

All laws of the land must be made available to its citizenry for free.
You set up an ex post facto situation by not doing this.
These laws need to be open and searchable, for we as a technologically proficient nation should reflect this in our government and in are laws.

Now that this travesty is known online, it will never just go away. better to step up now and change the way these NPO's that create standards do business then wait for the political back lash that will occur from the knowledge that the government does not make its laws free and open to its citizenry but expects it under threat of prosecution to comply with said laws.

nothing is more bipartisan then having laws that flout the Constitution in letter and spirit.
