Subject: IMPORTANT: Access Codes on Web

Hello,

Just received a phone call from Suren at (818) 506-6671 and he tried to view the code (part 2.5) on the BSC web site and it came up with (screen print below) the ICC page and wanting Him to pay for the Premium Access in order to view the code.

He stated that in the State of California the code should be viewable without any cost. He would like a call back when this is resolved.

Let me know if you have any questions.

Dear Mark,

Thank you so much for the detailed follow-up. I apologize for not responding before now but we are all engaged with the Annual Green Summit this week (e.g. hanging out with Mr. Walls!).

I will review your notes with Mia and Mike. I agree with your solutions for the first two items (i.e. update URL and the 'Includes Supplement/Errata date...' note).

I'll test the Part 2, Part 8 again.

As for the formatting issues, we'll discuss the idea of a two color option.

Most of us will be involved with the Summit again on Thursday and Friday. And I will be out on Friday and potentially all of next week. Someone will address in my absence or the additional discussion regarding the format will be tabled until I return. I will try to update the URL before I leave.

Again, thank you for the quick response to our inquiry.

Regards,

Cynthia

Cynthia,

We will be meeting on the issues you addressed in your previous email. One thing I noted is that Casey had previously sent you a link that takes you directly to the book shelf where each of the Title 24 codes reside. For some reason it appears your IT folks have continued to use the URL address of our map and not the place where the codes reside. This link is: <http://codes.iccsafe.org/California.html#201>. This should take care of the first item in question.

Regarding the second item (descriptions), I would recommend removing the reference to the printing in the description as it really serves no purpose to the user. That would enable us to add the reference to the Title 24 Part. In addition, we could put in parenthesis something like (Includes Supplement/Errata through Fill in date). Let me know if this approach addresses your concerns with regards to the second item. I will see if we can also arrange the parts sequentially starting with the lowest part number and proceeding to the highest part number moving left to right. Let me know if this approach adequately addresses items 2 and 3 you listed.

On item 4 you mention, I have not been able to emulate what you referred to. When I click Part 2 or Part 8 (Historical), it takes me straight to the map.

On item 5, the format change is attributed to the code being in XML format. This format allows us more flexibility in creating a version with enhanced Premium features. Also PDF files are hard to protect and limit to read only. That said, if we were to provide a mechanism (like two color format that denotes language that has changed) and added the index, would that largely address the concerns you outlined in your item 5? Perhaps we can get on the phone tomorrow and discuss if you have a moment.

Hi Cynthia:

That is our free site. Along the side is California and if you click on it, it goes to the 2013 Codes. However, you can change the link from your codes to this one: <http://codes.iccsafe.org/California.html#201> and it will take you directly to the 2013 California codes.

Hope that helps.

Hi Casey,

The 2013 code links are going to an errata page (screen print below) instead of the specific code page. Could you forward to the correct ICC staffer who can address? Separately, the link to our codes page follows in order for your folks to double check the links: <http://www.bsc.ca.gov/Home/Current2013Codes.aspx>

Hi Cynthia

No problem regarding the timing of language and order of the codes for the ICC California page – we will begin updating as soon as we get those from you. In the meantime we have already begun the process for converting the current HTML versions of the CA books to the PDF equivalents as discussed so that you will have the desired formatting, margin rules and index present for your users.

Thank you,

Dan

Thank you again for making time to review the various web issues concerning the California codes. We thought the conference call this morning was very productive. I drafted the language and order of the codes for the ICC California page but need to circulate it internally for input. I should be able to forward it on Thursday or early Friday.

Apologies for the delay!

Subject: Update- ICC Online Code

Please review the revised online code format, on the following ICC test site, and provide any suggestions or feedback at your earliest convenience.

Test Site home page: <http://testcodes.iccsafe.org>

I have already inquired about the following:

1. Please drop the word 'Part' down on 8 and 10 (otherwise the numbers are hanging on the next line);
2. Please place Part 9 before 11 on the bookshelf;
3. Can you clarify what the Errata binder (last code book) indicates? Is it a one stop source for all 2013 (Emergency) Supplements and Errata? If so, we'd like to clarify that in the text, which I can draft.
4. It appears that these versions are downloadable and may be saved. Is that correct or is it just because it's not live?

Thank you!

I thought we were linking straight to the individual code parts from our webpage?

The link provided below is still to the main ICC page asking to select a state then the code part.

Is just for test purposes?

I think this is how it will look for the most part. If we want to get away from our users having to select "California," we will have to hyperlink each Part on our Codes webpage to the ICC table of contents page for each corresponding Part (e.g., our link to Part 1 would go straight to the ICC table of contents page for Part 1). This is perhaps better explained with visuals:)

Note: If we link to each individual ICC table of contents page for each Part, we will need to provide separate links to Part 2, Volume 1 and Part 2, Volume 2.

I was hoping the upgrade would allow users to conduct keyword searches of an entire code book at one-time.

Questions for ICC:

- Is ICC able to make this possible? Search capabilities appear to be the same (chapter by chapter).
- Or is this something only available to users who have purchased an electronic copy?

It looks like the formatting of the code titles on the webpage may just be related to the size/resolution of your monitor and any zoom settings applied in your browser. If I zoom in and out on the webpage the format of the titles change. Below is what the webpage looks like on my monitor without zooming (Numbers for Parts 8 and 10 hang on the next line). I do like how the supplements and errata are now updated within each Part instead of having to check a separate document.

Good afternoon,

I've done some formatting and update work on the 2016, 2013, 2010 and 2007 (in archives) webpages. Links have been updated for all titles (except Pt 3) in the 2013 Code. While CEC supplement and errata docs can be accessed online, the old link to the 2013 CEC is broken. Any idea if there is an electronic copy of the 2013 CEC still available online?

I've disabled most of the links under the codes prior to 2013 because ICC has taken them down from its website (I think this is temporary).

Hi Alex, thanks for updating the website with blurbs about the codes that are no longer available online. On that note, I believe Mia, Mike and Cynthia have a teleconference with ICC on Tuesday to discuss the status of the online versions of the 2007 and 2010 I-Codes. However, I didn't realize that the online versions of the 2010 and 2013 Electrical Code were down as well. Do you know if we've reached out to NFPA/BNI to figure out why?

Good afternoon,

I've done some formatting and update work on the 2016, 2013, 2010 and 2007 (in archives) webpages. Links have been updated for all titles (except Pt 3) in the 2013 Code. While CEC supplement and errata docs can be accessed online, the old link to the 2013 CEC is broken. Any idea if there is an electronic copy of the 2013 CEC still available online?

I've disabled most of the links under the codes prior to 2013 because ICC has taken them down from its website (I think this is temporary).

Thanks,

In our future response to Mr. Malamud please keep this info. It may be useful. Mike, If you haven't already done so, please read the contracts with ICC, NEC & IAPMO about any language allowing BSC to post their links on the webpage, or if the copyright language allows us to do so. Somewhere there must be a discussion between the publishers and BSC regarding links to the CA codes.

FORWARD TO ALEX AS THIS MAY BE USEFUL FOR THE REPOSE TO MR. MALAMUD

THE FOLLOWING WAS COPIED FROM OAL'S WEBPAGE

CAUTION REGARDING OFFICIAL CODE:

Government Code section 11344 requires OAL to provide for the official compilation, printing and publication of state regulations in the California Code of Regulations. The online CCR contains the full text of the California Code of Regulations. OAL updates the official hard-copy and online versions of the code once weekly to reflect newly adopted, amended or repealed regulations. OAL cannot verify the authenticity of regulations downloaded from websites other than <http://ccr.oal.ca.gov/>, or confirm whether those versions reflect the existing content of the code.

CCR BROWSING TIPS:

Pop-Up Blocker/Westlaw: If a yellow "pop-up blocker detected" screen appears, you may simply click on "continue to weblinks" to access the online CCR. If a window appears stating "Westlaw is unable to accept your password," clear cookies and close your browser before trying again.

Documents in Sequence: The Documents in Sequence function at the bottom of each section will allow you to view CCR sections in sequence. For example, if you retrieve 1 CCR § 260, click Docs in Sequence to view 1 CCR § 270. Use the Prev and Next arrows located at the bottom of the document to view other consecutive documents.

* NOTE ABOUT TITLE 24:

Title 24, the Building Standards Code, is maintained by the Building Standards Commission, not by OAL, and is not included in the on-line CCR or printed CCR. To locate a copy of Title 24, please contact the Building Standards Commission www.bsc.ca.gov/.
