Dear Winston –

It was a pleasure speaking with you yesterday. As we discussed, we will await your transmission of the audio from the conference, your list of mandatory/non-mandatory standards for my information, and Ms. Alleyne's short memorandum discussing a path forward by Friday. Upon receipt of that, we will send you back a letter on Monday.

As a sign of good faith, I've disabled access to the CARICOM standards:

<https://law.resource.org/pub/crs/manifest.crs.html>

If you click on one of the documents, you'll see that you get a custom error page. Please note that there is one more copy of these documents on the Internet Archive. If we are moving forward, I will also disable access to those documents as well.

Please note that although I am temporarily disabling access, we do believe we have the legal right to post these materials and to restore access at our discretion, but we wanted to demonstrate good faith and our belief that a productive dialogue will yield results that meet our mutual goals.

With best regards,

Carl

I was hoping to hear from you Friday. Can you let me know if we're still moving forward as we discussed?

Best regards,

Carl

Dear Mr Malamud:

Please see attached for your comments

Again we apologize for the delay in getting the notes to you on Friday 14 February 2014 as agreed.

We also agreed to provide you with the compilation of the list of the Mandatory Standards used by our Member States by last Friday as well. Our Technical Officer Standards, who has agreed to compiling the information, got very busy preparing for an overseas mission, but will be providing you with this information by close of business on Wednesday 19 February 2014.

Dear Mr. Bennett –

Thanks for your note. I will be out of the office the rest of today and tomorrow, but will be back on Thursday 20 February 2014 and will respond then. The one item I had not noted reference to is the issue of the recording of our conversation. We were happy to give permission for you to record, but that was conditional on both parties having access to the recording.

Per my previous note of 12 February 2014, we have already disabled access to the CARICOM standards.

Please let me know on the recording and thanks again for your response.

Best regards,

Carl

Dear Mr Malamud:

Please be informed that none of the standards are subject of technical regulations. The standards that you had uploaded were CROSQ standards (CRS) and the Member States technical regulations (compulsory standards) are national standards and as such are no longer considered to be CROSQ standards.

Hope this helps to clarify

We will let you know of the Council's decision
