Comment

Since the original Section 508 regulation was enacted, there have been discussions concerning the fact that a particular ICT product or service may conform to the applicable Section 508 provisions yet still not be usable by a person with a disability. Access Board should consider adding a provision that would address concerns about usability. If a given ICT product or service meets the functional performance criteria in addition to the applicable technical provisions, then it can be deemed more usable and therefore a better value.
