a port in Mexico is required under the act of July 20, 1790, in the form prescribed and under the penalty provided by the act of June 7, 1872.—United States v. The City of Mexico, Case No. 14,797.

A tug engaged in towing between Lake Erie and Lake Huron is not within the meaning of Act 1790, § 5, prescribing the contract of shipment to be entered into.—The John Martin, Case No. 7,357.

The term "state," as used in Act July 20, 1790, providing for a written contract where voyage is between ports of other than adjoining states, includes a territory of the United States.—In re Bryant, Case No. 2,067.

The statute requiring written contracts with the crews of vessels on foreign voyages (Rev. St. § 4511) does not apply to vessels bound for the West Indies, Mexico, or British North America.—Smith v. Chase, Case No. 13,023.

Whaling voyage not within Rev. St. § 4520, requiring shipping articles to specify certain particulars.—The Atlantic, Case No. 620.

Act July 20, 1790, requiring a written contract on the shipment of seamen, is not repealed by Act June 7, 1872.—The City of Mexico, Case No. 2,756.

See, also, post, § 61.

§ 23. Parol contract.
A seaman shipped without signing articles is entitled to all benefits and subject to all forfeitures prescribed by the maritime law.—Jameson v. The Regulus, Case No. 7,198.

Though no shipping articles are signed, seamen are bound to remain with the ship until the voyage is terminated.—Jansen v. The Theodor Heinrich, Case No. 7,215. But see The Australia, Case No. 667.

Where two distinct contracts, for service on two distinct voyages, are made at the same time, and one only is reduced to writing, the other may be proved by parol.—Page v. Sheffield, Case No. 10,667.

A stipulation in writing for a series of voyages may be terminated or varied by mutual consent of the master and crew, and a new voyage substituted by parol agreement.—Piehl v. Balchen, Case No. 11,137.

§ 24. Duress.
New shipping articles at reduced wages, signed by colored seamen, under protest, in a port where they are obliged to remain in jail or on board the vessel while she stays there, are not binding.—Stratton v. Babbage, Case No. 13,527.

§ 25. Contracts made after sailing.
Shipping articles signed by the seamen after they leave port are not binding upon them.—The Theodore Perry, Case No. 13,880.

A contract entered into at sea, changing the terms or duration of the original contract, will be disregarded if prejudicial to the seamen's interest.—Waling v. The Christina, Case No. 17,059.

§ 26. Explanation of contract to seamen.
Stipulations in derogation of general rights void unless fully explained and additional compensation allowed adequate to the restrictions and risks imposed thereby.—The Almatia, Case No. 254; The Australia, Id. 667; Brown v. Lull, Id. 2,018; Dooley v. The Neptune's Car, Id. 3,997; Matern v. Gibbs, Id. 9,273; Mayshew v. Terry, Id. 9,361; The Quintero, Id. 11,517; The Sarah Jane, Id. 12,348.

§ 27. Execution.
It is not necessary that a seaman shipping in a foreign port should sign articles.—Gladding v. Constant, Case No. 5,468.

The agent of the master in shipping a crew cannot also act as the agent of a seaman, and sign his name to the shipping articles.—In re Bryant, Case No. 2,067.

A voyage between the West Indies and the United States is not within Act June 7, 1872, requiring seaman's contract to be executed before shipping commissioner.—The Grace Lothrop, Case No. 5,653.

Seamen who sign articles without reading them, after their services have commenced under an oral contract, will not be held bound by the written agreement.—Sweeney v. Cloutman, Case No. 13,685.

§ 28. Provisions as to voyage or term of employment—Necessity.
A contract for a voyage, which has not a definite time and place of termination, is void.—The Horace E. Bell, Case No. 6,702; Magee v. The Moss, Id. 8,944.

This rule applies to a contract to ship as seamen on a trading voyage on the coast.—Waling v. The Christina, Case No. 17,059.

Seamen may leave the vessel at any time where the shipping articles do not describe the voyage, and an imprisonment by the master for refusing to remain and do duty is a tort.—Snow v. Wope, Case No. 13,149.

§ 29. —— Sufficiency of description.
Shipping articles to a certain port and a market are sufficiently definite.—United States v. Staly, Case No. 16,374.

Specifying the places to which the voyage might extend, held an implied agreement that it was not to extend to any other, and a sufficient compliance with the English merchant shipping act of 1873.—The Hermine, Case No. 6,409.

A description of a whaling voyage "to the Northern Pacific Ocean and elsewhere" is defective, having no termination of time and place, and the contract is void.—Gifford v. Kollock, Case No. 5,409; Brown v. Jones, Id. 2,017.

A description of the voyage as "from Boston to one or more ports south, thence to one or more ports in Europe, and back to a port of discharge in the United States," held sufficiently certain.—Thompson v. The Oakland, Case No. 13,971.

A description of the voyage as "from the port of Boston to Valparaiso, and from other ports in the Pacific Ocean, at and from thence home, direct, or via ports in the East Indies or Europe," does not comply with Act July 20, 1790, § 1.—Snow v. Wope, Case No. 13,149; Wope v. Hemenway, Id. 18,042.

§ 30. Provisions against public policy.
A stipulation that the seamen shall pay for medical advice and medicines, without any condition that there shall be a suitable medicine chest, etc., is void, as contrary to the policy of the act of congress.—Harden v. Gordon, Case No. 6,047.

§ 31. Legality of object.
An agreement on the shipment of seamen to enter the naval service of a foreign government is illegal, and will not prevent their claiming a discharge upon the change of the flag of the vessel.—Dustin v. Murray, Case No. 4,201.

(B) CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION.

§ 32. General rules of construction.
Courts of admiralty cannot properly apply to maritime contracts the same strictness that prevails at common law.—Ellison v. The Bellona, Case No. 4,406.

If a vessel be intended to cruise as well as trade, the seamen's articles must be construed with reference to this double object.—Ellison v. The Bellona, Case No. 4,406.

Immaterial erasures in shipping articles will be disregarded. Act 1840.—The Eagle, Case No. 4,233.

The construction most favorable to the seamen will be adopted in the case of ambiguity, uncertainty, or obscurity in the shipping articles.—Jansen v. The Theodor Heinrich, Case No. 7,215; The Disco, Id. 3,922; Wope v. Hemenway, Id. 18,042.

§ 33. What law governs.
Contracts of seamen for maritime services are governed by the maritime law, and enforceable in admiralty. Act 1790.—Bains v. The James and Catherine, Case No. 756; The Countess of Dufferin, Id. 3,280.

§ 34. Evidence to explain contract.
Parol evidence on the part of a seaman is admissible to vary or contradict the shipping articles.—The Cypress, Case No. 3,530.

An agreement made by the shipping agent at the time the articles were signed, and understood by the seaman to form a part of his contract, though not embraced therein, will be given effect.—The Lola, Case No. 8,468.

Accidental omission from shipping articles may be supplied by parol.—The Antelope, Case No. 484; Wickham v. Blight, Id. 17,611.

Where the contract was fully explained to the seamen before they signed it, they cannot vary the voyage by parol evidence.—The Quintero, Case No. 11,517.

The contract expressed in a shipping paper signed at the commencement of a fishing voyage cannot be varied by a parol agreement or understanding which is in violation of an act of congress.—Rich v. The Cherub, Case No. 11,756.

Parol evidence is admissible to show that illiterate seamen signed a contract not read to them, which differed from their oral agreement.—The Tarquin, Case No. 13,755.

Shipping articles specifying no time when service shall begin are valid, and the service is to commence in a reasonable time, which may be shown by parol.—Smith v. Chase, Case No. 13,023.

A parol understanding that the vessel was not to complete the voyage described in the shipping articles is not admissible.—Thompson v. The Oakland, Case No. 13,971.

Where the articles were for a voyage from San Francisco to Calcutta, and no wages were named, held, that evidence was admissible to show that the contract was for a voyage from San Francisco to Boston, via Calcutta, at an agreed rate of wages.—Sheffield v. Page, Case No. 12,743.

Where the shipping articles specify the wages, the mate cannot give parol evidence of an agreement to allow him other compensation.—Veacock v. McCall, Case No. 16,904.

§ 35. Term of employment.
The hiring is presumed to be for the voyage out and return, in the absence of proof to the contrary.—Bibbins v. Brookfield, Case No. 1,384.

A hiring "for the season" of navigation is presumptively for the entire season.—The Balize, Case No. 809.

The "season of navigation" on the Great Lakes comprises the eight months commencing April 1st, and ending November 30th.—The Balize, Case No. 809.

§ 36. Voyage—In general.
Term "voyage" imports a definite commencement and end, and not controlled by term "elsewhere."—Anonymous. Case No. 449.

It seems that a "trading voyage" does not include a "freighting voyage."—Brown v. Jones, Case No. 2,017.

A whaling voyage is properly a cruise for taking whales, and does not include a trading voyage to dispose of the cargo after it is obtained.—Gifford v. Kollock, Case No. 5,409.

§ 37. —— Particular voyages.
Articles describing a voyage from England to the United States and back held not to include ports on the Pacific coast.—The Disco, Case No. 3,922.

Articles for a voyage from Salem, Mass., to Goree and a market, and back to a final port of discharge in the United States, do not authorize an intermediate trading voyage among the islands and on the coast of Africa.—The Gem, Case No. 5,304.

Where the voyage is "from Philadelphia to South America, or any other port or ports, backwards and forwards, when and where required, and back to Philadelphia," the master may proceed from South America to Europe.—Magee v. The Moss, Case No. 8,944.

Under articles describing a voyage to be from Liverpool to Savannah and any ports of the United States, of the West Indies and of British North America, a voyage to San Francisco is not authorized.—The Ada, Case No. 38.

Shipping articles for a voyage "from P. to G., other ports in Europe, or South America, and back to P.," do not authorize a return to a European port after proceeding to South America.—Douglass v. Eyre, Case No. 4,032.

Under articles for a voyage to Batavia, and thence, if required, to ports beyond the Cape of Good Hope, the voyage may be extended to Japan.—Jones v. Smith, Case No. 7,497.

Under articles for a voyage to a South American port, thence to a port in Europe and back to the United States, the vessel is not authorized to proceed from Europe to South American ports.—Piehl v. Balchen, Case No. 11,137.

Shipping articles for a voyage from Liverpool to ports in the Indian, Pacific, and Atlantic Oceans and back to a final port of discharge in the United Kingdom, where the vessel has sailed from St. Helena to New York, do not authorize accepting a cargo there for Valparaiso.—Reynolds v. The Simoon, Case No. 11,733.

§ 38. —— Duration and termination.
Where the duration of the voyage is described as probably 12 months, the seaman, under the British merchants' shipping act, is absolutely bound to make the voyage, if the master endeavors, in good faith, to accomplish it within the time mentioned.—The Hotspur, Case No. 6,720.

Under shipping articles describing the voyage as "from," "to," "thence," and "finally" certain ports named, for a period not exceeding 12 months, the seamen are not bound for 12 months unless the vessel went to the ports in the order named.—The William Jarvis, Case No. 17,697.

The voyage is not ended until the cargo and ballast are discharged.—Ex parte Sprout, Case No. 13,267.

"Port of destination" and "port of discharge" are not equivalent words. The port of destination is not the port of discharge, unless the voyage is actually terminated there, or some cargo is unladen.—United States v. Barker, Case No. 14,516.

A port where colored seamen are obliged to remain in jail or on board the vessel while she stays there is not a port of discharge within the United States.—Stratton v. Babbage, Case No. 13,527.

Where the shipping articles are to the final port of discharge, the owner may order the vessel from port to port until the whole is discharged.—United States v. Barker, Case No. 14,516.

Time given beyond 15 days for unloading, where it appeared that the vessel could not be unloaded within such time.—Thompson v. The Philadelphia, Case No. 13,973.

A voyage from A. to B., or some other port, and return to the United States, is not ended on arrival at the first port of the United States, unless it be the port of discharge.—United States v. Smith, Case No. 16,337.

Under articles for a voyage from New Orleans to Havre, and thence to one or more ports in Europe, and thence back to a port of discharge in the United States, the seamen cannot be required to proceed to Charleston as a final port of discharge after the vessel has stopped at New York, and landed passengers and freight.—United States v. White, Case No. 16,683.

§ 39. Provisions for arbitration.
There is no "difference" between master and crew, within the meaning of a stipulation providing for arbitration, where wages due were agreed upon and demanded, but payment of them was refused.—The Sarah Jane, Case No. 12,348.

(C) PERFORMANCE AND BREACH.

§ 40. Performance.
The contract is not affected by the death, removal, or resignation of the original master, but the seaman must perform the voyage under the person lawfully substituted in his stead.—United States v. Cassedy, Case No. 14,745; Same v. Haines, Id. 15,275; Same v. Hamilton, Id. 15,291.

Inability to obtain freight is not such a necessity as absolves the owner from his contract to perform the voyage described in the articles.—Thompson v. The Oakland, Case No. 13,971.

A contract for a voyage to different ports in the Pacific and back to the United States, or for a period of 18 months, is not fulfilled on the ship's part by lapse of the term, where the seaman is left abroad in a hospital, without means or opportunity to return.—Nevitt v. Clarke, Case No. 10,138.

Where by the articles the crew of a fishing vessel were to make the fish, readiness and willingness to make the fish held equivalent to actual performance.—Goodrich v. The Domingo, Case No. 5,543.

§ 41. Breach.
Wrongfully withholding suitable medicines from a seaman, or wrongfully setting him ashore in a foreign country, are violations of the contract.—Crapo v. Allen, Case No. 3,360.

Under shipping articles authorizing the master to touch at certain intermediate ports, "or as he may direct," he may stop at places not named, without violating the contract with the seamen.—Wood v. Nimrod, Case No. 17,959.

IV. DISCHARGE.

§ 42. What constitutes discharge.
An arrest and imprisonment under a criminal charge by the master held equivalent to a discharge.—Hill v. The Triumph, Case No. 6,500.

Words which might imply a discharge, when spoken in anger, where seaman is ordered next day to do his duty, do not amount to a discharge.—Babbell v. Gardner, Case No. 692.

§ 43. Authority to discharge.
The first engineer, who employs the second engineer, may discharge him, even against the consent of the master.—The Magnet, Case No. 8,955.

Mate may be displaced by master for cause.—Atkyns v. Burrows, Case No. 618; Wood v. Nimrod, Id. 17,959.

§ 44. Grounds for discharge in general.
Under what circumstances a dismissal of a seaman from duty may be justifiable.—Orne v. Townsend, Case No. 10,583.

The causes for which a seaman may be discharged are ordinarily such as amount to a disqualification, and show him to be an unsafe or an unfit man to have on board the vessel.—Smith v. Treat, Case No. 13,117.

A seaman cannot be discharged for slight offenses, nor for a single offense, unless of a very aggravated character.—Hutchinson v. Coombs, Case No. 6,955; Smith v. Treat, Id. 13,117.

Single act of disobedience, if trivial or provoked, will not justify discharge.—The Almatia, Case No. 254.

When a seaman is incorrigibly disobedient, and will not submit, and offer to make amends, the master may discharge him.—Thorne v. White, Case No. 13,989.

Misconduct of cook held not sufficient to justify his discharge, or the alternative of compelling him to work without wages.—The Penang, Case No. 10,915.

Seamen who refuse to work on Sunday because not allowed double pay, under a custom of the port near which they were at anchor, may be discharged.—The Richard Matt, Case No. 11,766.

The seaman has no right to refuse duty required of him on a Sunday by our calendar where the day before was observed as Sunday by the custom of the port, but such refusal is no ground of discharge.—Johnson v. The Cyane, Case No. 7,381.

A mate's refusal, after 21 hours on duty, and going to bed, to turn out, after two hours' sleep, to help take the vessel out of port, held not sufficient to justify his discharge.—The Cornelia Amsden, Case No. 3,234.

The refusal of a fireman to accept orders from any engineers or superintendents except the engineer in chief will justify his discharge.—Walter v. The Kamchatker, Case No. 17,119.

Where the mate is discovered in his berth during his watch, while the ship is without an officer in command, the burden is upon him to show that he was not called.—Setzer v. The Sylvia De Grasse, Case No. 12,676.

A mate may be discharged before leaving the home port, for intoxication rendering him disobedient, insolent, and negligent in his duty.—The Garnet, Case No. 5,244.

Where the steward carries ashore, and sells, provisions which have been left on board by passengers, he is guilty of embezzlement, as such stores are not his perquisites, but belong to the master.—Black v. The Louisiana, Case No. 1,461.

Threats by a seaman under the influence of liquor furnished him on board, where his previous character was good, will not justify his immediate discharge.—Jones v. Sears, Case No. 7,494.

The master is justified in discharging a mate who had been drunk several times on board the vessel, and got drunk on the day of her departure, and joined her, while drunk, at another port.—The El Dorado, Case No. 4,327.

The master may discharge seamen at the inception of the voyage where they are quarrelsome and intend mischief.—The George Burnham, Case No. 5,331.

Where a seaman is appointed to act as mate of a vessel, by the master, during the voyage, he may be removed for incompetency.—Wood v. Nimrod, Case No. 17,959.

In the case of a skillful, sober, and diligent first mate, whom the master frequently abused in the presence of the crew, held, that his dismissal was not justified by frequent disrespectful allusions made to members of the crew in his absence.—Thompson v. Busch, Case No. 13,944.

A seaman signing articles, and not reporting for duty at the stipulated time, or, if no time is fixed, within a reasonable time, may be discharged.—Smith v. Chase, Case No. 13,023.

Seamen may be discharged at the inception of the voyage for failure to provide themselves with clothing and bedding suitable for the voyage.—The George Burnham, Case No. 5,331.

§ 45. Discharge in foreign port.
An attempt by a seaman to commit rape upon a female passenger in a foreign port, and her refusal to remain on board unless he is discharged, justify his immediate dismissal.—Nieto v. Clark, Case No. 10,261.

The master cannot justify the discharge of a seaman in a foreign port on the ground that he was a dangerous man, except by showing that the danger of bringing him back would be such as might easily affect a mind of ordinary firmness.—The Nimrod, Case No. 10,267.

Though shipping articles describing the voyage to be from "Boston to Goree, Africa, at and from thence to such port or ports as the master might direct" be void, the master is not justified in discharging the seamen in Africa.—Burke v. Buttman, Case No. 2,160.

The discharge made in a foreign port must be before the consul, but the money settlement need not be; and the consul is not entitled to charge a commission on the amount paid, for merely witnessing the payment.—Hathaway v. Jones, Case No. 6,212.

Consul cannot order discharge of seamen in foreign port, except upon consent given.—The Atlantic, Case No. 620.

A consul at a foreign port has no power to discharge a seaman for disability arising from wounds contracted in the service of the ship, even with his consent.—Callon v. Williams, Case No. 2,324.

The certificate of a consul that the seaman consented to the discharge is not conclusive.—Hutchinson v. Coombs, Case No. 6,955; Campbell v. The Uncle Sam, Id. 2,372. But see Lamb v. Briard, Case No. 8,010.

Settlements of wages and other terms of discharge, made by a consul, may be inquired into or varied where he acted without statutory authority.—Brunent v. Taber, Case No. 2,054.

Discharge of a seaman in a foreign port without his consent or the approval of the American consul places on the master the burden of showing just and sufficient reasons.—Nieto v. Clark, Case No. 10,262.

See, also, post, § 93.

§ 46. Right of seamen to discharge.
Where the master, without any new agreement, undertakes a voyage other than that originally agreed upon, the seamen may demand their wages.—Weiberg v. The St. Oloff, Case No. 17,357.

What deviation from the original voyage will justify seamen in demanding their discharge.—Moran v. Baudin, Case No. 9,785.

Seamen who desert from a ship which is in a perilous position, and are confined at the master's instance, are entitled to discharge on its being shown that the vessel is totally disabled, and the voyage broken up.—Sims v. Mariners, Case No. 12,893.

Where seamen on a foreign vessel have been treated with uncommon cruelty, and, after presenting their grievances in court, were confined and threatened, the contract will be held to be discharged.—Weiberg v. The St. Oloff, Case No. 17,357.

A steward disrated for wasting provisions, and put before the mast, may accept the change as a rescission of contract, and claim his discharge at the next port.—The Hotspur, Case No. 6,720.

Consuls have authority to discharge seamen with three months' extra pay, where they have been cruelly treated, though they have not deserted.—Coffin v. Weld, Case No. 2,953.

§ 47. Wrongful discharge.
The mate is entitled to command in the absence of the master, and if a seaman be wrongfully dismissed by him the owners are liable therefor, as the act of their agent.—Orne v. Townsend, Case No. 10,583.

Seamen wrongfully discharged abroad cannot be compelled to ship as seamen for a return in another vessel of the same owners, or their own vessel, in which they have been illtreated.—Burke v. Buttman, Case No. 2,160.

A master who neglects, before leaving an intermediate port, to inquire at the hospital for seamen who have gone there from the vessel, is liable for loss of wages.—Farrell v. French, Case No. 4,683.

Seamen discharged without reason before commencement of the voyage are entitled to damages for the loss of the voyage.—The Dolphin, Case No. 3,972; Hunt v. Colburn, Id. 6,886; The Rovena, Id. 12,090.

The unjustifiable discharge of a mariner in a foreign port entitles him to wages, and to damages, also, if accompanied with oppression.—Hayes v. The J. L. Wickwire, Case No. 6,262.

In the case of a voyage from New York to San Domingo, half a month's wages allowed as damages.—The Dolphin, Case No. 3,972.

The measure of damages where seamen have been wrongfully discharged or left at an intermediate port is the wages for the voyage and expenses.—Farrell v. French, Case No. 4,683; Foye v. Dabney, Id. 5,022; Hutchinson v. Coombs, Id. 6,955; Pierce v. The Victory, Id. 11,149a.

In ascertaining the damages, subsequent earnings of the seaman may be considered.—Bates v. Seabury, Case No. 1,104; Foye v. Dabney, Id. 5,022; Hutchinson v. Coombs, Id. 6,955.

But a mate wrongfully discharged abroad, and returning home before the mast, should be allowed expenses and wages to the home port, without any deduction for wages earned before the mast.—Sheffield v. Page, Case No. 12,743.

The burden is on the master to show, to reduce the recovery, that the seaman has been engaged in other profitable employment.—Farrell v. French, Case No. 4,683.

The value of the seaman's clothing, detained by the master, may be recovered in the same libel with a claim for a wrongful discharge.—Hutchinson v. Coombs, Case No. 6,955.

See, also, post, § 88.

§ 48. Revocation of discharge and reinstatement.
Feeding and caring for sailors after their discharge cannot be held to be a revocation of the discharge.—Gallagher v. Murray, Case No. 5,193.

Where a seaman fails, by his own fault, to rejoin the ship at an intermediate port, at which she touched in the course of the voyage, the master is not bound to reinstate him upon the return of the vessel to such port in the course of her voyage.—Scully v. The Great Republic, Case No. 12,571.

Notwithstanding a sufficient cause for discharge, if the seaman repents, and offers to return to duty, the master is bound to receive him.—Hutchinson v. Coombs, Case No. 6,955; Thorne v. White, Id. 13,989.

V. WAGES.

See, also, post, § 186.
Attachment of wages, see "Attachments," § 3.

(A) RIGHT TO WAGES.

§ 49. Nature of right.
The right of a seaman to wages is not founded in the articles, but in the service.—Mahoon v. The Gloucester. Case No. 8.970.

§ 50. What law governs.
The right in respect to wages depends upon the law of the flag, without regard to the nationality of the seamen themselves.—The Magna Charta, Case No. 8,953.

§ 51. Persons entitled in general.
Persons not strictly mariners may charge a vessel or owners in admiralty for services on shipboard which were necessary to her navigation or safety.—Sunday v. Gordon, Case No. 13,616.

The son of a partner in an adventure of discovery, who went out on the voyage as a passenger, but did full duty as a seaman on the return voyage, held not entitled to wages, though his name appeared on the shipping articles.—The Robert Noble, Case No. 11,894.

An unlicensed engineer cannot recover wages for services on a steam vessel engaged in carrying passengers.—The Maria, Case No. 9,075; The Pioneer, Id. 11,177.

A person shipped as steward for a voyage at sea cannot recover wages as such, where he was utterly incompetent, and willfully negligent, though he was continued in service for the voyage.—The Buena Vista, Case No. 2,105.

A sailor on a neutral vessel, who is impressed, while the ship is permitted to proceed, cannot recover his wages from the vessel unless he thereafter rejoins her.—Watson v. The Rose, Case No. 17,288.

A seaman engaged at a foreign port on the homeward voyage has the same rights as to wages and food allowance as one shipping at the point of original departure.—Gardner v. The New Jersey, Case No. 5,233.

Wages are recoverable where seamen are compelled to leave the ship by cruelty and oppression.—Relf v. The Maria, Case No. 11,692; Rice v. The Polly & Kitty, Id. 11,754.

§ 52. Deceased seamen.

Where a seaman dies before the voyage is completed, his representatives are entitled to his wages up to the time of his death.—Carey v. The Kitty, Case No. 2,402; Scott v. The Greenwich, Id. 12,531.

The representatives of a seaman dying on a voyage in the service of the ship are entitled to his wages for the whole voyage where the engagement was by the month.—Johnson v. The Coriolanus, Case No. 7,380; Natterstrom v. The Hazard, Id. 10,055; Sims v. Jackson, Id. 12,890; Walton v. The Neptune, Id. 17,-135.

But no wages will be allowed during a sickness which arose from the fault or vice of the seaman.—Walton v. The Neptune, Case No. 17,-135.

Where a seaman suffering from a disease when he ships dies during the voyage, his administrator cannot recover wages.—Writer v. The Richmond, Case No. 18,104.

§ 53. Sickness of seamen.

A seaman who ships for a voyage, concealing from the master a long-standing disease, which incapacitates him for labor, is not entitled to wages.—Mowatt v. Brown, Case No. 9,889a.

It is no objection to his claim that the sickness may have had its origin in some previous injury or infection, not occasioned by his own fault, provided he has acted in good faith, and without fraudulent misrepresentation or concealment.—Neilson v. The Laura, Case No. 10,092.

See, also, post, § 89.

§ 54. Wages as dependent upon freight in general.

Wages fall with loss of cargo and freight.—Adams v. The Sophia, Case No. 65.

Where only part of freight is allowed, wages are diminished in proportion.—Brown v. Lull, Case No. 2,018.

The rule that freight is the mother of wages does not apply to a voyage made in ballast.—Waling v. The Christina, Case No. 17,059.

Neither does such rule apply to a fishing or sealing voyage.—The Ocean Spray, Case No. 10.412.

There are exceptions to the rule that, to entitle to wages, freight must be earned.—The Saratoga, Case No. 12,355.

Where freight is earned it is not material that it has not been received by the master or owners.—Pitman v. Hooper, Case No. 11,185.

Seamen are entitled to wages for the full period of their employment in the ship's service for any particular voyage in which freight is or might be earned by the owner.—Pitman v. Hooper, Case No. 11,186.

Where freight is earned or damages recovered in lieu of freight, though inadequate, seamen are entitled to wages, except where the recovery is against insurers.—Ardrey v. Karthaus, Case No. 511.

The fact that the cargo belongs to the owner of the vessel does not destroy the connection between freight and wages.—Rand v. The Hercules, Case No. 11,548; Skolfield v. Potter, Id. 12,925.

Private contracts between shipowners and shippers in regard to freight cannot affect the seamen's right to wages.—Pitman v. Hooper, Case No. 11,185.

Wages decreed upon the master's certificate that they were due, though the vessel was in port not earning freight.—Minors v. The Mary, Case No. 9,644.

Where freight is lost by the fraud or wrongful act of the master, seamen are still entitled to their wages.—Henop v. Tucker, Case No. 6,368.

§ 55. Shipwreck.

Seamen are not entitled to wages for the voyage on which the vessel was wrecked and earned no freight.—The Two Catherines, Case No. 14,-288; Cartwell v. The John Taylor, Id. 2,482.

But they are entitled to wages, in the case of shipwreck, where the cargo is saved and freight is earned.—Relf v. The Maria, Case No. 11,692; The Dawn, Id. 3,666.

And where they save remnants of their wrecked vessel to the amount of their wages they are entitled to wages as such, though no freight be earned.—The Massasoit, Case No. 9,260; The Dawn, Id. 3,666.

The rule of the maritime law allowing a seaman his wages out of the savings of wrecked vessel, and expenses of his return home, superseded by Act Aug. 18, 1856.—Drew v. Pope, Case No. 4,080.

The standard of seaworthiness, with respect to liability for seamen's wages after a wreck, varies with the character of the voyage and the nature of the cargo.—Farrell v. Mayers, Case No. 4,685.

In case of wreck, the seaman is entitled to wages out of the goods saved for the time served before the loss, and thereafter in caring for the goods saved.—Weeks v. The Catharina Maria, Case No. 17,351; Jurgenson v. Same, Id.

Where the vessel is wrecked on the homeward voyage, the seamen are entitled to wages from the port at which she was laden, though she only carried ballast between such port and that of the destination of her outward cargo.—The Two Catherines, Case No. 14,288.

Liability exists for wages of seamen duly discharged in a home port after a wreck, notwithstanding general maritime law, when the shipping articles promise wages unless forfeited by misconduct.—Davis v. Faucon, Case No. 3,632b.

Wreck and loss of freight caused by a master's negligence do not free the owners from liability for seamen's wages.—Davis v. Faucon, Case No. 3,632b.

The master is negligent in not promptly changing his course when the lead shows a rapid shoaling of the water near dangerous and well-known shoals.—Davis v. Faucon, Case No. 3,-632b.

Where the negligence of a master is in issue, the failure to show or account for the chart used by him raises an inference that the shoal where the vessel was wrecked was set down thereon.—Davis v. Faucon, Case No. 3,632b.

See, also, post, § 87.

Right of seamen to salvage compensation, see "Salvage," § 21.

§ 56. Capture and confiscation of vessel.

A capture, unless followed by condemnation, does not dissolve the contract for wages. It is suspended during prize proceedings, and upon a decree of restoration it revives.—The Saratoga, Case No. 12,355; Clayton v. The Harmony, Id.

2,871; Emerson v. Howland, Id. 4,441; Watson v. The Rose, Id. 17,288.

If during the voyage there be a capture and final restitution decreed, the right to wages is not complete until the restitution.—Willard v. Dorr, Case No. 17,679; Brown v. Lull, Id. 2,018.

Seamen forcibly put on shore by the captors, from a vessel, afterwards ransomed, and arriving at her destination under a new crew, held entitled to wages, subject to a contribution for the ransom.—Girard v. Ware, Case No. 5,460.

Voluntary stranding for the purpose of repairs, and subsequent capture by Indians, resulting in loss of the vessel, are good defenses to suits for seamen's wages.—Farrell v. Mayers, Case No. 4,685.

Where the ship is captured by a belligerent and condemned, the seamen lose their wages, though the owner receives full insurance on the freight.—McQuirk v. The Penelope, Case No. 8,925.

The voyage will be held to be broken up by the confiscation of the vessel, though she is afterwards restored on condition of making a special voyage.—Rand v. The Hercules, Case No. 11,548.

Freight will be considered to have been earned on a portion of a cargo belonging to the owner of the vessel, landed without interference, and its subsequent confiscation will not affect the right to wages.—Rand v. The Hercules, Case No. 11,548.

See, also, post, § 86.

§ 57. Condemnation of vessel for unseaworthiness.

Where a vessel is condemned as unseaworthy at an intermediate port, and sold, and the cargo is transshipped by order of the shipowner's agents, and reaches its destination, the seamen are entitled to wages.—Wallace v. Munford, Case No. 17,102.

§ 58. Abandonment of vessel.

Where a ship was abandoned and set fire to at sea by order of the master, held, that the crew were not entitled to any wages, though the ship was insured and certain articles were saved. —The Niphon's Crew, Case No. 10,277.

§ 59. Interdiction of commerce of port of destination.

If, pending the voyage, there be an interdiction of commerce with the port of destination, by war or otherwise, and, in consequence, the voyage is broken up, no wages are due.—The Saratoga, Case No. 12,355.

But the seamen are entitled to a reasonable compensation where they are subsequently retained by the master, to refit and preserve the ship.—The Saratoga, Case No. 12,355.

§ 60. Agreements to renounce wages.

A stipulation not to demand wages until arrival of vessel at final destination will not bar wages.—The General Chamberlain, Case No. 5,310; Relf v. The Maria, Id. 11,692.

Construction of an agreement in the shipping articles that no wages shall be paid until the return of the vessel to the port of outfit.—Johnson v. Sims, Case No. 7,413.

A stipulation not to demand wages before a certain time is void where the service is completed, or the seaman discharged before the expiration of that time.—The Cypress, Case No. 3,530.

An agreement to renounce wages for a share in the catch on a fishing voyage disregarded where unequal and unjust.—Somerville v. The Francisco, Case No. 13,171.

§ 61. Absence of written agreement.

The crew of a fishing vessel, not having signed shipping articles as required by title 51, Rev. St., may collect their shares or wages.—The Grace Darling, Case No. 5,651.

A seaman shipped without signing articles must be paid according to the acts of congress. —Jameson v. The Regulus, Cas. No. 7,198.

§ 62. Illegality of voyage.

Seamen on a vessel forfeited as fitted out for the slave trade are entitled to wages if ignorant of the criminal purpose of the voyage.—The Mary Ann, Case No. 9,194.

The fact that a coasting vessel has no license does not affect the right to wages if the seamen are ignorant thereof.—The Mary, Case No. 9,190.

(B) FORFEITURE.

§ 63. Nature and cause of forfeiture in general.

Forfeiture of wages is not given merely as a compensation to the owner for actual loss suffered by the seaman's misconduct; it is enforced also by way of punishment.—The Florence, Case No. 4,881.

Before a forfeiture of wages can be adjudged it must appear that the contract under which the wages are claimed has been violated, and, upon a suit in rem by a mate for wages, the court will not investigate his conduct while temporarily in command of the ship as master, with a view to inflicting a forfeiture of wages as mate.—Airey v. The Ann C. Pratt, Case No. 114.

§ 64. Desertion—What constitutes.

In order to constitute a desertion, there must be an intention not to return.—The Balize, Case No. 809; Cloutman v. Tunison, Id. 2,907; Coffin v. Jenkins, Id. 2,948; The Rovena, Id. 12,090; The Union, Id. 14,347.

An intention to desert will not bring seamen within the act of July 20, 1790, where there is no actual desertion.—Hart v. The Otis, Case No. 6,154.

The absence from the vessel must be unauthorized.—Coffin v. Jenkins, Case No. 2,948; Magee v. The Moss, Id. 8,944.

A temporary absence, without objection of master, while vessel is loading or unloading, is not a desertion.—Borden v. Hiern, Case No. 1,655.

A seaman who, unknown to the master, but with permission of the mate, leaves the vessel, is not guilty of desertion.—The Caroline E. Kelly, Case No. 2,422.

Seamen are guilty of desertion where they leave the vessel before the voyage is completed, without the master's consent, though with his knowledge, and upon his promise that they shall not be arrested therefor.—The Hermine, Case No. 6,409.

The conduct of a seaman in going ashore against orders, and in breaking away when apprehended, held to amount to a desertion.—The Ericson, Case No. 4,510.

Absence from the ship without leave, for two hours, is not desertion or misconduct meriting a forfeiture of wages.—Ruddy v. The Golden State, Case No. 12,111.

Seamen forfeit their wages, under Act July 20, 1790, § 5, by absence without leave and remaining away for 48 hours, though they intended to return.—The Union, Case No. 14,347; Same v. Jansen, Id. 14,348.

Act 1790, declaring any unauthorized absence of a seaman from a ship 48 hours to be a desertion, applies to all cases, though the seaman has been prevented from returning by the sailing of the ship.—Coffin v. Jenkins, Case No. 2,948.

A seaman forfeits all wages due by leaving the vessel at a foreign port during her voyage, with or without leave, and not returning within a reasonable time, before another man is hired in his place.—The Philadelphia, Case No. 11,-084.

An engineer verbally hired by the month on a tug on the Lakes is guilty of desertion, forfeiting all wages due, where he leaves his post of duty before his month is up, insisting upon a right to accept another offer.—The John Martin, Case No. 7,357.

Where a seaman is hired at a certain sum per month, and no agreement is made as to the duration of his employment, he is not guilty of desertion where he leaves the vessel one day before the expiration of the second month.—Farrell v. Campbell, Case No. 4,681.

A seaman on a lake vessel, having shipped under a verbal agreement, may leave the vessel at any time.—The City of Fremont, Case No. 2,746.

Quære whether an unauthorized absence, after termination of voyage in home port, but before the seaman is entitled to his discharge, is a desertion which will forfeit wages.—The Elizabeth Frith, Case No. 4,361.

Desertion will not forfeit wages, either by maritime law or by the statute, unless it occurs before the end of the voyage, which is when the ship arrives at her port of destination, and is moored in the accustomed place.—Cloutman v. Tunison, Case No. 2,907; Francis v. Bassett, Id. 5,037. But see Knagg v. Goldsmith, Case No. 7,872.

Where there is a stipulation that the seamen shall not sue for wages until the vessel is unladen, leaving the vessel before she is unladen after her arrival is not a desertion which works a forfeiture of wages.—Granon v. Hartshorne, Case No. 5,689; The Martha, Id. 9,144.

That the cargo is owned by the freighter does not make the mere arrival in port a delivery, within the meaning of the shipping articles. Such ownership is no ground of distinction.—The Martha, Case No. 9,144.

Under a contract for the run homeward from a foreign port at a stated sum, the seamen may leave the ship as soon as she anchors in the harbor of her home port.—Ryan v. Green, Case No. 12,186a.

The seaman loses his right to wages where, though especially requested, he made no attempt until the last moment to get aboard.—Smith v. The Utica, Case No. 13,123.

Wages are forfeited where the seaman leaves the vessel in a foreign port, and she sails without him, after waiting a reasonable time.—Piehl v. Balchen, Case No. 11,137.

Seamen bound to remain with captured vessel until an adjudication.—Bordman v. Elizabeth, Case No. 1,657.

Where seamen abandon the wreck, they lose their right to wages.—Lewis v. The Elizabeth and Jane, Case No. 8,321; The Two Catherines, Id. 14,288.

§ 65. —— Excusable or justifiable leaving.

Sickness is an excuse for leaving vessel.—Barron v. Locke, Case No. 1,054.

If a sick seaman is sent to a hospital in a foreign port, and the ship leaves without his rejoining her, he is not absent without leave, so as to stop his wages.—Nevitt v. Clarke, Case No. 10,138.

A seaman arrested and imprisoned in a foreign port is not a deserter, so as to forfeit wages due at the time of the arrest.—Bray v. The Atalanta, Case No. 1,819; Brower v. The Maiden, Id. 1,970; Costello v. American S. S. Co., Id. 3,263; Hayes v. The J. L. Wickwire, Id. 6,262.

A seaman is justified in leaving the vessel through fear induced by cruel treatment and threats.—Bush v. The Alonzo, Case No. 2,223; Coffin v. Weld, Id. 2,953; Magee v. The Moss, Id. 8,944; Sherwood v. McIntosh, Id. 12,778.

Where a seaman had been brutally maltreated by the mate, and was refused permission by the master to see the American consul, and severely punished for refusal to return unconditionally to duty under the mate, held, that he was justified in leaving the ship, and was entitled to wages to the time of reaching home by another ship, and to damages.—Knowlton v. Boss, Case No. 7,901.

A single act of assault and battery, though exceeding the bounds of moderation, will not justify a desertion, unless there be reasonable ground for apprehending that the acts of oppression will be repeated.—Steele v. Thacher, Case No. 13,348.

Going ashore to apply to an American consul for redress for alleged cruel treatment on board does not work a forfeiture of wages.—Freeman v. Baker, Case No. 5,084; Hart v. The Otis, Id. 6,154.

Such conduct will not justify their imprisonment, nor the deduction from their wages of the amount paid other hands, in their places, while so imprisoned.—Hart v. The Otis, Case No. 6,154.

Seamen are justified in leaving vessel for just fears for personal safety.—The Alonzo, Case No. 258; The Gem, Id. 5,304.

A seaman, who, in the peril of a collision, jumped aboard the colliding vessel, and afterwards endeavored, without success, to rejoin his own vessel, will be allowed wages up to the time of collision.—Hanson v. Rowell, Case No. 6,043.

Seamen who ship in a leaky vessel, to help pump on her homeward voyage, cannot rightfully abandon her, even if the leak increases, if she was seaworthy when she left port.—The Moslem, Case No. 9,875.

The crew are justified in leaving the ship, and may recover full wages, where they are fed on unwholesome or spoiled provisions.—Swift v. The Happy Return, Case No. 13,697.

But leaving the vessel is not justifiable unless the provisions were positively bad, and unfit for the men's support.—The Balize, Case No. 809; Ulary v. The Washington, Id. 14,323.

A seaman who is sent ashore to get articles belonging to the ship, and does not return before the ship sails, but afterwards goes to the destination of the ship, and takes the articles to the vessel and demands his wages, is not a deserter, so as to incur a forfeiture of wages under Act Aug. 18, 1856, § 25.—The Catawanteak, Case No. 2,510.

It is not a desertion for a mariner to leave a ship at a port from which it intends to start on a voyage not named in the shipping articles.—Brown v. Jones, Case No. 2,017.

Three weeks' time consumed in discharging and taking in cargo at intermediate port does not show abandonment, justifying desertion.—Bibbins v. Brookfield, Case No. 1,384.

A change of a voyage from that specified in the shipping articles must be actually resolved on and known to a seaman, to authorize him to leave a vessel without forfeiting his wages.—Douglass v. Eyre, Case No. 4,032.

Though the leaving of the vessel is not justified by the circumstances, a forfeiture will not be decreed where there is an apparent connivance on the part of an officer of the vessel in efforts by third persons to induce the seamen to desert.—The Lilian M. Vigus, Case No. 8,-346.

§ 66. —— By minor.
Where a minor, with the consent of his father, shipped as a seaman, but deserted during the voyage after he had become of age, such desertion does not forfeit his father's right to wages earned during minority.—Coffin v. Shaw, Case No. 2,951.

Desertion, under the statute, by a minor who engaged in a voyage without his father's consent, is no defense to a suit by the father for previous services.—Lovrein v. Thompson, Case No. 8,557.

§ 67. —— Proof of desertion in general.
Ship's articles, with the signature of the sailor, are prima facie evidence of his having been on board the vessel.—Malone v. Bell, Case No. 8,994.

Though the entry in the log book of a desertion is defective, a forfeiture may be decreed, under the general maritime law, upon other evidence.—Herron v. The Peggy, Case No. 6,427.

Sufficiency of evidence to convict a seaman of desertion carrying a forfeiture of wages.—The Osceola, Case No. 10,602.

To justify desertion on the ground of unseaworthiness or unwholesome provisions, the proof must be clear.—Bibbins v. Brookfield, Case No. 1,384.

§ 68. —— Entry in log book.
The provision of Act July 20, 1790, § 5, in relation to absence without leave and a log-book entry, was repealed by Act June 7, 1872, § 51.—Scott v. Rose, Case No. 12,545.

Act 1874, c. 260, if construed as repealing Act June 7, 1872, § 51, as to coasting voyages, has no effect on rights accruing before the repeal. —Scott v. Rose, Case No. 12,545.

The log book of a vessel is not proof per se of the facts therein stated, except in certain cases provided for by statute.—United States v. Gibert, Case No. 15,204.

Under Act July 20, 1790, the entry in the log book is indispensable to a forfeiture of wages. The Betsy v. Duncan, Case No. 1,367; Cloutman v. Tunison, Id. 2,907; Knagg v. Goldsmith, Id. 7,872; Magee v. The Moss, Id. 8,944; Malone v. Bell, Id. 8,994; The Martha, Id. 9,144; The Rovena, Id. 12,090; Snell v. The Independence, Id. 13,139; The Union, Id. 14,347; Same v. Jansen, Id. 14,348.

Such entry must contain the fact, of the name of the seaman, and of his having gone without leave.—The Cadmus v. Matthews, Case No. 2,282; The Catawanteak, Id. 2,510; Hart v. The Otis, Id. 6,154; The Hercules, Id. 6,401; The Rovena, Id. 12,090; Ulary v. The Washington, Id. 14,323.

A general entry that the crew, or all the crew, were absent, is not sufficient.—The Rovena, Case No. 12,090.

It must state the time of absence.—Brower v. The Maiden, Case No. 1,970.

It must be made on the day that the seaman absented himself.—The Cadmus v. Matthews, Case No. 2,282; The Rovena, Id. 12,090; The Phoebe v. Dignum, Id. 11,110.

The certificate of the British consul, on an appeal to him, that he had examined the entry, and that the desertion was properly entered, will be disregarded where it does not appear that it was made known to him that the entry was not made on the day of the occurrence.—The Lilian M. Vigus, Case No. 8,346.

The failure to date an entry in the log of the seamen's leaving the vessel is fatal to its value as proof of desertion, under the British merchants' shipping act of 1854 (sections 244, 250, 281).—The Lilian M. Vigus, Case No. 8,346.

The entry under Act July 20, 1790, is not incontrovertible.—Malone v. Bell, Case No. 8,994; Orne v. Townsend, Id. 10,583.

But to be falsified it must be disproved by satisfactory evidence.—Douglass v. Eyre, Case No. 4,032.

The log-book entry is legal evidence of the time of the seaman's coming on board and leaving the vessel. Act 1790.—Malone v. Bell, Case No. 8,994.

§ 69. —— Effect of desertion.
A desertion during the voyage by the general maritime law works a forfeiture of all wages antecedently earned.—Burton v. Salter, Case No. 2,218; The Cadmus v. Matthews, Id. 2,282; Cloutman v. Tunison, Id. 2,907; The Merrimac, Id. 9,474; The Rovena, Id. 12,090.

As to the power of the court to mitigate the forfeiture according to the circumstances, see Coffin v. Jenkins, Case No. 2,948; Gifford v. Kollock, Id. 5,409; Lovrein v. Thompson, Id. 8,557; Swain v. Howland, Id. 13,661.

The only case of desertion in which the forfeiture is absolute of the whole wages is when all the requisites of the statute have been strictly observed. July 20, 1790.—Gifford v. Kollock, Case No. 5,409.

Section 5 of Act July 20, 1790, designates the only case in which a forfeiture of wages is peremptory.—The Cadmus, Case No. 2,280.

Desertion during a substituted voyage will not operate as a forfeiture of wages earned and due under the first voyage.—Piehl v. Balchen, Case No. 11,137.

Where a seaman employed by the month leaves before his month is up, his entire unpaid wages are forfeited.—The Magnet, Case No. 8,955; The Swallow, Id. 13,664.

Only a qualified forfeiture will be imposed where a seaman, who had gone ashore by permission, and without knowing that the vessel was about to sail, failed to rejoin her because of drunkenness.—The Ericson, Case No. 4,510.

§ 70. Disobedience and misconduct in general.
Wages are not forfeited for slight disobedience.—The Mentor, Case No. 9,427.

Wages not always forfeited by disobedience of a captain's orders, unattended by aggravating circumstances.—Drysdale v. The Ranger, Case No. 4,097.

Misconduct will not be punished by an absolute forfeiture of wages and effects on board unless continued or repeated or of a highly aggravated character.—The Maria, Case No. 9,074.

A forfeiture of wages by misconduct must be shown by clear proof.—Benton v. Whitney, Case No. 1,335.

In a case of monthly hirings, although continuous, upon river boats, misconduct by the seaman during one month cannot operate to forfeit wages earned during another month.—The Pioneer, Case No. 11,177.

Wages advanced at the commencement of the voyage are not forfeitable by misconduct so as to be chargeable on wages subsequently earned. But money advanced on the voyage for clothes, etc., and not stipulated for, should be a charge on the unforfeited wages.—The Mentor, Case No. 9,428.

Justifiable discharge for bad conduct forfeits wages previously earned.—The Almatia, Case No. 254.

A forfeiture of half wages decreed for misbehavior making it necessary to dismiss the seaman when the voyage was about half performed.—Humphreys v. The America, Case No. 6,869.

Forfeiture of half of the seaman's wages decreed for misconduct in striking the master, where the seaman was otherwise punished.—Sprague v. Kain, Case No. 13,250.

The seizure and carrying away of the ship's chronometer by a mate, to force the settlement of his claim for wages, held not an act of misconduct, working a forfeiture.—The Florence, Case No. 4,881.

The conduct of an engineer of a steamboat in making alterations in the engine at the home port, without the consent of the owner, will work a forfeiture of his wages.—The John Martin, Case No. 7,358.

Willful derangement of the engine by an engineer, in order to compel the boat to stop at a certain port, at which he desired to leave, will work a forfeiture of wages.—The Magnet, Case No. 8,955.

Broils, assaults on or resistance to masters do not ordinarily operate to forfeit wages.—Thorne v. White, Case No. 13,989.

Willful misconduct not imputed to mate failing to rejoin master on island from which vessel is blown by stress of weather.—Airey v. The Ann C. Pratt, Case No. 113a.

Seamen must not interfere when the officers attempt to confine or punish one of the crew for disorderly conduct.—Relf v. The Maria, Case No. 11,692.

§ 71. Refusal of duty.

There is no inflexible rule requiring the court, in all cases, to withhold wages for a wrongful refusal of duty.—Gladding v. Constant, Case No. 5,468.

Disorderly and mutinous conduct in refusing to do duty held not to forfeit previously earned wages.—The Moslem, Case No. 9,875.

Seamen forfeit all wages by refusing duty before a fishing voyage is ended, and obliging the master to return with only part of a fare.—The Tarquin, Case No. 13,755.

A forfeiture of wages may be decreed for the refusal of the seamen to unload and reload cargo on the voyage, but not for such a refusal at the last port of delivery.—Swift v. The Happy Return, Case No. 13,697.

A refusal to do duty, at a moment of high excitement from punishment inflicted, if not followed by obstinate perseverance, is not a forfeiture of wages.—Orne v. Townsend, Case No. 10,583.

Seamen refused to proceed to sea until the rigging was repaired, and on arrival in the outward port, finding other persons employed to unload the ship, they went on shore. Held, that wages should not be forfeited.—Dixon v. The Cyrus, Case No. 3,930.

A mate, because improperly put off duty, and charged with incompetency and impropriety, is not justified in refusing to return to duty when ordered.—Gladding v. Constant, Case No. 5,468.

A disobedience in refusing to do duty under a claim of deviation, where the seaman was subsequently subdued to the authority of the ship, held no ground of forfeiture.—The Moslem, Case No. 9,875.

After application to put back to port, where the vessel was leaky, the voyage was continued on the master's promise to sight a certain port and put in, if necessary. Held, that his failure to sight such port did not justify the crew in refusing to do duty.—The Moslem, Case No. 9,875.

On a voyage of a leaky vessel from Cape Town to New York, held, that sailing for Pernambuco to take advantage of trade winds and smooth seas, and for repairs, was not a deviation.—The Moslem, Case No. 9,875.

A staunch vessel, with a full crew, which does not leak to exceed four inches an hour, held not unseaworthy.—The Moslem, Case No. 9,875.

A usage or custom in fishing voyages to carry only a partial supply of bait, relying upon catching sufficient fish to supply the deficiency, is reasonable; and where the vessel, having failed to catch bait, put into port for supply, causing a delay of a few days, the seamen are not justified in refusing duty.—The Tarquin, Case No. 13,755.

§ 72. Drunkenness.

Intemperance will forfeit wages to the extent that it unfits the seaman for performance of his duties.—The Jasper, Case No. 7,228; Matthew v. Chase, Id. 9,283a; Orne v. Townsend, Id. 10,583.

§ 73. Negligence.

Wages are not forfeitable for slight neglect. There must be habitual neglect.—The Mentor, Case No. 9,427.

The mate forfeits his wages where goods are lost by his negligence.—Conner v. Levering, Case No. 3,114.

§ 74. Rebellious or mutinuous conduct.

Mutinous and rebellious conduct, if persisted in, forfeits all right to wages.—Relf v. The Maria, Case No. 11,692.

Rebellious conduct for which seamen are amenable to criminal prosecution does not forfeit wages.—Thorne v. White, Case No. 13,989.

Rebellious conduct will not justify total forfeiture when resulting from sudden irritation aroused by inconsiderate treatment.—Martin v. The William, Case No. 9,171.

Wages held not forfeited by mutiny which was quelled by severe measures of repression and punishment, where the voyage was thereafter performed, as the seamen had been sufficiently punished.—The Wm. Cummings, Case No. 17,-690.

It is not disorderly or mutinous conduct to apply in a body to the officers to put back to port, where a staunch vessel leaks four inches an hour.—The Moslem, Case No. 9,875.

Seamen may recover wages and claims for short allowance, although guilty of mutinous and disobedient conduct, where they had afterwards returned to duty and been criminally prosecuted for the offense.—Hill v. The Triumph, Case No. 6,500.

Forfeiture for rebellious conduct applies only to wages previously earned.—The Mentor, Case No. 9,427.

Insubordination by a steward, who was an educated man, is a greater offense than that of an ordinary seaman.—Peters v. Martens, Case No. 11,031.

Gross deviation from the chartered voyage will not justify seamen in taking possession at sea.—The Mary Ann, Case No. 9,194.

Reasonable ground of suspicion that the vessel is about to engage in the slave trade does not justify the seamen in taking possession of her at sea or in a foreign port and bringing her home; and by so doing they forfeit all wages.—The Mary Ann, Case No. 9,194.

§ 75. Larceny and embezzlement.

Stealing part of cargo forfeits all wages.—Alexander v. Galloway, Case No. 167.

Embezzlement of pieces of the cargo by a seaman does not necessarily work a forfeiture of all his wages, and, if the amount of his wages exceeds the value of the things embezzled, he will be decreed the excess.—Williams v. Waterman, Case No. 17,745.

No wages will be allowed a seaman, though criminally punished for the offense of mutinous conduct, who has been guilty of embezzlement and desertion.—Hill v. The Triumph, Case No. 6,500.

Acquittal of larceny of cargo not conclusive to rebut charge when set up in defense of wages.—Alexander v. Galloway, Case No. 167.

Sale of part of cargo by direction of mate during permanent absence of master, to procure necessary provisions, is not such an embezzlement as will forfeit wages.—Anderson v. The Solon, Case No. 363.

§ 76. Smuggling.
Wages are not, as a matter of course, wholly forfeited for smuggling.—The Horace E. Bell, Case No. 6,702.

Where a seaman puts the vessel in jeopardy by violating a notorious excise law by smuggling, he is subject to make amends by forfeiture or subtraction of wages.—Scott v. Russell, Case No. 12,546.

§ 77. Imprisonment of seamen.
Where a seaman is imprisoned in a foreign port for misbehavior, he does not necessarily forfeit the wages accruing during his confinement. —Smith v. Treat, Case No 13,117; Wood v. Nimrod, Id. 17,959.

A seaman rightfully imprisoned on shore for misconduct, but wrongfully left behind, may claim wages for the time he was imprisoned.—The Maria, Case No. 9,074.

A seaman cannot recover wages during the time that he was imprisoned by local authorities in the home port on a charge of mutiny.—Thomas v. Gray, Case No. 13,898.

Such imprisonment may be deemed an adequate punishment, and prevent a subtraction of prior wages.—Thomas v. Gray, Case No. 13,-898.

§ 78. Return and tendering amends.
Seamen guilty of misconduct, who subsequently repent and tender amends, will save a forfeiture of wages, in whole or in part.—Johnson v. The Eliza, Case No. 7,383; Relf v. The Maria, Id. 11,692.

If a deserting seaman offers to return to duty and make amends in a reasonable time, the master must receive him back, unless previous conduct would justify his discharge.—Cloutman v. Tunison, Case No. 2,907.

The return within the 48 hours, in order to save a forfeiture, must have been unconditional, and a return to duty generally.—The Cadmus v. Matthews, Case No. 2,282.

A seaman who returns after a week's absence without leave, and continues during the voyage, is entitled to wages under the original contract, unless a new one is made.—Snell v. The Independence, Case No. 13,139.

An offer by an engineer, who left his post of duty before his month was up, made five or six weeks after he was landed, to return, is not within a reasonable time.—The John Martin, Case No. 7,357.

A return to the vessel at night by seamen, absent without leave, without saying who they are or what they want, will not restore the right to wages.—Ulary v. The Washington, Case No. 14,323.

The seaman cannot afterwards acquire a right to reinstatement and wages by coming clandestinely on board and remaining concealed until the vessel is at sea, and in such case he may be compelled to work his passage.—The Philadelphia, Case No. 11,084.

§ 79. Waiver and remission of forfeiture.
Receiving a deserted seaman back into service waives forfeiture of his wages, but allowance will be made for the absence.—Ingraham v. Albee, Case No. 7,044; Whiteman v. The Neptune, Id. 17,569.

Where a seaman was discharged for misconduct, but was received again on board, his services accepted, and wages credited in his account, held a waiver of forfeiture, although the shipping articles provided that reinstatement should not be a waiver.—Lang v. Holbrook, Case No. 8,057.

The performance of his duty after the forcible return of a deserting seaman is a condonation of the offense, and a remission of the forfeiture, regardless of stipulations in shipping articles.—Freeman v. Baker, Case No. 5,084.

Where seamen are received on board after they have been entered in the log book as deserters, the forfeiture of their wages is waived. —Whitton v. The Commerce, Case No. 17,604.

The punishment of seamen by the master, and continuing them in his employ after absence without leave, is a waiver of all claim to forfeiture of wages.—The Elizabeth v. Rickers, Case No. 4,353.

Allowance by the master of full wages, and giving a draft therefor, import that any grounds of complaint for intoxication were forgiven.—Matthew v. Chase, Case No. 9,283a.

Receiving a seaman on board after the time appointed does not remit the penalty for his neglect to render himself.—Malone v. Bell, Case No. 8,994.

If the shipping articles prohibit traffic by the seamen, under forfeiture of wages, yet the master may remit a forfeiture incurred thereby.—The Mentor, Case No. 9,427.

A pardon by the master is a reinstatement of the right to wages.—The Mentor, Case No. 9,-427.

Thorough repentance, apology, and subsequent exemplary diligence and obedience authorize the court to remit a forfeiture.—The Mentor, Case No. 9,427.

Permitting the first mate, who had assaulted the master, to continue in office for a few days, until a convenient place was reached to disrate him, is not a condonation.—The Olive Chamberlain, Case No. 10,491.

(C) AMOUNT.

See, also, post, §§ 96–100.

§ 80. In absence of valid agreement.
Act July 20, 1790, c. 29, which allows to seamen shipped without a written contract the highest rate of wages, does not apply to fishing voyages.—The Ianthe, Case No. 6,992.

Neither does it apply to seamen upon tugboats.—Milligan v. The B. F. Bruce, Case No. 9,602.

Where a seaman on a lake vessel ships under a verbal agreement, and draws wages promised, he cannot recover a larger amount under Act July 20, 1840.—The City of Fremont, Case No. 2,746; The Fremont, Case No. 5,093.

Where wages are not stipulated in the shipping articles, the seaman may either prove them by parol, or recover, under Act July 20, 1790, § 1, the highest rate payable, etc.—The Crusader, Case No. 3,456; Graham v. The Exporter, Id. 5,667; The Warrington, Id. 17,208.

The rate of wages for previous service will be taken to be the measure of wages, where the seaman shipped without an agreed rate.—The Magna Charta, Case No. 8,953; Milligan v. The B. F. Bruce, Id. 9,602; Thompson v. Faussat, Id. 13,954.

Rule of ascertaining rate of wages of seamen, where the contract is doubtful, applied in case of an engineer on inland waters.—The Pioneer, Case No. 11,177.

§ 81. Quantum meruit in general.

Quantum meruit compensation.—The Hermine, Case No. 6,409.

In fixing quantum meruit for wages on whaling voyage, its unusual protraction and hardships may be considered.—Allen v. Hitch, Case No. 224.

Seamen on a fishing voyage, who were discharged on an island in the Pacific, and then entered for a new voyage, held not bound by the shipping articles, but entitled to a quantum meruit.—Mayshew v. Terry, Case No. 9,361.

§ 82. Amount measured by voyage or season of navigation.

A mariner may show that the shipping articles do not truly describe the voyage for which he contracted, and may recover accordingly.—Page v. Sheffield, Case No. 10,667.

One who shipped as a seaman, and, after the season of navigation, remained on board the ship during the winter, keeping the ship, can recover as a seaman only for his services during the season of navigation.—The Champion, Case No. 2,584.

§ 83. Breaking up voyage in general.

Seamen are entitled to pro rata wages where voyage is interrupted without their fault.—Bray v. The Atalanta, Case No. 1,819.

Where the voyage is broken up without cause, and without the seaman's consent, he may recover wages for the whole voyage stipulated, deducting his earnings meanwhile.—The Maria, Case No. 9,074; The Ocean Spray, Id. 10,412.

Evidence held insufficient to show that the voyage was broken up by the fault of the owner, where the vessel was run on a reef in a well-known channel, where there was plenty of room, and the master was a man of experience.—Hill v. Murray, Case No. 6,495.

§ 84. Refusal to continue voyage.

A seaman refusing to proceed in a vessel provided for the further transportation of the cargo, where the first vessel became unseaworthy during the voyage, held not entitled to wages to the end of the voyage.—Hindman v. Shaw, Case No. 6,514.

§ 85. Attachment of vessel or sale on execution.

Where a voyage was broken up by a sale of the vessel on execution, the seamen were allowed wages up to the time of the sale, and compensation for their time and expenses in returning to their home port.—The Gazelle, Case No. 5,289.

An attachment of a vessel on mesne process does not break up the voyage.—The Gazelle, Case No. 5,289.

§ 86. Capture of vessel.

The capture of a neutral ship operates, at most, only as a suspension of the contract for wages, and the seaman is entitled to full wages, if, without fault of his own, he is unable to complete the voyage.—Brown v. Lull, Case No. 2,018.

Where the vessel is captured, seamen are entitled to wages to the last port of unloading.—Jones v. Smith, Case No. 7,497.

The seaman has an absolute right to wages for the portion of the voyage performed, on the capture and condemnation of the vessel, and a claim therefor is barred by lapse of time, though the owner is subsequently indemnified.—Pitman v. Hooper, Case No. 11,186.

Three months held a reasonable time for return of seamen home from Denmark in the case of capture.—Pitman v. Hooper, Case No. 11,186.

One half of the time during which a vessel is lying in port is deemed to belong to the outward voyage, and the other half to the homeward voyage.—Pitman v. Hooper, Case No. 11,186.

Owners decreed to pay the usual monthly wages, upon proof of the voyage and of the mariner's doing duty on board vessel captured.—Bouysson v. Miller, Case No. 1,710.

The seamen who await the issue of an appeal at the master's request are entitled to wages, as under a new contract, which, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, will be considered the same as the old contract.—Powell v. The Betsy, Case No. 11,355.

In the case of capture, seamen are entitled to wages to date of condemnation.—Ardrey v. Karthaus, Case No. 511; Bordman v. Elizabeth, Id. 1,657; Vandever v. Tilghman, Id. 16,846; Willard v. Dorr, Id. 17,680.

Where, in case of the capture and condemnation of a vessel, the owners recover a portion of their claim against the government, wages are due the seamen out of such fund to the time of condemnation, without deduction for expenses of recovery, or abatement, in the same proportion as the original claim.—Vandever v. Tilghman, Case No. 16,846.

Where a vessel went to a port out of her course, and there sold part of her cargo, and was afterwards captured, wages were decreed her seamen up to the time of such sale.—Lindsey v. The South Carolina, Case No. 8,368.

Where a vessel had been captured and condemned, and was restored, held, that the seamen were entitled to full wages.—Hitchen v. Wilson, Case No. 6,541; Hart v. The Littlejohn, Id. 6,153; Howland v. The Lavinia, Id. 6,797.

Where a captured vessel is recaptured, and restored on payment of salvage, a seaman taken therefrom, and unable to rejoin the vessel, is entitled to full wages, less a deduction for salvage.—Williams v. The Juno, Case No. 17,724.

Seamen taken from their vessel by a privateer, and afterwards escaping, and returning home, some of them earning wages on the return, held entitled to wages for the voyage, deducting the amount so earned, where their vessel was afterwards liberated and completed her voyage.—Singstrom v. The Hazard, Case No. 12,905.

Where a vessel is captured and finally acquitted, seamen are entitled to full wages, including the time of detention, even though the master offered to discharge them and send them home, and they refused.—Wesley v. Biays, Case No. 17,419.

The payment to the supercargo of the proceeds of a condemned vessel after reversal on appeal, except a part retained as a pledge that the proceeds of certain cargo should be exported in certain productions, held a restoration entitling the seamen to wages to the time of condemnation.—Powell v. The Betsy, Case No. 11,355.

Where the owner of vessel and cargo captured and condemned receives indemnity therefor from the country of the captors, the seamen are entitled to full wages, though the indemnity covered only one-third the loss.—Pitman v. Hooper, Cases Nos. 11,185, 11,186.

Compensation allowed to owner by the shipping commissioners will be presumed to be full indemnity for his loss.—Brown v. Lull, Case No. 2,018.

The last port of lading of a cargo made up at several ports is that to which wages should be paid, where the vessel is captured on her homeward voyage.—Cranmer v. Gernon, Case No. 3,359; The General Chamberlain, Id. 5,310; Giles v. The Cynthia, Id. 5,424; Thompson v. Faussat, Id. 13,954.

The port to which a vessel may proceed, and land her cargo, after being turned from her port of destination because of blockade, is to be considered as the port of delivery.—Cranmer v. Gernon, Case No. 3,359.

See, also, ante, § 56.

§ 87. Wreck or loss of vessel.

Seamen of vessel lost on homeward voyage are entitled to wages to the time of discharge of cargo on outward voyage, but not for any of the time she remained in port.—Bronde v. Haven, Case No. 1,924.

When a vessel is lost on the homeward voyage, and has or might have earned freight on the outward voyage, seamen's wages are due for the outward voyage and for one-half the time spent in the port of destination.—Farrell v. Mayers, Case No. 4,685.

Seamen, who, after stranding of the vessel, are retained at a near-by port, under direction of the master, until hope of getting her off is abandoned, are entitled to wages to the time of their actual discharge.—Tarleton v. Mallory, Case No. 13,753.

Where it appears that the master used his best judgment in abandoning a ship loaded with railroad iron, and leaking in heavy weather, seamen will not be allowed wages for the whole voyage on the ground that the vessel was fraudulently abandoned.—White v. Adams, Case No. 17,534.

On a shipwreck and sale of the vessel abroad, a seaman not entitled to extra wages is entitled to a sum to defray his expenses home, to be paid from the proceeds.—The Dawn, Case No. 3,666.

See, also, ante, § 55.

§ 88. Wrongful discharge.

Where a seaman has been wrongfully discharged, full wages are usually, though not invariably, given to the termination of the voyage. —The Rovena, Case No. 12,090.

Seaman entitled to amount actually due at time of discharge, where his assent was induced, on payment of a nominal sum, from just apprehension of ill treatment.—Bates v. Seabury, Case No. 1,104.

The amount he received by shipping in another vessel cannot be considered.—Bates v. Seabury, Case No. 1,104.

Seamen unlawfully discharged, or required to leave for personal safety from cruelty, entitled to full wages for voyage.—The America, Case No. 286; Atkyns v. Burrows, Id. 618; The Hibernia, Id. 6,455; The Mary Belle Roberts, Id. 9,200; The Nimrod, Id. 10,267; Veacock v. McCall, Id. 16,904.

A hiring at monthly wages imports that the engagement is by the month, and the seaman loses the month's wages where he quits, and recovers the whole wages where he is discharged, before its expiration.—The Hudson, Case No. 6,831.

Seamen employed for a specified time, and discharged without cause before its expiration, held entitled to the agreed rate, less the current rate at the time of discharge, with compensation for reasonable length of time to enable them to find other employment.—Jehner v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co., Case No. 7,255.

Seamen discharged at the inception of the voyage because they are quarrelsome and intend mischief are entitled to demand wages only for the time they have actually served.—The George Burnham, Case No. 5,331.

In the case of a slave illegally discharged abroad, his master was allowed full wages up to the time when he might have returned to the United States.—Emerson v. Howland, Case No. 4,441.

A seaman discharged abroad and reshipped at a less sum may recover the difference on his return to the home port.—The Lola, Case No. 8,468.

A discharge ordered by the consul in a foreign port on clear prima facie proofs of criminal conduct, will bar a claim to continuing wages.—Tingle v. Tucker, Case No. 14,057.

The master can claim no benefit from a discharge by a consul in a foreign port, where it was obtained by deceit or collusion practiced by the master.—Tingle v. Tucker, Case No. 14,057.

The propriety of the consul's interference is to be determined upon the facts before him at the time, and not by the case which may be afterwards shown on trial.—Tingle v. Tucker, Case No. 14,057.

Seamen discharged for slight misconduct, and a declaration that they would not continue the voyage, can recover no damages beyond their wages for the time of their actual service.—Ruddy v. The Golden State, Case No. 12,111.

A seaman discharged in foreign port for going ashore in violation of orders held entitled to his wages to the date of discharge, with $10 damages and half costs.—Dougherty v. American Steamship Co., Case No. 4,023.

§ 89. Sickness or injury of seamen.

A seaman injured in the service of a ship is entitled to his wages until the end of the voyage.—Brown v. Overton, Case No. 2,024; Callon v. Williams, Id. 2,324; The Cortes, Id. 3,258.

A seaman injured during a voyage, and left sick in a foreign port, is entitled to wages during such sickness, and up to his arrival home, together with medical expenses, deducting wages actually earned on the return voyage.—Harris v. Capen, Case No. 6,118.

A seaman, rejoining his vessel after being left sick in a foreign port, is entitled to the wages originally contracted for, though the master paid the consul three months' extra wages, under Act Feb. 28, 1803.—Shakerly v. Pedrick, Case No. 12,699.

A seaman so severely chastised with an improper weapon, because of insolence, as to be necessarily left behind at a foreign port, is entitled to wages to the last port of delivery, but not to benefit of Act Feb. 28, 1803.—Brown v. The Independence, Case No. 2,014.

A seaman, left sick in a foreign port, who refused to rejoin the ship when able to do so, will not be allowed wages beyond the time of such refusal.—Williams v. The Hope, Case No. 17,721.

Where a seaman is left behind for sickness, he is entitled to wages to the time until his return to his country; and the rule is the same where a seaman is separated from the ship without fault.—Antone v. Hicks, Case No. 493.

Where a sickness began after the seaman entered the service, though before he signed articles, he is entitled to full wages.—Neilson v. The Laura, Case No. 10,092.

See, also, § 53.

§ 90. Amount in time of war.

Seamen engaging for service in time of war held only entitled to customary peace wages, from the time peace took place.—Brice v. The Nancy, Case No. 1,855.

The wages of a mariner who ships during war should not be lessened because a peace takes place while the vessel is at her outward port.—McCulloch v. The Lethe, Case No. 8,738; Shaw v. Same, Id. 12,721.

§ 91. Advancement of seamen during voyage.

A seaman advanced during the voyage to a position having a higher rate of pay held entitled to the advanced rate.—Knee v. American Steamship Co., Case No. 7,877; Mitchell v. The Orozimbo, Id. 9,667.

A sailor made a second mate is entitled to wages, as such, from the time of his appointment, on the voyage being broken up.—The Blohm, Case No. 1,556.

§ 92. Disrating.

The master has authority to displace the mate and all subordinate officers during the voyage, being responsible for an abuse of his authority.—Burton v. Salter, Case No. 2,218.

The power of the master to disrate an officer or seaman is remedial, and not penal, and does not authorize degradation to the lowest place, if there be an intermediate place which the man is probably competent to fill.—Smith v. Jordan, Case No. 13,068.

A master may discharge or degrade a steward for embezzlement.—Black v. The Louisiana, Case No. 1,461.

Dishonesty or intemperate habits are sufficient causes for degrading a steward, and putting him before the mast.—Sherwood v. McIntosh, Case No. 12,778; Black v. The Louisiana, Id. 1,461.

Seamen may be disrated for incapacity.—The Alonzo, Case No. 258; The Australia, Id. 667; The Exchange, Id. 4,594; Mitchell v. The Orozimbo, Id. 9,667; Sherwood v. McIntosh, Id. 12,778.

The decision of a master degrading a cook for incompetency or misconduct will, in ordinary cases, be considered as final.—The Elizabeth Frith, Case No. 4,361.

A master has no right to degrade his mate in a foreign port for an alleged offense, and make him do seaman's duty; and, if the mate refuse to do duty as a seaman, the master is bound to offer him a passage home.—Wood v. The North, Case No. 17,960.

A mate who, during his watch, turns in and leaves the vessel without an officer in command, may be disrated.—Setzer v. The Sylvia De Grasse, Case No. 12,676.

(D) EXTRA WAGES.

§ 93. Discharge in foreign port.

The payment of three months' wages under Act Feb. 28, 1803, is confined to cases of the voluntary discharge of seamen in a foreign port.—Pool v. Welsh, Case No. 11,269.

The three months' wages (Act 1803) are recoverable on a discharge in a foreign port, whether made at the termination of the seaman's agreement or before such termination.—Dustin v. Murray, Case No. 4,201.

Where an American seaman is discharged by the master in a foreign port, he may recover, in a libel for wages, the three months' advance authorized by Act 1803, c. 62, if the same be not paid to the consul abroad, to be distributed according to the act.—Orne v. Townsend, Case No. 10,583.

It is no objection to the recovery of the three months' advance that the name of the seaman is omitted as an American citizen in the list of the crew, certified from the collector's office, under Act 1796, c. 36, § 4, if he is named as an American citizen on the master's list of the crew.—Orne v. Townsend, Case No. 10,583.

Where a seaman leaves a vessel under permission of the mate, it is a discharge, and, if in a foreign port, he is entitled to three months' extra wages.—The Caroline E. Kelly, Case No. 2,422.

Coercing seaman into remaining on board a vessel sold to a foreign government is equivalent to a discharge, entitling them to the three months' wages given under Act 1803 on a discharge abroad.—Dustin v. Murray, Case No. 4,201.

But where seamen voluntarily enter the service of a foreign government on the sale of the vessel to such government, they are not entitled, on a subsequent discharge, to the three months' wages.—Dustin v. Murray, Case No. 4,201.

Seamen, in whaling service, discharged abroad, are entitled to benefit of statute giving three months' extra wages.—Bates v. Seabury, Case No. 1,104.

Where they are discharged in a foreign port, they are entitled to the two months' wages (Act Feb. 28, 1803, c. 62), and may recover the same in admiralty.—The Saratoga, Case No. 12,355.

Seamen are not entitled to the two months' extra wages as having been discharged abroad, where they are actually returned to the port of shipment, and their wages and expenses paid in full to the date of their return.—Rogers v. Lewis, Case No. 12,014.

A seaman, shipping at Maine and discharged in New Orleans, at his own request, is not entitled to wages for the entire voyage, or to extra wages, as for a discharge in a foreign port. Act 1803, c. 9, § 3.—Brown v. Hartley, Case No. 2,009a.

Nor is the consent of a consul or a commercial agent necessary to render his discharge valid. —Brown v. Hartley, Case No. 2,009a.

The disturbed condition of the country to which a vessel is bound, existing some time before the vessel sailed, is no excuse for breaking up the voyage; and where the vessel is intercepted en route, and directed to discharge the crew, the seamen are entitled to extra wages and their discharge.—Campbell v. The Uncle Sam, Case No. 2,372.

Extra wages allowed seamen who left the ship in a foreign port with the connivance of the master, where a discharge was refused by both master and consul.—The Hermon, Case No. 6,411.

Where a seaman is discharged with three months' extra pay (5 Stat. 396), one-third of such pay goes to the United States.—Coffin v. Weld, Case No. 2,953; Pool v. Welsh, Id. 11,269.

The owner is liable for the two months' wages under Act July 20, 1840, on a discharge by the United States consul in a foreign port without payment of three months' wages or an official entry upon the list of the crew and the shipping articles.—Miner v. Harbeck, Case No. 9,629.

The consul alone has power to remit the extra wages allowed seamen on discharge ordered by him in foreign port, where voyage is voluntarily broken up.—Campbell v. The Uncle Sam, Case No. 2,371.

On a libel for wages the court will enforce the payment of the three months' wages given by Act 1803, where the seaman was discharged abroad.—Emerson v. Howland, Case No. 4,441.

Where an American vessel is condemned as unseaworthy, and voluntarily sold in a foreign port on that account, seamen are entitled to two months' extra wages, under Act Feb. 28, 1803, § 3.—Wells v. Meldrun, Case No. 17,402.

The two months' extra wages, and the expense of returning home, are not allowed the crew of a vessel condemned in a foreign port as unfit for service, where she was seaworthy when she sailed.—Hoffman v. Yarrington, Case No. 6,580; The Rupee, Id. 12,140.

But where the unseaworthiness existed at the inception of the voyage they may recover, under Rev. St. §§ 4582, 4583, from the owners three months' extra pay.—The Wenonah, Case No. 17,412.

A vessel abandoned to the underwriters on report of surveyors that she be condemned as unseaworthy is "condemned as unfit for service," under Rev. St. § 4582, relieving the vessel from liability for the three months' extra wages where seamen are discharged abroad.—Gallagher v. Murray, Case No. 5,193.

Extra wages (Act 1803, c. 62) are not allowed on a discharge abroad on shipwreck, unless the vessel can be repaired at a reasonable expense and in a reasonable time, the burden of negativing which is upon the owners.—The Dawn, Case No. 3,665.

Seamen are not entitled to the two-months wages allowed by law, where the vessel is abandoned to the insurers in a port of necessity, where it would cost more than half her value to repair her.—Henop v. Tucker, Case No. 6,-368.

Seamen are entitled to three months' extra wages where the vessel is cast away by the master. Rev. St. §§ 4526, 4582, 4583.—Brown v. Chandler, Case No. 1,998.

Where the loss is without the owner's privity, he is liable only to the extent of the proceeds of the vessel, after payment of wages to the termination of the voyage.—Brown v. Chandler, Case No. 1,998.

Where a voyage is broken up by a seizure of the vessel for the debts of its owners, one month's extra pay was allowed the seamen.—Woolf v. The Oder, Case No. 18,027.

A sale of a vessel on a decree for advances in an intermediate port is a prevention from continuing the voyage by "higher power," within the Hamburgh law entitling seamen to a free passage home, or extra pay.—The Blohm, Case No. 1,556.

§ 94. Extra services.
Compensation may be allowed for extra services carrying a higher rate of wages than those agreed to be rendered.—The Exchange, Case No. 4,594.

The measure of compensation is the difference between the two rates of wages for the time employed in the extra services.—The Exchange, Case No. 4,594.

Seamen shipped for an undefined voyage, the actual voyage intended being concealed, held entitled to extra compensation for labor in loading guano.—The Brookline, Case No. 1,937.

The master's agreement to pay extra compensation held binding upon the master and owners, but not upon the seamen.—The Brookline, Case No. 1,937.

A seaman who was engaged as a cook on a foreign voyage, and who performed extra services as stevedore, may recover for the extra services.—The Charles F. Perry, Case No. 2,616.

A seaman shipping "by the run," or "by the voyage," is entitled to subsistence from the vessel while detained in an intermediate port by stress of weather, but he is not entitled to extra compensation.—Miller v. Kelly, Case No. 9,577.

For services rendered for the purpose of saving the ship in case of shipwreck, the seaman may be allowed extra compensation.—The Dawn, Case No. 3,666.

But an extra award to seamen for such services may be allowed against the cargo as well as against the ship.—The Dawn, Case No. 3,-666.

§ 95. Insufficient provisions.
Damages in the form of additional wages will be given where the crew is put on short allowance without necessity.—The John L. Dimmick, Case No. 7,355.

Double wages are given under Act July 20, 1790, § 9, if there is a shortage in any one of the three articles named therein.—The Mary, Case No. 9,191; The Mary Paulina, Id. 9,224.

The penalty of extra wages for short allowance of provisions does not accrue unless the vessel was not provisioned as the act requires, and the crew were actually put on short allowance.—The Elizabeth v. Rickers, Case No. 4,-353; Ferrara v. The Talent, Id. 4,745; The Childe Harold, Id. 2,676; The John L. Dimmick, Id. 7,355.

An accidental or unintentional deficiency in the allowance to the crew will not subject the master or owner to the penalty.—The Elizabeth v. Rickers, Case No. 4,353.

Extra wages are allowed for a short allowance of bread, where an insufficient quantity was provided, though the immediate cause of the deficiency was the spoiling of part of it by a sea peril.—The Hermon, Case No. 6,411.

Where a vessel sails without the statute quantity of bread, and the crew are put upon a short allowance of bread, it is no defense to their claim for double wages that flour was furnished as a substitute.—Foster v. Sampson, Case No. 4,982.

If less than the statutory quantity of all three articles (water, meat, and bread) be provided, and there be a short allowance of all, triple wages are given for each day.—Collins v. Wheeler, Case No. 3,018.

The recovery of such penalty does not necessarily preclude the seaman from recovering damages, also, for a deficiency of other provisions.—Collins v. Wheeler, Case No. 3,018; Foster v. Sampson, Id. 4,982.

One-third additional wages held sufficient compensation where there was a deficiency in but one of the specified articles.—Coleman v. The Harriet, Case No. 2,982.

A mate who had supplies on board, which were used for the necessary support of himself and crew, was allowed to recover the amount used by himself as enhanced wages, and the balance out of the surplus in court.—The Rodney, Case No. 11,993.

Seamen in a fishing adventure are entitled to compensation for the neglect of the master in procuring salt, resulting in breaking up the voyage before the close of the season.—The Page, Case No. 10,660.

(E) DEDUCTIONS AND OFFSETS.

§ 96. Debts due from seamen to master or owner.
Where a debt of a seaman to the master or owner did not arise out of or was not connected with his employment, it cannot be allowed against his claim for wages.—The Hudson, Case No. 6,831.

An agreement by a pilot purchasing a share in a vessel that the co-owners shall retain yearly out of his wages such sum as he is able to spare until the balance of the purchase money is paid gives them no authority to apply his wages without his direction.—Somers v. The Jersey Blue, Case No. 13,169.

§ 97. Payment on account.
No set-off allowed on libel for wages, except a payment on account.—Bains v. The James and Catherine, Case No. 756.

§ 98. Contribution among seamen.
If any part of the cargo be missing, all the seamen contribute to make it good, unless the guilt can be placed.—Frederick v. The Fanny, Case No. 5,077; Fogerty v. Pratt, Id. 4,896.

Although part of the embezzlement is fixed on, and paid by some of the crew, yet all are to contribute to the residue, master, officers, and absent sailors joining in the contribution.—Crammer v. The Fair American, Case No. 3,347.

A slave entered as a seaman, and escaped from the vessel, will not occasion a deduction from the wages of the rest by contribution.—Carey v. The Kitty, Case No. 2,402.

An innocent seaman need not contribute to a loss by reason of embezzlement by other seamen.—Edwards v. Sherman, Case No. 4,298.

All of seamen held liable to contribution for embezzlements, although there was no reason to impute to them any participation in the act. —Bradish v. The Friendship, Case No. 1,771.

The net proceeds of the ship and cargo, at the port of discharge, and not the invoice cost of the cargo, with the wages of all the persons belonging to the ship, must contribute to the ransom.—Girard v. Ware, Case No. 5,460.

Seamen must contribute in the ratio of wages. —Fogerty v. Pratt, Case No. 4,896.

§ 99. Absence from service.
Under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112, § 7, there can be no deductions for absences admitted by seamen, unless noted in log book.—The Ada, Case No. 38.

Seamen absent from a ship without any fault of their own, are nevertheless entitled to full wages.—Five Seamen v. The Fair American, Case No. 4,846.

Where the absence of a seaman without leave or justification caused no pecuniary loss to the master, a small deduction only from the wages was made.—Scott v. Rose, Case No. 12,545.

In the case of a special indulgence to a seaman, wages cannot be deducted for failure to render himself on board at the time appointed in the articles.—Thompson v. The Philadelphia, Case No. 13,973.

No abatement of wages will be made for occasional absence from the ship, if no objection is made thereto until the whole period of service has expired.—The Harvest, Case No. 6,175.

Deductions from wages may be made for voluntary and unfaithful absence from duty, even where the seamen are again accepted on their return to duty.—Whiteman v. The Neptune, Case No. 17,569.

A deduction is allowed to the amount of loss actually sustained by a vessel detained in port by the wrongful absence of a seaman.—Brown v. The Neptune, Case No. 2,022.

Where forfeiture by misconduct was found to be waived, held, that deduction should still be made for absence without leave, and for losses or expenses resulting from the misconduct.—Lang v. Holbrook, Case No. 8,057.

A deduction will not be made where, because of illness, the seaman left the vessel after the voyage was ended, but before the cargo was discharged.—Francis v. Bassett, Case No. 5,037.

A deduction of wages not allowed where seaman failed to stay by a fishing vessel until she was unloaded and cleaned, though such was the local usage, where the seamen were not asked to stay by the vessel.—The Olive Branch, Case No. 10,490.

The amount paid a seaman hired in place of another unjustifiably discharged in a foreign port cannot be deducted from his wages.—Johnson v. The Coriolanus, Case No. 7,380.

§ 100. Disobedience, misconduct, and insolence.
One-half of a month's wages was deducted for disobedience, and one month's wages deducted for insolence.—The Elizabeth Frith, Case No. 4,361.

Damages can be recovered for misconduct only when they are the direct and immediate results of the seaman's acts or omissions.—Macomber v. Thompson, Case No. 8,919.

A master who commences a dispute with a seaman by illegal and improper behavior risks the consequences.—Thorne v. White, Case No. 13,989.

Where the owners have not been injured by misconduct of a seaman, and he has been sufficiently punished therefor by imprisonment, a deduction will not be made.—The Olive Chamberlain, Case No. 10,491.

Where the only defense set up to a libel for wages is desertion, a sum less than that due will not be awarded because of misconduct not amounting to desertion.—The Cadmus, Case No. 2,280.

The master of the vessel is bound to see that the loss from the misconduct of seamen is made as small as possible.—The Wm. Cummings, Case No. 17,690.

§ 101. Losses or injuries caused by wrongful act of seamen in general.
Allowances may be made to the master or owner by rebatement of wages in compensation of losses or injuries caused by negligence or fault of the seaman in the performance of his duties. —The Hudson, Case No. 6,831; Thorne v. White, Id. 13,989; Brown v. The Neptune, Id. 2,022.

§ 102. Sickness by fault of seamen.
A seaman, during illness occasioned by his own fault, is not entitled to wages, and is liable for the expenses of his subsistence; but not for the wages paid another man in his place.—Johnson v. Huckins, Case No. 7,390.

In such case the seaman is not liable for the detention of a vessel for want of his services, where the master could have obtained a substitute.—Johnson v. Huckins, Case No. 7,390.

Hospital money is to be charged on unforfeited wages only pro rata in proportion to the whole voyage.—The Mentor, Case No. 9,428.

§ 103. Incompetency.
The measure of compensation for the services of a person who shipped as an able seaman, but was in fact only competent to perform the duties of a green hand, is not the wages of a green hand, but only what his services were actually worth to the owners.—Wheatley v. Hotchkiss, Case No. 17,483.

§ 104. Embezzlement.
The value of portions of the cargo embezzled by the fraud or negligence of a seaman may be deducted from his wages.—Edwards v. Sherman, Case No. 4,298.

Cook held not guilty of embezzlement in selling the ship's slush, the evidence showing an agreement with the master for such privilege.—Parker v. The Calliope, Case No. 10,729.

§ 105. Negligence.
A mate of a vessel, through whose negligence in taking account of cargo a loss to the owner has resulted, is liable therefor.—The Tusker, Case No. 14,274.

But the mate is not liable where the master voluntarily pays to the consignee the difference between the amount of goods actually received on board and that receipted for by mistake by the mate, and for which a bill of lading is given. —The Tusker, Case No. 14,274.

A mate cannot be charged with negligence in not keeping a proper account of goods taken on board, when he was ordered on other duty by the master during the loading of the vessel.—Scharlock v. The Globe, Case No. 12,439.

A mate cannot be charged on the ground of negligence with the difference between the amount of goods landed and that shown on the invoice, unless such amounts are clearly shown. —Scharlock v. The Globe, Case No. 12,439.

The vessel owner cannot retain wages as a contribution for injuries from a collision, alleged to have been caused by the seamen's negligence, until after their legal liability is established.—Mariners v. The Washington, Case No. 9,086.

§ 106. Assault.
The wrongful assault by a mate on one of the seamen on the voyage, to the damage of the ship, may be set off against his claim for wages, though the deduction is not entered in the log nor claimed in the statement made to the shipping master.—The T. F. Whiton, Case No. 13,-849.

§ 107. Expenses upon arrest or imprisonment.
Cost of commitment and support, and the charge for a person necessarily employed in the imprisoned seaman's place, may be deducted.—Brower v. The Maiden, Case No. 1,970; Magee v. The Moss, Id. 8,944; Pierce v. Patton, Id. 11,145.

Where seamen were imprisoned in a foreign jail by order of the American consul, and there was no evidence of bad faith, the men must pay the charges of the imprisonment and the expense of substitutes, but not the charges of the consul.—Chester v. Benner, Case No. 2,660.

If the imprisonment of a seaman in a foreign port is improper, the expenses of it, or of the employment of a person in his stead, are not to be deducted from his wages.—Wilson v. The Mary, Case No. 17,823.

A master punishing the misconduct of a seaman by imprisonment cannot deduct from his wages the prison expenses.—The Nimrod, Case No. 10,267.

Seamen not liable for board while unjustly detained in foreign jail by master.—Anonymous, Case No. 473.

A master who, by the authority of his crew, paid their debts, for which he was arrested, may deduct the amounts from their wages, but not the costs incident to the arrest.—The Coldstream, Case No. 2,972.

The police costs and charges incurred by a seaman for improper conduct while on shore, as well as wages paid another to take his place, are to be deducted from his wages.—Snell v. The Independence, Case No. 13,139.

§ 108. Expense of watch of vessel.
A custom of having a watch on vessels in foreign ports at the expense of the sailors will not be sanctioned without strong proof.—Chatfield v. The Wolga, Case No. 2,632.

§ 109. Expense of survey.
When the crew insist on a survey of the vessel, alleging that she is unseaworthy, if there be reasonable cause for a survey, the owners cannot charge the expense to the seamen.—The William Harris, Case No. 17,695.

§ 110. Release of claim for deduction.
Agreement to proceed on voyage beyond terms of shipment, good consideration for release of claims for deduction from wages.—The Ada, Case No. 38.

(F) WHO ARE LIABLE.

§ 111. In general.
Seamen have a triple security for their wages,—the vessel, the owner, and the master.—Bronde v. Haven, Case No. 1,924.

§ 112. Owners of vessel.
The owners of a vessel are liable for wages if the vessel prove insufficient to pay them.—Carey v. The Kitty, Case No. 2,401.

Owners of fishing vessel held liable for the wages of the seamen to the extent of the proceeds of the sale of the wreck, though the vessel was hired by the master for the season, and he had undertaken to pay the wages.—Flaherty v. Doane, Case No. 4,849.

The owner of a vessel, although his name is not stated in the shipping articles, and although he sells the vessel subsequent to their execution, is liable for seamen's wages.—Bronde v. Haven, Case No. 1,924.

The owners are liable for the wages of a seaman employed by the master after he had a full complement.—Luscom v. Osgood, Case No. 8,-608.

Where the vessel is let to the master for a portion of her earnings, and he is to have entire control, and to victual, man, and furnish her, the owners are still liable for wages, unless the contract is known to the seamen at the time of shipping.—Skolfield v. Potter, Case No. 12,-925.

In such case the money received by the owners is freight, and they are liable for wages, as having an interest in the freight.—Skolfield v. Potter, Case No. 12,925.

§ 113. Mortgagee.
A mortgagee in possession is liable for the mate's wages.—The Bramen, Case No. 1,805.

§ 114. Vessel.
A vessel is exempt from liability for wages of seamen who hire with knowledge that she is chartered by the master on condition that he victual and man her, and divide the earnings with the owner.—Devoe v. The Fashion, Case No. 3,844.

Where the owner of a wrecked vessel takes the business of salvage out of the hands of the seamen, and furnishes them no subsistence, they may recover wages from the remnants.—The Massasoit, Case No. 9,260.

A vessel illegally seized by an American consul in a foreign port, and sent home, is liable for wages of the crew and pilotage.—The Maria Theresa, Case No. 9,082.

(G) PAYMENT, RECEIPT, AND RELEASE.

See, also, ante, § 13.

§ 115. When wages are payable.
The wages are not payable until the expiration of the period allowed for collecting the freight.—Swift v. The Happy Return, Case No. 13,697.

§ 116. In whose presence and to whom payment must be made.
Payment to the consul of the balance of wages due discharged seaman is not a payment to the seaman.—Jones v. Sears, Case No. 7,494.

The payment to the consul of the extra wages required by law, on the condemnation and sale abroad of an injured vessel, discharges the owner's liability, though the seamen refused to receive it.—Drew v. Pope, Case No. 4,080.

Payment to a sailor need not be made in the presence of the shipping commissioner. Rev. St. §§ 4504, 4549.—The Brothers, Case No. 1,-968.

§ 117. Furnishing accounts to seamen.
Act June 7, 1872, § 23, which requires the master to furnish to seamen or to the commissioner an account of wages and deductions to be made therefrom 48 hours before paying off, does not apply to the case of a seaman forfeiting his wages by desertion, which is provided for by section 55.—Stevenson v. Hare, Case No. 13,416.

§ 118. Foreign money and valuation thereof.
Foreign coin paid seamen on their discharge abroad is to be valued at its rate in the home port, under the laws of the United States; otherwise, where payment is a voluntary advance.—The Cabot, Case No. 2,277.

In the case of wages payable in dollars and cents, held that the seamen were entitled to a sum in United States currency that would make the payment equal to specie.—The Rochambeau, Case No. 11,973.

The wages of seamen shipped at Valparaiso, on board a Chilian vessel, for a voyage to Boston and return, should be reckoned in money of the United States, where the contract was for so many dollars, payable here.—The Quintero, Case No. 11,517.

The amount decreed to seamen shipped at Hamburgh for a return voyage, which was broken up at New York, is the amount of their wages in Hamburgh money reduced to United States coined dollars, without adding anything for the premium on gold.—The Blohm, Case No. 1,556.

§ 119. Payment of advance wages.

A draft for advanced wages drawn by the master on the owner, and discounted by a third person, under Rev. St. §§ 4533, 4534, is enforceable in admiralty against the owner without acceptance by him.—Smith v. Pendergast, Case No. 13,090a.

Where the condition of advance security is not performed because the seamen were voluntarily discharged by the master before the time of the performance, the owner is still liable thereon.—Smith v. Pendergast, Case No. 13,090a.

§ 120. Receipts and releases.

It is improper to require of a seaman a receipt in full of all claims, as a condition of the payment of his wages.—The Commerce, Case No. 3,054; Whitney v. Eager, Id. 17,584.

A receipt by a seaman in full of all demands is no bar to a claim for which he has not received compensation.—The David Pratt, Case No. 3,597; The Galloway C. Morris, Id. 5,204; Harden v. Gordon, Id. 6,047; Jackson v. White, Id. 7,151; Leak v. Isaacson, Id. 8,160; The Mary Paulina, Id. 9,224; The Galloway C. Morris, Id. 5,204; Piehl v. Balchen, Id. 11,137; The Rajah, Id. 11,538; The Ringleader, Id. 11,850.

A receipt for less than the amount due will not be set aside where the legal rights of the party were doubtful, honestly contested, and opportunity given him to satisfy himself in relation thereto.—Thompson v. Faussat, Case No. 13,954.

Contracts with seamen, upon a discharge before completion of voyage, concerning wages already earned, will be set aside or disregarded by courts of admiralty, if inequitable.—The Hermine, Case No. 6,409.

An agreement by a needy mariner in a foreign port to take one-third of the amount of wages due in full payment is a nudum pactum.—Savin v. The Juno, Case No. 12,390.

A settlement deliberately made by a seaman with the advice of his proctor will not be opened.—The Hermon, Case No. 6,411.

Receipts procured by improper conduct, imposing on seamen, or deceiving, overawing, or misleading them, will be disregarded, but when given with due deliberation and full explanation of circumstances will not be set aside on light grounds.—Whiteman v. The Neptune, Case No. 17,569.

The father, whose name was used as prochein ami, in a suit by a minor for wages, secretly settled the same, giving a receipt in full. Held, that the receipt should be set aside, and full wages decreed the minor.—The Etna, Case No. 4,542.

§ 121. Exchange.

Upon the payment of extra wages in a foreign port, the master has no right to deduct, from the amount due, a charge for exchange.—Drew v. Pope, Case No. 4,080.

(H) LIEN.

Priority of lien for wages, see "Maritime Liens," § 52.

§ 122. Who entitled to lien.

Contract by master for wages of himself and son held severable, and son to have a lien for his wages.—The Benjamin English, Case No. 1,306.

The mate and cook of a porgy steamer, employed for the fishing season at stipulated wages, have a lien upon the vessel therefor.—The Helen M. Pierce, Case No. 6,332.

A minor employed on such steamer by the master, at all work, has a lien for his wages, even though the owner is authorized by the sharesmen to retain from their shares his wages.—The Helen M. Pierce, Case No. 6,332.

Seamen shipped by direction of one claiming to be the master, held to have no lien, where the voyage was never performed, and there was no evidence of the alleged master's authority.—Gilligan v. The Winged Racer, Case No. 5,439.

The seamen's lien for wages does not pass to a shipping agent by reason of advances made to the seamen at the home port.—Seaver v. The Thales, Case No. 12,594.

A part owner who pays the wages of seamen may be subrogated to the rank of the seamen as against the mortgagee of the share of another part owner.—The J. A. Brown, Case No. 7,118.

Fishermen who ship without a written agreement are not within Act June 19, 1813, c. 9.—The Ianthe, Case No. 6,992.

§ 123. For what services lien attaches.

A mariner's services will be deemed maritime if substantially performed on waters within the ebb or flow of the tide.—The D. C. Salisbury, Case No. 3,694.

A mariner has a lien for wages on a sail vessel engaged in transportation on the tide waters of the Hudson river within the territory of the state.—The Bolivar, Case No. 1,610; Pierce v. The Victory, Id. 11,149a.

A maritime lien arises for services as a mariner on board a vessel having no propelling power, and towed between Philadelphia and New York upon tide waters.—The D. C. Salisbury, Case No. 3,694.

Where a contract of service is for the navigation of tide waters, and laying stone on wharves is incidental thereto, the whole service is maritime.—The Canton, Case No. 2,388.

Persons employed to load and navigate a vessel plying principally for the transportation of stone, and licensed for the coasting trade, have a lien for wages.—The Canton, Case No. 2,388; The Mary, Id. 9,190. But see Packard v. The Louisa, Case No. 10,652.

Incidental condition of contract to work on shore does not deprive seamen of lien.—The Artisan, Case No. 568.

A contract to work at a certain rate per month in port in putting in machinery will not give the person a lien for wages as a seaman.—Walter v. The Kamchatker, Case No. 17,119.

Seamen engaged to serve on a ship for a voyage have a lien for wages while she is getting ready, though she never left the port.—The Blohm, Case No. 1,556; The Island City, Id. 7,109; Levering v. The Bank of Columbia, Id. 8,286.

But where the prosecution of the voyage is abandoned, and he remains on board to take care of the ship, his wages which accrue after such abandonment are not a lien on the ship.—

Levering v. The Bank of Columbia, Case No. 8,286.

And the wages of a seaman on board a vessel in port, who was hired to take care of her while in port, are not a lien.—Levering v. Bank of Columbia, Case No. 8,287.

The seaman has no lien on the vessel for wages while she is moored at the wharf, where he has been paid up to the termination of the voyage.—Phillips v. The Thomas Scattergood, Case No. 11,106.

The mate and engineer of an enrolled steamer employed in towing vessels in Boston harbor have a lien for their wages.—The May Queen, Case No. 9,360.

Wages on an illegal voyage are no lien.—The Langdon Cheves, Case No. 8,063.

§ 124. Property subject to lien in general.

Seamen have a lien on freight for wages.—The Bowditch, Case No. 1,717; Poland v. The Spartan, Id. 11,246.

And such lien is not taken away by the statute allowing process against the vessel.—Poland v. The Spartan, Case No. 11,246.

The right of seamen or bottomry lenders to a lien on freight cannot be affected by a condition making the freight dependent on other than the safe delivery of the cargo.—The Erie, Case No. 4,512.

Where the charterer is to victual and man the vessel, seamen have a lien for wages on cargo shipped by him, superior to all other creditors.—Poland v. The Spartan, Case No. 11,246.

The lien for wages attaches to the ship and freight, and their proceeds, into whosesoever hands they may come, and takes priority of all other claims.—Brown v. Lull, Case No. 2,018.

Where charterer of vessel is also owner of cargo, the freight, subject to the seamen's lien for wages, is the fair value of the transportation of the cargo.—The Clayton, Case No. 2,870.

Seamen on a fishing voyage have a lien on the fish for their wages; and, where the shipowner becomes bankrupt, this lien follows the proceeds of the fish into the hands of his assignees.—In re Low, Case No. 8,558.

Where a portion of a vessel or cargo is saved by extraordinary exertions of seamen, a new lien arises thereon for wages, though freight was lost.—Adams v. The Sophia, Case No. 65; The Bowditch, Id. 1,717; Brackett v. The Hercules, Id. 1,762.

The crew of a vessel abandoned at sea have a lien on her, in the hands of salvors, for wages to the last port of delivery before abandonment, where they were shipped for an indefinite period.—Smith v. The Joseph Stewart, Case No. 13,070.

Seamen have lien on vessel, notwithstanding charter party bound charterers to pay crew.—The Artisan, Case No. 568.

Such lien extends to her boiler, though the seamen knew that the makers who put it in were to retain title until paid, with a right to remove it on any default.—The May Queen, Case No. 9,360.

§ 125. Sale, pledge, or attachment of vessel or freight.

Lien for wages not destroyed by sale of vessel during seizure by customs officers.—Anderson v. The Solon, Case No. 363.

Where a vessel was sold on condition, and possession delivered, and one of the purchasers, after default, sold his interest to his partner, and engaged as mate, held, that he had no lien for wages as against a subsequent vendee of the owner.—The Mary Elizabeth, Case No. 9,206.

A lien for wages is discharged by a sale on execution against the owners, of which the seaman is one. Reversing page 569. Foster v. The Pilot No. 2, Case No. 4,980, reversed.—Gallatin v. The Pilot, Case No. 5,199.

A sheriff's sale of a steamboat will not discharge the lien for seaman's wages of the owner's minor son, who for two years had been permitted to receive his own wages, and control his own actions.—McGinnis v. The Grand Turk, Case No. 8,800.

The lien is not defeated by a previous attachment of the vessel, at common law, in a state court, abandoned before the filing of the libel.—The Highlander, Case No. 6,476.

The pledge of freight to a third person cannot displace the seamen's lien for wages.—The Monadnock, Case No. 9,704.

§ 126. Wreck of vessel.

The lien for wages continues after the wreck of the vessel, subject to salvors' liens.—Collins v. The Fort Wayne, Case No. 3,012.

§ 127. Change of master.

The lien of the crew for wages cannot be affected by the assumption of a third person as master by consent of the owner.—The Monadnock, Case No. 9,704.

The death of the owner, who was also master, will not affect the seaman's lien on the vessel.—The Fanny Gardner, Case No. 4,642.

§ 128. Vessel sailed on shares by master.

A vessel being sailed by the master on shares does not affect the lien of the seamen.—The Canton, Case No. 2,388; The Montauk, Id. 9,717.

But a seaman hired by master with knowledge that the vessel is run on shares, and belief that it is not liable for his wages, has no lien.—Bickner v. The William D., Case No. 1,390.

An agreement of the charterer, with the owner, to pay the seamen's wages, will not bar their lien, where they contracted with the master.—Hart v. The Enterprise, Case No. 6,151.

§ 129. Priorities as to voyage.

The wages of the last voyage of a vessel have precedence of all earlier charges.—The J. A. Brown, Case No. 7,118.

Priorities between seamen's liens and other liens, see "Maritime Liens," § 52.

§ 130. Enforcement of lien.

There is no rule prescribing the time for proceedings to enforce the lien for wages.—The Mary, Case No. 9,186.

The lien for wages is not lost by delay where no interests of third persons intervene.—The Canton, Case No. 2,388.

Where there has been no change of ownership in a vessel, forbearance by a seaman to enforce his lien for wages until after 21 months' continuous service does not render his claim stale.—The Galloway C. Morris, Case No. 5,204.

The fact that a vessel has made several voyages since the contract was terminated will not discharge the lien where the seaman exerted himself to follow the vessel, and commenced suit at the earliest moment.—Freeman v. The Jane, Case No. 5,086.

A tacit lien is lost or will be deemed waived by unreasonable delay in enforcing it, where the vessel has passed to a bona fide purchaser.—The Bolivar, Case No. 1,609.

A lien may be enforced against the vessel in the hands of a bona fide purchaser if the seaman pursues his claim at the first opportunity after his debt has accrued.—The Bolivar, Case No. 1,610.

Forbearance by seamen to libel their vessel at a port where they are discharged before the end of the voyage is not a waiver of their lien as against a subsequent bona fide purchaser.—The Mary, Case No. 9,186.

The lien for wages will not be enforced, as against a bona fide purchaser, where the libel was delayed for many months, and the vessel was repeatedly in port, and her owner had advertised for claims against her.—Herbert v. The Amanda F. Myrick, Case No. 6,395.

A seaman's lien for wages will not be enforced in admiralty, as against a bona fide purchaser, after the lapse of two seasons.—The Harriet Ann, Case No. 6,101.

Lien lost by unexplained delay of four years, where rights of bona fide purchasers intervened. —The Artisan, Case No. 567.

A lien of a seaman for wages on a vessel on the Hudson river held not enforceable after a year from the sale of a vessel to a bona fide purchaser without notice.—The Bolivar, Case No. 1,609.

Vessel employed in carrying and laying stone in Quincy river and Massachusetts Bay, chartered by the master with the knowledge of a person employed thereon for general duties, held not liable to him for wages, especially after a delay of three years and change of ownership.—Packard v. The Louisa, Case No. 10,652.

A claim for wages not set up until after the vessel has been sold on proceedings to enforce a lien for supplies must be supported by clear evidence.—The Searle W. Jacobs, Case No. 12,588.

The lien for wages cannot be enforced on freight money paid to the master before notice of the claim.—Conley v. The G. C. Barras, Case No. 3,103.

The lien cannot be enforced against freight not sought to be charged in the libel.—Conley v. The G. C. Barras, Case No. 3,103.

Seamen have a paramount lien upon the freight money of the voyage, which is to be administered by a court of admiralty by the service of its attachment upon the freight moneys in the hands of the parties wherever it is found.—The Sailor Prince, Case No. 12,218.

§ 131. Waiver or discharge.
A mariner's lien will not be considered as waived by anything less than an express contract.—The Gate City, Case No. 5,267.

By the law maritime, a mariner, by an agreement understandingly made in a proper case, may waive his lien.—The Countess of Dufferin, Case No. 3,280; The Highlander, Id. 6,476.

The seaman's lien for wages is lost by an assignment of his claim.—Logan v. The Aeolian, Case No. 8,465; Patchin v. The A. D. Patchin, Id. 10,794.

The taking by a mate of an agreement from the master to share the profits in place of interest on money loaned will not prevent a lien for wages.—The Blohm, Case No. 1,556.

The lien on the vessel is lost where seamen, with knowledge of a libel filed by other members of the crew, failed to apply for their wages.—Trump v. The Thomas, Case No. 14,206.

Negotiable note given for wages will not extinguish lien unless accompanied by additional security as compensation for renouncing lien.—The Betsy v. Rhoda, Case No. 1,366.

Acceptance of nonnegotiable note of master, on giving a receipt for wages, and putting the note in suit, do not waive the lien.—The Harriet, Case No. 6,098.

The lien for wages is not lost by taking the owner's time note in settlement, where the circumstances rebut the presumption of payment. —The Helen M. Pierce, Case No. 6,332.

The taking of such note operates as an extension of time of payment.—The Helen M. Pierce, Case No. 6,332.

A seaman's lien is not waived by receiving notes on settling attachment proceedings under state law, where they afterwards become worthless.—The Gate City, Case No. 5,267.

Lien will be held to have been waived by taking note from master, and nine months' delay. —The Bambard, Case No. 831.

The seaman does not lose his lien on the vessel by taking an order on the owner or charterer for the balance due at the close of the voyage. —The Eastern Star, Case No. 4,254.

Rev. St. § 4535, providing that no seaman shall be deprived of any remedy for the recovery of his wages by a provision inconsistent with the statute, is inapplicable to shipping articles made in a foreign port relating to a foreign vessel.—The Countess of Dufferin, Case No. 3,280.

(I) ACTIONS AND SUMMARY PROCEEDINGS.

Joinder of libels for wages, see "Admiralty," § 53.

§ 132. Who may sue.
A mate may sue for wages the same as a seaman.—Atkyns v. Burrows, Case No. 618.

A mate, succeeding to the command of the ship upon the death of the master, does not thereby lose his character as mate, but may sue in the admiralty for his wages.—The George, Case No. 5,329.

A mate who takes command on the death of the master is entitled to maintain a libel for the entire voyage at his contract price as mate.—The Fanny Gardner, Case No. 4,642.

A mate who, upon the decease of the master, succeeds to his command, cannot sue in rem for the extra compensation he thus becomes entitled to as acting master.—The Leonidas, Case No. 8,262.

A seaman, though at the time of service a part owner of the vessel, is not thereby precluded from libeling for wages.—Foster v. The Pilot No. 2, Case No. 4,980.

A minor may recover his wages as seaman upon a libel promoted by his father as prochein ami, where the father has agreed that the son may receive his own wages.—The Grace Darling, Case No. 5,651.

Seamen on board a vessel sailing under letters of marque are entitled to the remedies of seamen in the merchant service, and may sue for wages in a neutral port.—Ellison v. The Bellona, Case No. 4,407.

Right of assignee of claim for wages to sue in admiralty, see "Admiralty," § 52.
Suits by infant seamen, see "Admiralty," § 50.

§ 133. When suit may be brought.
The right to resort to the vessel for wages is not consummated until the legal dissolution of the seaman's connection with the vessel.—The Cypress, Case No. 3,530; Jelly v. Tiddeman, Id. 7,256a; The Swallow, Id. 13,664; The Warrington, Id. 17,208.

The voyage is not completed until the unlading of the cargo or ballast.—The Eagle, Case No. 4,233.

Fifteen days may be allowed for the discharge of the cargo and payment of wages.—Edwards v. The Susan, Case No. 4,299; The Martha, Id. 9,144.

A discharge, actual or constructive, entitles the seaman to sue for wages at once.—The Cabot, Case No. 2,277; The Cadmus, Id. 2,280; The Cadmus v. Matthews, Id. 2,282; Collins v. Nickerson, Id. 3,016; The David Faust, Id. 3,595; Freeman v. Baker, Id. 5,084.

A stipulation that seamen shall not sue for wages until the vessel is unladen, if fairly made, is binding upon them.—Granon v. Hartshorne, Case No. 5,689.

An action for wages earned on a previous voyage may be instituted before the vessel is discharged of her cargo at the return port.—The Edward, Case No. 4,289.

Under Act 1790 a libel in rem for wages, brought within 10 days after discharge of cargo at the last port of delivery, will be dismissed as premature.—The David Faust, Case No. 3,595.

The statute which precludes process against the vessel until 10 days after the discharge of the cargo (Act 1790, c. 29, § 6) does not affect his right to proceed in personam.—The Commerce, Case No. 3,054; Francis v. Bassett, Id. 5,037; Freeman v. Baker, Id. 5,084; The Susan, Id. 13,631; The William Jarvis, Id. 17,697.

When the 10 days commenced to run, after which seamen may sue for wages.—Holmes v. Bradshaw, Case No. 6,635.

A seaman cannot sue in rem for wages in the port of delivery until 10 days after the cargo is discharged, unless the vessel is about to proceed to sea. Act July 20, 1790, c. 29, § 6.—The Cypress, Case No. 3,530; The Trial, Id. 14,170; The William Jarvis, Id. 17,697.

The seaman cannot sue until 10 days after the discharge of the cargo have elapsed, unless there be a dispute as to the wages. Act July 20, 1790.—The Eagle, Case No. 4,233; The William Jarvis, Id. 17,697.

A demand of wages, and a refusal by the owner to pay till after 10 days, do not constitute a dispute, within the statute, so as to authorize process in rem before the expiration of the 10 days.—The Commerce, Case No. 3,054.

The seaman may sue the vessel for his wages within the 10 days after the right to wages has accrued, where the vessel has departed from the port of her discharge, or is about to. Act 1790, c. 29, § 6.—The William Jarvis, Case No. 17,697.

Wages are due immediately on voluntary discharge, and if not paid within 10 days thereafter, the seamen may sue in rem.—The Mary, Case No. 9,191.

Wages are due when vessel is moored at final port of destination, and libel may be filed 10 days thereafter.—The Annie M. Smull, Case No. 423; Granon v. Hartshorne, Id. 5,689.

Seamen shipped for a voyage to "a port of discharge in the United States" cannot maintain a libel for wages after leaving the ship at a port of distress in the United States.—Fairchild v. The Aurelius, Case No. 4,609.

§ 134. Jurisdiction.

A seaman serving on a small vessel navigating the interior waters of the state should seek his remedy for wages in the local courts of the state if the owner is known to him and responsible.—The Bolivar, Case No. 1,609.

Jurisdiction of admiralty, see "Admiralty," § 6.

§ 135. Defenses.

An assignment by libelant, for bona fide consideration, of his claim for wages, is a good defense.—Bibbins v. The Citizen, Case No. 1,384a.

It is no defense to a suit to hold freight for mariner's wages that the consignee, before libels were filed, was summoned as a garnishee of the shipowner.—The Caroline, Case No. 2,419.

An objection that the suit is brought before the cargo is discharged is waived by appearing and contesting the claim on the merits.—The Edward, Case No. 4,289.

The 10 days' exemption from arrest of a ship, under Rev. St. §§ 4546, 4547, is waived by appearance, claim, and answer, without protest, after that time has elapsed.—The Grace Darling, Case No. 5,651.

In a libel in rem for wages, the defense of stale claim will not avail a purchaser who retains part of the purchase money, and defends in the interest of the vendor.—The Melissa, Case No. 9,400.

A libel for wages brought before the wages are due must be dismissed, if duly excepted to on that ground, though the right is perfected in the meantime.—The Martha, Case No. 9,144.

But a libel will not be dismissed where action brought prematurely becomes perfected before stipulations and answer of respondent are filed.—Granon v. Hartshorne, Case No. 5,689.

An allegation, in an answer to a libel by an engineer for wages, that claimant had sued libelant in another jurisdiction for damages for injuries to the boat, and had caused garnishee process to be served upon the master, is impertinent.—The Pioneer, Case No. 11,176.

§ 136. Limitations and laches.

The statute of Anne, limiting suits in the admiralty for seamen's wages to six years, is not a bar to such suit in the courts of the United States.—Willard v. Dorr, Case No. 17,679.

Although there is no statute of limitations barring prosecution of a suit in admiralty against a vessel for wages, yet courts of admiralty systematically refuse to enforce such liens, to the prejudice of a bona fide purchaser for value of the res, where the claim has become "stale."—The Harriet Ann, Case No. 6,101.

A claim for seamen's wages held not stale where the libel was not filed for 18 months after the services were performed, as against a purchaser who was told by the seller that the men on the boat had claims.—The Argo, Case No. 515.

A seaman cannot maintain an action in rem for wages on board a small sailing craft, plying on the Hudson river between Troy, Bristol, and the city of New York, if at all, after a year from the sale of the vessel to a bona fide purchaser, without notice of the outstanding wages, especially if the seaman was present and knowing of the sale.—The Bolivar, Case No. 1,609.

§ 137. Parties.

All the seamen suing in personam for wages earned on the same voyage need not unite in one action. Act June 20, 1790.—Collins v. Hathaway, Case No. 3,014; Nelson v. The Hercules, Id. 10,108.

Where the two-months wages are due, and have not been paid to the foreign consul, as provided by the act, the seamen may recover them in an action against the master in their own names.—Wells v. Meldrun, Case No. 17,402.

A minor may recover wages in his own name when the contract was made personally with him, and it does not appear that he has any parent, guardian, or tutor entitled to receive them.—The David Faust, Case No. 3,595.

§ 138. Pleading.

In a libel for seaman's wages, the allegations of the hiring, voyage, etc., must be drawn accurately and with reasonable certainty.—Orne v. Townsend, Case No. 10,583.

A complaint by a seaman under Rev. St. §§ 4546, 4547, must show that 10 days have elapsed after the wages were payable, or that a dispute has arisen between the master and seamen touching the same.—The Rockie E. Yates, Case No. 11,980a.

A libel for wages is sufficient if it state the contract and service performed, without the annexation of an account stating the rate of wages, and the precise balance due.—Pratt v. Thomas, Case No. 11,377.

A plea of misconduct in defense of a suit for wages must allege the facts with due certainty of time, place, and other circumstances; otherwise it will be rejected.—Macomber v. Thompson, Case No. 8,919; Orne v. Townsend, Id. 10,583; The Pioneer, Id. 11,176.

The answer to a libel for extra wages for short allowance is insufficient if it fails to set forth that the vessel shipped the provisions required by law.—The Elizabeth Frith, Case No. 4,361.

§ 139. Issues and proof.

A defense to libel for seamen's wages may be heard without an answer.—Barron v. Locke, Case No. 1,054.

The defense that the suit is prematurely brought is waived, if not specially pleaded.—Hill v. The Triumph, Case No. 6,500.

There can be no specific forfeiture or deduction for misconduct which is not specially charged in the answer.—Hart v. The Otis, Case No. 6,154.

A new clause in the shipping articles, relied upon to repel a claim for wages, must be pleaded.—Heard v. Rogers, Case No. 6,298.

Compensation for short allowance is recovered as wages, and a general form of pleading is sufficient to admit evidence of the right, where not excepted to before trial.—Piehl v. Balchen, Case No. 11,137.

Legal cause for desertion set up in defense may be shown without alleging it in the libel.—Bibbins v. Brookfield, Case No. 1,384.

Extraneous facts to avoid a stipulation in shipping articles set up in defense of a seaman's claim for wages cannot be shown under a replication in the usual form.—The Atlantic, Case No. 620.

Where a libel for seaman's wages under Act July 20, 1790, c. 56, § 6, alleged that the vessel was about to proceed to sea before the end of the 10 days, respondent cannot be permitted to deny the truth of the allegation, the objection not having been taken by a dilatory plea, nor the allegation denied in the answer.—The William Harris, Case No. 17,695.

No cause of forfeiture of seaman's wages is admissible in evidence, unless the answer propounds them, and puts them in issue.—Orne v. Townsend, Case No. 10,583.

§ 140. Evidence.

Where shipping articles are not produced on due notice, libelant's statement of their contents is prima facie evidence thereof.—The Osceola, Case No. 10,602.

The onus probandi is on the master to show that the advance was paid.—Orne v. Townsend, Case No. 10,583.

Where the owner has refused payment, the burden is upon him to show that the seaman had an adequate remedy in the local courts.—The Bolivar, Case No. 1,610.

A delay beyond a reasonable time to unload the vessel may be regarded as equivalent to a discharge of the seamen; but the burden of showing the discharge in such case is on the seaman alleging it, and his own oath is not sufficient evidence.—The Eagle, Case No. 4,233.

A seaman is not entitled to wages unless he show the contract of shipment, and that he performed the voyage, or a legal excuse for not having done so.—Wilcocks v. Palmer, Case No. 17,638.

Respondent has the burden of showing that the shipping agent to whom the alleged payment in advance was made was authorized by libelant to receive it.—Holmes v. Dodge, Case No. 6,637.

A forbearance to sue for nine months, even though the vessel and libelant were within the jurisdiction the entire time, does not raise a presumption of payment.—Holmes v. The Lodemia, Case No. 6,642.

Where the master has admitted a balance due, and subsequently pleads payment, he has the burden of establishing it.—The Napoleon, Case No. 10,015.

Parol proof offered by a shipowner to vary the voyage described in the shipping articles is not admissible in an action in rem by seamen for their wages.—The Triton, Case No. 14,181.

The role d'équipage is good evidence of the shipment of a seaman and of the contract as to wages.—Ketland v. Lebering, Case No. 7,744.

The charges made on the shipping papers of advances to the seamen in the course of the voyage are not evidence until verified by the suppletory oath of the master.—The David Pratt, Case No. 3,597.

The claimants, on proving a reasonable excuse for not producing the shipping articles on trial, may contradict by parol evidence the statement of their contents by the mariner.—The Osceola, Case No. 10,602.

A call for the articles at the time of trial is not a sufficient requirement, unless it be made to appear they are then in presence of the court, or directly within the control of the master or owner.—The Osceola, Case No. 10,602.

The deposition of a master, who has interposed a claim and answer in an action in rem, and continues a party to the suit, cannot be read in evidence, on the part of the owners of the vessel.—The Exchange, Case No. 4,594.

The entry in the log book is not conclusive, and is admissible in support of no circumstances but those stated in the act of congress.—Jones v. The Phœnix, Case No. 7,489.

A mere offer of the master to pay wages, to avoid a libel, is not an admission that the wages are due.—The Martha, Case No. 9,144.

The declarations of the master concerning the contract of the seamen are admissible in a suit against the owners, though not strictly part of the res gestæ.—The Enterprise, Case No. 4,497.

A discharge need not be shown by direct evidence, but may be inferred from circumstances.—The David Faust, Case No. 3,595.

A report of seaworthiness made by marine surveyors, upon the crew demanding to leave on account of unseaworthiness, is not conclusive, in a subsequent action for wages, after leaving.—Bucker v. Klorkgeter, Case No. 2,083.

An admission in an answer to a libel for seaman's wages that the seaman shipped for the voyage, and performed the services, is sufficient to entitle him to recover without evidence, though defenses are set up.—The Belle, Case No. 1,271.

Libelant in a suit for seaman's wages is entitled to use an admission of the answer as to the date of his service without being bound by the allegation of the answer as to the time when it began.—Berry v. The Montezuma, Case No. 1,358a.

A book of original entries kept by the master of a tug, who was also part owner, held inadmissible to prove cash payments to seamen, there being no other proof of such payments.—Milligan v. The B. F. Bruce, Case No. 9,602.

Articles signed by "William Henderson," as cook and steward, held admissible on a libel for wages by "William Henry."—Henry v. Curry, Case No. 6,381.

On libel against a vessel for wages, an affidavit of a person representing himself as her agent, that she is a foreign vessel, will not overcome the oath of the libelant that she is an American vessel, so as to entitle the claimant to a dismissal of the libel.—Armstrong v. The Rydesdale, Case No. 547.

Where in a suit for seamen's wages libelant refused to admit a payment alleged in the answer, where the evidence offered raised a strong presumption that such payment had been made, respondent was allowed time to procure proof thereof.—Ingraham v. Albee, Case No. 7,044.

Proof of desertion, see ante, §§ 67, 68.

§ 141. Trial.
The question as to deviation in a voyage is to be determined as a question of fact upon the evidence.—The Cadmus v. Matthews, Case No. 2,282.

§ 142. Recovery.
The court is not limited in its decree to the precise amount stated as due in a libel for seamen's wages, where the libel contains a prayer for further relief.—Pratt v. Thomas, Case No. 11,377.

Interest is allowed from the time of a demand proved; and if no demand is proved, from the commencement of the suit.—Gammell v. Skinner, Case No. 5,210.

Interest, as a general rule, will be allowed from the time the wages were due until a tender or payment under the decree, but no interest is allowable upon extra wages for short allowance.—The Elizabeth Frith, Case No. 4,361.

Decree for wages, see "Admiralty," § 99.

§ 143. Costs.
A seaman who needlessly brings suit separate from his fellows will not be allowed costs.—The Cabot, Case No. 2,277.

It is inequitable for a seaman, knowing that the papers are ready for the immediate commencement of a suit by his shipmates for the recovery of wages earned on the same voyage, or by a bottomry holder, who sues also for a portion of the wages of the voyage, previously paid by him, to endeavor to supplant such action, by urging out, in his individual name, process in advance of it, so as to subject the ship or her proceeds to needless expenses.—The Cabot, Case No. 2,277.

Costs allowed seamen for an underpayment by mistake by the master, who refused to correct the error, though they failed on their main contention.—Hoffman v. Yarrington, Case No. 6,580.

Costs will not be imposed upon seamen, in admiralty, when they establish probable cause for instituting suits for redress.—Howland v. Conway, Case No. 6,793.

Costs will not be given on separate libels by seamen for wages on the same voyage.—Reed v. Hussey, Case No. 11,646.

Where the balance due for wages is small, and the seaman failed to demand it of owner or master, costs will be denied him in a suit therefor.—The Moslem, Case No. 9,876.

Costs will be denied a seaman who has not given the master and owners a reasonable time for an amicable settlement of his claim.—The Susan, Case No. 13,631.

On dismissal of a libel for wages, held that costs should be imposed on libelants, when they had taken possession of the vessel and brought her home, though this was done on reasonable grounds of suspicion that she was about to engage in the slave trade.—The Mary Ann, Case No. 9,194.

See, also, "Admiralty," §§ 127–152.

§ 144. Appeal.
A seaman may be required to give security for costs on appeal unless he prove by satisfactory affidavits that he is unable to do so.—Wheatley v. Hotchkiss, Case No. 17,483.

§ 145. Summary proceedings.
On an application for process in rem against a vessel for seaman's wages, the master may appear by attorney before the magistrate in defense of the claim.—The Rockie E. Yates, Case No. 11,980a.

Section 6 of the act of 1790, with respect to the recovery of wages, applies only to the classes of vessels enumerated in section 1.—The M. W. Wright, Case No. 9,983.

The provisions of Rev. St. §§ 4546, 4547, apply only to merchant ships and their masters and crews.—The Grace Darling, Case No. 5,651.

The proceedings by summons to the master (section 6) are cumulative and optional, and the party may resort to an attachment in the first instance.—The M. W. Wright, Case No. 9,983; The Waverly, Id. 17,301; The William Jarvis, Id. 17,697.

The vessel against which process is sought on such complaint must be within the district at the time of hearing.—The Rockie E. Yates, Case No. 11,980a.

In the absence of the judge, the clerk may issue process according to rules prescribed, or instructions given by the judge.—The William Jarvis, Case No. 17,697.

The omission of the summons to the master of the vessel to show cause, etc., is an error of practice which may be waived by claimant by delay in taking advantage of it.—Robinson v. The Lillie Mills, Case No. 11,958.

Though a warrant be issued under a certificate of sufficient cause of complaint for admiralty process, conformably to the statute (Act July 20, 1790), the owner may intervene by answer, and bar the action by proving that libelant had no right to sue.—The Warrington, Case No. 17,208.

A certificate of a United States commissioner to the clerk as the foundation of process in behalf of seamen (Act 1790, § 6) must show on its face that the commissioner had authority to act, and hence must show the absence of the district judge, or that he resided more than three miles distant from the place.—Kief v. The London, Case No. 7,759.

(J) LAYS OR SHARES IN EARNINGS.

§ 146. Nature of agreement.
An agreement for a share in the proceeds of a whaling voyage does not create a partnership in profits of the voyage, but is in the nature of a seaman's wages.—Coffin v. Jenkins, Case No. 2,948; The Crusader, Id. 3,456; Reed v. Canfield, Id. 11,641; Reed v. Hussey, Id. 11,646.

Where a seaman on a wrecking vessel was to receive compensation only by a share of the profits, he acquires no right to wages by the fact that after the owner's death the vessel is carried off by the master to a foreign port.—Williams v. The Sylph, Case No. 17,740.

§ 147. Liability of owners of vessel.
The owners of whaling vessels whose crews are paid by shares are responsible for only ordinary care in selecting agents and carrying the cargo.—Joy v. Allen, Case No. 7,552.

The owners are liable to the seamen for their lay where the master embezzles the proceeds of oil sold abroad on condemnation of the ship.—Jay v. Allen, Case No. 7,235; Joy v. Same, Id. 7,552.

Where the whaler is lost, and the cargo sent home, the seaman's remedy is against the owner for his lay, and not against the master for wages.—Jay v. Almy, Case No. 7,236.

§ 148. What is subject to lay.
Where compensation for a fishing voyage is made by a share of the proceeds, the seamen are entitled to shares only on so much cargo as is brought safely to home port.—Reed v. Hussey, Case No. 11,646.

The seamen are not entitled to recover wages, as such, on the cargo brought to the port of destination by salvors.—Reed v. Hussey, Case No. 11,646.

But the seaman's interest in such cargo, as quasi owner, may be equitably secured to him, subject to the proper charges for salvage and transportation.—Reed v. Hussey, Case No. 11,-646.

A mariner shipping after a whaling voyage was partly performed held entitled to a lay only in the products taken during his time of service. —Tompkins v. Howard, Case No. 14,089.

An agreement on a sealing voyage for shares of every article "procured by the crew" does not give a right to a share of freight earned by the transportation of merchandise.—The Sarah Jane, Case No. 12,348.

The owners are bound to account to the shareholders for any proceeds of her cargo which come to their hands where the vessel is lost, though the contract be not to pay them until her return. —Joy v. Allen, Case No. 7,552.

§ 149. Amount or rate.

The cash market price is the measure of compensation for the officers and crew who are to be paid lays.—Hazard v. Howland, Case No. 6,280.

The amount of a cooper's lay on a whaling voyage fixed where he was disrated for alleged incompetency.—Donahay v. Howland, Case No. 3,978.

A seaman during a whaling voyage, being appointed a ship keeper, is thereafter entitled to the lay of that station.—The William Martin, Case No. 17,698.

Where a whaling vessel did not return home as she ought, a seaman was allowed compensation for his expenses in returning, and his time, calculated at the rate of his last lay, deducting what he earned or might have earned but for his own negligence.—The William Martin, Case No. 17,698.

A seaman disabled in the service of a whaling ship, and necessarily left abroad, held entitled to a full lay.—Brunent v. Taber, Case No. 2,-054.

A seaman on a whaling voyage discharged abroad without his own fault, held entitled to the pro rata settlement provided in the articles for a discharge from sickness.—Hathaway v. Jones, Case No. 6,212.

A seaman discharged abroad, at his own request, from a whaling ship, is entitled to be paid the pro rata part of his lay reckoned on the value of the catch at the home port.—Jenks v. Cox, Case No. 7,277.

The stipulation that compensation by share in earnings shall be proportioned to the time served in the voyage will be enforced.—The Atlantic, Case No. 620.

A seaman justifiably separated from his ship on a whaling voyage is entitled to such proportion of his lay as the time he served bears to the whole time of the voyage.—Lovrein v. Thompson, Case No. 8,557.

Where a seaman has different lays during the same whaling voyage, he is to have such proportion of each lay, for the whole voyage, as the time he served under such lay was of the time of the whole voyage.—The William Martin, Case No. 17,698.

The owners of a whaler cannot set off or recoup as against a mate's lay a proportion of an advance payment receipted for as a bonus "to perform the voyage," where the mate was discharged before the voyage ended, on agreement with the master that he should have his lay up to the time he was discharged.—Pedro v. Allen, Case No. 10,901.

§ 150. Expenses allowed in determining lays.

Commissions for selling oil, and charges for fitting and discharging ship, disallowed in determining lay.—Bates v. Seabury, Case No. 1,104; Hazard v. Howland, Id. 6,280.

The owners, on the ground of established usage to the contrary, have no right to deduct the value of the casks from the sales of the cargo.—Hazard v. Howland, Case No. 6,280.

The freight home on oil where a whale vessel is condemned abroad as unseaworthy is chargeable to the owners, unless there is a usage of the port to the contrary.—Jay v. Allen, Case No. 7,-235; Joy v. Same, Id. 7,552.

Sharesmen in a cod-fishing voyage are not to suffer loss by bad debts contracted by the owner in the sale of the fish.—Crowell v. Knight, Case No. 3,445.

A stipulation, in shipping articles for whaling voyages, that the owners may ship catchings home on freight, is valid.—Frates v. Howland, Case No. 5,066.

The owners are not liable for the value of catchings as of the time when received, where, in good faith, they held them waiting for a rise in the market.—Frates v. Howland, Case No. 5,066.

Salvage paid by master of whaler acting with prudence and in good faith is a charge upon the oil binding on the crew.—The Antelope, Case No. 484.

§ 151. Payment and settlement.

Where a whaling voyage is broken up in a foreign port, from necessity, the master, on the request of the seamen, may pay their shares by delivering portions of the oil taken.—Hussey v. Fields, Case No. 6,947.

Where libelant was to receive $^1/_{42}$ part of the proceeds of the voyage, he receives his full share if he receives pay in whatever currency makes up the proceeds.—Carter v. Swift, Case No. 2,-479.

The owners of a fishing vessel will be discharged by a payment to the assignee of a non-negotiable order of a sharesman.—Crowell v. Knight, Case No. 3,445.

The reasonableness and equity of an agreement between owners and seamen will always be examined by the court.—The Lucy Anne, Case No. 8,596.

Where a settlement is made on a different basis under protest, the seamen may recover the difference.—Jenks v. Cox, Case No. 7,277.

§ 152. Lien.

Title 51, Rev. St. ("Regulation of Fisheries"), does not apply to vessels and crews engaged in porgy fishing.—The Grace Darling, Case No. 5,-651.

The crew of a steamer, comprised of sharesmen and strikers engaged in porgy fishing, have a maritime lien upon the vessel for their wages, but the master does not.—The Grace Darling, Case No. 5,651.

Seamen in whaling service have no lien on the oil for their services.—The Antelope, Case No. 484.

A crew of a steamer comprised of sharesmen and strikers engaged in porgy fishing, upon being refused payment for their services at the time agreed upon, may enforce their lien upon the vessel before their term of service has expired.—The Grace Darling, Case No. 5,651.

§ 153. Actions.

A contract to sail a vessel in partnership for a share of the earnings gives no right in rem for wages.—Milne v. The John Cook, Case No. 9,-617a.

A libel for the lay of a minor who shipped under direction of his father, who furnished his outfit, is rightly brought in the father's name.—Gifford v. Kollock, Case No. 5,409.

The master and owners of a whaling ship are not liable to be sued jointly for a seaman's lay.—Matern v. Gibbs, Case No. 9,273.

A seaman in the whale fisheries has no property in the oil or bone taken, and the vessel owners are the proper persons to sue for a wrongful taking by another.—Taber v. Jenny, Case No. 13,720.

Where a long delay (nearly six years) to prosecute for a share in the catch is not shown to have led to any losses, acts, or divisions of profits, injurious to the owners, the delay is no bar.—Joy v. Allen, Case No. 7,552.

A vessel sailed on a voyage from N. to O. She remained at O. over a year waiting for freight. Not obtaining any, the master discharged the seamen, whom he persuaded to return with him to N. to get their wages. The vessel was then sold, and went on a voyage to L., and thence to N. Held, that the seamen could libel her on her arrival at N., the claim not being a stale one.—The Mary, Case No. 9,-186.

In an action by a father for wages of his son as seaman on a whaling voyage under articles made during the minority of the son with the consent of the father, the measure of damages is the son's proportion of the oil taken during the minority.—Coffin v. Shaw, Case No. 2,952; Lovrein v. Thompson, Id. 8,557.

Interest allowed from filing of libel for lay in whaling voyage.—Bates v. Seabury, Case No. 1,104.

Interest will be allowed after reasonable time for the sale of the oil, adjustment of the voyage, and demand by libelants.—Jay v. Allen, Case No. 7,235.

Jurisdiction of suit to recover share in proceeds of voyage, see "Admiralty," § 8.

VI. INJURIES.

(A) INJURIES TO PROPERTY.

§ 154. Loss of property.
In the absence of negligence, the vessel owner is not liable for the loss of the clothing and effects of a seaman, left aboard, where he is arrested and imprisoned in a foreign port without the instigation of the master.—Richardson v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co., Case No. 11,793.

A master, lawfully discharging a drunken mate, is responsible for a loss of his personal effects caused by putting him on shore at night, without necessity, and without a responsible companion.—The El Dorado, Case No. 4,327.

The ship is liable for the loss of a seaman's trunk, though he negligently failed to get aboard for the voyage.—Smith v. The Utica, Case No. 13,123.

The master sent the clothes of a seaman, who was left in hospital at a foreign port, to the consul's office. The evidence did not show that the seaman received them. Held, that he could recover their value.—Callon v. Williams, Case No. 2,324.

The master is not justified in imprisoning a seaman on mere suspicion that he is a dangerous man, or on request of the crew; and, if his effects are lost while thus imprisoned, the master is liable.—Jay v. Almy, Case No. 7,236.

§ 155. Wrongful detention of property.
The master has no right to detain the effects of men imprisoned on shore on the request of the consul.—Jordan v. Williams, Case No. 7,-528.

The owners are not liable for the act of the master in wrongfully detaining seamen's clothing, unless they have ratified his acts.—The Hibernia, Case No. 6,455.

Where master acting in good faith sells effects of seamen separated from ship, the owner is liable only for amount realized.—Antone v. Hicks, Case No. 493.

(B) PERSONAL INJURIES IN GENERAL.

§ 156. Injuries caused by negligence of owner or master.
Master liable for failure to protect seamen from violence of officers.—Anderson v. Ross, Case No. 361.

The vessel is liable for an injury caused by the failure of her owners to use ordinary care in the employment of competent and skillful officers and mariners.—Brown v. The D. S. Cage, Case No. 2,002.

The master is responsible for the neglect of an injured seaman during the voyage, and after reaching port.—Brown v. Overton, Case No. 2,-024.

The vessel owner is not responsible for injuries to a seaman, caused by negligence of the mate, where no personal negligence on the part of the owner appears.—Halverson v. Nisen, Case No. 5,970.

The court will investigate the conduct of a master of a British vessel in procuring the intervention of a British consul in a foreign port, by which a seaman was imprisoned.—Patch v. Marshall, Case No. 10,793.

§ 157. Assault.
Mate is liable for striking in anger, and not as discipline, a boy, for using an opprobrious epithet in reply to a charge of theft.—Backstack v. Banks, Case No. 711.

When one of the crew of a vessel resists a person in authority over him while in the discharge of his duty, the latter may lawfully use sufficient force to overcome such resistance.—Pendergrast v. Lampman, Case No. 10,919.

The master is liable for an unjustifiable assault by one of his officers upon one of the crew, when done by his connivance, consent, or authority.—Hanson v. Fowle, Case No. 6,042.

Such consent and authority will be presumed when it appears that he knew of the trespass, or had reason to know it, and did not interfere to prevent it.—Hanson v. Fowle, Case No. 6,-042.

The master is civilly responsible for his ill treatment of the crew on board, notwithstanding the advice or direction of a consul.—Shorey v. Rennell, Case No. 12,806.

A mate cannot justify an assault and battery by the orders of the master, not knowing them to be illegal.—Sheridan v. Furbur, Case No. 12,-761.

A saucy retort of the second mate held no justification for the master's violently assaulting and inflicting an injury upon him.—Morris v. Cornell, Case No. 9,829.

Where a master, being present, does not interfere to prevent an assault on a seaman by his officers, he is jointly liable for the tort.—Thomas v. Lane, Case No. 13,902.

§ 158. False imprisonment.
An action against a mate by a seaman, for false imprisonment, will not lie, where the imprisonment was ordered by the master through the advice and request of the mate.—Gardner v. Bibbins, Case No. 5,222.

§ 159. Release and settlement of claims. A receipt for all "demands and dues" against a vessel, her master and officers, is not, upon its face, a receipt for assault and battery.—Hanson v. Fowle, Case No. 6,042; Mitchell v. Pratt, Id. 9,668; Payne v. Allen, Id. 10,855.

A receipt given on payment of wages, stating that it is in full for all demands for assault, battery, etc., will not bar a suit for damages.—Thomas v. Lane, Case No. 13,902.

A receipt acknowledging satisfaction of all claims for assault and battery is not binding unless shown to have been the result of a fair compromise, on compensation given.—Hanson v. Fowle, Case No. 6,042; Harden v. Gordon, Id. 6,047; Heard v. Rogers, Id. 6,298.

A settlement for damages for a tort made after suit brought, and in the absence of libelant's proctor, upheld, where fairly made, and consideration not apparently inadequate.—Brooks v. Snell, Case No. 1,961.

(C) PUNISHMENT OF SEAMEN.

See, also, post, §§ 180, 187.

§ 160. Right to punish in general. Seamen may be moderately corrected by master.—Aertsen v. The Aurora, Case No. 95; Rice v. The Polly and Kitty, Id. 11,754.

Punishment must be moderate, administered in a proper manner, and proportioned to the offense.—Cushman v. Ryan, Case No. 3,515.

The law which governs the deportment of men to each other on shore cannot be applied to their habits and intercourse on board of a ship.—Forbes v. Parsons, Case No. 4,929.

§ 161. Who may be punished. As to treatment of intoxicated seamen, see Jones v. Sears, Case No. 7,494.

A minor placed aboard ship by his father to improve his health, and to learn navigation, is subject to the discipline and punishment of an ordinary seaman, though a person of refinement and gentle breeding.—Gould v. Christianson, Case No. 5,636.

§ 162. Authority to punish. Only the highest officer on board can inflict punishment for a past offense for purposes of reformation or example.—Shorey v. Rennell, Case No. 12,806.

§ 163. When justified in general. A seaman is punishable corporally for deportment or language not obedient or respectful to the master.—Fuller v. Colby, Case No. 5,149; Bennett v. Sherman, Id. 1,324.

The master may inflict corporal chastisement for insolence or disobedience to his reasonable commands.—Michaelson v. Denison, Case No. 9,523; The Palledo, Id. 10,677; Turner's Case, Id. 14,248.

To justify punishment for refusal to perform work required, master must show that seaman was capable of performing the work.—Allen v. Hallet, Case No. 223; Payne v. Allen, Id. 10,855.

A refusal of duty because permission is not given to lay complaints before the consul is justifiable only when the refusal is necessary to prevent the loss of the right.—Jordan v. Williams, Case No. 7,528.

The master is not justified in chastising a seaman at the wheel, however flagrant his demeanor may be.—Wagener v. Minot, Case No. 17,033.

A second mate, rightfully displaced from heading a boat in the whale fishery, is bound to perform other duty, and, upon his refusal to do so, may be punished for disobedience.—Morris v. Cornell, Case No. 9,829.

A person who, shipping as cook, is unwilling or unable to do his duty, and keeps the galley in a filthy condition, may be punished.—Forbes v. Parsons, Case No. 4,929.

General orders from one officer will not excuse the disobedience by the seaman of the specific orders of another inferior officer, and such seaman may be punished therefor.—Sheridan v. Furbur, Case No. 12,761.

A seaman is not authorized to use any kind and degree of resistance where the wrong done him will admit of complete indemnity.—Shorey v. Rennell, Case No. 12,806.

§ 164. Mode of punishment — Weapons used. Deadly weapons should only be used when a mutiny exists or is threatened.—Jarvis v. The Claiborne, Case No. 7,225; Fuller v. Colby, Id. 5,149.

Where a seaman is attacked by the master or mate without provocation or disobedience, he may defend himself; and a seaman, on receiving such a blow for such an offense, is not justified in brandishing a knife or an ax, nor in using them to prevent his arrest; and the master is justified in using a deadly weapon to cause his submission.—Fuller v. Colby, Case No. 5,149.

A blow with a dirty frying-pan, or wiping a dirty knife on the face of the person whose duty it was to keep those articles clean, held not an aggravated or cruel assault.—Forbes v. Parsons, Case No. 4,929.

Knocking a man down with a belaying pin is an illegal mode of punishment.—Shorey v. Rennell, Case No. 12,806.

An assault with a dangerous weapon cannot be justified by showing that the weapon was casually in the hands of the master, and was used by him in a moment of excitement, under circumstances justifying punishment of the seamen.—Saunders v. Buckup, Case No. 12,373.

§ 165. —— Flogging. Master has no right to flog seaman, though acting under the honest belief that the men had conspired to poison him.—The Josephine, Case No. 7,544.

Since the proviso in Act 1850, c. 80, § 1, punishment by flogging on board of a whale ship is illegal.—Payne v. Allen, Case No. 10,855.

§ 166. —— Imprisonment. The imprisonment of a seaman in a foreign jail at the instance of the master is only justified by extreme necessity.—Anonymous, Case No. 473; Johnson v. The Coriolanus, Id. 7,380; Magee v. The Moss, Id. 8,944; Wilson v. The Mary, Id. 17,823.

The master may retake a deserting seaman, and confine him on board, irrespective of the remedy given under Act 1790, c. 56.—Turner's Case, Case No. 14,248.

Where the master causes any of the crew to be confined in a foreign jail, he must see that they have humane treatment.—Shorey v. Rennell, Case No. 12,806.

The vessel owner is not liable where the seaman is wrongfully arrested and imprisoned on a charge of crime in a foreign port, where the master was not a party thereto.—Richardson v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co., Case No. 11,793.

A master who causes a seaman to be imprisoned on shore must, before leaving port, ascertain if he is willing to return to duty.—The Maria, Case No. 9,074.

A single act of insubordination on the part of a seaman cannot be considered as mutinous.

or as justifying an imprisonment.—Gardner v. Bibbins, Case No. 5,222.

The imprisonment on shore of seamen is not justified where they peacefully refuse labor from an honest mistake of their right to discharge.—Wope v. Hemenway, Case No. 18,042.

The second mate may refuse obedience to an order of the master to slush the masts, or take in light sails, as a punishment, when no offense has been committed that would justify it, and the master has no right to imprison him for his refusal.—Foye v. Dabney, Case No. 5,022; Same v. Leckie, Id. 5,023.

Advice of consul will not justify master in illegally imprisoning seamen in foreign jail, or deprive seamen of legal remedies.—Anonymous, Case No. 473; The William Harris, Id. 17,-695.

Where the master lays a complaint before a consul, who, upon examination, causes the crew to be imprisoned, the responsibility for the tort, if any, is transferred to the consul, where the complaint was such that a competent master might believe it to be within the consul's jurisdiction.—Jordan v. Williams, Case No. 7,528.

The action of the master in confining seamen for insubordination, and in sending seamen on shore for supplies of wood and water, where they were attacked by savages, held justifiable.—Healey v. Martin, Case No. 6,295.

When the crime of a sailor is beyond the master's power to punish, he should put him in irons, and bring him to justice on the return home.—Thorne v. White, Case No. 13,989.

Where a seaman is disobedient, and will not submit and offer to make amends, the master may confine him on board or dock him of his provisions.—Thorne v. White, Case No. 13,989.

Where, after the voyage is ended, the master again takes an offending seaman on board, he cannot justify an assault and imprisonment without any new offense.—Roberts v. Dallas, Case No. 11,898.

§ 167. —— Removal to forecastle.
A second mate who contumaciously refuses to perform duty may be removed from the cabin to the forecastle.—Morris v. Cornell, Case No. 9,829.

§ 168. Hearing before master of vessel.
The master is liable in damages for flogging a seaman without a hearing, for disobeying orders, where the seaman acted in good faith.—Sheridan v. Furbur, Case No. 12,761.

The crew are entitled to the protection of the master against illegal violence from his officers; and if he refuse to hear their complaints, and gives no assurance against future wrong, he has no right to require further services from them.—Shorey v. Rennell, Case No. 12,806.

The master should not inflict punishment for threats supposed to have been uttered by seamen while confined in jail, without first seeing them and hearing their statements.—Shorey v. Rennell, Case No. 12,806.

§ 169. Excessive punishment.
The punishment must be not excessive, considering the nature of the offense. A single blow with the hand, producing no wound, is not excessive.—Fuller v. Colby, Case No. 5,149.

It is not a cruel or excessive punishment to keep two waiters ironed together for 10 hours for fighting in the cabin of a vessel.—Lindrop v. Dall, Case No. 8,365.

In the absence of cruelty or needless severity, the degree of punishment inflicted for insubordination will not be measured.—Gardner v. Bibbins, Case No. 5,222.

The balance between the gravity of the offense and the quantum of punishment will not be very exactly adjusted.—Butler v. McClellan, Case No. 2,242.

A master who, without investigating the circumstances, unjustly causes a seaman to be punished for an offense he did not commit, is liable, though he did not act in a cruel or oppressive spirit.—Lindrop v. Dall, Case No. 8,365.

A mate will not be held responsible as a joint trespasser in assisting the master, in obedience to his orders, in inflicting punishment on a seaman, unless obviously and grossly excessive and unjust.—Butler v. McClellan, Case No. 2,242.

Authority from a consul will not excuse excessive punishment of a seaman by the master.—Peters v. Martens, Case No. 11,031.

(D) ACTIONS.

§ 170. Nature and right of action.
Actions for aggravated assaults upon seamen are in personam only.—Fuller v. Colby, Case No. 5,149.

Where a quarrel between the master and mate is made up on the advice of the consul, where both were at fault, the court will not afterwards interfere.—Cornier v. Sawyer, Case No. 3,245.

The remedy given against the officers of a vessel (Act Feb. 28, 1871, § 43) does not preclude an action against the vessel.—Brown v. The D. S. Cage, Case No. 2,002.

The court will discourage actions for damages on account of obsolete grievances.—Saunders v. Buckup, Case No. 12,373.

A seaman is, in general, entitled to recover damages for an assault and battery from the officer of a ship where personal violence is inflicted, not excessively, but wantonly and without provocation or cause; where there was provocation or cause, but the punishment was cruel or excessive; or when the punishment is inflicted with a deadly, or dangerous weapon.—Forbes v. Parsons, Case No. 4,929.

§ 171. Limitations.
Claim of seamen for a loss of their effects by the collision held not stale, where they filed libels, but delayed to issue process for five years, during pendency of an appeal on a libel by the vessel owners, where the corporation claimant continued to own the vessel libeled.—The Leo, Cases Nos. 8,252, 8,253.

§ 172. Evidence.
In an action for an assault and battery committed by a master on a seaman where the defense of justification is set up the burden of proof is on respondent.—Treadwell v. Joseph, Case No. 14,157.

A consular certificate of the facts in justification is not evidence.—Johnson v. The Coriolanus, Case No. 7,380.

Habitual carelessness, disobedience, or negligence of the seamen may be shown in justification or in mitigation of damages in a libel against the master for assault; but such conduct must be pleaded.—Pettingill v. Dinsmore, Case No. 11,045.

The weapon used for punishing is entitled to consideration and weight.—Benton v. Whitney, Case No. 1,335.

To entitle a seaman to damages for an assault by the master he must show that the punishment was excessive.—Carleton v. Davis, Case No. 2,408; Elwell v. Martin, Id. 4,425.

Proof that the master and mate separately assaulted and illtreated a seaman will not support an allegation of a combination between them to illtreat and oppress him, without some presumptive evidence of concert between them.—Jenks v. Lewis, Case No. 7,280.

A libel for assault and battery must be made out by clear, credible, and consistent proof.—Benton v. Whitney, Case No. 1,335.

§ 173. Issues and proof.
A master sued for an assault, and denying the same in his answer, cannot, on proof of the assault, rely upon a justification.—The George Kingman, Case No. 5,335.

§ 174. Damages.
Rules for assessment of damages in cases of beating and wounding a seaman.—Hanson v. Fowle, Case No. 6,042.

Measure of damages for excessive or unlawful punishment.—Gould v. Christianson, Case No. 5,636.

A cabin boy injured in the service of the vessel, so that amputation of both legs was necessary, was allowed $3 a week until the healing of his wounds, with costs and counsel fees.—Robinson v. Gifford, Case No. 11,951a.

In fixing the amount of damages in a case of assault and battery, the court will consider the situation of the parties, and the various aggravating and mitigating circumstances of the case.—Schelter v. York, Case No. 12,446; Whitney v. Eager, Id. 17,584.

The conduct of both parties will be considered in estimating the amount of damages for assault and battery.—Saunders v. Buckup, Case No. 12,373.

The court will consider the fact, in estimating damages for an assault and battery by the master, that the mate, in no way connected therewith, was made a party to the libel, to render him incompetent as a witness.—Saunders v. Buckup, Case No. 12,373.

Officers are liable only for the actual pecuniary damages sustained where, in administering merited punishment with unnecessary harshness, a severe injury is unintentionally done.—Elwell v. Martin, Case No. 4,425.

Where a seaman has been wrongfully imprisoned, vindictive damages are not allowed, in the absence of bad motives; but compensation will be allowed for the time of the imprisonment and the articles lost, with interest thereon, and passage home.—Jay v. Almy, Case No. 7,236.

VII. OFFENSES.

See, also, post, § 188.

(A) OFFENSES BY SEAMEN.

As ground for forfeiture of wages, see, ante, §§ 64–78.

§ 175. Revolts—In general.
To constitute the crime of making a revolt, under Act 1835, c. 40, § 1, a certain end must have been accomplished by certain means unlawfully and willfully done.—United States v. Borden, Case No. 14,625.

A revolt, under Act March 3, 1835, c. 40, consists, not only in an attempt to usurp the command from the master, or to transfer it to another, or to deprive him of it, for any purpose, by violence, but in resisting him in the free and lawful exercise of his authority.—United States v. Peterson, Case No. 16,037.

The prevention of a single lawful command by willful and unlawful combination, which intimidates the master, makes the act a revolt within the statute.—United States v. Borden, Case No. 14,625; Same v. Forbes, Id. 15,129.

Seamen who combine together to refuse all duty on board, and refuse obedience to a new master lawfully appointed, are guilty of committing a revolt.—United States v. Haines, Case No. 15,275.

On an indictment for such offense, it is not necessary to prove that it was committed on the high seas.—United States v. Hamilton, Case No. 15,291.

A mere disobedience of orders by one or two seamen, without combining with the others, is not a revolt.—United States v. Forbes, Case No. 15,129.

The master has a discretion as to the number requisite for his crew, and the seamen cannot refuse obedience on the ground of going to sea short-handed.—United States v. Lynch, Case No. 15,648.

Seamen are not liable criminally, where, on going on board, and after examining the vessel, they refuse to serve on the ground that she is unseaworthy, though she was not in fact unseaworthy.—United States v. Staly, Case No. 16,374; Same v. Givings, Id. 15,212.

A bona fide combination to compel the master to return into port for the actual unseaworthiness of the vessel, or where seaworthiness is doubtful, is not punishable as a revolt, under Act 1790, c. 36, § 12.—United States v. Ashton, Case No. 14,470.

The crew may take reasonable measures to protect one of their number from the infliction of what they have reason to believe to be a great wrong.—United States v. Borden, Case No. 14,625.

A seaman may endeavor to escape the infliction of personal chastisement for offensive language used, and may resist for the mere purpose of protecting himself from injury.—United States v. Smith, Case No. 16,345.

Where seamen who request a survey, when in port or within sight of land, are treated with unnecessary severity, their remedy is at law after their return, and not a resort to violence, unless in danger of the actual loss of life, and then at their peril, as the result may turn out.—United States v. Staly, Case No. 16,374.

The pilot of a vessel which is cleared and ready for sea is an officer of the vessel, within Act 1835, § 2; and a disobedience of his orders is a revolt, under Act 1835.—United States v. Lynch, Case No. 15,648.

The crew of a vessel not enrolled and licensed under Act 1793, for the coasting trade and fisheries, cannot be convicted for making a revolt. Such a case is not within the crimes act of 1835.—United States v. Jenkins, Case No. 15,473a.

Seamen of the United States, put on board a vessel of the United States by a consul, are bound to the same obligations which exist in cases of articled seamen.—United States v. Sharp, Case No. 16,264.

Fear, to excuse a seaman guilty of making a revolt, must be fear of death, such as a man of ordinary courage and fortitude might yield to.—United States v. Haskell, Case No. 15,321.

§ 176. —— Endeavors to make revolts.
A conspiracy to usurp the authority and command of a ship, and overthrow that of the master or commanding officer, or to resist a lawful command of the master for such purpose, and any endeavor to stir up others of the crew to such resistance, is an endeavor to commit a revolt.—United States v. Hemmer, Case No. 15,345; Same v. Cassedy, Id. 14,745; Same v. Gardner, Id. 15,188; Same v. Savage, Id. 16,225; Same v. Smith, Id. 16,337; Same v. Thompson, Id. 16,492.

To constitute the offense, neither a previous deliberate combination for mutual aid and encouragement, nor any preconcerted plan, is necessary.—United States v. Morrison, Case No. 15,818.

Insolence, disobedience of orders, or violence to the master, unaccompanied by other acts showing an intent to subvert his command, is not an endeavor to make a revolt.—United States v. Kelly, Case No. 15,516.

Neither is mere conspiracy of the crew to displace the master, unaccompanied by overt acts; nor is concert among the crew to that end essential to the offense.—United States v. Kelly, Case No. 15,516.

A seaman who comes on deck to ascertain the cause of a disturbance, and refuses to go below when ordered by the master, may be punished for an endeavor to make a revolt.—United States v. Roberts, Case No. 16,173.

Where the crew combined together not to do duty, it is an endeavor to make a revolt, within Act 1790, c. 9, § 12, although no orders are actually given afterwards.—United States v. Barker, Case No. 14,516.

A combination by the crew to prevent the vessel from going to sea pursuant to the order of the master is an attempt to commit a revolt.—United States v. Nye, Case No. 15,906.

Interposition of a crew, by violence and intimidation, whereby the master is compelled to desist from punishing a seaman for gross misbehavior, is an endeavor to commit a revolt.—United States v. Morrison, Case No. 15,818.

Refusal to do duty after a deviation from the voyage described in the shipping articles is not an endeavor to commit a revolt.—United States v. Matthews, Case No. 15,742.

Seamen who, with good reason, believe a vessel to be unseaworthy before the voyage is begun, may lawfully refuse to go to sea in her.—United States v. Nye, Case No. 15,906.

The owners may change the master after the seamen have shipped.—United States v. Nye, Case No. 15,906.

Where the person substituted as master is grossly incompetent from want of skill or bad habits or profligate and cruel behavior, seamen are justified in refusing to do duty.—United States v. Cassedy, Case No. 14,745.

Seamen defending against a prosecution for endeavoring to commit a revolt, on the ground that they were ordered to go on a voyage for which they were not bound by the shipping articles, must show that they made the objection at the time of disobedience.—United States v. Lynch, Case No. 15,648.

The offense of endeavoring to make a revolt (Act 1790, c. 9, § 12) may be committed in any kind of vessel.—United States v. Kelly, Case No. 15,516.

And in a foreign port.—United States v. Keefe, Case No. 15,509.

Where a registered vessel has entered on a whaling voyage without surrender of her register, she is not an American ship, within Act 1835, c. 40, and an indictment will not lie against her crew for an endeavor to make a revolt.—United States v. Rogers, Case No. 16,189.

The mate is a seaman, within the act of 1790, c. 36, § 12.—United States v. Savage, Case No. 16,225.

A cooper of the ship is a seaman, within the provisions of the act.—United States v. Thompson, Case No. 16,492.

§ 177. —— Confining master.

A confinement of the master, within Act 1790, c. 9, § 12, extends to all restraints of personal liberty in freely going about the ship, by present force or threats of bodily injury.—United States v. Hemmer, Case No. 15,345; Same v. Sharp, Id. 16,264; Same v. Smith, Id. 16,344; Same v. Thompson, Id. 16,492.

Seizing the person of the master, although the restraint be but momentary, is a confinement prohibited by law.—United States v. Bladen, Case No. 14,606.

Where the master strikes a seaman, and is seized and so firmly held by him that he cannot extricate himself, the seaman is guilty of confining the master.—United States v. Smith, Case No. 16,345.

Where the master uses an unlawful weapon, or the seaman is exposed to danger of his life or limbs, he may resort to any necessary species of defense to avoid the danger.—United States v. Smith, Case No. 16,345.

To constitute a confinement of the master (Act 1790, c. 36), it is sufficient that there is a personal seizure or restraint, although it may be for the purpose of inflicting personal chastisement.—United States v. Savage, Case No. 16,225.

Restraining the master from performing the duties of his station by such mutinous conduct of the crew as would reasonably intimidate a firm man is confining him, within 2 Laws U. S. 93, § 12.—United States v. Bladen, Case No. 14,606.

The master cannot be confined by the officers and crew, except in a clear case, to prevent his committing acts which might endanger the lives of all on board.—United States v. Sharp, Case No. 16,264.

The crew have no right to disarm the master, though using a deadly weapon, if they are in a mutinous state, and exercising personal violence to resist his lawful command.—United States v. Peterson, Case No. 16,037.

To constitute the offense of confining the master, the act of confinement must be feloniously done.—United States v. Henry, Case No. 15,351.

One who joins in the general conspiracy, and by his presence countenances acts of violence, but who does not individually use force or threats to compel the master to resign the command, is guilty of the offense of confining the master.—United States v. Sharp, Case No. 16,264.

The offense of seamen who revolt against the master on the ground of his intemperance and danger to the vessel, and place him in confinement, continuing the voyage under the mate, is not a felony.—The Ulysses, Case No. 14,330.

Assault and battery by a seaman upon the master is not a confinement of the master, or an attempt to excite a revolt, within the statute.—United States v. Lawrence, Case No. 15,575.

(B) OFFENSES AGAINST SEAMEN.

§ 178. Forcing seamen on shore.

The forcing a mariner on shore must be done both without justifiable cause, and maliciously, to justify a conviction under Act 1825, c. 65, § 10.—United States v. Ruggles, Case No. 16,205; Same v. Lunt, Id. 15,642.

"Maliciously," in such statute, means with a willful disregard of right and duty, or doing the act against a man's own conviction of duty.—United States v. Ruggles, Case No. 16,205.

The offense of maliciously forcing a mate on shore at a foreign port, and leaving him there, may be committed, although no physical force was used, as in the case where the mate left the ship under a well-grounded fear of his life had he remained on board.—United States v. Riddle, Case No. 16,162.

To complete the offense of maliciously and without justifiable cause forcing an officer or mariner on shore, or leaving him behind in a foreign port (Act 1825, c. 276, § 10), it is not necessary that he should be in a condition to return, and willing to return.—United States v. Netcher, Case No. 15,866.

It is an offense, under such act, to leave behind a seaman imprisoned by the master for using abusive language on the refusal of his application for a discharge.—United States v. Netcher, Case No. 15,866.

Masters act on their own responsibility in leaving men in foreign ports for misconduct. It is proper to take the advice of the consul, but his opinion is only advice.—United States v. Lunt, Case No. 15,642.

To justify leaving men in a foreign port, there must be such an exigency as would control the judgment of masters of reasonable firmness.—United States v. Lunt, Case No. 15,642.

"Justifiable cause" for forcing a seaman on shore (Act 1825, c. 276, § 10) means a case of moral necessity, for the safety of the ship and crew, or the due performance of the voyage, and not merely a cause justifying a discharge.—United States v. Coffin, Case No. 14,824.

§ 179. Assault in general.

A mere intention to give pain, or to torture the person assaulted, will not support an indictment against the master for an assault on the mate with intent to kill.—United States v. Riddle, Case No. 16,162.

§ 180. Punishment.

The master may inflict reasonable punishment and use means of coercion in case of desertion and persistent refusal to perform duty.—United States v. Alden, Case No. 14,427.

To authorize a conviction, under Act 1835, c. 40, § 3, for injury to a seaman, both malice, hatred, or revenge and a want of justifiable cause must be shown.—United States v. Taylor, Case No. 16,442.

In cases of mutinous conduct the master may use a greater degree of violence than where there is misbehavior only.—United States v. Wickham, Case No. 16,689.

The authority of the officers of a merchant ship to inflict punishment is of a summary, but not a military, character.—United States v. Hunt, Case No. 15,423.

In the absence of the master, the next highest officer on board succeeds to his rights and authority pro tempore, so far as they are necessary for the due performance of the ship's duties.—United States v. Taylor, Case No. 16,442.

Punishment by the mate or other officers when the master is on board can be justified only by an immediate exigency of sea service.—United States v. Hunt, Case No. 15,423; Same v. Taylor, Id. 16,442.

An inferior officer cannot inflict blows upon a seaman for disobedience without consulting the master, except in a case which will not admit of delay.—United States v. Harriman, Case No. 15,311.

The master is justified in using a deadly weapon to reduce a seaman to obedience only in cases of apparent necessity, such as the situation of the ship and the manifestation of a hostile disposition on the part of the crew.—United States v. Colby, Case No. 14,830.

He is justified in using it though the necessity be apparent only.—United States v. Lunt, Case No. 15,643.

"Vessel of commerce," within Act Sept. 28, 1850, abolishing flogging, includes vessels engaged in whale and other fisheries.—Charge to Grand Jury, Case No. 18,249.

The abolition of "flogging" does not prohibit corporal punishment of a different kind administered by officers of vessels to compel obedience to lawful commands, or to preserve the discipline and good order of the ship.—Charge to Grand Jury, Case No. 18,249.

Any punishment which, in substance and effect, amounts to corporal punishment by stripes inflicted with a cat, is within the provision of the statute, irrespective of its degree.—United States v. Cutler, Case No. 14,910.

The act abolishing the punishment of flogging (Act March 3, 1835) is not a penal law, and no indictment can be framed upon it.—United States v. Cutler, Case No. 14,910.

Flogging is not a cruel and unusual punishment, within the meaning of Act March 3, 1835, § 3.—United States v. Collins, Case No. 14,836.

On an indictment under Act March 3, 1835, § 3, the government must show that the act was without justifiable cause, and a willful departure from a known duty.—United States v. Cutler, Case No. 14,910.

A whaling ship is a vessel of commerce within the act.—United States v. Cutler, Case No. 14,910.

The word "crew," as used in Act 1835, c. 40, includes the officers as well as common seamen, and the master may be liable thereunder for an imprisonment of the first mate.—United States v. Winn, Case No. 16,740.

A master, who is present when punishment is inflicted by a subordinate officer, is personally responsible therefor.—United States v. Taylor, Case No. 16,442.

(C) CRIMINAL PROSECUTIONS.

§ 181. Indictment.

Sufficiency of indictment against a seaman for endeavoring to make a revolt on board an American vessel in foreign waters.—United States v. Turner, Case No. 16,549.

An indictment for an endeavor to commit a revolt and for confining the master need not allege that he was at the time in the peace of the United States, or a citizen thereof. Act 1790, c. 9, § 12.—United States v. Thompson, Case No. 16,492.

The crime of endeavoring to make a revolt is one against the master, and it is sufficient to charge it in the words of the act of 1835 to give the court cognizance of it, even within the requirements of Act March 3, 1825.—United States v. Seagrist, Case No. 16,245.

The charge that defendants, "with force and arms, did then and there feloniously make a revolt on board the said ship, contrary," etc., is insufficient to charge the offense of revolt or mutiny under the act of 1835.—United States v. Almeida, Case No. 14,433.

An indictment for confining the captain, for an assault in a foreign port on a vessel belonging to a citizen of the United States, need not negative the fact that defendant was tried and convicted or acquitted by the foreign tribunal.—United States v. Stevens, Case No. 16,394.

Proof of an endeavor to commit a revolt in a foreign port will sustain an indictment for an endeavor to commit a revolt on the high seas.—United States v. Keefe, Case No. 15,509.

§ 182. Evidence.

On a charge of revolt a copy of the shipping articles cannot be given in evidence to show that the prisoner was part of the crew, without proof of loss or destruction of the original.—United States v. Doughty, Case No. 14,987.

The original articles cannot be given in evidence unless the handwriting of the prisoner is proved.—United States v. Doughty, Case No. 14,987.

The log book kept by the master is not evidence in an indictment for a revolt and confining the master.—United States v. Sharp, Case No. 16,264.

A seaman cannot be prosecuted under Rev. St. § 4596, unless the circumstance of the offense is entered in the log book as soon as possible after the occurrence, and is read over to the seaman, or a copy furnished him, and his reply entered in the same manner.—United States v. Brown, Case No. 14,672.

On the trial of an indictment for endeavoring to make a mutiny and revolt, the American character of the vessel must be proved, but the title may be proved by parol.—United States v. Crawford, Case No. 14,890; Same v. Seagrist, Id. 16,245.

§ 183. Arrest of judgment.
Where there is a verdict of guilty on two counts,—one for a revolt, and another for an attempt to excite it,—the judgment will not be arrested.—United States v. Peterson, Case No. 16,037.

VIII. FOREIGN SEAMEN.

§ 184. What law governs.
The case of a French seaman will be determined by the marine law of France.—Moran v. Baudin, Case No. 9,785.

§ 185. Contract of shipment.
Foreign seamen unwittingly shipping for a voyage wherein the navigation acts forbid their employment may recover in rem damages resulting from nonperformance.—McKenzie v. The Oglethorpe, Case No. 8,857.

§ 186. Wages.
A foreigner shipped at a foreign port, and discharged at a foreign port in accordance with his contract, is not entitled to two months' extra pay.—The Hermon, Case No. 6,411.

British seaman does not forfeit wages by coming on shore to legally demand payment.—Babbell v. Gardner, Case No. 692.

The master cannot deduct from the wages of seamen of a wrecked British vessel expenses of their board and transportation home.—MacPherson v. Blytheswood, Case No. 8,920.

Foreign seamen, who abandon their vessel in a United States port upon a strict construction of their contract, can recover only the value of their demands in the currency of the United States, without regard to its depreciation.—Reynolds v. The Simoon, Case No. 11,733.

A foreign seaman who had shipped to this country and was offered passage home cannot sue here for wages, where the master had given security for his return.—The Pacific, Case No. 10,644.

Wages will be decreed on a libel by a French seaman against a French vessel which has changed her voyage from that for which he contracted.—Moran v. Baudin, Case No. 9,785.

The transfer of a crew of a foreign vessel dismantled here to another vessel, under the authority of the consul, held to give no right to the seamen to libel the vessel for wages.—Robin v. Cacique, Case No. 11,931.

A libel for wages by a foreign seaman, whom the master has charged with desertion, held should be dismissed where the master offered to take the seaman home, and give him a certificate of forgiveness for past offenses.—Willendson v. Forsoket, Case No. 17,682.

An action to recover wages notwithstanding loss of vessel, authorized by the British statute on production of the certificate showing fidelity, is not upon the statute, which simply removed a disability previously imposed by the maritime courts.—Davis v. Leslie, Case No. 3,639.

In such case, proof of fidelity may be shown by other legal evidence than the certificate.—Davis v. Leslie, Case No. 3,639.

Seamen on board a ship of war or vessel belonging to a sovereign independent state cannot libel the vessel for wages due.—Moitez v. The South Carolina, Case No. 9,697.

§ 187. Punishment.
Foreign seamen on board American vessels are as much subject to punishment for acts of revolt, or attempts to commit revolts, as Americans.—United States v. Peterson, Case No. 16,037.

§ 188. Offenses.
Act June 7, 1872, § 51, applies to seamen engaged on foreign vessels while in American waters.—United States v. McArdle, Case No. 15,653.

Act July 20, 1790, c. 29, regulating seamen in the merchants' service, does not apply to foreign seamen on foreign ships.—Ex parte D'Olivera, Case No. 3,967.

SEARCHES AND SEIZURES.

§ 1, In general. § 2, Wrongful seizure. § 3, Certificate of probable cause.

Power to issue search warrant, see "Constitutional Law," § 4.

§ 1. In general.
The right of search is not allowable in times of peace, except against pirates or other offenders against the law of nations.—The Tigris, Case No. 14,038.

A right of seizure on the high seas may exist independently of any right of search.—United States v. The La Jeune Eugenie, Case No. 15,551.

§ 2. Wrongful seizure.
Restitution and acceptance held a mutual release, barring a claim for damages for unlawful seizure.—The Malaga, Case No. 8,985.

Reasonable ground for a seizure is a defense to a libel for damages.—The Malaga, Case No. 8,985.

The court will entertain the question of damages, as well as costs, at the same time with the principal question of the legality of the arrest of the vessel.—The Malaga, Case No. 8,985.

§ 3. Certificate of probable cause.
A certificate of probable cause will be given if the officer making the seizure acts in good faith, and has reasonable grounds to suppose that the law has been violated.—United States v. The Reindeer, Case No. 16,145.

A doubt of law is a proper case for a certificate of probable cause of seizure. In what cases such a certificate ought to be allowed.—The Friendship, Case No. 5,125.

A certificate of reasonable cause for seizure will be granted where it appeared that the collector acted under the instruction of the former officer in making the seizure, upon a construction of the statute adopted by the secretary of the treasury in conformity with an opinion of the attorney general.—United States v. The Recorder, Case No. 16,130.

A reasonable ground of suspicion is reasonable cause for a seizure.—United States v. The Recorder, Case No. 16,130.

It makes no difference whether the collector acted under a mistake of facts or of the law.—United States v. The Recorder, Case No. 16,130.

A lapse of two years held no bar to the application, but the laches were sufficient to cast the costs of the action against the collector upon him.—United States v. The Recorder, Case No. 16,130.

A certificate of probable cause cannot be granted where there has been neither claim nor trial, nor decree, nor anything to which an appeal could lie.—The Malaga, Case No. 8,985.

A stipulation that a seizure had been made held a sufficient foundation for an order of reasonable cause of seizure, though no seizure was in fact made.—United States v. The Henry, Case No. 15,352.

Certificate of probable cause of seizure denied for want of jurisdiction, where the seizure had been abandoned, a new seizure made, and judgment rendered for defendant on appeal to the circuit court.—Ninety-Two Barrels of Spirits, Case No. 10,275.

A certificate of probable cause of seizure is no defense to an action by the claimant against the seizing officer, to recover the value of the property, where it has not been returned.—Smith v. Averill, Case No. 13,007.

SECESSION.

Of states, see "States," § 2.

SECONDARY EVIDENCE.

In civil actions, see "Evidence," §§ 20–26.

SEDUCTION.

§ 1. Civil liability—Actions by parent.
An action upon the case will lie for seduction of plaintiff's daughter, whereby he lost her services.—Mudd v. Clements, Case No. 9,900.

In such action plaintiff may give evidence that defendant promised to marry the daughter, as a means of seduction.—Mudd v. Clements, Case No. 9,900.

SEIZURE.

See "Searches and Seizures."
Certificates of probable cause, see "Customs Duties," § 22.
For violation of internal revenue laws, see "Internal Revenue," §§ 65–90.
In admiralty, see "Admiralty," § 62.
Jurisdiction over, see "Admiralty," § 34; "Courts," § 97.
Of books and papers, see "Customs Duties," § 77.
On execution, see "Execution," § 8.

SENTENCE.

In criminal prosecutions, see "Criminal Law," §§ 104, 106–109; "Embezzlement," § 5; "Homicide," § 10; "Larceny," § 13.

SEPARABLE CONTROVERSY.

See "Courts," § 45; "Removal of Causes," § 20.

SEPARATE ESTATE.

Of married women, see "Husband and Wife," §§ 5–8.

SEPARATION.

See "Husband and Wife," § 12.

SERVICE.

Of notices in bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," §§ 144–146.
Of pleading in admiralty, see "Admiralty," § 88.
Of process, see "Garnishment," § 3; "Process," §§ 2–7.
—— in bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," § 123.
—— in equity, see "Equity," § 32.
Of subpœna, see "Witnesses," § 3.
Of writ of habeas corpus, see "Habeas Corpus," § 7.
—— of injunction, see "Injunction," § 37.

SERVICES.

See "Work and Labor."
Jurisdiction over contracts for, see "Admiralty," §§ 23–28.

SERVITUDES.

See "Easements."

SET-OFF AND COUNTERCLAIM.

§ 1, Nature and existence of right in general. § 2, Joint and separate debts. § 3, Debts payable in future. § 4, Claims arising out of contract. § 5, Unliquidated claims and damages for tort. § 6, Assigned claims. § 7, Set-off and counterclaim in equity.

In actions by United States, see "United States," § 33.
—— on bills or notes, see "Bills and Notes," § 93.
—— on contracts of indemnity, see "Indemnity," § 2.
In admiralty, see "Admiralty," § 46.
In bankruptcy, see "Bankruptcy," §§ 409–412, 492, 671.
In ejectment, see "Ejectment," §§ 22–26.
Of costs, see "Bankruptcy," § 671.
On execution, see "Execution," § 22.
Pleading matter of set-off or counterclaim, see "Pleading," § 35.

§ 1. Nature and existence of right in general.
The demands of plaintiff and defendant must be specific and mutual, and there must exist a simultaneous right of action at the institution of suit, to enable one to set off against the other.—Pate v. Gray, Case No. 10,794a.

The right of set-off is limited at common law to cases of mutual, connected debts, and does not extend to debts which are unconnected.—Hurlbert v. Pacific Ins. Co., Case No. 6,919.

§ 2. Joint and separate debts.
Joint debts cannot be set off against separate debts, or separate debts against joint debts.—Howe v. Sheppard, Case No. 6,773.

A debt of two joint debtors to two joint creditors cannot be set off against a debt of one of the joint creditors to one of the joint debtors.—Langley v. Brent, Case No. 8,066.

A debt due by the plaintiff to one of two joint defendants cannot be set off against the joint debt to the plaintiff.—Waters v. Bussard, Case No. 17,262.

Defendant cannot set off a joint judgment recovered by himself and wife against plaintiff.—Sutton v. Mandeville, Case No. 13,648.

A plea setting up a claim for damages against plaintiff, which shows that the alleged damage was for wrongs to property in which defendant was interested with others, is no response to a declaration setting out a breach of defendant's individual promise.—Central Ohio R. R. v. Thompson, Case No. 2,550.

§ 3. Debts payable in future.
A debt payable in future cannot be pleaded in bar of a present demand.—Scott v. Jones, Case No. 12,536.

§ 4. Claims arising out of contract.
In an action for goods sold for cash at auction, defendant may set off plaintiff's note.—Stettinius v. Myer, Case No. 13,385.

Property received collaterally, and not in payment of a note, cannot be set up, in an action on the note, by way of set-off.—Homas v. McConnell, Case No. 6,656.

Credit for commissions claimed by an insurance agent from the company cannot be allowed a guarantor of the agent's note in a suit at law. Such claim could only be made available in a suit in equity on an accounting.—Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Wilcox, Case No. 9,980.

In an action for negligence in keeping plaintiff's sheep, founded on breach of a special contract, defendant cannot have deducted compensation under the contract.—Crowninshield v. Robinson, Case No. 3,451.

§ 5. Unliquidated claims and damages for tort.

Unliquidated damages cannot be pleaded as a set-off.—Homas v. McConnell, Case No. 6,656; Armstrong v. Brown, Id. 542; United States v. Williams, Id. 16,721; Same v. Wells, Id. 16,663.

Damages for use and occupation may be the subject of set-off.—Brohawn v. Van Ness, Case No. 1,920.

Unliquidated damages for breach of warranty of the soundness of a horse cannot be set off against a note given for the purchase price.—Morrison v. Clifford, Case No. 9,846.

A claim founded in tort may be set off against a demand in contract, where defendant's claim is founded in a duty which plaintiff owes him, as to deliver property as bailee; for in such case the tort may be waived.—McCabe v. Winship, Case No. 8,668.

In an action on a bill of exchange, defendant may set off a claim for neglect to insure a vessel in a certain amount, as plaintiff was bound to do, where the vessel was lost without insurance.—De Taslet v. Crousellat, Case No. 3,827.

§ 6. Assigned claims.

In an action brought in the name of the assignor, the defendant may set off a debt due from the assignee.—Corser v. Craig, Case No. 3,255.

Quære, whether a party, who has procured an assignment of a debt of the plaintiff, can set it off against his own debt due to the plaintiff, which was previously assigned.—Greene v. Darling, Case No. 5,765.

A debtor, after notice of an assignment of the debt by the creditor, who purchases a claim against the creditor, cannot set off the same in a suit brought in the name of the creditor for the use of the assignee.—Whitaker v. Pope, Case No. 17,528; Weightman v. Queen, Id. 17,359.

A partnership debt cannot be set off in an action by an assignee of one of the partners.—Wright v. Rogers, Case No. 18,090.

In an action by an insolvent for the use of his trustee, defendant may set off plaintiff's note to a third person, coming to his hands before the insolvency.—Banks v. King, Case No. 960.

A debt due from the obligee to the obligor of a bond ascertained upon a settlement of mutual accounts, after the institution of a suit by an assignee of the bond, cannot be set off against such assignee.—Scott v. Jones, Case No. 12,536.

The right of set-off, either in law or in equity, of mutual debts, is extinguished by a bona fide assignment of one of the debts.—Howe v. Sheppard, Case No. 6,773.

§ 7. Set-off and counterclaim in equity.

Courts of equity, in cases of set-off, follow the law.—Gass v. Stinson, Case No. 5,262; Gordon v. Lewis, Id. 5,613, 5,614; Howe v. Sheppard, Id. 6,773.

Unless there is some equity attaching to the particular transactions between the parties.—Gordon v. Lewis, Cases Nos. 5,613, 5,614; Howe v. Sheppard, Id. 6,773.

And joint debts cannot be set off in equity any more than at law against separate debts, unless there be some other equitable circumstances.—Jackson v. Robinson, Case No. 7,144; Vose v. Philbrook, Id. 17,010.

The fact of the existence of mutual demands without some intervening equity between the parties, would not justify a court of equity in allowing a set-off. Mere insolvency does not constitute such an equity.—Gordon v. Lewis, Case No. 5,614.

Courts of equity, independently of any statute of set-off, do not exercise jurisdiction to set off mutual disconnected debts, unless where the dealings of the parties imply it as matter of agreement, or mutual credit.—Greene v. Darling, Case No. 5,765.

Unliquidated damages arising from the nonperformance of a verbal promise to convey real estate, made without consideration and under a mistake of fact, cannot, in equity, be set off against a judgment at law.—Lee v. Thornton, Case No. 8,203.

Where a set-off or defense to a debt was available at law, and the party omitted by laches to take advantage of it, it seems a court of equity will not relieve him.—Greene v. Darling, Case No. 5,765.

SETTLEMENT.

See "Accord and Satisfaction"; "Account Stated"; "Compromise and Settlement"; "Payment"; "Release."

By executor or administrator, see "Executors and Administrators," §§ 56–69.

By guardian of infant, see "Guardian and Ward," § 9.

By partner, see "Partnership," § 52.

Marriage settlements, see "Husband and Wife," § 2.

Of claims for personal injuries, see "Seamen," § 159.

Of officers' accounts, see "United States," § 12.

SEVERANCE.

Of action, see "Action," § 4.

SHERIFFS AND CONSTABLES.

§ 1, Compensation. § 2, Process as protection from liability. § 3, Liability upon attachment and execution. § 4, Liability for escape of prisoner. § 5, Requiring bail and other bonds. § 6, Actions to enforce liability of officer—Right of action. § 7, —— Pleading and evidence. § 8, —— Damages. § 9, Deputies. § 10, Removal and resignation. § 11, Official bonds.

See, also, "United States Marshals."

Disturbance of possession or interference with, see "Admiralty," § 56; "Courts," § 118.

Sheriffs' deed, see "Execution," § 19.

§ 1. Compensation.

A sheriff is entitled to poundage at time he makes the levy.—In re Black, Case No. 1,458.

The constable is not entitled to any fee on an execution not served.—United States v. Little, Case No. 15,609.

§ 2. Process as protection from liability.

A sheriff is protected from liability in obeying the command of an execution on a dormant judgment, and his proceedings cannot be collaterally impeached, especially by the person at whose instance they have been commenced. —Goshorn v. Alexander, Case No. 5,630.

An officer executing a writ cannot be held liable as a trespasser, however malicious his conduct, if the subject-matter was within the jurisdiction of the magistrate, and the execution regular on its face.—Smith v. Miles, Case No. 13,079a.

A sheriff will be protected in serving process regular on its face issued by a court having jurisdiction of the subject-matter, though it issued irregularly. — United States v. Harris, Case No. 15,313.

§ 3. Liability upon attachment and execution.

The assent of the plaintiff's attorney to the appointment of a receiptor on an attachment on mesne process will conclude the plaintiff.—Pierce v. Strickland, Case No. 11,147.

The consent of the creditor to the bailment to a receiptor of goods attached only exempts the attaching officer for losses not occasioned by his neglect or misfeasance.—Pierce v. Strickland, Case No. 11,147.

Upon general principles, a sheriff can only levy upon such real estate as is within his county.—Kent v. Roberts, Case No. 7,715.

A constable is not liable for wantonly sacrificing property taken under execution, unless it appear that he acted from a corrupt motive. —United States v. Bill, Case No. 14,593.

A motion against a sheriff for not paying over to plaintiff money made upon a fi. fa. may be made in the name of the original plaintiff in the fi. fa., although he had taken the insolvent oath.—Fendall v. Turner, Case No. 4,727.

A sheriff who neglects to sell property seized on execution is liable in damages.—Dunlop v. West, Case No. 4,170.

The sheriff is liable for failure to make the costs of the clerk when practicable, and is not excused by any direction of the judgment creditor or his attorney.—Lewis v. Hamilton, Case No. 8,324a.

§ 4. Liability for escape of prisoner.

The sheriff is accountable for an escape of the jailer where he is committed to his own jail, and no new keeper is appointed.—Steere v. Field, Case No. 13,350.

The escape of a prisoner while insane is no defense to the sheriff.—Hazard v. Hazard, Case No. 6,278.

The assignment of a bond for the limits discharges the sheriff from liability for a subsequent escape.—United States v. Noah, Case No. 15,894.

Though imprisonment for debt is abolished in Michigan, a sheriff is yet liable for permitting the escape of a debtor arrested for fraud under the state statutes.—Mewster v. Spalding, Case No. 9,513.

The sheriff cannot take advantage of an irregularity in the process which does not render it void.—Spafford v. Goodell, Case No. 13,197.

A sheriff who receives as jailer a person arrested by the marshal is bound to keep the prisoner under all the responsibilities as if he had been arrested under state process.—Spafford v. Goodell, Case No. 13,197.

It is not an escape in a jailer to allow prisoners confined for debt the liberty of all the apartments within the jail walls.—Steere v. Field, Case No. 13,350.

It is an escape in a jailer to make a prisoner a turnkey, and to trust him with the keys of both inner and outer doors, at all times.—Steere v. Field, Case No. 13,350.

§ 5. Requiring bail and other bonds.

Delay by the plaintiff, for a period of five years, to call on the officer for bail, will be such laches as to exonerate the officer.—Gill v. Stebbins, Case No. 5,432.

Under Act Jan. 6, 1800, the sheriff is bound to take a bond for the limits, as provided by the state laws, from a prisoner confined on process from a federal court.—United States v. Noah, Case No. 15,894.

Property levied upon is at the risk of the officer if he fails to take a delivery bond, and he is responsible for its forthcoming.—Campbell v. Pope, Case No. 2,365a.

§ 6. Actions to enforce liability of officer—Right of action.

The creditor has a remedy by action against the officer for irregularities in proceeding under the execution.—Azcarati v. Fitzsimmons, Case No. 690.

§ 7. —— Pleading and evidence.

In an action for an escape, the record is inadmissible where varying from the judgment described in the declaration.—Suydam v. Aldrich, Case No. 13,652.

A sheriff is not estopped by the statement in his return of the valuation of the goods attached; but such return casts the burden on him of showing a different value.—Pierce v. Strickland, Case No. 11,147.

No other proof than that defendant acted as sheriff in levying upon property is necessary to charge him as such.—Lawrence v. Sherman, Case No. 8,144.

In an action against the officer for loss of goods levied upon, their value may be shown by parol, where the return is silent on that subject. —Campbell v. Pope, Case No. 2,365a.

§ 8. —— Damages.

In a suit against an officer for official misfeasance plaintiff can recover only his actual loss arising therefrom.—Pierce v. Strickland, Case No. 11,147.

The sheriff is liable for the escape to the extent of the damage sustained by the party issuing the process.—Darst v. Duncan, Case No. 3,580; Duryee v. Webb, Id. 4,198.

In debt on the statute, the recovery is for the debt and costs, without regard to the damages sustained.—Darst v. Duncan, Case No. 3,580.

Where defendant is wholly without property, the sheriff is liable only to nominal damages.—Spafford v. Goodell, Case No. 13,197.

The injury received by plaintiff on an escape of defendant on final process is measured by the amount of property possessed by defendant, not exceeding the sum named in the declaration.—Spafford v. Goodell, Case No. 13,197.

In an action against a sheriff for conversion, the amount which the goods brought at the sheriff's sale is not conclusive as to their value.—Long v. Conner, Case No. 8,479.

§ 9. Deputies.

A sheriff is personally responsible for the acts of his deputy.—Clute v. Goodell, Case No. 2,911.

Where the act of the deputy is sanctioned by the sheriff the latter is liable though the execution was not sealed.—Lawrence v. Sherman, Case No. 8,144.

A new county was set off after certain lands lying therein had been attached. Subsequently execution was issued to the sheriff of the old county, and was levied on the lands by his deputy, who was also deputy of the sheriff of the new county. Held, that the levy was utterly void.—Kent v. Roberts, Case No. 7,715.

§ 10. Removal and resignation.

A constable will be dismissed on petition and proof of misconduct while exercising the duties of his office.—United States v. McGill, Case No. 15,677.

A rule on a constable to show cause why he should not be removed "for extortion under color of his office" need not specify the particular facts relied upon.—Jones v. Woodrow, Case No. 7,509.

A constable suspended from office before rule to show cause.—Ex parte Bowling, Case No. 1,737.

A constable using criminal process to enter forcibly one's premises to serve a civil warrant, and to take unlawful possession of property to secure the debt, will be dismissed from office. —United States v. Merryman, Case No. 15,759a.

A constable ordered to be dismissed from office for collecting an illegal fee, unless he return the same, and pay the cost of the rule served on him.—United States v. McPherson, Case No. 15,704.

It seems that, where an attachment is made by a sheriff who resigns before execution issues, he is not the proper person to levy it.—Kent v. Roberts, Case No. 7,715.

At common law, a sheriff may sell, after going out of office, goods seized on execution while in office.—Kent v. Roberts, Case No. 7,715.

§ 11. Official bonds.

An indictment lies for acting as constable without giving bond.—United States v. Evans, Case No. 15,064.

The temporary removal of a constable from office will not vacate or invalidate his official bond.—United States v. Bill, Case No. 14,594.

The sureties of a constable's bond are not liable for money collected by the constable without legal process.—United States v. Cranston, Case No. 14,889.

The sureties of a sheriff in Virginia are not liable for officer's fees unless the account of the same shall have been delivered to the sheriff for collection before the 1st of March, under Act Va. Dec. 19, 1792, § 11.—Virginia v. Turner, Case No. 16,971.

Sufficiency of averments in debt upon a constable's bond, in not conveying realty sold to plaintiff on a fi. fa.—Hazel v. Waters, Cases Nos. 6,283, 6,284.

In debt on a sheriff's bond, his return upon an execution that he had satisfied the plaintiff is not evidence for defendants.—Virginia v. Wise, Case No. 16,972.

Upon a breach assigned in not paying money received upon a fi. fa., plaintiff must show that the sheriff received the money before the return day.—Virginia v. Wise, Case No. 16,972.

A return produced by plaintiff as evidence of the receipt of the money is also evidence of its payment to plaintiff, where it is so stated therein.—Virginia v. Wise, Case No. 16,972.

SHIPPING.

I. REGULATION IN GENERAL.

§ 1, Nationality of vessel. § 2, Identity of vessel. § 3, Power to control and regulate. § 4, Registry. § 5, Enrollment and license. § 6, Duties and taxes. § 7, Inspection—Vessels in general. § 8, —— Steam vessels. § 9, Regulation of vessels in foreign commerce. § 10, Regulation of vessels in domestic commerce. § 11, Penalties and forfeitures for violations of regulations—Fraudulent enrollment and registration. § 12, —— Violation of licenses for coasting trade and Fisheries. § 13, —— Violations of inspection regulations. § 14, —— Failure to deliver register or report arrival. § 15, —— Lien for penalties. § 16, Offenses against navigation laws.

II. TITLE TO AND EMPLOYMENT OF VESSEL IN GENERAL.

§ 17, Nature of ownership of vessels. § 18, Title under contract for building vessels. § 19, Evidence of title. § 20, Rights of owners in general. § 21, Rights, powers, and liabilities of part owners—Rights and powers of majority. § 22, —— Right to possession. § 23, —— Division of earnings. § 24, —— Rights of minority to security. § 25, —— Stipulations for return. § 26, —— Actions between part owners. § 27, —— Rights, duties, and liabilities as to third persons. § 28, Managing owner, ship's husband, or agent. § 29, Sale—Requisites and validity in general. § 30, —— Who may transfer title. § 31, —— Bill of sale. § 32, —— Conditional sales. § 33, —— Sale to alien. § 34, —— Rights and liabilities of purchasers in general. § 35, —— Rights of bona fide purchasers. § 36, Leases. § 37, Mortgages—Requisites and validity. § 38, —— Rights and liabilities of mortgagees. § 39, Recording conveyances. § 40, Agreements of consortship.

III. CHARTERS.

§ 41, Nature of contract. § 42, What law governs. § 43, Authority to make charter. § 44, Requisites and validity of charter party. § 45, Cancellation, surrender, or rescission. § 46, Construction and operation in general. § 47, Charterer as owner for the voyage.. § 48. Seaworthiness and fitness of vessel. § 49, Readiness and dispatch of vessel. § 50, Charter for carriage of passengers. § 51, Cargo. § 52, Receiving cargo. § 53, Voyage. § 54, Discharge of cargo. § 55, Freight, charter money, or other compensation—When earned in general. § 56, —— Pro rata. § 57, —— Rate and amount. § 58, —— Deductions and offsets. § 59, —— Who liable. § 60, —— Liens in general. § 61, —— Cargo subject to lien. § 62, —— When lien attaches. § 63, —— Waiver and discharge of lien. § 64, —— Enforcement of lien. § 65, Breach of charter party by owner or master—What constitutes a breach. § 66, —— Actions for breach. § 67, Breach of charter by charterer —What constitutes a breach. § 68, —— Effect of breach. § 69, —— Actions for breach. § 70, Loss or injury to cargo. § 71, Loss or injury to vessel. § 72, Subcharter and assignment of charter. § 73, Letting vessel on shares.

IV. MASTER.

§ 74, Appointment and removal. § 75, Authority and duties—Scope and extent in general. § 76, —— Management and navigation of vessel. § 77, —— Employment of seamen. § 78, Sale of vessel by master—When justified. § 79, —— Rights and liabilities of purchasers from master. § 80, Sale of cargo by master—When justified, and validity in general. § 81, —— Sale of perishable cargo. § 81a, —— Rights and liabilities of purchasers. § 82, —— Rights of owners of cargo. § 83, Authority and duties of master as to crew. § 84, Individual rights and privileges as to vessel, cargo, and freight. § 85, Wages and reimbursements of expenses—Rights in general. § 86, —— Forfeiture. § 87, —— Deductions and offsets. § 88, —— Extra wages. § 89, —— Who are liable. § 90, —— Actions and summary proceedings. § 91, —— Liens. § 92, Lay or share in earnings. § 93, Liabilities on contract. § 94, Liabilities for negligence or misconduct.

V. LIABILITIES OF VESSELS AND OWNERS IN GENERAL.

§ 95, Representation of vessel or owners in general. § 96, Contracts in general. § 97, Supplies and repairs—In general. § 98, —— Contracts by master. § 99, Advances. § 100, Negotiable instruments. § 101, Torts committed by master or crew—In general. § 102, —— Negligent management or navigation. § 103, —— Willful or wanton injuries. § 104, Dangerous or defective condition of vessel or appliances.

VI. BOTTOMRY AND RESPONDENTIA.

§ 105, Nature of contract—In general. § 106, —— What constitutes. § 107, Power of owner to make bond. § 108, Power of master to make bond—In general. § 109, —— Necessity. § 110, —— Communication with owner. § 111, —— For what purposes bond may be made. § 112, Who may take bond. § 113, Foreign port. § 114, Requisites and validity—In general. § 115, —— Consideration. § 116, —— Fraud. § 117, —— Partial invalidity. § 118, —— Recording. § 119, Construction and operation. §§ 120, 121, Rights and duties of lender or holder. § 122, Subject-matter hypothecated. § 123, Debt secured. § 124, Liens and priority. § 125, Loss of vessel or cargo. § 126, Payment or satisfaction. § 127, Actions.

VII. CARRIAGE OF GOODS.

§ 128, Nature of vessel's liability. § 129, Who may make contract of affreightment. § 130, What constitutes a contract of affreightment. § 131, Construction and operation in general of contract of affreightment. § 132, Performance and breach of contract of affreightment in general—Who liable for performance. § 133, —— Excuses for nonperformance. § 134, —— Lien for performance. § 135, Delivery to vessel. § 136, Bill of lading and shipping receipts in general—Authority to give. § 137, —— Duty to give. § 138, —— Requisites and validity. § 139, —— Construction and operation. § 140, —— Indorsement. § 141, —— Priority. § 142, Loading and stowage—What constitutes stowage. § 143, —— Delay in loading. § 144, —— Manner of stowage. § 145, —— Place of stowage. § 146, —— Expenses. § 147, Custody and control of goods. § 148, Transshipment and forwarding. § 149, Delivery by vessel—In general. § 150, —— Time of delivery. § 151, —— Place of delivery. § 152, —— Notice to consignee. § 153, —— Duties of consignee or owner as to delivery. § 154, —— What constitutes delivery. § 155, —— Failure or refusal of consignee to receive cargo or pay freight. § 156, —— Delivery of goods shipped C. O. D. § 157, Nondelivery or misdelivery—Failure to deliver in general. § 158, —— Short delivery. § 159, —— Misdelivery. § 160, Delay in transportation or delivery. § 161, Loss or injury—Liability in general. § 162, —— Unseaworthiness or unfitness of vessel as ground of liability. § 163, —— Negligence in loading. § 164, —— Negligent management or navigation. § 165, —— Improper stowage. § 166, —— Deviation or delay. § 167, —— Negligence in discharging. § 168, —— Negligence or wrongful acts of master or crew. § 169, —— Inherent defect in goods. § 170, —— Duties after wreck or other disaster. § 171, —— Presumptions and burdens of proof as to cause of injury. § 172, —— Actions for damages. § 173, —— Extent of liability and amount of damage. § 174, Statutory exemptions from liability. § 175, Limitation of liability by contract or bill of lading—In general. § 176, —— Exemptions from particular risks or causes of loss. § 177, —— Perils of the sea. § 178, —— Presumptions and burden of proof as to cause of injury. § 179, Who liable for loss or damage. § 180, Freight—When earned in general. § 181, —— In case of wreck or other disaster. § 182, —— Pro rata. § 183, —— Rate and amount in general. § 184, —— Amount as depending upon weight or measurement of cargo. § 185, —— Deductions and offsets. § 186, —— Who liable. § 187, —— Payment or tender. § 188, —— Actions. § 189, —— Lien. § 190, —— Sale of cargo for freight. § 191, Damages for violations of regulations. § 192, Forfeitures for violations of regulations. § 193, Offenses incident to carriage of goods.

VIII. CARRIAGE OF PASSENGERS.

§ 194, Nature of liability. § 195, Regulations as to steam vessels. § 196, Regulations as to dangerous articles. § 197, Regulations as to number of passengers. § 198, Contracts for carriage of passengers in general. § 199, Accommodations on vessel—In general. § 200, —— Provisions. § 201, Berths and staterooms. § 202, Voyage and discharge at destination. § 203, Personal injuries. § 204, Passengers' effects. § 205, Damages for violation of regulations. § 206, Penalties and forfeitures for violation of regulations. § 207, Offenses by master and crew in violation of regulations.

IX. DEMURRAGE.

§ 208, Construction of charter party or bill of lading. § 209, effect of customs and usages. § 210, Liability of charterer or shipper in general. § 211, Liability of consignee in general. § 212, Delay in loading or sailing. § 213, Delay during voyage. § 214, Delay in unloading—In general. § 215, —— Time used in unloading. § 216, —— Waiting turn at wharf. § 217, —— Moving vessel during unloading. § 218, —— Effect of customs and usages. § 219, Fault of vessel or owner. § 220, Lay days. § 221, Rate or amount. § 222, Lien.

X. GENERAL AVERAGE.

§ 223, Nature of right to contribution. § 224, Perils and acts grounds of contribution—In general. § 225, —— Stranding. § 226, —— Jettison. § 227, —— Acts to prevent capture. § 228, —— Acts to prevent fire. § 229, —— Acts to avoid collision. § 230, Losses and expenses subject to compensation—Loss of or damage to vessel. § 231, —— Services and expenses in general. § 232, —— Expenses for voyage to port of distress. § 233, —— Expenses at port of distress. § 234, Liability to contribute—Liability of vessel, cargo, and owner. § 235, —— Liability of freight. § 236, —— Liability of master and crew. § 237, Adjustment—In general. § 238, —— As to vessel. § 239, —— As to cargo. § 240, —— As to freight. § 241, Actions. § 242, Lien. § 243, Failure to enforce contribution.

XI. LIMITATION OF OWNER'S LIABILITY.

§ 244, Vessels and interests to which limitation applies. § 245, Who are entitled to benefit of limitation. § 246, Losses and injuries subjects of limitation—In general. § 247, —— Privity or knowledge of owner. § 248, Proceedings—When proceedings may be instituted. § 249, —— Waiver of right to institute. § 250, —— Jurisdiction. § 251, —— Restraining suits against shipowners. § 252, —— Appraisement or valuation. § 253, —— Costs and fees. § 254, —— Release on giving stipulation. § 255, Distribution of proceeds.

XII. WRECK.

§ 256, Rights of property. § 257, Sale of wreck.

See, also, "Admiralty"; "Carriers"; "Collision"; "Ferries"; "Maritime Liens"; "Pilots"; "Piracy"; "Salvage"; "Seamen"; "Towage"; "Wharves."

Death caused by negligence of officers of vessel, see "Death," § 2.

Embargo and nonintercourse, see "War," §§ 7-25.

Jurisdiction of action for penalties, see "Admiralty," § 34.

— of crimes committed upon navigable waters or vessels, see "Criminal Law," §§ 10, 11.

— over foreign vessels, see "Admiralty," §§ 5-7.

Regulation of fisheries, see "Fish," § 6.

I. REGULATION IN GENERAL.

Vessels subject to admiralty jurisdiction, see "Admiralty," § 7.

§ 1. Nationality of vessel.

The ownership of a vessel determines her national character, and this may be proved in the same manner as that of any other chattel.—United States v. Jenkins, Case No. 15,473.

A vessel built in Canada, and owned in the United States, is not a vessel of the United States.—The Mary Merritt, Case No. 9,222.

A vessel does not become denationalized where she continues running without a renewal of her license after being sold to a citizen of the United States.—United States v. The Forrester, Case No. 15,132.

An American vessel belonging to American citizens, and sold abroad to American citizens, does not cease to be an American vessel.—United States v. Gordon, Case No. 15,231.

An omission in the registry and enrollment of an American vessel does not make her foreign, but only deprives her of American privileges.—Fox v. Paine, Case No. 5,014.

§ 2. Identity of vessel.

A boat with an entirely new hull, with parts of the machinery and upper works of an old boat, which had been abandoned or dismantled, held a new boat.—Hartupee v. The Coal Bluff, No. 2, Case No. 6,172.

Where, in rebuilding a vessel, each timber of the old vessel is dislocated before being used in the new, the vessel is a new one.—United States v. The Grace Meade, Case No. 15,243.

§ 3. Power to control and regulate.

Congress has power to regulate the building and equipment of vessels in the United States, whether for foreign or interstate commerce.—United States v. Jackson, Case No. 15,458.

§ 4. Registry.

The provisions concerning registry are constitutional. Act July 29, 1850.—Blanchard v. The Martha Washington, Case No. 1,513.

A foreign vessel, abandoned at sea, and picked up and towed into New York, is not a "vessel wrecked in the United States" (Rev. St. § 4136), and is not entitled to an American register as such, where her repairs amounted to three-fourths of her value when repaired.—United States v. The Victoria Perez, Case No. 16,620.

Act March 27, 1804, taking away the privileges of American ships from vessels owned by naturalized citizens who reside for a certain time in foreign countries, etc., did not repeal Act June 27, 1797, which denied registry to American vessels captured and condemned by foreign power, even on again becoming American property.—Smith v. Hammond, Case No. 13,053.

The title to a British vessel purchased by an American was taken in the name of a British subject, and subsequently, without consideration, transferred to a Russian subject, inhabitant of Alaska. An American register was obtained on the taking of the oath prescribed by Act 1792. Held, that the register was fraudulent.—United States v. The Fideliter, Case No. 15,088.

Act June 27, 1797, denying right of re-registration to an American vessel seized and condemned by a foreign power, even on again becoming American property, does not apply to American vessels privately sold to foreigners, and again purchased by Americans.—Smith v. Hammond, Case No. 13,053.

A collector wrongfully refusing to re-register a vessel sold to a foreigner, and repurchased by an American, is not personally liable in damages, if his refusal is based on honest mistake in construing the law.—Smith v. Hammond, Case No. 13,053.

The permanent register must issue from, and be recorded in, the office of the collector of the home port as defined by law.—Blanchard v. The Martha Washington, Case No. 1,513.

Fees of British consuls for receiving and recording ship's papers and for certifying to a redelivery.—Lorway v. Lousada, Case No. 8,517.

Under the registry laws, the person in whose name, as master, a vessel is registered, must be deemed her master for every legal intendment and purpose, though another person is employed to navigate and discipline the vessel.—The Dubuque, Case No. 4,110.

If documents by which registry of a vessel has been obtained are identified and come from the possession of the government, the signatures need not be proved.—The Mary Celeste, Case No. 9,202.

An American registered vessel, sold, while at sea, to resident citizens of the United States, without a bill of sale reciting her registry, and without any new registry, until her arrival in the home port, loses her privileges as an American vessel until such new registry is made.—United States v. Willing, Case No. 16,727; Willing v. United States, Id. 17,764; United States v. The Forrester, Id. 15,132.

The ship registry acts of the United States have not changed the common law as to the mode in which ships may be transferred, but only take from any ship not transferred according to these acts the charter of an American ship.—Weston v. Penniman, Case No. 17,455.

The navigation of a vessel under an American register after her sale to a foreign subject is a violation of section 27 of the registry act.—The Maria, Case No. 9,075.

A sale upon credit, and upon the condition that the purchaser shall not use the vessel until the purchase money is all paid, and that on default the seller may retake the vessel, is a sale within the registry laws.—The Maria, Case No. 9,075.

The registry acts do not require a disclosure of the equitable title of the vessel registered or enrolled, unless such title is in the subject of a foreign state.—Scudder v. Calais Steamboat Co., Case No. 12,566; Weston v. Penniman, Id. 17,455.

§ 5. Enrollment and license.

An enrollment and license duly executed does not require delivery to give it validity.—United States v. The Planter, Case No. 16,054.

The enrollment of a vessel is absolutely void where the oath of one of the owners has not been previously taken and subscribed in conformity with Act Feb. 18, 1793, § 2.—United States v. Bartlett, Case No. 14,532.

A canal boat without motive power of its own, towed through a canal by horses, and on navigable waters by a steamer, does not come within Act Feb. 18, 1793, in relation to vessels employed in the coasting trade.—United States v. The Ohio, Case No. 15,915; Same v. The Pennsylvania Canal Boat Nos. 68 and 69, Id. 16,027.

Act April 25, 1866, directing issue of enrollment and license, is mandatory, and an oath, under Act Dec. 31, 1792, § 4, is not necessary, and if false, without effect.—The Acorn, Case No. 29.

Ferryboats running under a ferry franchise granted by the state are not required to be enrolled under the act of 1852.—Elizabethport & N. Y. Ferry Co. v. United States, Case No. 4,362.

A license from the United States is not necessary to authorize the owners of a steamboat to employ her in ferrying.—United States v. The William Pope, Case No. 16,703.

Ferryboats, prior to Act July 7, 1838, were not required to be enrolled and licensed.—United States v. The William Pope, Case No. 16,703.

Act July 7, 1838, does not apply to vessels which were not theretofore required to be enrolled and licensed for the coasting trade.—United States v. The William Pope, Case No. 16,703.

A vessel enrolled or licensed under Act March 2, 1831, became under the protection of the laws of the United States, and bound to observe the revenue laws.—United States v. Sweeney, Case No. 16,426.

A voyage to a foreign port within the usual voyage of vessels licensed for the fisheries is not a "foreign voyage." Act Feb. 18, 1793, c. 8.—The Three Brothers, Case No. 14,009.

Registered vessels, not licensed, may be legally employed on a whaling voyage, and may come into American ports without being subject to the disabilities of foreign vessels.—United States v. Jenkins, Case No. 15,473.

Authority of collector to take bond under Act Feb. 18, 1793, providing for the enrollment and licensing of vessels employed in the coasting trade and fisheries.—United States v. Hipkin, Case No. 15,371.

Sufficiency of allegations of complaint in action against collector of customs for penalty under Act 1852, § 24.—Briscoe v. Hinman, Case No. 1,887.

§ 6. Duties and taxes.

British ships coming from ports in British colonies pay the full duties on foreign vessels.—United States v. Hathaway, Case No. 15,326.

A native citizen of the United States who resides in a foreign country may command a registered vessel without her right to the payment of domestic duties being affected thereby; but he cannot be the owner of such a vessel. Act Dec. 31, 1792.—United States v. Gillies, Case No. 15,206.

Character of vessel, as to whether or not it is a "canal boat," within the exemption from liability for marine hospital tax (Act July 20, 1846), how determined.—Buckley v. Brown, Case No. 2,092.

The United States may have an action against a vessel for tonnage duties.—The George T. Kemp, Case No. 5,341.

Where, by mistake, fraud, or accident, the tonnage and like duties payable by law are not paid by the owner of a vessel, an action of debt lies against him to recover them, but not against a mere consignee of the vessel.—United States v. Hathaway, Case No. 15,326.

See, also, "Commerce," § 3.

§ 7. Inspection—Vessels in general.

An unfinished vessel need not be inspected before being moved from one place to another in the course of her construction.—The Joshua Leviness, Case No. 7,549.

A voyage from the place where the vessel is constructed to another place, by direction of the inspectors, to enable her to be inspected, is not a violation of the navigation laws.—The Joshua Leviness, Case No. 7,549.

§ 8. —— Steam vessels.

It is the duty of the master or owner of a steam vessel engaged in carrying passengers for hire, whether regularly or otherwise, to make a written application for her inspection, under Rev. St. § 4417.—The Jacob G. Neafie, Case No. 7,156.

A steamboat employed in transporting passengers between ports in the same state is not within the inspection law of August 30, 1852.—United States v. The Seneca, Case No. 16,251.

A small steamer whose route was wholly within the state, though engaged in interstate commerce, held not subject to inspection and license under the federal laws.—The Daniel Ball, Case No. 3,564.

A vessel engaged in navigation wholly betwen towns in the same state, though used as a connecting line for transportation into other states, is not engaged in interstate commerce, and is not subject to inspection, under Act June 8, 1864.—The Bright Star, Case No. 1,880.

Such act does not extend the requirement of the act of 1852, concerning the inspection of hulls, etc., to vessels engaged in commerce wholly within a state.—The Bright Star, Case No. 1,880.

A boat licensed as a ferryboat, but frequently making trips beyond her ferry limits, is not exclusively engaged in ferrying, and is subject to inspection. Act 1852.—The Bright Star, Case No. 1,880.

Under Act July 7, 1838, more than six months must not elapse after one examination of a steamboat's boilers before another is made.—Virginia & M. Steam Nav. Co. v. United States, Case No. 16,973.

A small steam pleasure yacht, run occasionally by its owners, for amusement, on Buffalo Bayou, below Houston, Tex., is not a vessel navigating the public waters of the United States, in the meaning of the steam inspection law.—United States v. The Mollie, Case No. 15,795.

A vessel engaged in transporting merchandise is not subject to a penalty for failure to have her hull and boilers inspected under Act Aug. 30, 1852.—The Sun, Case No. 13,612.

In the case of a ferryboat running between Astoria and New York on the East river, proof of the carriage of passengers and merchandise is sufficient to throw upon claimants the burden of showing that such passengers and freight were not destined for other states. Act Feb. 28, 1871, § 11.—The Sunswick, Case No. 13,624.

§ 9. Regulation of vessels in foreign commerce.

The master of a vessel merely touching at a port without coming to an entry or transacting any business, need not deposit the ship's papers with the consul. Act Feb. 28, 1803, § 2.—Toler v. White, Case No. 14,079.

A whaling voyage is not a foreign voyage, within the meaning of Act 1803, c. 62, and a bond executed under, but not required by, nor in accordance with, such act, is a nullity.—Taber v. United States, Case No. 13,722.

A vessel arriving in the district of Barnstable from Nova Scotia, bound to New York, must make entry in such district, for New York is not "a more interior district," with reference to Barnstable, in the sense of Act 1799, c. 128, § 29.—United States v. Bearse, Case No. 14,552.

The report required to be made by the master of the arrival of his vessel (Act 1790, c. 35, § 16) must be made at the office of the chief officer of the customs.—United States v. Galacar, Case No. 15,181.

A license from a blockading squadron to a neutral vessel carrying provisions will not authorize refusal of clearance unless illicit intercourse is contemplated.—Bas v. Steele, Case No. 1,088.

Production of certificate of compliance with state inspection laws not necessary to entitle to clearance.—Bas v. Steele, Case No. 1,088.

Party failing to remove the suspicions by evidence in his power is not entitled to damages for refusal of clearance.—Bas v. Steele, Case No. 1,088.

Unless a proper manifest be tendered to the collector by the commander of the vessel, the collector is not bound to grant a clearance.—Bas v. Steel, Case No. 1,087.

In an action for damages for refusal of a clearance, an allegation that plaintiff was owner of vessel laden with a cargo is sufficient allegation as to ownership of cargo.—Bas v. Steele, Case No. 1,088.

§ 10. Regulation of vessels in domestic commerce.

The mackerel fishery and the cod fishery are "trades," for which the vessel must procure a license, under Act 1793, c. 8, § 32.—The Nymph, Cases Nos. 10,388, 10,389.

No registered ship or vessel, while she remains registered, can engage in the whale fisheries (Act 1793, c. 52); but she must surrender her register, and be enrolled and licensed for the fisheries. —United States v. Rogers, Case No. 16,189.

A fishing vessel licensed to catch codfish cannot catch mackerel, except as bait, or provisions for the crew.—United States v. The Paryntha Davis, Cases Nos. 16,003, 16,004; Same v. The Reindeer, Id. 16,145; The Nymph, Id. 10,388, 10,389.

A "foreign port or place," within the meaning of Act July 6, 1812, c. 129, § 1, is a port or place within the sovereignty of a foreign nation.—The Eliza, Case No. 4,346.

"Foreign voyage," in section 8 of the coasting act of February 18, 1793, means a voyage to some place in the jurisdiction of a foreign country, or at least without the waters of the United States.—The Lark, Case No. 8,090.

It is not a foreign voyage if the delivery of the cargo is made within United States waters, though to a British subject residing on the British side of the stream.—The Atlantic, Case No. 621.

§ 11. Penalties and forfeitures for violations of regulations—Fraudulent enrollment and registration.

A foreign vessel, which, after being wrecked, is rebuilt by a citizen of the United States, and enrolled as a new domestic vessel, is liable to forfeiture, as fraudulently enrolled, though she might have been enrolled as a foreign vessel wrecked in the United States and purchased and repaired by a citizen.—The Hud and Frank, Case No. 6,824.

A sum secured in the bond required by Act Dec. 31, 1792, § 7, is recoverable, under section 29, as a penalty or forfeiture, in case of a breach, and not as liquidated damages under a contract; hence the collector, naval officer, and surveyor are entitled to a moiety thereof.—United States v. Montell, Case No. 15,798.

A vessel enrolled and licensed under the act of 1793 for the coasting trade and fisheries is not subject to forfeiture under the act of 1792, § 16, for false swearing on application for registration.—United States v. The Sciota, Case No. 16,240.

The penalty for failure to exhibit an enrollment or license when demanded under Act Feb. 18, 1793, § 13, is not enforceable against a canal boat which was not enrolled or licensed.—The John J. Wiltsie, Case No. 7,353.

Under the act of July 18, 1866, § 24, the forfeiture of a vessel for fraudulently obtaining a certificate of registry is absolute.—The Mary Celeste, Case No. 9,202.

A forfeiture for obtaining an American register for a foreign vessel under a false and fraudulent statement is not defeated by a subsequent sale to a bona fide purchaser.—The Monte Christo, Case No. 9,719.

The forfeiture of a vessel for a fraudulent registry under Rev. St. § 4189, only takes effect from the seizure and condemnation, and a purchaser in good faith before seizure acquires a good title as against the United States.—The Kate Heron, Case No. 7,619.

The forfeiture of a vessel or its value, under Rev. St. § 4143, does not vest either in the government absolutely, but only from the time it elects which to take.—United States v. Hamilton, Case No. 15,289.

A proceeding in rem is the proper remedy for a violation of Act May 5, 1864, requiring steamers to have their names painted conspicuously on their wheel houses and pilot houses.—The Lewellen, Case No. 8,308.

The value of the vessel at the time of the commission of the illegal act governs the amount of penalty, irrespective of any subsequent change or loss.—United States v. Hamilton, Case No. 15,289.

Evidence to prove forfeiture for violation of registry laws as to false ownership must be taken as a whole, and if it support claimant's case, he need not introduce evidence of ownership.—The Acorn, Case No. 29.

Exemplified copy of record of naturalization sufficient prima facie proof of citizenship on information for violation of registry laws.—The Acorn, Case No. 29.

The proceeds of a forfeiture under Act July 18, 1866, are to be paid directly by the court, one-half to the collector of the port for the use of the United States, one-fourth to the informer, if any, and one-twelfth each to the collector, surveyor, and naval officer.—The Monte Christo, Case No. 9,720.

Vessels registered as American, and cargoes entered as such, were jointly owned by an alien and a citizen. Held, that the transaction was in violation of the laws of impost and tonnage, and an action would not lie between the parties to recover a balance of accounts.—Cambioso v. Maffet, Case No. 2,330.

§ 12. —— Violation of licenses for coasting trade and fisheries.

A vessel licensed for the codfishery (Act Feb. 18, 1793, § 32) may be forfeited for engaging in transporting goods.—The Active, Case No. 35.

A vessel licensed for the fisheries, which brings merchandise from a foreign port with the knowledge or consent of her officers, is engaged in other trade, and is liable to forfeiture under Act Feb. 18, 1793, § 32.—The Ocean Bride, Case No. 10,404.

The carrying of cattle from an island to the main land in going out or returning, when done gratuitously, is not an act of trading.—The Swallow, Case No. 13,666.

Taking on board in a foreign port, and bringing into this country, two barrels, without hire or reward, but as a favor to a friend, supposed to contain crockery, but really containing liquors, is not engaging in trade within the meaning of section 32 of the act of February 18, 1793 [1 Stat. 316], and does not subject the vessel and cargo to forfeiture.—The Willie G., Case No. 17,762.

Exportation of American produce in American vessels to British ports on the continent not enumerated as open ports not unlawful. Act March 1, 1823.—The Atlantic, Case No. 621.

A single act of trading will forfeit a vessel licensed for the fisheries. Act Feb. 18, 1793, § 32.—The Swallow, Case No. 13.666; The Ocean Bride, Id. 10,404. But see United States v. The Reindeer, Case No. 16,145.

A vessel sailing under a fishing license may touch at a foreign port, and procure supplies, without incurring forfeiture under the acts of congress.—The Willie G., Case No. 17,762; The Ocean Spray, Id. 10,412.

A vessel not enrolled and licensed, but engaged exclusively in the foreign trade on Lake Champlain, does not become forfeit by having foreign goods on board.—United States v. The Margaret Yates, Case No. 15,720.

A vessel licensed for the coasting trade, or fisheries, if engaged in an illegal traffic, is forfeitable, under Act Feb. 18, 1793, c. 3, § 32.—The Two Friends, Case No. 14.289; United States v. The Mars, Id. 15,723; The Resolution, Id. 11,709; The Julia, Id. 7,574; The Eliza, Id. 4,346.

The sixth section of the coasting act of February, 1793, c. 8, inflicts a forfeiture of the ship and cargo only in cases of unregistered vessels, found with foreign goods on board, in the coasting trade, and not of vessels licensed for the fisheries.—The Eliza, Case No. 4,346.

The forfeiture of a coasting vessel for proceeding on a foreign voyage does not attach until the vessel quits the port with intent to proceed on the foreign voyage. Act Feb. 18, 1793, c. 8, § 8.—The Friendship, Case No. 5,124; The Julia, Id. 7,573.

Under Act Feb. 18, 1793, c. 3, § 32, the cargo found on board at the time of seizure is forfeited, and not merely the cargo on board at the time of committing the offense.—The Two Friends, Case No. 14,289.

On a libel for forfeiture for breach of a license to catch codfish, by catching mackerel at a certain time and place, parol evidence is admissible of catching mackerel at other times and places during the trip, as showing the real business of the voyage.—United States v. The Paryntha Davis, Case No. 16,003.

A libel under Act Feb. 28, 1793, § 32, need not specify the particular trade in which the vessel was engaged at the time of the seizure.—United States v. The Paryntha Davis, Case No. 16,003.

§ 13. —— Violations of inspection regulations.
The owner of a river steamboat is not liable to the penalty for noninspection, where the last year's inspection expires while the vessel is in the service of the government under military impressment.—United States v. Moore, Case No. 15,801.

A vessel using a steam register adopted by the supervising inspectors is not liable to seizure under the act of February 28, 1861, although the same is defective and insufficient. —The Lac La Belle, Case No. 7,968.

The penalty imposed by Act July 7, 1838, for failure to have a steamboat's boilers inspected, cannot be recovered from the owners by a libel in admiralty.—Virginia & M. Steam Nav. Co. v. United States, Case No. 16.973.

§ 14. —— Failure to deliver register or report arrival.
The master is not liable for the penalty for the nondelivery of the temporary register (Act 1793, c. 52, § 3) unless there be an arrival at the port to which the vessel belonged, not by accident or from necessity, but intentionally, as one of the termini of the voyage.—United States v. Shackford, Case No. 16,262.

The mere touching at a port to land passengers when on the way to another port will not make a case within the act.—United States v. Shackford, Case No. 16,263.

Any voluntary arrival in a foreign port in the course of the voyage, although for advices only, is within Act 1803, c. 62, § 2.—Parsons v. Hunter, Case No. 10,778.

In a prosecution for not making the requisite report, the government has the burden of showing that it was not made at the proper office. Act 1790, c. 35, § 16.—United States v. Galacar, Case No. 15,181.

The certificate of a consul is not admissible to prove the arrival or departure of a vessel on an information for a penalty for failure to deposit the ship's register on arrival in the port. —Levy v. Burley, Case No. 8,300.

The penalty of $500 for not depositing the ship's register with the consul on arrival in a foreign port (Act 1803, c. 62, § 2), must be sued for within two years. Act 1790, c. 36, § 31.—Parsons v. Hunter, Case No. 10,778.

An action of debt in the name of the consul is the proper remedy. — Parsons v. Hunter, Case No. 10,778.

§ 15. —— Lien for penalties.
The United States has no lien upon or interest in a vessel for violation of Act 1838, § 2, and Act 1852, § 1, until a seizure, and proceedings to recover the penalty.—The Ranier, Case No. 11,565.

§ 16. Offenses against navigation laws.
What constitutes the casting away of a vessel under Act March 26, 1804, § 1.—United States v. Vanranst, Case No. 16,608.

The circuit court has no jurisdiction of the offense of willfully destroying a vessel (Act March 26, 1804, § 1), unless it was committed upon the high seas, and not merely upon waters within the jurisdiction of the United States.—United States v. Wilson, Case No. 16,-731.

Act June 7, 1872, § 62, making it an offense to board a vessel without permission of her master, before she has actually arrived at her destination, and has been moored held valid.—United States v. Anderson, Case No. 14,447.

Climbing on the rail of the vessel from a boat, in the act of entering on the vessel without permission, is within the prohibition.—United States v. Anderson, Case No. 14,447.

Such section is intended to protect foreign vessels as well as vessels of the United States. —United States v. Anderson, Case No. 14,447.

The captain is responsible where he failed at once, after a collision, to ascertain the extent of the injuries, and to run his vessel ashore if he finds she will go down.—United States v. Warner, Case No. 16,643.

Loss of life is not the necessary result of a collision where the persons indiscreetly took to floats or rafts instead of remaining upon the upper deck of the sinking steamer, as commanded, where it appears that they would have been safe; otherwise where in such case they acted with ordinary prudence and discretion under the circumstances.—United States v. Warner, Case No. 16,643.

Under Act March 3, 1825, § 23, which punishes a conspiracy to destroy a vessel or cargo with intent to defraud the underwriters, the burning of the vessel is not necessary to complete the offense.—United States v. Cole, Case No. 14,832.

The destruction of the vessel by the defendants, or by any one of them, identified with defendants as conspirators, is conclusive against them.—United States v. Cole, Case No. 14,832.

The intention to injure underwriters is an essential ingredient of the crime of conspiring to cast away, burn, or destroy a vessel (Act March 3, 1825, § 23), and must be averred in the indictment.—United States v. Hand, Case No. 15,296.

"Destroy," as used in the act, means to unfit the vessel for service, beyond hope of recovery by ordinary means.—United States v. Johns, Case No. 15,481.

The underwriters meant in such act are those upon the vessel, and not those upon the cargo.—United States v. Johns, Case No. 15,481.

The master of a vessel is indictable for willfully destroying her with intent to defraud the underwriters, though the owner be on board, and authorize or command her destruction.—United States v. Jacobson, Case No. 15,461.

The indictment must aver an intent to prejudice the underwriters, but an allegation of an intent of the owner to gain corrupt advantage to himself is surplusage.— United States v. Johns, Case No. 15,481.

That a ship is insured by a valued policy, beyond what the jury believe her true value, is no evidence that her owner insured her, and sent her out with intent to have her cast away, to obtain the insurance money.—United States v. Morris, Case No. 15,812.

The prosecutor must show that the insurance was valid; and, if made by a corporation, the act of incorporation must be shown.—United States v. Johns, Case No. 15,481.

In such case, evidence of the value of the property insured is admissible to show the inducement for destroying or preserving it.—United States v. Johns, Case No. 15,481.

On an indictment for setting fire to a vessel on the high seas, the mere possibility that the fire might have originated by accident or spontaneous combustion is no answer to strong probable evidence against the accused.—United States v. Lockman, Case No. 15,620.

A minor who ships on a vessel without the knowledge of his parents may be convicted of the offense of burning a vessel on the high seas.—United States v. Lockman, Case No. 15,620.

The offense of willfully setting fire to a ship at sea, created by Act July 29, 1850, § 7, is sufficiently charged in the words of the statute, without adding the averment that the offense was feloniously committed. — United States v. McAvoy, Case No. 15,654.

Jurisdiction of offense of revolt and mutiny, see "Criminal Law," §§ 10, 11.
Offenses by seamen, see "Seamen," §§ 175–183, 187, 188.

II. TITLE TO AND EMPLOYMENT OF VESSEL IN GENERAL.

Jurisdiction of claims to title or possession of vessel, see "Admiralty," § 12.
—— over disputes between vessel owners, see "Admiralty," § 9.
—— over shipbuilding contracts, see "Admiralty," § 20.
Lien of part owners on vessel, see "Maritime Liens," § 30.
Release of vessel on bond, see "Admiralty," § 70.
Stipulations in suits between owners of vessel, see "Admiralty," § 68.

§ 17. Nature of ownership of vessels.

A joint interest in a vessel is a tenancy in common, carrying with it the privileges and limitations of that interest at common law.—Bradshaw v. The Sylph, Case No. 1,791; Revens v. Lewis, Id. 11,711.

§ 18. Title under contract for building vessels.

Title to vessel building, not to be fully paid for until completed and delivered, is in the builder.—The Abby Whitman, Case No. 15.

Merely making part payment under a contract for construction of a vessel does not give the contractee title thereto.—The Sam Slick, Case No. 12,283.

Where the person for whom a vessel is contracted to be built superintends her construction, and makes payments as the work progresses, he is regarded as the real owner.—Scudder v. Calais Steamboat Co., Case No. 12,565.

The assignment by the builders of a vessel of the moneys to become due on the building contract invests the assignee with no such proprietary interest as will enable him to appear as claimant and defend.—The Revenue Cutter No. 1, Case No. 11,713.

Under a contract to build and deliver a vessel after a successful trial trip at sea, though the work is approved, and payments made as it progresses, the title does not pass until the final completion and delivery.—The Revenue Cutter No. 2, Case No. 11,714.

A vessel, building under a contract with the United States to build and deliver her after a successful trial trip at sea, is subject to process to enforce a lien for materials furnished while in the hands of the contractor, though the United States kept a superintendent at the vessel, with power to reject or approve materials used in her construction.—The Revenue Cutter No. 2, Case No. 11,714.

Under the condition that the United States might complete the work, at the expense of the contractor, upon his failure to perform, held, that the government would take possession merely as the agent of the contractor, to finish the vessel for and on his account.—The Revenue Cutter No. 2, Case No. 11,714.

§ 19. Evidence of title.

The statement of title of a vessel in the customhouse documents is not conclusive on third parties.—Chickering v. Hatch, Case No. 2,671.

The mere statement of the record owner of a vessel, who had previously sworn that he was the owner, is not sufficient to show that he is not interested in her.—Casey v. Leary, Case No. 2,497.

An agreement as to title and possession of a vessel will govern the rights of the parties, rather than prior shipping articles made on the same day.—The Countess of Dufferin, Case No. 3,280.

The register of a vessel is not, per se, evidence of ownership.—Bas v. Steele, Case No. 1,088.

The register of a vessel is not evidence of ownership unless confirmed by evidence to show that it was made by the authority or assent of the person named in it, who is sought to be charged as owner.—Scudder v. Calais Steamboat Co., Case No. 12,565.

An American registry is not even prima facie evidence of American ownership on prosecution for an offense committed on board a vessel owned in whole or in part by a citizen of the United States.—United States v. Brune, Case No. 14,677.

§ 20. Rights of owners in general.

Members of a voluntary association, who purchase a vessel and stores in the name of certain persons as their agents, have a right to a decree for title and possession, except as to property purchased without their authority.—The Taranto, Case No. 13,751.

An attachment of the vessel at common law by a creditor of the agents in a suit against them will not affect the right of the real owners to a decree for title and possession.—The Taranto, Case No. 13,751.

§ 21. Rights, powers, and liabilities of part owners—Rights and powers of majority.

The majority owners have a right to govern and control the employment of the vessel, and give directions as to her repairs and supplies. —Revens v. Lewis, Case No. 11,711.

The majority owners of a vessel have a right to remove one master and appoint another.—The Lizzie Merry, Case No. 8,423.

The majority owners in value may fit out the vessel against consent of the minority, but they must communicate their design.—Willings v. Blight, Case No. 17,765.

Where the opinion of the majority owners prevents the employment of the vessel, they must yield to the minority owners who desire its employment.—Tunno v. The Betsina, Case No. 14,236.

The majority owner of a foreign vessel merely touching at an American port en route held entitled to recover possession against an alien minority owner acting as master.—Diedman v. The Joseph Hume, Case No. 3,901.

§ 22. —— Right to possession.

Possession taken by a joint and equal owner of a vessel while she was improperly left by the other owner without an attendant will not be interfered with by the court.—The Ocean, Case No. 10,401.

§ 23. —— Division of earnings.

The share of a part owner in a vessel or the proceeds of a voyage is not under a lien in law to pay another part owner for his extra advances.—Macy v. De Wolf, Case No. 8,933.

A part owner of a vessel, dissenting from a voyage and receiving a stipulation from the other owners for the vessel's safe return, is not entitled to compensation for the use of his part of the vessel during the voyage.—The Marengo, Case No. 9,065.

A part owner, who will neither sell at a reasonable appraisement, nor make advances for outfit, cannot legally demand freight, but his share of the vessel will be secured to him.—Willings v. Blight, Case No. 17,765.

§ 24. —— Rights of minority to security.

A dissenting minority owner is entitled to a stipulation to secure his interest in case of a loss on a voyage undertaken against his wishes. —Tunno v. The Betsina, Case No. 14,236; Fox v. Paine, Id. 5,014.

A part owner, though his name is omitted from the registry and enrollment procured by the others, held entitled to ask security for the safety of the vessel on a voyage not approved by him.—Fox v. Paine, Case No. 5,014.

Minority owner held entitled to security for the return of the vessel, though he did not dissent from the voyage until the vessel was nearly ready for sea, where he had previously refused to share expenses of the outfit.—The Marengo, Case No. 9,066.

Intemperance of the master is a sufficient ground to require the majority owners to give the dissenting owners a stipulation for the safe return of vessel from a proposed foreign voyage. —Bragdon v. The Kitty Simpson, Case No. 1,-798.

Admiralty cannot require majority owners to give a bond to the minority owners to cover indebtedness of the vessel to them, or to indemnify them against loss in her future employment.—The Ocean Belle, Case No. 10,402.

§ 25. —— Stipulations for return.

A stipulation given to a minority owner for the safe return of a vessel "from the said voyage to the port at New York" is not satisfied by her return to Boston, from which port she is sent out without objections from the minority owner, and lost.—The Susan E. Voorhis, Case No. 13,633.

The amount due upon an accounting between the majority and minority owners cannot be applied to diminish the liability of the stipulators on their bond.—The Susan E. Voorhis, Case No. 13,633.

§ 26. —— Actions between part owners.

A sale will be ordered where moiety owners cannot agree as to control and employment of vessel.—Burr v. The St. Thomas, Case No. 2,-194a; The Seneca, Id. 12,670; The Vincennes, Id. 16,944; The Annie H. Smith, Id. 420. But see Lewis v. Kinney, Case No. 8,325.

A part owner, whose interest does not exceed a moiety, cannot demand the entire possession or sale of the vessel in invitum against his co-owner.—Bradshaw v. The Sylph, Case No. 1,-791.

A libel by moiety owners for sale of a vessel cannot be met by a motion founded on affidavits to continue possession of vessel on giving security.—Burr v. The St. Thomas, Case No. 2,195.

Compulsory sale of vessel not ordered on application of one owner, where the other equal part owner in possession offered to stipulate for her safe return from the voyage contemplated.—Davis v. The Seneca, Case No. 3,650.

Where the equal half ownership and disagreement is denied, claimants will be allowed to retain possession, pending the hearing, on giving security.—Burr v. The St. Thomas, Case No. 2,195.

Where the title of a vessel could not be determined pending accounting between the parties, possession was awarded to the master, who was part owner, on his own stipulation.—Coverdale v. The North America, Case No. 3,289.

Necessary averments and proofs to support a libel between co-owners for supplies furnished ship's husband, or against mortgagee therefor.—Dodge v. Leary, Case No. 3,952b.

§ 27. —— Rights, duties, and liabilities as to third persons.

An individual part owner of a vessel has no power, because of being an owner in common with others, to bind the latter in relation to matters extra the necessary preservation of the property itself.—Montell v. The William H. Rutan, Case No. 9,724.

One owner is bound by a bona fide sale by a co-owner, though not evidenced by a bill of sale, where he has previously authorized it, or has accepted part of the purchase money.—Bradshaw v. The Sylph, Case No. 1,791.

The sale of an entire vessel by one part owner in common does not authorize his co-owner to treat the sale as a tortious conversion.—Bradshaw v. The Sylph, Case No. 1,791.

A supercargo dealing solely with the ostensible owners of the whole cargo may retain out of the whole proceeds a general balance, due him from them, as against a part owner whose interest was not disclosed to him.—Luckett v. West, Case No. 8,593.

The giving of credit to one part owner and the taking of his separate note, where the other owners settle with him on the basis thereof, bars recovery against them by the creditor.—Macy v. De Wolf, Case No. 8,933.

One of two part owners in a vessel run for their common profit cannot contract with a shipper, without the consent of the other, to apply freight earned on his individual debt.—Donovan v. Dymond, Case No. 3,993.

The part owners may jointly maintain a suit in admiralty to recover the freight, notwithstanding such contract.—Donovan v. Dymond, Case No. 3,993.

A part owner may sustain a petitory suit against a merely fraudulent possessor, without joining the other part owners, and have a decree for possession on proving his title.—The Friendship, Case No. 5,123.

Part owners are liable for the torts of one of their number while acting as master in the execution of the business in which the boat is engaged.—Taylor v. Brigham, Case No. 13,781.

In the case of a purchase of a return cargo with proceeds of the outward cargo, the master has no right to consign the return cargo to one only of such owners; and, where it is so consigned, the consignee has no lien on it for any separate and distinct demand against the other tenants in common.—Jackson v. Robinson, Case No. 7,144.

§ 28. Managing owner, ship's husband, or agent.

A part owner, acting as master, has no right, as between the other part owners and himself, to subject their interests to expense, when forbidden to do so.—Revens v. Lewis, Case No. 11,711.

The implied authority of a part owner, acting as master, to do everything necessary for the employment of the vessel and her equipment, ceases when it is revoked, or anything is done to rebut the presumption.—Revens v. Lewis, Case No. 11,711.

The right of a part owner of a vessel under agreement with the others to sail the vessel as master is a personal right, and cannot be transferred with a sale of his interest.—The Lizzie Merry, Case No. 8,423.

Where one of the owners of a vessel gave his note for supplies furnished by libelant, and on a settlement charged the master, who was the other owner, with his portion thereof, the master was not thereby relieved from liability to libelant.—The Chusan, Case No. 2,717.

Part owners of a vessel are not partners, and each may maintain a separate action against the ship's husband for his proportion of the freight; and this though he be one of the part owners.—Magruder v. Bowie, Case No. 8,964.

The master, who is a part owner, will be presumed to be bound by the provisions of the charter party, though it is not signed by him; and on the voyage he has no power to exercise the rights of a part owner.—Tyson v. Belmont, Case No. 14,316.

In such case the master has no power, as part owner, to submit to arbitration a controversy as to the amount of freight due.—Tyson v. Belmont, Case No. 14,316.

A master being a part owner in a vessel is liable in damages for issuing a fraudulent bill of lading to the assignee in good faith, which may be recovered against the vessel to the extent of his interest therein.—Montell v. The William H. Rutan, Case No. 9,724.

§ 29. Sale—Requisites and validity in general.

The title to a ship built in the United States for alien residents abroad passes like any other chattel without writing.—The Active, Case No. 34.

The title to a vessel may pass by delivery under a parol contract.—Scudder v. Calais Steamboat Co., Case No. 12,565.

No coaster can be sold in a foreign port unless her license be previously surrendered (Act Feb. 18, 1793); and her American character is not changed by the transfer.—United States v. The Hawke, Case No. 15,331.

The mere debiting of an interest in a vessel on the settlement of accounts between parties is not of itself a transfer of the vessel.—Peterson v. United States, Case No. 11,036.

The sale of a licensed schooner to a British subject, followed by an order to the master to make delivery to him, and the presentation of a request for clearance by the captain, which recites the sale, and is signed and sealed by the British consul, though the delivery is not yet actually made, is a "transfer." Act Feb. 18, 1793.—United States v. Vermont, Case No. 16,618a.

The sale of a British vessel, at Alaska, after ratification of the treaty of purchase with Russia, but before the country was turned over to the American government, for the purpose of having such vessel thereby become an American bottom under the treaty, held fraudulent.—The Fideliter, Case No. 4,756.

A sale under the authority of the consul is conclusively presumed fraudulent, where the purchase money was secured by his note, and the title transferred to trustees for the benefit of his wife.—Riley v. The Obell Mitchell, Case No. 11,839.

The master of a whaler wrecked on a desert island, and escaping in a small boat to Oahu, purchased a brig by means of a draft on the owners of the wrecked vessel, and rescued the crew and oil left on the island. Held, that the drawee of the draft, on its acceptance and payment, became the owner of the brig, and was entitled to compensation for such service over and above his expenses and risk.—The Holder Borden, Case No. 6,600.

Where a vessel is assigned while at sea, and is taken possession of by the assignee in a reasonable time and manner after her return, it is sufficient delivery and possession as against other creditors attaching the vessel before such assignment is made.—Wheeler v. Sumner, Case No. 17,501.

The assignment being for the benefit of the preferred creditors unconditionally, and without any stipulation for a release or otherwise, the law would in such case presume the assent of the creditors.—Wheeler v. Sumner, Case No. 17,501.

It is not necessary to the validity of an assignment to indemnify the assignee for indorsements made, and to pay certain other creditors named, that such creditors assent to it at the time, if they assented before other rights attached.—Wheeler v. Sumner, Case No. 17,501.

§ 30. —— Who may transfer title.

A power of attorney authorizing a person to receive a vessel from her commander, and to sell her, does not give the right to sell the vessel until possession is delivered.—Burckle v. The Tapperheten, Case No. 2,141.

One having neither the actual nor constructive possession of a vessel, nor the right of possession, cannot transfer a good title thereto.—Burckle v. The Tapperheten, Case No. 2,141.

§ 31. —— Bill of sale.

By the general maritime law, a transfer of a ship should be evidence of a bill of sale.—Weston v. Penniman, Case No. 17,455.

Equitable ownership in a vessel, or ownership pro hac vice, need not be shown by a bill of sale or registry.—Hall v. Hudson, Case No. 5,935.

The execution of valid and legal papers conveying title to a vessel is prima facie evidence of a consideration.—Nicoll v. United States, Case No. 10,258.

A bill of sale, made without consideration, for the purpose of fraudulently obtaining an American register, is a nullity, and the vessel is subject to forfeiture on the oath of ownership by the vendee.—The Fideliter, Case No. 4,756.

The inaccurate recital of the certificate of registry in a bill of sale does not avoid the sale, but merely deprives the vessel of her American character.—Philips v. Ledley, Case No. 11,096.

An agent or broker who purchases a vessel, taking a bill of sale in his own name to secure repayment of money advanced by him to pay the price and interest and commissions, is a mortgagee, not the owner, of the vessel.—The Panama, Case No. 10,703.

A sale of a steamboat with all appurtenances includes a new ash pan previously purchased and delivered to the vendor, but not yet placed on board.—Newberry v. The Fashion, Case No. 10,-143.

The circuit court will administer equitable relief in a case where it is sought to recover back interests in vessels conveyed under a usurious contract.—Graham v. Sheken, Case No. 5,675.

Where a reconveyance is impossible, the value will be awarded.—Graham v. Sheken, Case No. 5,675.

§ 32. —— Conditional sales.

Under a contract for the sale of a vessel, where the title is to pass upon the performance of a condition at a future day, the vendee to have possession in the meantime, the vendor is entitled to possession, where the condition is not performed.—The Oriole, Case No. 10,574.

In a suit for such possession of a vessel it is not necessary to go into all the equities, but only to ascertain the legal title.—The Oriole, Case No. 10,574.

A bill of sale of a ship and cargo merely by way of mortgage or security, if bona fide made, is good as against creditors, though possession is not taken by the purchaser.—D'Wolf v. Harris, Case No. 4,221.

A bill of sale of one-half of a vessel as collateral security for a debt, with a provision that the mortgagors may keep possession and use the vessel for their own benefit until default of payment, is valid as an immediate conditional sale.—Winsor v. McLellan, Case No. 17,887.

The legal title and right to immediate possession of a vessel under an absolute bill of sale given to secure a loan, and registered as a mortgage, is vested in the mortgagee.—The J. B. Lunt, Case No. 7,246; Same v. Merritt, Id. 7,247.

§ 33. —— Sale to alien.

A sale to a corporation organized and existing under the laws of a foreign country is a sale "to a subject or citizen of a foreign prince or state" (Act Dec. 31, 1792, § 16), regardless of the citizenship of the shareholders.—The Maria, Case No. 9,075.

The sale of a registered or licensed vessel to a foreigner is not void, but the vessel is liable to forfeiture.—Phillips v. Ledley, Case No. 11,-096; The Two Friends, Id. 14,289.

The forfeiture takes place at the moment of sale or transfer to an alien, and any subsequent judgment of forfeiture relates back to that time. —The Florenzo, Case No. 4,886.

The vessels included within Act 1831, § 3, are not subject to forfeiture under Act 1792, § 16, relating to sales to foreigners without delivering up the certificate of registry.—United States v. The Sciota, Case No. 16,240.

A vessel which has been enrolled and licensed under the act of 1831, but whose license has become void by a subsequent sale, is no longer a licensed and enrolled vessel, so as to be subject to forfeiture by her sale in whole or in part to a foreigner in violation of section 32.—United States v. The Sciota, Case No. 16,240.

An enrolled vessel sailing under a fishing license is not liable to forfeiture because her part owner, a citizen of the United States, resides in a foreign country.—The Henry, Case No. 6,373.

A bona fide purchaser of the whole interest in a vessel, subsequent to a forfeiture incurred by a sale to an alien (Act Dec. 31, 1792, § 16), is not within the proviso of such section.—The Florenzo, Case No. 4,886.

The title of the alien purchaser, if he acquires any, is divested eo instanti by the statute, and he has left in him no interest which can be seized on execution.—The Florenzo, Case No. 4,886.

A levy on the forfeited property, under an execution against the alien, previous to the prosecution of the forfeiture, will not prevent the forfeiture.—The Florenzo, Case No. 4,886.

A vessel condemned for violation of the law, and sold under order of the court, may become foreign property.—United States v. The Hawke, Case No. 15,331.

§ 34. —— Rights and liabilities of purchasers in general.

One who purchases a vessel sold under process of state courts with knowledge that a proceeding in admiralty was pending against the vessel is not entitled to an order requiring the marshal to deliver possession of the vessel.—The Circassian, Case No. 2,721.

The refusal to fulfill a contract of purchase does not render the possession of the vendee tortious, so as to prevent him making a contract with third persons binding on the vessel.—Jackson v. The Julia Smith, Case No. 7,136.

The taking by a creditor of negotiable paper from the shipwright, in ignorance of the transfer of the vessel, will not impair his right to proceed against the purchaser.—Leslie v. Glass, Case No. 8,275.

In a suit to recover possession of a vessel which has been delivered under a contract for its sale, on performance of a condition, and where the condition has been broken, it is not necessary to go into all the equities, but only to ascertain the legal title.—The Oriole, Case No. 10,574.

§ 35. —— Rights of bona fide purchasers.

A bona fide purchaser of a vessel from the owner of record will be protected as against a prior unrecorded transfer.—The Superior, Case No. 13,626; Bogart v. The John Jay, Id. 1,597.

A purchaser at a sheriff's sale, without notice, or a bona fide purchaser for value from the legal owner of record, will be protected as against a sheriff who has allowed the attached vessel to escape, and has paid a claim for supplies and repairs subsequently furnished.—The Superior, Case No. 13,627.

A master who, with knowledge of a sale to an innocent purchaser, fails to make his claim known, cannot recover for wages theretofore accrued.—The Richmond, Case No. 11,795a.

An arrangement between the mortgagor and mortgagee that the former is to remain in possession of the vessel until the latter has a reasonable opportunity to enforce the mortgage will not affect the rights of bona fide purchasers for valuable consideration.—The Romp, Case No. 12,030.

The mortgagee will not be allowed to set up any priority over a purchaser without notice at a sale of the vessel at public auction for a valuable consideration, who bought after inspecting her papers.—The Romp, Case No. 12,030.

A vessel registered as American, when owned in part by a foreigner, cannot be libeled as forfeited after her sale to a person innocent of the fraud.—United States v. The Anthony Mangin, Case No. 14,461.

A statute sale, if fraudulent, will not bind the owner unless in favor of a bona fide purchaser for a valuable consideration, without notice, actual or constructive, or the fraud.—The Tilton, Case No. 14,054.

The forcible taking possession of a vessel is a maritime tort, and no rights can be acquired thereunder by a purchaser from the wrongdoer. —Thurber v. The Fannie, Case No. 14,014.

§ 36. Leases.

A lessee of a vessel which explodes from some hidden defect is not liable to the lessor.—Stewart v. Western Union R. Co., Case No. 13,438.

A stipulation in a lease of a vessel that she was received in good condition estops the lessee, where she is lost by explosion, from defending against a suit by the owner on the ground of any defects which were known or might have been known by him or his servants.—Stewart v. Western Union R. Co., Case No. 13,438.

Where a vessel is lost by explosion while in the possession of a lessee, and he is held liable for her value, he may be charged with interest from the date of the explosion.—Stewart v. Western Union R. Co., Case No. 13,438.

§ 37. Mortgages—Requisites and validity.

Remedy in admiralty, see "Admiralty," §§ 39, 64.

A shipbuilder may make a valid contract hypothecating his interest in the vessel before he commences building.—The Hull of a New Ship, Case No. 6,859.

A mortgage on a vessel to secure necessary advances held valid, though not recorded until after an assignment to an assignee in insolvency proceedings.—Leland v. Medora, Case No. 8,237.

Such mortgage is not fraudulent because unaccompanied by possession, where, by agreement in the mortgage, an immediate voyage by the owners was contemplated.—Leland v. Medora, Case No. 8,237.

The mortgage is good security though part of the consideration was not money actually advanced for the voyage.—Leland v. Medora, Case No. 8,237.

A later mortgage first recorded will be postponed to a prior unrecorded mortgage, of which the mortgagee had notice.—The John T. Moore, Case No. 7,430.

The fact that such prior mortgage could not be registered for want of a proper acknowledgment will not postpone it to the subsequent mortgage taken by one with notice thereof.—The John T. Moore, Case No. 7,430.

§ 38. —— Rights and liabilities of mortgagees.

The mortgagee of a vessel, before possession delivered, is not responsible for repairs made by the mortgagor; nor is he entitled to the earnings of the vessel.—Philips v. Ledley, Case No. 11,096; Macy v. DeWolf, Id. 8,933.

A mortgagee who after taking possession of the vessel, and while she is under arrest for wages, promises to pay outstanding wages earned while he had title to her, becomes thereby personally liable.—Kenneway v. The Wickford, Case No. 7,709.

Foreign attachments are not proceedings in rem, and the sale of a vessel on adjudication therein will not give the purchaser a title superior to that of a prior mortgagee.—Cole v. The Brandt, Case No. 2,978.

The mortgagee of a vessel to secure a contingent liability as indorser upon a note held to have a right to intervene to protect his interest in a libel against the vessel for wages.—The Dubuque, Case No. 4,110.

To charge a mortgagee personally, as owner of a vessel, there must be some unequivocal act of possession.—Stalker v. The Henry Kneeland, Case No. 13,282.

Master with knowledge of mortgage, allowing monthly wages to accumulate, not entitled to proceeds of vessel as against mortgagee.—Adams v. The Wyoming, Case No. 71.

Registry notice in New York of a chattel mortgage on a vessel does not affect third persons unless the owner continued to reside in the state. —Thomas v. The Kosciusko, Case No. 13,901.

A renewal notice in New York subsequent to Act July 29, 1850, is ineffectual unless the mortgage be also recorded in the office of the collector of the port.—Thomas v. The Kosciusko, Case No. 13,901.

Marshaling of assets in the case of a mortgage on one-half, and a subsequent mortgage upon three-fourths, of the vessel.—The Edith, Case No. 4,282.

Priorities of mortgage and other liens, see "Maritime Liens," § 53.
Right of mortgagee to intervene in admiralty, see "Admiralty," § 64.

§ 39. Recording conveyances.

The recording or nonrecording of a conveyance of a vessel does not affect the question of the personal liability of the owner.—Mott v. Ruckman, Case No. 9,881.

Quære, whether the law of 1850, § 1, in relation to recording the transfer of vessels, is constitutional.—The Martha Washington, Case No. 9,148.

Act July 29, 1850, requiring the recording of conveyances, etc., of vessels, does not give any force or validity to a domestic mortgage which it has not at the place of its execution.—Srodes v. The Collier, Case No. 13,272a.

A mortgage recorded as prescribed by Act July 29, 1850, is binding upon all parties.—The Grace Greenwood, Case No. 5,652.

Rev. St. § 4192, requiring the conveyance or mortgage of a vessel to be recorded, is inapplicable to a vessel which has never been enrolled or licensed.—Thurber v. The Fannie, Case No. 14,014.

The office of the collector at the home port is the proper place for the register of a conveyance or hypothecation of a vessel.—Blanchard v. The Martha Washington, Case No. 1,513; The John T. Moore, Id. 7,430.

The filing of mortgages on canal boats in New York depends wholly upon the special act of New York of April 28, 1864.—The Independence, Case No. 7,013.

A person purchasing with notice of a prior mortgage is not a purchaser in good faith, within the meaning of the act.—The Independence, Case No. 7,013.

A person having notice enough to put him on inquiry will be held to have notice of everything to which such inquiry would have led.—The Independence, Case No. 7,013.

The grantor in a bill of sale cannot be prejudiced by the grantee's neglect to record it, and cannot be made personally liable for negligent navigation after his interest has ceased.—Hurd v. Reeve, Case No. 6,917.

§ 40. Agreements of consortship.

Agreement of consortship by masters of vessels will be considered general unless limited by special understanding when made.—Cash v. One Thousand Two Hundred and Seventy-Seven Dollars and Five Cents, Case No. 2,498.

Though the interest of a vessel in a consortship may be small, this will never be presumed, but the general principle governs, that the interest of the vessel controls.—Cash v. One Thousand Two Hundred and Seventy-Seven Dollars and Five Cents, Case No. 2,498.

In the absence of stipulation in an agreement of consortship, it can be terminated only by voluntary dissolution and notice.—Cash v. One Thousand Two Hundred and Seventy-Seven Dollars and Five Cents, Case No. 2,498.

An agreement of consortship is for and on account of the vessels, though made by the masters.—Cash v. One Thousand Two Hundred and Seventy-Seven Dollars and Five Cents, Case No. 2,498.

Burden of proving that an agreement of consortship is limited is on the party alleging it.—Cash v. One Thousand Two Hundred and Seventy-Seven Dollars and Five Cents, Case No. 2,498.

Persons joining or becoming interested in a vessel during an agreement of consortship enter on the relation, and assume the risk of profit or loss.—Cash v. One Thousand Two Hundred and Seventy-Seven Dollars and Five Cents, Case No. 2,498.

Change of owners, masters, or crew of one vessel without notice to the other party cannot affect an agreement of consortship.—Cash v. One Thousand Two Hundred and Seventy-Seven Dollars and Five Cents, Case No. 2,498.

III. CHARTERS.

Jurisdiction of action on charter party, see "Admiralty," §§ 14, 15.
Parol or extrinsic evidence as to charter parties, see "Evidence," § 69.

§ 41. Nature of contract.

Under a charter party giving the whole capacity of the ship, the owner is not a common carrier, but a bailee for hire.—Lamb v. Parkman, Case No. 8,020.

Where the charter operates as a demise of the vessel, the charterer becomes the carrier, and the master his agent, in contracting for the carriage of merchandise; otherwise, where the charter operates merely as a contract of affreightment.—Donahoe v. Kettell, Case No. 3,-980.

§ 42. What law governs.

A charter party to load at a certain place is, in contemplation of law, made at such place.—Balfour v. Wilkins, Case No. 807.

§ 43. Authority to make charter.

Where the vessel owners have no agent in a foreign port, the master has power to make a charter party.—Hurry v. Hurry's Assignees, Case No. 6,922.

The master has no power to enter into a charter in a foreign port for the purpose of giving a creditor of the vessel owner a security for his debt.—Hurry v. Hurry's Assignees, Case No. 6,922.

The vessel is not liable for misrepresentation or concealment of facts by her master or owner in respect to her tonnage or capacity on the making of a charter party.—The Eli Whitney, Case No. 4,345.

A charter party made by agents who were part owners, to enable an individual creditor to repay himself out of earnings, is void as against the vessel and other owners.—The A. M. Bliss, Case No. 274.

The master cannot vary the contract made by the owners with the charterer.—The Salem's Cargo, Case No. 12,248.

A broker negotiating a charter cannot afterwards assert a claim so as to interfere with the voyage, but may enforce it if the vessel is properly arrested by a third party.—Lachenmeyer v. The Angelina, Case No. 7,967.

§ 44. Requisites and validity of charter party.

The cardinal elements of a charter party are a definite voyage to be performed and a definite compensation to be paid by the charterer.—Stalker v. The Henry Kneeland, Case No. 13,-282.

An agreement for a charter party to be made at a later period held to amount to a present charter party, though a more formal instrument was contemplated.—The Tribune, Case No. 14,-171.

Where there was a failure to give security as required, held, that the charter was not completely executed, though the vessel had gone to take in coal for the voyage.—The H. W. Edye, Case No. 6,964.

The making of a charter party held still subject to the condition to furnish a satisfactory guarantor, though duly executed, and guarantied by the person offered as guarantor. Case No. 4,519a reversed.—Erlen v. The Brewer, Case No. 4,519.

A charter to carry Chinese coolies between foreign ports is not void on the ground of immorality, when made before the law prohibited American vessels from engaging in such business.—The Hound, Case No. 6,731.

Where, during a blockade of the Chesapeake by the British, a vessel was chartered with a Sidmouth license, though such license was not expressed in the charter party, held, that the contract was invalid.—Wilson v. Le Roy, Case No. 17,817.

Notwithstanding a charter party is invalid, the charterer may, by subsequent negotiation, be liable as on a new contract to reimburse the shipowner for time and expenses incurred in attempting performance.—Wilson v. Le Roy, Case No. 17,817.

§ 45. Cancellation, surrender, or rescission.

The implied covenant that a vessel shall sail for the port of lading within a reasonable time, and with reasonable dispatch, is not a condition precedent, and the charterer cannot cancel the contract unless the delay is so great as to frustrate the voyage intended.—Fearing v. Cheeseman, Case No. 4,710.

A failure to proceed "with all possible dispatch" from a certain port to the port of loading gives claim for damages, but no right to avoid contract, where object of voyage not wholly frustrated.—Bangs v. Lowber, Case No. 840.

Charterers who have voluntarily surrendered possession to the owners have no right to reclaim it.—Bergen v. The Taminend, Case No. 1,339.

§ 46. Construction and operation in general.

An agreement purporting to be a charter party, but not containing the essential elements, where loose and informal, may be aided by parol evidence.—Stalker v. The Henry Kneeland, Case No. 13,282; The Eli Whitney, Id. 4,345.

An agreement to assign to one of the parties all the freight earned by a vessel up to certain specified sums, and one-half of all above them, is not a charter party.—Stalker v. The Henry Kneeland, Case No. 13,282.

The meaning of "rainy day" in charter party may be shown by surrounding circumstances, including usage of port or trade.—Balfour v. Wilkins, Case No. 807.

A representation that the ship would sail for the port of lading on a day certain, made in correspondence with reference to its charter, held to amount to a warranty, and, where the ship did not sail until later, charterer not bound.—Desbon v. Fosdick, Case No. 3,819.

A stipulation that the charter should commence when the vessel was ready to load does not mean that the charter party does not attach until the vessel arrived at the place of loading.—Fearing v. Cheeseman, Case No. 4,710.

Under the charter of a vessel to carry a load of coal from Baltimore to Pawtucket, charterers to pay three dollars a ton, "with towage from Providence to Pawtucket," the charterers are not bound to furnish the towboat.—Keen v. Audenried, Case No. 7,639.

As between the shipowner and charterer, the charter party, and not the bill of lading, determines the contract of shipment.—Two Hundred and Sixty Hogsheads of Molasses, Case No. 14,296; Higgins v. Watson, Id. 6,470.

The charter party alone will be looked to as the contract of the parties, where the consignee of the cargo had notice by reference to it in the bill of lading.—The Ethel, Case No. 4,540; Strong v. Certain Quantity of Wheat, Id. 13,541.

§ 47. Charterer as owner for the voyage. A stipulation to victual and man the vessel, pay all port charges, and deliver her to owner at end of voyage, makes charterer owner for the voyage, though one of the owners was named as master.—Drinkwater v. The Spartan, Case No. 4,085; Winter v. Simonton, Id. 17,894.

But the general owner is owner for the voyage if the vessel is navigated at his expense, and by his master and crew, and he retains the possession and management during the voyage.—The Volunteer, Case No. 16,991; In re Certain Logs of Mahogany, Id. 2,559; Kleine v. Catara, Id. 7,869; Richardson v. Winsor, Id. 11,795.

The consignee of a charterer, who deals with him in that character, must be presumed to know the contents of the charter party.—Shaw v. Thompson, Case No. 12,726.

§ 48. Seaworthiness and fitness of vessel. In a charter party under seal there is an implied covenant that the vessel is seaworthy, and fit for the service for which she is hired, and the charterer may aver such warranty, and declare on it in covenant.—Wilson v. Griswold, Case No. 17,806.

Under a contract where the charter party is to commence when the vessel is at the port of lading and ready to receive cargo and notice thereof is given the charterer, there is no implied warranty or condition precedent that the vessel is seaworthy at the date of the charter.—The Star of Hope, Case No. 13,312.

The owner of the ship who charters her to another tacitly agrees that she is in suitable condition for the use to which she is to be put.—Werk v. Leathers, Case No. 17,415.

The words "charter and to freight let" do not imply a covenant, in law, that the vessel is or shall be seaworthy.—Bowie v. Wheelright, Case No. 1,733.

A ship, to be seaworthy for the voyage, must be manned by a competent master and crew.—The Vincennes, Case No. 16,945.

If the vessel took on board in weight nearly double her measured tonnage, and was in good repair and well manned, she was not a defective or imperfect vessel, though she would not bear filling up entirely with cargo, most of which consisted of such heavy articles as saltpetre and linseed.—Weston v. Minot, Case No. 17,453.

The impossibility of procuring a competent crew will not justify the vessel in leaving port with an inadequate crew.—The Gentleman, Case No. 5,324.

All representations as to carrying capacity are merged in a charter party stating the vessel to be of certain tons burden.—Baker v. Ward, Case No. 785.

Owner not liable for barratry of master and crew beyond sum mentioned in charter party.—Campbell v. The Alknomac, Case No. 2,350.

Owner not liable for repairs to vessel unless warranted to be kept staunch during the voyage.—Campbell v. The Alknomac, Case No. 2,350.

The presumption of seaworthiness is rebutted by proof that the vessel is old and has suddenly failed in a vital part without any apparent cause.—Werk v. Leathers, Case No. 17,415.

Where the question of seaworthiness is in issue, evidence of the performance of voyages immediately before and after that contemplated is inadmissible, except so far as they may offer just inferences as to her actual condition at the time.—The Vincennes, Case No. 16,945.

A survey of the vessel by other sea captains, who report and swear to the truth of the result, is not conclusive as to her proper depth, but is a sound measure of precaution in a dispute between the master and the charterers.—Weston v. Minot, Case No. 17,453.

§ 49. Readiness and dispatch of vessel. The shipowner must use due diligence in dispatching the vessel and prosecuting the voyage to the port of lading, where the charter party is to commence, when the vessel is ready to receive cargo at the place of lading, and notice thereof is given the charterer.—The Star of Hope, Case No. 13,312.

Where the charter contains no stipulation as to time of arrival at port of loading, the shipper takes the risk of detention by any superior force which the vessel could not overcome.—Hall v. Hurlbut, Case No. 5,936.

A provision that the vessel shall sail without delay, and in ballast, to enter upon the charter, is complied with where the vessel carries a cargo of salt, where the charterer is not prejudiced.—The Religione E. Liberta, Case No. 11,694.

Vessel all ready for voyage held to have "sailed" when she was towed from her moorings, though she was detained in the harbor several days by head winds.—The Francesca Curro, Case No. 5,029.

The charterer is not relieved from his contract by delays caused by inevitable accident or perils of the sea, if the vessel be tendered in a reasonable time.—The Star of Hope, Case No. 13,312.

Arrival at the port of loading after the season of shipping had gone by, caused by unusual delay, will not release the charterer, in the absence of fault of the master or owner.—Hall v. Hurlbut, Case No. 5,936.

The vessel chartered being delayed in arriving, another vessel was dispatched with the cargo, but her destination was subsequently changed, and the chartered vessel made the voyage for which she was chartered. Held, that the charterer was liable under the contract.—Fearing v. Cheeseman, Case No. 4,710.

§ 50. Charter for carriage of passengers. Under a charter for the carriage of steerage passengers, providing that the charterers shall "find breadstuffs, berths, water casks, water and fuel," etc., the charterer is liable for all articles of diet, both during the usual voyage and while detained in a port of distress through springing a leak in a gale.—Weston v. Train, Case No. 17,456.

The ship was liable, in such case, for the expense of landing and embarking the passengers at the intermediate port, and for housing them on shore, during the period of detention, while the ship was being repaired, this being a substitute for room on shipboard.—Weston v. Train, Case No. 17,456.

The giving of bond by the master conditioned to perform all the requirements of the British passenger act created no privity between the owners and the passengers, and did not, as between owners and charterers, impose on the owners a liability for victualing.—Weston v. Train, Case No. 17,456.

§ 51. Cargo.
Under a charter party to furnish a cargo of salt at a certain port to be purchased by the master with the vessel's funds, the charterer takes the risk of there being salt at such port to make up a cargo.—Crabtree v. Clark, Case No. 3,314.

Where the charter specifies lay days for loading, the charterer is not bound to furnish a cargo. except at his own convenience, during such lay days.—Poland v. Maryland Coal Co., Case No. 11,245.

Under a charter for a series of voyages between certain ports from May 2, 1874, to November 1, 1874, the charterer is not bound to furnish a cargo on October 19th, unless there is reasonable cause to believe that the voyage could be completed by November 1st.—Poland v. Maryland Coal Co., Case No. 11,244.

Under a charter party providing that cargo is to be furnished as "required" by the master, it is sufficient on the ship's part if the master gives notice that he is in want of more cargo.—Tyson v. Belmont, Case No. 14,316.

Under a stipulation by the charterers to furnish a vessel at Calcutta with a full cargo, and, among other articles of freight, "sufficient saltpeter, or its equivalent, for ballast," held, that the charterer must furnish ballast paying freight.—Rich v. Parrott, Case No. 11,760.

Under such charter the charterer may, at his election, furnish any article which is an equivalent, and answers the description.—Rich v. Parrott, Case No. 11,761.

A charter for a gross sum to carry all lawful goods placed on board to the entire capacity of the vessel means all goods not contraband nor diseased, and as many as the vessel can in safety carry.—Weston v. Minot, Case No. 17,453.

Charterer of vessel for cargo of timber undertakes to furnish timber suitable to capacity and condition of vessel, and owners are not bound to widen portholes to suit timber furnished. Case No. 1,220a reversed.—Beecher v. Bechtel, Case No. 1,221.

The master must inform the charterer what quantity of the several articles will be necessary to load the vessel.—Rich v. Parrott, Case No. 11,760.

Construction of charter of a ship to carry Chinese coolies from China to a foreign country, as to the number that might be carried, where it was the custom of the business to overcrowd the vessels.—The Hound, Case No. 6,731.

Though the honest opinion of a competent master that he has taken on board all the cargo his vessel will safely carry is not absolutely binding on the charterer, it is entitled to very great weight, and can be controlled only by decisive evidence of a mistake on his part.—Weston v. Foster, Case No. 17,452.

Where, before the ship is full, the cargo sinks her as low as is usual and proper without extra danger, the master may refuse to carry more.—Weston v. Minot, Case No. 17,453.

The master may carry more ballast than the charter allows, but the charterer may recover in admiralty compensation for the room thus lost.—Reynolds v. The Joseph, Case No. 11,730.

The master may refuse to carry forward the cargo received, where a full cargo is not furnished, only where the same is insufficient security for full freight, or is depreciating so rapidly as in all probability to become insufficient, in which case he may discharge it, and then enforce his lien for freight and demurrage.—Stepanovit v. Gillibrand and Four Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty-Two Bushels of Wheat, Case No. 13,360.

§ 52. Receiving cargo.
Charterer held chargeable with knowledge of tonnage and draught of vessel and state of harbor, rendering vessel unable to complete loading in harbor.—Belmont v. Tyson, Case No. 1,281.

A guaranty of eight feet of water "at the place of loading" held to mean eight feet, or at least a sufficient depth to enable the vessel to perform her voyage, at the place of loading, and thence to the open sea.—Hart v. Shaw, Case No. 6,155.

A guaranty of the depth of water at the place of loading necessary for a full cargo will be held to apply to the channel through which it is necessary that the vessel shall pass to reach the sea.—Shaw v. Hart, Case No. 12,720.

A stipulation that the ship is to employ the charterer's stevedore and clerk does not amount to a special agreement that the charterer shall perform the duty of lading and stowing.—Richardson v. Winsor, Case No. 11,795.

Though the charter stipulates to carry goods on deck, the master may, for sailor's reasons, refuse to allow them to be so loaded, but in such case the charterer may recover damages in admiralty.—Reynolds v. The Joseph, Case No. 11,730.

A charter party for a cargo of merchandise from Calcutta to Boston, prescribing no mode of stowage, tacitly refers to the established and known usage of the trade.—Lamb v. Parkman, Case No. 8,020.

It will be presumed that the parties contracted with reference to the character of the port of loading named, and the incidents and difficulties attendant upon entering the harbor and loading there.—Tyson v. Belmont, Case No. 14,316.

§ 53. Voyage.
A vessel chartered on a time charter for a voyage at a specified rate must sail without unnecessary delay, and proceed with all reasonable dispatch to her destination.—The Success, Case No. 13,586.

Under a charter party for a voyage to a certain port, or, in case it be blockaded, to a market and return, the vessel is not liable for the time necessarily consumed in the deviation to ascertain whether the port of destination was blockaded.—Stokely v. Smith, Case No. 13,473.

The failure to have a sufficient crew when the vessel sailed on the voyage will not excuse deviation to ship more seamen.—The Ethel, Case No. 4,540.

Liability of vessel in the case of a cargo of African rawhides injured by heat and worms, where voyage was delayed by sickness and inadequacy of crew.—The Gentleman, Case No. 5,324.

Under a charter of a vessel from B. to New York, now loading at K., and "to proceed thence direct to load on this charter," held, that the charterer was not liable for delay caused by seizure by a military officer to perform necessary services for a military post.—The Onrust, Cases Nos. 10,539, 10,540.

Where, in a port of necessity, the master puts his vessel in charge of the charterer's agent for payment of disbursements, he is bound to produce his accounts when applying for money, according to the usage of the port.—Mauran v. Warren, Case No. 9,310.

Where, in such case, funds were provided by the charterer's agent, but the master broke off negotiations, and employed some one else, held, that the charterer could recover the agreed commission.—Mauran v. Warren, Case No. 9,310.

§ 54. Discharge of cargo.
The ship is not liable for damage done to cargo in unlading by stevedores appointed by the consignees under an express provision therefor in the charter party.—Westray v. The Miletus, Case No. 17,461.

Where goods are landed at the wrong place by the master, and then reloaded, the expenses must be borne by him or the owners; otherwise, where landed at the request of the supercargo or agent of the charterers.—Weston v. Minot, Case No. 17,453.

The ship is not liable for damage to cargo by stevedores selected as agents of the shippers under a special clause in the charter party. Westray v. The Miletus, Case No. 17,461, affirmed. —The Miletus, Case No. 9,545.

Where the vessel arrived two days late, and, without notice to the charterer, discharged the cargo, and employed persons to cart and pile it on the wharf, held, that the charterer was not liable for this expense.—The Mary E. Taber, Case No. 9,209.

Charterer held liable for costs of discharging, port charges, and demurrage, where naval vessel to which a cargo of coal was consigned was wrecked, and master had to wait for berth to land the cargo, where the charter provided that the cargo should be discharged free of all expense to the vessel, the charterer to pay port charges.—Dow v. Hare, Case No. 4,037a.

The rights of the parties under a charter party providing that the charterers were to pay all port charges are not affected by the fact that unknown to them the consignee had procured an exemption from tonnage dues.—Smith v. Drew, Case No. 13,038.

Tonnage dues are port charges within a stipulation requiring the charterers to pay all port charges at the ship's destination.—Smith v. Drew, Case No. 13,038.

Vessel held liable for goods taken aboard by mistake of mate and wharfinger, in excess of the cargo stipulated, and delivered to charterer. —The Blenheim, Case No. 1,539.

§ 55. Freight, charter money, or other compensation — When earned in general.
The owner and charterer, as between themselves, may make the whole freight depend on the safe arrival at the home port or any other contingency.—The Erie, Case No. 4,512.

A chartered vessel which springs a leak in a storm, and puts back to the port of departure, and, on the refusal of the charterer to accept the cargo, sells it as unfit to ship, and dangerous to the crew, cannot recover freight.—Miston v. Lord, Case No. 9,655.

If there is a defect in the ship by which she becomes disabled, even though it may not be apparent upon examination, the charterer cannot recover the charter money, and he will be liable for damages occasioned by the defect.—Werk v. Leathers, Case No. 17,415.

§ 56. —— Pro rata.
Under a charter for a voyage out and return for a round sum, the owner cannot recover a proportionate amount of the charter money, where the voyage was not completed.—Donahoe v. Kettell, Case No. 3,980.

Under a charter out and home, freight is due to each port where the cargo is delivered, though the ship be lost on the return voyage.—The Erie, Case No. 4,512.

Where the charter provides for monthly freight, and leaves it doubtful whether the voyage is single or divisible, it will be presumed to be divisible, though the freight be made payable on the return to the home port.—The Erie, Case No. 4,512.

Where freight is not made payable on any other contingency than the delivery of the cargo, the presumption is that the voyage is divisible.—The Erie, Case No. 4,512.

Freight contracted for in gross for a voyage out and return cannot be apportioned and recovered for a part of the cargo or a part of the voyage unless expressed in or implied from the contract.—Weston v. Minot, Case No. 17,453.

Where the charter contains no exceptions as to perils of the seas, and the vessel, meeting heavy weather, puts back, and a part of the cargo damaged by sea perils is taken out and sold, and the balance is carried forward and delivered to the consignees under bills of lading excepting perils of the seas, no part of the charter money is recoverable.—Willett v. Phillips, Case No. 17,683.

The master of a vessel chartered to proceed with a cargo to a certain port, and discharge the same as directed by the commander of a fleet of war vessels, learning en route that the fleet had left the port badly shattered, turned back. Held, that freight was not recoverable as for a partial performance.—The Harriman, Case No. 6,104.

§ 57. —— Rate and amount.
Lumber cargo furnished was "rough-edged" instead of "re-sawn," as required by the charter. The master received it under protest, and provided in the bill of lading for freight "as per charter party, with additional claim as per protest." Held, that freight was payable in the same amount as would have been earned if the lumber had been re-sawn.—Nine Hundred and Forty-Eight Pieces of Lumber, Case No. 10,270.

A person who advances money to purchase a cargo under an agreement with the charterer that he shall have a lien thereon as security, the bills of lading being assigned to him, is the owner, and the goods are not liable beyond the freight agreed by the master, irrespective of the terms of the charter party.—Palmer v. Gracie, Case No. 10,692.

Where the charterer refused to load the ship on the return voyage, the master may take cargo from others, which will be bound only for the freight agreed upon by the master, and not under the terms of the charter party.—Palmer v. Gracie, Case No. 10,692.

A vessel chartered "to load with a full cargo" of bamboo of certain size bundles, at a certain freight per bundle, may recover for a full load of the agreed size where those loaded were much larger.—Atkins v. Fibre Disintegrating Co., Case No. 601.

Burden is on carrier to prove quantity carried under charter fixing freight at stipulated price per ton.—The Alonzo, Case No. 257.

Arbitration between consignee of vessel and consignee of cargo of timber as to measurement of timber not binding upon charterer.—Belmont v. Tyson, Case No. 1,281.

§ 58. —— Deductions and offsets.
Custom of deducting for defective pieces of timber cannot control stipulation as to freight.—Belmont v. Tyson, Case No. 1,281.

Where the charter stipulates that the master shall sign a draft on the consignees, in favor of the charterers, for the freight, he cannot refuse his signature on the ground that demurrage is due him.—Reynolds v. The Joseph, Case No. 11,730.

On a libel for freight under a charter, the charterers can recoup damages for a breach only to the amount of the freight.—Holyoke v. Depew, Case No. 6,652.

§ 59. —— Who liable.
Where a vessel is chartered for a voyage out and return at a monthly rate, payable three days after her return, a shipper of a portion of the outward cargo, who takes a bill of lading providing for payment of freight "as per charter party," held not liable to the vessel for freight. Case No. 10,986 reversed.—Perkins v. Hill, Case No. 10,987.

Goods loaded by third persons under contract with the charterer are liable only for their own freight, and not for the gross sum named in the charter party, though the charter reads: "Bills of lading to be signed when presented without prejudice to this charter party."—Grand v. The Ibis, Case No. 5,682.

The bill of lading, and not the charter, will control as to the liability of the cargo for freight, as against consignees advancing money thereon. —Davis v. Five Hundred and Seventy-Four Bags of Coffee, Case No. 3,633a.

§ 60. —— Liens in general.
The owner has a lien on the cargo for the amount due under the charter.—De Wolf v. Two Hundred and Sixty-Six Hogsheads and Thirty-One Tierces Molasses, Case No. 3,853; Kimball v. The Anna Kimball, Id. 7,772.

Where the owner continues in control of the vessel, he is entitled to a lien for freight on goods of a third person, shipped under contract with the charterer.—Ruggles v. Bucknor, Case No. 12,115; Palmer v. Gracie, Id. 10,692.

The owners of a vessel let to the United States in time of war have no lien for their charter money on goods the United States may put on board.—The Undaunted, Case No. 14,336.

Where the charter party gives the charterer the possession and control of the ship, it is a letting of the ship, and not a contract of affreightment, and the owners have no lien on the cargo for the stipulated price.—Drinkwater v. The Spartan, Case No. 4,085.

Where goods shipped abroad were sold at an intermediate port, and the proceeds applied to the payment of freight under the charter party, they are not subject to a lien for the charter money due on arriving at the ultimate port of destination.—The Salem's Cargo, Case No. 12,248.

A contest between the consignee and a third person as to the ownership of the cargo does not put in operation a clause giving the charterer the right to retain freight moneys in case of rival claims thereto.—Crapo v. The Arctic, Case No. 3,361.

Where a charter party provides for a gross sum as freight, payable on the close of the whole voyage, and the bill of lading declares that the return cargo shall be delivered to the shippers, they paying freight as per charter party, a lien attaches to the homeward cargo for freight due for the whole voyage, and the consignee, on receipt of the goods, becomes personally liable.—Certain Logs of Mahogany, Case No. 2,559.

Master held entitled to lien for the freight of the outward cargo, on the cargo shipped for the homeward voyage on account of an assignee of the charter party, where, under its terms, the whole freight for the round voyage was to be paid on arrival at the home port.—The Eliza, Case No. 4,347.

The lien of the shipowner on the goods of the charterer is not limited by the amount of the penal sum in the charter party.—The Salem's Cargo, Case No. 12,248.

§ 61. —— Cargo subject to lien.
Circus horses are to be regarded as cargo to which a maritime lien will attach for freight under a charter for a voyage out and return to carry a circus outfit.—Fourteen Horses, etc., Case No. 4,990.

Where the freight on a cargo of flour out and a cargo of coffee back is to be paid at a certain sum per barrel on the flour, the charterer has no lien for freight on the coffee, purchased with the proceeds of the flour by one who took an assignment of the bills of lading for advances, except to the extent of the surplus.—Webb v. Anderson, Case No. 17,318.

§ 62. —— When lien attaches.
A lien for freight and demurrage expressly reserved by the charter party attaches the moment cargo is put on board under a bill of lading made subject thereto.—Stepanovit v. Gillibrand and Four Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty-Two Bushels of Wheat, Case No. 13,360.

§ 63. —— Waiver and discharge of lien.
Where the charter expressly pledges both vessel and cargo for its performance, the lien for freight will not be held to be waived by making it payable in monthly installments.—Fourteen Horses, etc., Case No. 4,990.

Bills of lading given by the master, waiving the lien of the shipowner, are ineffectual in the hands of a person who had knowledge of the charter party.—The Salem's Cargo, Case No. 12,248.

The fact that a charter party contains a clause giving five and ten days' credit after "discharge" of the homeward cargo is not inconsistent with the retention of a lien for the freight.—Kimball v. The Anna Kimball, Case No. 7,772.

Clause in charter party that freight shall be paid within a certain time after vessel's discharge does not waive a lien for freight, as the word "discharge" merely refers to the unlading, and not to the delivery of the cargo.—Certain Logs of Mahogany, Case No. 2,559.

Giving promissory notes for money due under a charter party discharges the shipowner's lien if the notes are accepted as payment.—Kimball v. The Anna Kimball, Case No. 7,772.

§ 64. —— Enforcement of lien.
The owner is not bound to wait until the cargo is discharged to enforce his lien for freight, where there is a breach of the agreement to pay the charter money in monthly installments.—Fourteen Horses, etc., Case No. 4,990.

A clause in the charter that the parties bind the ship and goods, respectively, for the performance of the covenants, payments, and agreements thereof, creates a lien on the goods for such performance and may be enforced by a detention of the goods for the freight, and by a suit in admiralty.—The Volunteer, Case No. 16,991.

§ 65. Breach of charter party by owner or master — What constitutes a breach.
The vessel is not liable for breach of a charter party unless the cargo is actually or constructively in her possession.—Salzobel v. The Rolling Wave, Case No. 12,274.

The vessel owners are answerable in damages for refusal of the master to stow all of the cargo in the hold, resulting in the inability of the vessel to carry the limit of passengers stipulated in the charter.—Parsons v. Ogden, Case No. 10,781.

A vessel, under a charter containing no exception of restraints of princes, held liable where she failed to take in a cargo of barilla at the Canary Islands, where the authorities required that she should first go to Spain, to quarantine. —Holyoke v. Depew, Case No. 6,652.

The tender and refusal of a new cargo, after repairs to a vessel, so injured by fire as to necessitate unloading the first cargo, entitles the charterer to treat the voyage as broken up, and to demand the first cargo without payment of freight.—The Luteken, Case No. 8,609.

The departure of the consignee named in a charter-party from the port of destination constitutes no waiver of the contract.—The Harriman, Case No. 6,104.

§ 66. —— Actions for breach.
Vessel chartered by a person to carry out his agreement to transport cargo for a certain company is liable in admiralty for breach of the contract.—Atlantic & P. Guano Co. v. The Robert Center, Case No. 630.

The risk and danger of losing the cargo in attempting to perform the voyage may be shown, in answer to a claim of damages for breach of the contract.—The Harriman, Case No. 6,104.

Libelants suing for breach of charter party are bound to show that there was no default on their part.—Beecher v. Bechtel, Case No. 1,220a.

No action will lie for breach of verbal agreements occurring between the date of a charter party and its signing.—Barclay v. Holme, Case No. 974.

Nominal damages only are recoverable for breach of charter party where libelant fails to prove actual damages, though the agreement binds the parties to a penalty for its breach.—Chadwick v. The Adelaide, Case No. 2,571.

Damages for a breach of an obligation to sail without unnecessary delay, under a time charter, are the difference between the fair market values of the cargo when it ought to have been delivered, and at the time when the vessel actually arrived.—The Success, Case No. 13,586.

The measure of damages, where the voyage is broken up by the shipowners, held to be compensation for the actual loss and expense incurred about the voyage, the labor and services in procuring another vessel, and reasonable disbursements in the action beyond the taxed costs.—The Tribune, Case No. 14,171.

Damages for a breach of a charter party are a lien on the vessel, and where the demand is satisfied by the mortgagee, who takes an assignment of the claim, he may claim proceeds in court for repayment.—The Panama, Case No. 10,703.

The measure of damages for failure of the vessel to proceed to the port of loading is the increased freight and charges which the charterer has been obliged to pay to have the goods carried.—Oakes v. Richardson, Case No. 10,390.

Loss of profits are allowed as damages only in exceptional cases.—Oakes v. Richardson, Case No. 10,390.

Estimated profits of the voyage cannot be computed as an element of damages for breach of charter party.—Chadwick v. The Adelaide, Case No. 2,571.

In an action on the charter party, to compel the master to sign bills of lading, libelant can recover only the actual expenses incurred and rendered necessary by the master's refusal.—The Mispah, Case No. 9,648.

§ 67. Breach of charter by charterer—What constitutes a breach.
A failure by the charterer to furnish cargo constitutes a breach of the charter party, and where the master ascertains that no cargo can be obtained he may sail immediately.—Clarke v. The Dodge Healy, Case No. 2,849; Crabtree v. Clark, Id. 3,314; Baetjer v. Bors, Id. 724; Hall v. Hurlbut, Id. 5,936.

The master is not bound to purchase other goods at his own expense, or to go to other places to obtain the salt, to diminish the loss to the charterer.—Crabtree v. Clark, Case No. 3,314.

Charter party to furnish cargo at certain place is broken where cargo could not be obtained, though it stipulated for purchase of cargo with vessel's funds.—Clarke v. Crabtree, Case No. 2,847.

Charterer's failure to provide means of loading guano held to constitute a breach and to justify master in returning with partial cargo.—The B. J. Willard, Case No. 1,454.

After the cargo had been loaded the charterer took it out of the vessel, and refused to fulfill the charter party. Held, that the owner had a lien on the cargo for the breach.—The Hermitage, Case No. 6,410.

A charter party is violated by refusal of consignees to accept consignment, where they were to pay half of charter money at destination.—Bramhall v. Shaler, Case No. 1,805a.

§ 68. —— Effect of breach.
In the case of separate charter parties for successive voyages, a breach of the first charter party in refusing to accept the vessel at the agreed rate, where she subsequently sails the voyage at a lesser rate, will not release the vessel from the other charter parties.—Wright v. Owners of The Francesca Curro, Case No. 18,088.

Where the covenant is to proceed to a foreign port, take in cargo on account of the charterer, and bring it to the United States, and, when the ship reaches such foreign port, the charterer declines to put any cargo on board, the ship is released, and may take other cargo on the return voyage for the account of her owners.—Kleine v. Catara, Case No. 7,869.

§ 69. —— Actions for breach.
Where the charter gives possession and control to the charterers for a time certain, with no condition of forfeiture for a breach, the court cannot decree possession to the general owners on a libel alleging a breach of the contract.—The Prometheus, Case No. 11,442.

Where the meaning of the charter party is clear, a mistake cannot be alleged in defense to a suit in rem for a breach.—The Hermitage, Case No. 6,410.

A suit on a charter party, signed by the master, to whom the charter money is to be paid, is properly brought in his name alone.—Baker v. Ward, Case No. 785.

A suit is properly brought in the name of the managing owners, who signed the charter party in good faith as owners.—Bangs v. Lowber, Case No. 840.

An action on a charter party cannot be maintained by one who is not a party thereto, though it recites that one of the parties is the agent for such person, but the covenants are with the agent who executed it in his own name, without reference to the alleged party in interest.—Clark v. Wilson, Case No. 2,841.

On a libel against charterers for refusing to furnish a cargo on the pretense that the ship was unseaworthy, the owners have the burden of showing seaworthiness.—The Vincennes, Case No. 16,945.

The measure of damages where the charterer abandons his contract is the difference between the net freight for a full cargo and what would have been netted by any other reasonable cargo which by due diligence could have been obtained.—Stepanovit v. Gillibrand and Four Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty-Two Bushels of Wheat, Case No. 13,360; Jordan v. Eaton, Id. 7,520.

In computing the damages for refusal to furnish a cargo, the court took into consideration the failure of the master to inform the charterer of a delay en route for repairs.—Hall v. Hurlbut, Case No. 5,936.

§ 70. Loss or injury to cargo.

The charterer of a vessel who ships an article new in commerce, whose dangerous character is unknown, either to him or the owner, is liable for injury to other cargo coming in contact therewith, and the increased expenditure in discharging caused by its peculiar character.—Pierce v. Winsor, Cases Nos. 11,150, 11,151.

Where, in the case of lumber, the master, at the charterer's request, attempted to raft a portion to a place where it could be taken on board to make up a full cargo, held, that the charterer must stand the loss caused by the raft's being broken up by the violence of the waves.—Shaw v. Hart, Case No. 12,720.

The master will be held negligent in not keeping a vigilant watch while at anchor, and in not being prepared to drop a second anchor when his chain parts in a sudden blow.—The Thomas Jefferson, Case No. 13,923.

Consignees under clean bills of lading are not bound by clauses in a charter party relieving the ship from the duty to properly protect the cargo. —The Wilhelmina, Case No. 17,658.

The liability of the owner to a charterer of the entire vessel is not varied by the fact that the master gives a bill of lading in common form.—Lamb v. Parkman, Case No. 8,020.

The shipper under an ordinary bill of lading has his remedy against the ship, whether the owner retains possession and command, or the control and navigation passes to the charterer; but whether the general owner, or the charterer, is liable, depends upon the terms of the charter party.—Richardson v. Winsor, Case No. 11,795.

A vessel detained in a port of distress from unseaworthiness must take proper means for the preservation of a perishable cargo.—The Gentleman, Case No. 5,324.

Vessel held not liable for damages to cargo in lower hold from leakage from casks of lard stowed between decks, and shipped in almost a liquid state, where the charterer agreed to pay all damages caused by such leakage.—Moses v. Boyd, Case No. 9,871.

In a charter to carry a cargo of hides, the clause "the charterer furnishing the lining hides and bones for dunnage only" does not relieve the ship from the duty to properly protect the cargo.—The Wilhelmina, Case No. 17,658.

The general declarations of the owners, unaccompanied by any specific statements of disinterested persons, showing the nature and extent of the damage, are inadmissible.—Eames v. Cavaroc, Case No. 4,238.

§ 71. Loss or injury to vessel.

The charterer is liable for an injury to the vessel sustained in a voyage not authorized by the charter party.—Latson v. Sturm, Case No. 8,115.

Under a charter party out and return with ports undefined, providing a monthly compensation, charterers are liable, where vessel is lost before its return, for the monthly rate, to time of loss.—Brett v. Zachrissen, Case No. 1,-845.

The charterers of a canal boat are not liable to the owner where she is sunk by the explosion of the boiler of a tug which they had employed to tow her, where they were free from negligence.—Jackson v. Easton, Case No. 7,-134.

A charterer who assumes risk by fire is liable, in case of loss thereby, only for the excess in value over insurance money received by the owners.—Merrill v. Arey, Case No. 9,468.

Risk of loss by fire devolves on the charterers, where they covenant to return the vessel in like good condition, ordinary wear and dangers of the sea excepted.—Merrill v. Arey. Case No. 9,468.

Fire accidentally originating on board a vessel is not a "danger of the sea" within exception of charter party excusing restoration to owners.—Airey v. Merrill, Case No. 115.

Owners may recover full value, notwithstanding such vessel was stranded at the time, if her value was not materially diminished thereby.—Airey v. Merrill, Case No. 115.

Charter money preceding destruction may be allowed as damages.—Airey v. Merrill, Case No. 115.

Where master fails to object to port as a "safe port," owners cannot recover for injuries arising from its unsafeness.—Atkins v. Fibre Disintegrating Co., Case No. 601.

Charterers are not presumptively liable for services rendered in floating stranded vessel under a contract made with the owner.—Bell v. Hunt, Case No. 1,254.

Wrecking company chartering vessel for wrecking enterprise is bound only to ordinary diligence as a bailee for hire.—Browning v. Baker, Case No. 2,041.

§ 72. Subcharter and assignment of charter.

Under a subcharter for "a full and complete cargo," made subject to the conditions of the charter, which described the vessel as "of the net measurement of 537 tons, or thereabouts," held, that the subcharterers were entitled to a cargo space of the net measurement of 537 tons, and not to the full capacity of the vessel. —Schmidt v. Smith, Case No. 12,466.

Under a guaranty on an assignment of a charter party that the vessel is first class, it is necessary that she be actually classified.—Baetjer v. Bors, Case No. 724.

A delay to classify such vessel, where no damage is set up when she is tendered as ready, for want of a classification, will not excuse performance by the transferee.—Baetjer v. Bors, Case No. 724.

Computation of damages on breach of contract by transferee of charter party to perform its conditions.—Baetjer v. Bors, Case No. 724.

§ 73. Letting vessel on shares.

Where a master hires a vessel "on shares" under an agreement to victual and man the vessel and employ her in such voyages as he thinks best, having thereby the entire possession, command, and navigation of the vessel, and the relation of principal and agent not existing between the master and owners, the master thereby becomes the owner pro hac vice during such time as the contract exists, and he, and not the general owner, is responsible for necessary supplies. Case No. 17,321 reversed.—Webb v. Peirce, Case No. 17,320.

The master of a vessel, frozen in before the return voyage was commenced, and left in charge of the mate, may contract for cargo for the return voyage after the vessel is released.—Fox v. Holt, Case No. 5,012.

IV. MASTER.

Right of master to salvage compensation, see "Salvage," § 21.

§ 74. Appointment and removal.

No formalities are necessary to the appointment of a master. Sufficiency of evidence to show appointment.—The Boston, Case No. 1,-669.

A contract with a person to command and run a vessel on a certain route as captain for a monthly salary and a share in the gross earnings held to give him authority as master, though the clerk of the boat usually received the money for freight and passengers.—Adams v. The Wyoming, Case No. 71.

A master appointed in a foreign port by the American consul on the recovery of a vessel from a master who had barratrously run away with her has the same powers as one appointed directly by the owner.—The Jacmel Packet, Case No. 7,154.

A contract to render services both as master and pilot upon inland waters is not void as against public policy or rules of navigation, and compensation may be recovered as for services in both capacities.—Bissell v. Mepham, Case No. 1,450.

A contract between the owners and master for a whaling voyage not exceeding five years' duration does not mean several voyages extending through five years, but ends when a full cargo is obtained.—Slocum v. Swift, Case No. 12,954.

A person once master of a vessel will be deemed to continue in that character until displaced by some overt act or declaration of the owners.—The Tribune, Case No. 14,171.

Employment as master for a foreign voyage will not be presumed from the rendition of services as master in loading and preparing the vessel for sea.—Jones v. Davis, Case No. 7,460.

A master in possession of a vessel absent from her home port will be deemed to have been master until his actual displacement after return of the vessel, notwithstanding the vote of a majority owner to discharge him.—Fox v. Holt, Case No. 5,012.

A majority of shipowners may dismiss the master at any time without cause.—Childs v. Gladding, Case No. 2,678; Montgomery v. Wharton, Id. 9,737.

A contract by the master hiring a third person, as nominal master for the purpose of clearing the vessel, at monthly wages, held binding on owner and vessel, but not as to a stipulation for a further sum in case of discharge.—L'Arina v. The Exchange, Case No. 8,088.

The master and co-owner of a whaling ship who has contracted for a cruise of four seasons at a certain lay, and is wrongfully deprived of his command at the end of three seasons, may have an action against his co-owners for damages for his removal.—Parsons v. Terry, Case No. 10,782.

The measure of damages in such a case is the probable value of his lay for the unemployed season.—Parsons v. Terry, Case No. 10,782.

A clause of the shipping articles prohibiting the bringing on board ship of distilled spirits is not broken by carrying Madeira wine on freight.—Parsons v. Terry, Case No. 10,782.

Where the master is separated from the ship by death or other casualty, the mate succeeds to the command.—Carrington v. The Ann C. Pratt, Case No. 2,445.

§ 75. Authority and duties—Scope and extent in general.

Where the master is also consignee of the cargo, he has the authority of a supercargo during the voyage.—Smedley v. Yeaton, Case No. 12,965.

The power of the master to make contracts in relation to the vessel at her home port is limited.—The Tribune, Case No. 14,171.

The master in a foreign port represents both owners and shippers not having any other agent on the spot.—Gernon v. Cochran, Case No. 5,368.

A master has authority, where customary in the business, to bind the ship by a contract to collect of the consignee advances and charges on the goods, and repay them to the shipper.—The St. Joseph, Case No. 12,230.

§ 76. —— Management and navigation of vessel.

The master of a merchant steamer engaged in the transportation of merchandise has no authority to bind the ship by a contract to tow another vessel on a long ocean voyage; and for breach of such a contract he alone is liable.—Kimball v. The Dispatch, Case No. 7,773.

An agreement by the master or mate of a freighting vessel to tow floating stages, and to look after their safety, is beyond the scope of his employment, and neither the vessel nor owners are liable for their loss.—Walsh v. The Carl Haasted, Case No. 17,113.

A master appointed by the American consul in a foreign port on the death of the master appointed by the owner may draw upon the owner for supplies under authority given to his predecessor.—Pickersgill v. Williams, Case No. 11,123.

A master, acting with reasonable diligence, discretion, and skill upon the advice of competent persons, will be protected, though more skillful persons would have advised a better course.—The Fortitude, Case No. 4,953.

§ 77. —— Employment of seamen.

The master of a vessel prepared by her owners for a fishing voyage with intent to secure the bounty has no implied authority to engage seamen for wages merely, instead of upon shares.—Whalen v. The Silver Spring, Case No. 17,477.

A captain cannot bind his owners and their vessel for the payment of mariners' wages for three months after their discharge.—Canizares v. The Santissima Trinidad, Case No. 2,383.

The master cannot bind the owners by an arbitrary increase of wages.—Neilson v. The Laura, Case No. 10,092.

The vessel owners are not liable for the wages of a cook hired by the master on his exclusive credit.—Scott v. Failes, Case No. 12,530.

§ 78. Sale of vessel by master—When justified.

A sale of the vessel by the master will only be sustained where enjoined by a policy so clear as to be equivalent to a moral necessity.—Hartman v. The Will, Case No. 6,163.

That the master acted in good faith and in the exercise of his best discretion will not justify a sale by him, unless there appears to have been an urgent necessity to sell, for the preservation of the interests of all concerned.—The Sarah Ann, Case No. 12,342; The William Carey, Id. 17,689; The Tilton, Id. 14,054.

And it must also be shown that he was unable to communicate with the owners before the necessity of action became imperative.—The Bridgewater, Case No. 1,864.

The master may, in good faith, in his best discretion, for the benefit of all concerned, sell a wrecked vessel, either in view of a peril then involving her, or of one likely to ensue.—The Lucinda Snow, Case No. 8,591.

Sale, without notice to owner, of unseaworthy vessel, safely anchored in the harbor of St. Thomas, and not exposed to any immediate peril, held, did not pass title.—Harrison v. The Susan Ludwig, Case No. 6,145a.

The right of the master to sell the vessel, in cases of necessity, is determined by considering whether, under like circumstances, a sale would have been made by a considerate owner for his own interest and that of all concerned.—Robinson v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., Case No. 11,949; The Sarah Ann, Id. 12,342.

Great circumspection should be used before ordering a sale of a ship in the absence of the owner.—Skrine v. The Hope, Case No. 12,927.

In a case of urgent necessity, the master may sell the vessel as well on a home shore as on a foreign shore, and whether the owner's residence be near or at a distance.—The Sarah Ann, Case No. 12,342. CONTRA, see Scull v. Briddle, Case No. 12,569.

The circumstances enumerated under which the master has the right to sell the vessel in a foreign port.—Fitz v. The Amelie, Case No. 4,838.

A sale in a foreign port by a master, who is without means or credit to repair the vessel, advised on a survey by disinterested persons, where there was no time to consult with the owner, will be upheld.—The Herald, Case No. 6,393.

The master may contract for the employment of the vessel under circumstances of necessity. —Naylor v. Baltzell, Case No. 10,061.

§ 79. —— Rights and liabilities of purchasers from master.

As between the owner and purchaser, a sale without necessity, though made in good faith, is invalid.—The Tilton, Case No. 14,054.

That a master selling a stranded vessel believed at the time that he could get her off would be pertinent to show bad faith avoiding the sale; but that the purchaser believed himself able to do so has no such effect.—The Lucinda Snow, Case No. 8,591.

The purchasers of a stranded vessel at an unauthorized sale by the master will be allowed the value of necessary repairs, the expenses of navigating her home, and the price paid.—The Henry, Case No. 6,372; The Sarah Ann, Id. 12,342.

The right to the freight earned upon the homeward voyage follows the ownership of the vessel.—The Henry, Case No. 6,372.

All liens upon a vessel which is lawfully sold by the master in a foreign port from necessity are transferred to the proceeds of sale, the purchaser taking a title free therefrom.—Fitz v. The Amelie, Case No. 4,838.

A purchaser of a wrecked vessel from the master need not, in order to maintain his title, furnish direct evidence of the master's good faith and of the necessity for the sale. Presumptive proof is sufficient.—The Lucinda Snow, Case No. 8,591.

The burden of proof is on the purchaser to show that the sale of the vessel by the master was bona fide and necessary.—Hartman v. The Will, Case No. 6,163; The Henry, Id. 6,372.

The facility with which a stranded vessel was reclaimed is evidence on this question.—The Henry, Case No. 6,372.

The presence of the owner's agent at the sale does not constitute the sale any the less a sale by the master.—The Henry, Case No. 6,372.

The receipt by a special agent of the proceeds of the sale is no ground for the presumption of ratification by the owner.—The Henry, Case No. 6,372.

A paper purporting to be a survey, but not drawn up, subscribed, or sworn to prior to the sale, will not be received as evidence of a survey.—The Henry, Case No. 6,372.

§ 80. Sale of cargo by master—When justified and validity in general.

Where necessary funds cannot be obtained in any other way, the master may sell a part of the cargo.—Ross v. The Active, Case No. 12,071; Pope v. Nickerson, Id. 11,274; Jones v. The Richmond, Id. 7,491; Naylor v. Baltzell, Id. 10,061; The Harriet, Id. 6,094; Myers v. The Harriet, Id. 9,992; Pope v. Nickerson, Id. 11,274.

In such case the shipper's damages are to be measured by the value of the cargo at the place of shipment, together with all expenses and interest from the time of shipment.—Myers v. The Harriet, Case No. 9,992.

The master has no authority to sell the sound portion of a cargo which may be transshipped. —Pope v. Nickerson, Case No. 11,274.

It is the duty of the master, and not the consignees, to make separation of the sound from the unsound part of the cargo, if necessary to obtain a favorable sale on account of the vessel. —The Columbus, Case No. 3,041.

A sale of the cargo of a stranded ship by the master is unnecessary, and therefore void, if he could have transshipped or stored it, or if he had any other alternative which a prudent owner on the spot would adopt.—The Bridgewater, Case No. 1,864.

A sale by the master of a wrecked whaler of cargo, which he had no means of saving or storing, at auction, to vessels which had come to the wreck, held valid.—Jones v. The Richmond, Case No. 7,491. CONTRA, see Jones v. The Richmond, Case No. 7,492.

The master is agent of the cargo as well as the ship, where the vessel is found unable to proceed from a port of distress.—Naylor v. Baltzell, Case No. 10,061.

The vessel is liable for the full value on the sale of the cargo by the master at an intermediate port, unless some justification is affirmatively shown.—Englehart v. The Pedro, Case No. 4,489.

The fact that no money was paid at the time, and no bill of sale delivered, and no entry made in the log book, does not invalidate the sale.—Jones v. The Richmond, Case No. 7,491.

The master cannot buy cargo at his own sale as agent of owners.—Barker v. Marine Ins. Co., Case No. 992.

A sale on unconscionable terms to persons in a position to render salvage services will be set aside.—The Bridgewater, Case No. 1,864.

§ 81. —— Sale of perishable cargo.

Perishable cargo may be sold, and the proceeds applied to the repairs of the vessel.—Pope v. Nickerson, Case No. 11,274.

The master may sell a perishable cargo where the consignee refuses to receive it, and it cannot readily be stored in a place suitable to preserve it; and he need not wait the expiration of lay days.—The Maria White, Case No. 9,083.

Where a ship, on account of injuries caused by dangers of the seas, is obliged to lay up in a port of necessity for repairs, the master may sell such portion of the cargo as is of a perishable nature.—The Velona, Case No. 16,912.

A master, acting under competent advice, is justified in selling at auction, in a port of necessity, a cargo of hides which is filled with vermin.—Maas v. The Pedee, Case No. 8,652.

§ 81a. —— Rights and liabilities of purchasers.

Purchaser of cargo of stranded vessel, under void sale, allowed compensation, in the nature of salvage, for caring for cargo, but not the purchase money embezzled by master.—The Bridgewater, Case No. 1,864.

The refusal of the purchaser to permit his vessel to be used for transshipment estops him from claiming that the sale was necessary.—The Bridgewater, Case No. 1,864.

§ 82. —— Rights of owners of cargo.

Owners of cargo disposed of in foreign port to raise money for necessary repairs have lien upon vessel for value of goods at destination.—

The Boston, Case No. 1,669; Pope v. Nickerson, Id. 11,274; The Gold Hunter, Id. 5,513.

The owner of a cargo sold in a foreign port to supply the necessities of the ship is entitled to proceed against the other owners of cargo for contribution, where the ship or owners cannot satisfy his demand.—The Leonidas, Case No. 8,262.

§ 83. Authority and duties of master as to crew.

The provisions of the ancient sea laws on the authority of the master to punish seamen.—Butler v. McClellan, Case No. 2,242.

When the master is on board he has the exclusive right to punish seamen, and the subordinate officers have no such right.—Elwell v. Martin, Case No. 4,425.

It is the duty of the master to interpose and quell an affray between the mate and the crew.—Jordan v. Williams, Case No. 7,528.

Master has no authority to punish seamen creating ill feeling in another ship's crew, by false and malicious representations about their master.—Bangs v. Little, Case No. 839.

The master has authority to confine his seamen in a common jail in a foreign port for offenses and misconduct, in extreme cases, where the proper correction or punishment cannot be effectual on shipboard.—United States v. Ruggles, Case No. 16,205.

The master may use a deadly weapon, when necessary in order to suppress a mutiny.—Roberts v. Eldridge, Case No. 11,901.

The master has authority to displace the mate and all other subordinate officers during the voyage.—United States v. Savage, Case No. 16,225.

The master may confine a refractory seaman on board of his vessel, inflict reasonable personal correction, or discharge him without payment of his wages, according to the enormity of his offense.—Wilson v. The Mary, Case No. 17,823.

A master can, in cases of necessity, correct a disobedient seaman by reasonable corporal punishment.—Carleton v. Davis, Case No. 2,408; Bangs v. Little, Id. 839.

§ 84. Individual rights and privileges as to vessel, cargo, and freight.

Where the master had leave to take his wife with him, and nothing was said about his son, five years old, he was required to pay a reasonable amount for his passage.—Winsor v. Sampson, Case No. 17,888.

A master claiming the gratuitous privilege of taking his wife and child on the voyage must show a distinct understanding to that effect.—Marshall v. Crawford, Case No. 9,126.

The master cannot recover primage on freight agreed to be paid by the owners, where the vessel is lost, and no freight is earned, though the owners recovered the full amount from underwriters.—Pedrick v. Fisher, Case No. 10,900.

§ 85. Wages and reimbursements of expenses—Rights in general.

The master must render a full and satisfactory account of receipts and disbursements during the voyage, before being entitled to the payment of his wages.—Robinson v. Hinckley, Case No. 11,954.

Under the peculiar customs of the Chinese trade, held, that the master was entitled to compensation in the nature of a present from the persons with whom he dealt.—Wilcocks v. Phillips, Case No. 17,639.

Master of whaler has no right to charge commission on money paid to crew on voyage.—Babcock v. Terry, Case No. 702.

The owners are liable for the wages of the master of a captured neutral ship after the capture, and until the condemnation, which are ultimately to be borne as a general average.—Willard v. Dorr, Case No. 17,680.

The expense of regulating the master's chronometer, where he used it for the benefit of the ship solely, should be borne by the ship.—Winsor v. Sampson, Case No. 17,888.

Where a whaling voyage was to end at New Bedford, but the parties afterwards agreed to end it at San Francisco, held, that the master should have the expenses of his passage to New Bedford, and the owners should be allowed freight on oil to the same place.—Slocum v. Swift, Case No. 12,954.

The vessel owner is liable for the expenses of medical attendance rendered the master on board the vessel in a sickness incurred in her service.—Van Lier v. Dord, Case No. 16,862.

Under the custom of the Hudson river, to pay a master for a season's work of 10 months, held, that the master was entitled to a proportionate amount for a part of the season.—The Swallow, Case No. 13,665.

§ 86. —— Forfeiture.

Evidence held to show no misconduct on the master's part sufficient to forfeit wages.—Nisson v. Wessels, Case No. 10,278.

An error of the master in regard to provisions, making it necessary to return to port for an additional supply, held not so gross as to take away his right to wages.—Marshall v. Crawford, Case No. 9,126.

A master who changes the voyage contrary to instructions forfeits all wages.—Robinson v. Hinckley, Case No. 11,954.

But the master will not be held responsible for a deviation, under a charter party requiring it, made by the correspondent of the shipowner.—Robinson v. Hinckley, Case No. 11,954.

Penalty on master for permitting use of spirits contrary to articles.—Babcock v. Terry, Case No. 702.

§ 87. —— Deductions and offsets.

A deduction from the monthly hire will be made, where the voyage has been protracted by reason of the insufficiency of the sails, etc.—Haggett v. Bowman, Case No. 5,900.

Any loss to the owner caused by the smuggling of the master is to be compensated out of his wages.—Willard v. Dorr, Case No. 17,680.

§ 88. —— Extra wages.

The master is entitled to an extra allowance for services rendered out of the line of his duty, such as painting the ship.—String v. Hill, Case No. 13,535.

The master cannot recover for services and expenses in saving the cargo from wreck, when his contract required its delivery at port of destination as a prerequisite to the earning of freight.—The Governor Carey, Case No. 5,645a.

The master cannot maintain a libel for additional services as clerk or manager without showing a special contract designating the extra compensation.—The Gate City, Case No. 5,267.

The master cannot recover additional pay for standing on watch as pilot.—Bartlette v. The Viola, Case No. 1,083.

§ 89. —— Who are liable.

Trustees holding the title of a vessel, and controlling and managing her for the benefit of others, are liable for the master's wages.—Winsor v. Sampson, Case No. 17,888.

§ 90. —— Actions and summary proceedings.

A master who has a right to sue in personam for wages may proceed by summary petition against surplus proceeds in court.—The Stephen Allen, Case No. 13,361.

On a libel by the master for wages after a sale of the vessel, held, that it would be presumed that the wages had been paid out of the freight moneys.—The Richmond, Case No. 11,795a.

Remedy in admiralty for services, see "Admiralty," § 39.

§ 91. —— Liens.

A master has no lien upon the vessel for his wages.—The Dubuque, Case No. 4,110; Dudley v. The Superior, Id. 4,115; The Grand Turk, Id. 5,683; The Eolian, Id. 4,504; Ex parte Clark, Id. 2,796; Bartlette v. The Viola, Id. 1,083; Phillips v. The Thomas Scattergood, Id. 11,106; Zollinger v. The Emma, Id. 18,218; Revens v. Lewis, Id. 11,711; Willard v. Dorr, Id. 17,679; The Leonidas, Id. 8,262.

The master has a lien on freight for necessary disbursements for incidental expenses and liabilities incurred therefor during the voyage, and also for his wages.—Drinkwater v. The Spartan, Case No. 4,085; The Bowditch, Id. 1,717; The Grand Turk, Id. 5,683; The Packet, Id. 10,654.

Such lien will be paid prior to that of general creditors and prior claims.—Drinkwater v. The Spartan, Case No. 4,085.

The master has no lien for his wages on goods consigned to the vessel owners.—Vowell v. Bacon, Case No. 17,018.

An alien cannot be deemed master of an American vessel, even for the purpose of defeating his claim to a lien for wages.—The Dubuque, Case No. 4,110.

The lien of the master of a foreign ship, given equal rank with the liens of seamen and material men by the law of the flag, will not be enforced in our courts.—The Selah, Case No. 12,636.

The master of a vessel incumbered for more than her value, appointed by the owner after she was libeled in admiralty, has no lien for his wages, though ordinarily allowed under the law of the flag.—The Island City, Case No. 7,109.

The fact that the master of a British vessel claimed a lien on her under the English law is no ground for his refusal to deliver the vessel to her owners.—Muir v. The Brisk, Case No. 9,901.

The master waives his lien on the goods for freight where he directs the consignee to pay the freight moneys to the charterer.—Shaw v. Thompson, Case No. 12,726.

A master, having no lien for services as such, cannot enforce a lien for additional services as clerk or manager without showing a special contract designating the extra compensation.—The Gate City, Case No. 5,267.

§ 92. Lay or share in earnings.

The custom of the port where the vessel is owned and from which a fishing voyage is made as to the amount of the master's share will control.—Rich v. The Cherub, Case No. 11,756.

A usage for masters of whalers to wait for their lays until the owners sell the oil is unreasonable and void.—Bourne v. Smith, Case No. 1,701.

The burden of proving such an agreement, made for valuable consideration, is on the owners.—Bourne v. Smith, Case No. 1,701.

An agreement for a certain lay on securing a full cargo of oil is enforceable where a full cargo is secured, but not the number of barrels named. —Babcock v. Terry, Case No. 702.

The master cannot claim a lay in oil made by part of his crew, left behind after the ship is fully loaded, and brought home by another vessel.—Babcock v. Terry, Case No. 702.

General advances made by the owners to the master and co-owner of a whaling vessel, held, might be appropriated in payment of his lay.—Hazard v. Howland, Case No. 6,280.

The master and co-owner of a whaling ship held entitled to recover in admiralty the amount due him as master after the voyage had been made up, and his share of the lay ascertained.—Dexter v. Munroe, Case No. 3,863.

Unascertained indebtedness in the capacity of owner, unconnected with the contract of hiring, cannot be set off in such case.—Dexter v. Munroe, Case No. 3,863.

The master is not to suffer a diminution of his lay for oil sold on credit and never paid for, though due diligence was exercised by the owner.—Bourne v. Smith, Case No. 1,701.

The forfeiture provided in the shipping articles for taking on board spirituous liquors will not be decreed against the master's entire lay.—Hazard v. Howland, Case No. 6,280.

In the absence of fraud, a contract between the master and owners of a whaling ship cannot be varied by parol evidence.—Slocum v. Swift, Case No. 12,954.

§ 93. Liabilities on contract.

A master is personally liable on a contract for the transportation of goods in discharge of a debt due from him, part of which does not rest on a maritime contract.—Fox v. Holt, Case No. 5,012.

The master is not personally liable for the wages of the hands.—Harris v. Nugent, Case No. 6,126.

No account against a vessel is chargeable against a master unless presented within a reasonable time.—Bains v. The James and Catherine, Case No. 756.

Mate becoming master during voyage not liable on contracts of predecessor.—Anonymous, Case No. 467a.

Master giving another shipmaster, brought home by him, a receipt for passage money in a larger amount than actually received, to enable the latter to charge the sum to his owners, liable for full amount of receipt.—Babcock v. Terry, Case No. 702.

Where the master of a fishing vessel is to fit her out and cure the fish himself, giving the owner part of the catch, and paying all bills from the proceeds of the remainder before division with the crew, he is owner pro hac vice, and responsible for the "small generals."—Mayo v. Snow, Case No. 9,356.

The master is not liable for a deficiency on a bottomry bond given by him, in the absence of a covenant binding him personally for the debt. —The Irma, Case No. 7,064.

§ 94. Liabilities for negligence or misconduct.

The master as well as the owners of a vessel is a common carrier, and is personally responsible for his own negligence and misfeasances.—White v. McDonough, Case No. 17,552.

A master who follows the advice of a duly-constituted survey in unloading cargo to repair a leak and in reloading cannot be held negligent.—The Blue Jacket, Case No. 1,569.

The stowing of cargo in steamboats on the western rivers is under the special charge of the mate, and the master is not liable to the owners for negligence therein.—Bissell v. Mepham, Case No. 1,450.

The master, who has stowed goods on deck without the consent of the owner, cannot protect himself for liability for their loss within the exceptions of dangers of the sea.—The Rebecca, Case No. 11,619.

The master is not bound to break up his voyage upon an illegal threat of confiscation, and is not guilty of misconduct in persisting in the voyage, although the vessel be seized and condemned therefor.—Williams v. Suffolk Ins. Co., Case No. 17,738.

The carrying off of a vessel by her master after her owner's death, to a port of a state other than that of the owner's residence, is an act of barratry, even if it be for the purpose of delivering her to persons supposed to be the owner's heirs.—Williams v. The Sylph, Case No. 17,740.

The charterer instructed the master of a vessel, ready to sail, to proceed if the charterer did not come on board in the morning. Held, that the master was not guilty of misconduct in setting sail where the charterer failed to appear.—Dow v. Hare, Case No. 4,037a.

The captain of a steamboat is responsible for the proper performance of the duties of inferior officers whose authority is not expressly made independent of him.—United States v. Farnham, Case No. 15,071.

Is liable for all injury caused by unlawful displacing of mate.—Atkyns v. Burrows, Case No. 618.

The advice of an American consul, in a foreign port, gives to the master of a vessel no justification for an illegal act.—Wilson v. The Mary, Case No. 17,823.

Query whether procuring insurance on unauthorized voyages, and the receiving and selling the cargo, is a ratification of the master's act, waiving his liability for damages.—Robinson v. Hinckley, Case No. 11,954.

The master's liability to the owners is not governed by the same rules which fix his liability to the shippers. He is liable only for reasonable care and diligence.—Bissell v. Mepham, Case No. 1,450.

V. LIABILITIES OF VESSELS AND OWNERS IN GENERAL.

See, also, "Maritime Liens."

Jurisdiction over claims for repairs and supplies, see "Admiralty," § 16.

Liability for seamen's wages, see "Seamen," §§ 111–114.

Remedy on contract for repairs and supplies, see "Admiralty," § 39.

§ 95. Representation of vessel or owners in general.

The ship is liable for all obligations of the master, whether arising ex contractu or ex delicto, where he acts within the scope of his authority as master.—The John L. Dimmick, Case No. 7,355; The Rebecca, Id. 11,619.

The admissions and declarations of the master within the scope of his authority when upon the voyage are admissible against the principal.—Eads v. The H. D. Bacon, Case No. 4,232.

Owners are liable for excess of authority used by master or crew of privateer.—The Amiable Nancy, Case No. 331.

In cases of necessity arising during the voyage, the master's acts are binding upon all parties.—Miston v. Lord, Case No. 9,655.

§ 96. Contracts in general.

Every contract of the master within the scope of his authority as master, by the general maritime law, binds the vessel, and gives the creditor a lien upon it for his security.—The Paragon, Case No. 10,708; McKenzie v. Oglethorpe, Id. 8,857; The Waldo, Id. 17,056.

The shipper has a lien on the vessel for the execution of a contract by a bill of lading, entered into by the master of a chartered vessel, which may be enforced by process in rem in admiralty.—The Phebe, Case No. 11,064.

Only those contracts which the master enters into as such specifically bind the ship, and affect it by way of lien or privilege in favor of the creditor.—The Phebe, Case No. 11,064.

The fact that the vessel was let by a charter party or parol agreement on the condition that the hirer should have the whole control of her will not alter the case.—The Phebe, Case No. 11,064.

The master cannot bind the owners by a contract made in a foreign country, except such as is expressly authorized, or recognized and established by general law of the country of their domicile.—Pope v. Nickerson, Case No. 11,274.

A contract made by the master in his own name, in excess of his authority, is not validated, so as to bind the ship, by the fact that the ship's husband assumed to authorize him to make the contract.—Kimball v. The Dispatch, Case No. 7,773.

The owner is not liable for the contracts of a master, where the charterer was to have entire control, and to victual and man the vessel. —Devoe v. Penrose Ferry Bridge Co., Case No. 3,845; Donahoe v. Kettell, Id. 3,980.

The term "merchandise," in a charter incorporating a steamboat company for the transportation of merchandise, does not apply to mere evidences of value, such as notes, bills, checks, policies of insurance, and bills of lading, and the company is not liable where the master carried such articles unless it be shown that he was authorized to contract for their carriage.—Citizens' Bank v. Nantucket Steamboat Co., Case No. 2,730.

§ 97. Supplies and repairs—In general.

By the general maritime law, material men have a remedy for supplies and materials against the vessel, the owner, and the master. —The Chusan, Case No. 2,717.

One who furnishes supplies, repairs, or advances to a vessel in a foreign port, may elect to hold the owner, master, or vessel.—Brookman v. The Rebecca Fogg, Case No. 1,941.

A shipowner is not liable personally for work upon the ship, unless done by his order or on his credit.—Heppard v. The General Cadwalader and The Major Ringgold, Case No. 6,390.

The obligation of the vessel in the case of a contract for repairs and supplies does not arise until the repairs or supplies are furnished, and for a breach of the contract the vessel is not liable.—The Pacific, Case No. 10,643.

The vessel owners are not liable for supplies furnished to a vessel while frozen in, and in charge of the mate as ship keeper, except for implements for necessary and permanent use on board the vessel.—Fox v. Holt, Case No. 5,012.

The master or owner of a vessel taken into a dry dock for repairs is not bound by a printed tariff of charges not brought to his notice.—Ives v. The Buckeye State, Case No. 7,117.

Where the owner of the dry dock charges for his labor in superintending the work, he will not be allowed to charge for the labor of his men a greater sum than that paid them.—Ives v. The Buckeye State, Case No. 7,117.

Owners sued in personam for repairs made by order of the consignees of the vessel cannot, after admitting ownership, and alleging that the consignees were owners for the voyages under a charter party, and after accepting the repairs, dispute the authority of the consignees to order them made; and such owners are prima facie liable.—McCarthy v. Eggers, Case No. 8,681.

An owner whose name does not appear in the registry is equally liable with the one whose name does so appear for work done on the vessel, though libelant had no knowledge of his interest.—Leef v. Goodwin, Case No. 8,-207.

A libel against owners for supplies will be dismissed as to one who, though registered as owner, was in fact but a mortgagee of part of the vessel, where he had no ostensible connection with the vessel, and credit was not given on the ground of his partnership.—Dugan v. Pentz, Case No. 4,121.

The general owners of a vessel are not liable for supplies or repairs furnished in a foreign port, to a vessel hired on shares, to one who was to victual, man, and control the vessel, but the vessel is liable.—The H. B. Foster, Case No. 6,291.

A material man cannot maintain an action in personam in admiralty, where a note or other obligation has been taken for the demand. —The Hilarity, Case No. 6,480.

§ 98. —— Contracts by master.

The master has authority in a foreign port to procure all supplies and repairs necessary for the safety of the ship and the due performance of the voyage.—The Fortitude, Case No. 4,953.

This authority includes all such supplies and repairs as are reasonably fit and proper, although not indispensably necessary.—The Fortitude, Case No. 4,953.

The master has authority to bind the owners for necessary repairs and supplies in the port of her registry, at which the owner does not reside, and to whom there is no ready access.—Schultz v. Bosman, Case No. 12,488.

The master may bind the owner for repairs, unless it appear that some other person was in authority, with a knowledge of the creditor. —Philips v. Ledley, Case No. 11,096.

Where a person takes drafts from the master, pledging the vessel for the amount, for repairs in a port of distress, with knowledge of a letter from the owners limiting the master's authority, he has no lien on the vessel.—The Woodland, Cases Nos. 17,976, 17,977.

The owners are not personally responsible for debts contracted by the master for repairs, beyond the value of the ship and freight.—Naylor v. Baltzell, Case No. 10,061.

The master cannot bind the owners for supplies when some other person is authorized to manage the business of the ship in that respect, with the knowledge of the creditor.—The Joseph Cunard, Case No. 7,535; Mott v. Ruckman, Id. 9,881.

It need not be shown that supplies furnished on the order of the master in the usual course of business, and appropriated for the voyage, were absolutely necessary, or actually placed on board, in order to bind the owner.—Merritt v. Brewer, Case No. 9,483.

A master acting as general agent for his wife, who is part owner, has no interest in her share, whereby he may bind the vessel for the premium of a policy of insurance taken out in his own name.—Mercantile Ins. Co. v. The Orphan Boy, Case No. 9,431.

A master appointed by the owner, and sailing the vessel on shares with him, has no power to bind one who holds the title merely as security, for supplies furnished in her home port, by representing such person as owner.—Harriman v. Dodge, Case No. 6,104a.

The fraud of the agent of a vessel and the master in a port of distress in making out fraudulent accounts against the vessel for repairs will not invalidate drafts drawn for such amounts, and expressed to be recoverable against the vessel, freight, and cargo, in the hands of a person who, without knowledge of the fraud, discounted them.—The Woodland, Cases Nos. 17,976, 17,977.

§ 99. Advances.

Advances of cash to the master will bind neither vessel nor owners unless shown to have been appropriated to the necessaries of the vessel.—Merritt v. Brewer, Case No. 9,483.

Master may bind vessel and cargo for loan to pay liens of salvors, and prevent delay and expense in their enforcement.—The Clotilda, Case No. 2,903.

A special agent of the charterer cannot charge, against the owners, expenses, advances, or liabilities incurred for the ship.—The Joseph Cunard, Case No. 7,535.

A vessel is liable for authorized advances to a cook, made by the broker who shipped him, though the cook deserts.—Church v. The H. L. Scanton, Case No. 2,710a.

§ 100. Negotiable instruments.

Where a bill of exchange is drawn by the master by authority of the owners in his own name for cargo supplied by the owners, the latter are liable, and are entitled to the same defense against the bill in case of dishonor that they would be as drawers.—Wallace v. Agry, Case No. 17,096.

Master who is authorized to draw on a certain house for a certain sum, and instructed to "extend his drawing," should he not have funds to purchase a cargo, is only authorized to draw on the house named.—Clement's Ex'rs v. Dickey, Case No. 2,883.

§ 101. Torts committed by master or crew—In general.

Owners are answerable for the master's torts under a general principle of the maritime law, and not by virtue of any special contract.—Dean v. Angus, Case No. 3,702. But see Sunday v. Gordon, Case No. 13,616.

A tug in charge of her pilot, during absence of master on shore, went alongside a ship at anchor, and took off eight sailors and their baggage, against remonstrance of ship. Held, that the tug was not liable for the tort, and the bonding of the vessel when sued for the tort was not a ratification of the pilot's acts.—The G. H. Starbuck, Case No. 5,378.

The vessel owners, by abandoning ship and freight, are discharged from personal responsibility for obligations of the master arising ex delicto, both under the general maritime law of Europe and the statutes of Maine.—Stinson v. Wyman, Case No. 13,460.

Quære, whether a ship may be liable in rem for a tort, under circumstances excluding any personal liability of her owners.—Smith v. The Creole, Case No. 13,032.

The owners of a vessel are not liable for the acts of the master in excess of his authority, to the injury of others, in a business different from that for which he was employed.—Dias v. The Revenge, Case No. 3,877.

Under the law of Massachusetts, the liability of the owners for misconduct of the master is limited to the value of the vessel and her freight. —Pope v. Nickerson, Case No. 11,274.

In admiralty, the owner and vessel are liable for injuries done to person or property by the negligence of master and crew only where the owner would, under the same circumstances, be liable in a suit at common law.—The Germania, Case No. 5,360.

The liability of the owners of a vessel for the acts of the master is governed by the law of the place of their domicile, and not by that of the place where the contract was made or to be discharged.—Pope v. Nickerson, Case No. 11,-274.

§ 102. —— Negligent management or navigation.

A shipowner who provides a seaworthy vessel, properly equipped, and commanded by competent officers, has discharged his duty towards the subordinates, and cannot be held liable for mere neglect of officers.—Malone v. Western Transp. Co., Case No. 8,996.

A steamship in charge of a pilot is not liable for injury to a seine in such part of the channel that the steamship would have been in danger of grounding if she had attempted to go around it.—The City of Baltimore, Case No. 2,-744.

An error in judgment on the part of a master not shown to be incompetent in respect to the navigation of the vessel, will not render the owners liable for its consequences.—Haggett v. Bowman, Case No. 5,900.

The vessel is liable for the neglect of the master to present a proper manifest preventing the owner of the goods shipped from passing them through the custom-house.—The Zenobia, Case No. 18,209.

Owner of vessel held not liable for fault of master in failing to notify the shipper's agent of his leaving, so that he might have effected an insurance on the cargo.—Letts v. Hackett, Case No. 8,283.

The neglect or misfeasance of a licensed pilot in securing a vessel improperly to a wharf, whereby she breaks loose and injures another, will not relieve the vessel from liability, as the master is charged with the duty of seeing that she is properly moored.—The Lotty, Case No. 8,524.

The wife of a person killed in a collision with a steamer, while navigating a rowboat in a harbor, may recover against the steamer where she was not navigated with sufficient caution.—The Sea Gull, Case No. 12,578a.

Act July 7, 1838, § 13, makes the fact of the injurious escape of steam full prima facie proof of negligence to charge the defendant in all actions against proprietors of steamboats for injuries occasioned by injurious escape of steam.—The Highland Light, Case No. 6,477.

The acts of congress confine the remedy in rem, for injuries from injurious escape of steam, to actions brought by passengers, and the remedy is in personam against owners for such injuries done to others on board.—The Highland Light, Case No. 6,477.

§ 103. —— Willful or wanton injuries.

Services in detecting the fraud of a master who had barratrously run away with a vessel, and recovering the property, will be recompensed in admiralty, but not as salvage.—The Jacmel Packet, Case No. 7,154.

A vessel is liable for wrongful act of master in his capacity as such, but not for malicious act. —The Aberfoyle, Case No. 16.

Owners are liable for the willful and malicious acts of a master, done in the course and scope of his employment.—Ralston v. The State Rights, Case No. 11,540.

Otherwise of crimes committed by a master, not within the course and scope of his employment.—Ralston v. The State Rights, Case No. 11,540.

A vessel is liable for embezzlement by the master of a portion of the cargo.—The E. M. McChesney, Cases Nos. 4,463, 4,464.

A scow will be held liable for the conversion by its master of a lighter used, without authority, in carrying wood from the shores of Lake St. Clair to the scow.—The Florence, Case No. 4,-880.

Admiralty will not take jurisdiction of a libel in personam for assault committed against a mariner by the officers of the vessel, if the case is of doubtful merits, and must be established by questionable proofs, but will remit libelant to his remedy at common law.—Murray v. Donnelly, Case No. 9,958.

The owners of a whaling vessel are liable for damages for the abduction of a minor by the captain without their knowledge.—Walcott v. Wilcutt, Case No. 17,053; Sherwood v. Hall, Id. 12,777.

The measure of damages for the tort of a master of a vessel who had shipped a minor known to him to have run away from another vessel held to be the amount of wages he was earning on the other vessel, with expenses and losses.—Sherwood v. Hall, Case No. 12,777.

§ 104. Dangerous or defective condition of vessel or appliances.

A person not in the employment of a vessel or of her owners, nor acting in their service or for their benefit, and sustaining no relation to them by contract, has no right of action in rem, in admiralty, against the vessel, for an injury received by him on board of her by falling through an open hatchway.—The Germania, Case No. 5,360.

The vessel is not liable to stevedore injured by imperfect tackle rigged by master for his own use in unloading.—The Aalesund, Case No. 1.

VI. BOTTOMRY AND RESPONDENTIA.

§ 105. Nature of contract—In general.

A bottomry bond is a contract for a loan of money on the bottom of the ship at an extraordinary interest, upon maritime risks, to be borne by the lender, for a voyage or a definite period. —The Draco, Case No. 4,057.

The true grounds of a maritime hypothecation are the necessities of the case, and the want of personal credit.—Forbes v. The Hannah, Case No. 4,925.

§ 106. —— What constitutes.

Marine interest secured is not alone sufficient to show the bond to be in bottomry.—Greely v. Smith, Case No. 5,750.

The bond may be valid as a bottomry bond where the person is liable in the event that the vessel is not lost.—Greely v. Smith, Case No. 5,750.

It is essential to a bottomry transaction that the money lent should run the hazard of the voyage.—The William and Emmeline, Case No. 17,687.

The risk of the lender, and his right to repayment only on the safe arrival of the vessel, constitute the essential difference between bottomry and a simple loan.—The Mary, Case No. 9,187; Greely v. Smith, Id. 5,750.

When a bond provides for no marine interest or marine risk, and its condition is a mere pledge of a vessel to secure a debt and simple interest, it is not a bottomry bond.—Leland v. Medora, Case No. 8,237.

A draft given for advances for repairs in a foreign port, expressed to be "for value received in disbursements and repairs of the brig H.," with directions to charge the same to her account, is neither an hypothecation of the freight nor an assignment thereof.—Murray v. Lazarus, Case No. 9,962.

§ 107. Power of owner to make bond.

A valid bottomry bond may be made by the owners of a vessel in a foreign or a home port. —The Draco, Case No. 4,057.

The owner of a ship may bottomry her abroad, without regard to the necessities of the ship or his inability to procure funds in other ways or the receipt of the consideration before the vessel went to sea.—The Panama, Case No. 10,703; The Mary, Id. 9,187; The Draco, Id. 4,057; Eneas v. The Charlotte Minerva, Id. 4,483.

§ 108. Power of master to make bond—In general.

The master of a ship may hypothecate her under certain circumstances to raise money for her use, but he cannot sell her.—Skrine v. The Hope, Case No. 12,927; Ross v. The Active, Id. 12,071.

Conditions preceding the authority of a master to hypothecate his vessel in a foreign port by bottomry.—Furniss v. The Magoun, Case No. 5,163.

Validity of bottomry bond given in foreign port by master appointed by the lender on the death of the master of the outward voyage, where owner had no agent at the port.—The Edward Albro, Case No. 4,290.

Where advances were made, and a bond given, after the master had resigned his command, and another master, appointed by the charterers, had succeeded to it, the bond is not valid.—Walden v. Chamberlin, Case No. 17,055.

The master who is also part owner may create a bottomry on his own interest without the existence of any necessity for a bottomry.—The Kathleen, Case No. 7,624.

The master of a chartered vessel appointed by the charterers has authority to hypothecate her.—Breed v. The Venus, Case No. 1,827.

Authority of the master to raise money upon the vessel itself in the absence of other means is implied where the owner refuses to pay a bill given for supplies furnished, and sends the creditor to demand payment from the master in a foreign port.—Thomas v. Gittings, Case No. 13,897.

Where the owners, with all the facts before them under which a bottomry bond was given by the master in a foreign port, claim and receive their share of the general average from the underwriters, it amounts to a ratification of the making of the bond.—Gardner v. The White Squall, Case No. 5,239.

The objection of want of authority, where a bottomry bond is given in good faith for necessary supplies, will only go to reduce the premium.—The Eureka, Case No. 4,547.

§ 109. —— Necessity.

Both the necessity for repairs or supplies, and of resorting to bottomry to obtain the money, must exist, to justify a master in raising it on bottomry.—Burke v. The M. P. Rich, Case No. 2,161; The Fortitude, Id. 4,953; Patton v. The Randolph, Id. 10,837; The Lavinia v. Barclay, Id. 8,125; Liebart v. The Emperor, Id. 8,340; Tunno v. The Mary, Id. 14,237; Murray v. Lazarus, Id. 9,962; Gibbs v. The Texas, Id. 5,385; Selden v. Hendrickson, Id. 12,639.

Where money is advanced for repairing a vessel on the credit of the owners, a bond given therefor by the master is invalid.—The Hunter, Case No. 6,904; Rucher v. Conyngham, Id. 12,106.

The master may sell part of the cargo or hypothecate it for necessary repairs, though he has money of the shippers on board; otherwise, where he has sufficient funds of the vessel owners.—The Packet, Case No. 10,654.

The master may bottomry the ship for necessaries in a foreign port when he cannot procure the necessary means from the funds or credit of the owner, whether he has sufficient funds of his own on board to meet the expenses or not.—The William and Emmeline, Case No. 17,687.

The master cannot give a valid bottomry on the vessel for money borrowed for repairs, when the owners are present at the place where the repairs are made, or when he has funds of the owners for such purpose which he has not used.—Patton v. The Randolph, Case No. 10,837; Boreal v. The Golden Rose, Id. 1,658; The Lavinia v. Barclay, Id. 8,125.

A bottomry bond executed by the master of a ship is invalid as to items for advances made without an agreement or reasonable expectation that they were to be secured by bottomry.—The Circassian, Case No. 2,724; Gardner v. The White Squall, Id. 5,239.

It is no objection to a bottomry by the master for necessary repairs in a foreign port that the loan was effected after the same were made.—The Kathleen, Case No. 7,624.

The bond is not void because it was given and the loan made after the vessel sailed on the voyage risked.—Atlantic Ins. Co. v. Conard, Case No. 627.

An anticipated necessity for funds will not justify a master's bottomry bond.—Gibbs v. The Texas, Case No. 5,385.

Supplies are "necessary" when fit and proper for the service, and such as a prudent owner would order.—The Medora, Case No. 9,391.

The necessity for supplies to support a bottomry bond made by the master, need not have been so urgent that the vessel must have been lost to the owner without them.—Thomas v. Gittings, Case No. 13,897.

§ 110. —— Communication with owner.

The master must communicate with the owners of vessel and cargo before giving a bottomry bond where communication is practicable.—The Eureka, Case No. 4,547; The Circassian, Id. 2,724; The Julia Blake, Id. 7,578.

Where the master of the vessel which put into St. Thomas in distress failed to communicate with the cargo shippers at Rio de Janeiro or the consignee at Philadelphia by telegraph, held, that a bottomry bond on the cargo to raise money for repairs was void.—The Julia Blake, Case No. 7,578.

§ 111. —— For what purposes bond may be made.

The master as such, or as agent of the owners in the absence of a consignee, cannot pledge the freight to raise money for private purposes; otherwise where he acts as mortgagor in possession.—Keith v. Murdoch, Case No. 7,652.

On the necessary abandonment of the voyage in a foreign port after repairs made, the master may hypothecate the vessel for the purpose of getting her back to the owners, or for a voyage to a place where she can be sold without sacrifice.—The Robert L. Lane, Case No. 11,892.

When necessary repairs can be made within a reasonable time, the master may hypothecate freight and cargo for that purpose, instead of transshipping.—Schmidt v. The George Nicholaus, Case No. 12,463.

A regular survey by competent and skillful persons, and repairs made in pursuance of their recommendation, is prima facie evidence of the propriety of making the repairs, to justify the master and lender on bottomry.—The Fortitude, Case No. 4,953.

A master carrying goods or freight has no right to pledge or sell them at an intermediate port except for necessary repairs and expenses to enable him to perform the voyage. If he break up the voyage at an intermediate port, he has no right to sell the goods for the benefit of the vessel.—Watt v. Potter, Case No. 17,291.

A valid bottomry bond can be made to procure a loan to pay for repairs made in a port of distress on the credit of the vessel.—The Yuba, Case No. 18,193.

§ 112. Who may take bond.

A cargo owner on board at the time of a disaster may take a bottomry from the master for advances necessary to complete the voyage.—Ross v. The Active, Case No. 12,071.

One part owner cannot take from the master a bottomry bond on the share of another part owner, for repairs done to the vessel.—Patton v. The Randolph, Case No. 10,837.

The consignee of a vessel may apply the proceeds of a cargo and the freight to pay sums due on account of its purchase, without affecting his right to take a bottomry bond from the master for supplies subsequently furnished.—Thomas v. Gittings, Case No. 13,897.

Where the consignee of a vessel employs her without accounting for her earnings, he cannot enforce bonds on the vessel for wages, insurance, and the like.—Clark v. The Leopard, Case No. 2,828.

A consignee who has ample funds to the credit of the vessel cannot take an hypothecation from the master, unless the owner has directed him to appropriate them to another purpose.—The Lavinia v. Barclay, Case No. 8,125; Liebart v. The Emperor, Id. 8,340.

A consignee having cargo and freight or funds in his hands cannot take a bottomry bond from the master for advances made by him.—Hurry v. The John & Alice, Case No. 6,923.

§ 113. —— Foreign port.

Hypothecation can only be made in a foreign port, and under circumstances of absolute necessity, where relief cannot be had otherwise.—Sloan v. The A. E. I., Case No. 12,946.

All maritime ports, other than those of the state where the vessel belongs, are foreign to the vessel, within the rule permitting hypothecation.—Burke v. The M. P. Rich, Case No. 2,161.

Charleston, S. C., is, in respect to hypothecation, a foreign port to New York.—The William and Emmeline, Case No. 17,687.

§ 114. Requisites and validity — In general.

A bond given in a foreign port by the charterers' agent in the charterers' name is good.—Breed v. The Venus, Case No. 1,827.

A bottomry bond is not vitiated by the stipulation that the cost of insurance shall be included in the sum to be paid by the ship in case of her safe arrival.—The Robert L. Lane, Case No. 11,892.

A bond hypothecating a vessel for a particular voyage, and a specific period beyond its termination, held valid as a bottomry bond.—Eneas v. The Charlotte Minerva, Case No. 4,483.

Bond taken with bills of exchange on the owner, for the amount of advances, held to be upon the risk of the voyage, and valid as a bottomry bond.—The Edward Albro, Case No. 4,290.

A bottomry bond may be upon time as well as upon a specific voyage.—The Draco, Case No. 4,057.

The words "lost or not lost," omitted, may be supplied by equivalent expressions.—Atlantic Ins. Co. v. Conard, Case No. 627.

§ 115. —— Consideration.

The payment of a hypothecation is not a valid consideration for a new hypothecation unless it appear that the former one was valid.—Walden v. Chamberlin, Case No. 17,055.

The credit of a bottomry lender given in aid of the vessel or owner in a foreign port is a sufficient consideration to support the bond.—The Panama, Case No. 10,703.

A respondentia bond, unless given for value or as security, does not pass the right of property in the goods.—United States v. Delaware Ins. Co., Case No. 14,942.

§ 116. —— Fraud.

Acquiescence by part owners in a bottomry loan, the circumstances whereof are suspicious, is evidence that it was bona fide.—Roberts v. The Yuba, Case No. 11,920.

A bottomry bond given by the owner of less than half interest in a vessel, but holding the legal title, covering the whole value of the vessel when only one-third of the sum was actually due, held fraudulent as against the other owner.—The William, Case No. 17,684.

A bottomry bond, made for a larger sum than is due, to defraud underwriters, is void.—Carrington v. The Ann C. Pratt, Case No. 2,445; The Ann C. Pratt, Id. 409.

No fraud not participated in by the lender can affect the bond.—Atlantic Ins. Co. v. Conard, Case No. 627.

When a bottomry contract is void for fraud, no recovery can be had as upon an implied contract and lien.—The Ann C. Pratt, Case No. 409.

§ 117. —— Partial invalidity.

A bottomry bond may be held good in part and bad in part, or the maritime interest may be moderated.—The Hunter, Case No. 6,904.

A bottomry covering items of advance not entitled to a bottomry lien is invalid only in part.—Furniss v. The Magoun, Case No. 5,163.

Where a bottomry bond covering the whole vessel is void in toto against a part owner of the vessel for fraud, it cannot be good in part against a purchaser from him, with knowledge that part of the debt secured by the bond was originally good.—The William, Case No. 17,684.

§ 118. —— Recording.

A bottomry bond need not be recorded under a state statute (Act Mass. 1832, c. 57) providing for the registration of chattel mortgages.—The Draco, Case No. 4,057.

A bond, invalid as a bottomry bond, will not be held good as a mortgage where the possession is not changed, and it is not recorded, as required by the state law.—Greely v. Smith, Case No. 5,750.

§ 119. Construction and operation.

Bottomry bonds are not to be construed strictly, but liberally, so as to carry into effect the intention of the parties.—Pope v. Nickerson, Case No. 11,274.

All the papers connected with the bond and shipment will be construed together.—Atlantic Ins. Co. v. Conard, Case No. 627.

A bill of exchange taken with a bottomry bond for the same sum must share the fate of the bond.—Maitland v. The Atlantic, Case No. 8,980; The Hunter, Id. 6,904.

A voyage to a foreign port, there to discharge cargo; thence to another foreign port, there to take cargo; thence to a domestic port,—is continuous with respect to liability of freight moneys to satisfy a bottomry bond given for repairs in the first part of the voyage.—Fish v. The George Thomas, Case No. 4,813b.

Construction and legal effect of the terms, "loss," "average," and "salvage," in a bottomry bond.—Morrison v. The Unicorn, Case No. 9,849.

§§ 120, 121. Rights and duties of lender or holder.

The lender must show the necessity for the expenditures for which the money was advanced.—The Bridgewater, Case No. 1,865; Naylor v. Baltzell, Id. 10,061; Joy v. Allen, Id. 7,552; Walden v. Chamberlin, Id. 17,055; Putnam v. The Polly, Id. 11,482.

Lender is bound to ascertain necessity for advances and absence of other resources.—The Boston, Case No. 1,669.

Where there is an apparent necessity, the lender is under no obligation to ascertain the cause of the injury, or to inquire as to the manner of making the repairs.—The Fortitude, Case No. 4,953.

As against the lender, it is sufficient if there is an apparent necessity, so far as he is able, upon due inquiry and due diligence, to ascertain the fact.—The Fortitude, Case No. 4,953.

The lender is prima facie presumed to have made inquiries as to the apparent necessity, and to have acted upon the facts and circumstances, as made known by the survey.—The Fortitude, Case No. 4,953.

A bottomry creditor can entitle himself to a novation in place of seamen, only by the unconditional payment of their wages.—The Cabot, Case No. 2,277.

The lender upon bottomry in good faith, and under circumstances which justified the loan, cannot be held responsible for the reasonableness of the charges in the repair of the vessel. —The Yuba, Case No. 18,193.

The holder of a bottomry bond given by the master as such, who is also owner, has the same rights and privileges as if the bond was given in the character of owner.—The Panama, Case No. 10,703.

Rights of lender as to homeward cargo, how secured—Preference in United States.—Atlantic Ins. Co. v. Conard, Case No. 627.

The holder of a bottomry bond will not lose his money, where the nonperformance of the voyage has not been occasioned by the enumerated perils, but has arisen from the fault or misconduct of the master or owner.—Pope v. Nickerson, Case No. 11,274.

The delivery to the lender of a bill of lading on the arrival of the vessel is equivalent to a direct consignment to him.—Atlantic Ins. Co. v. Conard, Case No. 627.

An agreement in a respondentia bond to have on board the amount lent, in goods, held not a condition precedent, but the lender could recover the deficiency on a loss.—Franklin Ins. Co. v. Lord, Case No. 5,057.

A collateral agreement to indorse bills of lading as further security held not a condition precedent.—Franklin Ins. Co. v. Lord, Case No. 5,057.

Trover will lie at common law in favor of the lender, against a purchaser who has taken possession of the vessel.—The Draco, Case No. 4,057.

§ 122. Subject-matter hypothecated.

A bottomry bond binds both the ship and her earnings.—The Anastasia, Case No. 347.

A recital that the master was necessitated to take the sum loaned upon the vessel, her cargo and freight, will not control the actual hypothecation clause confined in terms to the vessel and the freight.—The Zephyr, Case No. 18,210.

Freight pledged means the freight of the whole voyage, and not the freight for that part unperformed at the time of giving the bond.—The Zephyr, Case No. 18,210.

Freight prepaid is not liable to the bottomry holder.—The Eureka, Case No. 4,547.

An omission to include the cargo in the hypothecation, if by mistake, may be reformed.—The Zephyr, Case No. 18,210.

§ 123. Debt secured.

Bottomry bonds may be given for security of mercantile or other debts, either in places where the owners dwell, or in foreign places by their order.—Forbes v. The Hannah, Case No. 4,925.

Commissions paid the master by the bondholder are not to be included in the bond, though, if the master has paid them to the owner, he is to repay them without interest.—The Eureka, Case No. 4,547.

No terms inserted in a bottomry by the master can make the owners responsible, beyond the value of ship and freight, for debts contracted for repairs and supplies.—Naylor v. Baltzell, Case No. 10,061.

A bill for the services of a stevedore in the necessary unloading of a vessel to ascertain the extent of the damages may be included in the amount of the bond, as also a charge for commissions in procuring the loan.—The Yuba, Case No. 18,193.

Bond given for advances enforced, though the claims to pay which the money was advanced were not all in fact paid.—Miller v. The Rebecca, Case No. 9,587.

A bond for a pre-existing debt is not valid.—Greely v. Smith, Case No. 5,750; Atlantic Ins. Co. v. Conard, Id. 627; Pickersgill v. Williams, Id. 11,123; Hurry v. The John & Alice, Id. 6,923.

Marine interest is requisite to a bottomry loan, but, if not expressed in the bond, it will be presumed to have been included with the principal.—The Mary, Case No. 9,187.

The agents of a ship advertised for bids on bottomry, but gave a wholly insufficient notice. Held, that the premium on the bond taken by themselves should be reduced.—The Eureka, Case No. 4,547.

Interest held recoverable from the date of a judicial demand, though the bottomry bond contained no stipulation for ordinary interest.—The Grapeshot, Case No. 5,703.

§ 124. Liens and priority.

An hypothecation of a vessel on maritime risks draws after it a maritime lien.—The Draco, Case No. 4,057.

The bottomry lien attaches from the date of the bond, although the ship, by reason of the default of the parties procuring the loan, never performs the voyage described in the bond, but undertakes a different voyage; and the principal of the loan may be recovered in an action in rem, after the completion of that voyage, and as against a claimant who purchased the ship with knowledge of the facts.—Wilmer v. The Smilax, Case No. 17,777.

A bottomry bond given by the master, though invalid as such, may create a lien on the vessel where the master had power of attorney from the owner to borrow money upon the vessel.—Hurry v. Hurry's Assignees, Case No. 6,922.

The lien will not be affected by the mere departure of the vessel from the return port, with or without the knowledge of the holder of the bond.—Burke v. The M. P. Rich, Case No. 2,161.

The lien of a bottomry bond is not discharged by a payment of the debt by the agents of the shipowners with their own money, where they take an assignment thereof.—Johnson v. The Belle of the Sea, Case No. 7,372.

In such case, freight moneys will be applied first to the payment of unsecured disbursements of such agents, leaving the surplus only to be credited on the bond.—Johnson v. The Belle of the Sea, Case No. 7,372.

A delay of a few weeks after the right to enforce a bottomry bond has accrued does not impair the remedy, or enable a junior creditor to take precedence by reason of a prior attachment. —Eneas v. The Charlotte Minerva, Case No. 4,483.

The lien on the bottomry of a foreign vessel held lost by three months' delay to enforce the same, where the vessel was in the meantime sold on an attachment in the state court to bona fide purchasers.—Persee v. The Clarence, Case No. 11,016.

A valid bottomry bond will be upheld, where there are no laches on the part of the lender, even against a bona fide purchaser without notice.—The Draco, Case No. 4,057.

A mortgage on the vessel taken solely to secure money loaned by an assignee of a bottomry bond will not affect its lien.—Burke v. The M. P. Rich, Case No. 2,161.

As between owner of bottomry bond given by master and mortgagee from fictitious owner of vessel sailing under false colors with fraudulent nationality, the proceeds were distributed to the former.—The Acme, Cases Nos. 27, 28.

Advances by the charterer on account of freight will be paid out of freight in preference to subsequent bottomry.—The Anastasia, Case No. 347.

A fraudulent sale by the master in a foreign port, for necessary charges, does not affect the lien arising upon a prior bottomry bond.—Riley v. The Obell Mitchell, Case No. 11,839.

Where a vessel is libeled and sold on a bottomry bond, the fund in court is not subject, as against the bondholder, to any claim for a general average loss subsequent to the date of the bond.—Oologaardt v. The Anna, Case No. 10,545.

The court will marshal the assets so as to make the proper priorities in favor of shippers, against the property of the owner and master. —The Packet, Case No. 10,654.

§ 125. Loss of vessel or cargo.

The borrower on a bottomry and respondentia bond of moneys advanced on the risk of the voyage, payable by its terms on the arrival of the vessel at her port of discharge, and conditioned to be void if the vessel is utterly lost, is discharged, and the bond rendered void, by the total loss of the vessel on her voyage, though part of her tackle and cargo is saved.—Giro v. The Alexander Wise, Case No. 5,463.

Insurers, having satisfied a bottomry claim where the vessel is lost, are entitled to the salved freight, as against a subsequent assignee of the master and owner, who advanced money on the freight for the benefit of the ship and cargo.—Hogan v. Manselly, Case No. 6,584.

In cases of bottomry, a loss, not strictly total, cannot be turned into a technical total loss, by abandonment, so as to excuse the borrower from payment, even although the expense of repairing the ship exceeds her value.—Pope v. Nickerson, Case No. 11,274.

A bond conditioned to be void in case of utter loss of the vessel is not discharged by its stranding and abandonment to insurers as a total loss, and a sale by them at the place of stranding as not worth repairing; and the holder is entitled to the proceeds as against the insurers.—Delaware Mut. Safety Ins. Co. v. Gossler, Case No. 3,766.

§ 126. Payment or satisfaction.

The lender must receive the amount of his bottomry bond at the place where payable, though a bill of exchange is given for the same, payable at another place.—The Zephyr, Case No. 18,210.

One who lends securities for the general use of a shipowner is not subrogated to the lien of the bottomry creditor, who is paid by their proceeds.—Stalker v. The Henry Kneeland, Case No. 13,282.

A sale or transfer of the vessel, or a breaking up of the voyage, by the borrower, after a risk on bottomry has commenced, renders the bond immediately payable.—The Draco, Case No. 4,057.

An acquittance written on a bottomry bond by a son-in-law of the vessel owner, to whom it was sent for collection, who substituted himself as debtor, held fraudulent, and not available to one who purchased with notice of the lender's claim.—Herwig v. Oakley, Case No. 6,435.

Such bond is not waived by bringing suit and recovering judgment against the person to whom it was sent for collection, in ignorance of the facts constituting the fraud.—Herwig v. Oakley, Case No. 6,435.

§ 127. Actions.

A bottomry bond good in part and bad in part will be sustained by the court so far as it is good.—The Packet, Case No. 10,654.

The libelant on a bottomry bond must prove, by other evidence than the bond, the loaning of the money and the making of the repairs, etc., and the necessity of the repairs and the hypothecation.—Crawford v. The William Penn, Case No. 3,373; The Bridgewater, Id. 1,865.

In an action to recover advances made upon a bottomry bond, it is necessary for the libelant to exhibit an account of particulars, and establish the necessity of the advances.—The William and Emmeline, Case No. 17,687.

The onus probandi, that the master has other funds, or that the owner has a personal credit in that port, is on the owner, who resists the bottomry bond.—The Fortitude, Case No. 4,953.

Where the necessity for the repairs is shown, claimant has the burden of showing that the money could have been obtained otherwise than by bottomry.—The Kathleen, Case No. 7,624.

The defense to a bottomry bond, given in consideration of the obligee's assuming the vessel's debts, that the debts were not satisfied, must be clearly made out.—Cohen v. The Amanda Frances Myrick, Case No. 2,962.

The master of a vessel who hypothecated her on bottomry is a competent witness in favor of the holder of the bottomry, particularly if released by him.—Furniss v. The Magoun, Case No. 5,163.

In case of extortion the court may moderate the premium.—The Packet, Case No. 10,654.

The premium paid on bottomry will be included in the amount of a decree for the amount due for supplies and repairs, where they were furnished upon bottomry.—The Grapeshot, Case No. 5,703.

The court will give judgment for the whole or part of a bond as the proofs may show to be equitable and right.—The Bridgewater, Case No. 1,865.

The decree in bottomry is to consider the sum lent and the premium as a principal, and to allow common interest on that sum for the delay of payment after it is due.—The Packet, Case No. 10,654.

Jurisdiction over bottomry claims, see "Admiralty," § 17.

VII. CARRIAGE OF GOODS.

Jurisdiction over contracts of affreightment, see "Admiralty," §§ 4, 14, 15.

Parol evidence as to bill of lading, see "Evidence," § 69.

§ 128. Nature of vessel's liability.

The mere acceptance and transportation of goods, though there is no bill of lading or other written agreement, will subject the vessel to the common-law liability of carrier.—Brower v. The Water Witch, Case No. 1,971.

Where there is no qualification agreed upon, or established by custom or usage, seagoing vessels are liable as common carriers, and bound to deliver the cargo as received, unless prevented by act of God or public enemies.—Crosby v. Grinnell, Case No. 3,422.

The common-law doctrine of carriers' liability by land is applicable in admiralty to carriers by water.—Tompkins v. The Dutchess of Ulster, Case No. 14,087a.

Violation of an express stipulation not to take other cargo makes the carrier an insurer.—Knox v. The Ninetta, Case No. 7,912.

Goods, whether conveyed in the body of a steamboat or in a barge attached thereto, are subject to the same guaranties and protection.—The Dick Keys, Case No. 3,898.

§ 129. Who may make contract of affreightment.

The contract of the master to sell the cargo, and transmit the proceeds to the shipper, will not bind the vessel, where the proceeds are not actually placed on board the vessel.—Herbert v. The James Leakman, Case No. 6,397a.

The ship is liable in rem upon the master's contract of affreightment, though it is let to him by charter party, where the shipper is ignorant of that fact.—McCullough v. The Echo, Case No. 8,740a.

In respect to the liability of the vessel for contracts of transportation made with the master, the law makes no distinction between passengers and merchandise.—The Zenobia, Case No. 18,208.

Ostensible ownership and present possession and authority are sufficient to give the right to bind the ship by a contract of affreightment.—Jackson v. The Julia Smith, Case No. 7,136.

A contract to collect the price of goods shipped, and the freight, from the consignee, and to pay the balance to the consignor, is within the scope of the master's authority, and binding on the vessel owner, where the shipper had no knowledge that the vessel was already chartered.—The Hardy, Case No. 6,056.

The master of a vessel upon the Great Lakes has power, under the custom of the port, to bind the vessel by receiving for transportation goods subject to prior charges, which he is to collect from the consignee, and to return to the shippers.—The Hendrick Hudson, Case No. 6,358.

The lien of a shipper for the performance of such contract is a privileged hypothecation, and takes preference over the lien of a prior chattel mortgage.—The Hendrick Hudson, Case No. 6,358.

The knowledge of the owners of a vessel that the master carried money for hire will not affect them, unless the hire was on their account, or unless the master hired himself out as their agent in that business.—Citizens' Bank v. Nantucket Steamboat Co., Case No. 2,730.

The master cannot subject the ship in rem, much less the co-owners, to a responsibility for cargo not actually laden on board for transportation in the lawful employment of the vessel.—Montell v. The William H. Rutan, Case No. 9,724.

A vessel employed generally to carry stone to a certain port held a general freighting vessel as to return cargoes collected by the master under a custom of the business.—Fox v. Holt, Case No. 5,012.

§ 130. What constitutes a contract of affreightment.

The charter party is a mere contract of affreightment where the owner retains possession, command, and navigation of the ship, and contracts to carry the cargo on freight for the voyage.—Eames v. Cavaroc, Case No. 4,238; The Erie, Id. 4,512.

The charter party is a mere contract of affreightment, where the owners agree to keep the vessel tight, staunch, fitted and provisioned, and to receive on board such lawful goods as the charterers or their agents may think proper to ship.—Richardson v. Winsor, Case No. 11,795.

A charter providing that the owner shall victual and man the vessel, and that the whole of the vessel, except that necessary for the men and stores, shall be at the sole use and disposal of the charterers during the voyage, held to constitute a contract of affreightment.—Donahoe v. Kettell, Case No. 3,980.

Charter party in which master and seamen continued subject to control of owner, held a contract of affreightment, and not a letting of entire ship.—The Aberfoyle, Case No. 16.

§ 131. Construction and operation in general of contract of affreightment.

All parts of a receipt introduced as evidence of a contract of affreightment must be considered in its interpretation.—Butler v. The Arrow, Case No. 2,237.

An agreement repugnant to the terms of a charter party, of which a shipper has no notice, cannot affect his interests injuriously.—Brower v. The Water Witch, Case No. 1,971.

The obligation of the ship in the case of a contract for the conveyance of goods or persons results directly from the contract, and not from the performance, and the liability of both vessel and owner attach at the same time.—The Pacific, Case No. 10,643.

The master may recover damages for injuries to cargo on board of his vessel as a common carrier.—The Francis King, Case No. 5,043.

§ 132. Performance and breach of contract of affreightment in general—Who liable for performance.

In the absence of a special agreement, the duty of the master extends to all that relates to the lading and transportation of the merchandise, and, in the case of a mere contract of affreightment, the shipowners and master are responsible for the faithful performance of these duties.—Richardson v. Winsor, Case No. 11,795.

By the general law maritime, the vessel is bound to the shipper for the performance of a contract of affreightment made with the master, whether by charter party, by bill of lading, or by parol.—The Flash, Case No. 4,857.

§ 133. —— Excuses for nonperformance.

An unusual difficulty in obtaining a master and crew will not excuse nonperformance of the contract.—The Eliza, Case No. 4,348.

A permanent embargo excuses performance; a temporary embargo suspends it.—Bork v. Norton, Case No. 1,659.

The owner is not excused from the performance of a contract for transportation of a cargo by the freezing in of the vessel and the death of the master, but is entitled to a reasonable time to procure a new master, and to await the relief of the vessel.—The Flash, Case No. 4,858.

The vessel is not liable for performance of a contract of affreightment, where the property has not been shipped in pursuance thereof.—Hannah v. The Carrington, Case No. 6,029.

§ 134. —— Lien for performance.

There is no lien upon the vessel for the performance of a contract of affreightment until a lawful contract of affreightment is made, and the property shipped in pursuance thereof.—Hannah v. The Carrington, Case No. 6,029; The Edwin v. Naumkeag Steam Cotton Co., Id. 4,301; The General Sheridan, Id. 5,319; The Pauline, Id. 10,848; Rynaud v. The Richard Cobdan, Id. 12,191; Torices v. The Winged Racer, Id. 14,102; Vandewater v. The Yankee Blade, Id. 16,847; The William Fletcher, Id. 17,692. CONTRA, see The Flash, Case No. 4,857; The Pacific, Id. 10,643.

See, further, "Admiralty," § 15.

§ 135. Delivery to vessel.
A delivery to a vessel's lighter, where a receipt is given, binds the vessel.—Campbell v. The Sunlight, Case No. 2,368.

The receipt of a lighterman, given upon the count or weighing of the officers of the vessel, is not conclusive as to the delivery of all the cargo shipped.—Perry v. Bangs, Case No. 11,013.

The responsibility of the lighterman ceases, and the liability of the vessel commences, when the articles are properly placed on the slings and hooked to the tackle, where the hoisting apparatus belongs to the vessel or the stevedores. —The Cordillera, Case No. 3,229a.

A delivery of goods on the wharf, without notice to the consignee or a valid excuse therefor, is not a good delivery.—The Peytona, Case No. 11,058.

Where a vessel is discharging and taking on cargo at a wharf, a delivery of goods thereon, by the direction of the master, for transportation, is a delivery to such vessel, and her responsibility commences from that time.—The Oregon, Case No. 10,553.

A delivery to a vessel chartered by the agent of a steamer unable to reach her regular port to convey passengers and freight to her, is equivalent to a delivery to the steamer.—The Oregon, Case No. 10,553.

Giving goods to the mate of a vessel for transportation, and taking his signed receipt therefor, is a good delivery to the vessel.—Burdoin v. The Harriet Smith, Case No. 2,147a.

Master not authorized to accept cargo on behalf of owner short of port of delivery.—The Ann D. Richardson, Case No. 410.

Claiming proceeds of sale at intermediate port is not a ratification of master's act.—The Ann D. Richardson, Case No. 410.

§ 136. Bill of lading and shipping receipts in general—Authority to give.
The master has no power to charge the vessel or her owner by signing a bill of lading for goods which are not on board.—The Loon, Case No. 8,499; The Wellington, Id. 17,384.

A person who is in possession under a contract to purchase cannot authorize the giving of such a bill of lading.—The Loon, Case No. 8,499.

§ 137. —— Duty to give.
The master is bound to give a bill of lading when goods are laden on board, even if the freight is not agreed on, or there is a dispute about it; and in such case the bill need not specify the freight.—The May Flower, Case No. 9,346.

The master is in fault where he refused to sign bills of lading, stating that he will call upon the consignor in relation to their stipulations, and sailed without doing so.—The Peytona, Case No. 11,058.

The master cannot keep the goods shipped, and refuse to sign a bill of lading to the order of the shipper, irrespective of his orders from the charterers, or the contract between the shipper and his vendee.—The M. K. Rawley, Case No. 9,679.

§ 138. —— Requisites and validity.
The proper mode of proving the execution of a bill of lading considered.—The Columbo, Case No. 3,040.

A document signed by the master, purporting to be a bill of purchase by a vessel of certain stone, which is delivered as cargo, is not a bill of lading, and the vessel is not holden for the price.—The Skylark, Case No. 12,930.

A bill of lading, signed in blank by the master of a vessel, is not valid, either against the vessel or owners, even in the hands of a bona fide holder.—The Joseph Grant, Case No. 7,538.

The owners and officers who treat a receipt, asserted to have been given by the mate, as genuine and authentic, cannot deny its execution and validity.—Brown v. The Elvira Harbeck, Case No. 2,005.

§ 139. —— Construction and operation.
A bill of lading may be explained by showing that the goods receipted for as shipped were in fact returned to the shippers.—Sutton v. Kettell, Case No. 13,647.

The acknowledgment that cargo was received in good order may be explained or disproved by parol testimony.—The Martha, Case No. 9,145.

A bill of lading, in so far as it is a contract, cannot be affected by parol, though subject to explanation as a receipt.—The Wellington, Case No. 17,384.

The option to reconsign under the provision "with shipper's reconsignment option" cannot be exercised by the consignee; and parol evidence is inadmissible to show a usage to the contrary.—McGovern v. Heissenbuttel, Case No. 8,805.

Construction of clause providing for shipment on other vessels of the same line if prevented by any cause from shipping on the vessel named. —Kirkpatrick v. American S. S. Co., Case No. 7,846.

Bills of lading signed by the master before the goods are on board operate on the goods as received, as against the shipper and master, by way of relation and estoppel.—The L. J. Farwell, Case No. 8,426.

The owner of a vessel is not estopped from having the circumstances attending the signing and transfer of a blank bill of lading inquired into by the court.—The Joseph Grant, Case No. 7,538.

A factor consignee who is in advance to the shipper, acquires, by the execution and delivery of a clean bill of lading, a property in the goods, and a right to their delivery by the ship, which cannot be devested by any subsequent acts of the shipper and the master.—Wiener v. The Rafael Arroyo, Case No. 17,621.

§ 140. —— Indorsement.
An indorsement, as follows, by the master of a chartered ship on a bill of lading: "Signed under protest,"—prevents assignees of the bill from claiming as bona fide holders.—In re Nine Hundred and Seventy-Nine Boxes of Sugar, Case No. 10,271.

§ 141. —— Priority.
A bill of lading, signed only by the brokers who procured the cargo, held of no effect as against a prior regular bill of lading signed by the master and owner of the boat.—Vandover v. Wilmot, Case No. 16,848.

Bills of lading issued at different times for wheat not then delivered become concurrently operative as the wheat is placed on board, and, in the absence of appropriation by the shipper, where only a part is shipped, bona fide holders are entitled to the pro rata quantity called for by their bills.—The L. J. Farwell, Case No. 8,426.

One who advances money upon a bill of lading issued to one of the joint charterers, and covering his property, may recover the value of the same from the ship, notwithstanding a similar bill of lading agreed between the parties to have priority was theretofore issued to the other charterer.—Byrnes v. The Rockaway, Case No. 2,274.

§ 142. Loading and stowage—What constitutes stowage.

See, also, post, §§ 163, 165.

The handling of goods shipped is a part of the stowage, for negligence in which the vessel is liable.—The Black Hawk, Case No. 1,469.

§ 143. —— Delay in loading.

Vessel held not liable for delay to lighters in taking heavy timber aboard caused by smallness of vessel's hatch and between decks, where the kind of timber was not specified in the contract.—The Innocenta, Case No. 7,050.

§ 144. —— Manner of stowage.

It is bad stowage to place hogsheads of sugar on barrels of whisky, without dunnage and beds at the bottom.—Crocket v. Brower, Case No. 3,401.

Parol evidence is admissible to show a supplemental agreement for a particular mode of stowage under deck.—The Star of Hope, Case No. 13,313.

A shipper who agrees that his goods shall be carried on deck, and assents to the manner of stowing and protecting them, cannot recover for an injury by rain, where all reasonable care was taken of them during the voyage.—The Thomas P. Thorn, Case No. 13,927.

Conflicting surveys by port wardens and marine surveyors, appointed by the chamber of commerce and board of underwriters, are not evidence as to manner of stowage of cargo.—Crocket v. Brower, Case No. 3,401.

Shippers must notify carriers of their wishes as to stowage where they consider the notorious custom of stowing such goods hazardous.—Baxter v. Leland, Cases Nos. 1,124, 1,125.

It is not the duty of a mate, in loading casks of wine from a lighter, either to work at the fall, or bear off with his own hands the cask from the side, as it is about to come aboard.—Wilson v. The Belvidere, Case No. 17,790.

Stowage of hogsheads of sugar upon their heads is sanctioned by usage.—Williams v. Mora, Case No. 17,730.

Where a ship was laden with tobacco in hogsheads and lard in barrels, and, without having encountered rough weather, lard was pumped from her on the voyage, and the tobacco was damaged by lard running into it, held that the damage was due to causes other than perils of the sea.—The Newark, Case No. 10,141.

§ 145. —— Place of stowage.

Clean bills of lading for the carriage of goods between ports, where no usage to the contrary exists, require the cargo to be stowed under deck.—The Governor Carey, Case No. 5,645a; In re Two Hundred and Sixty Hogsheads of Molasses, Id. 14,296; Vernard v. Hudson, Id. 16,921; The Wellington, Id. 17,384; Clifton v. Quantity of Cotton, Id. 2,895.

Goods carried on deck are at the risk of the vessel, even as against dangers of the seas, unless they would have been equally fatal if the goods had been under deck.—The Waldo, Case No. 17,056.

Whether stowage of goods under a poop deck is a stowage under deck, within the meaning of a bill of lading, is not dependent upon whether or not the poop deck was built when the ship was originally constructed, but upon whether it afforded sufficient protection to the goods.—Williams v. Mora, Case No. 17,730.

The main deck of a propeller bulwarked entirely around, covered by an upper deck, and specially constructed for cargo, held a proper place to stow oil.—The Neptune, Case No. 10,118.

There is no established custom of trade between Portland and Boston authorizing the carrying of goods on deck without the consent of the owner.—The Paragon, Case No. 10,708.

§ 146. —— Expenses.

The vessel is not entitled to compensation for storage, wharfage, and incidental expenses of loading where the cargo is returned to the shipper on notice of an embargo being given after it was all loaded, but before the bill of lading was signed.—Kelly v. Johnson, Case No. 7,672.

§ 147. Custody and control of goods.

A stipulation giving the shipper the right to change the destination because of blockade does not authorize such change by the ship, on the advice of the consignee, because of a poor market.—Eneas v. Schiffer, Case No. 4,484.

§ 148. Transshipment and forwarding.

Where a vessel is compelled to lie in a foreign port for five months waiting for means to procure repairs, the voyage is in effect broken up, and the vessel owner should transship the cargo if able to do so.—Phelan v. The Alvarado, Case No. 11,067.

A carrier is not justified, from press of business at a port preventing delivery for several days, in taking the goods to another place, and forwarding them from there to the consignees.—Strong v. Certain Quantity of Wheat, Case No. 13,541.

A custom of a vessel to land and store goods without notice of the consignee is not applicable where the carrier transships the goods by rail without notice to the shipper.—Howe v. The Lexington, Case No. 6,767a.

A contract for transportation on the Great Lakes may be performed by a land conveyance in case of obstruction.—Bork v. Norton, Case No. 1,659.

Burden is on libelant to show that injury to goods transshipped not appearing externally was caused on board vessel libeled.—The Adriatic, Case No. 90.

Shipowners are bound to send the goods by the vessel on which they are laden, and which has an advertised time of leaving, when the bill of lading is delivered.—Harrison v. Stewart, Case No. 6,145.

The vessel owner has no right, without necessity, to change the vehicle of conveyance of goods shipped on freight for a voyage.—Trott v. Wood, Case No. 14,190.

A usage, to control such general rule, will not affect the rights of the parties unless it is very clear and uniform.—Trott v. Wood, Case No. 14,190.

Lighterage does not apply to overloading at the commencement of a voyage.—Dorris v. Copelin, Case No. 4,011.

The condition, "privileges of lighting and reshipping," authorizes the vessel to reship as its interest or convenience may advise, and imposes the duty to do so when necessary and practicable.—Dorris v. Copelin, Case No. 4,011.

Such condition does not authorize reshipping before the voyage has been commenced by the original vessel.—Dorris v. Copelin, Case No. 4,011.

Expense of transshipment to port of destination is a charge on freight alone.—Smith v. Welsh, Case No. 13,126.

§ 149. Delivery by vessel—In general.

Under a bill of lading of a cargo of granite blocks, silent as to delivery, the consignees are bound to discharge the cargo in the usual way with reasonable diligence.—Coombs v. Nolan, Case No. 3,189.

The engagement as to delivery is controlled by a usage of consignees at the particular port to receive shipments during the quarantine season, at the quarantine grounds.—Bradstreet v. Heran, Case No. 1,792.

The contract to deliver will be construed as subject to all restraints of government, such as sanitary or prohibitory laws.—Bradstreet v. Heran, Case No. 1,792.

The carrier fulfills his undertaking by bringing the cargo to the appointed port, with notice to the consignee of that fact, and the readiness of the ship to deliver it at a convenient and proper place.—Leaning v. Standish, Case No. 8,161.

The existence of a charter party, of which the shipper had no knowledge, will not relieve the vessel from the lien which the shipper has for the safe conveyance and delivery of his goods.—Sanders v. The Ellen Hardy, Case No. 12,293.

An agreement between the consignee of a vessel and the owner or consignee of her cargo as to the time and manner of its delivery will bind the vessel.—The Grafton, Cases Nos. 5,655, 5,656.

The ship must put casks containing cement in proper landing order before discharging them, and recooper them in the hold, if necessary to save their contents.—The Harold Haarfager, Case No. 6,083.

Expense of bringing a vessel into port after separation of cargo is a charge on the vessel alone.—Smith v. Welsh, Case No. 13,126.

§ 150. —— Time of delivery.

The time allowed for delivery will be determined by the usages of the port, where the bill of lading is silent in regard thereto. Evidence of an oral contract as to the time is inadmissible.—Higgins v. United States Mail S. S. Co., Case No. 6,469.

§ 151. —— Place of delivery.

Where the bill of lading is silent as to the place of delivery, the vessel is obliged to discharge the cargo at the shipper's wharf according to the usages of the port.—Higgins v. United States Mail S. S. Co., Case No. 6,469.

The usage of the port in such case is binding as a maritime contract on both parties.—Higgins v. United States Mail S. S. Co., Case No. 6,469.

The shipper has no right to demand the cargo at an intermediate port, without paying full freight, whether it be damaged or not.—Jordan v. Warren Ins. Co., Case No. 7,524.

A steamboat bill of lading for the delivery of goods at a certain point, specifying the rate of freight to a more distant point, is a through contract, and binds the carrier to deliver at the latter point.—Woodward v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., Cases Nos. 18,006, 18,007.

Special usage in a trade may give consignee right to choose place of discharge.—The Boston, Case No. 1,671.

A consignee, who has a right to designate where to discharge the cargo, must select a suitable and safe place.—Robbins v. Welsh, Case No. 11,887.

The sole consignee; or all the consignees, if unanimous, may direct the master to unlade at any usual and convenient wharf at the port of discharge.—The E. H. Fittler, Case No. 4,311.

The majority shippers, who have the right to choose the wharf under the usage of the port of Boston, must notify the master of their choice before he renders himself liable to the wharfinger of a wharf chosen by himself.—The E. H. Fittler, Case No. 4,311.

In the case of a general ship having the goods of several shippers, the master may lawfully proceed to any such wharf without consulting the shippers.—The E. H. Fittler, Case No. 4,311.

§ 152. —— Notice to consignee.

Newspaper notice to consignees to present their permits within a certain time is not good, unless it is shown to have been brought home to them.—Snow v. The Inca, Case No. 13,145a.

The publication of the cargo list of a steamer was not such a notice to the consignee as to discharge the shipowner from liability under a bill of lading, the goods having been unloaded, and sold for storage.—Caruana v. British & N. A. Royal Mail Steam-Packet Co., Case No. 2,484.

A carrier by water must, as a general rule, notify the consignee of the arrival of the goods. If he fails to do so, he must prove an excuse.—The Mary Washington, Case No. 9,229.

Where the unloading is temporarily interrupted by the crowded state of the wharf, on account of the other consignees not removing their goods, no new notice need be given on resumption of the work.—Salmon Falls Mfg. Co. v. The Tangier, Cases Nos. 12,266, 12,267.

Casual knowledge of the vessel's arrival and purpose to discharge at a certain wharf does not dispense with notice.—The Middlesex, Case No. 9,533.

A master who has wrongfully omitted to sign bills of lading, and sailed without learning the names of the consignees, cannot avail himself of this ignorance as an excuse for not giving notice of the landing of the goods.—The Peytona, Case No. 11,058.

The vessel has the burden of showing that notice was given to the consignee of the place where the vessel was to discharge.—The Prince Albert, Case No. 11,426.

§ 153. —— Duties of consignee or owner as to delivery.

The consignee takes the risk of roads and means of transportation from the dock, and is bound to remove the cargo from the vessel's side as fast as it can be reasonably discharged. —Sprague v. West, Case No. 13,255.

Under a bill of lading giving the vessel the right to store the cargo at the consignee's risk and expense, where it is not taken from alongside "immediately the vessel is ready to discharge," the consignee in the case of boxwood scattered through the cargo, having been used as dunnage, must receive the same as it is unloaded from day to day.—The Kathleen Mary, Case No. 7,625.

A provision that any extra expense of discharging is to be paid by the consignee makes him liable for such extra expenses as are necessarily incurred.—Barstow v. Wilmot, Case No. 1,066.

A known usage and custom of the ship's agents to protect goods after they are landed, and to make a small charge for services therefor, will control the contract as to delivery.—The Tybee, Case No. 14,304.

§ 154. —— What constitutes delivery.

In the absence of a special contract, goods will be regarded as delivered when deposited upon the proper wharf at their place of destination, at a proper time, and notice given to the consignee, after which he has had a reasonable time and opportunity to remove them.—The Tybee, Case No. 14,304; Kennedy v. Dodge, Id. 7,701; Salmon Falls Mfg. Co. v. The Tangier, Id. 12,266, 12,267; The Grafton, Id. 5,656; The Santee, Id. 12,328; The Middlesex, Id. 9,533; Warner v. The Illinois, Id. 17,184a.

Delivery of goods upon the wharf is not a delivery to the consignee, unless he has authorized such a delivery, or there is proof of a well-defined and notorious custom to that effect.—Snow v. The Inca, Case No. 13,145a.

A landing of goods piled in one bulk upon the wharf on a stormy day, and covered with tarpaulins, so as not to be open to inspection, is not a good delivery, though the bill of lading provides that the landing upon the wharf shall be considered a delivery.—Dibble v. Morgan, Case No. 3,881.

In a case of goods landed on the steamship's own inclosed wharf, held, that the liability of the ship as carrier continued until the expiration of a reasonable time.—The St. Laurent, Case No. 12,231.

Where prior notice has not been given, the responsibility of the carrier continues until the lapse of a reasonable time in which to remove the goods.—Salmon Falls Mfg. Co. v. The Tangier, Case No. 12,266.

Consignees are entitled to a reasonable opportunity to ascertain whether goods delivered correspond in quantity and condition with the description given in the shipping documents, and the carriers liability continues until the expiration of such reasonable time.—Bradstreet v. Heran, Case No. 1,792.

The master's liability as a common carrier ceases when the cargo is unladen on a wharf, by direction of the consignee.—Howland v. The Henry Hood, Case No. 6,795.

Placing goods in a public storehouse without notice to the consignee, when he is known, does not release the liability of the ship for their safe-keeping and ultimate safe delivery.—Snow v. The Inca, Case No. 13,145a.

A stipulation in the bill of lading, that cotton should be received as unloaded, package by package, and thereafter should not be at the expense or risk of the vessel, is not unreasonable, and will be enforced.—The Santee, Cases Nos. 12,328, 12,330.

In such case, where the full number of packages are discharged on the wharf, the ship is not liable, though they were not all received by the consignee, where he had previous notice of the unloading, and the ship did not deliver to another.—The Santee, Cases Nos. 12,328, 12,330.

The fact that the consignee was obliged to receive the cargo as landed on the wharf, package by package, does not dispense with the necessity of due notice to the consignee, and a reasonable opportunity to identify the goods, and receive them into his custody.—The Santee, Case No. 12,330.

A case of goods put over the vessel's side upon a truck and wheeled to the place where it was inspected and marked for the public store, and then wheeled further up the wharf, and disappearing within a half hour within the inclosure, held not delivered so as to exonerate the vessel.—The Ville De Paris, Case No. 16,942.

It is not a sufficient delivery of a cargo of wheat in bulk to moor the vessel at the dock of the consignee's elevator during bad weather, without notice to him.—Germania Ins. Co. v. La Crosse, etc., Packet Co., Case No. 5,361.

Delivery of cargo according to the usage of the port is equivalent to delivery to the consignee personally or at his warehouse.—Field v. The Lovett Peacock, Case No. 4,768.

§ 155. —— Failure or refusal of consignee to receive cargo or pay freight.

Master cannot carry cargo to another port where consignees refuse to receive it, but is bound to land and store it.—Arthur v. The Cassius, Case No. 564.

Where master sells it at another port, owners may recover value at port of delivery.—Arthur v. The Cassius, Case No. 564.

Declining to receive cargo, in apprehension of bad weather, will not compel a general ship to lie idle.—The Grafton, Case No. 5,656.

Duty of the ship master, where consignee refuses to pay freight, and there is no proper place for storage at the port of destination.—Fox v. Holt, Case No. 5,012.

On refusal of consignees to pay the freight, the owners may retain sufficient of the cargo to cover the amount.—Fox v. Holt, Case No. 5,012.

The holder of the bill of lading cannot require delivery of the cargo without paying freight, but may require it to be discharged so that it can be inspected by him.—The Treasurer, Case No. 14,159.

§ 156. —— Delivery of goods shipped C. O. D.

Bills of lading "C. O. D." are not a lien on the vessel to secure payment of the money collected from the consignee on delivery of the goods.—The Illinois, Case No. 7,005.

A contract to transport goods, and collect and return the money therefor, is one of affreightment. and the consignor has a lien against the vessel for money so collected.—Zollinger v. The Emma, Case No. 18,218.

§ 157. Nondelivery or misdelivery—Failure to deliver in general.

The shippers are not bound by a sale in a port of distress by the American consul, against the master's protest, of a portion of a cargo of wheat, on information that the inhabitants, on account of scarcity of food, would resist its loading.—O'Connell v. The Tally Ho, Case No. 10,418.

Liability for nondelivery in the case of loss of green sugar by drainage and breaking of bags.—The Gomez De Castro, Case No. 5,525.

A master having stipulated by bill of lading to deliver cargo to a certain consignee, afterwards signed a second bill of lading by which he stipulated to deliver a certain part of the cargo to plaintiff as security for money subsequently borrowed of plaintiff by the shipper. Held that, if he delivered all the cargo to the original consignee, he was liable to plaintiff for failure to deliver the stipulated part to him.—Stille v. Traverse, Case No. 13,444.

Failure of master to deliver cargo in accordance with terms of bill of lading renders vessel liable for agreed value less freight and charges. —Atlantic & P. Guano Co. v. The Robert Center, Case No. 630.

The vessel is not liable for failure to deliver according to the bill of lading, where the regular warehouseman, because of personal difficulties with the consignee, would not receive the goods, and the master caused them to be stored with another. Case No. 1,566 reversed.—Blossom v. Smith, Case No. 1,565.

The vessel is not responsible for nondelivery pursuant to the bill of lading, where she puts into a port in a crippled condition because her crew are disabled by disease.—Maas v. The Pedee, Case No. 8,652.

The master of a vessel may lawfully refuse to deliver to the consignee goods which, having been attached on his vessel, are carried to the port of consignment under an agreement with the sheriff that they should be returned.—The Lord, Case No. 8,504.

The detention of the vessel by quarantine officials is no excuse for failure to deliver the goods at the wharf as stipulated in the bill of lading, where such goods are permitted to be removed.—Leland v. Agnew, Case No. 8,236.

Where the shipowners refused to deliver such goods, the expense of removal from the vessel by the consignee may be offset against the freight.—Leland v. Agnew, Case No. 8,236.

The holder of a bill of lading has a remedy in admiralty, where the goods are not delivered, either against the master or the owners or the vessel.—The Leonidas, Case No. 8,262.

On a libel for damages for failure to deliver sovereigns shipped as freight under a bill of lading, their value is to be estimated in the currency of the country of the port of delivery and where the suit is brought.—The Patrick Henry, Case No. 10,805.

In estimating damages for a failure to deliver the goods, expenses of the shipper in hunting up the property and in defending his title in court are not allowed.—Jackson v. The Julia Smith, Case No. 7,136.

Where the owner of a cargo of a sunken vessel raises it, after notice to the owner of the vessel, the expense of such raising may be allowed as damages in a suit for nondelivery.—The Sunswick, Case No. 13,625.

A vessel is liable to a consignee who has advanced money on the bill of lading, although the goods were illegally seized by the customs authorities at the commencement of the voyage.—The Matilda A. Lewis, Case No. 9,281.

The vessel is not liable under a bill of lading for nondelivery of a cargo sold by the master of a vessel driven ashore by a peril of the sea to pay salvage.—The Wiley Smith, Case No. 17,657.

Consignee of barrels of flour held entitled to identical barrels shipped, though description in bill of lading was not complete.—The Ben Adams, Case No. 1,289.

Trover will not lie against the master of a vessel for the cargo, unless the freight is paid or tendered or waived, or where the goods were lost.—Hodgson v. Woodhouse, Case No. 6,571.

§ 158. —— Short delivery.

A vessel giving a clean bill of lading for a specified number of bushels of corn is liable for any deficiency, although she proves that she delivered all she received.—Creighton v. The George's Creek, Case No. 3,382.

The master of the vessel is not liable for a greater quantity of cargo than that actually laden on board, though less than that stated in the bill of lading, where the weighing was done by the shipper.—Hopkins v. Wood, Case No. 6,693.

The wharf being the place of delivery, evidence that the number of articles called for by the bill of lading were placed thereon will exonerate the ship, as against evidence that a lesser number were received at the consignee's storehouse, whither his own cartman conveyed them.—Struver v. The Roderick Dhu, Case No. 13,552.

The owners of a ship must show that missing portions of a cargo were discharged, and placed on that part of the wharf selected for the deposit of the consignee's goods.—Carey v. Atkins, Case No. 2,399.

To charge the carrier with an alleged deficiency, the testimony of the parties who actually loaded the vessel is the best evidence.—Cafiero v. Welsh, Case No. 2,286.

The burden of showing that the vessel did not receive on board the number of bales of cotton receipted for is not sustained by the mere statement of the purser that such number was received, but a part of them left behind.—The Saragossa, Case No. 12,336.

The evidence showing that the cargo as received was all delivered at the port of destination, the official weight at that place is conclusive of the extent of the carrier's responsibility, notwithstanding the terms of the bill of lading.—Cafiero v. Welsh, Case No. 2,286.

§ 159. —— Misdelivery.

A bona fide purchaser of a bill of lading to consignee or order may hold the ship liable, though the goods are replevied on arrival by one who sold them to the shipper, for nonpayment of the price. Case No. 9,197 affirmed.—The Mary Ann Guest, Case No. 9,196.

The indorsee of the shipper's bill of lading, who cashed a draft on the consignee on the faith thereof, may recover the amount of the draft, with interest, against the vessel which delivered the goods to the consignee without production of the shipper's bill of lading.—The Thames, Cases Nos. 13,858, 13,859.

A person to whom a draft secured by a bill of lading is made payable as "cashier," for the purposes of collection, may proceed against the vessel in his own name for a wrongful delivery of the cargo to another.—The Thames, Case No. 13,859.

Person to whom goods were delivered, though not consignee, held, on the evidence, in an action for nondelivery, duly authorized by the consignee to receive them.—The Ione v. Davis, Case No. 7,058.

On a libel for not delivering coal according to the terms of the bill of lading, it being landed at a wrong wharf, the measure of damages is the value of the coal less the freight charges.—The Boston, Case No. 1,671.

Counsel fees in a replevin suit by a shipper to recover the coal are not included in the damages assessed.—The Boston, Case No. 1,671.

§ 160. Delay in transportation or delivery.

In the case of delay caused by a sick and incompetent crew, the liability of the vessel is determined by the condition of facts at the time the vessel sailed.—The Gentleman, Case No. 5,323.

While the ship is still detained in port by ice, an action will not lie for breach of a bill of lading for goods laden thereon, without a rescission of the contract.—Jones v. The Floating Zephyr, Case No. 7,462.

The measure of damages for delay in delivering cargo is the difference in market value at the time of the actual delivery and the time when by reasonable diligence it should have been delivered.—Page v. Munro, Case No. 10,665.

§ 161. Loss or injury—Liability in general.

Must take adequate measures to protect cargo against a common and ordinary occurrence, which might have been foreseen.—Bearse v. Ropes, Case No. 1,192.

Not necessarily exonerated by the taking of the usual care and precautions, and the conveyance of goods in the usual manner.—Bearse v. Ropes, Case No. 1,192.

A carrier by sea is not exempt from liability on account of loss through the ordinary perils of navigation.—Tompkins v. The Dutchess of Ulster, Case No. 14,087a.

The master is not answerable for losses arising from unavoidable accidents, mere errors of judgment, or failure of success, after having exercised all reasonable diligence and discretion.—Dean v. Angus, Case No. 3,703.

The vessel is not liable for damages caused by its sweating.—McCullough v. The Echo, Case No. 8,740a.

The French Code de Commerce does not differ from the general maritime law in respect to liens on the ship for damage to the cargo.—The Zone, Case No. 18,220.

In a suit in rem for loss or injury of goods, it is not necessary to charge defendant as a common carrier.—Seller v. The Pacific, Case No. 12,644.

§ 162. —— Unseaworthiness or unfitness of vessel as ground of liability.

A carrier by water must provide a seaworthy vessel for the voyage and cargo. He is bound to know the condition and strength of the vessel.—Kellogg v. La Crosse, etc., Packet Co.,

Case No. 7,663; The Northern Belle, Id. 10,-319.

The fact that a vessel is not a common carrier does not relieve her from the warranty implied in a contract of affreightment, that she is sound, stanch, and seaworthy.—The Planter, Case No. 11,207a.

A ship is hypothecated to the shipper for any damages sustained by the insufficiency of the vessel, or the fault of the master or crew.—The Casco, Case No. 2,486.

A vessel equipped in a manner which renders her competent to encounter the ordinary perils of a voyage is seaworthy.—Fitzpatrick v. Eight Hundred Bales of Cotton, Case No. 4,843.

The fact that the mizzen sail of the vessel gave out in the extraordinary storm, and that she had no spare mizzen sail, does not show that she was unseaworthy when she sailed.—Fitzpatrick v. Eight Hundred Bales of Cotton, Case No. 4,843.

Insufficient sail, resulting in lost time on the voyage, held would render the vessel liable for subsequent injury and loss of the cargo, where she was obliged to put into port within 200 miles of home in anticipation of heavy weather.—The Thomas Jefferson, Case No. 13,923.

The vessel is liable where damage to cargo is due to the defective and obsolete construction and arrangement of her bulwarks and stanchions.—The Howden, Case No. 6,765.

An underdeck cargo of grain shifted in a storm because of the absence of shifting boards, and contributed to produce a list of the ship. Held, that the vessel was liable for the value of cattle washed overboard after the list.—Fleishman v. The John P. Best, Case No. 4,861.

The splitting of the rudder post in a gale of no extraordinary violence is evidence of unseaworthiness.—In re Nine Hundred and Twenty-Eight Barrels of Salt, Case No. 10,272.

Running in a fog, in calm weather, upon a well-known cape, is proof of unseaworthiness, not rebutted by fact that vessel was new, and well built, rigged and manned, and in charge of a captain of reputed skill and experience.—Bazin v. Steamship Co., Case No. 1,152.

Where the loss was not attributable to the undermanning of a vessel, no recovery can be based thereon.—The Planter, Case No. 11,207a.

A lumber-laden sloop held unseaworthy because of insufficient crew, and rotten timbers causing her seams to open in a moderate storm. —Lyon v. Fifty-Six Thousand Four Hundred and Twelve Feet of Lumber, Case No. 8,647.

The absence of a crew at night with the consent of the master, who remained on board alone while the ship was anchored in a harbor, renders the vessel unseaworthy; and she is liable for damages to cargo where she is driven ashore by a gale arising after the crew left.—The Sarah, Case No. 12,338.

A vessel is not seaworthy which is not manned by the necessary officers and crew.—The Planter, Case No. 11,207a.

A carrier is not liable for damages to cotton in bales for moisture previous to the time of lading of which the master of the vessel had no knowledge.—Choate v. Crowninshield, Case No. 2,691.

Where goods are lost by the vessel springing a leak while at anchor in a harbor, the shipowner must show some stress of weather or other circumstances sufficient to account for such a leak in a vessel of ordinary strength.—The Vivid, Case No. 16,978.

Vessel 15 years old held unseaworthy where she sprung a leak when 24 hours out of port, and her logbook did not show unusual stress of weather.—Tudor v. The Eagle, Case No. 14,-230.

A vessel which springs a leak within 20 hours after leaving port, so as to compel a jettison of part of her cargo, where no tempestuous weather was encountered, held presumptively unseaworthy when she left port.—The Planter, Case No. 11,207a.

§ 163. —— Negligence in loading.

The vessel which receives cargo at her anchorage is liable for its loss by the bursting of a boiler on a steam lighter provided at her expense, under the custom of the port.—The Edwin, Case No. 4,300; The Edwin v. Naumkeag Steam Cotton Co., Id. 4,301.

§ 164. —— Negligent management or navigation.

Blowing is one of the ordinary occurrences on a sea voyage, and the ship is bound to take proper precautions to guard against injury therefrom.—The Wilhelmina, Case No. 17,658.

Running into the Columbia river without a pilot, and without any imperative necessity for so doing, where the navigators had no knowledge of the tide and wind to be encountered at the season, held negligence.—The Jenny Jones, Case No. 7,286.

The necessity to keep schedule time will not justify a vessel in running at full speed in a fog alongshore.—The Rocket, Case No. 11,975.

It is bad seamanship to run at full speed in a fog alongshore, where there is danger of a mistake in reckoning.—The Rocket, Case No. 11,975.

A grounding cannot be imputed to the fault or misconduct of the master where, arriving off Mobile, towards evening, on indications of bad weather, and inability to procure a pilot, he attempts to follow a pilot boat up the bay. —Van Syckel v. The Thomas Ewing, Case No. 16,877.

The vessel is not liable for damages caused by grounding where the officers exercised reasonable care and skill in her navigation.—Levy v. The Great Republic, Case No. 8,302.

In a voyage from a port known by the master to be infested with rats, the keeping of cats on board is not sufficient to excuse the carrier from liability.—Kirkland v. The Fame, Case No. 7,845.

Where a steamboat with loaded barges approached a bridge too closely to back or stop, and was driven against a pier by a sudden gust of wind, held, that the carrier was not liable for loss of cargo.—The Lady Pike, Case No. 7,985.

Vessel held liable for destruction of cargo by fire caused by a collision through the negligence of the vessel.—The City of Norwich, Case No. 2,760.

Ship held liable for damage done to a cargo of tea by defacement of the labels by cockroaches.—Westray v. The Miletus, Case No. 17,461.

§ 165. —— Improper stowage.

The owner of the cargo may recover for a loss caused by the capsizing of the vessel due solely to improper loading.—Hoboken Land & Improvement Co. v. The Sunswick, Case No. 6,552.

Failure to adopt a system of ventilation, the efficacy of which is in dispute, will not render vessel liable for "sweating" of cargo.—Adrian v. The Live Yankee, Case No. 88.

The vessel is liable for injuries to cotton caused by bad stowage and sea water, owing to inattention to the pumps.—Brower v. The Water Witch, Case No. 1,971.

A vessel is liable in rem for damages caused to goods of one shipper by those of another.—The Cheshire, Case No. 2,658.

A general ship is liable for the injury to flour from the effluvium from turpentine carried in the cargo, in the absence of an established usage to carry such articles in the same cargo.—The Colonel Ledyard, Case No. 3,027.

A vessel which carries paper stock and petroleum in the same cargo is bound to use especial care in stowing them with reference to each other.—The Sabioncello, Case No. 12,198.

Gross negligence in the stowage of glass cases will render the vessel liable, though liability for breakage was expressly excepted.—Merriman v. The May Queen, Case No. 9,481.

Lack of sufficient dunnage to protect cargo from the water in the bilges when the vessel rolls is bad stowage, for which the vessel is liable.—The Sloga, Case No. 12,955.

The ship is not liable for a loss caused by bad stowage, where the goods were stowed by stevedores employed, directed, and paid by the shipper.—The Diadem, Case No. 3,875.

The master is liable for the loss of goods carried on deck without consent of the owner.—The Paragon, Case No. 10.708; The Governor Carey, Id. 5,645a; The Peytona, Id. 11,059; The Wellington, Id. 17,384.

A vessel is liable for carrying goods on deck, though the bill of lading exempts it from liability for the perils of the sea.—Chubb v. Seven Thousand Eight Hundred Bushels of Oats, Case No. 2,709.

The vessel owner is not liable for the loss by sea perils of goods laden on deck with the shipper's consent, in the absence of culpable neglect or misconduct. — Higgins v. Watson, Case No. 6,470.

The vessel is not liable for a loss or damage on account of the deck storage, where it must have been contemplated from the very nature of the cargo that it should be stored on deck.—Talbot v. Wakeman, Case No. 13,731.

But where the loss arises, not on account of the cargo being stored on deck, but because it was improperly secured, the vessel will be held liable.—Talbot v. Wakeman, Case No. 13,731.

Libel for injury to wheat from odors of kerosene oil, near which it was stowed in a general ship, dismissed, it not appearing that the odors would not disappear on proper ventilation.—The Fanny Fosdick, Case No. 4,641.

Where an extra freight is paid in consideration of the goods being stored in a cabin stateroom, but the bill of lading was in the usual form, and the goods received damage by being stored in the hold, held, that the vessel was liable.—The Star of Hope, Case No. 13,313.

In the case of damage from bad stowage, the recovery is ascertained by taking the difference between the market values of the goods in the damaged and in a sound condition.—The Sabioncello, Case No. 12,199.

The fact that the owner of damaged paper stock sold the same at auction, and bought it in, and manufactured it into paper, will not change the rule.—The Sabioncello, Case No. 12.199.

The fact that the manner of stowing or the carrying of other kinds of cargo produced dryness, and caused casks to leak, does not show negligence, where such stowing and carriage were usual in the trade.—The Invincible, Case No. 7,055.

Proof of greater than average leakage is not sufficient. Actual negligence must be shown.—The Invincible, Case No. 7,055.

The vessel is obliged to protect cargo stowed near the center-board well from damage by the ordinary and usual leakage in the well, however difficult that may be. — Endicott v. Renauld, Case No. 4,482.

§ 166. —— Deviation or delay.

Violation of the contract, by deviation and taking other cargo, does not forfeit the freight, but creates liability for damages.—Knox v. The Ninetta, Case No. 7,912.

An intention to take on cargo at an intermediate port is not a deviation, where made known to the shipper when bills of lading were executed. — Thatcher v. McCulloh, Case No. 13,862.

A known usage of trade and navigation from New Orleans to northern ports to touch at Havana for cargo, prevents such act being a deviation.—Thatcher v. McCulloh, Case No. 13,862.

§ 167. —— Negligence in discharging.

Depositing goods upon the proper wharf at their place of destination at the proper time, and notice given to the consignee, do not free the ship from responsibility for her own wrongful act, as where she overloads the pier, and causes it to break, whereby the goods are damaged.—Kennedy v. Dodge, Case No. 7,701.

The receipt by the consignees of part of the cargo on one day is notice to attend and receive the rest as fast as it should be discharged, and where it is burned on the pier after it is unloaded and ready for delivery, the vessel is not liable.—The Iddo Kimball, Case No. 7,000.

Where goods are unloaded on a fast day, on which by the usage of the port consignees are not in the habit of receiving goods, and are destroyed by fire on the wharf on the same day, the carrier is liable, though due notice was given to the consignees.—Salmon Falls Mfg. Co. v. The Tangier, Cases Nos. 12,265, 12,267.

The act of the master in overloading a pier renders the ship liable for resulting injury to cargo, which she had already deposited thereon, even if such deposit was under circumstances rendering it equivalent to delivery to the consignee.—Kennedy v. Dodge, Case No. 7,701.

The ship is not liable for damage by rain to cargo delivered on wharf at request of consignee, whose clerk assumed charge thereof, but failed to employ sufficient drays to remove them before night.—Ellsworth v. The Wild Hunter, Case No. 4,411.

The carrier is not liable for a loss of part of the cargo on the pier after actual receipt by the consignees of all the cargo shipped, and their verification thereof by weighing.—Dike v. The Von Lefferl Lahsen, Case No. 3,909.

The ship is liable for the loss of consigned goods, placed in a public store without notice to the consignee, a well-known resident of the port.—Burgthal v. The George Skolfield, Case No. 2,155.

A master overloading a pier is personally liable for resulting injury to cargo which he had already delivered thereon.—Kennedy v. Dodge, Case No. 7,701.

The breaking down of a wharf by the pounding of a vessel which had broken from her moorings in a hurricane will not excuse a vessel for loss of goods landed thereon, as a danger of the sea, where they could have been saved by due diligence. — Dibble v. Morgan, Case No. 3,881.

Cases of plate glass placed endwise on unloading were found to contain broken glass, as well as those placed flatwise on each other. Held, that it did not appear that the breakage in the latter was caused by the manner of unloading.—The Delhi, Case No. 3,770.

Where powdered arsenic escaped from broken casks upon sacks of table salt, and, in discharging, all the sacks were so mixed together that the damaged could not be distinguished, and the whole was therefore sold as fertilizer, held, that the ship was liable for the difference between the price and the value of the salt as sound salt.—The Niagara, Case No. 10,221.

Where a carrier suffers goods of a consignee, on being discharged from the vessel, to become mingled with the rest of the cargo, and to be carried off by persons claiming to be entitled to similar goods, he is liable to the owner of the goods carried off, whether by fraud or mistake.—Warner v. The Illinois, Case No. 17,-184a.

Consignees cannot claim indemnity for injury to the cargo by a storm to which it was exposed while on conveyance to its place of storage, though they notified the ship not to unload it.—The Grafton, Case No. 5,656.

Where the consignee objects to the wharf selected by the master for the discharge, and the cargo is lost by its breaking and sinking while the vessel is discharging, the vessel is liable therefor.—Vose v. Allen, Cases Nos. 17,-005, 17,006.

Vessel owners are not personally liable for a loss by fire occurring without their design, or neglect of cargo delivered on the wharf into the charge of the officers of the vessel, though they were negligent in not promptly putting the goods on board. Act March 3, 1853, § 1. —Dill v. The Bertram, Case No. 3,910.

Lightermen, to whom is committed the charge of transporting goods from the shore, and slinging them in the lighter, for hoisting aboard, are responsible for any defect or negligence in the manner of slinging.—Wilson v. The Belvidere, Case No. 17,790.

§ 168. —— Negligence or wrongful acts of master or crew.

The vessel is liable for cargo jettisoned to save the vessel, where its peril is directly attributable to want of diligence or skill of the master or crew.—The Jenny Jones, Case No. 7,286; The Portsmouth, Id. 11,295.

Where the vessel is laid up for the winter with cargo on board, the master must take precautions to prevent injury from dampness or mold, and to protect the deck load from the effects of snow and ice.—The Tan Bark Case, Case No. 13,742.

The shipper has a lien on the vessel for loss or damage to his goods, due to the fault or neglect of the master, or the insufficiency of the vessel.—The Rebecca, Case No. 11,619.

Officers of a vessel, who know the contents of certain boxes to be glass cases, are guilty of gross negligence where they fail to observe every precaution necessary to insure their safe stowage and safe delivery.—Merriman v. The May Queen, Case No. 9,481.

The vessel is liable, where barratrously run ashore by the master, for the loss of cargo, for injury to the portion saved, and for salvage paid under a decree therefor.—The William Taber, Case No. 17,757.

The vessel is liable for the loss of goods seized by customs officers, and forfeited for the neglect of the master to enter them on the manifest.—The Griffin, Case No. 5,814.

A vessel is not responsible in rem for cargo lost from the pier through negligence of her officers, but after delivery to the consignee.—Field v. The Lovett Peacock, Case No. 4,768.

The disabling of the master and mate by sickness from attending to the duties of the ship will not exonerate the owner from responsibility.—Phelan v. The Alvarado, Case No. 11,067.

A libel in rem will not lie for injuries to goods by fire, caused by the alleged negligence of the master, who was also part owner. Act March 3, 1851.—Keene v. The Whistler, Case No. 7,645.

§ 169. —— Inherent defect in goods.

The vessel being seaworthy when she sailed, held, that owners were not liable for the spoiling of cargo of beef where the vessel put back on her return voyage to repair boiler tubes.—The Francis Wright, Case No. 5,044.

In the case of a cargo found in a perishing condition the master is quasi agent for both consignee and vessel owner, and the vessel is not liable for his acts honestly put forth in an emergency.—De Bruns v. Lawrence, Case No. 3,716.

A ship held not liable for leakage and breakage of wine casks under a bill of lading stating that the same were received in good order and condition, "weight and contents unknown; not liable for average leakage or breakage"; the casks being in fact of poor quality.—In re Six Hundred and Thirty Casks of Sherry, Case No. 12,918.

Under the common bill of lading, there is no liability for loss due to deterioration, arising from the nature of the article, when stowed in the manner sanctioned by usage.—Lamb v. Parkman, Case No. 8,020.

But, if there has been want of proper skill and care by the carrier, the damage will be ascribed to negligence.—Lamb v. Parkman, Case No. 8,020.

Vessel is liable for rotting of fruit unduly hastened by stowage which did not permit proper ventilation, though bill of lading excepts losses by inherent deterioration.—The America, Case No. 283.

Fruit shipped being inherently subject to decay, and the bill of lading being qualified with that condition, the vessel is not responsible for its sound delivery, without evidence of some misfeasance of the master which set in action, or aggravated, such tendency.—Lawrence v. The Lieutenant Admiral Callomberg, Case No. 8,139.

Damages to cargo of coffee, from Sumatra and Java to the United States, held, on the evidence, due to dampness and sweat in the hold incident to the voyage, and not to negligence.—Ireguist v. Morewood, Case No. 7,061.

Quære: Whether a general ship is liable for damage to well-stowed cargo from dampness arising from other well-stowed cargo, without special contract to that effect.—The Martha, Case No. 9,145.

When no other vessel can be procured to take the cargo, and it would perish or be of no value if left, the cargo is liable for expenses of repairs to the vessel made for its benefit which exceed the benefit to the shipowner therefrom.—Sparks v. Kittredge, Case No. 13,210.

Where stoneware pipes are properly stowed with reference to their character and apparent condition, the vessel is not liable for breakage during the voyage, and may retain all the goods until freight is paid on the broken pipes.—In re Twelve Hundred and Sixty-Five Vitrified Stone-Ware Sewer Pipes, Case No. 14,280.

As between original parties, it is competent to show actual condition of goods at time of shipment.—Baxter v. Leland, Case No. 1,124.

§ 170. —— Duties after wreck or other disaster.

After a vessel is stranded the master is obliged to take all possible care of the cargo.—The Ocean Wave, Case No. 10,416.

The master of a vessel made leaky by an effort to remove her from a sand bar must first stop the leak and secure the cargo from the flow of water.—The Ocean Wave, Case No. 10,416.

In case of wreck, it is the duty of the master to forward cargo by another ship, if practicable; and his duty as a carrier is not ended until the goods are delivered at their destination, returned to the owner, or otherwise lawfully disposed of.—King v. Shepherd, Case No. 7,804.

After a vessel which has sprung a leak, by a peril of the seas, reaches her dock, the vessel is liable for loss to the cargo, caused by the neglect of the master to use such extraordinary measures as are necessary under the circumstances.—The Shand, Case No. 12,702.

The vessel is liable in such case for loss caused by flooding from the failure to continue the working of a steam pump, placed on board during the unloading of the cargo.—The Shand, Case No. 12,702.

In case of wreck, the master has no right to abandon his vessel to the care and custody of wreckers.—King v. Shepherd, Case No. 7,804.

The mere fact that a vessel is wrecked does not vary the liabilities of the owner and master as common carriers, unless the property perished with, and in consequence of, the wreck.—King v. Shepherd, Case No. 7,804.

The acts of the master in cases of necessity or calamity, during the voyage, in the exercise of a sound discretion, are binding upon all parties in interest.—Jordan v. Warren Ins. Co., Case No. 7,524.

Sale at auction, without communicating with the owners, of flour injured by the capsizing of a vessel at her wharf before sailing, held an unlawful conversion.—The Joshua Barker, Case No. 7,547.

In such case the cargo owners are entitled to recover the value of the cargo at the port of delivery at the time when the vessel should arrive, deducting freight and charges, with interest on the balance.—The Joshua Barker, Case No. 7,-547.

For injury caused by a rain at night to cement carried on deck while the canal boat was waiting to unload, held, that she was liable where she took no means to protect it.—The James Platt, Case No. 7,199.

The vessel is not liable for injuries to her cargo of fruit while detained for necessary repairs, though the means used by the master to preserve it, under the advice of experienced and competent persons, were not the most suitable and well judged.—Lawrence v. The Lieutenant Admiral Callomberg, Case No. 8,139.

Where cargo is so much injured that it will endanger the safety of the vessel and cargo, or it will become utterly worthless, the master must land and sell it at the place where the necessity arises, though it might have been carried to its destination.—Jordan v. Warren Ins. Co., Case No. 7,524.

A vessel which put into St. Thomas in distress, whose cargo of wheat was reshipped in bags, was not able to take in the entire amount, by reason of the increased bulk. Held, that the master was justified in selling the wheat necessarily left behind.—Hooper v. Rathbone, Case No. 6,676.

Where a vessel puts into a port of distress, and the shippers and underwriters are informed as to the condition, and do not give any direction, and the cargo, after a regular survey, is sold as unfit for reshipment, held, that the vessel is not liable, though the master carries the cargo back to the port of shipment for the purchaser, and subsequently takes it to its original destination.—The Veronica Madre, Case No. 16,-923.

§ 171. —— Presumptions and burden of proof as to cause of injury.

Goods will be presumed to have been damaged en route where it appears that they arrived in a damaged condition, and the shippers swear that they were in good order when loaded.—Kerr v. The Norman, Case No. 7,732.

Where owners of goods claim that they were damaged on the voyage by rats, the burden is on them to show such fact.—The Carlotta, Case No. 2,413a.

The memorandum that casks of plumbago were loose when shipped casts the burden upon the shipper to show that the loss of plumbago from the casks was not caused by such loose condition.—Nelson v. National S. S. Co., Case No. 10,112.

The burden is on the shipowner to prove that the shipper agreed that the goods might be carried on deck.—The Peytona, Cases Nos. 11,058, 11,059.

Where the consignee has received goods at the wharf without qualification or reservation, and the carrier has proved due care, and actual delivery of all goods in his possession on arrival, the burden is then on the consignee to show that a subsequently discovered deficiency was chargeable to the wrongful acts of the carrier.—McCready v. Holmes, Case No. 8,733.

Where goods shipped in good order are damaged on the voyage, the burden is on the carrier to show that it was not due to his fault, or was caused by vis major.—The Martha, Case No. 9,145.

Negligence cannot be inferred from the fact that a vessel is on fire. If the vessel were properly protected from fire, negligence must be proved.—The Buckeye, Case No. 2,084.

On a libel to recover damage to cargo proved to have been shipped sound and delivered damaged, defendant has the burden of accounting for such damage.—The Zone, Case No. 18,220.

Proof of inferior quality of casks throws on claimant the burden of showing that injuries thereto were caused by negligence of the vessel.—In re Six Hundred and Thirty Casks of Sherry, Case No. 12,918.

Where the injury to goods happened after they were received on board, the burden is upon the master to show that the vessel was free from fault.—Soule v. Rodocanachi, Case No. 13,178.

The bill of lading, though not conclusive, is strong evidence of the apparent condition of the cargo.—The Tan Bark Case, Case No. 13,742.

§ 172. —— Actions for damages.

Consignees who made advances on goods shipped may, on delivery of the goods, sue the shipowners for damages to the goods, though the bill of lading was not signed by the master.—Clifton v. Quantity of Cotton, Case No. 2,895.

The several owners of a cargo, to whom separate bills are given, may libel for damages, though a general bill of lading be given, and the consignment be to one party in bulk.—Bucknor v. The Gilbert Green, Case No. 2,099.

A lighterman, who has given a full receipt for cargo where only part was delivered, and elects to pay the loss to his employer, may maintain an action against the carrier in his own name.—Perry v. Bangs, Case No. 11,013.

Consignees, who have made advances and are recognized by the master, can maintain a suit for damages to the goods, although no bills of lading were executed.—Brower v. The Water Witch, Case No. 1,971.

A libel for loss or damage to cargo may be brought either in the name of the shipper or of an insurance company which has paid the loss or accepted an abandonment.—The Keokuk, Case No. 7,721.

The defense that the loss of cargo arose partly from a necessary jettison on account of perils of the sea and partly from a sale for necessaries must be established by clear and conclusive proof.—Talbot v. Wakeman, Case No. 13,731a.

A shipper, whose goods are lost or damaged by the fault or neglect of the master, has a remedy against the owners, and a lien on the ship.—The Waldo, Case No. 17,056.

§ 173. —— Extent of liability and amount of damage.

Where the carrier is unable to show what part of the damage to goods was caused by his fault, and what by perils of the sea, he is liable for the whole.—Speyer v. The Mary Belle Roberts, Case No. 13,240.

Where a shipper of goods received a rebate from the purchaser for damage in the suit by the shipper against the vessel for such damage, he must be charged with the rebate.—The Carlotta, Case No. 2,413.

Interest is allowable on damage occasioned to cargo by the fault of the ship, and the court may enter a decree for such interest on the coming in of the master's report, although the interlocutory decree did not provide for interest.—Westray v. The Miletus, Case No. 17,461.

A bill for the amount of damage, made out after an appraisal, and presented, may be taken to show the difference in the market value of sound and damaged goods at that time.—The Eroe, Case No. 4,521.

A rebate of customs duties for damage to goods obtained by the consignee is not to be considered in computing the damage recoverable against the vessel.—The Eroe, Cases Nos. 4,521, 4,522.

The ship's liability is not affected by private contracts between the shipper and strangers for the purchase and sale of the goods.—The Compta, Case No. 3,070.

The measure of damages for negligence causing injury to cargo is the difference between its cost and the proceeds of sale.—Foster v. The British Oak, Case No. 4,966; Dusar v. Murgatroyd, Id. 4,199; The Columbus, Id. 3,042.

The damage is the difference in value between the goods at the port of shipment and their selling price at the port of destination, if the contract had been performed.—Harrison v. Stewart, Case No. 6,145.

The measure of damages, where cargo has been unlawfully disposed of at an intermediate port, is its first cost, with interest and charges of shipment and transportation.—The Harriet, Case No. 6,094.

The opportunity of shipping by another vessel without additional cost or risk cannot be used as a bar or in mitigation of damages for breach of the contract.—Harrison v. Stewart, Case No. 6,145.

§ 174. Statutory exemptions from liability.

Act March 3, 1851, § 2, limiting liability, does not extend to a loss by fire of goods after they are landed on the wharf.—Salmon Falls Mfg. Co. v. The Tangier, Case No. 12,265.

There can be no limitation of liability under Act March 3, 1851, for damage to cargo by breach of the warranty of seaworthiness.—In re Sinclair, Case No. 12,895.

Construction of Act March 3, 1851, § 2, requiring a note in writing of the true character and value of precious metals on their delivery for shipment.—Greyor v. The Black Warrior, Case No. 5,807.

The vessel is not liable for gold coin intrusted to the master by a person who intended to take passage, where no bill of lading is taken or note in writing delivered, as required by Act March 3, 1851, § 2.—The Island Queen, Case No. 7,110.

§ 175. Limitation of liability by contract or bill of lading—In general.

Brokers by whom a shipment is made may bind the owner to the usual stipulation limiting the carrier's liability.—Hus v. Kempf, Case No. 6,943.

Custom of trade will control where it is doubtful whether injury is caused by excusable perils of seas, or by dangers for which carriers are responsible.—Baxter v. Leland, Case No. 1,124.

A limitation as to the amount of damages is ineffective against a loss arising from negligence. The City of Norwich, Case No. 2,761.

The vessel is liable where, by the negligence of the master, the cargo is exposed to injury by an excepted peril.—The Tan Bark Case, Case No. 13,742.

§ 176. —— Exemptions from particular risks or causes of loss.

Vessel owners are not liable for damage to iron shipped under a bill of lading exempting the vessel from accountability for rust, unless the rust was received on board, and through want of proper stowage and care.—Zerega v. Gee, Case No. 18,211.

The exception of "any act, neglect, or default whatsoever" of the master or mariners, and of liability for leakage or breakage "when properly stowed," does not exempt the vessel from responsibility for leakage and breakage from bad stowage by the master or mariners. —The Colon, Case No. 3,023.

The exemption of damage resulting from leakage or breakage or from stowage, however such damage may be caused, will not exempt from loss by negligence.—Nelson v. National S. S. Co., Case No. 10,112.

The exception of leakage, breakage, or rust will not excuse the vessel from negligence or want of skill or care in lading, stowing, or delivering the cargo.—The David and Caroline, Case No. 3,593; Dedekam v. Vose, Id. 3,729, 3,732; The Delhi, Id. 3,770.

The vessel is liable for unexplained loss of raisins from boxes, notwithstanding exceptions in bill of lading of loss by breakage of boxes.—The Bellona, Case No. 1,277.

Damage from humidity of the hold, to soda shipped by an iron steamer from Liverpool to New Orleans, and transported through the Gulf in the warm weather of early spring, held to be within the exceptions of heat and sweating. —Mendelsohn v. The Louisiana, Case No. 9,421.

§ 177. —— Perils of the sea.

"Dangers of the seas," "dangers of navigation," and "perils of the seas," are convertible terms.—Baxter v. Leland, Case No. 1,124.

Losses by "dangers of the seas" are such as are of an extraordinary nature, or arise from irresistible force, which cannot be guarded against by the ordinary exertions of human skill and prudence.—The Reeside, Case No. 11,657.

The exception "dangers of the seas" excuses the master for a nondelivery, but does not authorize a demand of freight.—The Cuba, Case No. 3,458.

Desertion of seamen is not a peril of the sea. —The Ethel, Case No. 4,540.

The mere rolling of a vessel by a cross sea is not a danger of the sea.—The Reeside, Case No. 11,657.

Fire occurring on the wharf is not within the exception of dangers of the seas.—Salmon Falls Mfg. Co. v. The Tangier, Case No. 12,265.

Damage by vermin during the voyage is not within the exception of perils of the sea.—The Miletus, Case No. 9,545.

Pressure of one part of the cargo upon another is not a peril of the sea.—Muller v. The Iginia, Case No. 9,917.

Blowing of a vessel is a peril of the sea.—Crosby v. Grinnell, Case No. 3,422.

Damage by rats is not a "peril of seas and navigation," within the meaning of a bill of lading.—Kirkland v. The Fame, Case No. 7,845; The Isabella, Id. 7,099; The Carlotta, Id. 2,-413.

Embezzlement is not a "peril of the sea"; neither is theft or robbery, except where it amounts to piracy, which is not the case when committed by persons coming on the ship when she is not on the high seas.—King v. Shepherd, Case No. 7,804.

The bursting of a boiler of a steam lighter on which the cargo was conveyed to the ship at anchor is not a peril of the sea, or of navigation.—The Edwin, Case No. 4,300.

Dampness or sweating of hold, the ordinary accompaniment of the voyage, resulting not from tempestuous weather, but from occult atmospheric causes, is not a "peril of the seas."—Baxter v. Leland, Case No. 1,124.

Injury to millstones properly stowed, where cargo shifted on voyage through vessel being thrown on beam ends, is within exception of dangers of navigation.—Barstow v. Wilmot, Case No. 1,066.

Injury to bags caused by bleaching powders mixed with water, and spilled from casks stowed without dunnage by the rotting of the wood by water coming in from the deck and water ways, not within exception of dangers of the sea.—The Antoinetta C., Case No. 491.

Liable for damage to hemp from oil escaping from casks, not caused by dangers of sea.—Bearse v. Ropes, Case No. 1,192.

To lighten a vessel aground, the deck load of brandy was jettisoned by knocking in the heads of the casks, it being impossible to throw them overboard whole. Held, a loss by a peril of the sea.—Van Syckel v. The Thomas Ewing, Case No. 16,877.

Injury to tobacco caused by lard and oil carried by water leaking in the ship, through stress of weather, held within the exception of dangers of the seas.—Faber v. The Newark, Case No. 4,602.

Vessel held not liable for cargo of barley shipped under bills excepting dangers of the sea, and damaged by salt water from a leak caused by heavy weather.—The Blue Jacket, Case No. 1,569.

Consumption of part of cargo by crew and passengers in consequence of a short allowance made necessary by protracted voyage is not a peril of the sea, within the meaning of a bill of lading.—The Gold Hunter, Case No. 5,513.

Injury to the cargo of a vessel on her maiden voyage, caused by leak from an open knot hole and loose tree-nail in her bottom, where she encountered no unusual gales or stress of weather, is not caused by perils of sea.—Buckner v. The Gilbert Green, Case No. 2,099.

A master who attempts to make the Bay of San Francisco in a dense fog, when the vessel can safely lay outside, is guilty of negligence, and the stranding of the vessel cannot be attributed to perils of the seas.—The Costa Rica, Case No. 3,261.

Where a vessel was wrecked upon the reefs, and the captain removed from a state room a box of gold coin shipped under a bill of lading which excepted the perils of the seas, and placed it where the crew and wreckers had free access to it, without personally looking after it, held, that the shipowners were liable for its loss.—King v. Shepherd, Case No. 7,804.

A carrier, shipping goods by a different vessel and at an earlier date than that specified, is liable for loss by shipwreck, notwithstanding exception of "accidents of the seas," etc.—Bazin v. Steamship Co., Case No. 1,152.

A loss from perils of the sea is not proved by showing that the damage was occasioned by a leak, and suggesting that it arose from some inexplicable action of the elements, without negativing other causes for the leak which would leave the carrier liable.—The Emma Johnson, Case No. 4,465.

A strongly-built ship, loaded with wheat, whose bins were properly constructed, and pumps properly arranged, when a few days out from Baltimore, met heavy weather, began leaking, and shipped water, and, her pumps becoming choked with wheat, was obliged to put in to St. Thomas. Held a peril of the sea.—Hooper v. Rathbone, Case No. 6,676.

A stranding caused by mistaking a shore light for a pier light on entering on a dark night, with a heavy sea and high wind, a harbor to which access was not usually dangerous or difficult, held within the exception of dangers of navigation.—The Juniata Paton, Case No. 7,584.

A sunken log or stump in the channel of a river, concealed from view, held an unavoidable danger of the river, within the exception in the bill of lading.—The Favorite, Case No. 4,697.

During heavy weather a noise was heard below, and, on the hatches being opened, several casks of wine, which had been well stowed, were found broken. Held, that the vessel was not liable under the exception of sea perils, or insufficient package.—Hus v. Kempf, Case No. 6,-943.

Where casks of hardware, shipped in a tight, staunch, and well-manned steamer, arrived in a damaged condition, held, that the burden of showing that the damage was within the exception of dangers of navigation was sustained by proof that the vessel encountered a storm, shipped water, and leaked.—Hunt v. The Cleveland, Case No. 6,885.

§ 178. —— Presumptions and burden of proof as to cause of injury.

The burden is on the shipowner to show that the loss of the cargo was caused by perils of the sea, within the exception of the bill of lading.—Hooper v. Rathbone, Case No. 6,676; The Emma Johnson, Id. 4,465; Bazin v. Steamship Co., Id. 1,152; Bearse v. Ropes, Id. 1,192; The Compta, Id. 3,069; The Mollie Mohler, Id. 9,-701; The Keokuk, Id. 7,721; Muller v. Iginia, Id. 9,917; The William Taber, Id. 17,757; The Ocean Wave, Id. 10,416.

Proof that the injury was occasioned by an excepted cause casts the burden on libelant to show negligence, or want of reasonable skill and attention.—The Rocket, Case No. 11,975.

In the case of injury to paper stock from oil and coal forming part of the cargo, the burden is on the vessel to show that it arose from a peril excepted in the bill of lading.—The Sabioncello, Case No. 12,198.

The fact that a cask of wine, shipped under a bill of lading excepting dangers of the sea, arrived with one of its heads crushed in, is prima facie evidence of negligence in handling or stowage.—The Black Hawk, Case No. 1,469.

Where the bill of lading stipulates against liability for "average leakage or breakage," the burden is on the claimants to prove a greater than average leakage or breakage.—In re Six Hundred and Thirty Casks of Sherry, Case No. 12,918.

Where it appears that the vessel encountered an unusually violent storm, which fully accounted for the damage within an exception in the bill of lading, the burden is on the shipper to show carelessness or negligence on the part of the vessel, leading to the loss.—The Neptune, Case No. 10,118.

Where green sugar in mats was found to be washed or drained out much beyond the usual percentage, held, that the burden was on the ship to show that the loss was occasioned by a peril of the sea.—The Sloga, Case No. 12,955.

Casks of sherry wine, shipped under bills of lading containing the words, "Shipped in good order and well conditioned," to be "delivered in like good order and well conditioned, dangers of the sea excepted," "weight and contents unknown, and not acccountable for average leakage and breakage," were delivered, some entirely empty, and others partly empty and leaking. Held, that the burden was upon the consignee to show that the loss resulted from negligence of the vessel.—Vaughan v. Six Hundred and Thirty Casks of Sherry Wine, Case No. 16,900.

A piece of statuary, shipped under a bill of lading excepting dangers of the sea, was delivered to the vessel at Leghorn in a wooden case, having been packed at Carrara, and brought to Leghorn in a lighter. It was well stowed, but the vessel met with heavy weather on the passage, and it was found broken when it reached its destination. Held, that the burden was upon libelant to show that it was in good condition when it was delivered to the vessel.—The Vincenzo T., Case No. 16,948.

§ 179. Who liable for loss or damage.

Owners of vessel are directly liable for damages to cargo where they share freight with master to whom vessel is chartered, and with whom shippers contract.—Arthur v. The Cassius, Case No. 564.

§ 180. Freight—When earned in general.

A partial conveyance is not a compliance with the contract.—Fleishman v. The John P. Best, Case No. 4,861.

No freight is due unless cargo is delivered in accordance with terms of shipment at destination.—The Ann D. Richardson, Case No. 410; Arthur v. The Cassius, Id. 564.

Where a master agrees, with a mariner, to carry the latter's goods free of expense, a charge for freight thereon cannot be supported, as between the master and mariner.—Harrison v. The Eclipse, Case No. 6,134.

A temporary retardation and subsequent sale of the cargo by the owner does not deprive the carrier of his right to the freight money.—Murray v. Aetna Ins. Co., Case No. 9,955.

Semble, that a shipper has a right, by the maritime law, to examine goods after they are unloaded, in order to ascertain whether they are damaged or not, before he makes himself liable for freight.—In re Certain Logs of Mahogany, Case No. 2,559.

Acquiescence in an unauthorized change of destination renders the shipper liable for the price agreed upon for the voyage, but not for the especial premium agreed to be paid upon delivery of cargo at the port designated in the contract.—Eneas v. Schiffer, Case No. 4,484.

The acceptance of cargo by the shipper with knowledge of a deviation restores the shipowner's right to freight.—Thatcher v. McCulloh, Case No. 13,862.

But receiving cargo with the knowledge of a deviation does not deprive the consignee of his right of action for special damages sustained by the deviation, and such damages may be recouped in an action for freight.—Thatcher v. McCulloh, Case No. 13,862.

A contract for the sale of a boat laden with a cargo stipulated that she should take on, at the port of discharge, certain property belonging to the purchasers, and deliver it with the boat for the stipulated price. Held an entire contract; and, where the title to the vessel failed, the purchasers were entitled to their property, free of freight.—The Excelsior, Case No. 4,592.

Where the owner of a vessel, notwithstanding the charter party, makes special contracts through the master in respect to freight, the bills of lading govern the rights of the parties. —The Carlotta, Case No. 2,413.

A vessel which takes from a salvor vessel at sea a box of bullion saved from a wrecked vessel, and carries it to its destination, is entitled to a quantum meruit compensation, and may proceed therefor in rem.—Williams v. Box of Bullion, Case No. 17,717.

The right to such compensation is not lost by a delivery of the bullion to the master of the wrecked vessel.—Williams v. Box of Bullion, Case No. 17,717.

§ 181. —— In case of wreck or other disaster.

Freight is payable in the case of wreck on each package landed if equal in value to the freight.—Smith v. Welsh, Case No. 13,126.

The right to freight in the case of loss of goods by jettison, salvage, sale as perishable, sale to pay duties or salvage, discussed by Story, J.—The Nathaniel Hooper, Case No. 10,032.

Where a vessel is captured and condemned at an intermediate port, no freight is due for the cargo restored and sold at such port.—Sampayo v. Salter, Case No. 12,277.

Where a vessel has been captured and condemned at an intermediate port, and part of the cargo has been restored and sold there, no freight is due therefor.—The Harriet, Case No. 6,094.

Where perishable cargo is sold at a port of distress at which a vessel lays up for repairs on account of injuries due to perils of the seas, no freight is recoverable.—The Velona, Case No. 16,912.

All claims for freight fall where a voyage is broken up at a port of distress, without consent of shipper, because of great injury to the cargo by perils of the sea.—The Ann D. Richardson, Cases Nos. 410, 411.

Where a cargo has lost its original character at a port of distress, or cannot be reshipped without a total destruction of it in specie before arrival at its destination, the shipper is not liable for freight.—Ridyard v. Phillips, Case No. 11,820.

The master cannot recover freight on the portion of the cargo ruined by sea water, so as to lose its character, where the quantity is not ascertained.—The Muriel, Case No. 9,944.

§ 182. —— Pro rata.

Where a portion of the cargo is lost by a danger of navigation, the carrier is entitled to pro rata freight on the cargo delivered.—Chubb v. Seven Thousand Eight Hundred Bushels of Oats, Case No. 2,709.

The freight is not due where the cargo is not carried to its destination. If voluntarily accepted at any other port freight pro rata is due, but if received by compulsion no freight is due. —Hurtin v. Union Ins. Co., Case No. 6,942.

The vessel is not entitled to freight pro rata at intermediate port unless cargo is received by owner, though she is unable to proceed.—Bork v. Norton, Case No. 1,659.

An acceptance of the cargo at an intermediate port from necessity occasioned by an overwhelming calamity or superior force will not entitle the vessel to freight pro rata itineris.—The Nathaniel Hooper, Case No. 10,032.

Pro rata freight only allowed on goods delivered to underwriters, and in the custody of the court, in an intermediate port into which the vessel was carried by salvors.—The Nathaniel Hooper, Case No. 10,032.

§ 183. —— Rate and amount in general.
"Going rate," as to freight, means the last actual contract, or, where the rate varies, the average of the day.—Barrett v. The Wacousta, Case No. 1,050.

Where the shipowner is ready to forward the goods, and there is a default by the owner, or he waives further prosecution of the voyage, full freight is recoverable.—The Nathaniel Hooper, Case No. 10,032.

Full freight is recoverable on all goods laden, notwithstanding a deterioration in quality or diminution in quantity from natural causes, if without the master's fault.—Steelman v. Taylor, Case No. 13,349.

Where a vessel on the Lakes, late in the season, is laid up by stress of weather, and the cargo is necessarily unloaded, and the owner sells it, though the vessel might have completed the transportation in the spring, she is entitled to full freight.—Murray v. Aetna Ins. Co., Case No. 9,955.

The owner of cargo preventing its transportation from a port of distress is liable for full freight.—Bork v. Norton, Case No. 1,659.

The shipowner is entitled to reasonable freight only, unless he shows an express contract for a specific sum.—Simmes v. Marine Ins. Co., Case No. 12,862.

The vessel is entitled to recover the amount of freight shown by the bill of lading, in the absence of proof that she did not deliver all the cargo that was received.—The Defiance, Case No. 3,740.

Where the freight is payable in pounds sterling, it must be reckoned in currency according to our laws, which fix its legal value.—The Patrick Henry, Case No. 10,805.

Where goods shipped under the common bill of lading at an under-deck freight are carried on deck, the shipowner is entitled only to deck freight.—Vernard v. Hudson, Case No. 16,921.

§ 184. —— Amount as depending upon weight or measurement of cargo.
When quantity of cargo uncertain, master is bound to tender bills of lading stating quantity only as more or less.—The Alonzo, Case No. 257.

Where the amount of freight is made to depend on the gross gauge of casks delivered, it is immaterial whether a loss was occasioned by ordinary leakage or dangers of the sea.—The Cuba, Case No. 3,458.

Freight on molasses to be estimated "gross custom-house gauge of cask" may be recovered on empty and broken casks, where they are customarily carried with bungs out to prevent fermentation.—The Juliet C. Clark v. Welsh, Case No. 7,580.

Where freight is payable by weight, and no weight is specified in the bill of lading, the consignee is not bound by the weight stated by the invoice and entry presented at the custom house; and freight is payable only on the weight delivered.—In re Nine Thousand Six Hundred and Eighty-One Dry Ox Hides, Case No. 10,273.

The ship is bound to weigh cargo whenever weighing is necessary to compute her freight.—In re Nine Thousand Six Hundred and Eighty-One Dry Ox Hides, Case No. 10,273.

Where freight is to be paid on lumber and timber at so much "per M., inch board measure," all timber pays freight, except the butts of sticks where the ends are not square.—In re One Hundred and Eighteen Sticks of Timber, Case No. 10,519.

A variance between the amount of a cargo of coal, as stated in the bill of lading or measurer's bill, and the amount delivered, may be explained by showing a defective method of ascertaining the weight.—Manchester v. Milne, Case No. 9,006; Manning v. Hoover, Id. 9,044.

A bill of lading stating the weight of the cargo on the representations of the shipper, without weighing, binds the consignee to pay freight on such weight, where he receives the goods without weighing them.—Maloney v. Butterly, Case No. 8,997.

Where the quantity is to be ascertained by weighing, the holder of the bill of lading cannot insist that the certificate of a particular weigher shall be conclusive.—The Treasurer, Case No. 14,159.

§ 185. —— Deductions and offsets.
When sued for freight, the owner may offset damages caused by improper stowage.—Dedekam v. Vose, Case No. 3,729.

A consignee who has made advances upon a consignment may recoup damages for breach of the contract of shipment in a suit for freight.—Snow v. Carruth, Case No. 13,144.

Damages to cargo can be recouped in admiralty against the claim for freight, but, where the amount of such damages exceeds the claim for freight, the court will not enter a decree for such excess in favor of the respondents, where there has been no cross libel filed.—Kennedy v. Dodge, Case No. 7,701.

Where perishable cargo is sold by the master on the consignee's refusal to receive it, the vessel owners may recover from the shippers full stipulated freight, less net proceeds from the sale of the cargo.—The Maria White, Case No. 9,083.

In case of wreck from the fault of the master in carrying cargo on deck, amounts paid by cargo owners in recovering their property may be offset against freight and general average charges due the vessel.—The Governor Carey. Case No. 5,645a.

§ 186. —— Who liable.
A person to whom a bill of lading is assigned as security for the payment of goods purchased of him by the shipper, under said bill of lading, is not liable to the shipowner for the freight.—Swett v. Black, Case No. 13,691.

The assignee of the bill of lading who receives the goods is bound for the freight, unless the assignor is bound by the charter party to pay it, or the assignee has contracted with the master in a different right.—Trask v. Duvall, Case No. 14,144.

The person who received cargo from a vessel held liable for the freight, though he gave a note for the amount to an assignee of the bill of lading, from whom he purchased it, who failed to pay the same.—Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Barnard, Case No. 11,086.

Cargo held liable only for the freight specified in the bill of lading given by the master for goods purchased by the charterer, which stated that delivery was to be made to the order of the seller "without prejudice to charter party."—In re Four Hundred and Six Hogsheads of Molasses, Case No. 4,988.

§ 187. —— Payment or tender.
Custom at San Francisco, to pay whole freight upon a receipt of the ship's daily discharge, held to be binding upon consignees.—Brittan v. The Alboni, Case No. 1,902.

The master on a tender of freight at the ship, may take a reasonable time to ascertain the correct amount from the consignees of the ship;

but cannot, in the meantime, order the goods to be stored at the expense of the owner.—The Diadem, Case No. 3,875.

A bill of lading, signed by the purser, who was not authorized to sign bills of lading, for goods not entered on the ship's manifest nor stowed with the other freight, acknowledging freight paid, may be contradicted by showing that the goods were carried as a personal favor to the owner, and no freight was expected to be paid.—Suarez v. The George Washington, Case No. 13,585.

Where freight is paid in advance and the voyage is not performed, the shipowner cannot without an express stipulation to this effect, retain it; but the shipper may recover it back.—Pitman v. Hooper, Case No. 11,185.

Freight paid in advance on a cargo lost by calamity may be recovered back.—Fleishman v. The John P. Best, Case No. 4,861.

A suit for freight is prematurely brought where no notice of unloading and of readiness to deliver is given the consignee, who refused the master's demand of freight before the goods were discharged.—In re One Thousand Two Hundred and Sixty-Five Vitrified Pipes, Case No. 10,536.

§ 188. —— Actions.

Where the contract of shipment is made with the master he may sue for freight in his own name.—Hus v. Kempf, Case No. 6,943.

Freight may be recovered by the master against the consignee in admiralty, either in personam or in rem.—Thatcher v. McCulloh, Case No. 13,862.

An independent suit for damages will prevent the owner from setting up such damages by way of abatement in a suit for freight.—Brower v. The Water Witch, Case No. 1,971.

Unreasonable delay in the delivery of a cargo is no defense to a libel for the freight, without proof of damage to the defendant by reason of such delay.—Page v. Munro, Case No. 10,665.

In a suit against the consignees of the charterers for freight on cargo delivered to the holders of the bills of lading as stipulated in the charter, the burden is on defendants to show the extent of damages to the goods alleged as a defense.—Eames v. Cavaroc, Case No. 4,238.

The receipt of the vessel for freight in good order will make a prima facie case against her.—The Live Yankee, Case No. 8,409; Llado v. The Tritone, Id. 8,427.

In such case the burden is upon the carrier to show that the loss of the goods arose from defects therein, or from dangers of navigation, and such burden is not sustained where the proof leaves the question in doubt.—The Live Yankee, Case No. 8,409.

Where the vessel owner on a libel for freight shows that the goods were properly stowed, the shipper has the burden of showing absence of defects.—Atkins v. Horrman, Case No. 602a.

Measure of damages for breach of contract where part of the cargo had been taken on board.—The Flash, Case No. 4,858.

On a libel for freight on coal, compensation for carting it to consignee's coal yard, for which there is no lien in admiralty, may be charged against advances made.—Gaughran v. One Hundred and Fifty-One Tons of Coal, Case No. 5,273.

Damage to cargo, for which the ship is liable, may be recouped in a libel for freight, but respondents can have no decree for damage in excess of the freight.—Kennedy v. Dodge, Case No. 7,701.

Respondents, being garnished in the state court for freight due libelant in admiralty, not having tendered the freight, held bound to pay interest at the market rate while the money was under attachment, and at the statute rate after the attachment was dissolved on their giving bond.—Greenish v. Standard Sugar Refinery, Case No. 5,776.

§ 189. —— Lien.

Shipowners have a lien on goods for freight due for maritime transportation, enforceable in admiralty by libel in rem, whether the contract is by bill of lading or charter party.—Drinkwater v. The Spartan, Case No. 4,085.

The master of a vessel which brings to the United States the crew and a portion of a wrecked vessel has a lien on the property for the freight, but not for passage money of the seamen.—Brackett v. The Hercules, Case No. 1,762.

By the general maritime law there is a lien on the goods for freight, whether shipped under a bill of lading or a charter party; but such lien may be waived or displaced by any special agreement inconsistent therewith.—The Volunteer, Case No. 16,991.

The contract price of gas coal at the mines, with cost of transportation, held to be the true representative in value, where the consignee agreed to hold its representative in value, subject to a lien for freight.—In re Six Hundred and Four Tons of Coal, Case No. 12,917.

A lien for freight may be abandoned.—In re Certain Logs of Mahogany, Case No. 2,559.

The lien of a vessel on the cargo for freight is lost by an unconditional delivery to the consignee.—In re Cargo of Brimstone, Cases Nos. 1,881, 2,405; In re One Hundred and Eighteen Sticks of Timber, Id. 10,519; The Anna Kimball, Id. 404; Gaughran v. One Hundred and Fifty-One Tons of Coal, Id. 5,273.

Giving to shipper credit for freight beyond time for delivery waives lien.—The Anna Kimball, Case No. 404.

The lien for freight is discharged by delivery to the consignee without demanding freight or notifying him of a lien therefor, in the absence of a special agreement or local usage to the contrary, irrespective of the intentions of the master.—The Tan Bark Case, Case No. 13,742.

In the case of cargo delivered to a consignee, a portion to be reshipped, and the residue without qualification, held, that the lien for freight was displaced, though the charter party provided for a credit after "discharge" without impairment of lien.—Sears v. Four Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty-Five Bags of Linseed, Case No. 12,589.

A stipulation for the payment of freight 10 days after the return of the vessel is not necessarily inconsistent with such lien.—The Volunteer, Case No. 16,991.

The master loses his lien for freight by complying with the charter stipulation requiring delivery of the cargo to the holders of the bills of lading as a condition precedent to receiving freight, and his recourse is against the consignee of the charterer.—Eames v. Cavaroc, Case No. 4,238.

The delivery of coal, with the expectation that freight will be paid at the time, is no waiver of the lien for freight, and the coal may be libeled therefor.—In re One Hundred and Fifty-One Tons of Coal, Case No. 10,520.

A payment of freight to the charterer by the consignee will not discharge the lien on the goods for the charter money where the charterer is not owner for the voyage.—Shaw v. Thompson, Case No. 12,726.

Vessel is liable in admiralty for value of goods shipped wrongfully detained under alleged lien for freight.—The Andover, Case No. 366.

Where the owners of a derelict vessel purchased her at the salvage sale, and then offered to carry the cargo to its destination, upon the raising of a blockade declared in the meantime, held, that they had no lien for freight.—Smith v. The Mansanito, Case No. 13,075.

§ 190. —— Sale of cargo for freight.
The fact that goods sold at auction by the master for freight in San Francisco in 1850, brought only half the amount and were sold within two weeks by the purchaser at three times such amount, does not show fraud or unfairness, where the sale was made in the usual way after due advertisement.—Sutton v. Hennell, Case No. 13,646.

§ 191. Damages for violations of regulations.
A person who puts aboard a vessel silver dollars, against the local regulations, which subjects her to seizure and detention, is liable to the owner for the damages sustained thereby.—Sparks v. West, Case No. 13,213.

§ 192. Forfeitures for violations of regulations.
A forfeiture cannot be enforced against a vessel for taking on board timber removed from public lands (Act March 2, 1831), except on pleading and proof that the acts charged were done by the master willfully.—The Cherokee, Case No. 2,639.

In a libel for the forfeiture of a vessel, confessions of the consignee are not admissible to charge the offense on the owner or captain.—The Cherokee, Case No. 2,639.

§ 193. Offenses incident to carriage of goods.
What facts will justify a conviction for packing for shipment or shipping gunpowder, not put up and marked as required by law. Act Aug. 30, 1852.—United States v. Chenoweth, Case No. 14,792.

VIII. CARRIAGE OF PASSENGERS.

Jurisdiction and remedy in admiralty, see "Admiralty," §§ 22, 33, 39.
Right of transferee of passenger ticket, to sue in admiralty, see "Admiralty," § 52.

§ 194. Nature of liability.
The owners of a steamboat employed in carrying passengers and merchandise on a regular route are responsible as common carriers.—The Huntress, Case No. 6,914.

§ 195. Regulations as to steam vessels.
Act July 7, 1838, to provide for the security of the lives of passengers, embraces all vessels propelled wholly or in part by steam, and is not limited to vessels at sea or on the Great Lakes.—United States v. Jackson, Case No. 15,458.

Such act being founded on the constitutional power of congress to regulate foreign and interstate commerce, does not apply to a ferryboat plying wholly within a state.—United States v. The James Morrison, Case No. 15,465. CONTRA, see United States v. Jackson, Case No. 15,458.

The phrase "coasting trade," as used in the statutes, does not apply to ferrying across a river.—United States v. The James Morrison, Case No. 15,465.

The exception in section 42, Act Aug. 30, 1852, applies to a vessel built and used as a ferryboat, and employed one day only in carrying passengers three miles distant to a state fair.—United States v. The Ottawa, Case No. 15,976.

Negro slaves, shipped by their owner, are passengers under such act.—United States v. The Thomas Swan, Case No. 16,480.

Act Aug. 30, 1852, c. 106, §§ 3-5, requiring steam vessels carrying passengers to be provided with life preservers, etc., applies to a vessel which actually carries passengers, though not usually and regularly engaged in that business.—United States v. The Thomas Swan. Case No. 16,480.

A passenger steamer navigating the Ohio river between Pittsburg and Gallipolis, having but one licensed pilot on board, the captain acting also as pilot, has not the number of pilots required by law.—United States v. The Science, Case No. 16,239.

The captain may temporarily supply a deficiency in the complement of pilots which arises during a voyage without his consent, fault, or collusion, but he cannot begin a new voyage with a deficiency.—United States v. The Science, Case No. 16,239.

§ 196. Regulations as to dangerous articles.
Hay in bales, piled up in the engine or deck room of a steamer, held sufficiently protected, under Act July 25, 1866, where surrounded by a tier of grain in sacks, extending from floor to carlings and stripped with planks to make the sacks steady.—Union Ins. Co. v. Shaw, Case No. 14,366.

§ 197. Regulations as to number of passengers.
Passenger Act 1819, § 2, is repealed by Act May 17, 1848, § 10.—United States v. The Anna, Cases Nos. 14,457, 14,458.

The passenger act of March 3, 1855, construed in a charge to a grand jury.—Passenger Act of March 3, 1855, Case No. 10,791.

In estimating the tonnage of a vessel bringing passengers from a foreign country, the custom house measurement at the port of arrival is to be taken.—United States v. The Louisa Barbara, Case No. 15,632; Same v. The Anna, Id. 14,457.

In estimating the number of passengers, no deduction is to be made for children or persons not paying; but the crew are excluded.—United States v. The Louisa Barbara, Case No. 15,632.

§ 198. Contracts for carriage of passengers in general.
Passengers for New York, having certificates from a ship agent engaging that they should be carried to Philadelphia and forwarded to New York free of expense, were received on board a vessel at Cork, and the certificates retained by the master without dissent until arrival at Philadelphia. Held a maritime contract binding on the ship, and not separable as to the two stages of transportation.—Dennison v. The Wataga, Case No. 3,799.

The vessel or her owner is liable for performance of contract for carrying passengers.—The Aberfoyle, Cases Nos. 16, 17.

Where the master failed to fulfill his contract to carry libelant, held, that he was entitled to recover from the vessel the passage money paid in advance, the expenses incurred in waiting the sailing of another ship, and the sum paid to such other vessel for passage.—The Zenobia, Case No. 18,209.

The contract of passage by vessel entitles a female passenger to protection against all boisterous, obscene, or improper behavior.—Nieto v. Clark, Case No. 10,262.

The vessel is liable in specie for passage money advanced, and for damages for failure to deliver goods shipped, where the master fails to perform his agreement to transport a passenger with his baggage.—The Zenobia, Case No. 18,208.

§ 199. Accommodations on vessel — In general.
Passengers on steamship entitled to reasonable accommodations and conveniences, irrespective of the class in which they travel.—Bailey v. The Sonora, Case No. 746.

The shipowner is bound to furnish all reasonable and proper accommodations usually afforded to passengers on similar voyages in similar vessels, and such as are necessary to a reasonable degree of comfort, and to physical health and safety.—Sparks v. The Sonora, Case No. 13,212.

Contract of carriage by second cabin, when considered broken by reason of overcrowding, and lack of reasonable accommodations, and damages therefor.—Bailey v. The Sonora, Case No. 746.

Where a passenger's contract contains stipulations as to the manner of fitting up the vessel and the number of passengers to be carried, the passenger may consider it as broken on a failure to comply with any part.—The Pacific, Case No. 10,643.

§ 200. —— Provisions.

The owners are estopped to assert that one acting as master had no right as such to order stores for the voyage, where they permitted him to order the articles and retained them.—Stringham v. Schloener, Case No. 13,536.

Liable for short allowance to passenger if master's conduct not malicious.—The Aberfoyle, Cases Nos. 16, 17.

Libel by passengers for deficiency of water and provisions held not sustained by the evidence.—Kramme v. The New England, Case No. 7,930.

§ 201. —— Berths and state rooms.

The requirements of Act March 3, 1855, § 2, do not apply to steamships.—United States v. The Manhattan, Case No. 15,715; The Manhattan, Id. 9,020.

An undertaking to carry a passenger in the steerage of a steamship from San Francisco to Portland includes the furnishing of the passenger with a berth, unless there is a fair understanding to the contrary.—The Oriflamme, Case No. 10,572.

A stateroom whose temperature is raised from 25 to 40 degrees with heated air coming from the boiler room, where access of light and air is obstructed, and where bedding is constantly wet from a defective pump, does not comply with a contract for first-cabin passage.—Sparks v. The Sonora, Case No. 13,212.

Where the comfortable staterooms are disposed of, the ship's agent must inform the passengers, so that they may take the risk of such accommodations as are left.—Sparks v. The Sonora, Case No. 13,212.

Punitive damages are recoverable where a husband and wife who have contracted for the exclusive use of a stateroom are forced to receive another male passenger therein.—Morrison v. The John L. Stephens, Case No. 9,847.

The disappointment and irritation of a husband, and the discomfort and suffering of his invalid wife, resulting from assigning them to separate staterooms, in violation of the contract of carriage, are elements of damage.—Morrison v. The John L. Stephens, Case No. 9,847.

Where a child was taken sick with smallpox while on the voyage, held, that the master was justified in changing his quarters, and in quarantining him, with his parents, who insisted on going with him.—The Hammonia, Case No. 6,006.

§ 202. Voyage and discharge at destination.

Where the master of a vessel, who had taken passage on a steamer to rejoin his vessel, was carried past the place for which he had bought his ticket, he can recover his own personal loss, and damages for the detention of his vessel.—The Canadian, Case No. 2,376.

Failure of a vessel to arrive at the port from which a ticket of passage was purchased is not excused by the fact that the vessel was disabled by stress of weather, and the passenger is entitled to recover the passage money paid by him.—Cobb v. Howard, Cases Nos. 2,924, 2,925.

Where a passenger determined, before the date of sailing, not to take passage in the ship, he cannot complain that the ship did not sail on the day as agreed, and recover back his passage money paid.—Zellweger v. The Robert Cooper, Case No. 18.207.

Where the nonfulfillment of a contract to transport a passenger is caused by shipwreck or other casualty, the passenger may recover back passage money paid in advance, or damages.—Stone v. The Relampago, Case No. 13,-486.

In such case the passenger is obliged to wait a reasonable time for repairs, only where the interruption was not caused by an original defect and unseaworthiness in the vessel.—Stone v. The Relampago, Case No. 13,486.

Where the contract for the carriage of a passenger is broken by the interruption of the voyage, he has an action in rem, as well as in personam, to recover back passage money paid or damages.—Stone v. The Relampago, Case No. 13,486.

§ 203. Personal injuries.

The vessel owner is liable where another is injured from the want of care or skill of the master.—Stone v. Ketland, Case No. 13,483.

Where boxes of tin are so stowed in the steerage room that the rolling of the vessel caused one to fall upon a steerage passenger sitting beside the pile, held, that the vessel was liable.—The Oriflamme, Case No. 10,572.

The duties of steamboats carrying passengers to guard them against violence or negligence of other passengers stated in a charge to a jury. —Flint v. Norwich & N. Y. Transp. Co., Case No. 4,873.

The master is authorized to use force to a passenger, not for a mere breach of regulations, but only when there is a clear necessity for it. —Kranskopp v. Ames, Case No. 7,931.

No punishment higher than a reprimand should ever be inflicted on a passenger without conference with the other officers and entry of the facts on the log book.—Kranskopp v. Ames, Case No. 7,931.

Until a passenger is on board the vessel, he is not subject to casualties or misfortunes occurring through stress of weather or otherwise.—Cobb v. Howard, Cases Nos. 2,924, 2,925.

Passenger voluntarily encountering a seen danger, guilty of contributory negligence.—The Anglo Norman, Case No. 393.

The remedy in rem for injuries from injurious escape of steam on steamboats is confined to injuries to passengers. Other persons on board have only a remedy in personam. Acts 1838, 1852.—The Highland Light, Case No. 6,477.

A soldier transported under contract with the government, and discharged at sea during the voyage, does not thereby become a passenger in such a sense that the master is liable for allowing him to be subjected to military discipline.—White v. McDonough, Case No. 17,552.

The vessel owners are liable for torts of the master when they involve a breach of the passenger's contract and are done while acting within the scope of his employment.—McGuire v. The Golden Gate, Case No. 8,815.

Vessel owners are only liable in actual and not in punitive damages for the torts of the master involving a breach of a passenger's contract.—McGuire v. The Golden Gate, Case No. 8,815.

Duties of the captain as to the proper adjustment and care of the safety valve on the stoppage of the boat.—United States v. Farnham, Case No. 15,071.

§ 204. Passengers' effects.

The vessel is liable for loss of baggage by theft from a stateroom in the lady's cabin which was properly fastened, where time and opportunity were given for a thief to enter such room without detection.—Walsh v. The H. M. Wright, Case No. 17,115.

"Personal luggage" (Act 1847) does not include furniture stores, or other articles not necessary for the personal convenience of passengers.—United States v. The Anna, Case No. 14,457.

The master is liable to make good the loss where a common gambler cheated a minor passenger out of a sum of money, and he failed, after notice, to compel restitution.—Smith v. Wilson, Case No. 13,128.

Where a passenger's money is stolen from his stateroom in a steamboat by reason of his neglect to lock and bolt his stateroom door, the owners of the vessel are not liable.—The John Brooks, Case No. 7,335.

§ 205. Damages for violation of regulations.

Under Act May 17, 1848 (9 Stat. 220), conferring concurrent jurisdiction on the circuit and district courts for violations of the provisions relative to food allowance of passengers, the practice must be in accordance with the procedure at common law, and not according to the admiralty procedure, as the circuit court has no original admiralty jurisdiction.—McAfee v. The Creole, Case No. 8,655.

§ 206. Penalties and forfeitures for violations of regulations.

A steam vessel usually employed as a towboat, which transports passengers from Buffalo to Canada, and back, for pay, held liable to the penalty for transporting passengers without a license. Act July 7, 1838, §§ 2, 42.—United States v. The Echo, Case No. 15,021.

Act July 7, 1838, declares no forfeiture of the vessel, and creates no lien, express or implied, for the penalty.—United States v. The Laurel, Case No. 15,569.

The United States has no lien for the penalty for violation of Act July 7, 1838, providing for the security of lives of passengers on steam vessels, whereby it may overreach liens of material men under the Missouri statute.—United States v. The Laurel, Case No. 15,569.

To subject a vessel to forfeiture under Act March 2, 1819, there must be an excess of 20 passengers beyond the proportion of 2 to every 5 tons of the vessel.—United States v. The Louisa Barbara, Case No. 15,632.

The offense punished by Act Feb. 22, 1847, § 1, is committed by taking on board the forbidden number of passengers, with intent, etc., as well as the bringing them, or any number of them, into the United States.—United States v. The Anna, Case No. 14,458.

The mere intention to violate the act of 1847, limiting the number of passengers, formed in a foreign country, and not completed by the actual illegal importation, is not punishable.—United States v. The Anna, Case No. 14,457.

Where the statute requires the posting of two copies of the synopsis of the laws relating to the carriage of passengers, it is no defense to a prosecution for violation of the act that one copy was posted up.—The Lewellen, Case No. 8,307.

The only penalty for taking passengers on a steam vessel which has not, in a conspicuous place, the certificate of seaworthiness required by Act Aug. 30, 1852, § 25, is the penalty of $100 given by that section; and neither the vessel nor her owner is liable to the penalty of $500 given by the first section.—United States v. The Manhattan, Case No. 15,714.

A vessel engaged in carrying freight between ports in different states, which on one occasion carries a load of passengers for purposes of a prize fight between ports in the same state, is not subject to a penalty for failure to comply with Act Aug. 30, 1852, §§ 5, 9.—The Thomas Swan, Case No. 13,931.

The Revised Statutes not being enacted until June 22, 1874, the carrying of petroleum upon passenger steamers in April, 1874, cannot be punished thereunder.—The James D. Parker, Case No. 7,193.

Under 1 Stat. 77, § 9, giving exclusive original cognizance of all admiralty causes to the federal courts, the district court has exclusive jurisdiction of a libel in rem based on Acts July 4, 1864, giving a penalty for a neglect to post up in a steamer a synopsis of the laws relating to the carriage of passengers.—The Lewellen, Case No. 8,307.

The penalties provided for by the passenger act of 1848 can only be recovered by an action of debt on the common-law side of the court.—United States v. The Neptune, Case No. 15,865.

A proceeding in rem is the proper mode of prosecution for the violation of Act July 4, 1864, § 8, in neglecting to post up in a conspicuous place in a steamer synopses of the laws relating to the carriage of passengers.—The Lewellen, Case No. 8,307.

A prosecution for a penalty under Act July 4, 1864, § 3, regulating the carriage of passengers on steamships, etc., must be by action of debt, and not a libel in rem.—The Nashville, Case No. 10,023.

An action of debt, and not an information in rem, is the proper remedy to recover a penalty for violation of Act Feb. 28, 1871, § 4, forbidding the carrying of burning or explosive fluids on passenger steamers.—The James D. Parker, Case No. 7,193; United States v. The C. B. Church, Id. 14,762.

An inspector, under Act Aug. 30, 1852, although he may be the informer, is not entitled to any part of the penalty, and is a competent witness for the prosecution.—United States v. The Thomas Swan, Case No. 16,480.

§ 207. Offenses by master and crew in violation of regulations.

Where a mate appointed master in a foreign port knowingly sails with a larger number of passengers than that allowed by law, he is liable for the fine of taking an excessive number of passengers on board, though the agreement of shipment was made by the former master.—United States v. Morton, Case No. 15,822.

Act March 3, 1855, § 15, providing that the penalties imposed by the provisions regulating the carriage of passengers shall be liens on the vessel, does not apply to a fine on the master, imposed for a misdemeanor.—The Candace, Case No. 2,379.

The fines imposed upon the master by Act March 3, 1855, §§ 1, 6, for acts which are therein declared to be misdemeanors, are not made a lien upon the vessel.—United States v. The Ethan Allen, Case No. 15,059.

An indictment under Act July 7, 1838, § 12, against the officers and employés of a steamboat, is sufficient if it charge them substantially in the language of a statute, with misconduct, negligence, or inattention to their respective duties, whereby the lives of passengers are destroyed.—United States v. Collyer, Case No. 14,838.

In such an indictment, several defendants occupying different stations of employment may be joined without showing that their acts were jointly destructive of the lives of those on board, or were joint in their commission.—United States v. Collyer, Case No. 14,838.

A person who takes the place of the captain while he is sick, and exercises the authority and control, and discharges the duties, of that office, is a person "employed on board," within the meaning of the statute.—United States v. Collyer, Case No. 14,838.

Where the captain has employed skillful and faithful subordinate officers and employés, he cannot be held guilty where the destruction of the lives of persons on board is directly caused by their misconduct, negligence, or inattention.—United States v. Collyer, Case No. 14,838.

The burning and loss of life must be shown to have been the direct consequences of the negligence or misconduct shown, but the degree of misconduct is immaterial.—United States v. Collyer, Case No. 14,838.

A willful or intentional mismanagement or misconduct is not of the essence of the offense, but it consists in an improper act of the kind designated, and having the results named.—United States v. Collyer, Case No. 14,838; Same v. Farnham, Id. 15,071.

IX. DEMURRAGE.

§ 208. Construction of charter party or bill of lading.

Under a charter stipulating that demurrage shall be paid day by day, and that the master shall sign bills of lading, the master must sign bills of lading, though demurrage is due and unpaid.—The Mispah, Case No. 9,648.

A provision that, "during the obstruction of navigation by ice, lay days are not to be counted," applies to ice which prevents lading of the vessel as well as to such as prevents her going to sea.—Ladd v. Wilson, Case No. 7,976.

An ordinary bill of lading implies an agreement that the goods shall be received within a reasonable time after the arrival of the vessel at her port of destination.—The Hyperion's Cargo, Case No. 6,987.

Naming a wharf in a charter party containing a stipulation for quick dispatch amounts to an undertaking that the wharf shall be unincumbered.—Thacher v. Boston Gas Light Co., Case No. 13,850.

Charterers are liable for the detention, not due to the fault of the vessel, caused by intervening Sundays, holidays, custom-house and port regulations as to taking in or discharging cargo, and by lack of wharfage or lighterage facilities, under a charter which provided for 45 running days for loading and discharging, and damages for further detention happening "by default" of the charterer. Case No. 3,646 reversed.—Davis v. Pendergast, Case No. 3,647.

A proviso against liability for detention, unless by "default" of the charterer, exempts him only from delay from causes beyond his control acting directly to retard the discharging.—Thacher v. Boston Gas Light Co., Case No. 13,850.

Where a vessel was chartered to carry coal from the charterer's mines, with lay days "as customary in loading," cargo to be "received as customary," and the vessel, according to the custom, waited her turn at the charterer's dock, but was further detained by his delay to furnish coal for the preceding vessels, held, that he was liable for the latter delay.—Nichols v. Tremlett, Case No. 10,247.

§ 209. Effect of customs and usages.

A usage by which vessels allow a few days after reporting for a sale of the cargo will not deprive a vessel of the right to demurrage where her cargo is sold before arrival.—Forshay v. Du Fais, Case No. 4,947.

The local usage in respect to reception and delivery of cargo is not admissible to interpret provisions as to demurrage not obscure or equivocal. —Davis v. Wallace, Case No. 3,657.

An agreement for quick dispatch supersedes any custom of discharging vessels by which they are to take their turn at the wharf.—Thacher v. Boston Gas Light Co., Case No. 13,850.

§ 210. Liability of charterer or shipper in general.

The charterer of a vessel takes all risks as to delay from any unforeseen circumstances.—Esseltyne v. Elmore, Case No. 4,531.

Where the charterer abandons his contract, demurrage is due the ship from the expiration of the lay days, until she could, with reasonable diligence, have procured other employment.—Stepanovit v. Gillibrand and Four Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty-Two Bushels of Wheat, Case No. 13,360.

§ 211. Liability of consignee in general.

A consignee is bound to give only such dispatch as is reasonable under the circumstances.—Fulton v. Blake, Case No. 5,153.

Damages in the nature of demurrage are recoverable from consignee without stipulation in bill of lading.—Fulton v. Blake, Case No. 5,153.

Consignees must provide such reasonable dock room as their business ordinarily requires.—Fulton v. Blake, Case No. 5,153.

Though the shipper only has the right to reconsign, under the bill of lading, the master, by accepting a reconsignment from the consignee, waives his right to object, and cannot recover demurrage for delays incident thereto.—McGovern v. Heissenbuttel, Case No. 8,805.

The consignee is not liable merely as such for damages for detention where no demurrage or lay days are mentioned in the bill of lading.—Sheppard v. Philadelphia Butchers' Ice Co., Case No. 12,757.

Where demurrage is not provided for, the consignee, being the owner of the cargo, has the burden of showing that the detention was reasonable.—Sheppard v. Philadelphia Butchers' Ice Co., Case No. 12,757.

§ 212. Delay in loading or sailing.

Demurrage allowed where shipper caused his own vessel to be loaded before a chartered vessel which was first ready.—Atlantic & P. Guano Co. v. The Robert Center, Case No. 630.

The innocent holders of bills of lading for the delivery of cargo to order on payment of freight as per charter, where the charter contained no clause specially binding the cargo for its performance, are not liable for demurrage in loading.—In re One Hundred and Twelve Sticks of Timber, Case No. 10,524.

The shipmaster cannot report himself "ready to receive cargo," before he is permitted by the revenue laws of the port to receive it.—Pierson v. Ogden, Case No. 11,160.

Demurrage is recoverable for unnecessary or improper detention in loading without an express stipulation therefor.—The M. S. Bacon v. Erie & W. Transp. Co., Case No. 9,898a; Sprague v. West, Id. 13,255.

Delay of a chartered vessel in arriving because she was not at the port where she was represented to be in the charter party excuses the charterer from liability for demurrage for time lost in loading, which would not have been lost if she had proceeded promptly from the port named. —Nichols v. Tremlett, Case No. 10,247.

A formal notice to the consignees that the vessel is ready to receive cargo is not necessary, where they knew that she was ready, and such knowledge may be inferred from circumstances. —In re Two Hundred and Sixty-Eight Logs of Cedar, Case No. 14,295.

The master is entitled to the presumption that he knows best where his vessel should anchor, and his changing the place of anchorage to a greater distance from the shore held no defense to a claim to demurrage in loading.—In re Three Hundred and Ninety-Three Tons of Guano, Case No. 14,011.

The refusal to admit a claim for demurrage in loading will not justify a refusal by the master to sign bills of lading, and the owners cannot recover for a delay caused thereby.—In re Three Hundred and Ninety-Three Tons of Guano, Case No. 14,011.

§ 213. Delay during voyage.

A shipper cannot recover from one vessel demurrage which he paid another, which was detained by the failure of the former to arrive with the cargo on time, unless the shipper show that he was legally liable for such demurrage.—In re Wilkesbarre Coal & Iron Co., Case No. 17,661.

Where there is no contract that demurrage shall depend on the earnings of freight, demurrage for detention at an intermediate port is due at such port.—The Caroline A. White, Case No. 2,421.

§ 214. Delay in unloading—In general.

The consignee is not liable for delays occurring without his fault, where there is no stipulation as to "lay days" or time of unloading.—The Glover, Case No. 5,488.

Where shipper refuses to accept proper bills of lading as tendered, the owner may recover demurrage for delays in unloading caused by want of proper bills of lading.—The Alonzo, Case No. 257.

The vessel owner takes the risk of working weather during the time required for the unlading of the cargo.—Sprague v. West, Case No. 13,255.

A vessel entitled to "dispatch for discharging" held entitled to demurrage for delay arising from its being Passion Week, and the crowded state of the mole, from custom's regulation, and from being required to deliver over her bows.—Sleeper v. Puig, Case No. 12,940.

Consignees cannot select a place of discharge within a port which would necessitate greater delay in discharging than the charter allowed.—Davis v. Wallace, Case No. 3,657.

A vessel required to load or discharge her cargo at a particular dock, and there detained by reason of its crowded condition, is entitled to demurrage.—Futterer v. Abenheim, Case No. 5,164.

Where the consignee requires that the cargo be taken to a particular place, he will be held liable for any delay caused at that place, for which the vessel cannot be shown to be directly chargeable.—Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Northam, Case No. 11,090.

A vessel held not entitled to demurrage for time spent in port after discharge, pending a dispute over demurrage and errors in her account.—Sleeper v. Puig, Case No. 12,940.

Where a canal boat, hired to carry a cargo of coal between certain places, was stopped en route, and, after some delay, unloaded, held, that she was entitled to freight to the port of unloading, and demurrage for the detention there above the usual time for unloading.—In re Two Hundred and Thirteen Tons of Coal, Case No. 14,298.

The consignees of a cargo of granite blocks are not liable for demurrage where the discharge is delayed for several days, owing to the prevalence of an epidemic among horses, where they used reasonable diligence.—Coombs v. Nolan, Case No. 3,189.

§ 215. —— Time used in unloading.

Where there is no special agreement as to the time within which a vessel is to be unloaded, the law implies that it is to be done within a reasonable time after her arrival.—Henley v. Brooklyn Ice Co., Cases Nos. 6,363, 6,364.

Five days held a reasonable time in which to unload 567 tons of coal.—Esseltyne v. Elmore, Case No. 4,531.

Where a charter party contained no provision as to the discharge of a cargo, and the usual time for unloading such a cargo was 15 days, no claim for demurrage could exist until the expiration of the 15 days.—In re Cargo of Salt, Case No. 2,406.

In the case of a cargo of ice from Maine to New York, held, that 15 days was not unreasonable, where the vessel waited her turn in the customary way.—Henley v. Brooklyn Ice Co., Cases Nos. 6,363, 6,364.

No orders as to place of discharge were given for three days after notice of arrival. The vessel was detained four days after reaching the wharf, by reason of lack of teams and the loading of other vessels. Held, that demurrage should be allowed only for the delay after arrival at the wharf, where the charter provided for quick dispatch in discharging.—Davis v. Wallace, Case No. 3,657.

A ship to "be discharged as fast as the custom of the port will admit," demurrage to be charged after the expiration of 10 days, held entitled to demurrage, notwithstanding pre-occupancy of the wharf by other vessels.—Futterer v. Abenheim, Case No. 5,164.

§ 216. —— Waiting turn at wharf.

The shipowner must await his turn for a reasonable time, to be determined by the ordinary volume and exigencies of trade at the place of discharge, where the custom prevails in the trade to unload in the order of arrival.—The M. S. Bacon v. Erie & W. Transp. Co., Case No. 9,898a.

A vessel, chartered to have "dispatch in discharging," held not obliged to await her turn in respect to any other vessels which the consignees were discharging.—Keen v. Audenried, Case No. 7,639.

The owner of the cargo held not liable for the delay of the boat in waiting her regular turn at the wharf for unloading.—In re One Hundred and Seventy-Five Tons of Coal, Case No. 10,522.

Where the consignee has provided ample dock room for vessels as they are reasonably expected to arrive, vessels arriving out of time must wait their turn. He is not obliged to procure other docks.—Fulton v. Blake, Case No. 5,153.

A stipulation that the cargo should be delivered at the port of discharging, as customary, is inapplicable to a delay caused by the vessel being required to wait her turn at the wharf.—Davis v. Wallace, Case No. 3,657.

§ 217. —— Moving vessel during unloading.

Time lost in getting from one dock to another, by requirement of the charterer and according to the custom of the trade, is not by default of the charterer, for which he must pay demurrage. —The Mary E. Taber, Case No. 9,209.

Where part of the cargo is discharged at one wharf and part at another, without objection from the vessel owner, the charterer is not liable for the time necessarily spent in moving the vessel.—In re Two Hundred and Sixty-Eight Logs of Cedar, Case No. 14,295.

§ 218. —— Effect of customs and usages.
The custom of the port of Chicago to allow one day to provide a dock, when not rendered unreasonable by controlling circumstances, will be considered a law.—Fulton v. Blake, Case No. 5,153.

A custom at the port to unload through an elevator, each vessel waiting its turn, will be considered as a part of the contract.—The Glover, Case No. 5,488.

A provision in a charter party for "dispatch for discharging" at Havana is not controlled by the customs and rules of that port, and the consignees are bound to take the cargo as rapidly as the vessel can deliver it. Case No. 12,940 affirmed.—Sleeper v. Puig, Case No. 12,941.

It being the rule at Havana to deliver only at the mole, the consignees were responsible under the provision "for dispatch in discharging" for delay arising from the crowded condition of the mole. Case No. 12,940 affirmed.—Sleeper v. Puig, Case No. 12,941.

§ 219. Fault of vessel or owner.
There can be no recovery of demurrage for delays caused by the fault or negligence of the officers of the vessel, regardless of stipulations in the bill of lading.—Hall v. Eastwick, Case No. 5,930.

A master who insists on waiting until the wharf to which the vessel was consigned is unoccupied, where the consignee offers to receive the cargo at a safe and suitable adjoining wharf, cannot recover demurrage for the delay.—Robbins v. McDonald, Case No. 11,884.

Where the master waited to have the cargo discharged by the consignee under the terms of the bill of lading, held, that he was not entitled to demurrage where he was assigned dock room, where he might himself have discharged the cargo.—Tuttle v. Albany & R. Iron & Steel Co., Case No. 14,276.

§ 220. Lay days.
Lay days do not begin to run until the vessel has arrived at her place of discharge, and is ready to be unloaded.—Aylward v. Smith, Case No. 688.

Where a bill of lading provided for demurrage after lay days beginning 24 hours after arrival and notice, and the vessel, on account of ice, cannot land at the consignee's wharf, lay days begin to run 24 hours after notice to the consignee that she had been taken to another wharf.—Choate v. Meredith, Case No. 2,692.

A bill of lading reciting that the vessel is bound to a certain wharf in C., and undertaking to deliver at the aforesaid port of C., binds the vessel to deliver at such wharf, and lay days begin to run only from the arrival at such wharf.—Cain v. Garfield, Case No. 2,293.

In the absence of any statute or established general usage to the contrary, Fast-Day must be considered as an ordinary working day for the purpose of lading or unlading cargo.—The Tangier, Case No. 13,743.

A discharge of the cargo commenced before may be continued on Fast-Day.—The Tangier, Case No. 13,743.

Where a vessel is entitled to "dispatch for discharging," the time allowed is measured by her capacity to deliver.—Sleeper v. Puig, Case No. 12,940.

"Rainy days," as excepted from lay days for loading a cargo of grain, mean such rainy days as will prevent loading with safety and convenience in the particular port.—Balfour v. Wilkins, Case No. 807.

§ 221. Rate or amount.
The measure of damages for delay in unloading is the gross freight which the vessel would have earned under ordinary circumstances during the time of detention.—Sheppard v. Philadelphia Butchers' Ice Co., Case No. 12,757.

Upon what principles demurrage for the unnecessary detention of a vessel while unloading should be computed.—Sprague v. West, Case No. 13,255.

Demurrage allowed without interest.—In re Three Hundred and Ninety-Three Tons of Guano, Case No. 14,011.

Interest is not allowable on demurrage.—The New Orleans, Case No. 10,178.

§ 222. Lien.
The master has a lien upon the cargo for demurrage, enforceable in admiralty, though not expressly stipulated for in the bill of lading.—The Hyperion's Cargo, Case No. 6,987.

The vessel has a lien on cargo for damages in the nature of demurrage, where the consignee fails to receive it within a reasonable time, although the bill of lading contains no demurrage clause.—Donaldson v. McDowell, Case No. 3,985.

Vessel owners not bound to sign unqualified bills of lading for cargo until lawful claim of demurrage, which is a lien thereon, is satisfied; and for delays caused thereby charterer is liable. —Balfour v. Wilkins, Case No. 807.

The lien for demurrage is lost by a delivery of the cargo, and a receipt of the freight, without any agreement that it is to be held subject to the lien. A statement by the master that he should look to the cargo for the claim will not preserve the lien.—Winslow v. Four Hundred Barrels of Salt, Case No. 17,881.

The vessel owner, having abandoned his lien on the cargo for demurrage, cannot maintain an action for damages against the shippers, who were merely agents.—Stafford v. Watson, Case No. 13,276.

X. GENERAL AVERAGE.

Remedy for general average loss, see "Admiralty," § 39.

§ 223. Nature of right to contribution.
The right to receive contribution in general average is not founded on contract, but on a principle of equity.—Sturgis v. Cary, Case No. 13,573.

§ 224. Perils and acts grounds of contribution—In general.
There can be no contribution for damage caused by the common danger to which both ship and cargo are exposed.—Delano v. The Gallatin, Case No. 3,751.

To make a case for general average, the property saved and the property sacrificed must be exposed to a common danger. The sacrifice of a part must contribute to the saving of the residue, and must be voluntary.—Delano v. The Gallatin, Case No. 3,751.

If the cargo or ship, or any part of either, be voluntarily sacrificed or exposed to danger for the common safety, the part saved shall contribute to repair the loss sustained, provided the object for which the sacrifice was made be obtained.—Caze v. Reilly, Case No. 2,538.

General average is incurred where the expenses or losses arose in a case of emergency, not produced by the misconduct or unskillfulness of the master, and not resulting from the ordinary circumstances of the voyage.—Ross v. The Active, Case No. 12,071.

It is sufficient to justify a claim to contribution if the danger sought to be avoided is so imminent that the measure adopted may be beneficial to all.—Caze v. Reilly, Case No. 2,538.

§ 225. —— Stranding.
