omg. twice is too much! :)

sure, what time is good for you thursday am? I'm bringing my jeep in for an oil change at 8am so I'll be standing around shivering at the garage, but I know they have cell coverage there. That would be easy. (That early enough?)

I'm doing stuff late afternoon Thursday.

How about your Friday morning? I'm clear Friday until 2.

you got time to talk weds or thursday?

I'm pretty sure two clever students is all it will take to get this over the wall. I think they need to do a few interviews and some reading, then prepare a report, then present the report to legislators. It's a nice straightforward path. It might be as simple as a private meeting with just Ilana and maybe a few others all the way up to a full-fledged hearing with legislative action. Either way, the students get to do something fun.

Hi Annemarie -

You can tweak the scheduling if you want. For example, if it's too late to sign up a reasonably-sized batch of students for this semester, we can maybe see if one or two want to do some prep work this term as directed study and then this summer we do the more extended circus.

Or, students could try and do some term papers on the general topic (I'm more than happy to help, there are some other folks like Peter Martin they could interact with it's actually a nice offer for a couple of bright students who might want to reach out).

Let's figure out how to salvage this thing ... I think there is great promise when a state legislator, even a very junior minority party legislator, is willing to lend credence to an analysis of why policy is perhaps broken. Students get to put that they did some important work commissioned by the legislature on their resume as well. I don't care how long it takes, I'm more interested in seeing that the work somehow get underway.

I'll just fine, but you'll
