Dear Sirs:

Your web site lists two different people occupying the position of Legislative Counsel at two different URLs, so I hope you will pardon the ambiguity of my address. In addition, no phone or email contact information was available on your web site and nobody answered the phone in your offices at the number listed in Google.

I am writing to you today for two purposes. First, in light of the decision of the Eleventh Circuit of the U.S. Court of Appeals in regards to the litigation you instituted against us having been fully completed, I am writing to you to offer my assistance as you continue to grapple of the issue of making the Official Code of Georgia Annotated to the people of Georgia. As you know, in our previous correspondence, I have repeatedly offered such assistance and would be happy to extend that offer once again to provide any volunteer help you might find useful.

Second, despite what is a clear and unambiguous decision by the U.S. Court of Appeals, your vendor Lexis Nexis refuses to sell me a copy of the code. As you know, Lexis Nexis terminated my account during litigation and now, despite repeated efforts, they will not favor me with the privilege of sending them considerable amounts of money in order that I may bring our collection up-to-date.

If you can assist me in obtaining a copy of the Official Code of Georgia Annotated, I would be most grateful. If it would help, please consider this a request under the Georgia Open Records Act, OCGA §50-18-70.

Sincerely yours,
